family affair.

The North Vancouver film company, Mother Lode, shot part of the movie at Shannon Falls, Callaghan Lake and Lake Lovely Water in the last few weeks.

Unit publicist Marilyn Heston is married to West Vancouver producer Fraser Heston, who also wrote the screenplay.

Fraser's father, Charlton Heston, is pulling double duty with two key roles in the film and is also directing.

Filming on the $6 million adventure movie started September 28 and is expected to finish November 14. Other locations for the movie are Point Grey and Capilano Canyon.

Mother Lode is Fraser Heston's third screen play. He wrote and produced The Mountain Men, which starred his father and Brian Keith and also wrote Leviathan, a story of international conflict on the high seas.

Nick Mancuso stars as bush pilot, Jean Dupre, who searches for a missing friend and the Mother Lode, in the Cassiar region. The Mother Lode is the fabled hidden source of gold that lured thousands of men north during the great Cassiar gold rush in Travelling with him is his former girlfriend, played by Kim Basinger, who was also Dupre's friend.

They crash in the mountains and follow the faint, eerie strains of bagpines to find Silas McGee, played by Heston. McGee is a rugged old Scot who has spent the last 30 years in the wilderness, working on what he says is a worthless mine.

Heston has starred in over 50 films, including the Ten Commandments, Ben Hur, The Agony and the Ecstasy, Planet of the Apes and the sequel, Beneath the Planet of the Apes and El Cid.

Mancuso has five motion pictures to his credit, Black Christmas, A Sweeter Song, Nightwing, Deathship and Ticket to Heaven. He has also had numerous roles in television productions, such as Scruples on CBS, Dr. Scorpio and The House on Garibaldi Street on ABC and Paradise Lost, Sidestreet, Thousand Moons, Red Emma and Six War Years for CBC.

Basinger has guest starred in a number of TV shows, including McMillan and Wife, The Six Million Dollar Man, Charlie's Angels and the Gemini Man, before landing her own series on ABC, called Dog and Cat, in 1978.

She has also appeared in several films for television, including the Ghost of Flight 401 with Ernest Borgnine. She starred in NBC's Katie: Portrait of a Centerfold and the six-hour TV film From Here to Eternity, as well as the ten episodes of the subsequent series.

If you want to know how the movie ends, you will have to wait until late 1982 to see it, when it is planned to be released.

But, rest assured, it does have a happy ending.

He suggested that at the 1982 conference the aldermen should enlarge their efforts to meet with the various provincial authorities who are available to discuss various concerns they may have.

Postal rate rise too high

The proposal to raise the postal rates from seventeen cents to thirty cents for a first class letter and from thirty-five cents to sixty cents for an air mail letter, with corresponding raises in the parcel post rate as well have come as rather a shock.

Most people would not argue with the need to raise the costs of mailing letters in Canada, but they feel that almost doubling the rate, with no guarantees for better performance, is a little bit much.

And the fact that the raise in the cost of socalled "junk mail" is about half that of the first class rate is making it even more unpalatable.

We don't think there is any Canadian who would object to paying a higher rate for first class mail if he could be sure that it would be delivered at least within two days. But when it takes up to two weeks to get a first class letter or brown large envelope delivered from Victoria to Squamish there has to be something wrong.

If you object to the proposed raise, planned for the first of the year, write to the new Crown corporation and tell it that you dislike it. Better yet, also let your MP know that you are not in favour of the increase unless it is accompanied by a corresponding improvement in the service.

We feel that Canadians have been given shoddy treatment by the postal system withthird-rate service for high prices but we can remember mailing letters in Europe and having them arrive in Canada five days later, back in 1973. It could not happen today. Last week I got one from Switzerland which took almost four weeks to arrive. And I'll wager most of that time it was sitting in Toronto waiting to be cleared for western Canada.

If you are content with the proposed hike in postage rates, sit on your hands. But if you object, like we do, write to the Crown corporation and to your MP and tell them you think service should come before postal increases, or at least with them.

Taxes shouldn't fund hobbies

"When a local athletic club asks you for $500, tell them to go sell candy bars."

Those were the tough words uttered by an Ontario mayor recently when he spoke to the Association of Municipalities in Ontario.

He and other municipal officers were pointing out that property taxes cannot continue to rise to meet inflation. Cutbacks and reduction of municipal services are the route to take, the fiscal restraint advocates said.

There is no doubt that municipal councils have become a soft touch over the years for groups seeking grants.

Sports and recreation groups in particular have found the municipal till readily accessible in many communities. Each year in many municipalities in the province, dozens of groups arrive, palms upturned, to obtain taxpayer funds for their own particular interests. The issue is not whether or not these groups carry on worthwhile activities. The issue is, should they be obtaining funds from the property tax?

Property taxes should be used to service property - not to fund private clubs, regardless of how noble their goals may be.

Some groups are very powerful in a community and can pull out hundreds of votes at election time. In a small community the alderman who exercises the fiscal restraint suggested is apt to find his political life severely curtailed by the collective outrage of special groups.

Nevertheless on a point of principle we must agree with the mayor. If a group of individuals wish to form a private club whether it be minor sports, a riding school or a chess club - it should not be up to the taxpayers at large to support those private clubs.

Since it is the membership of those clubs who derive the benefits, they should also pay

Often we hear sob stories about how expensive a given activity has become. Equipment prices have risen, the club members exclaim. They note rental fees for facilities have

One can make a case for municipal funding for certain capital expenditures relating to recreation. Where a facility is totally accessible to the public, multi-purpose and therefore likely to be used by the vast majority of residents, then public expenditure can be justified. Where the facility would only be used primarily by one or two interest groups, however, municipal funding should be viewed as inappropriate.

Likewise there is little moral reasoning 'behind doling out grants for capital or operating expenses for the same clubs, year after year, as a matter of routine.

People shoul pay for their own hobbies. Local government has its hands busy providing essential hard services. It should not be responsible for showing us a good time as well.

Either you are a cat lover or you aren't but if you are, like I am, you are in good company. Cats have long been famous in literature from the time when they were the subject of a poem by a young Arab called Abu Shamaqmaq, back in the eighth century. He lived in such poverty that his home didn't have any mice for his cat to eat and he encouraged the cat to leave him for life in a nearby hotel where there was lots of food and lots of mice.

A hundred years later another poem by an Arab lamented the death of a favourite cat which climbed a tree following an irresistable urge to catch doves. The poem

Why was pigeone' flesh so nice, That thoughtless cats should love it thus? Hadst thou but lived on rats and mice,

Thou hadst been living still, poor Puss. And of course everyone knows the story of Dick Whittington and his cat. According to the popular story Whittington was a poor orphan boy who heard that London offered many opportunities but discovered that life there was also difficult. He sent his prized possession, a cat of whom he was very fond, in a shipment of goods to Morocco at the suggesiton of his master, a rich merchant.

The palace of the Moroccan emperor was plagued with mice but the cat soon had them under control. The emperor was so pleased that he paid a great price for the cat and sent the money home for Dick and this enabled him to start up his own business. Eventually he married the merchant's daughter, was knighted and became Sir Richard Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London.

Shakespeare knew cats and often wrote about them but he couldn't be said to like them. The closest he comes to complimenting a cat, in the more than forty times he mentions them, is in the Merchant of Venice when Shylock refers to the animal as the "harmless, necessary cat". Shakespeare usually shows the cat as a quiet, subtle creature, with sly and thieving wats. Falstaff says "I am as melancholy as a gib cat" and in another part of the same play "I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream".

Goethe loved cats. In his poem Westlostcher Divan, he mentioned cats as one of four beasts that would be permitted to enter the gates of paradise. The last verse, literally translated, says:

This cat of Abuherriras purred About the Lord and coaxes Since he is ever the holy beast Whom the Prophet stroked.

Thomas Grey wrote a moving poem "On the Death of a Favourite Cat Drowned in a Tub of Gold Fishes" where he describes the cat, Selina, as a demure tabby with emerald eyes, velvet paws and jet-black ears. Selina was fascinated with the colourful goldfish and tried to rake them out of the tub with her paw. Eventually she overreached and tumbled in, and despite her pitiful meows, she was unheard and drowned.

James Boswell raltes one of literature's most famous relationships, that of Dr. Samuel Johnson and his cat Hodge. Boswell refers to the cat as scrambling up Dr. Johnson's breast, apparently with much satisfaction, while my friend, halfsmiling and half-whistling, rubbed down his back and pulled him by the tail; and when I observed he was a fine cat, saying, "Why, yes sir, but I have had cats whom I liked better than this"; and then, as if perceiving Hodge to be out of countenance, adding, "but he is a fine cat, a very fine cat indeed."

In the nineteenth century many writers wrote about cats, particularly in France. Gautier wrote about his cats; and also wrote about Baudelaire and his enjoyment of the animals. This interest culminated in the famous emotional stories by Colette of her cats.

Wordsworth, the famous poet, wrote delightfully about the antics of a small kitten, learning to hunt through play in "The Kittens and Falling Leaves". The kitten, entranced by the withered leaves falling from a tall elder tree, "crouches, stretches, paws and darts, first at one and then its fellow, just as light and just as yellow." She jumps at one leaf, lets it go and grabs another - "Now she works with three or four, like an Indian conjurer; quick as he in feats of art, far beyond in joy of heart." Who has not seen a kitten playing thus?

Perhaps the best known is the Cheshire Cat in Alice in Wonderland, written by Lewis Carroll. Alice meets the Cat in the garden where he is perched high in a tree. He tells Alice that everyone in Wonderland is quite mad and Alice must be also, as she is there. But she found the most disconcerting thing about the Cat was that he would appear and disappear at will and said it made her quite giddy.

Then he grinned even more widely than before and started to disappear, slowly, slowly, slowly, "beginning with the end of his tail and ending with the grin, which remained some time after the rest had "Well, I've often seen a cat without a grin," thought Alice, "but a grin without a cat! It is the most curious thing I ever saw in all my life."

Nursery rhymes are another popular place for poems about cats. They range from "Hi Diddle Diddle" to "Pussycat, Pussycat" and of course, "Ding Dong Bell" which ends with:

What a naughty boy was that Who tried to drown poor Pussy Cat That never did him any harm But killed the mice in his father's barn.

Edward Lear's "Owl and the Pussy Cat" must be one of the children's favourite poems about cats and of course there is "Puss n Boots" the cat who is so clever in the French fairy tale, and in modern days Beatrix Potter had her tales

One of my favourites is "The Cat That Walked by Himself" by Rudyard Kipling. In this story he tells of the old days when all the animals were wild and man lived in a cave, warmed by his new discovery fire. The wildest of all the animals was the cat, who walked by himself and to whom all places were alike.

Man tamed the animals one by one and drew them into his circle, feeling them in return for their labour or services. The horse, the cow and the dog all bowed to man and eventually became tame. Finally even the cat was drawn to the warmth and shelter of man's habitat, but although it became more tame, it never became servile, and to this day the cat still walks by

Today you can pick up dozens of books about these delightful animals who came down to us from ancient Egypt where they were worshiped as gods and where their aloofness earned them a special place. There are books on cats, picture books, beautifully illustrated, books on how to live with them, anthologies of cats, and even the notorious "I Hate Cats" and "100 Ways to Kill a Cat".

But I think the love of man for a cat is. perhaps most beautifully described in this passage from "To A Cat" by Algernon Charles Swinburne, the Victorian poet:

Stately, kindly, lordly friend, Condescend Here to sit by me and turn Glorious eyes that smile and burn, Golden eyes, Love's lustrous meed, On the golden page I read.

WONDERLEARNING

Apparently it is not only in British Columbia that a disproportionate amount of the educational budget is directed towards those youngsters who are anti-social and undisciplined to the extent that they have what are euphemistically called "learning problems". The same condition exists in California. But, there, some dedicated parents have set about providing extra learning opportunities for the forgotten types, the academically 'gifted' children. And they are, wisely, doing it quite independently of the regular school system.

According to an article in The Christian Science Monitor, the programme, called the Santa Clara Valley Lyceum, accepts students from second through eighth grades who have proven themselves academically superior. The programme provides seminars during the afternoons, evening, or weekends, and covers just about any aspect of study which might appeal to the inquirng mind of a bright and disciplined child.

The seminars are led by adults, usually parents, who have expertise in one field of study or another. If none can be found with the proper qualifications to conduct a required course, then outside professionals are invited to contribute their services. They seldome refuse. The programmes run from four to ten weeks, and since all instructors are donating their time, the cost is minimal — a yearly enrolment fee of one dollar per family and $3.50

The workshops provide instruction and opportunities for research in such subjects as opera, Japanese brush painting, cooking, writing, chess, and even 'Dungeons and Dragons'. They are not just thrown-together courses,

One, on space travel, gives the children an opportunity to hear and question an astronaut from the official aerospace department of the government. Students examine and try on space suits and are given all the information available and assimilable about the hows and whys and dangers and potential benefits of space travel:

A law seminar offers a chance to talk with a judge, to visit Alcatraz prison (which is no longer in use), to listen to and question an ex-convict, and to discuss with a probation officer such matters as freedom and the stigma of a BY ALEX

Drawing workshops held in an artist's studio include much more than merely drawing. Discussions are held about perception, perspective, what the eye actually sees, why people communicate through visual media, and other of the deeper aspects of art.

A gourmet cooking class gives not only recipes and techniques, but also reasons why certain countries have come to use particular foods and spices. In fact, the whole lyceum programme is designed to satisfy the intellectual demands of children who, according to one board member, "are thinking on several different planes above the average."

The programme has been in operation for ten years now and has been used as a model for others throughout the United States, some of them successful, many merely temporary efforts without the parental input to keep them going. Whether successful or not the lyceums are all based on the same principle - to "fill the gap on the other end in school systems that are directing their limited discretionary funds towards programmes for the educationally handicapped rather than the gifted".

Southern California parents are obviously no different from those in British Columbia. The organizers of the lyceum are faced continually with the same complaints from the general public. "Why," they are asked, "is this programme merely for the brighter than average students? Why can't everybody benefit from it?"

The answer is obvious but Gayle Kramer, one of the founder members, answers it diplomatically. She points to the difficulties of starting and maintaining a programme of this scope, and she doubts that a lyceum could ever get off the ground and stay off it, if it didn't provide the extra stimulus of working with and for special children. There is no doubt that the satisfaction of teaching a group of students, all of whom are eager to learn and are ready to direct their whole academic interest into the courses, is sufficient reward for any former teachers who throughout years of struggle in regular schools have dreamed of just such an opportunity.

Without this impetus, Mrs. Kramer thinks, it would be difficult to get the great number of resource people that the lyceum requires. Four hundred to five hundred workers are necessary each month to keep the organization afloat. She feels, as well, that under less special circumstances parents would be less willing to give freely of their time. The organization of the school requires that each parent who enrols a child donate a specified amount of time at a specified job, clerical or professional depending upon their skills and interests. Many do a great deal more than the minimum, and some, especially the founder members, give as much as forty hours of work

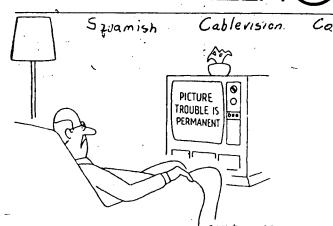

Operating as it does on a plane so much superior to the average demanded by the advocates of democratic mediocrity, the lyceum keeps itself about as widely separated as possible from the regular school system. Public schools within a fifty mile radius of the lyceum submit the names of qualified students, and, if requested, they may supply a classroom or two. Other than that the lyceum is strictly a parent-student affair.

Mrs. Kramer shows a peculiar if slightly jaded understanding of the public school system when she says, "We want lyceum out of the schools. We don't want some well-meaning teacher saying, 'Take this course, it'll be good for you.' We want the children to have the

As for the general success of the lyceum and as advice for people who seek guidance in forming similar facilities elsewhere, the spokeswoman for the school has this to say, "You've got to get a bunch of dynamic people to start it and to get the ball rolling, and you've got to keep these people interested in what they've created and you've got to continue to watch it."

With such emphasis on compulsion, the lyceum idea would, no doubt, be rejected out of hand in B.C., especially when it is made even more objectionable by its philosophy of providing facilities for the worthy. One cannot but wonder, however, how many young people, now dubbed 'slow learners' in secondary school, would be top academic students if they had been faced with the lvceum-like after-hours challenge during their early years in the school system.

Editor, The Times: Howdy Sports Fans!

Did you all enjoy the football game on TV on Monday night? Wasn't the picture on your screen clear and colourful? Are you enjoying the two new wonderful channels that are delivered to your home on our superb cablevision in Squamish? I'll bet you are just tickled pink with the new rate increase. It came in very clear. But fear not, ye loyal TV fanatics. With the new rate increase it means we will be getting much more improved service - or haven't you noticed?

We have assurances, fans, that the reception here is second to none except during adverse weather conditions, and we all know Squamish has weather second only to Hawaii.

There is a bit of consolation though, "sports fans"; the baseball games on TV are coming in on Channel 2 so when the cable service is experiencing its frequent distortions or its complete failure

(as is occurring presently) probably because of adverse weather conditions, well we can hook up our little bunny rabbit ears and experience a nice clear picture without cablevision problems.

It is with great disillusionment that in this age of technology when pictures are transmitted from millions of miles from planets and satellites in outer space, and we live only 30 miles from Vancouver and experience problems like we do.

Oh, well, sports fans, why not just drive the thirty miles to Vancouver. It only takes an hour and you have a marvellous selection of channels to choose from (except perhaps during adverse weather conditions).

So let this be a lesson to all you nasty folks who sent letters and signed petitions and protested to the CRTC. "Vengeance is mine" saith the Lord. Just keep those monthly payments rolling in.

Marijuana causes lung damage which is much more severe than what cigarette smokers suffer. The smoke affects the respiratory system as well as other vital organs such as the liver, the body's immune defences, the brain and the reproductive system. The latter is probably one of the less glamorous aspects of marijuana use. Long term marijuana use can cause sterility and impotence as well as genetic damage to the off-

The boater's ally the Seawatch program

"It's a great day for both their back yard," Benson exboaters and fishing enthusiasts alike. We're out by Seal Rock now and are about to head over the mouth of the Capilano River. There is a light chop on the water; it is a beautiful cloudless sunny day with a steady wind hovering around five knotts. The Labatt Seawatch boat is currently sitting amidst 100 fishing boats of every size and description. So far few salmon are being caught. The latest report is of a 12-pounder hooked 20 minutes ago at a depth of 35 feet. This is Ken Benson for Labatt's Seawatch. Our next report follows in an hour. At that time we'll be hearing from Al

Davidson at Pender Harbour." Ken Benson's weekend reports from the Howe Sound waters were familiar to hundreds of radio CKNW listeners over the summer months. Aboard the Labatt 28-foot Uniflite cruiser the Chilliwack resident was a welcome sight to sailors and power boaters. "I got to know a lot of the regular boaters as well as a number of visitors to our waters," says Benson. "There is a great camaraderie among boaters. The water enthusiasts I met over the summer made me feel very much a part of

During the week Ken Benson is with the sales and marketing arm of CKWK radio station in the valley. But on weekends from May through to the Labour Day weekend he has been out on the water. Beginning at six in the morning he reported hourly on tide changes, wind velocity, hot fishing spots, good diving areas and all kinds of other water activities. His last report was at eight in the evening.

"I tried to make my reports interesting not only to the boater, diver and beachcomber but also to the families sitting home enjoying

With assistance from his faithful dog, 'Patches,' (his friendly bark could often be heard in the background) Ken gave colourful descriptions of such events as the fly past, wind-surfing contests and the bathtub race during the Sea Festival. Community activities all over the province provided Ken with interesting material to present to his listeners.

But it wasn't just marine reports that Ken was responsible for. Rescuing boats in various forms of distress also kept him busy. Labatt's is one of a handful of corporate companies involved with the Seawatch program. The program is designed primarily to assist boaters in need of help.

"We work very closely with both the Coast Guard emergency people and the police patrol," Ken says. "Over the last few months we have been involved in all kinds of search and rescue activities."

According to the Coast Guard's deputy coordinator of safety and prevention, Mike Ball, 137 vessels were aided during the months of June to September. "One-third of these were assisted by boats such as Labatt's," Ball says. "There were also numerous unrecorded rescues made by private craft. Just in the Howe Sound area 500 recorded incidents have been reported to date this year.'

Each day during the busy summer months situation arise where sailboats run aground, power boats run out of gas or have broken down so require a tow. "The Coast Guard couldn't possibly handle all the marine incidents on their own," Ball says. "We're grateful to Labatt's and all the other private boaters who have helped us in our work."

"When I have spotted the Coast Guard or marine patrol going to help a boater, who has signalled he is in some kind of trouble, I usually radio the Coast Guard boat or patrol to offer my assistance," Ken says. "Many times I have ended up towing the boat requiring assistance so the Coast Guard or patrol can respond to a more urgent call. Their boats carry more elaborate rescue equipment."

One person who appreciatively recalls receiving assistance from Labatt's boat is Bill Otway, executive-director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation. "I was tied up at Sewell's Marina at Horseshoe Bay gassing up our recently-purchased boat and looking forward to our first trip on it. We surprisingly discovered a connection foul-up on the gas line; the bilge was full of gas. (Such a situation is conducive to explosions.) Almost immediately people from the boat tied up behind us came over and offered their assistance. They suggested filling the bilge first with water, then pumping out the water with gas floating atop it. It worked and the

"It is a helpless feeling when a boater is stranded," Otway explains. "I'm sure I speak for a great number of boaters when I say that it is a good feeling to know there is normally a Seawatch boat nearby."

COMPENSATION.

NOT USING IT COULD COST YOUR BUSINESS A BUNDLE.

With all the other problems of operating a small business, it's sometimes easy to put off or overlook the responsibility of ensuring that your business is protected by the Workers' Compensation Board.

And that could be one of the most expensive omissions you ever made..

Because, if one of your workers is involved in an onthe-job accident, you would be liable for the entire cost of his injuries and rehabilitation—a cost that could be many times that of compensation coverage.

Don't risk it. A simple phone call or visit to any W.C.B. office will give you all the information you need about compulsory or elective coverage. You'll find that, for a small cost, you can buy a big piece of "peace of mind".

EMPLOYEES: if you're not sure about your coverage, discuss this ad with your employer or call the Assessment Department in your nearest W.C.B. office.

Come one! Come all! Sunday, October 18 is it! The day of the annual fall swap meet. That's right, time is quickly passing and the big day is almost here. Now is the time to act if you haven't already! Dig through those cupboards and closets, turn out the garage, upheave that toy box, hunt through those old clothes and decide ... that you're going to be part of the action!

The activities take place in the auditorium at the civic centre. Set up commences at 10:00 a.m. and the selling begins at 11:00 a.m. until 3:00 p.m. Tables are available for $5 each and they can hold a lot of bargains. So get busy, time is running out! You must preregister at the centre, Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. There has been a lot of response and the centre is expecting a lively, busy day. Don't say "I wish I had," say "I will" and begin now!

Phone for details at 898-3604. While on the topic of fun, let's not forget the Hallowe'en events coming up! On Friday, October 30, children are urged to come in costume for the Hallowe'en Extravaganza. It runs from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. for kids of all ages. There will be pumpkin carving, apple bobbing, face make-up sessions, caramel apples, games and fun. Everyone will receive their own pumpkin to create and take home a sticky, gooey, caramel apple that they dipped! The registration fee is $1.50 per child and you must preregister. Children four years and under must be accompanied by an adult. What better way to encourage the Hallowe'en spirit than an afternoon of spooky fun with

On Saturday, October 31, join the staff on ice for a masquerade skate from 2:00 to 3:30 p.m. If you come in costume, you'll be admitted free, as a guest. There will be prizes and a lot of fun! Don't miss it. Later that night, gather the family and make your way to Centennial field for the annual bonfire and fireworks display! This year's show will be the biggest the centre has ever had and the staff is looking forward to seeing as many out as possible.

Fireworks spark off at 9:00 p.m., so don't be late. See ya there.

Association outlines guidelines for estuary

River estuaries are essential in British Columbia's coastal society for a wide variety of uses.

These include urban and industrial development, port development, waste disposal, fisheries and wildlife habitat, log boom handling and storage, and outdoor recreation.

These are all legitimate and traditional uses of estuaries, and adequate planning is required to ensure their future harmonious co-existence.

Conflicts are inevitable between some of these uses, and management of these conflicts is becoming more difficult as well as more necessary. It is no longer possible to satisfy all the user groups completely, but it is critical that decisions seek both to optimize the net socio-economic benefits and to minimize environmental risks in-

As a general guide for resolution of conflicts in estuarine management and use, the Association of B.C. Professional Foresters recommends that all ap-•Fish habitat should be preserved and enhanced wherever practical and justifiable, in keeping with the need for the rearing and development of fish spawned in associated river systems.

The habitat for commercial and/or edible marine species, other than fish, should also be preserved wherever practical and justifiable.

•Log boom handling and storage, should be confined to deep waters wherever practical, recognizing that the coastal forest industry is dependent upon marine transportation for its log supplies.

Every effort should be made to minimize identified negative impacts on the environment, through adoption of appropriate proven technology and the use of alternative non-estuarine water areas should these be available.

Early attention needs to be paid in the study process to an inventory of the basic resources present in the estuary, as well as to the variety of means by which these resources may be utilized.

 Estuary management should be approached on the basis of coordinated resource management.

Single-use land or estuary setasides should be minimized, in favour of the planned co-existence of compatible competing resource uses, and should only be considered after appropriate costbenefit analyses have been completed.

Italian society dinner and dance

There were plates of antipasto, platters of pasta with peas and mushrooms, spaghetti, veal parmigiana with broccoli and potatoes and side dishes of chicken and salad at the Garibaldi Italian Society's annual dinner and dance. If anyone went hungry it was their own fault as the waitresses brought around platters of food long after the main courses were served. And to top it off there were pastries and pots of hot coffee along with red wine.

It was just the kind of feast that people have learned to expect when they come to the affair hosted by the local Italian society. During the pre-dinner wait the members of the dance group, composed of the younger people in the local Italian community, entertained with some of their dances accompanied by Angela Morfini.

Dominic Milia, president of the local Garibaldi Italian Society, welcomed the guests and Mayor W.J. Elliott spoke a few words at the beginning of the dinner.

Two of the lucky winners of the door prizes were Jack Currie who won a cheese cutter and Carole Raffaele who received two lunch

Novel deals with new energy source

It would be hard for anybody, these days, to argue against a nice. clean, cheap, hon polluting energy source.

Except, of course, for the guy. who discovers that this boon can be turned into a nice, clean, deaddo exactly that. Furthermore, they are not likely to have scruples about doing him in once they realize he's on to them.

This situation is the basis of Ian Slater's new thriller, Air Glow Red (Doubleday). The energy source is a solar space station that beams microwaves to earth; the innocent caught in the intrigue is Harry Sturgess, an investigator in Washington with the Environmental Protection Agency. Harry's efforts to unmask the criminals are complicated by the usual Washington political infighting and by his romantic involvement with scientist Prica Sara, who may or may not be inleague with his enemy.

Vancouver author Ian Slater deftly keeps the reader absorbed ly weapon of war and that some as Harry Sturgess pursues the mysterious villains are plotting to mysterious menace across the U.S. and into British Columbia dodging fists and bullets and leaving the odd corpse behind.

Slater, who teaches at the University of B.C. in addition to writing thrillers, is a scientist with a solid fund of high-tech information to draw on as background for his books.

His previous novels, also written around various aspects of today's energy crisis, were Firespill and Sea Gold - one concerned with oil tanker traffic, the other with mining the sea bed.

Guest speaker on French immersion

Ms. Florence Wilton, coordinator, Modern Languages Services Branch of the Department of Education will be in Squamish November 2 at 8:00 p.m., at the library, to speak on French Immersion — both early and late.

Ms. Wilton will explain how French immersion works and how course content parallels the English language program. She will discuss any problems that arise when children are introduced or re-introduced to English language arts. Other topics, such as the effect on a child who moves to another school district which does not offer immersion and what happens if a child falls behind, will be covered.

A parent from North Vancouver whose child has been involved in a French immersion program and Mrs. Moira Biggen-Pound from the school board, will be available to answer questions, along with Ms. Wilton, after the talk. These people will be able to field questions from their particular perspectives.

If you are interested in knowing more about French immersion, please plan to attend.

Kiwanis plans seventh annual Christmas concert

The Kiwanis Club of Squamish Valley has already started planning for this year's verison of the popular community Christmas Concert.

The concert, which is made up of items by people in our community, will again take place in the Civic Centre auditorium, on Sunday, Dec. 6.

The concert, which has become a Squamish Christmas tradition, has proved very popular, and each year an effort is made to include new groups as well as the old favourites.

This year will be no exception, and the club is taking a different approach.

We are inviting a number of our "regulars" and some new groups which we feel add to the afternoon's enjoyment. In addition, we are trying to develop a "theme" for the concert as a whole, and asking all participants to present items within this theme.

The invitations are starting to go out, and the theme will be decided by the time you read this. There are bound to be groups in the community of which the members of this small club are not aware, and we do not wish to miss anyone who would like to be considered for a share in this year's

Oktoberfest for fun and dancing

Oktoberfest, the annual Bavarian beer bash, planned by the Squamish Kinsmen Club, is set for Saturday, November 7, not quite the right month but that won't put a damper on the fun.

The scene will be the civic centre and, once again, there will be the toe-tapping music with its Tyrolean or Bavarian theme and the dances native to Bavaria and southern Germany.

The food will also be the traditional Bavarian style with lots of sauerkraut, Bavarian sausage and dill pickles.

Oktoberfest is the boisterous Bavarian beerhall tradition started in Germany, which has spread to other countries and become increasingly popular. The combination of compah music, lots of laughter and shouts of "Prosit" and the good fellowship it creates. makes for a lively evening and, even if it is a week late, he one is going to mind and the fun will befast and furious.

Make a date with the Kinsmen for your Oktoberfest celebration.

If you or your group can offer us an item, and would be interested in taking part in the concert, let us know right away. Write 'Kiwanis Concert', Box 549, Garibaldi Highlands.

the afternoon of the first Sunday in December, and get ready to enjoy a song, humour, dance, and all the things that go to make this a highlight of the Christmas season in Squamish.

> Council decided to obtain as much information as possible concerning this type of development and to ask the municipal solicitor to attend the next council meeting on Oct. 20.

An examination of the land is to be made by municipal works supervisor John Payne. As B.C. Hydro does not own the land north of the Overwaitea land, this is the land preferred for parking instead of the gazetted road as indicated on plan 9110.

However, Ald. Kindree suggested that, should council make the decision to allow Lawrie the strata title, some commitment should be obtained from him in exchange.

Despite council's desire to see the commercial development completed, it was concerned about having it stay empty because the economic situation might not be favourable.

Materials handling, building materials fundamentals, customer service, job safety and basic employment skills are the five main areas of study in the program. Students will become knowledgeable about the products they handle and be able to describe and explain the use of those products to the customer as well as learn to handle materials and equipment normally found in a building material supply yard.

Classes will be held from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday to Friday, commencing November 2, at

Choices for women

There are many burning questions for women today, questions of general as well as personal con-

Women are asking: Can I get a job with a decent wage that will allow me to support myself and my family? What role will the government play in protecting m y rights to equal opportunity in this country?

If I am working, who will take responsibility for child care? Will my husband take a larger share in the household without resentment or resistance? Where can I go for help if crises arise? Am I, and other women, merely victims in today's society?

What's it like to be a woman in Squamish these days? Are there opportunities for development personally and professionally?

Issues such as these will be explored in a series of six informal lecture / disussions sponsored by the Women's Resource Centre of Capilano College. With the help of expert resource people, we will examine what's happening for women today in the following

Oct. 15, Women and Work; Oct. 22, Women and the Constitution; Oct. 29, Changing Roles of Men and Women; Nov. 5, Women in Transition; Nov. 12, Women and Power; Nov. 19, Women in Squamish.

Meetings will be held on Thursday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m, in the Second Avenue Centre of Cap College, Room 1. Resource people are donating their time so that all women will be able to afford to come. The fee is nominal — only $1 per evening or $5 for the series of six evenings

However, we would like to know if we have enough people to go ahead; therefore, we are asking you to pre-register at Capilano College in advance. For further information, call the Women's Resource Centre at 892-5322 or drop by the office.
