New plans proposed for mobile home area

Council was concerned about the relatively small number of areas to be set aside for transients in the mobile home area planned by Dunhill Developments for Bracken Heights.

The original plan called for 100 pads for transients and 140 for permanent ones but the latest request from the company has been for a strata corporation under the Strata Titles

The Planning and Design Committee had no objection to the conversion but was concerned about the fact that all the transient areas provided would be ten percent.

Mayor D. D. Stewart said he would like to see a higher number, but Alderman Bryant said he was certain that this was all the company would go for.

Stewart said he was getting rather tired of being concerned about Dunhill and wondered why council should continue to keep on bailing out its projects.

New fire prevention bylaw

The District of Squamish last week adopted a new fire protection bylaw based on the National Fire Code, but including some special conditions. The regulations state that fire season is the period so declared under the Forest Act and that off-season is any time not covered by a fire season. Burning is any which takes place in anything but a regular heating or cooking appliance. Permits are required for any burning during fire season but in the off-season a permit shall at only be required if the material to be burned exceeds 14 cubic

> The water came over the banks in the low area on the northeast bank of the river east of the Mamquam Bridge where the OFY program built campsites several years ago, and the water rushed down the ditches to the mobile home park where it spread over the ground. Mayor Dave Stewart said the construction of groynes in the for the new bridge was inriver and he felt this caused a helped it to overflow.

"If the river had a clear shot it would have scoured out a the construction caused the water to pile up."

Stewart also said council has asked permission to remove the log jam east of the bridge and the sand bar in that area in an effort to straighten out the river. "This would give it a straight shot," he said, "and keep it away from the north bank where it is seeking a place to break

He concurred with works superintendent Wilson that if something is not done about the north bank of the Mamquam River the stream will cut a new channel and leave the present bridge high and dry.

'We have been unable to get any satisfaction from Fisheries," Stewart said, "because there might be some fish eggs in that grayel. But if there were they have all been washed 40 miles out to sea by now!"

Wilson also said a closely watched spot was the trestle which carries the high water line across the Mamquam River some distance east of the bridge. At high water the river was just inches below the trestle and he was afraid if the trestle went out half the water supply to the Highlands and Brackendale would be gone. The other portion of the water line is carried by the Mamquam bridge so if both went the upper communities would have been without water.

There were a number of other trouble spots in the district Some of the roads and driveways in the highlands were flooded and silt was washed into driveways and some basements.

Using arguments that the Lillooet and federal government and to hear them told Nechako boards have settled at wage increases of about 17 percent or more is also a fallacy. These are two small boards and in no way should their settlement be considered a precedent to make it unfair for the rest of the teachers in the province. It's a case of the tail wagging the dog.

> But most appalling was to hear an educated man, one who is supposed to be teaching our young people to become good citizens of our country, advocating the defiance of a law. How can we expect our children to grow up with respect for the law when teachers, who have so much to do in shaping their lives, advocate its defiance?

Perhaps we're idealistic but we grew up in an age when a teacher was respected and admired and it seems to be such a waste of talent; intelligence and energy for one so high in the federation to advocate such actions. Last week's scare when the Mamquam the Hog Ranch Creek south to the Mamquam River went over a low spot on the north bank of the river, flooding through the campsites built by an OFY group several years ago and along the ditches to the trailer court. At one point during the morning it was running across the road.

The municipal works superintendent felt part of the problem was caused by the groynes put in the river by the highways department as part of the plans for the new Mamquam bridge which channelled the river into a narrow stricture and caused a build up behind it.

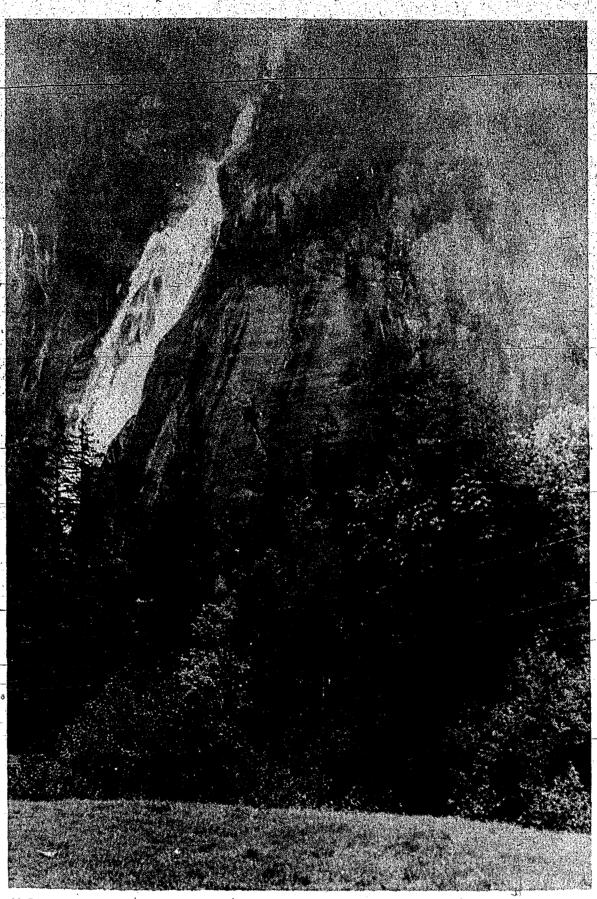

The river should not be constricted, it should be allowed to flow freely without any impediment and the north bank of the river requires raising and riprap. Donna finds the change from nursing to ambulance driving very refreshing. For her, the latter involves very little routine work plus it demands decisions, followed by immediate action to be made right on the spot. It also involves a fair amount of travelling as trips are often made to Vancouver, transfering patients.

inches of rain last week wasn't an all time record but it sure felt like one! At any rate, anytime it rains more than three inches in one day it's gotta be too much and we're convinced that last Thursday's rain is one we don't want to see repeated. For funately it stopped before any serious damage was done to the built up areas of town but it was enough to make people wonder what might have happened if it had continued for another day:

It's rather hard to realize that we've had one fifth of the rain this year in just one week but that's just about what it amounted to. From January to September there were just over 27 inches with 7.55 inches falling last week. It does emphasize how dry the year has been.

It's also almost unbelievable to realize that we haven't had a hard frost yet this year. Geraniums, marigolds and dahlias are still gaily blooming; the tomatoes are still on the vines although they probably won't amount to anything and even the fall colors, pretty as they are, are not as bright as usual because there hasn't been that killing frost.

On Monday I picked a beautiful bouquet of sweet peas, and while they are not as fast to bloom as they were earlier, they are still lovely. But since when did we have sweetpeas in October? And on October 20th at

However, the rain has been hard on the roses. They have been full of blossoms but all that happens is the buds get so far and then become waterlogged and rot. If only the sun was shining they would be beautiful. But there are still dozens of buds on the plants so if they continue to grow and we do get some Indian summer (it is supposed to follow the first frosts) we should still have some lovely

Something I do intend to grow next year, though, is marguerites. I only had six plants this year and you would swear there were a dozen or two. They literally took over part of the border and wentwild. But they are lovely and the three colors, white, pink and vellow, intermingled to create a huge bouquet.

Dad planted a package of pansies and I don't know what happened but there is one pansy there, but it seems to have all the strength of every seed there must have been in the package. It is simply huge! It hasn't bloomed yet but if the blossoms live up to the size of the leaves they should be giants indeed.

Next year, God willing, I'd like to plant a few more perennial; maybe start some delphiniums and painted daisies from seed, more pansies and some everlastings. With a little more time to devote to gar-

It would be nice to pick one's own garden stuff again and while I'd never want to grow beans: they take over the place. and what do you do with all those beans, I'd like a small supply of garden stuff for salads.

"Noticed that the fall colors, while attractive, are not as beautiful as usual; possibly because there has not yet been a frost but maybe because of the rain this month. Some of the big maples are glowing golden tor?" ches but the vine maples. usually a crimson accent to the conifers, are a pallid replica of their usual beauty. Maybe there is still time enough.

Down near Britannia there are some wild cherries with bronzy and magenta shades to their leaves, bright and different; and the dogwoods are coming alive in their vibrant shades of pink, crimson and magenta. My favorites are the osier bush or western dogwoods which turn such a magnificent plum purple in the fall.

The wild crabapples also add a brilliant tone to the woods with their bright red colors and the weird one we have growing on the river bank with its fruit half as large as tame crabapples is turning color as well as the wild ones. The small 'apples' are a brilliant red and they look good but my daughter bit into one you should have seen her face pucker up!

Maybe there will be a display of real fall color before the leaves fall but it is almost getting too late. However, one can hope, but the rain of the past few weeks has not helped, just turned some of the leaves a dank, soggy brown.

Anyone who likes waterfalls would have been impressed with the display put on by Shannon Falls and the other falls in the valley last week when the rivers were high and water was pouring down the hillsides.

Drivers coming up from Vancouver said there were places where the rocks along the Sound resembled a weeping wall with water cascading down it from the slopes above. There were dozens of places where water had never been seen before and the regular water courses were booming.

Of course people reported wet basements, some homes in the highlands had their driveways flooded or silted up and it was a mess in many places. But with nicer weather at the beginning of this week, maybe it's a thing of the past. But old time residents won't breathe easier till this month is over and there has been no flood. If we get past October we should be home free as it turns colder then and the weather tightens up.

There are more than 1,500 cattle growers in B.C. raising over 200,000 head of cattle. The majority of these ranches belong to local cattle or purebred associations and these in turn are banded together in the B.C. Cattle Growers' Association. Beef cattle raising is over 100 years old in this province. The first men to arrive for the 1858 gold rush were followed within two_months by the first head of cattle. The industry has continued to expand ever since.

tending Howe Sound secondary school and two who had just left the school, spoke to the Squamish Rotary Club at noon last week on "Youth in the Community" under the chairmanship of Don Hobbs.

Selected to appear on the panel were graduates Gary Lapointe and Kirsty Palmer and students Donna Lapointe, April Hobbs and Laura Nichols.

Gary acted as the main speaker, touched on the subject while the girls each dealt with some facet of it and then there was a question period. The young people brought a number of ideas to the fore and were warmly received by the club members who responded to their ideas.

Gary said he felt young people were discriminated against; there was no outdoor dance at the Squamish Day celebrations and he heard it was because of the problems created 🗽 the kids, or maybe because Ey wanted more harness proposed. Only two students racing; at the curling club the from high school offered to kids are not permitted to go upstairs to pick up their prizes; there is no place to take a visiting student who is billetted with you so you end up at the local pizza parlor and are accused of hanging around. He also said a community centre with a place to dance and a gym type floor would be the ideal solution. He touched on alcohol, drugs and vandalism, saying they are not only youth problems but citing the easy access to alcohol, the fact that drugs are a more serious problem among adults as well as young people and that vandalism is probably confined to a few but not just to juveniles. He also said unemployment is a serious problem among young people and said there is a need tor counselling in schools. Students need to know what an employer wants and where a student can get the necessary

Laura Nichols raised the uestion of where to go. "We've at around cafes because there was no place to go yet at Britannia the company provided a club where there was a snack bar, television, a stereo, and a pool table. Kids were under adult supervision at all times."

She said if such a program was started in Squamish perhaps the young people could help with it. Kirsty Palmer, the Rotary exchange student from New Zealand, said students know little about the opportunities available to them. She suggested aid in establishing counsellors with a list of jobs available, mock interviews and instruction on how to act at an interview would be helpful. She suggested

Would you like to talk Spanish? Not learn grammar or study the language but just listen to people talk it and try to do it yourself?

If so, Capilano College offices on Sunday nights are the place to go. There you will find people who speak the language willing to talk to you, to help you learn the words and what you want to say, and to make if a fun thing.

They haven't any grand ideas of teaching verbs and tenses, grammar and syntax but just to immerse you in the language for two hours per evening so you get the idea and start to think in Spanish.

There's no charge, just come out and enjoy meeting others who want to know something about another language. And if you're planning a trip to Mexico or Central or South America it would be a help.

Bring your dictionary and don't be afraid of making mistakes. P.S. If you haven't a dictionary someone will loan you one!

development which opened up the world of knowledge to blind persons. It does not require a specific skill, as does braille, either to record tape or listen to a book.

Any book a blind person may want to read can be easily taped. At CNIB hundreds of text books, novels and periodicals are produced annually.

In the past five years two more electronic devices have brought print to blind and partially sighted persons.

T.V. READER

The closed circuit TV Reader enlarges a print page so that a partially sighted person can read it on a TV screen.

OPTACON

When the optacon camera is passed over a printed line it produces a raised replica of the print under the index finger. The CNIB has a two-week training program to teach the use of the optacon.

Training and encouragement to read braille or to use the optacon can mean independence for blind persons in our community.

Pat Sweeney aids OES cancer funds

Mamquam elementary school has been doing a tremendous job collecting stamps for the O.E.S. who use them for their cancer fund. And one of the key people behind the school's success in collecting stamps is Pat Sweeney who has helped to organize the collection and the program.

Pat visited the Times last week with two envelopes of stamps he had collected at the school. The collection program started with organizing the school into 15 divisions and having collection boxes made. A contest was held to see who could make the best box and this was won by Donnie Boyd. The boxes are collected from the classes every second week.

Pat said that Grade 2 brings the best stamps "because they don't collect them yet." Apparently in the higher grades there are collectors and they make sure they get the best stamps before they reach the collection boxes. Or perhaps one should say they are picked over better before they are brought to school.

Pat said he had several helpers and Simon Dawe assisted him in preparing the program.

He is asking all the kids to save stamps at Christmas time, particularly any foreign ones which can be collected and turned over to the O.E.S. for their cancer program. Teacher Ruth Smith, who instituted the stamp collecting program in the school, is delighted with the work done by Pat and his assistants and the local ladies of the O.E.S. are even more delighted.

Pat reminds everyone to make sure that when they take the stamps from the envelopes they leave a small margin of paper around them. It makes the work of the ladies so much easier.

The Alta Lake situation went out of control, mainly due to a huge log jam which has assembled over the years and a number of beaver dams situated at the point where the River of Golden Dreams meets with water flowing from 21 Mile Creek. Consequently, the lake level was extremely high.

Rainbow Lodge presently has a foot of water in the main buildings and it is certainly hoped that something can be done to alleviate the situation. The Chamber of Commerce for a long time tossed about a possible solution to remove the log jam, but have always come up against a brick wall on this problem. Everyone at Pemberton Secondary is anxiously awaiting the completion of the new science lab, automotive shop, commerce room and home economics room. The buildings are progressing well and it is hoped snow will not come too early this winter.

The students' Council bought one hundred Royal Canadian Legion "Golden Anniversary" tulips and planted them outside the school.

This week has been full of field trips for the students of Pemberton secondary. The grade eights spent a day studying the Lillooet River, and the Geography 12 class observed some creeks and rivers also. On Wednesday the Grade 11 and Grade 9 Industrial Power classes went to Shalalth to see the hydro generating plant. Friday, the Grades 10, 11 and 12 art classes spent the af-

Students use sanctuary

The good weather during September permitted a great deal of use of the ecological sanctuary by Howe Sound Secondary School students according to the report presented to council by J.T. Croft.

The biology classes studied the flora of the area and thse studies will be continued until December.

In the Environmental Studies class there was considerable work done in soil studies: organic contest, water holding capacity PH, nutrient content as well as soil ecology emphasizing the interrelationship of soil and micro organisa. This work will be continued.

In addition the area was used for jogging and orientation exercises by the physical education department.

Canoeing on the Crooked River

By JOHN WALTER bark canoes of fur traders and explorers cleaved the waters of the Crooked River, north of Prince George. But times have changed, and now it is the aluminum or fibreglass canoes of latter-day Alexander Mackenzies and Simon Frasers that run the 70 miles (110 kilometres) of this historic river.

The source of the Crooked River is Summit Lake, 30 miles (50 kilometres) north of Prince George on the Hart Highway 97. Just south of Summit Lake is the height of land that stretches east and west across North America to form the north-south continental divide. Waters to the south of the divide flow south to the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans; waters to the north, including Summit Lake and the Crooked River, flow north to the Arctic Ocean.

.The Crooked River, living up to its name, meanders crookedly northward from Summit Lake past farmland and forest and through marsh and meadow to McLeod Lake. In its journey from lake to lake, the Crooked River is never far from the Hart Highway and the British Columbia Railway, the modern-day arteries of commerce that carry the traffic that at one time was the almost exclusive prerogative of the river.

July 22, 1793. Mackenzie was In days gone by, the birch the first white man to see the Pacific Ocean from the coast of Northwest America, predating the more widely known Lewis and Clark expedition by more than twelve years.

The Crooked River today remains a pleasant waterway for canoeists. Rated Grade 1+ over its full length, it has one rated rapids six miles (10 kilometres) upstream from McLeod Lake and there are sweepers and some beaver dams in its first few miles. In most places the river is 40 to 50 feet (12 to 15 metres) wide and three feet (a metre) deep, making paddling a not too strenuous chore.

About 20 miles (30 kilometres) from Summit Lake the twists and turns of the Crooked River straighten to form Davie Lake and a short distance further, Kerry Lake. The placid waters of the lakes contrast sharply with the more turbulent river.

Fifteen miles (25 kilometres) from its source, the river passes through a corner of its namesake provincial park, a popular camping and picnicking area that includes within its 2,500 acres (1,000 hectares) Bear Lake and Hart Lake whose waters, clear and relatively warm, beckon swimmers and water-oriented recreationists from far and near.

you wanted to know about sports but . . . By RICK RAYNOR

I am glad to see that there is finally someone in this community who is more interested in helping the kids than he is in himself. There are numerous men and women in this town that fall into this category, coaching and managing soccer teams, etc., and for this they should be given credit, but this man has gone one step further.

He is trying to organize a full league of street hockey, single-handed! That's right, he figures that since the kids can't have an ice arena, they shouldn't be punished for their parents' decision. Right now he wants to see who else is interested, so he is inviting ANYBODY that wants to play or coach street hockey to

Your are probably asking who this person could possibly be. Well he is not actually directly involved in sports and you probably never heard of him unless you were interested in baseball. His name is Lyle Rhodes and he wants you to phone him right now at 898-He is hoping that street hockey will be as successful this winter as baseball was last summer. Let's see his hope come true and keep. the kids happy this winter. A certain member of the football coaching staff has been needling me to write a column on football ever since the beginning of the season. So, I went down to the field at the high school on Sunday afternoon and Lo and Behold!, the rain on Saturday had washed away all of the players and spectators. Better luck next time, Brian, I'll try again in two weeks. That should be Nov. 2 at 12:00 for the Titans (leedle fellers) and 1:30 for the Chiefs (beeger fellers). They are both very good clubs and the play is even better. so don't miss next Sunday afternoon at the high school.

Rotary seeks names of local sportsmen

The Squamish Rotary Club is seeking to find an athlete and three builders of sport in the area to be honored at this year's annual Rotary Sportsman's Dinner.

Local sports organizations have been contacted but just in case your group has been overlooked the club would like you to forward the name of one athlete who best combines skill, determination and sportsmanship to the benefit of his team and one or two builders who have unselfishly devoted time and effort in promoting or servicing sport; referees, coaches, backers, etc.

If you could submit your suggestions with brief resumes to the Squamish Rotary Club, Box 317, Squamish, V0N 3G0, before Nov. 10, it would be very much appreciated.

Distinguished speakers for Sportsman's Dinner

There will be two distinguished speakers at the annual Sportsman's Dinner, sponsored by the Squamish Rotary Club on Nov. 22.

Dr. Reginald E. Raber of Manchester, England, will' speak on the Rolls Royce and competitive car racing and Jim Willoughby will speak on souba diving around the world.

Other guests will include a member of the Whitecaps soccer team representatives of the Burrards, the lacrosse Mann Cup winners, someone from the B.C. Lions, possibly a Davis Cup tennis player, and maybe a hockey player, but the latter is doubtful as the Canucks play in Chicago that night.

Class A park at Cypress Bowl

Cypress Bowl Provincial Park tows are located on the beginprovincial park and work on developing it has gone on for the past four years.

The park is being developed as an all year round recreational area with emphasis on winter activities complementing the very popular Mount Seymour provincial park in North Vancouver. Cypress Park was opened on a limited basis last winter for cross-country skiing snow oriented sports. It proved to be an almost overnight success and a welcome addition to the outdoor winter recreational facilities of the lower mainland area.

Students use sanctuary

The good weather during September permitted a great deal ofuse of the ecological sanctuary by Howe Sound Secondary School students according to the report presented to council by J.T. Croft.

The biology classes studied the flora of the area and thse studies will be continued until December.

In the Environmental Studies class there was considerable work done in soil studies; organic contest, water-holding capacity PH, nutrient content as well as soil ecology emphasizing the interrelationship of soil and micro organisa. This work will be continued.

In addition the area was used for jogging and orientation exercises by the physical education department.

EVERYTHING you wanted to know about sports but.

By RICK RAYNOR

I am glad to see that there is finally someone in this community who is more interested in helping the kids than he is in himself. There are numerous men and women in this town that fall into this category, coaching and managing soccer teams, etc., and for this they should be given credit, but this man has gone one step further.

He is trying to organize a full league of street hockey, singlehanded! That's right, he figures that since the kids can't have an ice arena, they shouldn't be punished for their parents' decision.

Right now he wants to see who else is interested, so he is inviting ANYBODY that wants to play or coach street hockey to

Your are probably asking who this person could possibly be. Well he is not actually directly involved in sports and you probably never heard of him unless you were interested in baseball. His name is Lyle Rhodes and he wants you to phone him right now at 898-

He is hoping that street hockey will be as successful this winter s baseball was last summer. Let's see his hope come true and keep the kids happy this winter. A certain member of the football coaching staff has been needling me to write a column on football ever since the beginning of the season. So, I went down to the field at the high school on Sunday afternoon and Lo and Behold!, the rain on Saturday had washed away all of the players and spectators. Better luck next time, Brian, I'll try again in two weeks. That should be Nov. 2 at 12:00 for the Titans (leedle fellers) and 1:30 for the Chiefs (beeger fellers). They are both very good clubs and the play is even better. so-don't miss next Sunday afternoon at the high school.

Rotary seeks names of local sportsmen

The Squamish Rotary Club is seeking to find an athlete and three builders of sport in the area to be honored at this year's annual Rotary Sportsman's Dinner.

Local sports organizations have been contacted but just in case your group has been overlooked the club would like you to forward the name of one athlete who best combines skill, determination and sportsmanship to the benefit of his team and one or two builders who have unselfishly devoted time and effort in promoting or servicing sport; referees, coaches, backers, etc.

If you could submit your suggestions with brief resumes to the Squamish Rotary Club, Box 317, Squamish, V0N 3G0, before Nov. 10, it would be very much appreciated.

Earlier, Walmsley spoke on the teachers' code of ethics, saying that teachers work to prepare a student to take his place in society and to maintain their professional status.

Complaints have been heard that teachers are not teaching as well as they used to, but it must be remembered that teachers are meeting the challenges of a changing society. Poor spellers and readers are not being filtered out of the school system but are remaining there so the inadequacies of some are more

He also said that children today are mastering basic skills better than they did ten years ago. "Today 90 percent of our 15- to 19-year-olds are staying in the school system while 25 bride.

Baskets of pink and white gladiola decorated the altar at Squamish United Church for the late summer wedding of Carla Marie Ostergard and Ronald Christopher Tinney at 7 p.m. on Saturday, August 23.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Robert Ostergard of Lac La Hache and formerly of Squamish and the groom is the son of Mrs. Peggy Tinney of Squamish. They were united in marriage with Rev. Jack Lindquist officiating. The organist during the ceremony was Mrs. Mary McCulloch.

For her wedding day, Carla chose a polyester crepe gown fashioned with an empire waiste and long skirt with train. The bell sleeves and the dress were trimmed with lace. Her long veil fell from a pearl studded juliet cap headpiece. Carla's jewelry was an heirloom necklace with an amethyst pendant and she carried a bouquet of red rosebuds and white elegance.
