Vol. 2 - No. 1 B.C. Thursday, January 2, 1958 10c per copy

A NEW IDEA in entertainment turned out very well on the evening of December 23 when the Squamish Night School Choir gathered at George Behner's house to sing Christmas carols which were broadcast out over the village through the Riding Club's public address system. Choirmaster was Jim Tinney, and the organist was his brother, Art, from Pemberton. Singing in the choir and shown above were Mrs. Mary Stathers, Mrs. Sadie Baker, Mrs. Theresa Summerskill, Mrs. Jennie Eross, Mrs. Ruby Cole, Mrs. Dorothy DeBeck, Mrs. Marian Graham, Mrs. Norah Seymour, Miss Joan Anderson, Mrs. Ethel McPherson, Mrs. Rheta MacDonald, George Graham, Bert Summerskill, Don Kirkwood, Ed. Aldridge and Bob Bruce.

Teachers Win 16% Increase In Howe Sound School District

Salary increases amounting to an over all 16 per cent were the outcome of final wage negotiations December 19 between the teachers and trustees of School District No. 48.

Salary committee for the teachers was George Smith, chairman, Ken Tomlinson, Don Friesen and Ron Duff. Mr. Duff replaced regular committee member, Dick Wagner, who could not attend because the Christmas concert at his school was the same evening.

For the school board, George Hurley was chairman and committee members were Mrs. Jean McRae, Archie Smith, George Lyons and Mrs. Margaret Fougberg.

Inspector of schools, T. G. Carter, said he was quite pleased with the settlement. "The only way you can obtain good teachers and keep them," he said, "is by paying them decent salaries."

The new salary schedule starts at $3,000 for elementary conditional certification which entitles the teacher to three increments up to a total salary of $3,450. This is not a desirable classification so increments were limited to three to encourage improvement.

In the elementary basic scale starting salary is $3,300 with ten yearly increments of $190 each up to $5,200; elementary advanced, from $3600 with 10 yearly increments of $200 each to $5600.

In secondary classifications, starting with secondary conditional at $3900 with 10 yearly increments of $215 each to $6050; professional conditional from $3900 with 10 yearly increments of $225 to $6450; secondary basic from $4200 with Carter, said he was quite pleased with the settlement.

Also figuring in the increase was a special clause granting $50 per unit for Summer School up to a total of $300.

Certain increases were granted in supervision allowances and the isolation bonus, paid to teachers north of Brackendale, was increased from $50 to $100.

CROWNED Snow Queen of Howe Sound High School is Jo Anne Feschuk, above, winner of the week-long voting by the students. Among the finalists were Miss Neutron, Judy Hughes, and Miss Proton, Sandra Farrow, but they were out-voted by supporters of Miss Electron, the Queen.

Pacific Naval Squadron to Pay Squamish Centennial Visit

Officers and men of the Royal Canadian Navy will be among the leading performers in the huge cast of B.C.'s 1958 pageantry and celebration.

Squamish is one of the harbours which will be visited by one or more of HMC ships. Other ports and harbours on the navy's itinerary are: Alert Bay, Kitimat, Prince Rupert, Ocean Falls, Bella Coola, Powell River, New Westminster, Masset, Skidegate, Port Alice, Tahsis, Campbell River, Comox, Port Alberni, Nanaimo, Ladysmith, Maple Bay, Ganges, Sidney and White Rock.

More citizens of the province will see the navy's ships and seamen than in any previous year in B.C.'s first century. For two months, starting the last week in May, all operational ships of the Pacific Command will be engaged in a program of operational visits to B.C. ports on the mainland, Vancouver Island and Queen Charlottes.

The cruiser HMCS Ontario, the destroyer escorts of the Second Canadian Escort Squadron, the modernized frigates of the Fourth Canadian Escort Squadron and the minesweepers of the Second Canadian Minesweeping Squadron will be taking part.

The first event on the navy's centennial plans (announced by Cdr. H. A. Porter, RCN, the coordinator of Centennial activities on Rear Admiral Rayner's staff) schedules the band of HMCS Naden in the McDonald-Brier-Bonspiel parade in Victoria, March 4th, 1958.

The old Cedarwood will appear on April 26, transformed in a faithful reproduction of the side-wheeler SS Commodore, which brought the first gold hunters from San Francisco in 1858. About 100 suitably costumed officers and men from the naval barracks, HMCS Naden, will serve as crew for the ship and its sourdough passengers. The SS Commodore will arrive in Victoria harbour and deposit its company of prospectors at a jetty in the basin in front of the Empress Hotel.

The Victoria Day parade will take on new colour in 1958 and the Naden Band, an armed party of 100 officers and men and floats constructed by Naden, the Dockyard, HMCS Venture and the ships of the Command will take part.

Late in July, all of British Columbia will join to welcome HRH Princess Margaret, the guest of honour. Present plans call for Her Royal Highness to board the destroyer escort HMCS Crescent for her trip to Victoria. The other ships of the Second Canadian Escort Squadron will comprise the Royal Escort.

During the Princess's stay in Victoria, the navy will provide the Royal Guard on most official occasions. One special ceremony in her honour will be the parading of the Queen's Colour. This will most likely take place in Beacon Hill Park. It will involve several hundred officers and men on parade and numerous others in supplementary duties.

NAVAL REVIEW IS CLIMAX At this stage it is calculated that between 30 and 40 RCN and visiting Commonwealth and foreign warships will be assembled in Victoria and Esquimalt harbours to celebrate the Centennial Navy Week. There will be entertainments, social events and sports events. Most of the ships will be open to visitors at certain times.

Towards the end of Princess Margaret's visit, all ships will move out of harbour to another (Please turn to Page 3)

LIONS BINGO DRAWS CAPACITY CROWDS

About 30 people were turned away from the Parish Hall at the Lions Club bingo held December 17. There was just no more room.

The Lions' bingos seem to be increasing in popularity; the week before some players were turned away, also.

Draws were made for six turkeys and 10 hams. The $100 jackpot was won by Mrs. Fran Mossop; Harvey Hurren won the first turkey draw; and Mrs. Jean Stockman was the surprised winner of a live chicken.

Letter from Parliament Hill

By JAMES SINCLAIR

Ed. note: As member for Coast-Capilano, Honourable James Sinclair has agreed to send out from Ottawa, monthly reports on political developments. This has been delayed until now because, as we quote, "I have been busier than ever I was as a private member, parliamentary assistant or cabinet minister, and have had to postpone this report."

I have, however, tried to keep in touch with the riding through weekly broadcasts on Vancouver stations in the Parliament Hill series, and by fortnightly articles on Parliament in three of the weekly papers in my riding. In addition I have appeared on two national TV programs and on national radio program on federal affairs. Radio station CK-LG has asked me to make a regular weekly broadcast starting in January. The daily newspapers have also been very kind in reporting my activities in Parliament, so that I have tried to report to you in other ways.

It was quite strange at first to be a member of the opposition after 17 years on the government side. I must confess that I thoroughly enjoy the change because of the freedom from departmental duties and the much greater opportunity to take part in debates.

Mr. St. Laurent outlined the position to be taken by the Liberal party this session as the official opposition. Although the Liberal Party received almost a quarter of a million more votes than the Tories in the general election, the Tories became the government because they won five more seats because of the distribution of that vote.

Lack of a clear majority resulted in a minority government. The Liberals felt, however, that the Canadian people wanted the new government to have a fair chance to implement the many extravagant promises so recklessly made during the election campaign. The Liberals, therefore, would not move nor support a non-confidence motion until the government had had a fair chance to put their program before Parliament, to translate their promises into action.

This, of course, was the last thing the Tories wanted. They wanted a quick defeat in Parliament so a snap election could be held this Fall and they could plead they never had a chance to carry out their promises.

So far they have done a few of the easy things—$9 increase in Old Age Pensions, small increases in the war veterans' allowance to married veterans, cash advances on farm stored grain. All fell far short of their promises. Despite post-election promises, the government refused to bring down a budget with the 500 million dollar tax cuts so loudly promised last summer. Instead the Minister of Finance took a back door method of making tax changes on item one of his estimates, tax cuts totalling just 26 million dollars in the current fiscal year—far short of the 500 million promised.

If a budget had been presented, it would have had to show the steady decline in the nation's economy which has taken place since last June, declining (Please turn to page 2)

The Finest Gift of All

It strikes us rather odd that far more Canadians express concern over the latest development of outer-space age than they do over the rapidly increasing toll being taken in human lives through fires in the home and motor vehicle accidents on the highways.

Although not minimizing the ultimate threats which the advent of newer and more powerful atomic and hydrogen bombs, inter-continental ballistic missiles and globe-circling Sputniks may bring, let us have a look at the record to date.

So far, other than perhaps disrupting the elements somewhat or covering some wastelands with a coating of glaze, post war "A" and H-bombs tests have caused comparatively few deaths among human beings.

The score for intercontinental ballistic missiles is about the same. And the death toll for the Sputniks so far is one little dog.

What about the other side of the picture?

Last year fires cost this nation 572 lives. Canada's per capita annual fire loss for 1956 was the greatest in the world. The dollar was 12½ per cent greater than that of 1955. Property loss amounted to $110 million.

Claims paid on automobile insurance coverage for 1956 reached the staggering total of $141,000,000 a record jump of $2,000,000 over 1955.

Mr. Pullen, Take Note ...

A telephone company, not our B.C. Telephoners, made a study through combinations and permutations recently over the following incident. Here is the story:

The telephone company's study revealed that this can happen only once in five thousand calls, but the young fellow claims that is too often. Once was enough to cause him a lot of trouble, he says.

It seems that he and his girl telephoned each other's apartments at the same time. Each got a busy signal. He mildly wondered "what other jerk is trying to date my girl?"

Later when he got through to her

In Ontario alone during the first nine months of this year 902 persons were fatally injured in motor vehicle accidents.

But startling as these statistics are, they fail to tell the full story of pain and anguish endured by those who lost loved ones, of the pain-wracked hours others spent in hospital, of the hardships inflicted on families through the death of a breadwinner.

A rather poor record is it not? Even more tragic is the fact that at Yuletide—the most joyous time of the year—quite frequently this needless loss of human lives increases.

What is the major cause? Carelessness. Carelessness in mending a broken electric cord or a faulty switch; failure to closely examine Christmas tree lights for defective wiring; leaving basements cluttered with trash and rubbish; matches left lying about where they may be picked up by children; to mention a few.

On the highways it can be driving at excessive speeds when roads are hazardous, pressing on to that destination while over fatigued, taking that "one for the road" or imbibing too freely at a Yuletide party, and then aiming the car for home.

One of the finest Christmas gifts this nation could have would be an accident-free happy holiday. And it can have it. The onus is on us.

and they both explained he had a good laugh about it. "Trouble is," the young fellow says, "she doesn't believe me. Thinks I was talking to another doll. The thing is causing me a lot of trouble."

He was upset enough to call the telephone company and tell about it all. That was when he learned of the five-thousand-to-one chance. The telephone man said the company had provided against practically any kind of disaster except love. We can see Dick Pullen, pro chief for the B. C. Telephone, now open a new department entitled either "Broken Hearts" or "Romances by Phone."

ing revenues, declining trade, declining investment, steady drop in the stock market. Wheat sales in the new crop year are the lowest in 10 years, less than half the 10-year average. The only thing up is unemployment, and that is already double the rate last year—and the Tories do nothing about it except extend seasonal benefits for unemployment insurance to cover half the year. That in itself is an admission of the extent of unemployment.

Last June, when Canada had enjoyed eight golden years of prosperity and high employment under the St. Laurent government, many Canadians thought these conditions would continue no matter what government was in power. After six months of Tory rule, some Canadians—at least the 375,000 unemployed—are beginning to think differently.

Because of these conditions, a lot of Tories are losing their appetite for a quick election, quor in a restaurant. He was in the early Spring. However, also fined $25 on a second of the longer the Tories are in office the more apparent will be the difference between their promises and their performances—so despite unemployment I think a March or April election highly probable. This will also save them the embarrassment of having to present a budget at a session before the election, a budget which would really show how the Canadian economy has declined since the Tories took office. I think, therefore, that we should be ready for a March election. Our national convention next month will pick a new leader and build a Liberal platform for the coming election.

The leadership will probably settle down to a contest between Honourable L. B. Pearson and Honourable Paul Martin, both able men who would make good leaders. My own personal preference is well known, but our delegates will decide of themselves at the convention. Resignations are pouring in from Liberal Associations all over the country, and I am sure that from these resignations a truly Liberal platform for the future will be built on the solid foundation of the achievements of the past. I will be home over the Christmas recess, and will hope to see many of you then. In any case, I wish you all a happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Scooping Around High School

Students of Howe Sound High School celebrated the end of the term and ushered in the holiday season with a gala party, Friday, December 20.

Jo Ann Feshuch, as Miss Electra, was crowned Snow Queen to climax a week of enthusiastic inter-house competition. Finalists in the contest were Judy Hughes, Miss Neutron, and Sandra Farrow as Miss Proton.

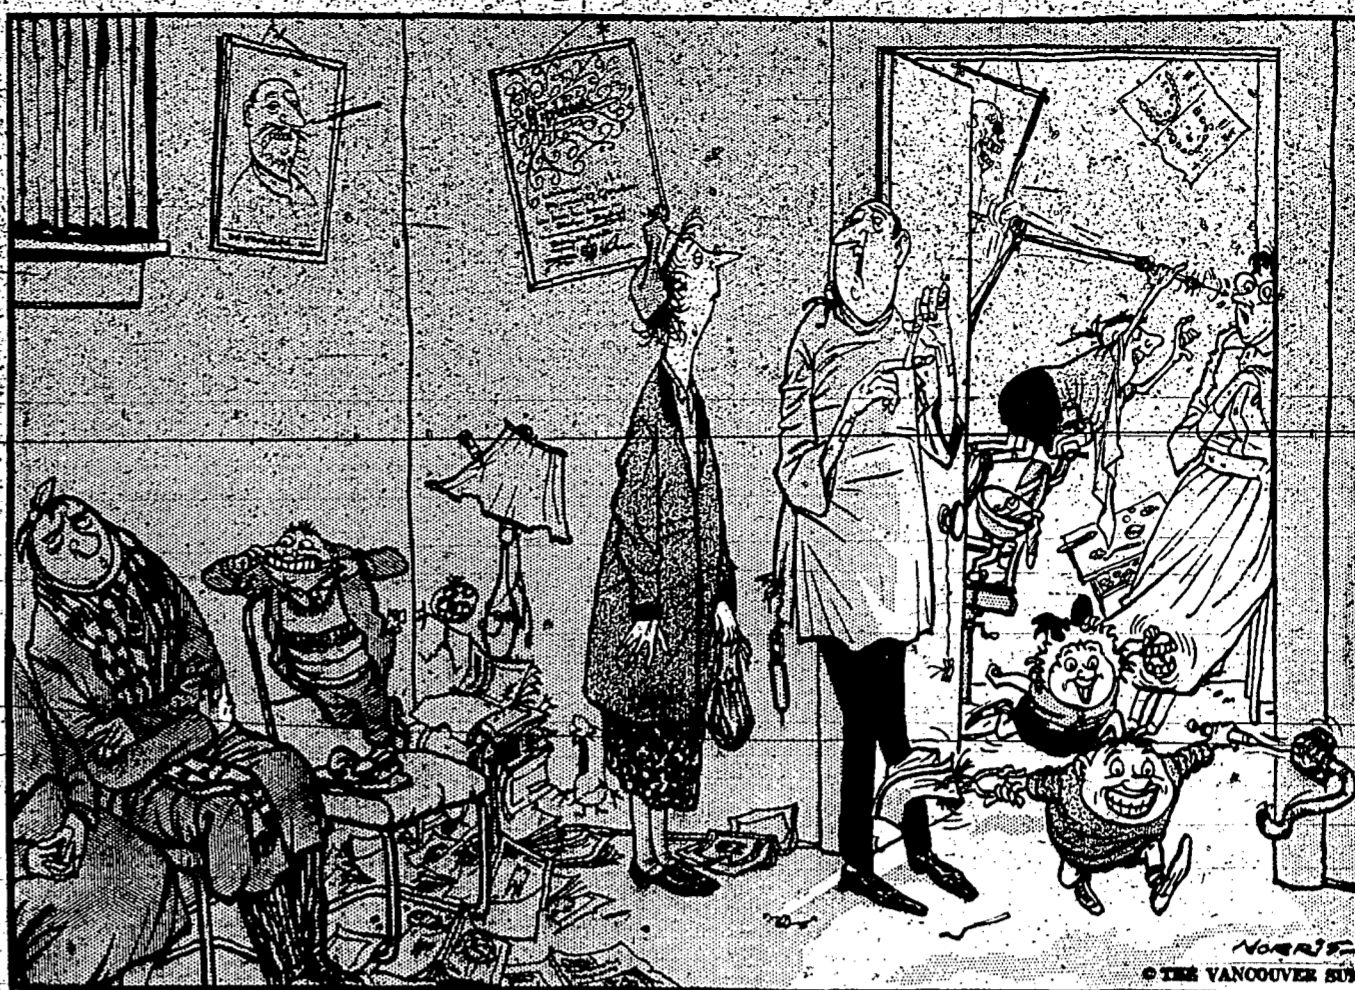

Voting by the students to select the queen was brisk. At 10c a vote, $54 was raised towards the Students Council Christmas Happiness Hampers.

Other highlights were musical selections by the Sleeping Beauties, Rita Deering and Jocelyn Wetterstrom; and by the Howe Sounders (high school men teachers).

The houses should be congratulated on the success of the party. The auditorium was beautifully decorated in blue, white and silver with blue and white candles.

THE CHRISTIAN WAY

The Meaninglessness of War

By ANDREW LAM

In Ottawa on November 11 at 11 o'clock in the morning, the Governor General, on behalf of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth, laid a wreath at the cenotaph in remembrance of those who died in the two World Wars.

He was followed by a woman chosen to represent on this occasion all the mothers of Canada. She lost her husband in the First World War and three sons in the second war.

It was a moving scene—this solemn remembrance and tribute to the war dead—even as seen on television—a touching scene indeed as this woman, who suffered so great a personal loss, walked with deliberate steps up the cenotaph, laid her wreath beside the first one, slowly retraced her steps, stood for a long moment as though in recollection, and finally resumed her place.

She was undoubtedly a young woman when she lost her husband; her sons then must have been of tender years. And they, twenty years later, followed the footsteps of their father and gave up their lives for their country— young lives with a future.

The tragedy, folly and meaninglessness of war are not more deeply felt than in such personal loss. Here is a woman deprived of her husband in her young years because of war, brought up three young sons herself, only to lose them in the same way as she had lost her husband.

The human race cannot be truly called civilized until it reaches that stage of enlightenment and determination when war shall be abolished altogether—when it is not even considered as a last resort.

Unrealistic, sentimental and wishful thinking? Perhaps it is, so long as the human race remains unregenerate. Yet it is not unrealistic thinking when we call to mind how personal problems and problems in civil life are solved—certainly not by fistcuffs, might or power—but before the courts of law and according to law.

The remembrance of the war dead brings to mind the supreme sacrifice made on our behalf. We owe them a debt of gratitude which we can never repay. Our remembrance, however, would be in vain and the Lawyer: "But, if a man is kneeling down in the middle of the road... that doesn't prove he was intoxicated."

 Officer: "No, sir... but this man was trying to roll up the centre stripe."

A bachelor is a man with too much sense for the good of the human race.

Most of us don't need to be led into temptation—we can find our own way.

"I simply gotta divorce this woman," the discolorate man explained to the court. "She insisted on keeping a pet goat in our room. The smell got so terrible, I just couldn't stand it any longer."
 The judge shook his head. "That sounds bad," he admitted. "What?" cried the husband, "and let all my pigeons out?"

MR. AND MRS. AL HANKEY

Soft glow from white tapers, graceful cedar and spruce boughs and accents of holly made the seasonable setting for the Yuletide wedding of Pearl Olive Levina, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Porter of Chilliwack, to Algernon L. Alers Hankey, son of Mrs. Mary Alers Hankey of Armstrong and the late Gerald Alers Hankey.

Rev. Harold S. Clugston performed the double-ring ceremony in Squamish United Church at 6 p.m. on Monday, December 23, 1957.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose muted tones of rose-beige and blue for her ensemble. Her gown of lace over taffeta was in the rose-beige shade, styled in street length with full skirt and low decolletage. Her small hat with chapel-length veil was in the blue shade, as were her matching mittens.

Her jewelry was a gold heirloom bracelet, belonging to her mother, and sapphire and pearl earrings, gift of the groom. She carried a white Bible topped with an orchid and heather.

Niece of the bride, Miss Marlene Porter of Chilliwack, was bridesmaid, the pale blue tone repeated in her sleeveless dress, also full-skirted and street length. She carried a nosegay of pink and white blooms. Douglas Fenton of Squamish was best man, and Jacques Moon and Jack Simpson, also of Squamish, were ushers.

Organist Mrs. E. Kristianson played Christmas carols prior to the service, and "The Holy City" during the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Elks Hall, at which Rev. Clugston acted as master of ceremonies and Harold Bailey proposed the toast to the bride, the groom responding. The three-tiered wedding cake was the feature of the bride's table, and her aunt, Mrs. Ethel Coleman of New Westminster, poured for the honour guests.

Out-of-town guests, in addition to Mrs. Coleman, were: Mrs. Mildred Ellen Kemp, a close family friend from Sutherland, Sask., Mr. and Mrs. Connor M. Porter and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Deeks, all of Chilliwack, B.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Hankey will spend a family Christmas at Chilliwack before returning to Squamish to take up residence on Hospital Hill. The bride, who formerly resided in Chilliwack and Glen Ewen, Sask., has been technician at the local hospital since its opening. The groom operates an accounting service here.

CENTENNIAL VISIT

choage in Royal Roads. They will devote 24 hours to preparing for an official Naval Review by Her Royal Highness.

The Naval Review for a member of the Royal Family is a pageant as old as British maritime history. It is a demonstration of the very close ties which have always existed between the Royal Family and their navies.

A smash fireworks display will be shot off by the ships the night of the Review and all ships in the anchorage will be illuminated—a colourful display of seagoing power which may never be duplicated in Victoria.

Again the navy will transport the Princess by sea back to Vancouver. She will probably embark on the Ontario and the Royal Escort will include most of the ships of the RCN's Pacific Command, some from the Atlantic Command and some from Commonwealth navies.

The Vancouver Centennial Committee is organizing a gala and impressive series of events to coincide with the large international fleet's visit to their city.

The Navy will undoubtedly be represented at the International Regatta at Kelowna, the Pacific National Exhibition and certain other fairs and exhibitions.

Rear Admiral H. S. Rayner, Flag Officer Pacific Coast, wrote an information letter to his ships and shore establishments recently about the Command's activities in the Centennial Year. He finished it off by saying: "If you analyze the above events you will find that everyone in this Command is involved in the B.C. Centennial celebrations; some, of course, more than others. I am sure you will agree that the occasion is worth a special effort on our part."
