

golf club by October

With a note of finality, Don Cruickshank, president of the Howe Sound Curling Club stood up, closed his note book and with a smile on his face said, "I think it is quite reasonable to assume that we will be curling by October 1."

In the past two years, while the club has scrambled to find itself a new beginning, those words have often been heard before by its members. This time they and Cruickshank feel that the game of curling has a definite future in Squamish.

Unable to build a new rink at the Civic Centre since the $525,000 price tag left them $200,000 short of the necessary funds, the curling club looked deeper into the golf club's proposal of moving to that latter area. The more they looked the better it got, especially since the curling executive began to realize that in essence it was the last opportunity for the club to rebuild.

For over two months a joint committee made up of curling and golfing executives, with Luke Plunkett as the liaison, hammered out a deal that everyone was 100% behind. Then on Wednesday and Thursday they took this proposal to their respective members.

The result was an overwhelming majority in favour of the project, with only one vote cast against compared to over 300 for.

The proposal was for an all steel building that will cost $245,000 while other expenses will include $27,000 for the refrigeration system, $7,000 for the heat tape, which prevents heaving, $41,000 for a concrete floor, something the old club didn't have, $30,000 for the rink pack and $15,000 for the actual site clearing.

Thus the total cost is $365,000. The big difference in price over the Civic Centre is that the bar and washroom facilities will be shared with the golf course.

To pay for all of this the curling club currently has $260,000 in the bank on a term deposit that is expected to accumulate $12,000 interest by April. Meanwhile both the rink pack and clearing expenses can be written off since the former was saved from the old club and the latter is being donated by Graehold Construction, Mal MacCallum.

To finance the balance, as the only applicants to the Brier Committee the curling club is all but assured of a fund of $20,000 while a new membership drive has hopes

New curling rink

Only a stones throw away from the Golf Club the new curling rink will use many of the same facilities thereby reducing the cost of building the rink. The Curling Club and the Golf Club will continue to be independent from each other yet mutually benefit from the building expansion.

Consul General Byung Yung Soh of Korea, cutting the ribbon to mark the official opening of the Korean Art Show featuring works by Ho Sung Kim, at the Garibaldi Highlander Hotel following a dinner hosted by Ken Lee, owner of the hotel, for local businessmen and industrialists from Korea. MLA John Reynolds, left, was a special guest and assisted in the ceremony.

Korean industrialists visit Squamish

A group of Korean industrialists and business men visited Squamish on Monday at the invitation of Ken Lee, owner of the Garibaldi Highlander Hotel. Lee invited leaders of industry and other citizens of Squamish to attend a dinner and a preview of the Korean Art Exhibit now on display at the hotel.

Leading the group was Consul General for Korea for Western Canada Byung Yung Soh. Stationed in Vancouver, he is the representative of his country in the three western provinces.

Following dinner Consul General Soh introduced the members of his party speaking briefly about each of them and talking about the cultural and political relations between the two countries.

"At the turn of the century the Asian countries opened their doors to the western world and last year the trade between Canada and Korea amounted to $1,345 million dollars."

"There have been exchange visits by heads of state," he added, "and in Canada there are two Korean language studies centres, one at UBC and the other at the University of Toronto. The Korean government gave grants to Canada for these language centres."

"We cannot forget the Canadian contribution in 1951 to 1955 when our country was almost destroyed. Along with 15 other United Nations countries you came to our assistance. Canada's help was appreciated and always will be."

Soh introduced the painter and told the gathering he was sure they would enjoy the works of artist Ho-Sung Kim, who specializes in paintings of birds and flowers.

MLA John Reynolds welcomed the visitors on behalf of the government, saying he was pleased that Korea was one of the first countries to sign up with Expo '86.

"All we hear is doom and gloom," he said. "The local media is very positive. I wish the city media was here as well. I am delighted that you are bringing people here and hope you will invest here."

"Squamish is a growing area and I am pleased with your interest. We know that you are successful in marketing your wares and your country is well known for the quality of its merchandise."

Reynolds concluded his remarks by saying he hoped that Korean Air Lines would be initiating flights out of Vancouver.

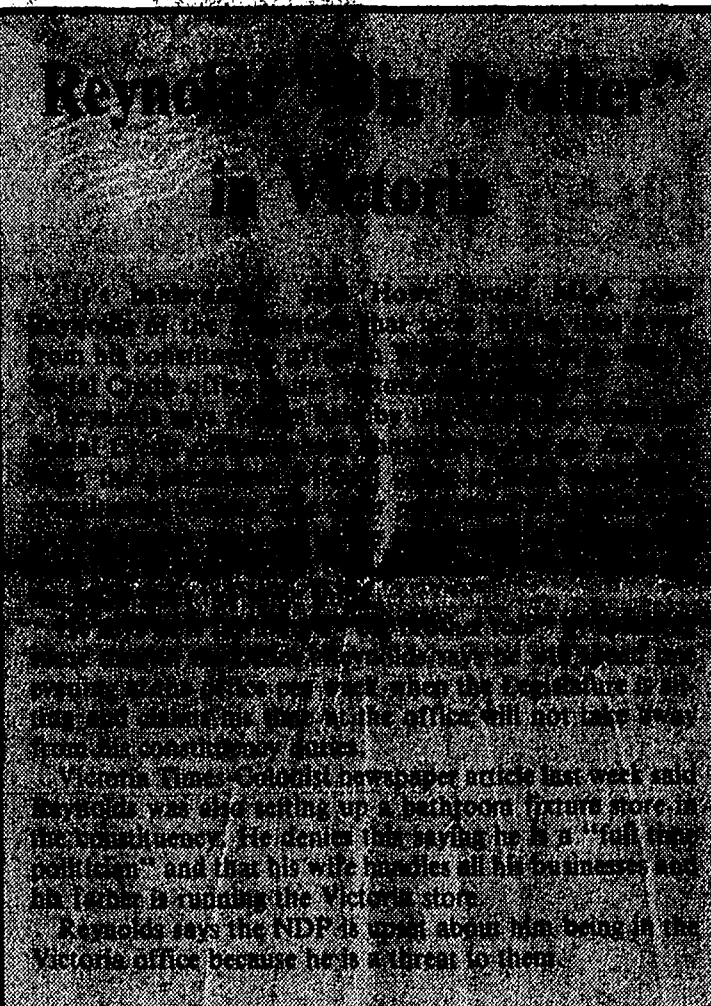

Mayor Jim Elliott, who had greeted the guests as they arrived and made sure the visitors met the local people present, said he was pleased to have them visit Squamish and hoped the district would be able to co-operate with them.

Ken Lee, owner of the Highlander Hotel, expressed his pleasure at hosting the dinner and the art show.

"I hope to be the catalyst between Squamish and the Far East," he said.

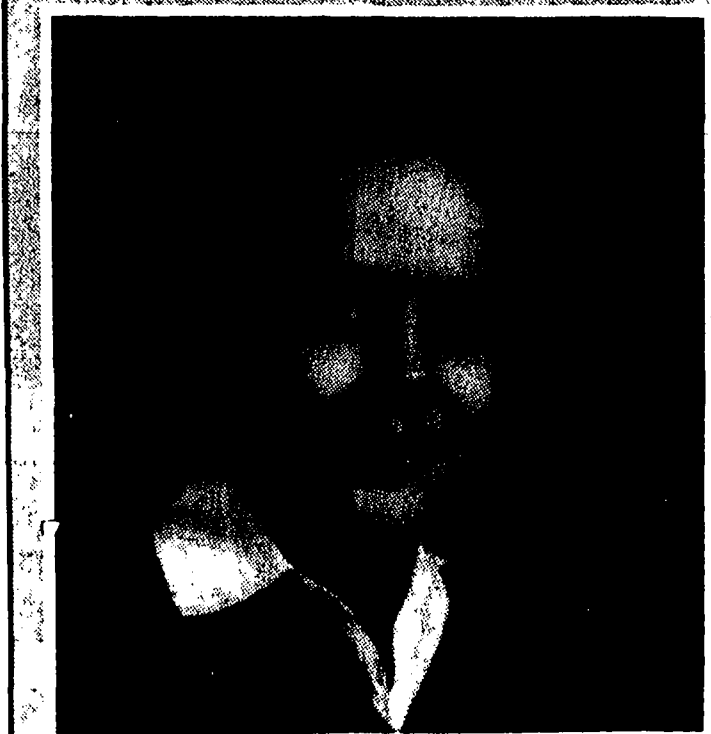

Peter Lee, the local government agent, in his introductory remarks at the dinner said that Korea was the sixth largest importer of Canadian exports. These amounted to $424 million while Korea exported $129 million worth of products to Canada.

Jessie needs a friend

Jessie is looking for a friend. Can you help him?
Jessie is looking for some new friends.
by Rose Tallow

Jessie is a bright, six year old who is looking for some new friends. Would you like to give him some companionship?

He has a number of allergies as well as asthma and cannot run and play in his neighbourhood or visit his friends in their homes.

But he would love to have some friends, some who can spend some time with him. Maybe someone who has similar allergies and shares his problems.

He is allergic to animals, a number of foods including milk, eggs and potatoes. Artificial flavonines, dyes and preservatives also have an adverse effect on him.

He can't read because he is allergic to ink in books, but he would love to have someone read to him or tell him stories.

When Jessie is well enough to attend school, he goes to Squamish Elementary and loves it. But he needs a lot of time in the hospital where special care is taken to ensure that he eats only the foods he can handle.

Cumming charges CRTC supports big business

Dan Cumming, regional director for Area "D" which includes Britannia Beach, Garibaldi, Upper Cheakamus and Upper Squamish, and chairman of the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District, told a meeting of residents of Upper Squamish on Tuesday, November 6, that the CRTC is unfair to the people of the valley because of its answer to the people's requests for telephones.

The residents have been trying to have telephone service extended to their area since 1975, and have been continually told that this could not be done for various reasons. However, B.C. Tel, which had stated before 1983, that it did not have the technology and capacity to provide this service, suddenly reversed its stand when a ruling changed in 1983 which would entitle the company to charge over $3,000 per installation, with a minimum of 35 installations, was made.

Residents felt this was unfair and protested to the CRTC, stating that they should not be forced to pay this exorbitant amount for an installation which would have been much less costly if it had been dealt with earlier.

However, the CRTC replied stating that it could see no wrong in the B.C. Telephone Co. asking for this charge.

Cumming charged that the CRTC is now changing sides, and instead of helping the general public has responded to the pressure of the very companies they are supposed to govern. Cumming and Lorne Greenaway are applying more pressure through the new Minister of Communications, Marcel Masse.

Another matter of interest to the people who attended the meeting was flood protection. Residents wanted to know whether they could be protected, as the floods are getting worse. They also were concerned about the frequency of the flooding as there have been several since 1980.

Cumming stated he would be asking for an engineer's report on these and other questions.

Concern was expressed about the erosion of private lands, particularly near the "Wetwood" gate which would hold the force of the current to the west side of the valley and prevent further erosion.

The Upper Squamish Valley wants some form of fire protection. The cost of this was discussed and whether it should be done by taxation, or by the residents on their own, more according to the valley's traditional approach to its needs.

Prices on equipment needed for a fire department will be obtained, as well as other means of financing a fire protection unit.

Cumming suggested that a three mill tax increase for five years could provide the initial capital required but the residents wanted to think the matter over before making any decision.

Three killed in head-on

A head on collision escalated into a four vehicle crash that killed three people and sent two others to hospital on Highway 99 in Squamish just south of the Civic Centre intersection. The accident occurred at 5:40 p.m. in a light rain and falling darkness.

Dead are Pek-Van Ip, in her 60's, who was pronounced dead on the scene, her husband Kee Chung Lou, also in his 60's who died later in hospital. Their son, Lawrence Lou, aged 22, died early Saturday in Lions Gate Hospital.

Kerry Ma, aged 21, Lou's fiancée, was taken to Squamish General Hospital and released later in the day. The driver of the other vehicle involved in the accident, Keith Hess, aged 28, of Port Alberni, was in satisfactory condition in Lions Gate Hospital with internal injuries.

After the first two cars met in the head-on collision, they were struck by two other vehicles. The highway was closed for four and a half hours and heavy traffic heading for Whistler was rerouted on Government Road.

The Lou family and Lawrence Lou's fiancée Kerry Ma, had spent a day on the slopes at Whistler and were heading home when the accident occurred. Lawrence Lou was driving the one vehicle.

Keith Hess, the driver of the other car, was heading for Whistler for the weekend and said he had no idea what caused the accident.

Police said the case is still under investigation.

Head-on collision on Highway 99

Two Squamish residents were hospitalized following a head-on collision on Highway 99, north of the Lonetree Creek bridge about 6 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 8.

Harry Bullen and his passenger Gladys Brooks were southbound on Highway 99 when his car collided with a vehicle heading north but travelling in the southbound lane.

On Friday afternoon, Bullen was listed in serious but stable condition and Brooks was listed in stable condition in Lions Gate Hospital.

The driver of the northbound vehicle has not been identified but he received only minor injuries.

RCMP are investigating the accident and charges are pending.

Mountain BLUE GRASS MUSIC

SATURDAY NOVEMBER 24TH
THE LITTLE MOUNTAIN BAND

The Little Mountain Band consists of Don Dirksen, Kitty King, Dave Lidstone and Rob McGregor. For a number of years they have been active within the Pacific Bluegrass and Heritage Society and have been informally, yet at various times, formally playing music together. In June, 1984 they decided to put together an official band.

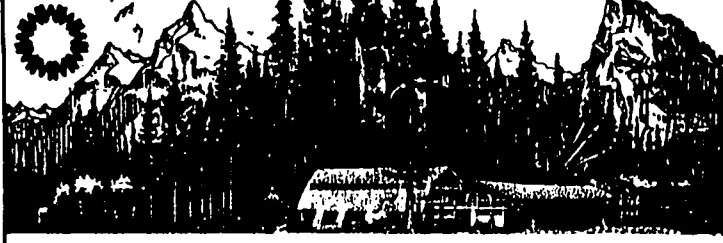

Don, on banjo, was born and raised in Greater Vancouver. His musical career began in the mid '70s with Bargain at Half the Price. He ventured into Bluegrass with Wildrose Construction and then joined the Elsworth Hour Band in the fall of 1983 and served with that group until December 1983.

On bass is Kitty King, the musical octopus of the band. Born in Kansas, she settled in Vancouver in 1972 and shortly thereafter launched her musical career with a double bass in hand. The mid to late '70s saw her working with a number of bands, most notably Hot Corn, and the Flatline Kat Kickers. She was a founding member of Elsworth Hour in 1980 and left them in the fall of 1983 to tour with the San Francisco-based Robin House Band. Her return to Vancouver has been highly received.

Colour player Dave Lidstone was born in Toronto, raised in Montreal, and then moved to Vancouver in 1976. Indeed, a compilation journeyman. His musical career started in 1973 with Road Apple Pie. He moved on to found the Elsworth Hour Band and stayed with them until their end. Some stability seems to be surfacing.

Rob McGregor, on mandolin, was born and raised in Ottawa, where he was active in the folk scene. He soon discovered Bluegrass music. Fortunately, since his 1980 arrival in Vancouver, he has developed an impeccable taste for real Bluegrass.

All members of the band have good lead voices and are capable of singing any harmony line. Hence their material is social work. They play a good blend of traditional and contemporary bluegrass, and will soon serve up some original compositions.

Writing Guild news

October was a busy month for the Howe Sound Writers' Guild.

On the 17th, Ian Hunter of the 'Times' was our Guest Speaker, whose talk on journalism was of much interest to all present. Thank you, Ian, for the valuable information and reference material provided.

On the 24th, the Guild presented a reading at the Library, following a Halloween theme, to more youngsters than expected. However, the positive feedback received is appreciated and encouraging.

The next meeting of the Guild will be on November 17th at 7:30 p.m. held at 40173 Kintyre Drive E. (as are all meetings falling on the second Wednesday of the Month.) Interested non-members are invited to attend.

Seniors Corner

Despite the poor weather on Nov. 3, Branch No. 70 of Squamish Senior Citizens Association held a successful Christmas Bazaar at the United Church Annex.

The three door prizes were donated by senior citizens with Ena Black making the afghan (won by Bo Kennett) and Rose Tatlow the cushion (won by Mr. Johnson). The decanter set was won by Hannah Kirkwood.

We wish to express our special thanks to the United Church for the use of their hall, to the businesses who displayed our bazaar posters and to you the public for your donations and patronage. Thanks to Vicky Robinson for coming to our rescue with her truck to transport all our goods through the snow to the hall. We can't forget our chauffeurs Russ Bliss, Fred Bennett and Bob Silcock for getting the following ladies to the hall and home again after setting up for the bazaar on Friday: Mary Donald, Jean McKinnon, Mary Small, Rene Barnes, Mary Bennett, Marie Dillman, Wilma Greving, Nellie Reite, Bo Kennett, Doris Ford, Ellen Eadie, Kathy Hoy, Hannah Kirkwood, Dorothy Silcock, Helen Kirby and Joan Rivett.

Specially missed at our bazaar this year were Kay McCormick, who now resides at Hilltop House; Irene Stephenson, who was in hospital and is now wished a speedy recovery and Irene Johnson now living in Nanaimo. We wish her every happiness in her new home.

The proceeds of this bazaar was put into a special fund we hope for the continuance of our project "the activity room" at Hilltop House. The past two bazaars raised the funds for us to furnish the activity room, which was done this year and will be maintained by us.

AS CLASS SIZES CLIMB...

No parents want their child to be "just another face in the crowd"

...and neither do teachers

In a typical British Columbia classroom, children are excited, curious and eager to learn. Teachers are working hard to answer every child's question. But with larger classes resulting from more and more cutbacks, many questions will go unanswered.

Teachers are concerned that educational opportunities for your children are being limited.

As parents you have always shown an interest in your child's education. Your help is needed now more than ever.

By working together, parents and teachers can help public schools look forward to a brighter future.

On November 17th, vote for the schoolboard candidates who will work for smaller classes.

All Candidates Meeting

Pledges of hard work if elected, past records of achievement by the previously elected, and comic relief characterized Friday's all candidates meeting.

Incumbent Heather Pattullo, Shirley Brown (who was a candidate last year) and Terrill Patterson are trying for the two trustee positions.

When questioned where education cutbacks have hurt the quality of education in the district, Patterson replied with a flat "no". Pattullo said, "I don't think the quality of our education has declined to the point where they are suffering terribly."

Brown agreed with Pattullo but commented that the "cuts certainly have hurt the moral of the teachers."

In summing up, Pattullo told the 300 gathered at the meeting, "don't think that the government listens to the School Board, sometimes they have a very deaf ear, but they do listen to parents, and you need to vote for someone with a strong voice who will take your concerns to the government."

Brown summed up by saying that there should be more of an effort for people to vote in municipal elections.

"Let's try to better our last year's average of 29 percent," said Brown.

Regional District
Next up came Dan Cumming and Terrill Patterson who are running for Regional District area Director. Patterson forced the first regional district election in years by running against Cumming who has been representing the area since 1974 and who has been Chairman of the Regional District since 1978.

Cumming explained that the roll of the regional district is to provide minimal government to 99.4 percent of the government. Only people who live in Britannia Beach, Upper Squamish, Upper Cheakamus, Garibaldi and in-between can vote for regional district. Few of the 300 gathered at the Civic Centre Friday night were believed to live in these areas however.

Patterson's main antic was to take a toy telephone to the podium and make a mock telephone call to B.C. Tel, complaining about service in Upper Squamish.

The only position Patterson is not running for is alderman. Five candidates are competing for the three seats, with two incumbents, Dave Stewart and Corrine Lonsdale running again. Ex-municipal building inspector Bill Allen is running for the first time as are contractor Lyall Long and Squamish Terminals employee Norm Verner.

Allen equated Squamish to a company the citizens all have stock in and asked the question "are you gaining or losing?"

Long said he is qualified to be alderman because of his 15 years of business experience.

"If we entertain positive thoughts and compromise we could do much for the area," Long says, "we fall short in planning and promoting and job opportunities for our young people."

"Don't go short go Long," he says.

Lonsdale, the only woman currently on council, was elected last year to a one year term. This time she's going for the two year seat and says she should be re-elected because of her past 10 years involvement in community affairs and because, "half the electorate are women."

"It is important to have a women's input on council," she says,

Lonsdale wants to continue the promoting of tourism within Squamish in developing Block 19, a recreational vehicle park that won't cost the tax payer money, and would like to see the Arts Council housed in the old Forestry building at the top of the hill on the highway leading to town.

She is also concerned about the adverse effect the highway's reputation has had on the area.

"I will do my utmost to get good media coverage of the highway," she says.

Lonsdale is also against increases in taxes, yet is not for cutbacks in services.

Next up was Stewart who emphasized the importance of having a stable council with good management, yet a council that was able to "take in new ideas and practices."

Stewart has been on council six years and was at one time the mayor.

"I know the road to Victoria and I know the way to Ottawa and that's where the dollars will be coming from," says Stewart, "I'll do everything that I can for what is right and fair in this municipality."

First time candidate Verner sees EXPO 86, the Industrial Park, dyking and the general well being of Squamish as what he will be fighting for should he be elected. Jobs are also a high priority for Verner.

We must work together to create jobs for these people... "who knows, if we do everything right we might be able to get a job for Mr. Patterson," he concluded with mixed hisses, boos and claps from the audience for his closing remark.

On the flood plain all the candidates agreed that if the current regulations are observed and the dyking maintained, there should be no problem with building.

"80 percent of Squamish is flood plain," says Stewart. Long says priority should be given to land higher up, rather than developing more on the flood plain.

All the candidates are also behind promoting EXPO in Squamish.

One of the few surprises of the evening was Lynn Wilber's question to Lyall Long on his continued bidding on taking gravel out of the controversial Chief escarpment pit.

Long refused to say he would support council's motion to turn the area into a park as area residents wish.

"Presently I'm looking at it as a company asset in that gravel," Long says, "I would like to spend a little time and consider the use of the area as a park."

"Why should we vote one over the other if you are the same on most issues?" a member of the audience asked.

Allen replied, "I never give up."

"I don't care where I have to go in order to sell that (industrial) park," says Allen, "right now it's a deficit and I see it as an asset."

Long says, "I feel I have the time and the energy to give back to this town what I got from it."

Lonsdale says she should be elected because, "I know the people's needs as well or better than anyone up here."

Stewart says his main asset is that he is "an experienced chairman. I identify the problem and bring it in."

Verner says, "I've put in long hours for this community in the past and I'm prepared to work just as hard in the future."

The aldermanic hopefuls differed on the subject of snow removal.

Verner says, "we should be starting right away, (after it starts snowing). We can't try to save money by keeping the snow on the street."

Stewart says, "If it's going to rain soon you can let it snow five or six inches... it's horrendously expensive to plow."

Lonsdale agreed with Stewart and said the reason it snowed for twenty hours before the snow plows started working was because the city was unprepared and because of a "new man on the job."

Long also felt that the city shouldn't plow if it is about to rain, but Allen stated "the municipal staff is duty bound to clear the roads."

Mayorality Candidates

Incumbent Mayor Elliott spoke of establishing a second water source and expanding the sewer system.

"The future needs to be met with a minimum of cost and time," says Elliott.

He also spoke of the continued redevelopment of Block 19, getting tour boats in the Blind Channel area and preparing for EXPO.

Patterson was up next with his many props and visual aids.

He presented a small table and told us that the mayor uses this when he doesn't want to deal with something. A cardboard cutout of closed council doors showed his disdain for closed or special meetings which he and the public cannot attend. The strong staff the council leans on had it's head taken off, but was made "longer" as a result, an obvious reference to the abolishment of the city administrator's position. His best laugh came when he held up a horseshoe shaped piece of cardboard and said "you have to have a U shaped piece of land to make a profit on selling."

Egon Tobus, who has been an alderman for the last five years, pledges an "improvement of services from the municipality to the home owner."

Tobus would also like to see more "innovative" ways of selling the industrial park. One such way would be to work out a lease possibility and set up a land bank system. Squamish and owners who want to set up in the industrial park can exchange their land with the municipality.

Tobus says he's "deeply concerned" about the people of Squamish and promises to act in a "receptive and responsible manner."

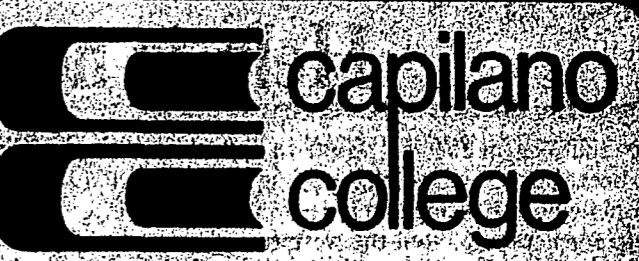

On the issue of EXPO argues Tobus, "there will be a benefit to some people in Squamish, but not as much as people think."

Tobus and Elliott did not seem to differ much in dyking. Both consider the maintenance of the dyke and continued dredging a priority.

When asked why he attends all council and school board meetings, Patterson replied, "Well, I go to school board meetings to see how far Rose Tatlow gets on her knitting, and I go to council meetings to hear what is actually said, and what comes out in the news. Sometimes there are interesting differences."

Elliott concluded by saying, "If you want the council of responsibility vote for me."

Tobus finished with, "a good politician is one who gets in the public eye without irritating it."

Help is needed

No doubt a number of people in Squamish have been touched by the plight of the people in Ethiopia who are facing starvation unless there is help forthcoming from the western world. Canada is playing a large role in offering this assistance and will continue to do so. But in order to make even the slightest dent in the suffering and starvation these people are undergoing, your help will be necessary. For many months the plight of these people has been growing and we are realizing that we may see the destruction of several races through the drought and starvation rampant in Africa. If you are interested in helping and wish to do something, the Canadian Red Cross has set up a special fund for this purpose. You can send your donations to The Canadian Red Cross (Ethiopian Drought) at 4750 Oak St., Vancouver, B.C. Your help is needed.

If this is restraint, what are the cutbacks

With the Conservatives starting out their four years in office with traditional Liberal excess, one begins to wonder what we have gotten ourselves into. The largest cabinet in Canada's history, the biggest staff budget for those ministers in the cabinet, and the unstated perks of high office such as flights to Florida, leads one to think the direction the government is taking is more of excess than regress. If there is to be restraint to cut down our deficit then the fat will obviously not be cut at the top levels, it will once again be trimmed from the social programs that have long been the helpless victim of Liberal style restraint. If the Progressive Conservatives really are progressive in how they will deal with Canada's mounting debt and hurting poor, then they should bite the bullet and restrain themselves from gorging at the public they have been kept away from for so long, and find a way to equitably and fairly get us of this mess.

Re-elect Jim Elliott

Saturday is municipal election day and there is really only one choice in the mayoralty contest. In the past few years, Jim Elliott has shown that he has the tenacity and the strength needed to lead the community through the next two years which could be critical in the growth and development of Squamish. Jim Elliott has secured the valley from flooding. Through his insistence on completion of the dyking program, despite the need for the financing from the municipality for a portion of the work, we have seen Squamish secure when there was serious flooding in other communities last month. Without the dyking program the valley would have been inundated and many homes and businesses would have been destroyed.

The industrial park has been a long time in the making and sales are just beginning. Hopefully if there is to be slow economic growth we shall see a stable development in this area with some new businesses attracted to Squamish to provide work for our young people as well as the adults. Working with senior governments will be most important in the next few years and Jim Elliott has demonstrated that he can do this. While an open door in Victoria and Ottawa is not essential, it is a big help. We need a stable, solid, municipal government. Jim Elliott with his experience and his interest in the growth and development of the community can provide this.

So, you think that was a pretty heavy snowfall on the first of November? It was, and it was an unexpected one but who would have believed that such a thing would happen. Rain, yes! It always rains heavily in October and November but never in memory have I recalled that much snow so early in the season.

One blessing is that it doesn't last long down here on the flat, but I am sure that everyone was glad to see it go. No, they weren't. My daughter, along with several other people seemed to like the white stuff. I do, too, as long as it stays on top of the mountains and them that wants it can go up there and get it! I hate driving in it, even if I am with good winter radials.

The snow on Thursday came thick and fast and by the time I got home from the office it was all I could do to get in the driveway. I kept watching it pile up even higher and wondered what I was going to do to get out in the morning if it didn't stop. About then it tapered off and I was hoping that I would be able to get out of the driveway when morning came.

Around 8 p.m. I was startled to see a bright light outside and to hear a big piece of equipment moving around. In the driveway was the biggest hunk of snow moving machinery I'd ever seen. It scooped that snow up just like it was fluff and piled it off on the side of the driveway. By the time he was finished I was sure the car would just walk out of there.

As he dropped the last scoop of snow off to the side and backed out of the driveway, he tooted the horn. I don't know who he was, but to the good Joe who took time out to plow out the 100 foot driveway for me, thanks, and may you always be as warm as your heart is. It was very much appreciated.

The snow wasn't all pleasant, though. The following day when I went up to Garibaldi Estates, gathering some news, the roads had not been plowed and I don't know what I ran over but I ended up with a big cut in one of my oldest new tires. The garage man said it couldn't be fixed so there I was slopping around for a day on the little tire they give you to use as a spare till you get to a garage. But it was frustrating both to me and to those who were driving behind me when I would go over 60 kms per hour with it. Wherever possible I pulled over to the side of the road to let my tailers pass.

But, I'd sure like to know what it was that I ran over that caused that cut in the tire! One good thing about the snow was that it went quickly. It also gave the newly repaired roof a good testing. There wasn't a drop of water that came through, yet in the heavy rains the week it flooded we had to put pails on the floor to catch the drops when the water backed up the eaves.

Thankfully we didn't get too heavy a rainfall and that it was snowing at higher elevations or we would have had a repeat of the Thanksgiving Day floods. Two of them in less than a month would be just too much!

Of course, Whistler loved the snowfall. Normally they don't get that much as early as this and it meant the season could begin just two weeks earlier. In fact they could ski on the flat at Whistler any time after the snow ended. Naturally they are hoping that the snow will continue all winter and there will be super skiing for the entire season.

All the skiers on the Lower Mainland will be happy and we are all hoping that they have an excellent season. All we ask is that they just drive a little more carefully and remember there are others on the roads as well!

This week there is an excellent article, along with some graphs on the flooding in Squamish over the past thirty years. That's since records were kept. Unfortunately it doesn't list the 1940 flood which saw water over the entire valley from the present Brackendale Store. In those days there were no dykes so the water spread around and this must have been one of the 100 year floods they talk about.

Earlier records show there was a big flood in the late 1920's and that must have been before 1927, the year we came here. Squamish was also flooded in 1922 when Britannia Beach was washed out and there was such a large loss of lives. There must have been others, too, almost as bad as those or maybe worse. But unfortunately no one kept records in those days. I can remember my husband telling me about some of the flooding they experienced in the early days: Those were the years when the bridges across the Mamquam River would go out just about every year to two and when the road bridge started to go, the railway crews would blow the railway bridge in order to lessen the damage.

When we first came to Squamish we had never had any experience with floods, didn't even know what they were, but I can assure you we learned. We lived on the flat, almost down where Dilor Industries are now and our biggest problem was the high tides at Christmas time. If there was a strong wind in the gulf the tides would often be two feet higher than normal and would come over the dykes. One low spot used to be where the Weldwood logging office is now and the tidewater came across there and up at Pemberton Road near the railway tracks. Sand bags along the road were a common sight in winter!

I remember one winter when the tides were high and the dyke, which then was in place just south of Victoria St. was breached and the water came pouring over. A sweet elderly Irish lady who lived in a house on Third Ave., just south of Victoria, told everyone that she looked up and "Glory be to God, I saw the sea coming in!"

I can remember coming home from Vancouver just after Christmas in the early thirties when we had to wade through water to get from the railway track to the house. The tracks were higher than the roads, taxis couldn't make it to the dock where the boat landed and we had to walk up from the dock, a distance of almost a mile and then slosh through the water to get to the house.

Not a very pleasant ending to a pre-Christmas excursion to Vancouver!

Thanks

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank the community of Squamish and the sponsors representing Hilltop House, North Vancouver Outdoor School and Brackendale Art Gallery for their co-operation over the past three months.

I will be leaving Squamish for another job in Katimavik in northern B.C. and the Yukon. It will involve visiting projects in Dawson City, White Horse, Fort Nelson and Dawson Creek. If you are feeling cold this winter, you can be sure I am! Special thanks to Thor Frostlev, Don Robertson, Peter Gordon, Tom Fowler and John Desroendell. Thanks for your support. Sandra Ecclestone, Group Leader, Katimavik, Squamish comments from parliament hill

BY LORNE GREENAWAY
MP FOR CARIBOO-CHILCOTIN

The B.C. forest industry was the main subject discussed at a break fast meeting of the Chamber of Commerce directors and MP Lorne Greenaway last week. "We all know what the problems are," Greenaway said. "They are waste, inadequate reforestation and the lack of research and development of new products and export sales." Regarding the latter, Greenaway said his government was going to try to put a forestry attaché into every embassy. "One of the good things about having a federal Ministry of Forests is that we now have the organization whereby this can be done. Agriculture Canada has always had agricultural attaches." Greenaway has evinced an interest in the proposal for the integrated forest-oriented complex proposed for Squamish since it was first mentioned a year ago and is prepared to talk to Sinclair Stevens and Don Mazinkowski about the proposal.

Bill Manson, who has been spearheading the project to secure the forest-oriented facility, said a similar area in Chilliwack which has dry land sorting grounds handles twice as much timber as there is in the whole Soo with no difficulty so there should be no problems with insufficient grounds. "All the local firms are spending too much money needlessly," Manson said. "One facility would serve the purpose more economically and efficiently." He mentioned ancillary plants such as a particle board one and other possible industries. Manson said that Georgia Pacific is looking at the possibility of a chip loading facility in Squamish. Ed Scott said the possible port facilities developing from the project should be stressed as they would be seeking federal aid for dredging. Manson added that Capilano College is interested in marine agriculture and there is a possibility that this could be tied in with the proposed development, using the hatchery planned for the area. Another concern was the re-establishment of forest lands which have not been satisfactorily restocked after logging. Manson pointed out that many areas should be reviewed and adequate stocking done. In this aspect he said the Chamber could play a major role in educating the uninformed about the role of our forests in our economy. "We should reshape our thinking in accordance with that of the Europeans," he said. "They don't take large chunks of land out of forest use for parks or other activities. In the Scandinavian countries, almost all the land is privately owned." Greenaway expressed concern about the activities of the forest service in the interior saying that he was receiving word that the forest service is fouling up the industry not the operators. Manson said the form of tenure was one of the problems, while he agreed that a lot of people know the problems do not lie with the operators or the forest service but with the governments. "Less than one percent of the money raised from forest taxation is returned to the industry," Manson said and this was a gross inequity. Greenaway summed up comments he had received from people in the industry by saying that they know the forest service is not doing a good job but people are afraid to say so.

Squamish elections - what are the real issues

All candidates meetings should have been held on Halloween - then both kiddies and adults alike could have gone around collecting all the "goodies" that were passed out. But, like too many sweets, the election goodies can sometimes cause problems. For one thing, they all cost money - the more a candidate promises and delivers, the more we, the taxpayers, must shell out. Another problem is that most candidates are informed enough about the "issues" to be able to make all the same great sounding promises to the voter. This year, there will no doubt be promises to work on selling more land in the industrial park, promises to improve our tourist facilities; and so on. If they all promise basically the same things, then how are we to decide who to vote for? The real issues are the old standbys: honesty, integrity, and hard work. Ask yourself these questions:

1. Which candidate will put the good of the community before any personal benefit and ensure that there is no possibility of a conflict of interest? Which candidate will abstain from voting on issues in which he or she stands to gain financially? Which candidates will resign from committees in which they may personally stand to gain? Which mayoralty candidate will ensure that appointed committees are fair and impartial?

2. Which candidate will likely do his or her homework - will have read the reports, will have looked at both sides of an issue, will have listened to the citizens, to the minorities, to the experts and so on? Which mayoralty candidate will ensure that appointed committees have the best resources, the best advice, the best facts on which to decide issues?

Nowhere is the adage "talk is cheap" more fittingly applied than to a politician. They can all promise the sun. The real issue is: which candidates will work hard for the good of the entire community and which candidate will work for personal gain, politics or on the basis of ignorance?

Does Squamish need a bus service?

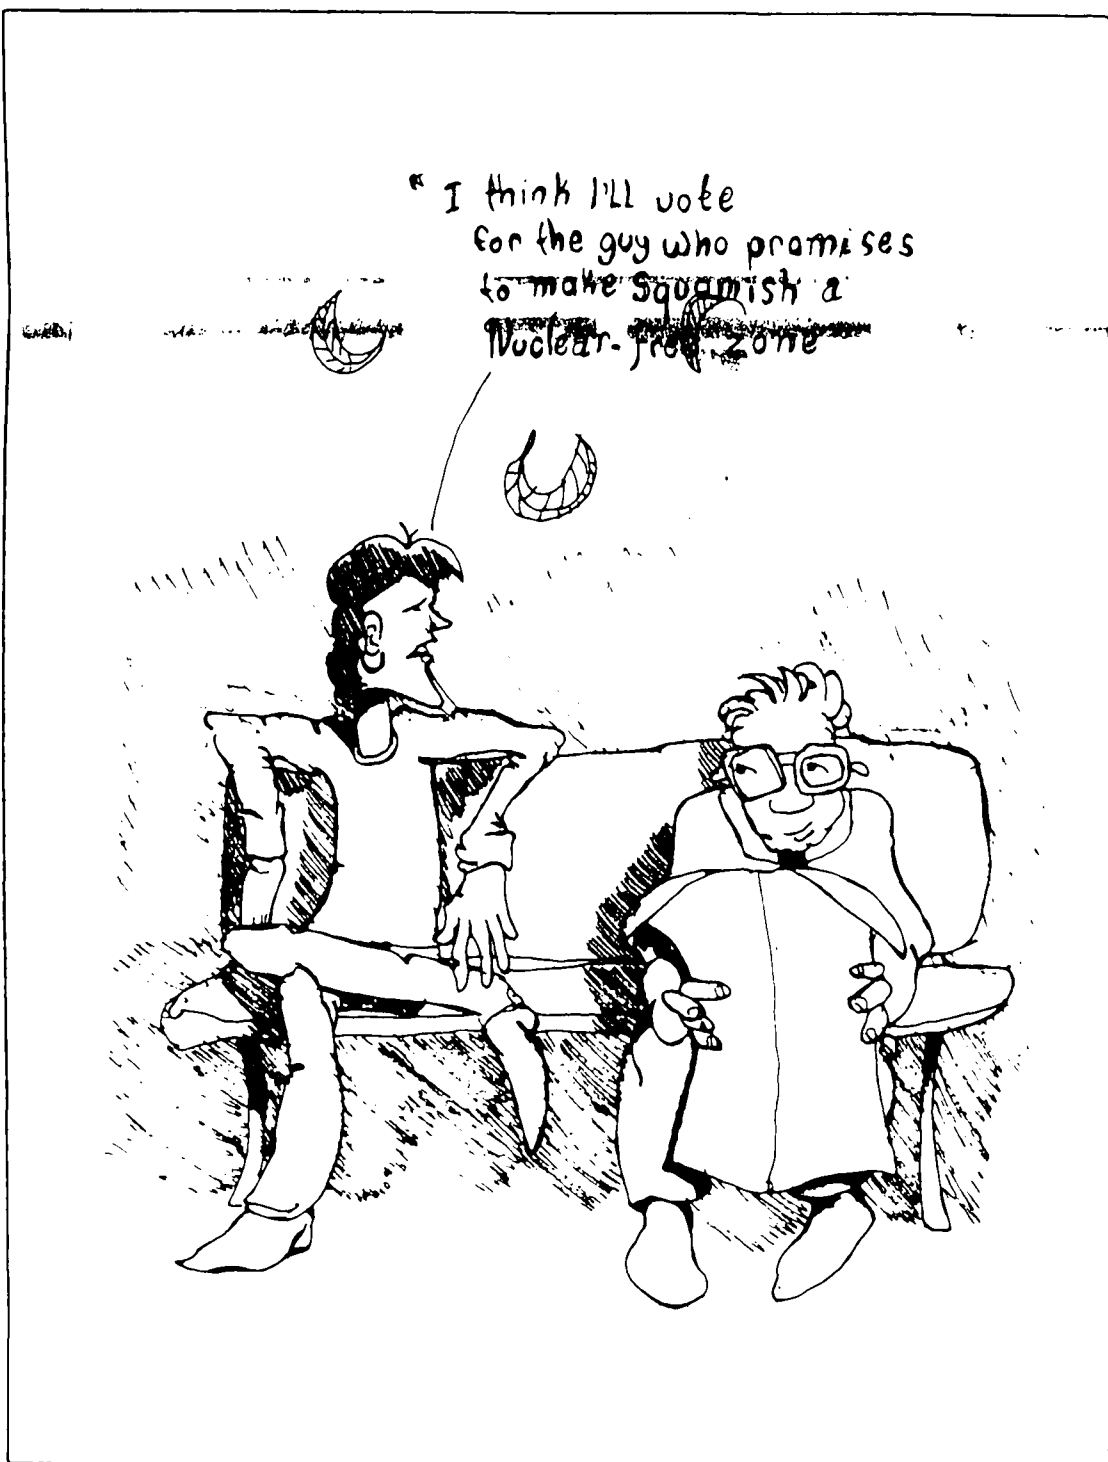

If you don't have a car, don't like hitch-hiking, don't like walking and have no friends who you can rely on for rides, don't come to Squamish. Some say Squamish needs a bus system and that we should undertake studies to get transit rolling in Squamish. Others believe the need doesn't justify the expense in these inflationary times. What do you think?

Hugh Skinner: "No. It's not far to go anywhere in town. You might need one from the outlying areas, say from Valleycliffe to here or from Brackendale to here."

Charles Natrall: "Yes, they do. It's hard to get from Cheekye, Mamquam and Brackendale to here."

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Royal Canadian Legion Branch No. 277 invites you and your neighbours to the annual Christmas Bazaar and Tea on Saturday. Doors at the Legion open at 10 a.m. till 2 p.m. There will be a good assortment of crafts and novelty items, bake table, and you will also have a chance to enter several raffles. I know "Minch" Minchin has his Christmas cake baked and ready to be won by some lucky person.

All good wishes go to Dorothy and Jim Sawatzky who departed last Friday to make their home in Westbank. They have resided in Squamish for the past 18 years. Earlier this year, Jim retired from the Highways Department.

Bigger than ever ACW Bazaar Nov. 24

by Maureen McDougall

Continuing a tradition of many years, the women of the Anglican Church are again ready to host the community at our Christmas Bazaar and Tea to be held at the Civic Centre on Saturday, Nov. 24 at 1 p.m.

Each year we try to find new ideas for crafts that are both attractive and useful. In these times of recession, we have tried to make many of the items of a practical nature for gift giving, and so you will find lots of tote bags, pillows, doll's clothing, and many low priced novelty items suitable for children to give as gifts. A gourmet food table is a new addition this year.

Santa Claus has promised to include us on his busy itinerary again with cookies to hand out. This year we shall even have someone to paint children's faces as they enjoy browsing around the tables. The little people will be able to fish for a treasure in the fish pond on the stage while mothers are free to shop.

The usual assortment of tables will be there, and a hearty tea will be available in the same location. We want everyone to know that the entire proceeds of the bazaar are used for the work of the church. We ask your support on the 24th, and look forward to visiting you then.

Snow covered field hockey

Adverse weather conditions did little to stop the Howe Sound Secondary School field hockey team.

Playing on what coach Peter Hotston described as "dreadful, frozen, snow-covered fields," the local squad finished in the middle out of a pack of seven other competitors in the provincial Single A championships held at Lumby on November 1-3.

Paced by such standouts as Yvonne Hunter, Karen Garrett and goaltender Heather McLaren, Howe Sound compiled a record of four losses in five games but still came away happy with the results. While the lone victory came at the expense of David Thompson, a club Squamish lost out to in the Vancouver District finals, defeats were handed out by Esquimalt and Charles Bloom in round-robin action.

Agassiz and Summerland meanwhile took advantage of them in the consolation round. "Except for that one loss against Charles Bloom (the eventual provincial champs)," Hotston said, "we were very competitive. On the frozen ground, though, the ball was bouncing around a lot and clets were useless. They wouldn't penetrate."

Still, Hotston feels it has been a great year for the team. To advance to the provincials, Howe Sound had to beat out some tough competition, walloping West Vancouver High 8-1 to take the North Shore title and giving up a goal in the final five minutes against David Thompson to lose 1-0.

That defeat still was enough for the second best ranking in Vancouver and thus for a trip to Lumby.

Curling at golf club of raising $13,000. Thus, as Luke Plunkett was quick to point out, "out of a $365,000 tab all the club has to do is borrow $15,000 from the bank."

The only other unknown factor is curling rocks, which would cost $22,000 for a four sheet rink. Already, the club has two sheets of rocks, 32, and is hoping the Golden Agers, who curled this season in Vancouver, can earn a grant to supply the remaining two sheets.

But it was more than just the financial aspects which accounted for the nearly unanimous decision. Besides the fact that both club executives and the joint committee were confident and enthusiastic that the project was a sound venture for curlers, golfers and squash players as well, they were adamant that it be known that each club would run itself.

They would remain as separate clubs with separate memberships. Moreover the curling and golfing seasons are complimentary, thus providing twelve month activities at the clubhouse which would in turn generate more revenue. Part time workers would also be given full time jobs.

During the summer the empty rink could be used for tennis or an indoor driving range.

In the end, however, all three organizations, the squash club included, stand a chance of attracting new members since the community as a whole will benefit from the services the new facility will have to offer.

"We are not trying to expand and build a huge complex," Plunkett explained to the golfing members of Wednesday, "but we are trying to maximize, to build a beautiful facility, to help a great (curling) club which is one of the best in the Lower Mainland."

And while to the curlers he explained the importance of maintaining the club's autonomy and getting an opportunity to play on home ice once again, to the golfers Plunkett's, and the committee's selling point was that they could guarantee the venture "would not cost the golf club any money."

"In fact," he said, "I'll go the other way, it'll generate money."

And with those words the Howe Sound Curling Club was handed a future, which was all it ever wanted in the first place.

As an added note the club has recently been informed of another fund raiser being held in the Fraser Valley. Last year Cloverdale hosted the event under the organization of Tom Campbell and raised close to $6,000.

5 This season the bonspiel has moved to Langley, along with Campbell and it is to be held on March 8-10. Already man teams have made enquiries about entering and so locals are requested to act fast. Fees are $125 per team.

In closing both curling and golf members would like to express their gratitude to the hard working executives on the joint committee. Such men as Ed Scott, Owen Carney, Gary Hendrickson, Jim Kilburn, Don Cruickshank, Don Patrick, Ken Mores, Stu Lemcke and Luke Plunkett have put in long hours to make a dream come true.

New owners at Irlly Bird

Peter Gordon and Dan Sullivan have taken over Irlly Bird. Dan says he couldn't find a job after selling the Squamish Hotel three years ago, so he and Peter decided to give Irlly Bird a whirl.

Ken Beattie is taking care of the Whistler end of things. Everyone is looking forward to a lot of hard work and long hours so that they will be able to provide the friendly courteous service their customers are looking for. If you don't find it tell them, they're still looking.

It's good to see them taking on such a large project. Hopefully Squamish people will show these young mer their support.

Sawdust & Shavings

Halloween is over but we couldn't let it pass without asking if you saw the staff at the Credit Union all dressed up for the event. Apparently they got in the act and some of the costumes were weird and wonderful!

Young people not looking for jobs

"Young people in the area served by this office seem to have given up looking for jobs because there just aren't any," Gordon Chow of the Squamish office for Canada Manpower told the press last week.

From 1981 when there were an average of 802.5 people looking for work, the figures climbed the following year to an average of 820.25.

In 1983 the average number dropped from 820 to 572, probably reflecting the lack of jobs and the records to the end of September this year indicate that the average is 421, a further drop.

Chow said that the 1981 census figures show a total of 1,800 young people in the labour force. This is made up of 1,000 males and 800 females.

I got the car into the carport and wondered if I was going to be able to get out again in the morning. The snow was still coming down and seemed to be piling up. About 8 p.m. I heard a noise, looked out and saw some bright lights and there was a big machine busy taking snow off the driveway. It's about 100 feet long and that's a lot of digging. He did a super job!

I couldn't see who it was but thanks and a tip of the Tailow hat to you, whoever you are. It was most appreciated.

Busy week for Squamish Terminals

With three ships in port in the early part of November and ten more expected in the four week period from November 17 to December 15, these will be busy weeks at Squamish Terminals.

On November 17, the Star Mindanao will be loading pulp for the Mediterranean.

Loading for Europe will be the Star Malaysia, due in Squamish on November 25; the Star Hong Kong, due on December 10 and the Star Everwin, due in port on December 24.

Japan will be the destination of the Star Carrier, which will be loading cargo on November 22 and the Star Sulu, expected between November 15 and November 25.

Pulp for India will be loaded on the Bhava Buti, due in port between November 25 and December 1, while the Dicto will be in Squamish in early December to pick a cargo for India.

China will be the destination of the Caly, expected in port in late November and the United Drive, due on December 15.

Rent a Royal Hudson

Do you want that puff of steam, the wisp of smoke and the chug chug of an outmoded form of transportation? Has your Ford given up the ghost and your nerves wrecked from driving the highway? If so, you and 1000 of your friends can charter the Royal Hudson, complete with cars and crew, to wind its way up Howe Sound to Squamish where you can surprise the local citizenry with your presence and shock the local Chamber of Commerce as they scramble to find the bus transportation to your picnic that your tour guide messed up.

For only $8500 ($13,500 if you want the Britannia to sail up to meet you) it is yours to use.

John Currie, Assistant Deputy of Operations for the Ministry of Tourism says "it's our intent to increase the opportunity of our charter service on the Royal Hudson."

So far the train has only had two charters this year, one during September and one during the operating season in May.

Chamber of Commerce Manager Ollie Long says there should be some sort of liaison between the Ministry of Tourism and the chamber over the Royal Hudson. The late September charter saw hundreds of international accountants stranded in Squamish with no bus transportation to their picnic waiting at Shannon Falls.

Long, with the help of Mayor Jim Elliott and Alderman Corrine Lonsdale, saved the day with borrowed school buses. Long says she, the chamber, or someone in the town should have been notified before hand so they could be prepared.

Currie says that while on regular summer service, the Hudson is scheduled to stay over in Squamish for an hour and a half, there is no intention to do the same with the charters, therefore no need to inform the town. The problem with the buses was not the problem of tourism he says. "There was a mix up somewhere up the line with the ground operator who chartered the train," he says.

Skiers will still be left out in the cold if they want to charter the Hudson to Whistler.

"There's a problem with getting the Royal Hudson to Whistler because it lacks turnaround facilities. It would have to go past Whistler," says Currie, "up to this time the charter turnaround has been restricted to Squamish."

Study reveals facts about Squamish River floods

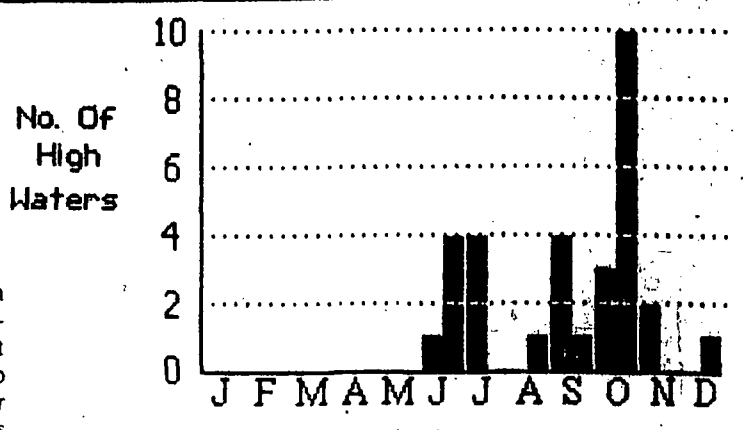

The most likely time period for a flood on the Squamish River is from the middle of October until the middle of November. This is one of the conclusions of a recent study of the Squamish River by Earth Science 11 students at Howe Sound Secondary School.

The students used data that has been gathered by Environment Canada since 1955 from a gauge on the Squamish River near Cheekye and from the Elaho River, 50 km north of Squamish.

The students noted that only one period of high water (December 27, 1980) has ever occurred between November and the end of May. Also, high waters associated with the spring runoff can occur from the beginning of June until the middle of July but only once (June 27, 1968) did flooding occur.

Not all high water peaks produce flooding - only if the river discharge exceeds about 1700 cubic metres per second is property damage likely to occur. Since 1955, this has happened six times (1957m '68, '75, '80, '81 and 1984). The record discharge was in 1957 when the average daily discharge was 2230 cubic metres per second; by comparison, the costly 1980 flood had an average daily discharge of only 2020 cubic metres per second but was very destructive because so many additional homes had been built in the flood plain. Even more sobering is the fact that a 200 year flood would probably result in daily discharges of more than 3000 cubic metres per second - more than 40% higher than the 1980 flood discharge. Figures supplied by consulting river hydrologist David Jones of Vancouver suggest that event the record 1957 flood was no worse than a one in thirty-five year flood.

Other conclusions:
 This study puts recent floods in their proper perspective - it indicates that they really haven't been all that bad compared to what we may get on a 200 year return frequency. This reinforces the belief that we must maintain, if not strengthen, our flood plain bylaws and that we must constantly upgrade our dyking system if we wish to minimize the chances of the type of disastrous flood that occurred at Pemberton this year.

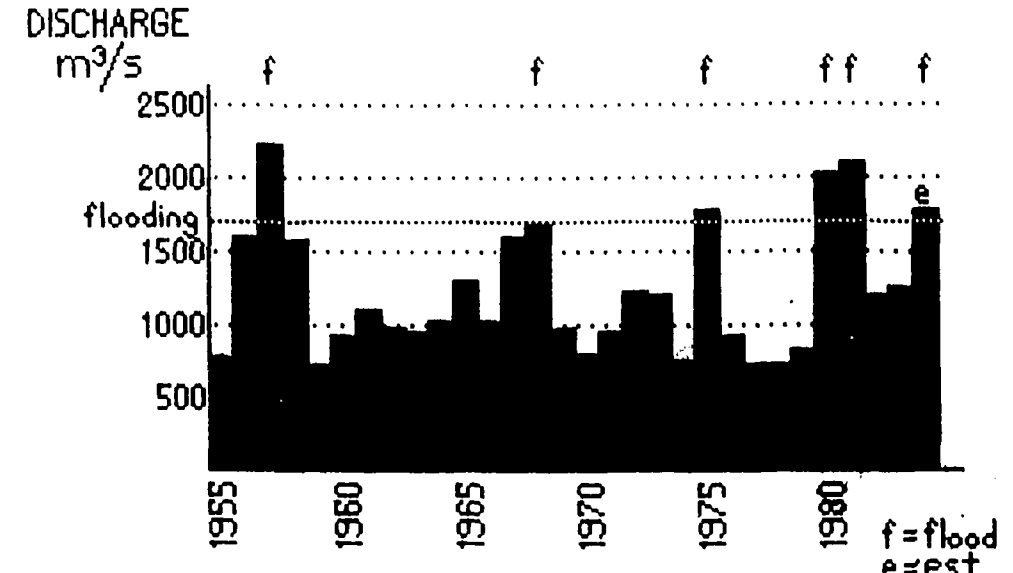

SQUAMISH RIVER PERIOD OF HIGHEST WATER (1955-84)

This graph shows the number of times that the yearly high water on the Squamish River has occurred in a given two week time interval. It is clear that there are two periods of high water: during the spring runoff in June and July and during the fall months. Note that the river most often reaches its highest level in the fall, especially during the last two weeks in October. Not all high waters, though, produce flooding.

SQUAMISH RIVER YEARLY MAXIMUM DISCHARGE (1955-84)

This graph shows the maximum daily discharge of water for every year since 1955. Damaging floods occurred in 1957, '68, '75, '80, '81 and 1984. The highest river level every recorded in this period was 2230 cubic metres per second in 1957 but this was still 35% lower than the expected 200 year flood level. The destructive 1980 flood had a maximum discharge of 2020 cubic metres per second and probably was a one in twenty-five year flood. The graph indicates that floods now are occurring more frequently than in the 1950's.

SOAP OPERA WEEK

Meg Ryan's world has stopped turning for now

By Kimberly Redmond

I miss Meg Ryan. Can you tell me whether or not Betty Anderson, the character Meg played on "As the World Turns," will be returning to the show? — B.J., New York, N.Y.

Miss Ryan opted not to renew her contract with the CBS soap and will not be returning. Taking over the role of Betty is soap new-comer Sherry Stoneman, who has a striking resemblance to Miss Ryan. Miss Ryan began her career at the University of Wisconsin at

Jack P. Wagner

Although they're brothers on "The Love Boat" (Wagner, James Burt and P. Wagner, Fitzroy Jones) are not related in real life.

He confessed, "All My Children" isn't Bobby's real mother, who is still in the picture. Bobby's mother is — J.B. Spencer, M.D.

Are you ready? Bobby is the result of Cliff Wagner's affair with Sydelle Thorpe, who was murdered by Sean Connery. Cliff and Nina, who married after Bobby was born, have raised Nina supposedly can't have children of her own. Got that?

(Have a question about soap operas? Write Kimberly Redmond at 290 Park Ave., Room 602, New York, N.Y. 10166. Questions cannot be answered personally but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

Milwaukee. She appeared briefly on "Hill Street Blues," but her "ATV" role marks Miss Ryan's first recurring television role.

60's poster artist and 80's illustrator Bob Masse is showing an 18 year retrospective of his works at the Brackendale Art Gallery until the end of November.

Artist Ho Sung Kim painting a watercolor as guests look on at the Korean art show earlier this week.

Delicate paintings highlight art show

Delicate watercolors, in muted shades, or brilliant with color in the flower exhibits, were the highlight of the art exhibit presented at the Highlander Hotel early this week.

The artist, Ho-Sung Kim, is one of the traditionalists, and noted for his flower and bird paintings, such as the Pine Tree and Cranes with rugged trees and delicate birds. Both the old pine trees and the crane are symbols of longevity.

Particularly appealing was a painting of two white cranes with brilliant red beaks; a delicate painting of an owl, and some of small animals.

But it was in his flower paintings that his artistry really came alive. One painting of flame red azaleas seemed almost alive and there was delicacy in his portrayal of the chrysanthemums.

While the guests invited to attend the private showing of his paintings on Monday night watched, he delicately painted a tree branch with several small birds, which he presented to MLA John Reynolds.

Remembering the 60's in color

"Those were the days my friend, we thought they'd never end, we'd sing and dance forever and a day..." sings Brackendale Art Gallery Manager Thor Froslev as he and 60's poster artist, painter and commercial illustrator Bob Masse sort through 18 years of nostalgia.

Those were the days. The coming of age of the post war baby boom generation with the sexual revolution, drug culture, political awakening and rebuffing of all authority defines the sixties for many. A renaissance in music and art reflected this culture. Masse says the Beatles summed it up with the Blue Meanies in their drab gray world with the Beatles' Yellow Submarine bringing color to it. Masse says the hippie movement brought color to the world just as the Yellow Submarine did.

Masse was a third year art school student in Vancouver when the "Summer of Love" began in 1967. He started doing art work for concerts in Vancouver "on the side..." and it just snowballed from there.

Masse did more than just draw posters, as he became one of the leading figures in the West Coast phenomena of psychedelic art. The liberal use of basic colors make the posters jump out at you. A purple and red Grateful Dead poster Masse did from the late sixties creates illusionary effects if looked at long enough.

"It was a breakthrough, in visuals," says Masse. From doing multi-colored, hand separated posters for concert companies (which he often charges only $10 for the art work plus getting concert tickets and the privilege of meeting the musicians) Masse progressed to work for such turn-of-the-decade clubs in Vancouver as the Afterthought, the Retnal Circus, and Gassejacks. The Collectors, Chilliwack, Ten Years After, Jethro Tull, Country Joe and the Fish, Rita Collage and nearly every other act to come to Vancouver between 1967 and 1974 were preserved in poster by Masse. The posters became so popular that after a while they became ineffective as advertising because they would be removed soon after being stuck up.

By 1974 Masse's poster printing days were over.

"The fad had worn off and they couldn't afford the cost of doing them," he says.

A year of painting in the realism style (Masse was influenced by artist Alphonse Muka) proved financially unsuccessful.

"To make a living on the West Coast as an artist you have to paint West Coast themes like landscapes and fishingboats," Masse who says the East Coast goes more for his kind of art.

From his year as a struggling artist Masse turned full time to commercial illustration.

In Los Angeles he created album covers for several "unknown bands" and worked for Bill Graham concert company in San Francisco. Though the money was great in the States, he came back to Vancouver because of the atmosphere.

Much of his current work is black and white illustration for ads. The 1983 Grey Cup poster is his, as is a color poster for loans from the Surrey Credit Union. What he really wants to do, though, is paint.

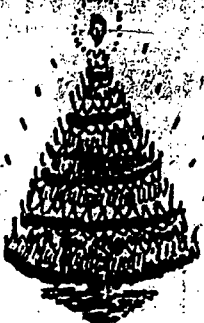

"I want to get more into painting," says Masse who looks fondly back on the sixties. "I'd love to be doing it again. It was a great time period. The hippie trend was something that came and went and I was very much a part of that."

Masse's showing will be at the gallery until the end of November with many of the rare posterprints for sale. It is the first showing he has ever had of his "old stuff" and Masse says "it should be great for any of the old timers."

Scouts are ready to roll again! We welcome Ralph Marsh as troop leader and Norm Shaw as assistant leader. The first meeting is in Mamquam Elementary School gym on Wednesday, Nov. 7 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Late registrations will be taken for boys age 11 to 14 years.

preciate, protect and live with their environment the beautiful countryside around us.

In scouts this is put into practice-camping or hiking activities are being planned once or twice a month. Camping in the snow? Of course! Ask last years scouts about the great stew they cooked over a fire in the snow! Scouts also emphasize service to their community and will be looking for projects. If you have a suggestion please call 898-5024.

Congratulations to the Venturers who are now an independent group - 7th Squamish. They recently had a camping trip to Lillooet Lake.

Beavers and Cubs are well into their winter programmes. Brackendale area needs more beavers, call 898-5024.

The cubs are holding their annual sixers and seconders camp this weekend at Rowe Creek. It looks as if they will be continuing the tradition of "snow camps". Thanks to the community for their support of the bottle drive and to the parents and boys who turned out to collect and sort.

Pemberton: The floods are over and scouting is ready to start but leaders and group committee members are urgently needed for all sections. Uniforms and training are provided free for leaders. The leaders plan and carry out the programmes for the boys.

The Group committee, formed by the parents, consists of chairman, vice chairman, secretary, treasurer, fund raiser, quartermaster and parent representatives. They usually meet once a month and take care of organizational details i.e. registration, fundraising, finances and events such as camps, father son banquets, supplies and liaison with the District Council.

If you can help or would like to register your son, please call Greta Fotsch at 894-6384.

Edith Cuttler was one of the vendors selling her excess wares at the Squamish Flea Market Saturday. Although it has only been open three weeks, the market, located on Pemberton Avenue across the tracks, is already attracting many weekend bargain shoppers.

Managing your money

Anytime is a good time to buy a Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP).

A great many Canadians have a misconception about RRSPs. They think you should only invest in one, or add to an existing one, in the first two months of a new year. In fact, you should contribute to a RRSP when ever you have the funds available.

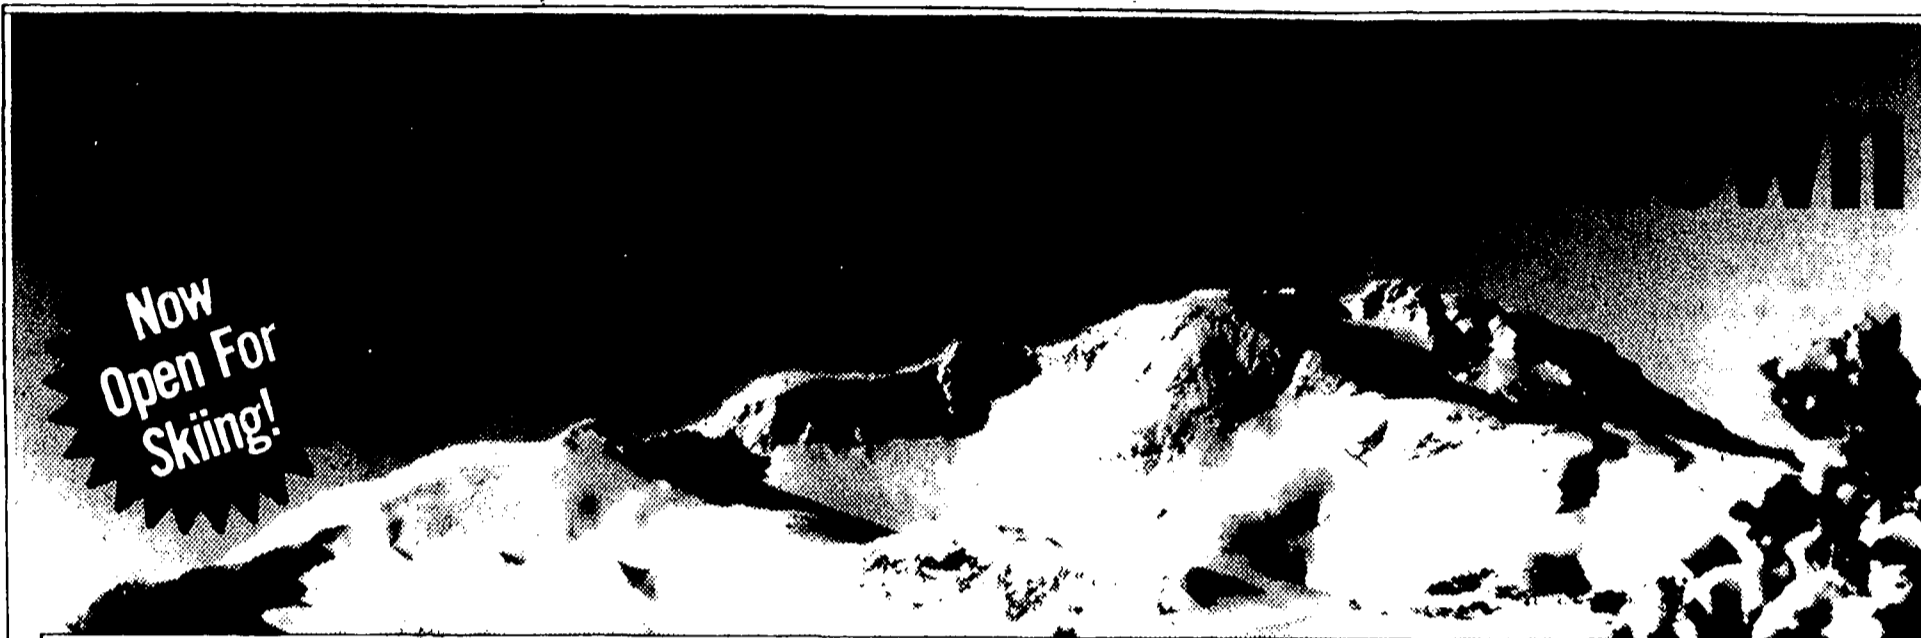

But there is one very definite deadline which owners of a RRSP have to abide by, or else pay a lot of needless income tax.

That is, if you reach the age of 71 in 1984, before the end of this calendar year, you must move your RRSP funds into another form of investment vehicle. If you don't, the holder of your RRSP investments at the beginning of 1985 is required by Ottawa to "cash in" your RRSP and send you the money after deducting a certain amount of withholding tax.

What this means is that you may have a substantial amount of income derived from your RRSP savings back in your possession in the 1985 taxation year. You will have to declare it as taxable income when you make out your 1985 income tax return in the early part of 1986. That could eliminate a large part of the tax advantage you obtained over the years as you built up your RRSP nestegg.

The company that sold you the RRSP in the first place should remind you of the tax liability you face if you've reached the age of 71. However, this may be overlooked by the company. It is your responsibility, not the holder of your RRSP funds, to ensure you do the right thing with your money before the end of a calendar year.

Part II will follow next week.

November 16 is the deadline for applications to Canada Works, the 250 million dollar program designed to provide 47,000 people with immediate employment this winter. But we need the bright ideas of businesses, individuals, organizations and municipalities to make it happen.

Canada Works projects employ three or more workers full time for up to 52 weeks to be eligible for federal financial support.

To make your ideas happen, pick up an application and guide at your local Canada Employment Centre or Employment Development Branch Office today. If you have any questions, or need help working out your proposal, program officers will be pleased to help you. But don't delay. Even the best ideas can run out of time.

Stephanie Hudson from Mountain FM and Maureen Gilmour from the Squamish Times judge crime prevention posters submitted from school children around Squamish.

Posters tell message for crime prevention

National Crime Prevention Week was observed across Canada last week. The Squamish RCMP detachment held a poster contest in the elementary schools in the district. Youngsters in kindergarten through grade seven put great imagination and thought into their posters.

Constable Cliff Doherty was in charge of the contest in which there were three categories for kindergarten - grade two, grades three - five and grades 6 and 7. The teachers in the six schools were asked to pick two of the best from each of the three categories.

In the first category, Daryl Simons, a grade two student at Garibaldi Highland School was the winner; Zoe Aldridge, a grade four Valleycliffe School student won for the grades 3 - 5 category and in the senior grades, Warren Scott in grade 6 at Mamquam was the winner.

The three grand prize winners will each receive computer educational games and all finalists (approximately 36) will be treated to a luncheon. The poster contest was a follow-up to the visit of "Safety-Bear" to the six schools. He covered all aspects of safety rules such as: not playing with matches or medicine, not talking to strangers, observing bicycle rules and being made aware of vandalism and the consequences.

The RCMP's Neighbourhood Watch and Block Parents work hand in hand in the prevention of crime.

An excellent Crime Prevention display was set-up in the Highlands Mall during Nov. 4 to 10.

The judges for the poster contest were Stephanie Hudson and Maureen Gilmour.

Katimavik corner

By Rick Oldfield

Hello again Squamish! So far you've heard from two Montrealers and a Kingstonite, so we figured it was time you heard from a Maritimer (Hooray).

I'm from St. John, B.B. not St. John's, and coming from an area of small rolling hills to an area of high steep mountains and low flat valleys is quite a change. The only similarity is the pulp mill here, except the pulp mill in Saint John smells a lot worse.

Since I've been here in Squamish, I've met a lot of interesting people. It's amazing what you learn just from listening to them too. They want to know about our experiences in Katimavik, and they talk about experiences they've had in their lifetime. I've heard practically the whole history of Squamish and the surrounding area and it's really interesting for being such a small town.

The hardest thing about Katimavik is leaving for the next rotation. Especially in a small town like this where it is easy to meet a lot of people and make friends. When we leave for Owen Sound, Ont. on Nov. 28, we'll not only be leaving Squamish but a lot of close friends.

So thanks for all your hospitality and unforgettable friendliness. You're a great little town. Take it from a Maritimer.
