Council declines support to Save Howe Sound group

The last week decided not to support the "Save Howe Sound" group's request to meet with Shaw's staff in order to present their concerns.

The decision was made after a meeting between council and the group. C.C.B. referred to a letter which stated that the group was "dependent on support from the media, businesses, and other concerned parties in order to continue their efforts." Shaw's office was contacted to express their support for the group's efforts.

"We're not sure how much more we can do," said Shaw. "Our staff is very busy with other important matters, and we have limited resources to dedicate to this issue."

The decision was made during a meeting with the mayor. L.N. Bouchard said it was "very important to us that our residents are aware of the dangers of the area, and that we can continue to do what we can to bring awareness to the issue." She added, "We have a lot of work to do, and we need to prioritize our efforts."
Equipment use sparks controversy

A fire at the Olympic Paint shop on Towle Road in North Vancouver has sparked controversy over the use of certain equipment. The fire broke out during what appeared to be a routine maintenance task, raising questions about the safety protocols in place.

The incident, which occurred on the afternoon of May 10, involved the use of a high-pressure water jet, which is commonly used for cleaning large industrial parts. Witnesses reported hearing an unusual noise before the fire broke out, suggesting that the equipment might not have been properly calibrated or maintained.

Local firefighters responded to the scene within minutes, but due to the nature of the equipment, they had to be cautious about the potential for electrical hazards. The fire was eventually brought under control, but not before causing significant damage to the shop and surrounding areas.

Officials from the local fire department are investigating the incident to determine the cause and to identify any safety lapses that may have contributed to the fire. They are also reviewing the maintenance and calibration procedures for the high-pressure jet.

Residents in the area have expressed concern about the safety of using such equipment in such a manner, particularly given the proximity of residential properties. Some are calling for more oversight and regulation of such activities to prevent future incidents.

The local council has announced a public meeting to address these concerns, and members of the public are encouraged to attend to share their thoughts and experiences.

Council Briefs

Manxman River — Ald. N.R. Barr moved to approve the consent between the Manxman River District and the City of North Vancouver, which included the provision of water, sewer, and other services to the River District. This is in accordance with the Manxman River Water and Sewer Service Agreement, which has been in place for several years.

Sporting events — Ald. L.C. Kindree reported on the recent sporting events held in Squamish, including the rugby match and the track and field meet. He noted that the events had been well attended and that the community was looking forward to future sporting events.

Community events — Ald. L.C. Kindree reported on the upcoming community events, including the annual Squamish Festival and the Squamish Christmas parade. He noted that these events were important for the community and that the city was working to ensure their success.
Tobus held information meeting

Over 260 members of the local RCMP, Vets who were attending a reunion conference in Squamish recently, came to Vancouver for the Royal Hudson on Sunday, May 19th.

John Duggan, who had attended the conference, said that many of the Vets who had attended the conference and the executives and twenty delegates spent a lot of time going over the constitution of the group. One decision they made was to still hold a dominion conference and not a national one.

If members wish to join the group they can contact the secretary of the group.

Few accidents in past week

This week was uneventful. It was only last Thursday afternoon that the Clarks started their trip to Burnaby that they will reach their destination on Sunday.

On May 19 at Cleveland Street Station, a !b.400,000 train of the BC Rail was derailed when a fire hose was stretched across the railway line. The firemen managed to put out the fire before any damage occurred.

On the same day on the Trans-Canada Highway near Kamloops there was a collision between a log truck and a car. The driver of the car was taken to hospital, but there were no injuries.

On the last day of the meeting at the Royal Hudson, the Vets were offered a special rate and the chairman of the Vets group said that they were planning to return to the hotel on Sunday afternoon.
