Woodfibre To Reopen

$15 Million
Comeback

Construction contracts to build a new pulp mill at Woodfibre are to be let immediately.

An estimated $15 million will be spent on demolition of the old mill where necessary, new equipment and new construction.

When completed in 1961 the new mill will employ 375 men to produce 250 tons of high quality bleached kraft pulps per day. Payroll will be more than $1 million annually.

REBIRTH

This will mean the rebirth of one of the oldest pulpmill communities in British Columbia. Woodfibre dates back to 1910 when construction of the original mill began, with production of unbleached pulp two years later.

The old mill, shut down in June, 1958, produced bleached sulphite pulp for paper and chemical cellulose and employed up to 425 men before the market decline several years ago.

Due to major advances in cellulose technology, with resulting extreme competition from new plants, it suffered continuing decline in demand for its products.

The reconstructed plant will produce bleached sulphite pulp.

Two species of wood, cedar and fir, previously not used in the chemical cellulose mills, will add to the wood supply. In addition, chips will be obtained from the Company's two large sawmills at New Westminster and Marpole.

CHANGE IN NAME

The new operation will be known as Rayonier Canada Limited, changed as of October 1st, 1959, from Alaska Pine and Cellulose Ltd.

Majority control in Alaska Pine has been held by Rayonier Inc. since 1954.

Chairman of the board is Walter C. Koerner and the president is William E. Brietenbach. Manager at Woodfibre is R. H. McBean.

Woodfibre is now a modern community capable of accommodating about 800 persons. It contains schools, churches, stores, bowling alleys, tennis courts, a swimming pool and a community hall.

There is a good water supply and it has a deepsea dock and warehouse rebuilt in 1956. It is reached by the Squamish Highway and ferry from Britannia. This will permit employees to live in Squamish and on the east side of Howe Sound.

CHANGES IN MILL

Certain elements of the old will be made use of in the new operation. These include some buildings and machines as well as the water storage dam, wood plant, chip bins and power house which were built about 10 years ago.

Detail engineering for the new project will be carried out by Sandell and Company, working closely with the Company and Rayonier Central Engineering Divisions.

All the present acid plants and equipment and the three original digesters will be demolished and removed. Similar work will be done in the unbleached and bleached screen rooms.

To replace these, five 12 ft. by 55 ft. digesters and a brownstock washing and screening plant will be built. A 250 ton recovery boiler and multiple effect evaporators will be installed. A line kiln and causticising plant will be erected.

The chemical recovery system will be designed to minimise the odours characteristic of kraft mill operation. Major changes will be made in the bleach plant including two additional bleaching stages.

"We, The People Of Woodfibre . . .

... in spite of some outside reports of a ghost town, are still living in this Howe Sound pulp mill town along with about 100 other families." Harold McBean (pronounced McBain) manager of the plant since 1956, said that when the mill closed down indefinitely in June of 1958 he felt the possibilities of reopening were good. Woodfibre is just too valuable a property to leave idle for long, in his opinion. Jack Spink, manager of the cafeteria and resident since 1932, said there were times during the closure when he thought of leaving but rumors of reopening made him change his mind. Mr. Spink has been in Squamish twice in his 26 years at Woodfibre and both times this year; once to get his driver's licence and again when his wife got hers. Gordon Wickstrom, 17, will commute daily to High School in Squamish this year for Grade 12. Senior High at Woodfibre was discontinued this year because there were only three students. The others commuting are his brother, Lyall, and Rosemary Nash. Gordon's dad, Philip, in Woodfibre for 16 years, was assistant chief engineer of the power house. Two other students, Joan and Bruce Walton are attending Lord Byng High in Vancouver.

Bob McClure, store manager, in Woodfibre eight years, opened the store in the afternoons and all day Saturday during the closure. During the good years when employment ran up to 425 men, gross receipts were as high as $20-30,000 a year. He is looking forward to such business again. George Hopper captain of the company tug A1 for 15 years, has piloted his boat in all kinds of weather and at all sorts of jobs; emergency runs in case of sickness or accident and handling freight, scows, log booms and people. His dad came here in 1913 as an engineer and George grew up in Woodfibre attending a 1-room school in a converted house taught by Miss Olive Bodley. Heather Rudkin, 14, expects some curtailment in school activities this year due to smaller enrollment but it is the only school she has attended and is glad to be going back. And there are others with various stories to tell, but all in all one gets the impression that Woodfibre has been good to these people and they are reluctant to leave. There is a lot of living yet to be done in Woodfibre and it would seem that most do not want to miss it.

DARKNESS FOILS CLIMBERS AT SHANNON FALLS

Hikers caught by darkness had to be guided down the rock cliffs at Shannon Falls, south of Squamish, by police car headlights, August 30.

One of the three men, injured in a fall, was released from hospital after treatment for injuries.

Another in the party, who didn't make the climb, heard their cries for help when darkness came and summoned the police.

Dr. L. C. Kindree was also called to the scene.

RCMP constables Brown and Bzuba said the men were not equipped for climbing, being dressed only in street clothes.

They were from Vancouver.

BE CAREFUL WITH OUR KIDDIES, MR. MOTORIST

Motorists are reminded to be especially careful when driving near schools now that the fall term has begun.

According to Harry Duker, BCAA traffic chairman, "A Youngster preoccupied with games and horseplay often forgets the importance of alertness in crossing the street and it is up to the motorist to watch out for him."

Pointing out that some 1400 school-age children were killed in pedestrian accidents in Canada and the United States last year, the BCAA official urges parents to offer special guidance to their youngsters in showing "the safest way to school."

At Squamish Elementary School there will again be a School Safety Patrol to guide children in the crosswalk. Road signs warn drivers to stop when the crosswalk is occupied. There is no reduced speed zone here.

LAST RITES FOR LONNIE WRAY

Last rites for Lonnie Wray, 54, were held in New Westminster September 3, with interment in Fort Langley Cemetery. The Rev. N. J. Penrose of Squamish officiated.

He died August 30 in Vancouver General Hospital after an illness of two months.

Surviving are his wife, Annie, and son Albert, both of Squamish, a daughter, Mrs. Frank Lasser of Haney, B.C., five grandchildren and a sister, Mrs. Arthur Matheson, Alexandria, B.C.

Born at Phoenix, near Fernie, Mr. Wray was an active logging operator in Squamish as a partner of Wraymar Mills at the time of his death. He was one of the first cat and truck loggers on the lower mainland, having worked in various operations before coming to Squamish.

He was a member of the Elks, Western Forest Management Association and the Hoo Hoo Club.

Pallbearers were: Buster Marks, Al Hendrickson, Norm MacDonald, Pat Brennan, Johnny Drenka and Jack McKay.

At Mamquam and Brackendale schools there are 15 mile per hour speed zones.

SWIMMING RACES AT MOUNT SHEER

Sunday night saw the wind up of the swimming activities at Mount Sheer.

Swimming races were dominated by Marilyn and Patsy McNair and Gregory Nissen and his sister.

Vonda Pickard, pool attendant, was in charge of events.

Following the competition Mr. E. Dinsley conducted a campfire hymn-sing and church service.

A weiner roast completed the evening.

It's Time to Get Tough . . .

Our local courts of law have been gradually applying the squeeze on drunken driving with questionable overall affect. Impaired driving charges still heads the police docket list in offences.

Kansas city may have the answer. We read in a recent issue of the Kansas City Times that a single drunk driving conviction now costs a motorist his licence for a year. In certain circumstances he may lose it for a much longer period. The 1959 Kansas Legislature amended the laws to provide the stricter penalties. If the driver has a particularly bad record, the department can, at its discretion, withhold a license indefinitely.

How Kansas will make out with its new harness won't be known for a short time, but it is apparent that it could be no worse than the ineffectiveness of the present penalties now being meted out for impaired motoring in B.C.

Be a Truck Load Watcher . . .

It wasn't too long ago when the newspapers carried an item of a Vancouver woman being killed by a large concrete culvert which rolled from a truck. It was safe to assume that every B.C. motorist shuddered at the terrifying thought.

But it is not uncommon. Who has not seen a mess of smashed tile, a box of broken soft drinks, a pile of gravel and a load of logs strewn over our roads? The wonder is that such materials falling from trucks has not caused more death and destruction.

At normal times dozens of logging trucks rumble through the main street of Squamish with a stack-high load of logs. There have been no accidents mainly because the loose loads are shaken off on the run down the twisting logging roads. Let us hope there is not a first time for our town.

And again, we all hope that by the time you read this editorial the woodworkers' strike will have been settled.

September Roads . . .

September roads run through a fire of color, march between banners of red and gold, wind their way up hills into that immeasurable pale blue sea where could galleons race as if to outstrip the season itself.

September roads are wide and straight, curvy and narrow wherever the singing wheels take the drivers.

September roads in the Squamish and Pemberton Valleys wind away from the highways into, prismatic light and shade, of little woods, finding their sandy way to strangely still pools that shine under the clear sky. September roads lead to valley farm houses struck by sun shafts to a vibrant whiteness, confident in the towering shelter of pale yellow and shocking red maple leaves.

September roads run backward into many a memoried place, but also forward into all our tomorrows. They are two-way roads; and hardly anybody takes them without looking hopefully where they are going as well as where they may have come from.

Walking, riding, driving . . . there is nothing just like a September road.

". . . and God Made Women" --- and Censors Too

At the West Van Odeon this week hip-wiggling Brigitte Bardot pouted through innumerable scenes in a hopeless attempt to please the movie-going patrons for their dollar admission fee. After setting the viewer into an atmosphere of quiet countryside of France during a cleverly-produced introduction through French titles and subdued coloring, he was suddenly dragged into reality with a garnish black-and-white notice that:

THIS FILM HAS BEEN CUT AND ALTERED BY THE B.C. CENSOR BOARD.

On principle, we oppose censorship. By censorship we mean somebody's advance judgment on whether the public should be allowed to read a particular book, see a particular movie, or wear a particular bathing suit. There are laws against obscenity and indecency to punish any who would take advantage of freedom from censorship.

To oppose censorship, however, is not to say that books are not printed and movies produced which are not suitable for children. Any thoughtful parent wishes to shield youngsters from lewdness, the glorification of vice, or unwholesome portrayal of violence, and is at liberty to do so.

British Columbia meets this problem however by taking the decision out of the hands of mother and dad by empowering a Censorship Board who by law to permit the showing of some movies to "Adults only", meaning men and women over 21. This arbitrary age distinction is open to question.

Surely it is not reasonable to forbid say a 20-year-old married service-man to see a film merely because it was not deemed suitable for a 12-year-old. We question that countries without censorship would assay any more delinquency per head for the lack of it.

Would it not be simpler to restrict all young people under 17 unless accompanied by their parents. Or have we lost faith in our own judgement.

But to alter and cut a film is ridiculous. For we all know that saucer-eyed B.B. with a wiggle in her walk and a giggle in her talk is a flop, after the Censors' chop, chop, chop.

Staying Home is Broadening . . .

Holiday time for most people is almost over and this year we have noticed a greater tendency for many of the North Howe Sound male population to stay at home, while the family is at camp.

It is especially invigorating for the stay-at-home, work-all-day husband in this predicament. In such invigorating circumstances, he is expected to perform many new tasks, such as feeding himself, washing the dishes and making his bed.

If he measures up to these assignments he may find a new interest in life around the home. Even dodging work is apt to stir his mind, as through improvising labor-saving devices such as putting the frying pan in the refrigerator after breakfast, instead of washing it.

Such great inventions give a man a fresh sparkle, though the frig. may develop an off-color reek.

Down at the office, the holiday season offers like interests. Some of the work of those on holidays may turn out to be necessary after all. Doing their jobs is a challenge. An overweight executive finds himself forced to wrap a parcel and look up the correct address to put on it.

This leads him to discover the files, a labyrinthine area of the office where he begins to understand something of the frustrations and excitements of explorers.

The late-afternoon when he types a letter all by his lonesome self, finding the paper, carbons, envelope and an old stickumless stamp . . . this experience grows extra hard knobs on his brain and makes him a better man.

After all eight hours of pinch-hitting and pinch-missing for the holidaying stenographer, bosso staggers like a flat-foot flusie from the office. He climbs into his gas-gobbling chariot and faces the six o'clock stomp through traffic jams, and bridge tie-ups only to wind up in a sink-full of dirty dishes.

Holidays are invigorating.

Bibles For All

The Parson's Column

By REV. N. J. PENROSE

It is hard to imagine many homes in Canada where there is not at least one Bible. But Bibles have not always been so plentiful. Just 150 years ago most of the poorer families in Great Britain did not own a single book, not even a Bible. This was especially true in Wales where only the very wealthy could afford Bibles.

A little Welsh girl named Mary Jones played an important role in helping to change this state of affairs. As a child of 10 years of age, Mary's greatest ambition was to own a Bible. Her father and mother were very poor and although they loved the Bible and had memorized many parts of it, they had never been able to afford to buy one.

But Mary was a determined little girl. She started saving her pennies when she was ten and kept on saving year after year until she was 16. She finally had enough money to buy her Bible. Then she had to walk 25 miles to find a minister who had a few Bibles for sale. She was very lucky. She got the last Welsh Bible he had.

The minister who sold this Bible to Mary Jones was very much impressed by her great desire to have her own Bible. So he made a special trip to London to tell about Mary and others like her who wanted Bibles and could not get them. This resulted in the organization in 1804 of a special society to provide people, not only in Wales, but all over the world, with Bibles in their own language.

The name of that society is The British and Foreign Bible Society. This is a name which has become more familiar to Squamish people during the past year. Last November the Rev. J. Tingley, provincial secretary of this society, organized a Squamish branch of the Bible Society with representatives from the Anglican, United, and Pentecostal churches. The Rev. Tingley paid his second visit on Sunday, August 30, when he preached in two of the churches and also showed a film which described the Bible Society's work in Australia and the New Hebrides.

The Rev. Tingley explained that with the help of the British and Foreign Bible Society the Bible has now been translated and printed in over 1000 languages . . . 1136 to be exact.

Last year right here in Canada the Bible Society circulated over 300,000 scriptures in 76 different languages and the United Bible Societies of the world distributed some 26,000,000 scriptures. This is a tremendous achievement and something for which Christians of all denominations are very thankful. But the Rev. Tingley reminded us that there are still millions of people who urgently want the Bible in their own language but are too poor to pay even a fraction of the cost. They must be helped by means of our contributions.

TRUCK DAMAGED BY ROCK SLIDE

Small rock slides along the new Sea View Highway are a common occurrence but most people have been luckier than George Aalton whose panel truck straddled a big one, doing extensive damage to the under parts of the truck.

Mr. Aalton said he was following about two or three hundred feet behind another vehicle when this large boulder plunged down from above directly into the path of the truck. He and some friends were returning from Vancouver Saturday night when the accident happened.

SOCIAL NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Best of Mount Sheer have as their guest Mr. Best's mother from New Westminster.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Karwinski of Mount Sheer are being congratulated on the birth of a son.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Bradley and son of Vanderhoof have been the guests of the latter's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. G. Pickard.

Last year the Bible Society received contributions from 145 different communities in B.C. totalling about $75,000. The amount that the people of Squamish contributed was $60.45. I hope that we can do much better this year. The secretary-treasurer of the Squamish branch of the Bible Society is Mr. Doug Fenlon, our local jeweller. He will be pleased to accept any contributions.

Some Straight Talk About Vitamins

Are some vitamins better than others?

How do they differ?

Some firms advertise prices that APPARENTLY are much less than those charged by the reliable pharmaceutical firms who manufacture the vitamins.

PHARMACISTS SELL and PHYSICIANS RECOMMEND

These firms state that there is no difference in the quality of any vitamins because laws for labelling protect you.

CAN THIS BE TRUE?

You know that a pound of butter must comply with government laws in order to be sold, but SOME BRANDS ARE MUCH BETTER THAN OTHERS. Two housewives make a pie using similar ingredients, but one of those pies not only tastes better, but is easier to digest.

VITAMINS ARE MEDICINES. Each ingredient must be tested for potency and freedom from contamination. Even the container bottles often require a special formula glass for better protection.

The important quality of a vitamin is: HOW WELL IS IT ABSORBED BY YOUR BODY? When low price is the object, expensive testing is eliminated. They are often so made that they pass through the body undissolved. Inert ingredients may react with vitamins to render them less potent.

The reliable pharmaceutical firms, whose products we feature, test each batch of vitamins, as many as 56 times. They are formulated so that they will do you the most possible good. To pay more is unnecessary — to look for a bargain is to gamble with your health.

We have often noted full page ads in the National Magazines featuring the vitamin product of some mail-order house in Toronto or Montreal. All we ask you to do, when price is the concern, is to multiply out the 30-day supply price to 100 tablets, add postage, "handling charges," and COD fees. The total price will prove to be many, many dollars more than a quality vitamin-mineral tablet manufactured by one of the nation's foremost pharmaceutical firms — a company known and highly respected by all physicians.

Be certain your body receives the benefits your dollars have paid for — purchase only the best in vitamins, and enjoy the blessings of modern pharmaceutical research.

Jungle School

Of Ships And Sails And Sealing Wax

By MANSON TOYNBEE

Until I came to Sarawak I thought that the days of sealing wax were long since past. The only place where I can even recall seeing sealing wax mentioned was in Lewis Carroll's delightful poem, "The Walrus and the Carpenter".

Well, in Sarawak we are still in the age of sealing wax, and official correspondence is supposed to be sealed in traditional visited fashion.

Dr. Ar On my arrival in Sarawak I they was given a good supply of white bright red sealing wax together with an official seal.

WAX NIGHTMARES

My early attempts at sealing letters were nightmares.

In the first place, the matches that we get in Sarawak are both short and very thin. They look like extremely undernourished cousins of good old Canadian matches.

These miniature matches come from Sweden, though I hadn't previously realized that the Swedes were so short of wood.

I remember the time when I was in grade two at school when our teacher had us memorize the little verse: "One tree can make a million matches, but one match can destroy a million trees."

In Sweden one tree is apparently required to supply enough wood to make three million matches.

NO FLAME

Well, to get back to the application of the official government seal.

Before starting the sealing process you must lay out all of the necessary paraphernalia: envelope to be sealed, sealing wax, matches and seal.

You then take the matchbox in your left hand and proceed to strike a match. No flame results from this action, but the head of the match crumbles. Sarawak's humid air causes match heads to disintegrate.

The same thing happens to the second, third and fourth matches that you try. At the fifth attempt you get a flame, but this time the head of the match snaps off and you must then quickly stamp out the burning match head before it starts a fire that may destroy your happy home.

REHEAT WAX

After one or two more unsuccessful attempts you manage to get a match to ignite properly.

You drop the matchbox, switch the match to your left hand, seize the sealing wax with your right hand, and apply the flame to the end of the wax.

A large drop of wax falls on the envelope completely missing the spot where the seal is to go.

You reheat the wax and apply it to the correct spot, but just as you do so, the match that you are still holding in your left hand burns your fingers. You drop the match quickly and thrust your poor burned fingers into your mouth to ease the pain.

START AGAIN

At this point you discover the match you dropped has now set fire to the envelope.

You snuff out the conflagration only to discover that by this time the wax has become so hard that you cannot use the seal.

Again you reheat the wax, and finally the seal is applied.

Then, horror of horrors! You discover that you have neglected to enclose one copy of the form which governments in all parts of the world, including this jungle land of Sarawak, love to have in at least a half-dozen copies. The seal must be broken, the envelope reopened, the additional copy inserted, and the sealing nightmare endured once more.

MAIL READY

Eventually, after the whole process has consumed the best part of an hour and a box of matches, the envelope is safely and securely sealed. True, the bright red sealing wax is by now a shade of dirty pink, the envelope displays a circular scorched patch where you dropped the match, and you have four burned fingers to show for your valiant efforts. But the battle has been won, the Royal Mail is ready, the tradition of the Empire has been upheld. Long live the Queen!

Ed. Note: We are pleased to introduce this week a new column for women by a woman our readers know through her North Yard News. Mrs. Peg Tinney, believing that the good things of life should be shared, intends to do just that through weekly presentation of favorite recipes. She invites readers to participate by offering their tested recipes for publication. We believe the families and guests of the community can only benefit from such a happy endeavour.

Deciding on the first recipe to be printed presented a bit of a problem but with fall just around the corner and the arrival of cooler days, hot meals seem once again to be in order. However, attractive casseroles and combination dishes are appropriate fare for any season of the year.

This meal-in-one fish dish is most tasty and made an immediate hit with our family, especially when served with hot rolls or French bread and tossed green salad or cole slaw.

TUNA PIE

Combine the following:

- 1 tin tuna
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 2 cups diced potatoes
- 2 cups finely cut or shredded carrots

Salt and pepper to taste.

Simmer till vegetables are tender. Remove from stove and add 1 can undiluted Cream of Mushroom Soup. Mix thoroughly and pour into casserole dish.

Place, buttered triangles of bread on top and place in oven till bread is lightly browned.

MR. AND MRS. E. S. GRYBA

Colorful RCMP dress uniforms gave a bright touch of color to the wedding of Edna Grace Reid and Ernest Samuel Gryba in St. John's Anglican Church last Friday evening at 7.

Rev. C. H. Gibbs officiated at the ceremony which united in marriage the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manson Reid of Lucknow, Ontario, and the son of Mrs. Peter Gryba of Endeavour, Saskatchewan and the late Mr. Gryba.

The bride, a nursing graduate of Toronto Western, is matron of the Squamish General Hospital, and the groom is a member of the local RCMP detachment.

Baskets of white gladioli and Esther Auld mums formed a backdrop for the lovely gowns of the bride and her attendants.

The bride's bouffant dress of brocaded taffeta featured a fitted bodice and long sleeves. Her chapel length veil cascaded from a coronet of pearls and diamante. She carried a white Bible crested with a mauve orchid and white stephanotis.

Miss Elizabeth Schumacher as maid of honour wore a short dress of white velvet with a matching bolero. Miss Violet Fruin and Miss Vicki Skarzynski as bridesmaids wore identical gowns of aqua velvet. All three attendants wore matching gloves and feather bandeaux and carried crescent shaped bouquets of red gladioli.

The tiny flower girl, Judy Brown, wore a ballerina length dress of red velvet and carried a basket of Esther Reid daisies.

The groom was supported by Constable Melvin Stearns of Vancouver and ushers were Constables John Hooper and Barry Wallace. Corporal J. Rutledge gave the bride in marriage.

Organ music was provided by Mrs. R. Brownell and Mrs. A.

Eross sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "O Promise Me."

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Elks Hall where Mrs. D. D. Morrison joined the receiving line as the official hostess.

Dr. L. C. Kindree proposed the toast to the bride; while he regretted not having known the bride longer he felt confident regarding her future happiness. Following his reply the groom proposed a toast to the bridal attendants.

Refreshments were served by friends and fellow workers of the bride, while Mrs. J. Rutledge and Mrs. A. Greathex presided at the tea table. Mr. R. Green and his musicians provided music during the reception.

For her travelling costume the bride chose a suit of teal blue with hat and scarf of burnt orange.

The young couple will honeymoon at Lake Waskesiu in Prince Albert National Park in Saskatchewan. They will then travel to Endeavour and points east including the bride's home town of Lucknow.

Upon their return to Squamish Mr. and Mrs. Gryba will take up residence in the house formerly occupied by A. W. Hutton.

The Dutch port of Rotterdam, badly bombed during the war, has been completely reconstructed and is now one of Europe's most modern cities.

Everything is "drive-in" nowadays. We have drive-in banks, drive-in theatres — everything, that is — but streets.

The Christian Way

Broad Beans And Light Bulbs

By ANDREW LAM

A couple asked me whether I would accept them to worship in our church. They told me how they were rebuked and turned away from their church because of some matrimonial mix-up in their lives.

I told them what the Christian standard of marriage was. At the same time, I assured them that God is a God of love—full of mercy and loving kindness—that if we truly repent and seek God and His way of life, He will receive us in the same way as the father in the parable of the prodigal son received his wayward one.

They understood—they wanted to make confession of their sins, and to live a better life after God's holy commandments. They sought God's forgiveness, and I assured them of that forgiveness.

All this in turn came to a point because of several instances when certain death faced the husband—but somehow he escaped from harm. It made him think—he began to see how his past way of life had been unworthy of himself how it showed indifference to the love of God. God had been merciful to him, calling him to repentance, waiting for him to give heed to that call, but he had not responded. Now that he is able to see with the eyes of his soul, no longer does he want to be ungrateful to God or heedless to His call.

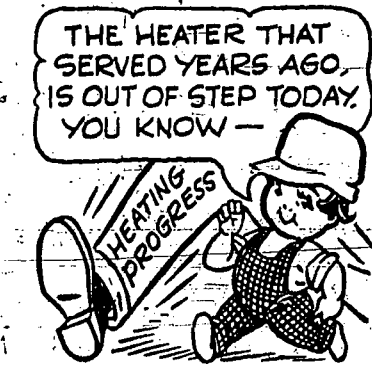

Both with their children have come to worship faithfully. I detect indications of sincerity in their desire for God and earnestness in their endeavor to live a God-like life. I imagine they must have been born again.

He tried to tell me the results of this transformation. "I wanted to show my children what broad beans were like. I could take two or three beans without permission, but I did not want to do that. I asked the clerk whether I might have two—I would pay for them if he so desired. He gave them to me." His wife joined the witness. "My husband's co-workers would pilfer little things from their place of work. One day, in spite of my husband's protestation, they put a light bulb in his lunch box—I suppose to incriminate him in case they themselves were caught. He brought the light bulb home, but I wouldn't let it stay in the house."

"By their fruits ye shall know them," Jesus said. As a man thinks so he lives. The way a man lives is dependent on what he believes in.
