New Water restrictions

Squamish Water Supply Low

The current heat wave and lack of rain has caused the Stawamus River, Squamish's chief source of water, to recede to a dangerously low level.

Residents on Thunderbird Ridge turned on their taps to find the water had run out on July 9th. John Payne, Works Superintendent, attributed the shortage of water to overuse of water for sprinkling.

"The amount of water being used was beyond the capability of the system to supply and we ran out of water," Payne said in a report to council.

"With some adjustments to the system and by rerouting some water from other areas and running around turning off lawn hoses, we were able to have water back on Thunderbird Ridge by midnight," Payne added.

To combat the problem, Payne ordered restrictions on watering. The original restrictions were: "Odd numbered houses on odd days, even numbered houses on even days and only between the hours of 2 p.m. and 6 p.m."

Payne has since bowed to public pressure to change the hours of watering to a time more practical.

The new watering times are 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. The same odd-even day restrictions apply.

Payne told council at the July 16 meeting that he had come close to calling for a complete ban on sprinkling. "My concern is that the water in the Stawamus River is low," Payne told council.

"Thirty-three days without rain - if this continues we could be even worse off."

Payne had come under criticism by members of the public and council over the chosen hours of sprinkling restrictions.

"I realize the best time to water is after the sun goes down," Payne told council. He said the problem with allowing people to water at later times is that people forget to turn off their sprinklers before going to bed and leave them on all night.

In addition, Payne said it is more difficult to catch violators in the dark.

"I have to have a time when I can actually see sprinklers are off."

Payne told council people have been very sympathetic about the situation and there have been few violators.

"The people of Squamish have been really good," Payne said.

"The weather patterns are going to have to change," he added.

Council decided at the July 23rd council meeting to alter the watering times.

Council grants rezoning for car lot

Peter McKay thought he was approaching council with a simple request.

McKay appeared before council at the July 16 meeting requesting that council authorize that a bylaw be raised for the rezoning of a piece of his land at the entrance of town from Commercial 3 to Commercial 5 to allow him to build a car lot.

Council passed a motion authorizing his request but not until after much discussion and some dissent from council members.

Alderman Corinne Lonsdale opposed the motion.

"I have nothing against car lots," Lonsdale said. "My concern is for adjoining lots. You can see in the future that whole strip developing into truck repairs and other types. I don't feel it's what we want for the entrance to town."

Alderman Norm Verner also spoke against the rezoning.

"I don't really favor rezoning at this time," Verner said. "I think we have other C-5 areas that can be used."

McKay defended his proposed car lot, saying he would keep his car lot neat, clean and orderly so that it would be attractive from the highway.

"I think it's a very attractive-looking business," McKay told council. "I don't think a car lot is an ugly hideous thing. I certainly think it would be an asset."

The lot in question is serviced by water and Hydro, but there is no sewer. Under Ministry of Health regulations, the lot cannot be used for any establishment which employs over 10 people. McKay expects to have fewer than 10 employees to conform to Ministry regulations.

"We've tried to get restaurants in that location but there's no sewers," McKay said. "Right now the sewer is a big drawback."

Lonsdale suggested that McKay consider putting in sewers to allow for other development of the lot.

"I'm sure if the sewer was in now you could put that land to a higher usage."

Alderman Dave Stewart defended McKay's request.

"I think it would be an asset to the community," Stewart told council. "It will provide taxes and employment. God knows we need every job we can get."

"Historically, we've had a lot of problems with that spot," Stewart added. "This is probably the best presentation we've had in years. This town's got to stop being negative. We've got to grow up. Sure we'd like to see a nice big restaurant there or a hotel but it's not going to come."

Acting Mayor Wilf Dowad agreed with Stewart.

"It will allow another automobile agency into town," Dowad said. "We'd get some revenue, some action on the corner. Mr. McKay is a longstanding businessman in the community."

Although council passed the motion to raise the bylaw, McKay was advised by the Technical Planning Committee that his application for rezoning would have to be forwarded to the Advisory Planning Commission, to the Ministry of Highways for approval and to the Ministry of Health for the placing of a septic tank, and further, that any design of a building would have to be forwarded to the Planning and Design Committee for recommendation to council.

Council conducts dog hunt

The dog may be man's best friend but to some members of council, he's become a nuisance.

Council passed a motion at the July 23 meeting authorizing the hiring of an extra person at the Pound for a period of one month in an attempt to decrease the number of dogs running loose and annoying people.

Council also asked that a report be forwarded to council after the one month period has expired detailing the results of the additional personnel and suggesting improvements to the present system.

Alderman Wilf Dowad, apparently the sole dog lover in the bunch, voted against the motion.

"It's normal for dogs to bite once in a while," Dowad told council. "The problem is not 90 percent of the dogs, it's one out of so many that is vicious. We're not against dogs, we're against dogs that are biting."

Added Alderman Corinne Lonsdale: "Is it not accepted that a dog is allowed one bite?"

The problem of dogs becoming a nuisance in the community was brought to council's attention by Alderman Chuck Harvey who said he recently received a complaint from a citizen who had been bitten by a dog.

Harvey originally introduced a motion that council approve the hiring of an extra person at the Pound for a period of three months.

"There is a need for increased effort to control dog population in our community," Harvey said.

Added Lonsdale: "I've had complaints from Brackendale. Perhaps the duties of the dog catcher could be changed so that he could hit the streets more often."

The Municipality currently employs one full-time person at the Pound and one part-time person. City Clerk Bill Bloxham suggested that council merely extend the hours of the part-time employee.

Alderman Dave Stewart expressed concern about the additional cost involved.

"There's quite a cost to running this Pound," Stewart said.

But Harvey was adamant that something be done about the dog problem.

"It's time we got off our posteriors and make something happen," Harvey said.

Council Briefs

Council accepted the recommendation of the Works and Services Committee that council be prepared to offer for sale a strip of land 50 feet wide adjacent to the East and South existing property lines to the existing Squamish Gas Company for approximately $30,000 plus all legal, survey, rezoning and Official Community Plan amendment costs.

Council directed John Payne, Works Superintendent, to contact the Waste Management Branch of the Ministry of the Environment and request a change to the permit at the Sanitary Landfill site to allow burning of tires.

Council authorized the Works and Services Committee to proceed with the preparation of tender documents for the drainage and paving for two blocks on Loggers Lane and Vancouver and Victoria between Loggers Lane and Second Ave., including a portion of Winnipeg St.

Council authorized John Payne, Works Superintendent, to go to tender on the snow plow, road paving and Westway Ave. sidewalk.

Council directed Acting Mayor Wilf Dowad to send a telegram to the Ministry of Municipal Affairs, extending council's best wishes to John Taylor, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, upon his retirement after 35 years of service with the Province.

Alderman Norm Verner requested that benches be placed at the cemetery for the use of people visiting the cemetery.

Council agreed to enter into a lease agreement for use of a school bus by the Rotary Club for transportation of members to a baseball game at Squamish Night Night at Capilano Stadium in Queen Elizabeth Park, Vancouver.

Council authorized the Treasurer to increase the Comprehensive General Liability from $3 million to $5 million at an additional premium of $1,125.

Council further directed that all Department Heads assess their operations and report to their respective committees on potential dangerous areas within the Municipality.

Acting Mayor Wilf Dowad proclaimed the period of time beginning August 1st and ending August 5th as being recognized in the District of Squamish as "Squamish Days Loggers Sports" and whereas the Squamish Days Loggers Sports are celebrating their 28th anniversary, and deserve appreciation, recognition and support of every citizen.

Alderman Wilf Dowad informed council that the library addition is now completed. Dowad added that the final expenditure on the addition was within the allotted budget with the approved increase.

Council adopted a motion introduced by Alderman Corinne Lonsdale that a letter be drafted to go to provincial authorities stating the lack of exposure of Expo in other provinces.

Timber Queen gets a raise

Inflation has affected everyone, even the Squamish Timber Queen.

Council agreed to a request from Deborah Piche, Chairperson of the Timber Queen Pageant Committee, that the Municipal grant to the Timber Queen travelling fund be increased.

The grant was increased to $500 from $300. Council also agreed to a request from the Committee to further increase the gift to Miss Squamish from $100 to $200.

Piche, in a letter to council, said: "I realize that we have received the $300 grant for 1984 but would like to request for 1985 that council consider extending the $300 to $500 to help us cover the rising costs we encounter each year.

"This money is used for our Queen and sometimes our Princesses who we feel are ambassadors of Squamish. These girls travel to other communities throughout the province within the year, meeting other people and extending greetings and promoting our municipality."

Council unanimously agreed to the request saying the Timber Queen was good for tourism and public relations.

Council also agreed to meet with the current Timber Queen to receive a report of her year as Timber Queen.

School Board Briefs

The question of the school grounds at Myrtle Philip School in Whistler was discussed and board members decided to explore the possibilities of alterations in the policy of having school grounds at each school maintained and used by the schools.

It was suggested there might be some agreement with municipalities regarding these with the municipality maintaining the grounds while schools used them during school hours and the municipality the rest of the time.

This would result in community-school use of the grounds, possibly more utilization of them and less cost to the board.

The board decided to grant the contract for roofing of four elementary schools in the area to the lowest bidder, Newport Roofing for $48,650.

The schools in question are Mamquam, Brackendale and Squamish Elementary in Squamish and Signal Hill Elementary in Whistler.

The board decided to grant $100 to the Upper Squamish Valley Telephone Committee which is seeking to obtain telephone service for this area.

The board has a school site in the Upper Squamish.

Artist's conception of the completed Squamish float now under construction.

Construction of the float being built to advertise Squamish in parades and pageants throughout the province started on its second stage last week after the metal framework, built at the Squamish shops of the B.C. Railway by workers in their spare time, was completed.

The metal framework was built in four evenings with volunteer labor. Sonny Davis, who was in charge of the project, said Dave Bandy designed the metalwork, while Pete Harrison and Ken Miles worked with them on the project.

The frame will now be moved to a garage where the rest of the float will be built. Bill McNeney of the Squamish Float Committee, said the committee is composed of local Rotarians and others interested in seeing the float built and taken to various festivals throughout the province.

The initial cost of the project was $6,000 for the float and $4,000 to take it visiting. The running gear was donated by Triton Steel while the BCR supervisory staff built the framework.

Half the funding for the project came from the municipality and the Rotary Club which each donated $2,000 and the Kinsmen Club which donated $1,000. The balance of the funding is hoped to come from various firms in the community.

The float is hoped to be ready for the Vancouver Seafest while other places it is hoped to visit will be the

Port Moody Golden Spike, New Westminster Hyack

Festival, Steveston Salmon Festival, Maple Ridge Days, Richmond South Arm parade, Seattle Seafair, Bellingham parade, Hope, Victoria, Nanaimo, PNE parade and White Rock Sea Festival.

One of the advantages of visiting other festivals is that they in turn will send their floats or entries to the annual Squamish Days parade in August.

The float will have a replica of Mount Garibaldi with the Sea to Sky logo on it, the Royal Hudson and a logging truck, space for Miss Squamish and loggers bucking a log. Around the perimeter will be ships, yachts and other items depicting Squamish.

Countdown to Squamish Days

With only two days remaining before the beginning of the annual five day Squamish Days celebrations things are getting hectic. Behind the scenes, the decorating committee has been putting the finishing touches to the Timber Queen pageant, the grounds are being groomed to perfection and everyone is hoping that the weather which has been clear and warm for so long, is going to co-operate.

The eight Timber Queen contestants have completed their busy schedule, with exercise and deportment classes, instructions in make-up and public speaking and are ready, or as ready as they ever will be, for the big day.

Mike Tickner is hoping it won't rain on his parade, and is delighted with the number of entries in this annual event which is a highlight of the weekend festivities. Bed race plans are complete with the events laid out and all the officials briefed on their duties.

Timber Beast contestants are perfecting their acts and this streamlined show promises to be better than ever. Truck rodeo contestants have been practicing on lots preparing for Monday's big event and for those who wouldn't miss the Elks' Loggers Breakfast on Sunday, Tony Sprenkels promises that there will be two food lines, and you won't have to wait so long for your hot cakes and the trimmings.

Contestants have been practicing for the big two day show; hot saws have been worked over, axes sharpened, bucking saws filed to perfection and the birlers have been getting dunked daily as they prepare for the big events.

At the grounds, concession stands have been erected, the poles, logs and other items needed in the competitions, prepared for the entrants; the show secretary has her lists and numbers ready and Al McIntosh has been keeping his vocal cords lubricated for the task of announcing the events during the big celebration.

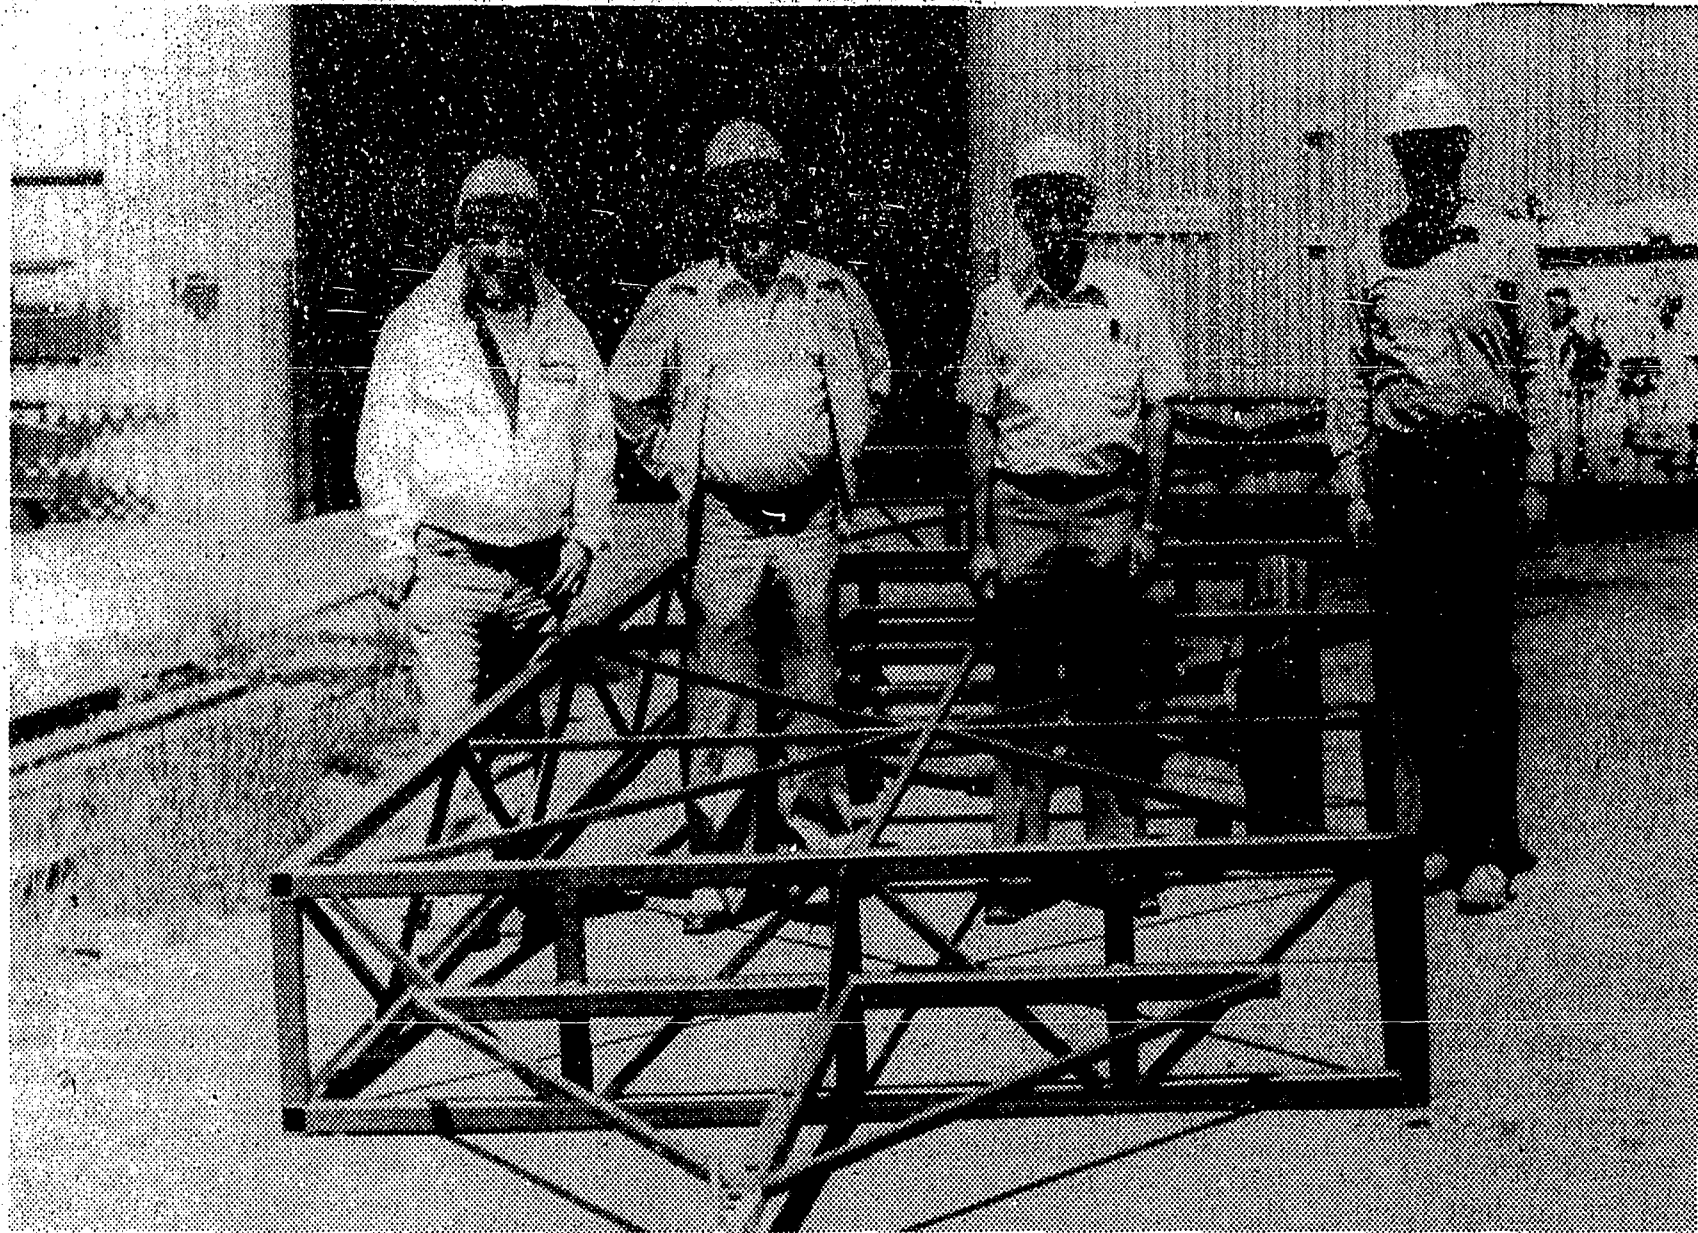

In the business area, windows have been decorated, people are wearing Squamish Day buttons and guard hats getting into the swing of things.

So, if the weatherman will co-operate and give us real "Squamish" weather for the five days of the annual celebration, everyone will be happy.

Thank You

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our friends whose cards, flowers and expressions of sympathy were of great comfort to us at our time of bereavement. A special thanks to Const. R.G. Dolhan of Squamish Highway Patrol, who broke the news of our son Terence's accidental death to us as kindly and gently as it is possible to give such news. Also thanks to Rev. Jack Purdie and Squamish Funeral Chapel for arranging the memorial service.

Left to right are Pete Harrison, Ken Miles, Sonny Davis and Dave Bandy, who came back in the evenings to build the framework. The float, designed by Mike Tickner, will be completed and used in a number of parades throughout the province to advertise Squamish.

Board approves fire safety program for schools

Squamish Fire Chief, Pat Hampson, met with the school board last week and discussed the October Fire Drill program which he asked to have done through the schools.

The program is scheduled for Oct. 9, which is part of National Fire Prevention Week in Canada.

The program was originally carried out in Alberta and was a major success. Holding fire drills was the culmination of a major awareness program to show families how to plan to get out live and then carry out these plans.

It was held jointly by local fire departments and MacDonald's and was designed to save lives.

The plan involves an in-home-drill, a plan for the family to escape from the house if there is a fire, and then implementing the plan. The program originated in the schools and spread to the homes and then the entire northern part of the province was involved in the massive drill when the fire alarms rang on Oct. 9.

Hampson asked to have the program carried out in the schools in the district and the board agreed even though it normally does not like to have a commercial tie-in with any program.

"In this case, trustee Jim MacDonald said that "the pros far outweigh the cons."

The board approved having Hampson meet with the principals of the elementary schools to discuss the pro-

Tiger Williams coming back

Tiger Williams, the popular hockey player and former member of the Canucks Hockey Team, will be in Squamish again for the annual Loggers Day Sports. Tiger, who works with Tim Br Mart, and is also well known for his work with children, as well as being a famous or notorious hockey star, was a special guest at the big events last year and is delighted to be coming back again this year. His many fans and friends will be glad to see him again.

Salute to Squamish Days

This week marks the culmination of a year's planning for the five day celebration of Squamish Days. To a visitor, the events seem to be spontaneous but they really represent hours of work and planning.

The Timber Queen committee has been busy throughout the year arranging for trips for Miss Squamish and her princesses and in the last month the candidates have an almost non-stop agenda as they prepare for the big day.

Bed races are the results of arm-twisting and scheming in order to get sufficient contestants and just ask the Timber Beast convenors how many heart attacks they've had prior to the big day with nightmares about having only one contestant.

And there is endless planning and preparation for the novice and open logging shows. Work starts almost as soon as the events end to prepare for the next one and each committee brings forth recommendations for the coming year.

The parade, the truck rodeo and all the other events take lots of work, lots of letter writing and endless phone calls but somehow everything seems to come together at the last minute and we have another highly successful Squamish Days celebration.

Everything that can possibly be done ahead of time to make the five day celebration a success has been done, and the hard working people behind the scenes deserve a great deal of credit for their many hours of work and planning.

Now if the weather will just cooperate and give us the sunshine for the weekend it should be the biggest and best Squamish Days ever.

Editor's note: The following is a copy of a letter sent by Squamish Citizens for Peace to the Special Joint Committee on Canada's International Relations Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, Lorne Greenaway, M.P. and others.

Chairmen:

As concerned citizens, we welcome this opportunity to express our deep concern over Canada's proposed participation in research on the Strategic Defense Initiative. We firmly believe that the S.D.I. is dangerous and unworkable, and that Canadian support for it would be inconsistent with Canada's role in the international community.

The S.D.I. is dangerous because it is destabilizing; it will lead only to further escalation of the arms race, much as MIRVs resulted from the last anti-ballistic missile program. S.D.I. is dangerous because it will inevitably appear to the "other side" as part of a first-strike strategy. It is dangerous because it upsets the already precarious balance of nuclear terror.

The S.D.I. is unworkable in the same way that other ABM programs were. Even if ICBMs were the only threat in a nuclear war, it has been shown conclusively that S.D.I. could not be 100 percent effective against a full attack. In addition, it does little or nothing to counteract bombers or cruise missiles. Further, it is difficult to believe that a computer and satellite based system could be infallible.

The S.D.I. will not make nuclear weapons "impotent and obsolete". It will not bring about the dismantling of nuclear arsenals. U.S. President Reagan's offer to share the technology with the U.S.S.R. is commendable, but if he actually plans to do that, then why waste so many billions of dollars on a system we presumably won't need? It would make a great deal more sense to pursue a policy of mutual and verifiable disarmament and to redirect research and development dollars where they are needed: medicine, agriculture, and education, for example.

Canada's support for the Strategic Defence Initiative would be inconsistent with our perceived role as a peacemaking nation. Our reputation and credibility are at stake. The S.D.I. clearly violates the 1972 ABM treaty, since only the naive believe the research does not equal development of anti-ballistic missile systems. The S.D.I. is obviously contrary to the United Nations resolution opposing an arms race in space. Political support for the S.D.I. would violate the promises given by all the last federal election to pursue the peace initiatives undertaken by Mr. Trudeau.

Canada's role in the world should be that of an independent voice for peace and disarmament. We stand to lose everything and gain little by permitting U.S. paranoia to dictate research priorities in this country. We appeal to the Joint Committee to:

1. Recommend that Canada reaffirm and maintain its integrity as a peace-seeking nation by saying "no" to the Strategic Defense Initiative in the international forum.

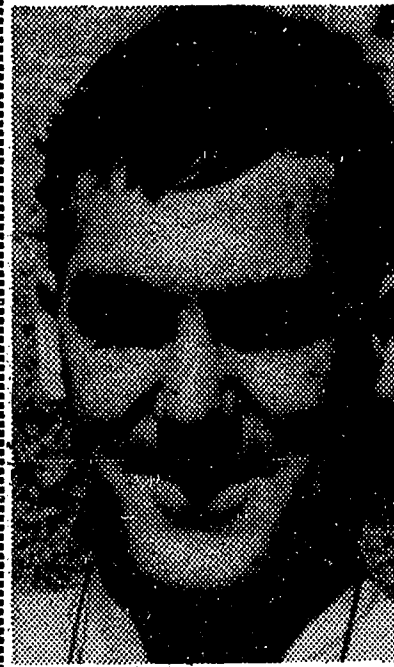

2. Recommend that Canada choose not to participate in any way in the S.D.I. research, nor allow such research to be undertaken in Canada.

Opinion Time

"What do you think of the current heat wave?"

Scott Dawson: "It's not hot enough. It should be at least 110 degrees every day. The sun should be up longer, too. (I work nights)."

Nancy Bean: "Too bad for the loggers but it's nice for pregnant ladies at the lake."

John Collins: "Wonderful. Wish it would rain only for a day, though, or at night."

Rodger Bean: "Fun. I want to be tanned. I can go to the lake, swimming lessons and climb trees."

Coming back from a holiday in the east Kootenays one can understand just how hazardous the forest situation is in the interior of British Columbia. Accustomed as I am to the green west coast, it was a surprise to see the fields around Princeton, lush and green where they were watered but dry and golden just like late fall where the hay had been cut.

All the roadsides were parched and dry, the shrubs were drying up, even through Manning Park where it is usually fresh and green, the hillsides were bare and dry. You almost felt that if you breathed roughly it could start a fire.

It is usually cool in Elkford, as it is high in the mountains just west of the Rockies, but not this time. It was so hot that we just stayed in the house waiting for it to cool off in the evening. The fires in the valley by Lake Windermere were just across the mountain range from the Elk Valley and each evening the smoke would come over the ridges, giving us the most beautiful sunsets, with the sun a huge ball of flaming orange, almost obscured by the smoke.

Travelling east on Highway No. 3, you cross several ranges of mountains and the topography changes continually. Through Manning Park paintbrush and wild lupin lined the roads and through the Fraser Valley and the lower reaches of the hills there were lots of ocean spray shrubs. Then in the interior these gave way to the mock orange which bloomed in many rocky spots along the road. Near Grand Forks there were lots of chicory plants, their soft blue blossoms looking like bits of the sky snipped out and strewn along the roads.

It was very hot and I stopped over in Grand Forks on my way east. By the time I reached there all I wanted was a cool motel with a swimming pool! I found one and the cool water was refreshing. I was up early next morning and found the rest of the drive delightful.

Cyndy had planned a camping trip at a mountain lake on the B.C. - Montana boundary and she had left early with Ursula and Sedge, telling me that I could come along later with Gary and Walter. You had to follow a maze of logging roads that twisted and turned every which way between Highway 3 and the U.S. border. We saw several deer on the road and, at a salt lick just off the road, a cow moose was spotted. On the way back we saw her again. This time she had a calf with her and Cyndy said when they had seen her she had twin calves.

As we climbed higher into the mountains (the lake was at about the 6,000 foot level) we found lots of wild flowers. The road was lined with golden yellow monkey flowers and arnica; there were clumps of lupin and in some spots the fireweed was already starting to blossom. We also found a pretty blue flower that belonged to the skullcap family and some meadow rue. But there really wasn't time to look too closely at the sides of the road because it was a three hour trip and we wanted to get there before dark.

There was a small camp site at the lake. One of those maintained by the Forest Service with a few tables and spaces for camping. Cyndy had warned me that it might be cold but I woke up in the middle of the night with my feet like ice! By the time I put on some socks and an extra T-shirt and snuggled under the blankets again, I soon warmed up. But it was definitely cold. The stars seemed so close and hung above us while the moon was still very bright.

Meals always taste better in the open air and with four excellent cooks in camp, our food was superb. Gary was up at the crack of dawn fishing but while we had ordered fish for breakfast, no such luck. Poor Sedge was very unhappy when he didn't get any but he definitely tried.

There was a log across the end of the lake where the outlet stream flowed down a valley and while no one ventured to swim in the lake (it wasn't called Frozen Lake for nothing) Sedge and Gary both managed to slip off the log and get wet, much to our delight.

It was wonderful to sit in the fresh air beside the lake, watch the fish rise and listen to the loud demands for food from the fledgling flickers in the broken tree beside our tent. She must have been trying to persuade them to leave home because her pauses between feedings became longer and longer. However, they weren't too happy about it and from time to time, there would be loud, raucous cries emanating from the little ones.

There were lots of flowers in the open areas alongside the lake with clumps of rosy pussy toes, queen cups hiding in the shade at the base of the trees and grove lover in the open glades. The gooseberry and blueberry bushes were going to bear huge crops when the season arrived and Cyndy made a mental note to come back and pick them.

It was lovely to sit there, reading a book or doing needlework, relaxing and soaking up the peace and silence. As long as the sun was up the bugs were not too bad but when it started to get cooler in the evening they came out with a vengeance. Not just the mosquitoes and gnats but the sand flies and no-see-ums and they are horrible! There were also some of the large mountain flies which take a real bite out of you when they attack.

Despite all efforts only two fish were caught but they were delicious. But that didn't prevent Gary from being determined that he was going to come back and try again. He was already devising means to catch those he knew were in the lake, even if they wouldn't succumb to his lures. Probably the trouble was that there were so many insects around that the fish were not hungry and even the most fascinating fly wouldn't have lured them.

It was my first camping trip in many years and while sleeping in a tent trailer is a far cry from sleeping on the ground the way we used to, it was wonderful to be able to get out into the mountains again.

I would have liked to have been able to go with them when they climbed the ridge beside the lake, hiked down to the far end and then came back along the shoreline. Even if they did get scratched and bruised in the process, it must have been worth while. Now twenty years ago...

We were tired and dirty when we got home on Sunday night and certainly showers never looked so good. Somehow we don't realize how lucky we are to have all these modern conveniences until we are without them for a day or two.

Washing in the water on the shore of a lake and bending over a stream to brush your teeth just don't seem to compare with modern conveniences!

Local cyclists finish journey

Twelve hundred miles later and 20 lbs. lighter, Rick Harry is home after completing a province-wide cycle to raise money for a drug and alcohol treatment centre.

Harry, who along with local drug and alcohol treatment counsellor Richard Baker, cycled from Masset, B.C. to Vancouver in just under one month. They managed to raise $5000 in pledges.

The money will go towards a badly-needed drug and alcohol treatment centre in northern B.C. The $5000 raised is just the beginning for an estimated total of $1.5 million needed for the centre.

Harry and Baker began the journey on June 24th in Masset and reached their final destination — Vancouver — on July 16 to a welcoming reception at the Vancouver Native Indian Centre.

The two cyclists were joined by riders from various reserves along the route.

Harry said although the journey was long, tiring and often times unbearably hot, it proceeded smoothly with no major mishaps. The riders were able to keep to a pre-planned schedule.

"It was really tough in some places," Harry said, "because of the heat and steep hills. We had to struggle. But we seemed to help each other along."

Said Baker, who is the only drug and alcohol counsellor for the Squamish area: "We would look at a hill and think how big it is and find out that it's not so big after all. Life is the same way, except we quit before we get to the top of the hill."

"It took a lot of work," Baker added. "But it was a challenge."

The cyclists chose to travel on dirt and gravel backroads instead of the main highways even though it meant the going was tougher. Baker said this allowed them to meet different people and see more of the countryside.

The hardest part of the route was from Quesnel to Mt. Currie, where the expanse of steep and narrow roads seemed endless to the riders. Harry said it was windy and cold in Masset where the journey began, and rainy from Prince Rupert to Hazelton. After that, however, the group experienced good, often very hot weather.

The riders cycled on weekdays and rested on weekends at various townships and reserves along the way. A typical day began at 5 a.m. The most miles completed in a single day totalled 95.

Harry and Baker, both recovered alcoholics, hope their accomplishments will encourage others to seek alternatives to alcohol.

Local riders travelled 1200 miles by bicycle through B.C. to raise money for a drug and alcohol treatment centre. The cyclists arrived in Vancouver, their final destination on July 16. I'm having a fight with my girlfriend, who insists that Karen Valentine played an English teacher in "Room 222." Please convince Denise she's wrong before we end our friendship! — C.J., Stamford, Conn.

Karen Valentine

Sorry, C.J., but Denise is right. In the first season of the ABC series, Miss Valentine's character, Alice Johnson, was a student teacher at Walt Whitman High School. But in the second season, she was made a full-fledged English teacher. Now kiss and make up! I watch "Days of Our Lives" all the time, and wonder if Josh Taylor, who plays Chris on the NBC soap, is related to actor Robert Taylor. They do look a bit alike. — L.B., Parma, Ohio

They may look somewhat alike, but they are not related. Robert Taylor had two daughters by his wife, Ursula Theiss. For your information: Josh Taylor recently appeared in a Burbank, Calif., stage production of "Birdbath," a two-character play in which "Capitol" star Julie Parrish co-starred.

I was a Marine in World War II, who served in Okinawa, for 44 months. I was stationed with a man named Richard Butkus, and wonder if he could be the father of the Dick Butkus I see on television. I have a photo of us together, and would like to mail it to him. Any suggestions? — F.F.C., Trenton, N.J.

You can write to Butkus, the football-player-turned-actor, in c/o Hel-Nik Farms, Route 5, Box 204, Deland, Fla. 32720. Good luck!

Marianne Moutenay, Miss Squamish 1984

Eight girls to compete for Timber Queen Crown

Eight lovely young ladies are competing for the coveted Timber Queen crown and the right to represent Squamish at the Miss PNE contest this year.

Last year's queen was Marianne Moutenay who has represented Squamish at a number of events throughout the province. She will preside at the coronation of this year's queen on Thursday, Aug. 1.

For the next month there will be a busy program for the girls covering everything from exercise and keep fit classes to deportment classes, public speaking and choreography.

In addition, the girls have a heavy schedule of other activities, embracing everything from a tour of Weldwood's logging and lumber operation to a ride to the top of Whistler Mountain, a plane trip, a day on Howe Sound on a yacht, luncheon with the mayor, the firemen's picnic and a trip on the Royal Hudson.

The girls made their first appearance, complete with banners, at the Canada Day celebrations and they will all take part in the annual Squamish Days festivities from Aug. 1 to Aug. 5.

At their first meeting, with sponsors and the pageant committee, Sean Adkins, who will be in charge of the setting for the pageant, explained the setting and what he would expect them to do the night of the pageant. Lisa Cumming spoke to them about the choreography, pageant chairman Debbie Piche emphasized the importance of attending every function and being on time. She also outlined the rules of the pageant while Linda Hampson, who is in charge of the girls' social calendar, stressed the importance of writing "thank you" cards after every occasion.

Miss Squamish told the girls about her exciting, fun-filled year, starting with winning the competition in Squamish, through to the Miss PNE contest and her many trips to various places in B.C. both with her princesses and by herself.

"I have made some wonderful friends among those I met at the PNE and at the other pageants," she said, "and I am sure that by the time the next month is over, that you will all be firm friends as well."

This year's contestants are:

Favorite old yarns

There was a land boom in Squamish in 1912 and 1913. The name of the town was changed to Newport, and because there was another town of the same name in B.C., the name was changed back to Squamish.

Besides, the school children, who were important in those days, too, voted for the change.

But the boom continued and in 1913, Rod Mackenzie paid $5000 for the lot on which the Cariboo Cafe now stands. Ten years later he purchased the adjoining lot for ... $35.

Pauline McNeney has some super souvenirs lined up for you and you have your choice of a number of items all decorated with the Squamish Days logo, our own Paula.

These include 1985 Loggers Day buttons, coffee mugs, beer tankards, baseball hats, embroidered golf shirts and caps and T-shirts in assorted designs for both children and adults.

These will be on sale in booths located in both downtown Squamish and at the grounds.

Fastball tournament

A men's fastball tournament is always held in conjunction with the big Squamish Days weekend and this year sixteen teams are competing in the three day tournament which starts on Saturday, August 3rd at Brennan Park.

World championship tree climbing trophy

The Labatt's World Championship Tree Climb will be one of the special events at the annual Squamish Days celebrations this year for the fifth time.

Randy Campbell of Ladysmith won the climb and the world title in 1981 with a time of 30.69 seconds. In 1982, it was won by Greg Downing of Castle Rock, Washington with a time of 36.23 and in 1983 by Glenn Erickson of Maple Ridge.

In 1984 the championship was won by Dennis Butler of Oregon, who was the reigning world champion at the time. He established a record with a time of 28.99. Butler also received the Robbie Carroll Memorial Trophy.

This will be an exciting event to watch with the world title and the Labatt prize money riding on it.

Charmaine Hendrickson,
Miss Squamish Credit Union.

Rhoda Reece, Miss
Squamish Firefighters.

Timber Beast competition

Introduced two years ago and now a popular feature of Squamish Days is the Timber Beast contest, held on Friday night after the bed races.

Judges select the winner from among the competitors vying for the crown. They are judged on their individual talents, how they bribe the judges and their renditions of a Timber Beast costume.

Earlier in the evening they will take part in the bed races and show their skills in choking a log.

The beard growing contest will also be a part of this event.

For a hilarious time and something different, come to the Civic Centre after the bed races and see the novel and exciting Timber Beast contest where the biggest and best beast will be chosen.

Did you know?

There was a half-mile logging railroad that hauled the timber down Taylor Way slope in West Vancouver to the water? It was abandoned in 1909.

A Saga of Logging

Seventy years ago, permanent settlement of the Squamish Valley began. The pioneers cleared the flats of its alder growth to make room for home and hay meadows. The first real attempt at logging, however, was not made until the mid-1890's. The first logging show in the valley was under the management of Mr. Felks. The camp was located in the Upper Squamish near the mouth of the Ashlu River. Huge booms of logs were floated down the Squamish River to tide water where tugs picked up and delivered them to the sawmills on Burrard Inlet.

Near the turn of the century, two brothers, Al and Charlie Barber, cleared the area which now is Brackendale. A labyrinth of skid roads criss-crossed the valley. First oxen, then horses were used to haul the timber over these corduroy trails to the river. Later the Barbour brothers brought a donkey engine to replace the horse teams and a new sound echoed through the stands of fir and cedar.

A new century saw the establishing of another big camp near the site of the present day cemetery. The Yap Company cleared the Cheekye area, using long shoots to skid the logs down to the river.

Later, when the Howe Sound and Northern (later PGE and now BCR) had pushed its steel into Cheakamus, this company took advantage of the rail facilities to transport its logs to the booming grounds at Squamish.

About 1911, another company, owned by a Mr. Lamb, took over this stand of timber.

Meanwhile, Mr. Young was busy building the valley's first sawmill on the tide flats at the end of the village's main street.

This was a colourful organization employing a crew of turbaned Hindus. Several years later, Mr. Dickson assumed the management.

Two shingle mills were also in operation before the outbreak of the first great war. The Stewart establishment was located near the present-day site of the Esso station while the Harris mill was situated on the bank of the Pilchuk River.

Returning to logging itself, a group, commonly called the French Boys, set up a "show" around 1914. This outfit is credited with being the first to use high rigging extensively in the valley.

Two years later, a well-known company, Day and Welsh, moved into the Upper Squamish and a company managed by Norton MacKinnon started taking logs from the Ring Creek area on Round Mountain. This later outfit was the forerunner of the largest logging show to set up in this valley. Merrill and Ring, an American company, started operating after the war in 1927.

The first camp was located in Habrich (or Skunk) Hollow with another group of bunkhouses at tidewater. Later the operation moved across the Mamquam Valley to Edith Lake, east of Lake Alice.

Here a settlement of close to 600 men was set up and miles of railway tracks covered the mountainside from the Cheekye River southward.

Logs were hauled by train to the dump near the mouth of the Stawamus River. The Merrill and Ring outfit operated until the early years of the depression and was followed by a number of small logging shows.

One of the largest of these was the Keeley Lumber Co. which had its firsts in the Mud Creek area. Later this company changed its name to Empire Mills and again to Squamish Lumber Division, moved its camp to its present location near the government wharf.

The Stolz Company was another logging firm that was active in the valley during the depression years. It logged the west bank of the Squamish River.

The Dent family settled in the valley during the '30s also and built the sawmill which is now owned by Squamish Lumber Division. Their logging firm, Squamish Towing, grew into a large organization and was brought out by MacMillan and Bloedel only a few years ago.

The beginning of the Second World War heralded the change to truck logging here. Johnnie Hunter was the first to use truck extensively but the idea soon grew.

Many other names have been connected with logging in Squamish: the Carsons, the Greens, the Halvorsens, the McCormacks, the Olsens and the Barrs, the Lewis boys, the Garrisons, the Binnings, the Seymours and the Boscarriols are just a few of the families that have their roots deep in the forest industry.

From one truck to a fleet of trucks, from small trucks to gigantic creatures, the industry was making progress in leaps and bounds. New areas were being opened up and logging roads were cut where only mountain goats had tread before.

It would be impossible to name them all because every home in the valley is either directly or indirectly connected with logging because this is our basic industry.

Bed Races always a crowd pleaser

The bed races, a feature of the Friday evening celebrations during Squamish Days are always a crowd pleaser.

The parade of the beds starts at 6 p.m. on Friday, August 2 and is followed by the races where teams of five, four pushers and one rider, all dressed in night attire, race up the street trying to beat their competitors.

The fun that results when a bed tips or something falls off has to be seen to be believed.

And the costumes are wacky and wonderful with everything from night shirts to baby doll pajamas. And you haven't seen anything until you've seen some burly logger's hairy legs below a pair of frilly baby dolls.

This year a new event has been added, a wheelbarrow race in which the contestants, a two-man team dressed in pajamas and slippers, race half the length of the bed race route with one member pushing the wheelbarrow while the other rides in it!

Good Luck!

to all competitors, and a warm welcome to all the visitors of the 28th annual Logger's Sports Days.

The parade, one of the weekend's highlights

Mike Tickner says this year's Squamish Days Parade on Sunday morning, will be bigger and better than ever. He has a total of five bands promised, along with lots of floats and other entries.

Kelowna and Port Alberni are sending floats along with their queens, there will be queens from Prince Rupert, Pemberton, Richmond, and Surrey along with others and some of these communities are sending floats as well.

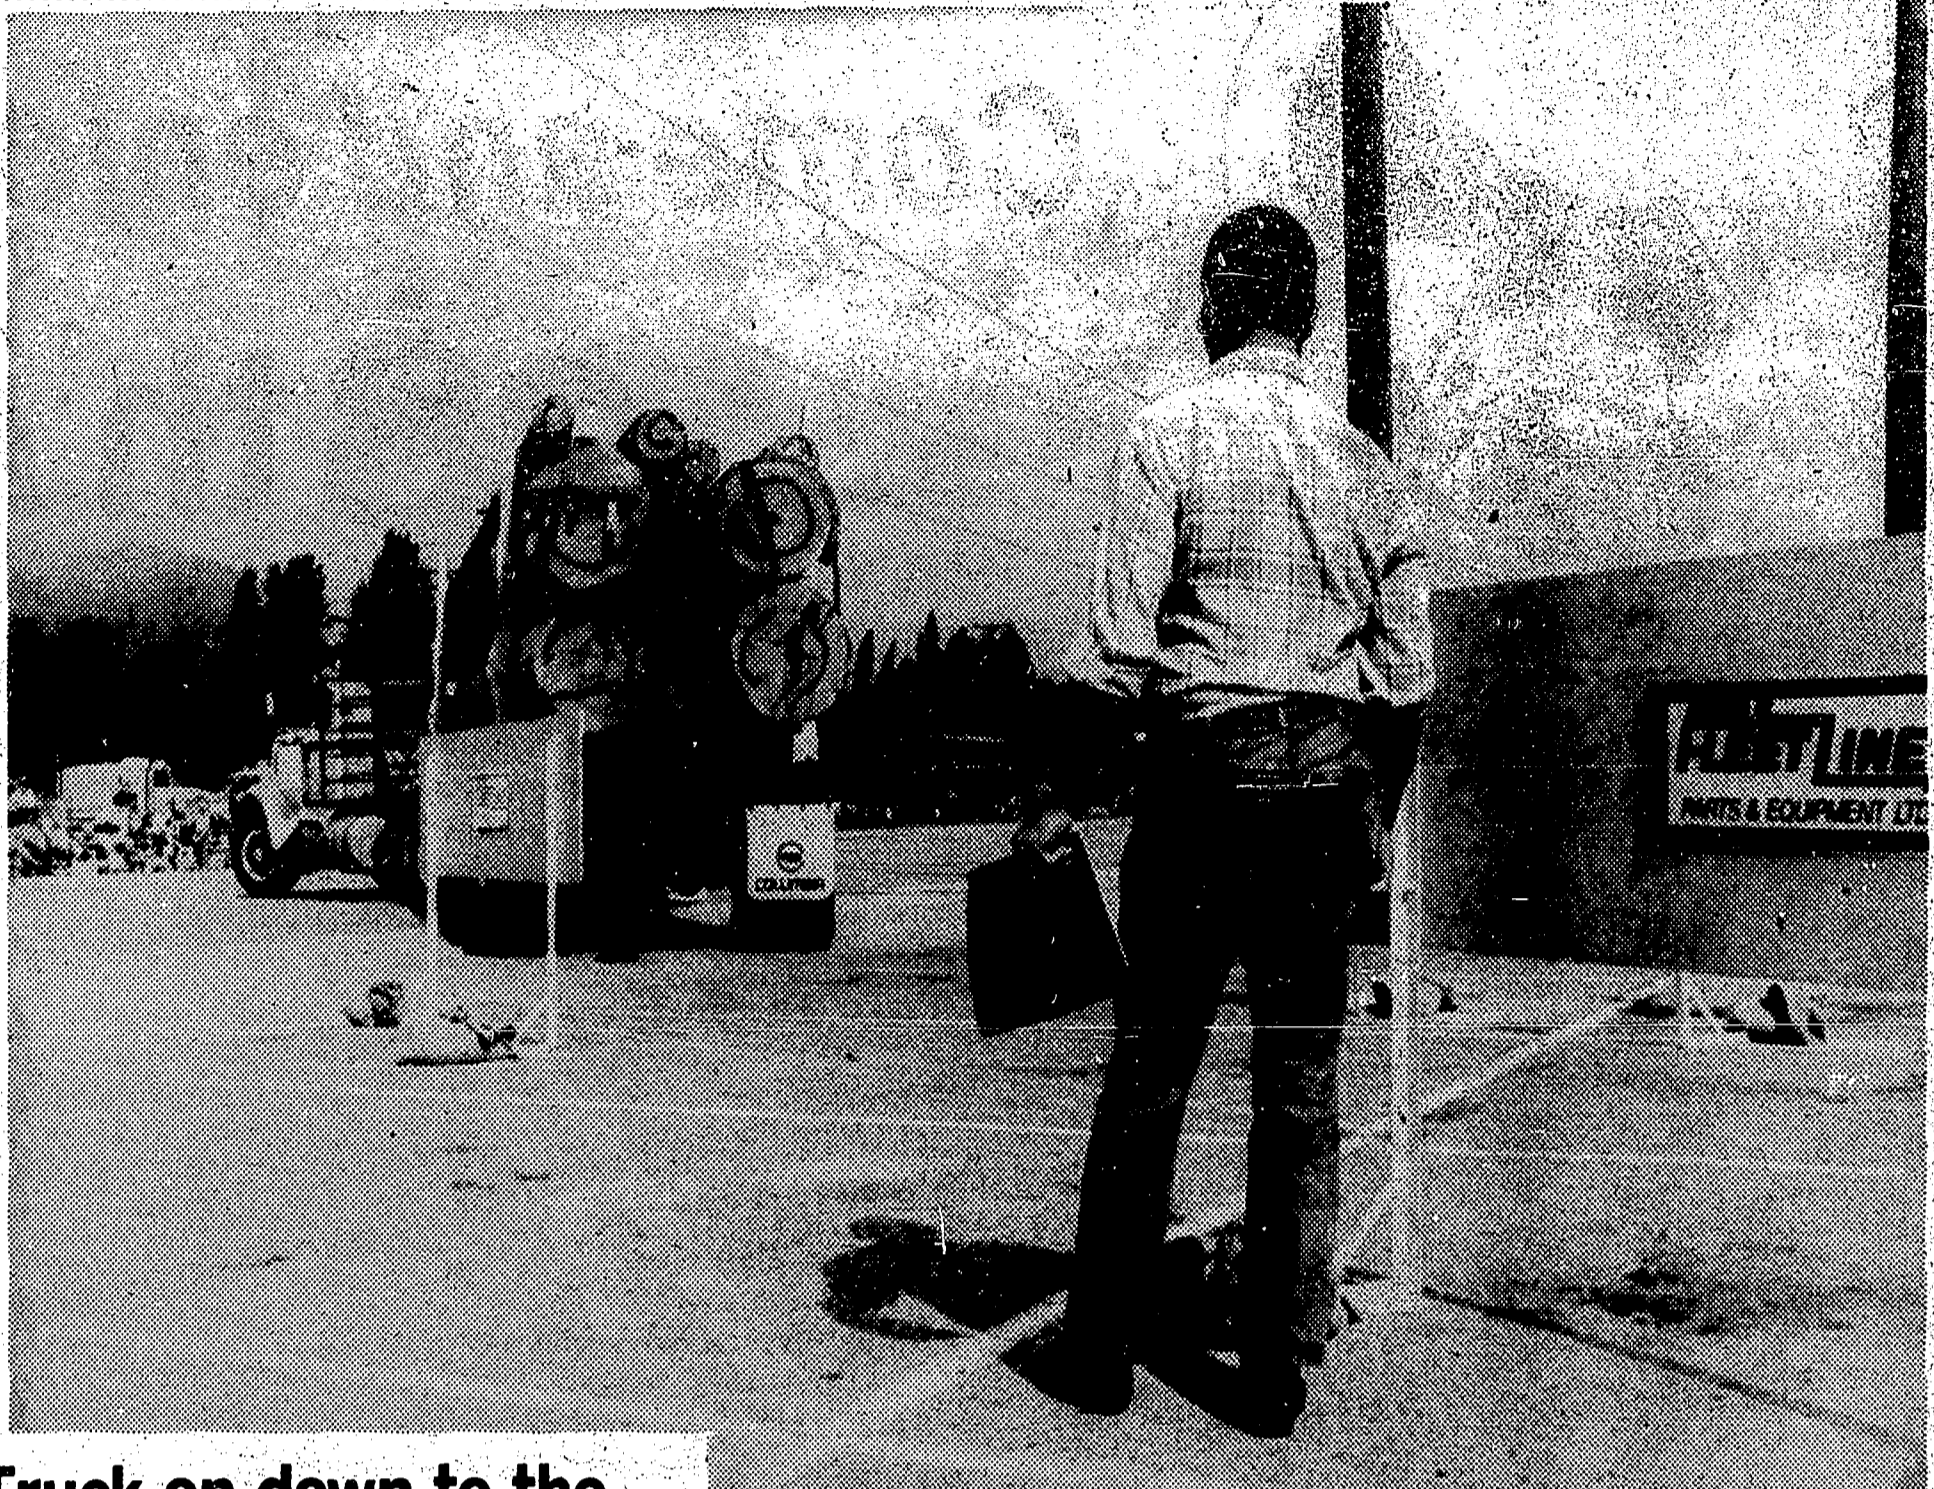

Our own float will be on display and the newly chosen Miss Squamish and her princesses will ride on it.

Bud Ramsay says there will be huge loaded logging trucks as well as the latest in logging machinery in the parade and of course, there will be the local clubs and groups who always enter interesting and distinctive floats.

One of the best is always the one created by our local Italian Society which is consistently a prize winner. Paula, our own Paul Mackenzie, will perform his usual zany antics delighting the crowds, and there will be other clowns as well.

The parade winds up Cleveland Ave. from the small boat harbour and disperses by the elementary school grounds with the equipment going up to the new sports Loggers Lane and the other floats dispersing on Buckley Ave. by the school grounds.

Find a space on the main drag, bring along your lawn chairs and prepare to see one of Squamish's biggest Squamish Days parades.

Truck on down to the Truck Rodeo

Come on truckers, this is your chance to show how well you can handle those huge rigs with loads of logs. The competitions will be held on the parking lot at Super-Valu with eliminations starting at 9 a.m. on B.C. Day, Aug. 5.

There will be a chance for the ladies to show their skills in the Power Puff Derby, sharp at noon and the finals will commence at 1 p.m.

Just watching the men put their trucks through the paces makes one realize the skills and ability needed to drive one of these big rigs on our roads and highways.

One of the testers watching the loaded logging truck go through its paces at the annual truck rodeo.

Winnebagos rally at Squamish

A highlight of the holiday weekend is the annual Winnebago Rally held in Squamish in conjunction with Squamish Days.

Motorhomes from all over B.C. as well as the rest of Canada and the Pacific Northwest will be in Squamish for their seventh annual Winnebago Rally.

They camp on the grounds at the Squamish Elementary School and a full range of events is provided which includes taking part in the annual Squamish Days events.

When some of the old timers get together and swap yarns about conditions as they were in the camps in those early days, it should make the younger men appreciate more the amenities of camp life as it is today.

One of the things that was taken for granted in the straw filled bunks were the fleas -- and as a result, this remedy was posted in one bunkhouse.

Carefully isolate a single cootie and remove him from his companions. Secure a barrel of flour. Dip the cootie in the barrel until he is entirely covered with the white substance.

Then put him back on your body. The other cooties, thinking he is the ghost of a dead ancestor, will promptly die of fright!

Peelers and more peelers

In making the first railroad grades in the valley, the logging outfits found it was necessary to construct tremendous bridges.

Not only did these bridges cross creeks and rivers, but often went around rock bluffs as the grade climbed up into the timber. In one case, near Cat Lake, one bridge crossed over another with a clearance of 40 feet.

It is impossible to estimate how many millions of feet must have gone into making the bridges. They required piling, cribbing, braces, caps, stringers and thousands of hand hewn and sawn ties to build.

The largest of the bridge stringers had to be a straight log, 70 feet long and 36 inches in diameter on the small end.

Lights out

One of our local boys was returning to Squamish very late after quite an evening in the big city.

Gone are those old days when returning revellers boarded a Union Steamship at the foot of Carroll Street and could relax.

This one had to navigate his own car over 40 miles of winding road.

All went well enough, until on the narrow, twisty approach to Browning Lake, the headlights went out and the night seemed to get very dark indeed.

However, undaunted, our hero carried on by sticking his head out the window and moving with extreme caution. He stopped only when other cars approached. Finally, he made it into his own driveway.

Only then did he discover the hood of his car had flown open, cutting down considerably on his vision.

Timber Queen Marianne Mountenay, with her princesses and others attended all the events.

The navy's here!

Adding to the interest of the annual Squamish Days weekend will be the presence of one of Canada's destroyers, the Gatineau in the community for the weekend.

The ship, with its complement of 220 officers and men will be in port for four days, arriving on Friday and leaving on Monday.

During that time the sight of Canadian sailors in Squamish will be something different as they join Squamish in its celebrations and mark one of their own.

In the early days of logging camps on the coast, the grub was no always what it might have been, and first aid was more or less a hit and miss proposition.

One of the outfits up the Cheakamus advertised for a general handyman who was required to know something about first aid.

When the boss interviewed one applicant, the man said he was sure he could fill the bill, because, he claimed, he saved the lives of the entire crew at the last place he worked.

"I don't believe it!" said the boss. "How could that have happened?"

"I shot the cook," replied the man.

The booming policemen

Several years ago, the local constable went to work on the boom during his holidays. Fortunately he could swim, as he spent more time in the water than on the logs.

As the boss was boring sticks, an auger shank broke and the auger went to the bottom.

He yelled at the cop, "Pat! Dive down and get the auger! You're wet anyway."

Pat did just that, clothes and all and the time was the middle of January.

Still lost

Where Empire Mills first applied for its tree farm licence in Upper Squamish, the crew spent a lot of time on ground trying to find out just what it was all about.

Burt Keeley and John Jacobsen were making a trek through the timber farm up-river when, much to their dismay, they found they were lost.

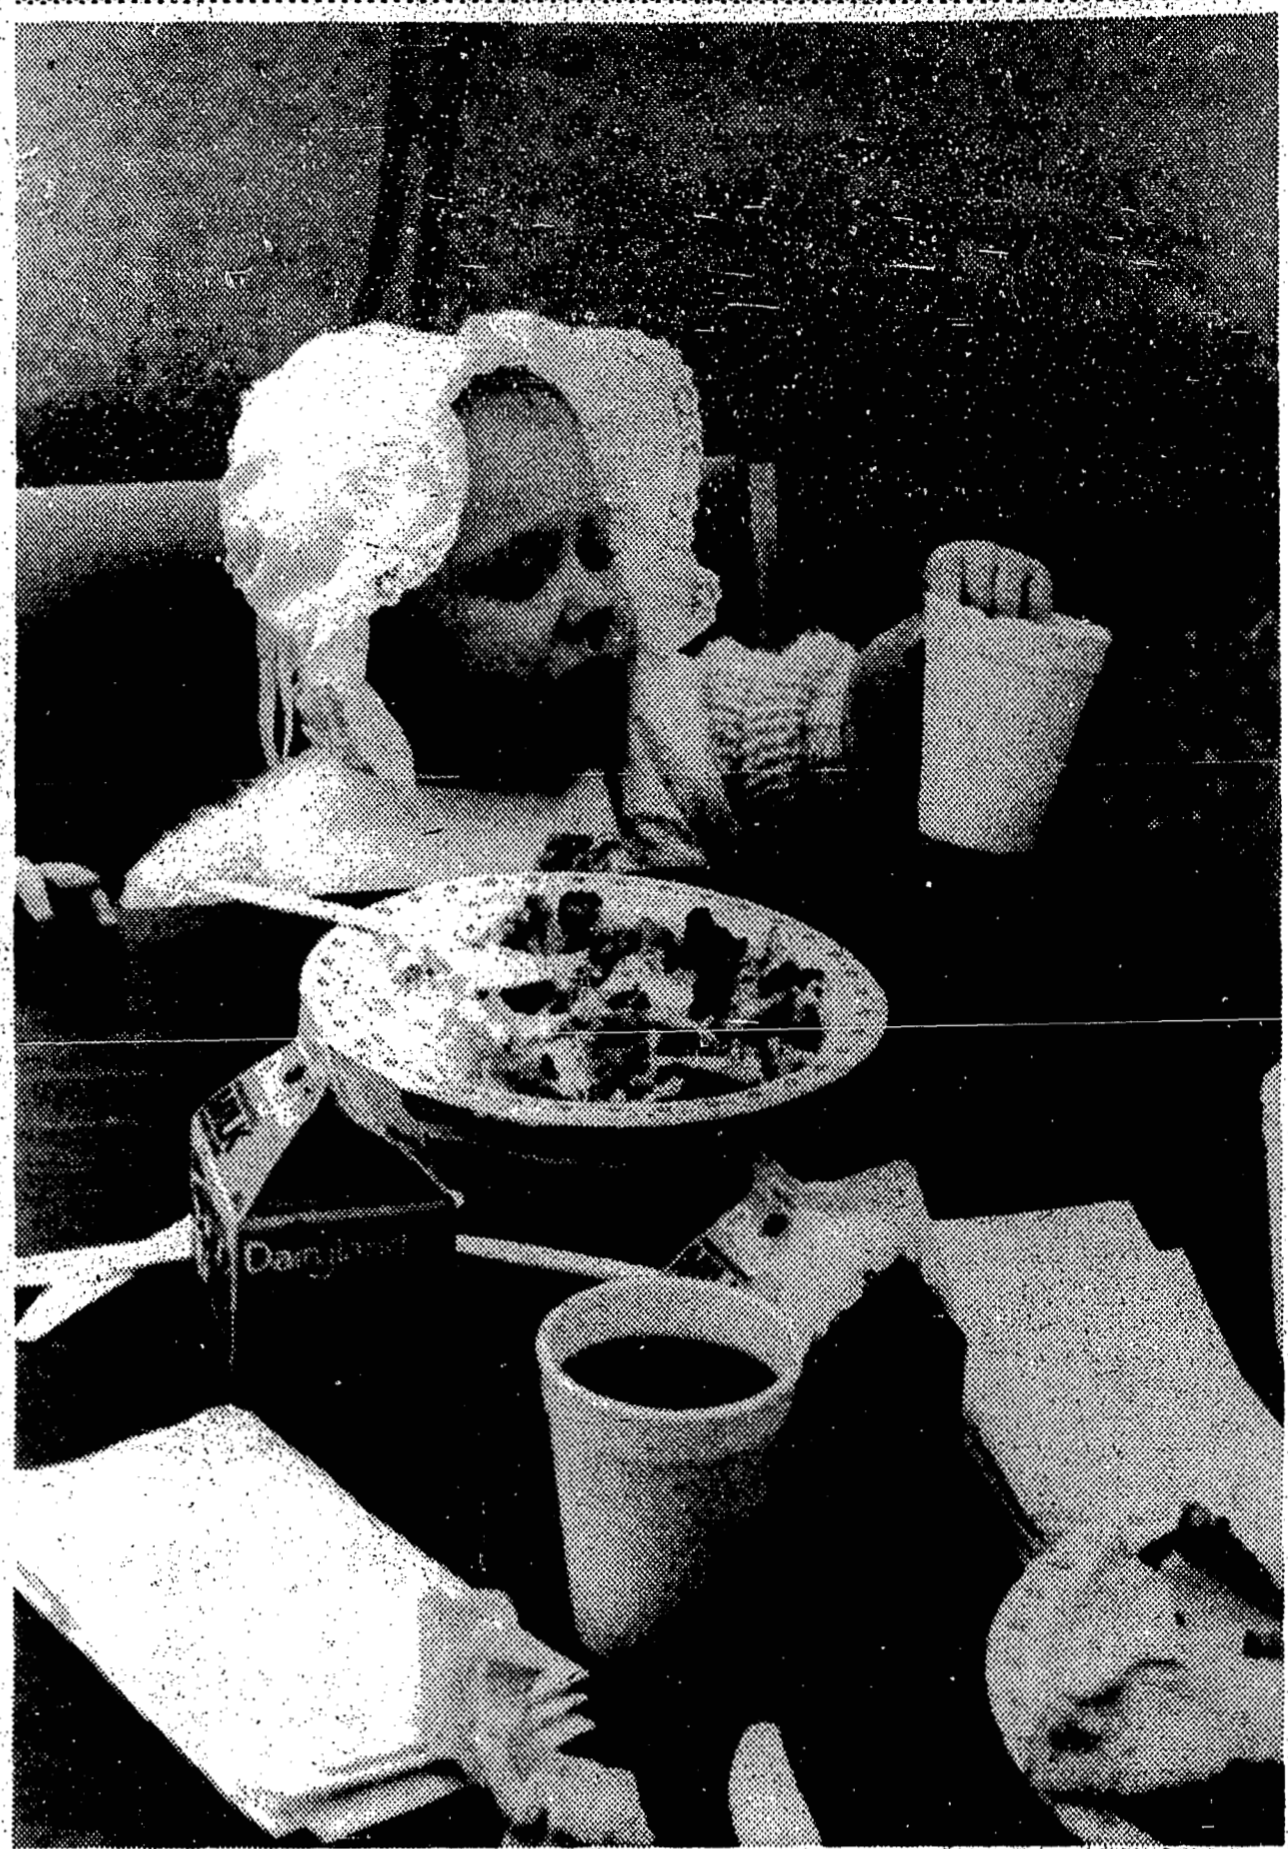

After considerable wandering around, they came upon a trapper's trail and sure enough, soon met the Indian trapper.

"Man, are we glad to see you," called out John. "We have been travelling for hours and we seem to be lost. The boys with the crummy back at the end of the road will be worried about us if we don't show up soon."

"What kind of reward I get if I show you way back," asked the Indian.

"Well, none that I know of," replied John.

"You are still lost," said the trapper, who stalked down the trail.

This wee one obviously enjoyed her breakfast at the Elks grounds.

The latest logging trucks come up the street two abreast in the Sunday parade.

The parade one of the weekend highlights

Everybody loves a parade. And the Squamish Days parade on Sunday, August 4th, is no exception. You'll never see another one like it!

There's everything from our own Paula, the clown, ably acted by Paul Mackenzie who perfected his act in Squamish, and has gone on to success in many other communities throughout the Pacific Northwest, to the giant logging trucks and the huge pieces equipment which add a stunning note to our parade.

The Timber Queen and her princesses along with the other contestants, visiting queens, and many floats will also take part.

Loggers' Breakfast

A special feature of the Squamish Days festivities and one which has been popular since the first event in 1958, is the Loggers' Breakfast.

This is held on Sunday morning on the parking lot adjacent to the Elks Hall on Second Avenue and starts at 7 a.m. Be sure to get there early and enjoy meeting your friends for this king-sized breakfast.

Sponsored by the Squamish BPOE, the breakfast features hot cakes, bacon, eggs, and sausages, all you can eat and all the coffee you can drink, for a sum far below what you would pay for a comparative meal elsewhere.

Usually the men start getting ready bright and early, with tables set out on the blacktop, grills heated and coffee urns perking.

By the time the crowds get there, everything is in a state of readiness for the big event and the appetites, sharpened by the morning air, do justice to the food.

The Timber Queen and her princesses along with any of the other girls and the visiting dignitaries take part in the breakfast and it gives everyone a good solid base for the days activities.

Be sure to take in the breakfast if you come to Squamish for the Loggers Sports and Squamish Days.

"Pancakes, anyone?" Frank Wilson is asking customers at the Elks breakfast.

Timber Beast contest

Of course, if there had to be a Timber Queen to preside over the events of the holiday weekend, there also has to be a Timber Beast, and Squamish has produced a couple of dandies. Memorable beasts were Ross Gilmour and Ian Moratti and hopefully this year will see some more new entries.

The Civic Centre on Friday night right after the bed races is the place to be to see this exciting contest when the "men of the woods" vie for prizes and the applause of the crowd.

We've seen some weird and wonderful costumes and hear some weird and wonderful lyrics from the contestants and this year should be no different.

It's an exciting night as the contestants go through their paces and amuse the crowd with their antics. It's also a great evening to sit and enjoy the reaction of the audience as some of them see the timber beasts for the first time.

A mine with a difference

Touring the B.C. Museum of Mining, it's hard to imagine it all started on precisely $129.04.

For that matter, it's hard to think of it as a "museum" at all.

Located at Britannia Beach, it has a little bit of everything... a static display, a trip into the past, a train tour of a disused mine, a walk through the vast emptiness of the old Anaconda concentrator building, an opportunity to pan for gold, a slide show and a living lesson: B.C.'s second most important industry.

What began in 1969 as a centennial project for a community museum is today a uniquely educational tourist attraction drawing a steadily increasing number of visitors every season. It is operated by a non-profit group, the Britannia Beach Historical Society, which started out with high hopes, some dedicated workers... and the aforementioned $129.04 in the kitty.

After years of preparatory work, it opened in 1975 and drew 22,000 visitors in the first season. By last year, that tally had risen to 95,000.

Britannia (named in 1859 after a Royal Navy 100-gun frigate) has been the site of a copper mine since the early years of this century. Its peak year was 1930 when production reached 7,100 tons a day and more than 1,000 employees were on the payroll. At that time it was recognized as the largest copper mine in the Commonwealth.

The death knell for the mine sounded in 1974. Anaconda Mining Company, which had owned the property for about eleven years, announced that it was forced to close due to a combination of depleted ore reserves, rising costs and falling copper prices. It was the end of 69 years of mining history at Britannia, the oldest continuously operated copper mine in B.C. In its lifetime, it produced 55 million tons of ore.

The National Museums of Canada came through with a $70,000 grant, allowing for the appointment of a curator and assistant curator over a three-year period. The provincial government provided $50,000 on the proviso that an equal sum, or its equivalent value, would be forthcoming from the mining industry and mining support groups.

Much assistance came from Anaconda.

The museum opened May 16th and stays open until Labour Day, seven days a week, from 9:30 a.m. to 6:45 p.m.

Donkey comes to Squamish

In 1914, Earl Judd and Jimmy Neil hauled a steam donkey up to a location on the Squamish River about two miles above Cheekye by horse team and wagon.

It was a two-drum, 125-pound boiler outfit. The men assembled it on a raft on the river, then started down the river breaking up log jams and clearing sandbars of marooned logs.

They kept the logs ahead of the donkey as they floated down the river. The drive to the mouth took four weeks.

A year later, the donkey was dismantled and again hauled up the river for a similar drive in the employment of Al Barber.

How it all began

Squamish Days, the exciting five day celebration which culminates in the annual Loggers Sports events, both for novice, intermediate and expert, all began as part of a simple celebration in 1958 when the road from Vancouver to Squamish was opened.

From that humble beginning when local loggers competed in the skills which they used in everyday work to the highly skilled competitions of today the competitions have changed but the fun is still there.

In the early competitions the contestants were the people we all knew, doing their thing just as they did it in the woods. As throwing was often done after the men had eaten; splicing and Molly Hogans were part of the everyday tasks and in the early days of logging, climbers went up to the "spar trees" to tig them. That's to hang the tackle from the top of the tree to bring in the logs.

Cables were tied down to logs or tree stumps on the ground to anchor them so they wouldn't move as the logs were dragged in to a cold deck pile.

The chokerman's race evolved from the tasks of setting chokers on the logs so they could be hauled in and of course, buckers and fallers have always been part of the logging scene. It's just that now they don't use the hand saws but power saws are used instead.

Birling evolved from the games they played in camp or after work when it became a test of skill to see who could stay on a log the longest. They originally birlled in logging boots and cut off tin pants while today's birlers wear special shoes and usually wear jeans or cut-offs. But the victor still stays on the log while the loser gets dunked!

The original power saws have evolved into sophisticated "souped-up" hot saws and all sorts of aids are used to make them perform better. But the original competitive skill is still there even though the tools are different.

Today's top loggers work the logging show circuit and many of them are star performers but the flavour of the original Loggers Sports still exists in the show which is held on Saturday, the novice and intermediate show where those who haven't made the big time compete.

From that small show in 1958 the highly successful five day event with the Timber Queen competitions, the Timber Beast, the bed races, the kid's sports, the dances, the parade, the Elks breakfast, where you can get a hearty loggers' breakfast with eggs, sausages, hot cakes and all the coffee you can drink, and the truck rodeo all developed to give residents and visitors a full five days of fun and excitement.

And despite the slick showmanship and the polished production it's still a community affair with all the local clubs and societies as well as a group of dedicated people, all working to make it the big event of the year.

Ron Hartill, perennial winner of the Logger of the Day award at Squamish Loggers Sports.

FLOSSIE

"DONCHA THINK YER CARRYING THIS JILL THING A BIT TOO FAR?"

Lots of champions at Squamish Loggers' Sports

There have been many winners and many contestants in the years since the first Loggers' Sports Day was held in 1958 to mark the opening of the highway to North Vancouver.

No trophies were given for that event; it was a fun day, and the event coincided with the B.C. Centennial year. Burt Wary was the overall winner.

In 1959 Thor Halvorson took a trophy, followed in 1960 by Chris Arnet, who took it again in 1963 and 1965 and shared it with Allen Woodrow in 1967.

Woodrow was the big winner in 1961 and 1964 and again in 1966, sharing it with Arnet in 1967.

In 1962 Bruce Carson was the overall winner with Phil Whittaker taking the championship in 1968.

Owen Carney brought the championship back to Squamish in 1969 and in 1971 it went to Merv Lentz.

Then came the Ron Hartill years when the big New Zealander made a name for himself in the loggers sports circuits in British Columbia and the United States. He was the big winner in 1970, 1972, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984.

In 1978, Ian Moratti brought the trophy back to Squamish when he won the All Round Logger Trophy and in 1979 Carney, a perennial competitor for many years, won it for the second time. In 1980 it was won by Ken Nelson.

In recent years, a Sportsman of the Day Award has been presented with Peter Holmquist winning in 1974, Gerhard Hansen in 1975, Darrei McNutt in 1976, Al McEwan in 1977, Dwight Carpenter in 1978, Bryan Couture in 1979, Kevin Couture in 1980, Peter Culiver in 1981, John Johnson in 1982, Robin Dorey in 1983, and Neil Morgan in 1984.

In 1981 Ross Gilmour was named Novice Sportsman of the Day and Karl Bischoff received the award in 1982, Dwayne Constantine in 1983 and Jay Aldridge in 1984.

But it's not just the all-round logger who is a champion. Squamish has had many other champions like Chris Arnet and Dick Munro who both won at the PNE while the latter went on to perform at Expo '67 and Marvin Trudeau who was a world champion tree climber.

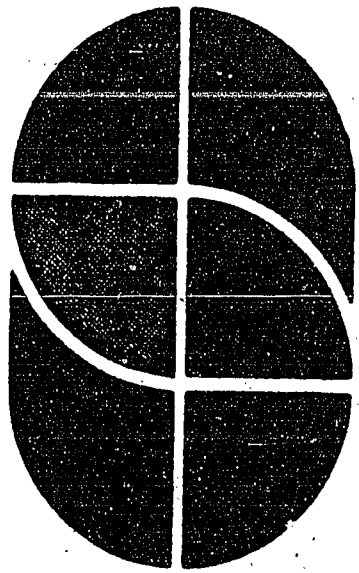

In log birling, Owen Carney made a name for himself in the championship circles.

But there are others who have done much to make the celebrations a success during its 26 years.

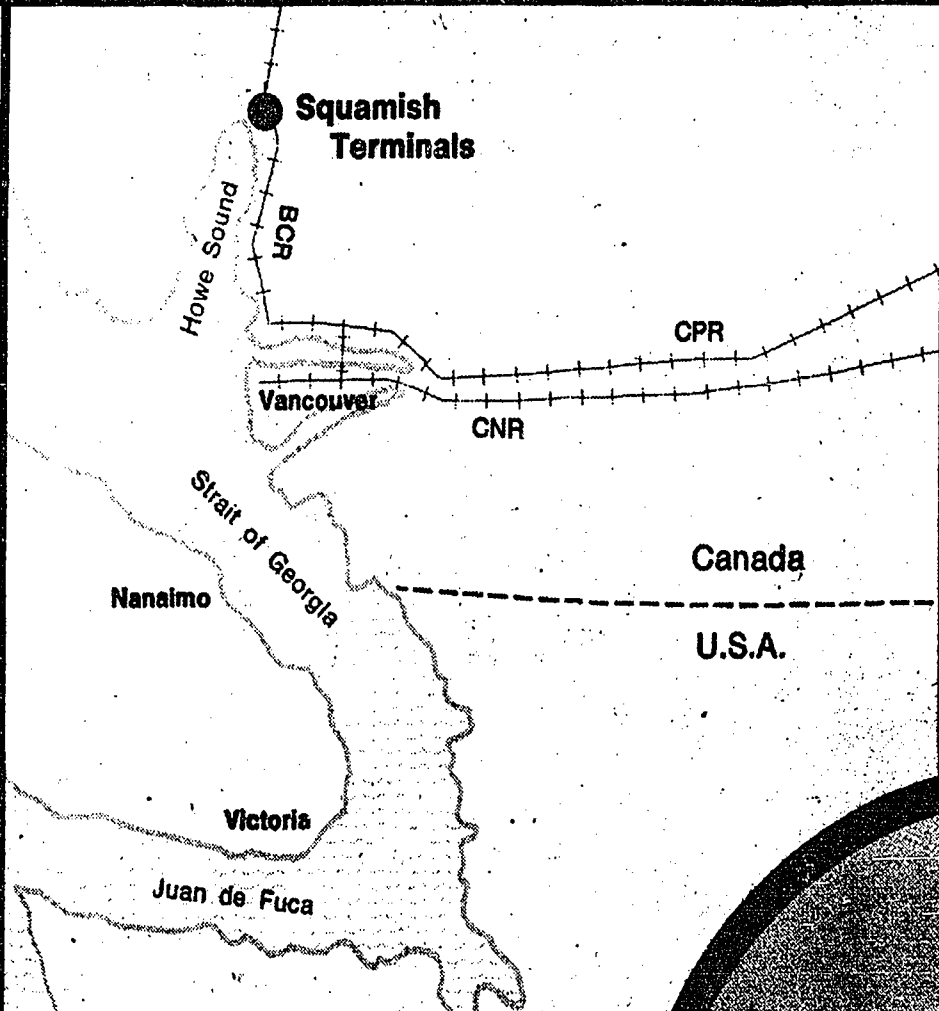

Last year's intermediate champion was a tie between Brad Laughlin and Dan Streichert.

Ian Moratti and his partner really pouring it on in the hand bucking competition.

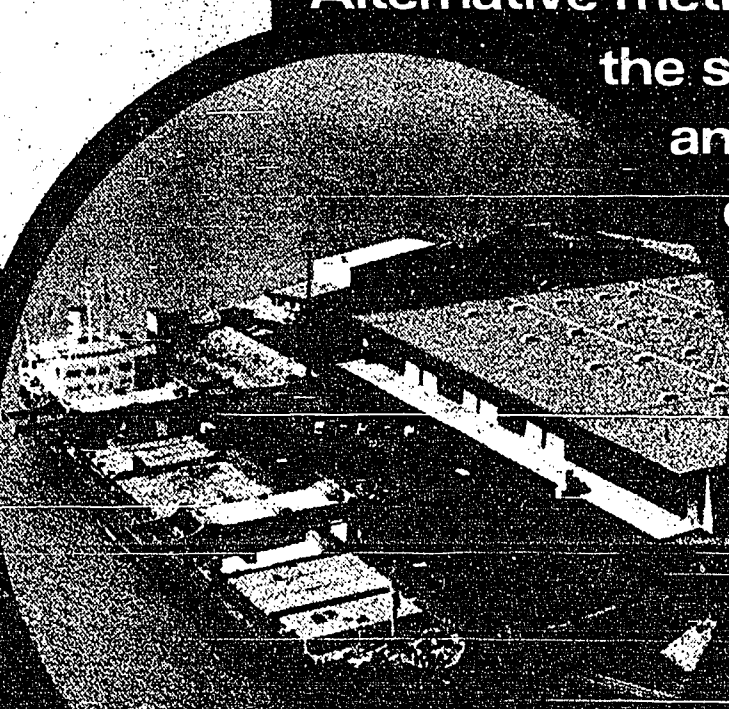

We join with many others in the industrial and commercial community of the Squamish Valley to wish Squamish Days and Loggers Sports every success and to congratulate all concerned on a job well done.

It's countdown time to Squamish Days Logger's Sports and it starts with a most popular event each year -- the Timber Queen Pageant in the Civic Centre on Thursday at 7 p.m. The supplement in this week's issue gives you a complete rundown on the times and locations of all the activities. This 28th Annual Logger's Sports promises to be bigger and better than ever. I know we desperately need rain but let's hope it is not between August 1st and 5th.

Local writer wins award

Local writer Mauro Vescera was awarded the prestigious gold medal at the eighth annual National Magazine Awards held in May. Vescera, a graduate of Howe Sound Secondary School and a full-time student, won the award along with co-author Edward Alden for an article dealing with the future of Canadian agriculture, called "Thorns of Plenty." The article was written by Vescera and Alden while they were research associates with the Institute for New Economics in Vancouver. It was published in Harrowsmith Magazine, December '84/January '85 edition.

A total of 1,400 entries, all published during 1984, were submitted to National Magazine Awards for judging in 21 categories.

Vescera was paid $1500 for the article by Harrowsmith magazine but collected a cash prize for winning the gold medal from National Magazine Awards. The article also won an award for its photography.

Vescera recently graduated from the University of B.C. with a B.A. degree in Political Science. He spent last year attending the University of Florence to study languages.

September will see Vescera at John Hopkins International University in Italy where he has won a $5,000 scholarship to enter the Masters program.

Vescera said he would eventually like to work in the international sphere, either for an international organization or for the Canadian government. He speaks fluent Italian and passable French.

Vescera grew up in Squamish and worked during the summers for Canadian Occidental while attending university. His parents reside in Squamish.

New local club formed

Local members of the Squamish Indian Band have formed a new club called the "Tumbleweeds Club."

The club was formed to promote recreation and education amongst Band members.

Jim Harry, Club President, said the club will participate in fund-raising in an effort to provide funds for needy Band members who wish to seek further education.

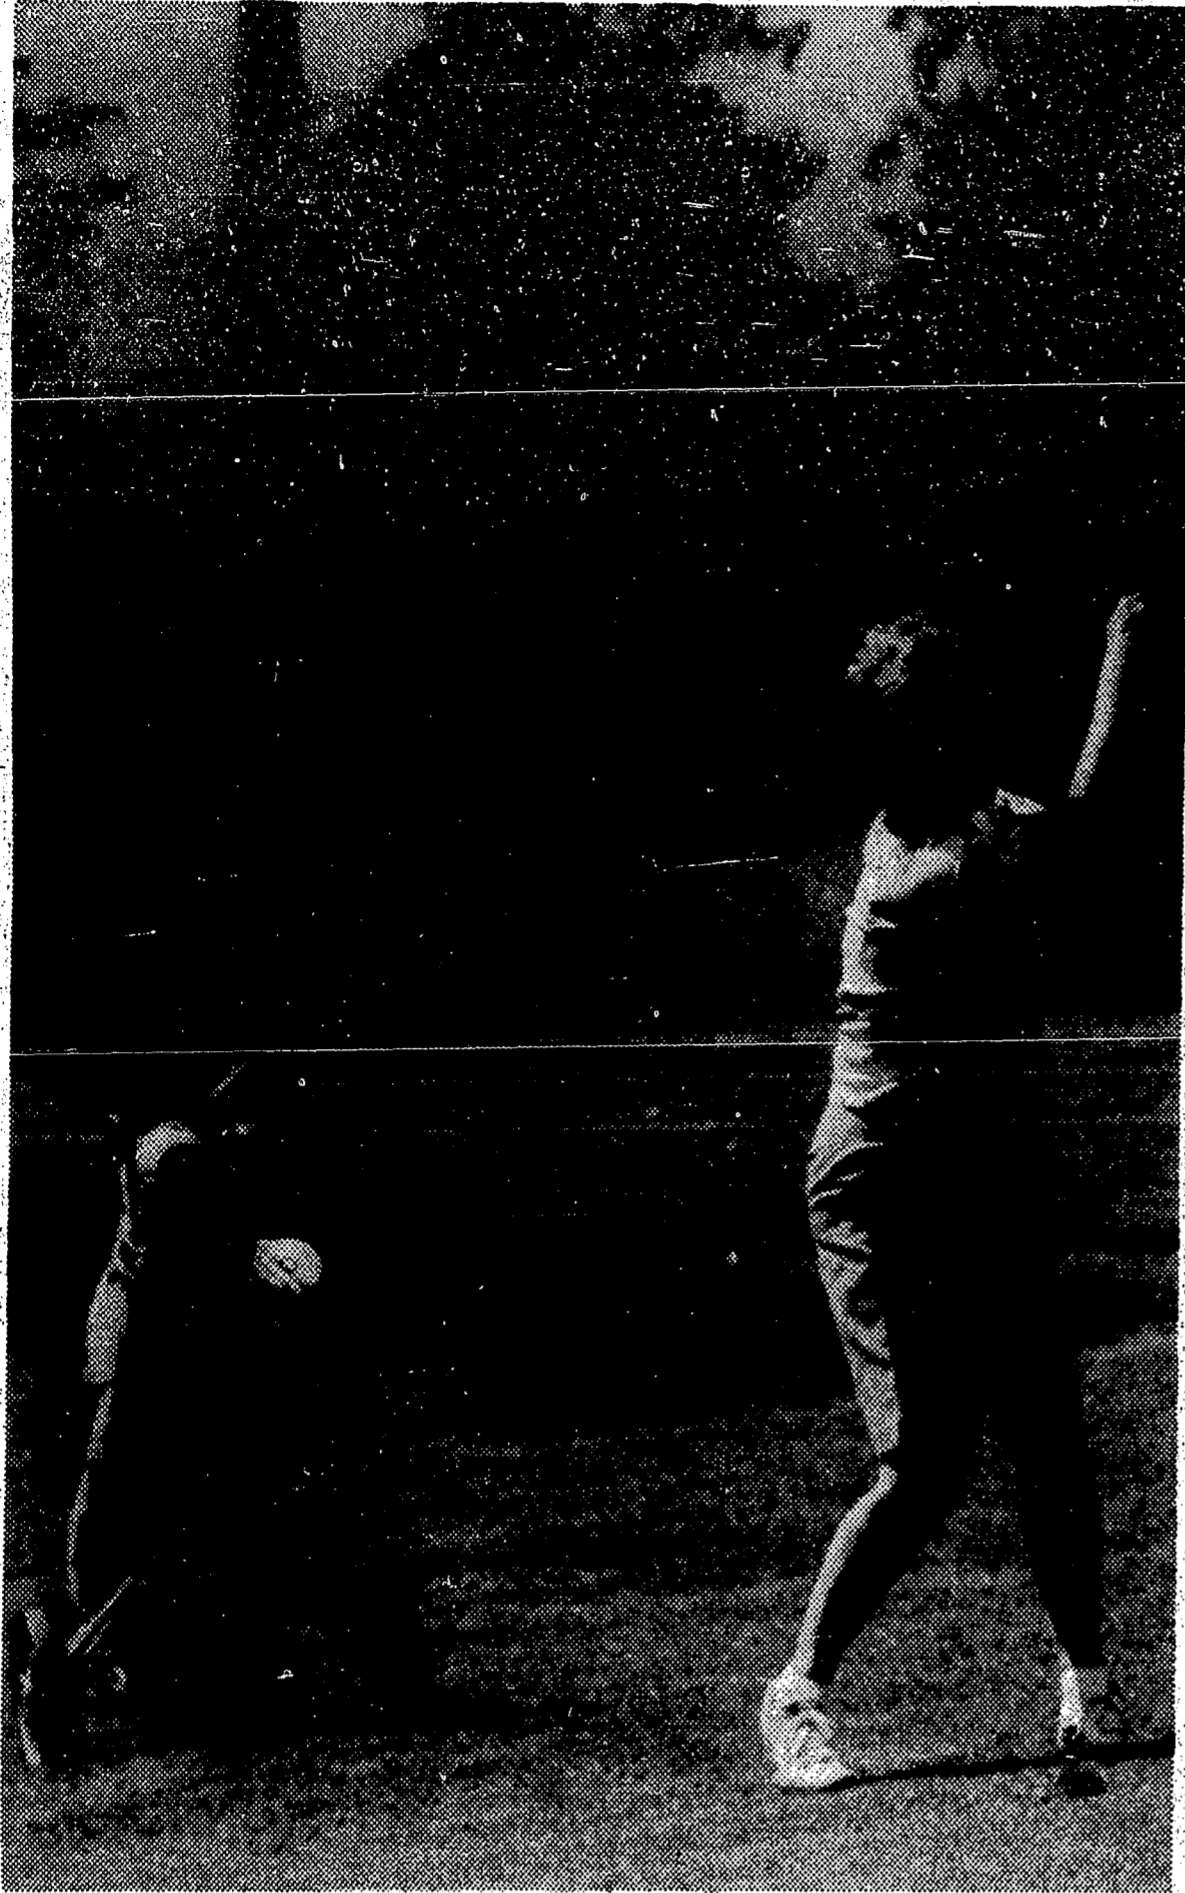

Harry said the club also has a long-range plan to establish playing fields in Cheekye for soccer and baseball tournaments and leagues.

Harry said the club is holding a raffle in an effort to raise money. Prizes include wood carvings donated by local carvers, a wallet donated by Band members involved in the handicapped course, and dinner for two courtesy of Mykonos Restaurant. The club is also considering holding additional raffles and dances, and will hold a Bingo on August 18th on the reserve.

The club's executives include: Jim Harry (President), Al Lewis Jr. (Vice-President), Alice Guss and Jackie Williams (Secretary-Treasurer).

Anyone interested in helping out the club, contact Jim Harry at 898-3595.

Roadrunners run down Rebels in overtime

There is more than one way to skin a cat and on Thursday the Roadrunner Sporting Goods proved it.

If the latter team had any difficulties in its' battle in the finals of the Squamish Ball Hockey League against the Rebels it was an inability to hold onto leads late in the third period.

It was a dirty habit that not only extended the best out of five series to six games, following a 5-5 tie in game one, but also one that almost cost the Roadrunners the championship. In that first match the Rebels connected for four third period goals to force a 5-5 draw and in game four, after the two sides split a win apiece (7-1 for the Roadrunners and 4-1 for the Rebs) the defending title holders again came from behind to put the crown within one victory.

This time the Rebels entered the middle frame at a 3-1 deficit and came away with a 5-4 clipping as Rick Rosser collected the hat trick and the winner on a wrist on a wrist shot in the third period.

But the Roadrunners, which carried the bulk of the play in almost every contest as indicated by the close scores in Rebel victories and point bulge during Runner wins, came back with a 5-1 edge in game five to force a decisive, winner takes all final match-up.

And yes, you guessed it, it was another thrilling come-from-behind, "kardiac kids" offence by the Rebels. However, there was a twist.

Down 5-2 coming home the latter club started on the come back trail when Rick Rosser snapped a power play marker past keeper Richard Newman on the short side. It ended when Brent Peterson, after numerous chances in front, banged rebound over the line to make it 5-5 with twenty seconds left on the clock, thus forcing overtime.

Fittingly the fight for the Petro-Canada Cup came down to one goal and at 17:03 of the first overtime session the Roadrunners got it.

Surprise attack was the method the eventual victors used and a surprise it was to everyone when Alex Ryan tagged line-mate Dave Spence with a perfect down the throat clearing pass that caught the Rebels pressings.

Out racing the defence Spence broke into the open and tipped a back hander behind Carl Teichman to provide the winning heroics.

Actually the Roadrunner victory was a come-from-behind one at that as the Rebels had built up a early 2-0 lead. The high scoring defender, Dan Ellis opened the match by blasting a high, rising drive from the point in under the cross bar just four seconds after Ian MacDon- and had been banished for interference.

Ten minutes later Jamie Ellis popped in a rebound and the heat was on.

It took over ten minutes in itself for the Roadrunners to send the ball towards Teichman and they were thoroughly outshot 32-12 overall. But for the Roadrunners, which are at their best in the back checking and forechecking roles made every one count, hitting pay dirt fifty percent of the time.

Forty-eight seconds after Ellis' marker Sporting Goods got on the right track on a pair of tallies from the stick of Gary Trento, including a great three way passing play with Rob Confortin and Bob Mahnger to set up the equalizer.

In the middle frame Ed Bachuk proceeded to put his team on top for the first time in the match as he walked out of the corner unmolested and squeaked a shot inside the post. Kevin Couture later ran the count to 4-2 in the midst of a mad scramble before Kevin Saxton, the work horse behind the highest scoring line in the league with Ryan and Spence, made it a three point bulge.

The Roadrunners, court- esty of its' first playoff championship in the league's short two year term, qualified for the provincial ball hockey play downs to be played during the Loggers' Sports weekend. The squad will represent the first Squamish team every to enter this full contact event and in preparation the Roadrunners has bolstered its' line up by adding Dan Ellis and Miles Rosser, the league's top point getter, from the Rebels and goaltender Mark Goodgrove from the Panthers.

Ladies Open golf tournament a success

This year there were 160 golfers taking part in the competition. The event started off on Wednesday evening, the 17th of July with a Wine and Cheese Registration Party, hosted by Malcolm Skinner of Calona Wines and the Squamish Ladies. During the evening everyone was entertained by the local band "The Yesterdays" who were given rave revues by the visiting contestants.

The Golf started early on Thursday, the 18th of July in beautiful sunny weather. A raffle was held during the day and also a Bake Sale. Following the luncheon, some of the local ladies, with a flair for the dramatic, put on a floor show consisting of three separate skits. Judging by all the laughter, these were a great success.

The prizes were then given out with Pip Roberts of the Capilano Golf Club being the overall Low Gross winner with a score of 76. This score equalled by Course Record which was set by Vicki Woodcock of Marine Drive Golf Club in 1982. The overall Low Net Winner with a Squamish was once again well represented by Little League Baseball. A ten year Rep Team was invited down to West Vancouver July 6 & to take part in a two game exhibition tournament, and came away undefeated. The boys downed Highlands Little League in the first game, and then came from behind to defeat the long standing Howe Sound rival, JC Rotary, in their second game. Our Major League All-Star team started district playoffs July 9 at Chris Zuelke Park in North Vancouver. They were defeated in the tournament opener 7-6 by Cypress Park. The 11 & 12 year olds went on to win their next games making their way through the losers bracket. Winning the championship by defeating Forest Hills, not once but twice. Highlands of the team's effort included a solid lineup of hitters, tight defense and awesome pitching.

Not only did our boys clinch the district title, but they received the honour of being named the Most Sportsmanlike team of the tournament.

The boys advance to the Provincial Playoffs July 28, 1 p.m. at South Memorial Park, Vancouver.

Seniors advance to Provincials

With a 9-2 win over arch-rival North Vancouver the Howe Sound Junior Babe Ruth squad has earned a berth in the provincials.

The group of 14-15 year old boys will be leaving on Thursday July 18 for Cranbrook where the B.C. championships are being held. Last year, with Squamish hosting the provincial event, Howe Sound narrowly missed taking the championship, coming in second after playing two sudden-death games.

Squamish BMX Racers Invade Campbell River, B.C.

A large contingent of BMX Racers from the "R.F.T." (Racing, Freestyling Team) and the "Corsa Cycle Team" travelled to the Campbell River BMX super track on the July 1st weekend to ride in a three-day racing event.

The racers put on a superb effort considering the short time this new and exciting sport has been established here in Squamish. Thirteen R.F.T. racers and three Corsa Cycle racers gave their best efforts and came home with their fair share of trophies.

The track may be in its first season but Squamish has already made its mark in BMX circles thanks mainly to the 1984 team racers.

This is indeed a tribute to the youngsters. Well done to each and everyone. Not all can win but all did their best.

The following were winners at this year's event:

Sat. Single point: Chris Greenlees, Trike, 3rd; Scott Weiss, Trike, 2nd; Wayne French, 14 beginner, 2nd.

Canadian champion, will be presenting a display at the rodeo at noon.

Be sure to attend the truck rodeo to watch their amazing performance.

Forest closed to recreation

In view of the extreme fire danger in the Vancouver Forest District, a restricted travel and recreation order has been declared for the entire Squamish Forest District commencing at midnight July 23.

The closure will remain in effect until a further order is issued cancelling this. During the restriction, no one shall enter into the restricted area for the purpose of travelling, camping, fishing, hunting, recreation, berry picking or any other reason.

No person shall operate a vehicle on any road that is not a public highway except for access to public property.

Supervised camping places or picnic grounds designated by the Forest Service for public use are exempt from this ruling.

Jim Delikatney, area park supervisor, says that Alice Lake Park is open along with all the other provincial parks in the area, including Porteau Cove, Birkenhead Park and Nairn Falls Park.

Hikers are still permitted to go into Black Tusk and Diamond Head but the trails to Fitzsimmons Creek, Singing Pass and Cheakamus Lake are closed due to the high fire danger.

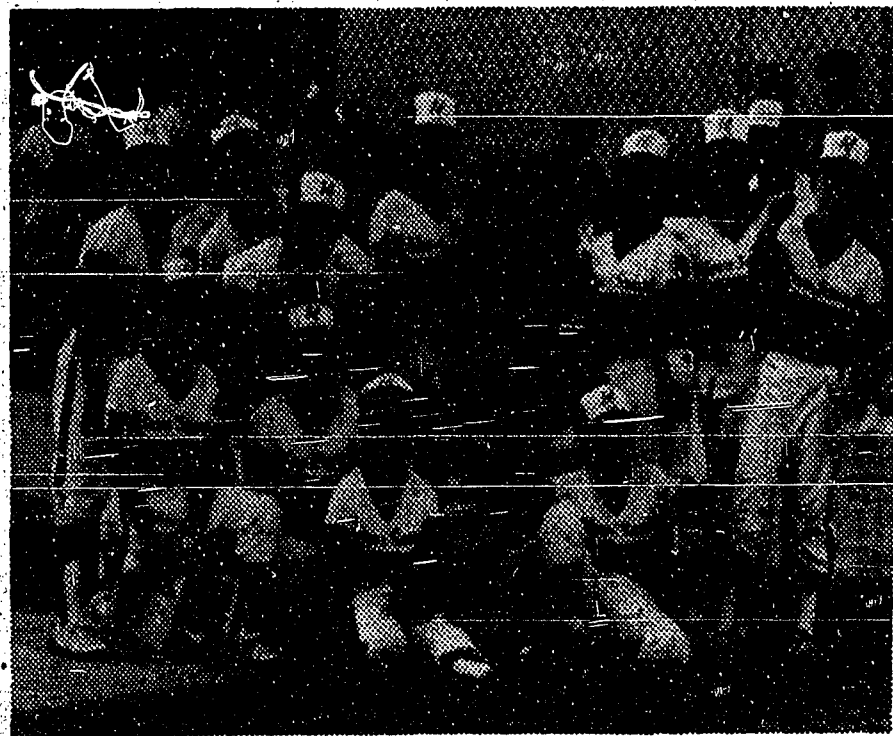

Delikatney says some back trails in Alice Lake Park are closed to hikers but these are well posted.

"We try to keep the parks open as long as possible," he said. "Additional patrols are put on and in times of high hazard, every effort is made to keep the parks open. We realize that people have to have a place to go and if we have them in one area, we can patrol it."

Dart Winners

The winners of Wednesday Night Drop-in darts in the Royal Canadian Legion, July 24th were:

Gary Harley (first), Frank Wheeler (second), Brian Hopkins (third), Bruce Proudfoot (fourth).

The Major League All-Star team received the Most Sportsmanlike trophy.
