PGE ASKS FOR LAND REZONING

Council last week heard a request from the Pacific Great Eastern Railway Co. for the rezoning of two blocks of land at the junction of the access road to Squamish and Highway 99.

Present zoning of the area is light industrial. The railway would like this changed to service commercial.

The two parcels of land contain 2.9 acres and 5.7 acres. The railway wishes to put the land up for public auction.

Council said the matter would have to be taken up with the highways department as it can rule on any development within half a mile of a highway, and with the Advisory Planning Commission.

How school taxes are computed

F. D. Ross, secretary-treasurer for the Howe Sound School District No. 48 compiled the following schedule showing the number of students in the school area, the school mill rate, the gross school tax, the home owner grant and the net school tax on a home with a market value of $18,000.

Assuming the house is valued at $15,000 and the lot at $3,000 the net assessed value of the property would be $7,125.

The figures in the chart below show the number of students has more than doubled in the past eight years, and that while the tax, in mills, has risen almost double, the tax paid after the home owner grant has been deducted, is only about one quarter higher than the tax paid in 1960.

In that time the mill rate for school purposes has risen from 17.8 to 30.67 and the school tax climbed from $126.82 to $218.52. But the home owner grant has correspondingly climbed from $50 to $120 and the net taxable amount is now $98.52 compared to $76.82 in 1960.

He states these figures would also be applicable to a farm valued at $30,000 where the land was worth $5,000; farm buildings $10,00 and the farm house $15,000.

	Students Enrolled in September	School Mill Rate	Gross School Tax	Home Owner Grant	Net School Taxes
1960	1080	17.80	126.82	50.00	76.82
1961	1235	19.40	138.22	50.00	88.22
1962	1258	19.53	139.15	50.00	89.15
1963	1432	21.01	150.34	70.00	80.34
1964	1665	23.80	169.57	85.00	84.57
1965	1803	24.60	175.27	100.00	75.27
1966	2124	25.86	184.25	110.00	74.25
1967	2400	30.67	218.52	120.00	98.52

Climbers asked to register here

Council last week approved a request from Sgt. Don Wilson of the local RCMP Police detachment asking that a sign be posted on the highway requesting hikers and climbers to register with the police at Squamish.

The sergeant said many climbers do report on the area they intend to visit and when they expect to return and then check in again on their way back. Such registration could enable police and civil defence to make an earlier start on a rescue attempt.

Council discussed the possibilities of passing a bylaw regarding climbing the Chief or other trips of this kind but felt this would be unwieldy and difficult to enforce. It was also not meant to refer the registration request to every hunter, fisherman, or person who wished to step off the roads in the municipality but rather to those who were planning overnight or difficult trips.

Councillor Boscariol suggested that a letter be written to the various hiking and climbing groups asking that their members register when making such trips.

Wilson's request was sparked by three searches in one week, two of which were successful. They involved two climbers who spent a night on the face of the Chief and Sam McRae who was lost on Whistler overnight.

The third case involved a fisherman who drowned while fishing in the Cheakamus-Squamish River system.

Discuss possibility of health unit here

Dr. P. J. Reynolds, Coast Garibaldi Health Unit director and Mr. Caine from the Public Health Engineering department in Victoria visited Squamish last week and spent some time discussing problems with the municipal council, and the possibility of the construction of a public health building to house the unit.

Dr. Reynolds feels the unit should be located in Squamish as this would place him closer to the area where most of the new construction will be taking place.

"It would be easier to operate the health unit from Squamish," he said. The question of travelling would be much simpler as he could easily fly to Powell River from Vancouver but flying from Powell River to Squamish is much more difficult.

Dr. Reynolds also said the problems he has in this area are acute. He was referring to the development north of Squamish where many new homes and cabins are being built in the Whistler area and sewage disposal could create difficulties.

In discussing the health unit offices, Dr. Reynolds said there are grants available, based upon the area of the building. These are provincial grants and would be matched by federal ones.

There is no guarantee he added, that these grants may be obtainable after 1969-1970. He also stated the Union Board of Health had passed the motion regarding speaking to the Squamish council about building a health unit in Squamish.

He also added that the Health Department would favor such a move. Tentative future population will be in the area from Squamish north to Pemberton.

Mr. Caine referred to the new pollution law and said it could broadly be interpreted as "anyone discharging anything into anything requires a pollution permit." This would refer to any unit larger than a duplex.

Council discussed the problems it had been having with failing to make the chlorination and fluoridation equipment work due to grit and silt eating the impeller and Mr. Caine said this could be eliminated by use of a grit trap or settling chamber.

He said the department was willing to aid the municipality in many ways such as visiting medical health inspectors, looking into problems or other ways.

He said the department does not draw up plans but will approve them when they are drawn.

Discussions were to be held with key members of council during Dr. Reynolds and Mr. Caine's visit to Squamish.

THANK YOU, MR. AND MRS. JOHN EATON!

The Squamish Public Library now possesses a copy of Roloff Beny's photographic study of Canada "To Every Thing There is a Season". This beautiful book is a centennial gift from Mr. and Mrs. John Eaton of the T. Eaton Co.

This book contains a most unusual collection of photographs; it presents Canada from unexpected angles, quite different from the usual pretty tourist folder illustrations.

The book will be placed in the reference section; patrons may peruse it at their leisure when visiting the library but it will not be permitted to be taken from the premises.

Flowers of Hope Campaign

No family, regardless of class or race is immune from mental retardation. A genetic accident, birth injury, or disease in infancy may impair the brain. There are more than 100 known cases of mental retardation and they strike impartially the child of rich and poor, the learned and the ignorant. Research into these causes and how they may be prevented is the only positive approach.

The Howe Sound Association for Retarded Children wish to announce that the Squamish, Woodfibre and Britannia areas will this year be canvassed in conjunction with the National Flowers of Hope Campaign, from May 8 to 14. Woodfibre will be holding a Tag Day on May 11.

Although a portion of the monies collected will remain in this community, the balance will be given to the Canadian Association to be used for further research into the cause and prevention of this tragic affliction.

Ball season starts here

The summer ball season officially started this week. On Tuesday May 2nd, the first league games began.

This marked the beginning of both the Little League and the Babe Ruth League.

School taxes rise 4.84 mills

By Rose Tatlow

The mill rate for the district of Squamish for municipal purposes rose two mills to 19 mills this year, the first rise in eighteen years.

With the costs of policing the area as well as the increase in other costs, council was unable to retain the former mill rate and provide the necessary services for the community.

Total mill rate for the present year will be 50.95. This will include 30.7 mills for the schools and 1.25 for the Garibaldi Hospital Improvement District. The mill rate for schools is up 4.84 while the rate for the hospital improvement district rose by .94. This will allow for the improvements to the hospital now being undertaken, and for additional equipment.

School taxes are up to $832,541, more than triple the amount last year but this is partially due to the inclusion of Woodfibre within the municipality. The school district taxes on machinery, a source which is not available for municipal taxation.

Other reasons for the rise in the school tax portion is that government grant scales have not increased while school costs have climbed. In this district alone costs are up 27 percent, while the number of students has increased 15 percent over last year.

The levy for general municipal purposes is $186,487 and again much of the increase is attributed to the inclusion of Woodfibre in the municipality as well as the increased property values. For municipal purposes Woodfibre only pays 10 mills as many services cannot be provided to the pulp town.

The Garibaldi Hospital Improvement District will raise $31,249.53 from its 1.25 levy, up .94 over last year and again the increased property values and inclusion of Woodfibre reflect the increase in the levy.

This is charged out on 100 percent of the assessed value of the land and 75 percent of the assessed value of the improvements.

First Million Dollar Budget

For the first time the cost of running the district has topped the million dollar mark, with the waterworks budget, a separate entity, totalling an additional $76,000.

With the annual budget of $1,272,797 this brings the cost of maintaining the municipal services to $1,348,797 or well over a million dollars.

The waterworks is self-supporting and the outlay there does not affect the mill rate.

Since the first incorporation of the area in 1948 until this year, the increase in revenues has come from the expansion of the district and the addition of new industry. This year, with added costs and needed work, for the first time since 1949, the mill rate has risen to meet these costs.

Addition of Woodfibre to the district provided for additional tax monies with no outlay as the mill rate was fixed at 10 mills in lieu of providing services. A similar formula will be used if Britannia becomes part of the district.

Inclusion of these areas means that taxes formerly paid to Victoria by the industrial centres would assist the municipality in providing services for the residential property in the valley owned by employees at the two plants.

First engine returns to PGE

The old No. 2 railway engine, the first steam engine on the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, came back to Squamish recently.

The old engine, which had been sold to the Comox Logging Company on Vancouver Island, and which had been operating there for a number of years as the company's No. 7 engine, will be restored and painted at the Squamish shops.

J. S. Goad, master mechanic at the PGE railway shops in Squamish, said the engine was, to his knowledge, the first one on the railroad which was built in 1911. Fred Downer was the first engineer on the railroad and he visited the Shops last week to inspect the engine.

Mr. Goad said when it is restored to its original appearance and repainted, it will be placed on display, probably in North Vancouver.

Canvassers to meet

Canvassers who will be taking part in the annual Salvation Army residential campaign in early June, will meet in the rear dining room of the Chieftain Hotel for coffee on May 9th at 2 p.m.

Captain Bond of the Salvation Army will be there and will distribute the kits to the canvassers who will also be briefed on how to conduct the campaign.

Board approves more equipment

The Squamish Hospital Board last week approved the spending of nine thousand dollars on new equipment for the hospital and some renovations.

This included remodelling the bathrooms with the contract awarded to Stan Banyard Construction. Equipment to be purchased included laundry equipment, a deep freeze, dishwasher, ice-making machine and operating room lights.

The board has selected the new X-ray machine it desires to purchase and is awaiting approval from Victoria.

A request from the Civil Defence for permission to store equipment for a 100 bed emergency hospital in the basement of the hospital was refused as the board felt there was not enough space available. The emergency hospital would require 10,000 cubic feet, or the equivalent of a 20 by 50 building 10 feet high.

A. B. Mackenzie said he could see little use for making Squamish a centre in case of evacuation when "people can't get out of here on a good Sunday, let alone if there was an emergency."

A four cent postal rate

One of the common complaints in the Squamish Valley lies in the different postage rates between Squamish and the other two post offices in the valley. Letters in Squamish take the four cent rate but to Garibaldi Highlands or Brackendale the rate is five cents.

Many people, business and otherwise, have complained about the letters which arrive with two cents due, and in one case, a young housewife insists she will send all such letters back to the sender.

The suggestion has been made that all three post offices within the district should come under the four cent levy but Mr. Stanley of the postal department, recently said this could only come about if we had a rural mail delivery service in the district.

The only other solution would be letter carrier service, or door to door delivery and he said this was still a long way in the future as there had to be a large number of units in the area to make this possible.

It would appear that, if business people and others, are sincerely interested in seeing the four cent rate apply throughout the valley, or district, it would be wise to see if such a rural mail delivery service could be obtained.

A poor turnout at last week's meeting, called to discuss the matter, has convinced the Chamber of Commerce that there is no desire for such a move at this time. If there is really a desire to have the cheaper rate prevail, it will be in the interests of those concerned to prepare to conduct the survey to see if a rural route would be desirable.

A rural route in the valley might not be the answer but certainly one uniform postage rate throughout the district would be desirable from everyone's standpoint.

We're heartily sick of getting letters with two cents postage due stickers on them, especially when they come from Garibaldi Highlands or Brackendale.

Why stall, Mr. Peterson?

Is there anyone here who is so naive as to believe that the North Shore does not need a Junior College? Not here, but in the department of education there seems to be a legion of Doubting Thomases right up to the Minister of Education Hon. Leslie R. Peterson.

Two years ago students entering B.C.'s senior secondary schools at the Grade XI level were introduced to a new concept of education and a curriculum that was as advanced as any in North America. It was based on the 1960 Chant Report on Education which stipulated that all students should receive a grounding enabling them to proceed to more advanced vocational, technical and university training.

Instead of the old system of only two options, university or general program students have had six selections, each of which have had six selections to lead to further training and employment in a general field. They are academic, technical, commercial, industrial, community services, fine arts and agriculture.

To follow through in these six streams of endeavor, Junior Colleges have been set up in the province with Vancouver City College serving metropolitan Vancouver along with the vocational centre in Burnaby. But it wasn't long before it was evident that facilities were soon to become seriously inadequate even before the first students of the new school system were to graduate.

Both North and West Vancouver School Boards realized the need for a North Shore Junior College and to substantiate their claims, they engaged an independent firm to bring in a survey of the educational needs for the area.

The findings were overwhelmingly conclusive and were forwarded to the Academic Board and a brief was presented to Mr. Peterson by representative of the local school board. This was fifteen months ago!

As recently as last week West Vancouver School trustees again approached

Mr. Peterson urging him to make the necessary move so that a plebiscite can be presented to the electorate for building a new college.

Now with the execution of some well educated foot work, the minister has dodged the issue directly by claiming that because the department has received similar applications for colleges from Richmond, Coquitlam and Burnaby school boards, an overall plan must be made. Further that the question of junior college administration should be done on an overall scale.

This sudden change of policy from a regional concept to a total area concept has been a setback for the cause of a new college. But, representatives of the metropolitan area met and agreed to re-hire Walter Hardwick and associates for another survey with the following terms of reference:

A) establish priority of areas; that is, which district needs the junior college first, and

B) is there a need for a co-ordinated program to prevent duplication of teaching among all colleges.

The lack of direction from the Department of Education in Victoria simply astounds us. If they are supposed to have the experts why has it been left up to our local school boards and administrations to have to hammer, hammer on the table for action for so obvious a need as more junior college facilities.

Is the reluctance of the department to see the need developing on the North Shore due to departmental lack of experience or are we back to the old problem of no funds for education?

Hundreds of young people will be graduating in June and the majority of them will want to continue for another two years at a junior college so that they will be able to begin their life's work or go on to more advanced education.

Who is going to educate them Mr. Peterson?

Out of the Mouths of Babes

Just recently a little girl, not yet in her teens, came home from school singing the following words:

There is a house in New Orleans
They call the Rising Sun
And it's been the ruin of many poor girls
And Lord, I know I'm one.

My mother she's a tailor,
She sews those new blue jeans,
My husband, he's a gambling man,
Drinks down in New Orleans.

My husband he's a gambler,
He goes from town to town.
The only time he's satisfied is when
He drinks his liquor down.

Go tell my baby sister,
Not to do what I have done,
Shun that house in New Orleans:
They call the Rising Sun.

One foot on the platform
The other's on the train,
I'm going down to New Orleans
To wear that ball and chain.

Going back to New Orleans
My race is almost run,
I'm going to spend the rest of my life
In the House of the Rising Sun.

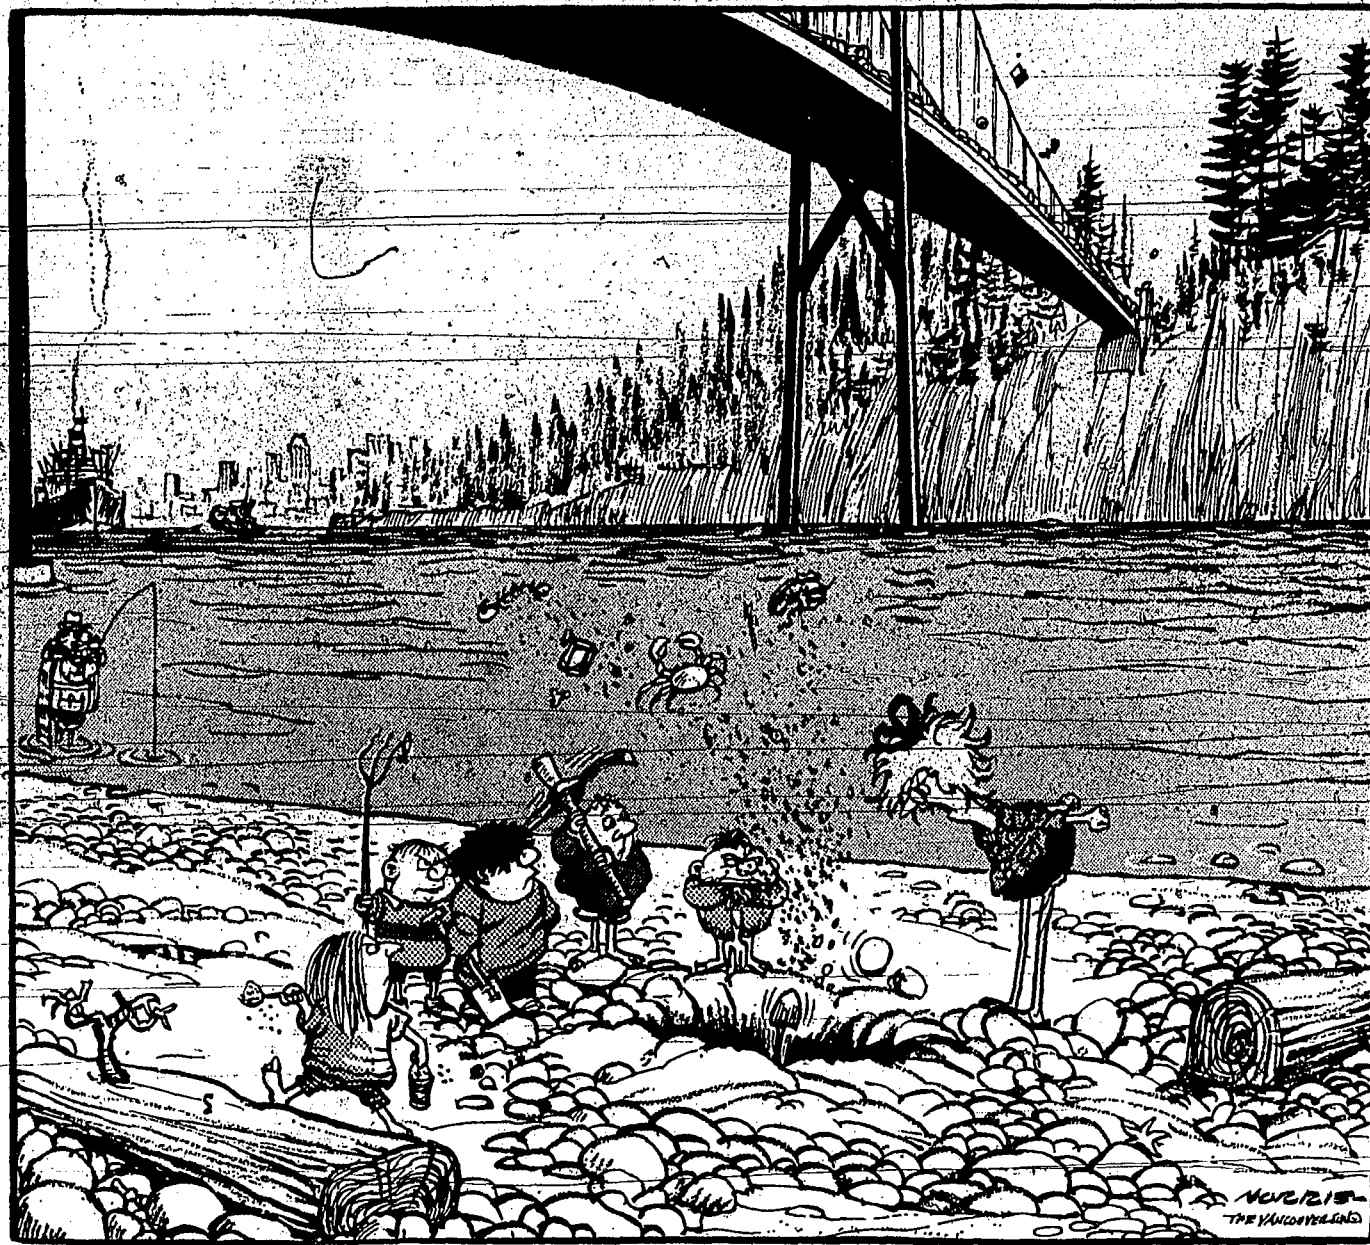

"The House of the Rising Sun" was a notorious brothel in New Orleans, about which somebody wrote a song with that title. It is the mournful dirge of a prostitute who, away from the place and apparently unhappy about it, has decided to go back.

Now most of us, drenched willy-nilly in every aspect of sex, this is not a particularly earth-shaking discovery—unless your twelve-year-old daughter comes home singing the ballad and you discover she's being taught it in school as part of a music lesson!

Even allowing for the fact that we have managed to rationalize the abandonment of most of our responsibilities to our children, this sort of direction and study does make one wonder where it can be expected to end.

What is going to happen when they get to the biology lessons?

There are literally millions of songs, of courage, of happiness, of love, of things fresh and beautiful. Why must our children be taught this trash at school? They already get enough of it from the magazine stands.

"Daddy said not to start your tunnel until after the bridge committee talks to Mr. Gagardi."

Tax incentives and mines make investment in Eire interesting

EVER SINCE I CAN REMEMBER, WHENEVER GOOD fortune occurred to some member of that other part of the Gaelic race that lives in Eire, I have heard people say, slightly deprecatingly, and with just a touch of envy, "Oh, well, it's just the luck of the Irish!"

I disagree; and it isn't. In my opinion, despite their element of feyness that contrasts so oddly with the Scottish trait of dourness, I admire the Irish as a highly sane and sensible lot.

No better proof of this exists than in the very gradual resurgence since the war of the country as a minor industrial power. This has been managed despite the bleakest of prospects and half a century of emigration that has bled much of the best in the population from the nation.

Much still has to be done, but the Eire government quite sensibly goes after business, and gets it.

Take as an example the recent mining developments in the country.

To most of us, Eire is by tradition a backward agricultural nation without resources or potential. This, too, is not so. Industrially, the country has an outstanding resource in a population that, given the chance, is hard-working, conscientious and fired with ambition.

Consequently, it is no accident that the government of Eire offers industrialists some of the best tax incentives of practically any country in the world towards the establishment of new industries to create employment. And industry is responding.

WE FORGET, TOO, THAT IN ROMAN AND EVEN EARLIER times, the British Isles were coveted as a source of metals, and that mining there has been active from the earliest times. It should come as no surprise, therefore, that in view of the Eire government's offer to mining companies that, if they establish producing mines prior to 1968, they will qualify for a 20-year tax holiday, that many of the world's major mining corporations are scratching the Irish earth furiously to find sources of mineral production.

Successes to date have been modest in scope but, financially, intensely interesting.

To diverge just for an instant from the Irish scene, it is interesting to contrast this long-range Eire viewpoint with the recommendations of our own Carter Commission, whereby Canadian mines and oil producers would find their development and depletion tax advantages stripped from them, with what I consider disastrous effects on our whole economy. I would like at a later date to explore this subject more thoroughly in these columns but, for the moment, will have to be satisfied with the threat of one quick wave of my shillelagh.

The government of Eire is realistic. There are ample evidences of ore potentials, and have been for years. But, due partly to their composition, exploitation has had to await modern technology.

Extraction and treatment may in some cases cost somewhat more than elsewhere, and the tax legislation cited above is a compensatory move to encourage development, so that the end product will be competitive in European markets, and the creation of big Eire payrolls will result.

RECENT INTEREST REALLY BEGAN TO BOIL IN 1961, when Pat Hughes went back to Ireland and started serious exploration with Canadian capital.

The first successful producer to follow his steps was Northgate Explorations, with a lead, zinc and silver property, and a 2000-ton concentrator, in 1965. Ore reserves at this Tynagle mine are estimated at over 7½ million tons, and the production is sold under contract to European smelters with payment in U.S. Funds.

The Port of Galway, just 35 miles west of the property, now has storage, handling and dock facilities to handle bulk ship carriers, and the set-up is complete and economical. Consolidated profit for 1966 was $3,783,013, or 76 cents a share. Yet the shares sell at about $5.20.

Gortdrum Mines Ltd. $2.45, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Northgate, will start 1500-ton-daily production in Tipperary this year.

The Anglo-United Development Company — 83 cents — owns both 218,000 shares of Northgate, and 85,000 shares of Gortdrum, and should be watched.

In Nenagh, Consolidated Mogul's 3000-ton mill will be in production in 1968, and shares in this Company offer an interesting speculation, inasmuch as Denison Mines has a big stake in the project, and there are four Denison directors on the Mogul's board.

The harbour at Foynes has been modernized in the same way as the Galway port to ensure economical handling of concentrates. Proven ore reserves will keep the present mill running at least 12 years.

I THINK IT PARTICULARLY SIGNIFICANT IN THIS connection that at least three of Canada's giant exploration and mining companies have field staffs in Eire — Cominco, Noranda and Denison — and interpret this to mean that more news will shortly be coming from the area about further exploitation.

A rather unique factor in the whole picture which makes the shares of both Northgate and Consolidated Mogul attractive at current levels is the unusually solid foundation upon which the success of both rests — extraordinary tax concessions given by a patently anxious government, low-cost and well-designed production and transportation facilities and, finally, a diversity of national markets in Europe for all the production that can be summoned.

I recommend both as an important buy for moderate-term appreciation.

OTTAWA DIARY

by JACK DAVIS, MP

Coast - Capilano

If there is anything the Official Opposition would like to do more than stop the government's Armed Forces Unification Bill, it is to destroy Defence Minister Paul Hellyer himself. For over a year, a determined group of Conservative M.P.'s have been hounding Mr. Hellyer at every turn. They have called him everything from a republican to a modern day Hitler, and from a liar to a man who can never change his mind on anything.

These repeated attacks have had at least one predictable result. They have hurt Mr. Hellyer's chances as a leader of the Liberal Party. His earlier image as a trouble-free, economically-conscious Minister has been tarnished. Now he is supposed to be accident prone. And, by pressing on with Unification he has caused a drop in morale which can never be measured in dollars and cents.

Paul Hellyer is all for streamlining. He wants to save Canadian taxpayers dollars by unifying our Armed Forces. This would help to keep our Defence budget down to around 41.6 billion a year. He would keep on making economies even though we now only spend about 3 per cent of our national income on defence, as compared to 7 per cent in the United Kingdom and 9 per cent in the United States.

Unification, even without the passage of the Armed Forces Unification Bill, is well on its way. Defence Minister Hellyer has cut eleven service commands to six. He has consolidated dozens of bases. He has coordinated the supply functions of the Army, Navy and RCMP. And he has dropped 2,000 employees from our Defence Headquarters staff in Ottawa.

But, before Unification is complete, the law itself will have to be changed. Wherever the phrase "army, navy and air force" appears, it will have to be replaced by the words "Canadian Armed Forces". This, in the main, is what Bill C-243 is all about.

The emotional issue has to do with uniformity. But uniformity, under modern conditions, is clearly impossible. Technology is making for more skills and more ways of doing things. Take the matter of dress for example. Obviously a Canadian astronaut will have to be dressed quite differently from a naval rating in an atomic submarine. Clerks will dress differently from men on the battlefield. By all odds standardization is less likely now than it ever was in the nation's history.

And take the matter of rank. After talking to Mr. Hellyer I am prepared to gamble that an Admiral will be called an Admiral ten years from now. I also know that the Crown will continue to appear on the caps and badges of our Armed Forces. True, changes may occur from time to time. But these changes will be proposed by military men. Also they will have to be authorized by the full Cabinet — not merely by the Minister of National Defence himself.

Paul Hellyer, in my opinion, has collected most of his grey hairs because he has been brutally frank. He has pointed out, again and again, the immense powers which the government will have under the new Unification Bill. These powers, in my opinion, are necessary if our Armed Forces are to be as mobile and as tightly knit as they can possibly be.

But anyone who challenges tradition is in for a fight. This fight will be all the rougher if it involves fighting men. Mr. Hellyer has been finding this out. But win he will — especially in the long run.

Howe Soundings

Ravens are such interesting birds. Each week as I drive to Vancouver on Monday mornings I see several of them, glossy and black, perched on the curbing along the highway in the vicinity of the garbage or litter cans. They seem to be foraging in the cans and certainly get there long before the trucks which empty them.

As you drive by they look at you with such a supercilious air, as much as to say, "Well, what are you going to do about me?" and completely ignore you.

I tried to get a picture of them and while they did not fly away, they simply refused to perch on the rim of the container which was the picture I was looking for.

As soon as I got in the car, to drive away, back they were, just as cocky as you please.

Have you noticed the number of lovely spring gardens in the valley lately? There are a great many attractive ones with beautiful shrubs and bulbs. Daffodils have created splashes of color in many gardens and will soon be followed by the Darwin tulips now that the Red Emperors are almost finished.

Along the main street the trees in the boulevard are beginning to show green and soon the hawthorns between Winnipeg and Pemberton Road will be in full bloom.

Even the swamps around town are brilliant with the golden spathes of the skunk cabbage thrusting up through the muck and water.

Our local birdwatchers are busy reporting the return of various birds to the valley. Last week Bruce at the B.A. station in Garibaldi Estates reported that he had heard a large flock of over one hundred geese winging their way north honking loudly as they passed over the town.

Bob Owen came in the next day to state that he had also seen a large flock flying north.

Reminds me of the time I was visiting at Alta Lake, and we heard an odd noise. Not knowing what was causing it, I mentioned it to my companion and her husband looked at us loftily and said "Geese, you geese!"

I've heard of the mink which used to be living in the Squamish Mills dump on Pemberton Road and have seen them playing on the brow log and the logs in the water several times. That was a number of years ago.

But last week Mr. Hankey reported that he was on his way down town when he saw one running up the middle of the blacktopped road leading to the hospital.

He couldn't understand what it was doing there at high noon, but couldn't doubt his eyes. It was a mink.

Wonder if it was travelling from one stream to another or heading for Valleycliffe after getting tired of the activity down by the old channel or just going to the hospital for a check-up!

At any rate I wouldn't expect to see a mink there.

An early morning drive along the Sound is a delight at this time of year. The warm sun hits several spots while the rest are still in shadow. Leaves are starting to come out on the red alders and the birch trees are showing their first pale green tinges.

Maple leaves are unfolding, fat and firm, each cluster of leaves hiding the flowers which soon will hang like tassels from the branches. If you watch closely you will see the young dogwood blossoms, palely green, expanding with their promise of crystal purity to come.

Willows and wild cherry are pale against the conifers while the shiny green leaves of the arbutus glisten in the sun. The water, deep blue with tiny curling waves of white, glistens as if you are early enough the ferry from the island is just rounding the curve of Bowen Island and heading in towards Horseshoe Bay. Flocks of gulls weave through the sky, a motorboat scoots along the water leaving a foaming curve behind him and further out a stout little tug waddles along with a tow of logs behind her.

Buildings nestle in the evergreens on the islands in the Sound, soon to be hidden as the other trees fully leaf out and over it all the mountains on the west side of Howe Sound and those on Vancouver Island lift their snowy crests. Who wants to live anywhere else?

CERAMICS display at the library open house drew the interest of many visitors. Mrs. R. Lasser and Mrs. R. Bryant with Jan take a close look at some of the items on display.

Rummage increases at annual sale

The ladies of the Alpha Unit of the UCWO held their Spring Rummage Sale on Saturday April 22nd and the event met with its customary success. As the ladies sorted out the boxes and boxes of goods on the previous day they kept wondering "where it all came from?" There must be a lot of very tidy basements and closets in Squamish.

Business was brisk on the Saturday. One of the very first customers was a young lady who came to buy the runners which her mother had donated to the sale. One little miss wanted a pair of high heels to go with the handbag her grandmother had bought her. One little girl confided that she had a dollar and a half to spend; she turned out to be the day's most cautious shopper. A nickel or a dime at a time she made each purchase with deep thought and many misgivings.

All left over goods were packed and sent to the Welfare Industries in Vancouver so donors may rest assured that nothing usable is wasted.

The ladies will now begin to think about the fall sale which will be held sometime in October. Now is the time to begin putting aside articles for this event.

$50,000 for improvements

The Garibaldi Hospital District last week presented the Squamish General Hospital with a cheque for $50,775 to pay for improvements and equipment for the hospital.

The district held meetings in both Pemberton and Squamish at which the turnover of monies was approved.

A. B. Mackenzie, chairman of the Hospital Improvement District, and R. Farquharson, secretary, were re-elected for three year terms.

Florence Nightingale tea

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Squamish General Hospital will hold its annual Florence Nightingale tea in the Parish Hall on Friday, May 12th, from 2 to 4 p.m.

Convenors for the tea are Mrs. Maurice Scott and Mrs. Ted Stoltz. In addition to the tea there will be a bake sale and novelty table.

Last year's Florence Nightingale tea was one of the nicest events of the spring season with the ladies all dressed in their spring frocks and wearing their smartest hats.

Guides mark Cookie Week

Girl Guides and Brownies in the Squamish Valley will be knocking on your door this week to mark Girl Guide Cookie Week.

During the week of April 28th to May 6th, members of the Girl Guide movement will be selling cookies throughout the valley.

A portion of the proceeds from this campaign are used to finance the girl's activities with each group getting a share of the proceeds.

Regional Hospital District

Two school districts, that of Lillooet, No. 29 and Howe Sound, No. 48, have been combined to form one regional hospital district.

The area is served by hospitals in Squamish and Lillooet. At present details concerning the creation of the regional hospital district and what its structure and powers will be, have not been clearly defined.

Judy Began Wed at Squamish United

Squamish United Church was the scene of a pretty spring wedding on Saturday, April 15th at 7:30 p.m. when Judith Mary Began, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Began of Ashcroft became the bride of Douglas L. Horth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Horth of Squamish.

Spring flowers, tulips, iris and daffodils, with chrysanthemums decorated the church for the service, read by Rev. H. M. Wingfield.

Nylon tulle over white taffeta with lace accents fashioned the bride's long slim gown. The overbodice of lace was embroidered with pearls and featured long sleeves, tightly buttoned at the wrist. A lace insert centred the front of the long slim skirt. A tiered train, edged with lace, fell from a bow at the back of the bodice to spread out behind her. Her chapel veil was held in place by a single white rose trimmed with pearls. She wore pearl stud earrings, the gift of the groom, and carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

Mrs. D. Brock, as her sister's matron-of-honor, and Miss Joy McLeod as bridesmaid, wore identical floor length gowns of pink crepe over taffeta, with draped skirts and pearl embroidery on the round yoke and high empire waist. Short circular veils fell from pink crown shaped headpieces and they carried bouquets of assorted pink carnations with fern and white ribbons.

Mr. Bruce Erickson was best man while Allan Horth, brother of the groom, ushered. A reception at Melody Hall in Paradise Valley followed the ceremony. Mr. R. Remie acted as master of ceremonies while Mr. Les Archibald of Ashcroft proposed the toast to the bride.

Before leaving for their honeymoon in Victoria the bride donned a navy-blue coat dress with a white collar and white accessories, accented by a corsage of red roses.

The young couple will make their home in Squamish. Out of town guests included the groom's brother and sister Leonard and Darlene Horth, and his grandmother Mrs. Gullford of Victoria, Jim Peeler and Brian Dempsey of Victoria, Mr. and Mrs. H. McLean, Bruce Whitfield, Miss Ruby McCartney and Dan Logan of North Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. A.

Insufficient interest in rural mail routes

There is not sufficient popular demand in the Squamish Valley to institute a rural mail delivery route at this time. This was the conclusion reached by the committee of the Chamber of Commerce, headed by Fred Bennett, which looked into the possibility of securing a rural mail delivery for the valley.

A public meeting, called for Wednesday of last week, was poorly attended and the consensus of opinion expressed at the meeting was that people would prefer the present method of a number of post offices. W. N. Stanley, supervisor, Postal Service, Requirements, Vancouver District Office, attended the meeting and answered questions from the audience. Chamber president, J. Phillips, who chaired the meeting, said he felt the present system of a number of post offices is not good and should be changed. He stressed the fact that this was his personal opinion.

Fred Bennett said his committee was prepared to survey a proposed route and have individual householders sign, but that this was going to be a big job and they wished to be sure there was a desire for the change.

Requirements were the name of the person, a sketch of the proposed route and the numbering of the homes.

Bill Lewis, speaking on behalf of the Valleycliffe area, said he would be interested in canvassing it for the chamber, and said he was quite sure residents would be interested in some form of rural mail delivery.

In answer to a question Mr. Stanley said it would be the department's policy to close any post office in an area which is serviced by a rural mail route. This would apply to both Brackendale and Garibaldi Highlands.

A. R. Lasser said he was familiar with the set up as it had been in operation in Gibson's where he had lived for a while. He found the service excellent and the delivery regular.

One of the cluster boxes, out of every group of ten, is a mailing or despatch box, and stamps, money orders, or registrations can be obtained from the postal deliveryman. Group boxes are used in built up areas while the rural boxes are most commonly used in areas which are wider apart.

Mr. Stanley was asked if there was a possibility of obtaining letter carrier service and this is not likely for a number of years as the population is not dense enough.

Population density for a letter carrier system is a minimum of 2000 points of call within an area, with an average of 40 yards per call. There is too much vacant land in the Squamish area to make this possible for a number of years.

Mr. Lewis asked if a cluster box system could be used in one area and not another and Mr. Stanley said it could be done if there were enough people but if the reference was to the Valleycliffe area alone, no. Not at the rate which the post office would be willing to pay for delivery.

Mr. Stanley said that as there were established post offices in the area they would not step in and say the district had to have cluster boxes. But the department would like a petition to see if people are interested.

A.V.L.A. resident said he was personally in favor of the post office as it existed, that his wife liked to walk for the mail and it offered a convenience to people who did not have a car available to be able to go to the post office in Squamish.

The four cent rate throughout the area for local letters now only pertaining to each of the three post offices, and not in the entire valley was discussed. Mr. Phillips said this had caused a great deal of difficulty as many people received their mail in Squamish but lived in one of the other areas, and often you didn't know the correct postal address.

Businessman also felt it unfair to have to pay the five cent rate for letters going only three miles when the same letter could travel from Horseshoe Bay to Surrey for the four cent rate.

Mr. Stanley explained that this was because the Vancouver areas are within a letter carrier area. The only way we would be able to have the same privileges in the Squamish Valley would be for it to become one area under the rural delivery system.

Mr. Bennett said he felt from the turnout and the response to the meeting there is not enough interest in forming a rural delivery route. "Taking of a survey was not justified until we hear from the people," he said.

Sunday school sponsors films

The St. John's Anglican Sunday School is presenting an evening of films and cartoons on Friday, May 5th at the Anglican Parish Hall.

All proceeds will be used to help Esther Arji attend school in Nigeria. Esther is the Nigerian student, who will soon be 15 years of age, who has been attending school for the past three years with the assistance of the Sunday School of St. John's Anglican Church and members of the congregation.

The Sunday School raises $150 per year to send Esther to school as without this money she would be unable to attend or to complete her education.
