Be Charming: Make Our Town The Friendliest...

How would you like some visitors this summer? These are a special kind of visitor called tourists who come, often uninvited, and willing to pay. They won't necessarily be loaded with loot and just itching to spend it regardless of the reception and service we give them. They will be more like you on a holiday for a day or two or a week or two—appreciative of friendly and helpful service at reasonable rates.

Our summer specialty, and for that matter our year round specialty, should be that of helping our visitors to enjoy themselves. Happy visitors, pleased with their hosts, are likely to stay longer than those who are just left on their own to discover what they can. And they are more likely to come again.

We stress the importance of being hosts because we believe this factor to be the most important in promoting a flourishing tourist industry. Granted, we have lakes, we have mountains, we have trees and rivers, but so have a thousand and one other communities. How then are we to establish our place in the minds and memories of tourists as a good place to go?

We do not have the money to launch an extensive advertising campaign such as Vancouver, Victoria, and larger centres do, but we could out do them in hospitality. We could become known as the friendliest tourist centre in the Northwest, or the Southwest, depending on from which direction our tourists come.

Most of us have had the experience of being strangers in a strange place and this is just what most of our visitors will be. When they arrive they will ask questions and the manner in which they are received will largely determine whether they stay or go on to one of the thousand and one other communities. If we are to earn the accolade of the friendliest town in these parts everyone of us must be willing to turn on the charm and be helpful. It won't cost us anything except a little time—and it's a poor host that cannot spend a little time with his guests.

Don't always expect the tourist to be charming to you. He may have just come from some unfriendly place that has spoiled his holiday mood. Your business is to make him feel welcome. Be considerate and helpful and no doubt his mood will improve. He may stay for his holiday and he may come again. And this is our best bet in making a flourishing tourist industry.

A Community Project...

There is a lot of work yet to do at the Community Swimming Pool, some of it that can't be done now because of the lack of funds, but there is money for the materials for patio, fencing and landscaping. What is lacking is volunteer help.

This is a simple case of economics: every hour of volunteer help leaves that much more money for further construction. There isn't enough money to hire all this work done and still do the work. The patio, fencing and landscaping is essential at this time.

Opening date has been set for early July. To make it the schedule is crammed with jobs to do—jobs that anybody can do—that is, anybody willing.

Last Saturday morning two men showed up for work. One was the overseer and the other was the volunteer foreman. Some have worked hard on this project and it is no doubt that they will do still more. It seems they will have to, because no one else will.

The job that needed doing Saturday was that of moving back the temporary plywood fence to allow room for a bulldozer to compact the fill where the patio will go. It is jobs like this that will fritter away a lot of money if help has to be hired but could easily be done under supervision by any unskilled group of volunteers.

Another simple job is that of taking nails out of the lumber that was used on the forms for the pool. Much of this will be reused for patio forms and perhaps eventually for change houses. But first of all the nails have to come out and the piles have to be sorted.

There is much activity in the community at this time of year and it might be asking a lot to expect volunteer help. The thing to remember in this pool project is that there is much yet to do and volunteers could save a considerable amount of money that can be better used on constructing more amenities, such as change rooms.

This community swimming pool is a mammoth undertaking for a community this size but it is one in which we can all take pride, and pleasure, too, if we or our families like to swim. But regardless of our individual needs or inclinations the pool will be a valuable asset to our community making it a better place in which to live. And this should be of interest to all of us.

Congratulations 1962 Grads...

Squamish senior high school 1962 class of graduates have now turned their back on another phase of their formal education to face a new greater challenge—an exciting new chapter of their lives.

Majority of the graduates have recognized the advantages of further training and studies and have enrolled in universities or trade schools. Others will go directly into logging, mining, business and industrial fields.

It is regrettable that so many of the graduates must leave the North Howe Sound area to find employment. Our young people raised in this district are a vital asset and it disturbs us to see them leave—one of our most important exports.

The graduates do not have to be reminded of the outstanding opportunities there are in the specialized fields of endeavour that await them. Social services, professions, business and all its facets present a frontier of achievement never before experienced in the development of the free world.

North Howe Sound communities are expecting great things from the young people of 1962 class. As they receive the congratulations of their many friends they individually take with them every good wish for happy and fruitful years ahead.

A Tragic Summer Ahead...

There have been many thousands of words written and uttered on the somewhat mundane subject of water safety but it is worth your life to read about it again.

The warm weather is with us in Pemberton and Squamish districts, school will be out soon and most of us will be getting back to the neighborhood lakes and rivers to enjoy the pleasures of water recreation.

Out of the many who will be playing and frolic in water sports a few of them will not enjoy them for long. They are the ones who are destined to die the horrible death of drowning.

Their pleasure will suddenly be interrupted when they will find themselves in the predicament of not being able to get that badly needed breath of air. They will be horrified by the thought that they have no choice but to breathe in the very substance which they thought to be their source of enjoyment a few seconds before. Their lungs won't hold out any longer.

They will be in the helpless state of knowing that they are going to die and not being able to do anything about it. It's not long before they are mercifully made unconscious by the lack of oxygen. Not pleasant reading, is it?

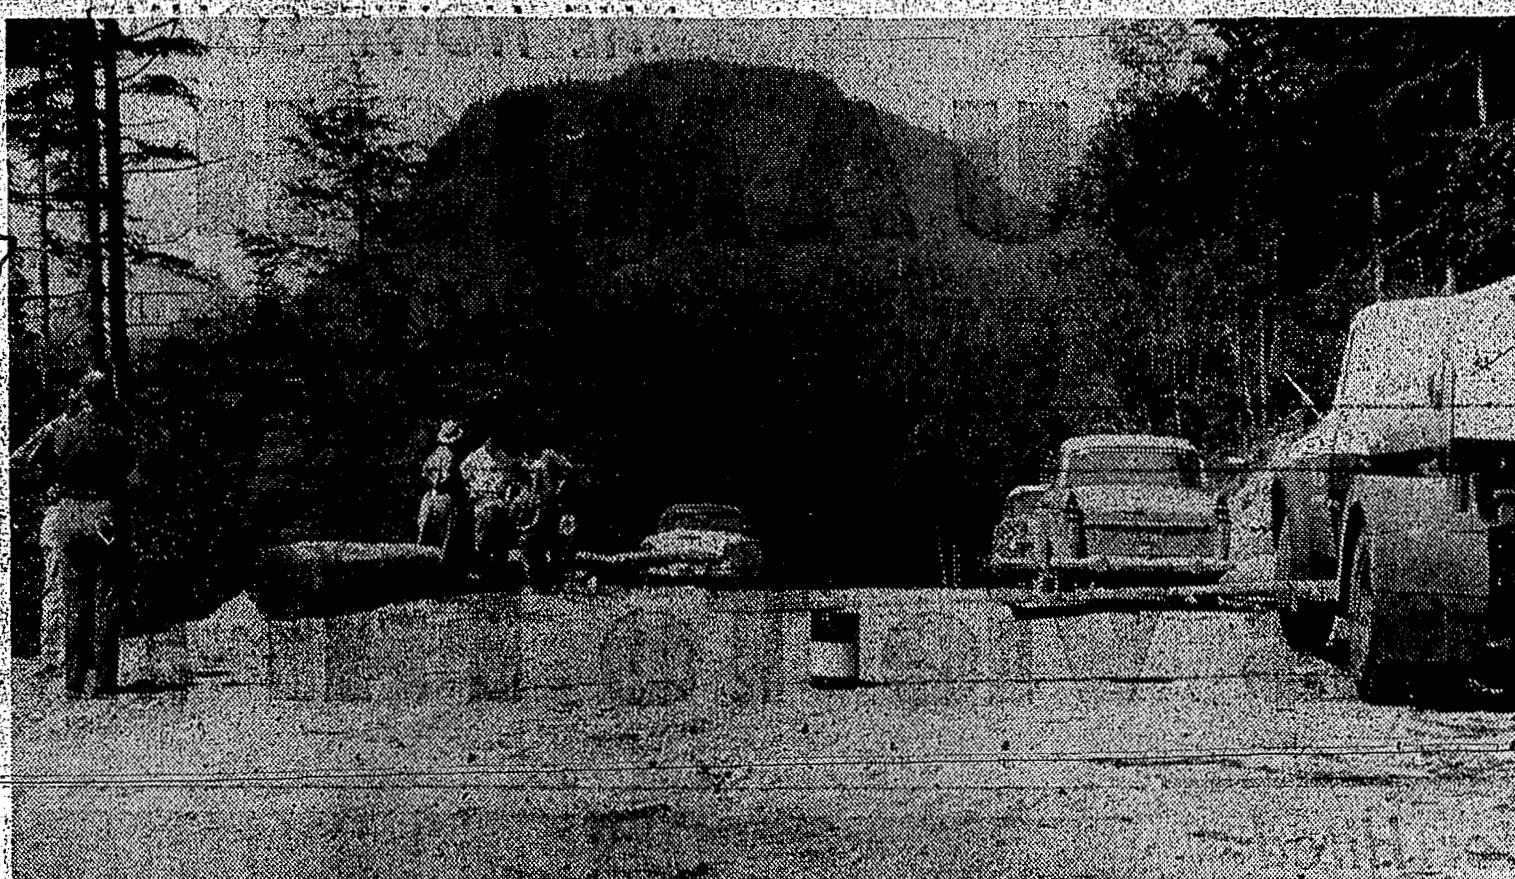

It's human nature for every one of you reading this to assume that this could never happen to one's self, but there is no sense in hiding from the horror of drowning by saying, "Oh, it could never happen to me."

Canadian Red Cross does its best to inform you of the hazards involved in water recreation. But water safety, to all intents and purposes, is a very personal affair, for it is only through the individual's response to water safety knowledge that the drowning statistics can be cut.

Over-confidence in water, and fear of the water are the two extremes of approach. Somewhere in between is the correct one. It's a level-headed approach that is somewhat of a mixture of the two extremes but is distinct in itself. It amounts to facing the water with confidence but, at the same time, giving it its due respect.

It's your decision. Learn to swim; don't go into the water beyond your depth until you can swim. Don't tire yourself on your first swim of this season and don't go beyond the point of no return. And if you should get into difficulties keep calm and don't panic.

This summer be water wise.

The Jackson Ranch Case

In the summer of 1912, an interesting case was brought to court in Vancouver, when Sigurd Anderson sued John Jackson, a Brackendale storekeeper and Upper Squamish horse-rancher, for failing to abide by the terms of their agreement-of-sale.

Mr. Jackson had bought 87 acres of land in the Upper Squamish valley from the real estate firm of Irwin & Billings of Vancouver, built his house, a large barn and other outbuildings, and purchased enough implements to work it.

As 87 acres was a little more than he needed, he agreed to sell 15 acres to his neighbor, Sigurd Anderson, and a surveyor was engaged to run the necessary lines. It soon became apparent that Jackson was in trouble; the land just wasn't there.

His supposed 87 acres was really only 27 acres; nine of it on the mainland and the other 18 acres of an island washed down the river since the original survey some twenty years before. As if this wasn't enough, Jackson had built his house and other buildings only partly on his own land and this improved portion was claimed by Anderson, leaving Jackson 12 acres of bush on the island. Regarding this, his Honor, Judge Grant said: "It never was the wish of the defendant to sell both bush and cleared land, including his home, and outbuildings; nor was it the expectation of the plaintiff in entering into the agreement, that he was buying more land than came up to a certain trail running through the bush."

If 15 acres of bush land is taken, there is not sufficient for a ranch for either the plaintiff or defendant, and the reasonable expectations of both would be disappointed, and in such a case the contract should not be enforced.

SQUAMISH'S FIRST COURT CASE

The case became so involved that His Honor, Judge Grant, decided to visit the ranch in person and determine which was the line from whence the measurements were to begin. Mr. E. D. McTaggart was Anderson's lawyer, while Mr. W. B. Farris appeared for Jackson. These two members of the bar accompanied Judge Grant and his clerk to Newport; the trip being made in Mr. McTaggart's motor launch.

After the trip up Howe Sound and a hearty supper at Newport, the two lawyers felt so much at ease with the world that they managed to effect a settlement of the question without going the remaining twenty miles to Jackson's Ranch. With Judge Grant's consent the settlement was formally ratified that night in Newport. Next morning His Honor and Mr. Farris returned to the city by the regular steamer, leaving Mr. McTaggart to navigate his motor launch back.

JOHN JACKSON vs. IRWIN & BILLINGS

As a sequel to the suit involving Jackson and Anderson in 1912, there followed the lawsuit in 1913, in which Jackson tried to recover damages from Irwin & Billings. The defendants offered to give Jackson his money back if the land was returned to them, but this Jackson refused to consent to, alleging that he was bound by his agreement to sell 15 acres to Anderson.

In his judgement on the case, Mr. Justice Morrison said that he found that there was a mutual mistake on the part of the plaintiff and defendants as to the area of the land, and that therefore "Jackson could not succeed in his claim for damages. He was, however, given judgement for the price of the land that fell short; that is for 60 acres at $19 an acre. In summing, up the judge said: "It seems to me that the plaintiff alone is responsible for the consequences of his subdividing his purchase without taking the ordinary precaution to check up the boundaries."

Irwin & Billings appealed, the judgement was reversed, and Mr. Jackson received nothing.

Today's MEDITATION

The World's Most Widely Used Devotional Guide

The Upper Room
O THE UPPER ROOM, NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

Read Revelation 22:1-7

He showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. (Revelation 22:1)

At the lower edge of a meadow on my father and mother's farm was a small swamp. At the lower edge of the swamp a little stream came out. It made its way down the valley over rocks and rills, through sunshine and fresh air, until it was purified. Joining other streams and creeks, it flowed into navigable rivers on its way to the ocean.

That little stream, along with many other little streams, has been doing its part to help bear up the commerce of the world and assuage the thirst of those who otherwise might have perished.

Christ's church is made up of many individuals who are being made more and more pure in the stream of a strong faith and an active life in Christ. Each, joined to others, does his part to help lift the burdens of the world and to bring other persons into the sunshine of God's love, to the fountain of life, that they too may be made pure.

PRAYER
The southern prairies hold the record for the highest temperature ever recorded in Canada, 113 degrees.

Our Father in heaven, thanksgiving and praise be unto Thee for Thy love and tender mercies. Grant us Thy rich blessings that we may become pure and holy and may always be active in Thy work and service as we journey homeward. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

As we become more active church members, we become more useful to Christ.

Dr. N. A. M. MacKenzie Says...

Universities Must Deal With Practical Needs

Universities must maintain an attitude of flexibility towards training for the professions, and no one can predict what additional fields will become of interest to them in the future, Dr. N. A. M. MacKenzie, president of the University of British Columbia, says in his annual report.

The report, entitled "Education for the professions," deals with the controversy concerning the responsibility of universities for the professional training of citizens.

There are those who feel, the president says, that the business of universities is "the development of the intellect and mind and not the more practical and even the more sordid business of professional and technical instruction and training."

MOST OF US MUST EARN

He continues: "But the hard facts of life are that most of us have to make our living or become dependents of those who do earn."

In the end university graduates do go to work and because of this the continuing debate regarding professional education will not likely and should not change materially the policy of universities with regard to the "useful and the not-so-useful" courses they provide.

While the arts, letters and sciences are and should be the most important section of a university, the professions and professional training are equally honourable and just as important in terms of the services universities render to the young men and women who come to them, to their communities, and to the nation, President MacKenzie says.

A variety of forces has led us to change our ideas about professional education," the president adds.

SPECIALIZATION
Explosive developments in research in every area of learning have made specialization a practical necessity with the result that universities are tending to concentrate more and more on professional preparation.

"Such a result," the president comments, "is perhaps inevitable in a growing society and expanding economy, but this does not in any way mean that the traditional humane studies can be neglected or downgraded."

The research carried out in the professional schools at UBC has direct application to the community at large, President MacKenzie says, and UBC has made it a policy to aid and encourage such service.

RESEARCH EXTENSION

In addition to the hundreds of research projects being carried on the University extension department is working to extend the UBC campus to the whole province and through continuing education for professional groups is enabling the practising professional to keep abreast of new developments.

Now and for the next decade, the president says, we must concentrate on developing a major university of unquestionable excellence and at the same time encourage the growth of other kinds of institutions elsewhere.

He concludes: "We must have but one goal in education, to ensure that every young British Columbian who has the ability and capacity to undertake university studies be guaranteed education and training to the highest level of which he is capable. No lesser goal is worthy of us."

Teacher Exodus From High School

This year the community views with surprise and regret the departure of the majority of the secondary school staff. Last year only three resigned.

Mr. W. C. Campbell is going to McBride where he will operate an insurance and real estate business.

Mr. F. Snowsall is moving to West Vancouver.

Mrs. G. Reay will be instructing North Vancouver students in the field of Home Economics.

Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Drew will move to Tahsis after spending the summer in England.

Mr. E. Zydyk will teach in the Nanaimo High School.

Mr. J. McKellar and his family will live in Coquitlam where he has accepted a position in a new junior high school.

Like Mr. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Shindell have heard the call of the north and are moving to Dawson Creek.

Mr. E. Cameron and Mr. R.

Zahar are going to teach in North Vancouver and Vancouver, respectively.

Mr. A. T. Lavers' plans were not known at the time of writing.

PGE Business Continues Up

Carloadings over the PGE continue higher than corresponding periods last year.

May's total revenue cars loaded on line and received from connections was 4,653, as compared to 4,597 in 1961. This total was comprised of 4,277 cars loaded as to last year's 4,244, and 376 cars received from connections compared with 353 in 1961.

HANGING on edge few feet from disaster this bulldozer caused flurry of concern at Routledge Sand & Gravel pit at Furry Creek early Monday morning.

Personal income taxes represent less than twenty per cent of the total of all taxes paid in a year by Canadians.

Freeway Driving

The call of the open road is beckoning, and more and more of the road is becoming a "freeway."

B.C. Automobile Association has a few tips on how to drive these super-highways:

Study the course; freeway driving is different.

Always decide where you're going — before entering a freeway.

Merge smoothly with traffic; "blend" is the idea.

Get into exit lane in plenty of time.

Observe posted ramp speeds carefully.

Don't drive too slowly.

Never stop on pavement; use road shoulder.

Don't follow too closely — on any road — but especially on freeways.

Don't weave about or "lane switch."

Finally, get the "feel" of the freeway and travel with composure and comfort.
