

...O HALT NEW BERTH FAILS

A bid by Alderman Lynn Wilbur to halt the construction of a $10 million shipping berth by the Squamish Terminals was shot down Mar. 1 by members of council, despite widespread acknowledgement that the site of the new berth is improperly zoned for such activity.

Aldermen Corinne Lonsdale, Garth McCreedy and Chuck Harvey voted against a motion introduced by Wilbur calling for the administration to stop the expansion work of Squamish Terminals "immediately and by any means necessary."

Alderman Ron Barr, an accountant employed by Squamish Terminals, abstained from the vote and removed himself from council chambers midway during discussion of the matter.

Council chose instead to stand by its Feb. 2 motion to approve a land referral from the Ministry of Forests and Lands for a parcel of unsurveyed foreshore

Crown land located on the west side of the Terminals for the purpose of a ship berthing area. Wilbur's motion request came in the wake of controversy over the proposed shipping berth due to the location of the berth in the central basin area of the Squamish Estuary.

"I'll swear on a bible there's no conflict on me."--Barr

Wilbur has expressed concern that the berth will interfere with wildlife activity in the estuary, and has urged council not to endorse the project until receiving written documentation showing that the berth meets the requirements of all bodies concerned, including the Ministry of Environment, Federal and Provincial Fisheries, Squamish Estuary Conservation Society, Official Community Plan, and concerned citizens.

Embroidered in the controversy over the berth has been Alderman Ron Barr, who, according to Wilbur, acted in "apparent" conflict of interest when he introduced and voted on the motion to endorse the land referral. Wilbur's attempt to have council institute conflict of interest guidelines involving members of council failed, however, when council, though initially approving the guidelines, later changed its mind and rescinded them.

But at the Mar. 1 meeting, Wilbur maintained his view that Barr was acting in conflict, and included in his motion request to council the following clause: "(And) whereas the resolution by Squamish council to endorse the Squamish Terminals Ltd. land lease application was made in an apparent conflict of interest situation."

That clause angered Barr, who, midway through the discussion, left the council chambers, saying, "As usual, he's (Wilbur) implied conflict."

"I'll swear on a bible that there's no conflict on me." Wilbur also contended that the site of the proposed berth is zoned Resource, which, under the zoning by-law, does not permit industrial expansion.

Furthermore, Wilbur said, neither council nor the public have been "actively" informed of, or involved in, any approval of the proposed berth. Such input, he said, is called for in the Squamish Estuary Management Plan.

Wilbur also took exception to several statements made by Clerk Bill Bloxham in a memo to council on the matter.

"I can't fault the company."--Tobus

According to Bloxham, the Terminals commenced dredging of the basin "probably" because of council's Feb. 2 motion to support the land referral. Bloxham further added the Terminals "presumably" has received permission from various authorities to proceed.

But Wilbur questioned whether approval has been given by all authorities and maintained that council should halt further work until such approval has been confirmed.

Added Wilbur, "Endorsing a land lease does not give anyone authority to proceed."

Berth construction to proceed

Wilbur said he took particular exception to the Clerk's contention that although the area is zoned Resource, the Official Community Plan designates the future use of the area as Industrial/Transportation. Wilbur said an OCP map "could show you quite clearly that a portion of the development lies in the estuary planning area."

According to Bloxham, a recent Technical Planning Committee report to council recommended the area be reviewed, in conjunction with the overall revision of Squamish's zoning by-law. Bloxham acknowledged the discrepancy in zoning of the area, saying only that "for some reason the existing zoning never extended to the end of the wharf, either because of an oversight or because of an appreciation that the facility that was being placed in 1970 met the requirements of the council at the time."

Bloxham further cautioned council that if it chooses to accede to Wilbur's request to halt the berth construction, it could be placing itself in a libelous position "because over the last month or so they (council) have encouraged, by virtue of their motion of support, Squamish Terminals to embark upon a very expensive project."

And, Bloxham added, when it comes time for the Terminals to apply for a building permit, the building inspector would be authorized, through the Planning and Design Committee, to grant the permit, in view of council's Feb. 2 motion of support.

Wilbur said he took "particular exception" to the Clerk's position, however, saying that the first "item on the list" the building inspector checks for before issuing a building permit is proper zoning.

But members of council remained steadfast in their earlier motion to support the berth construction.

"How can you (council) approve a land referral and then pass a motion to stop construction?" Mayor Egon Tobus said. Tobus acknowledged the zoning discrepancy and suggested the onus was on council to proceed with re-zoning of the area so that it conforms to the zoning by-law.

"Endorsing a land lease does not give anybody authority to proceed."--Wilbur

"If councils in the past have made an error, then I suggest to council to put that wrong right."

"I can't fault the company (Terminals)."

Alderman Corinne Lonsdale asked Tobus to rule Wilbur's motion out of order.

"I don't believe we can turn around and put a stop to it (project)," Lonsdale said.

Alderman Chuck Harvey, also speaking against the motion to halt construction of the berth, pointed out that the Terminals have been located at the Squamish site for 18 years, and that the OCP points towards port development in that area. He also reminded council that the project has been approved by various authorities.

"Whether we stop them (Terminals) or not, it's going to go."

Wilbur's attempts to sway council by amending the motion was futile, with council voting against the proposed amendments which would have left the motion to read simply: "Whereas Squamish Terminals

Ltd. is dredging in the central basin area of the Squamish Estuary river system for the expansion of their business; and whereas this land is zoned resource, which does not permit industrial expansion; therefore be it resolved that Squamish council direct administration to notify Squamish Terminals Ltd. that the above criteria needs to be met before it is approved."

Although council voted against Wilbur's motion, it directed the administration to investigate the zoning discrepancy of the area and report back to council.

"Whether we stop them or not, it's going to go."--Harvey

Meanwhile, construction of the shipping berth is expected to commence the first week of April and should be completed by November of this year, according to Squamish Terminals President Frank Collard.

The new berth, to be 500 feet long, will be capable of accommodating vessels of up to 50,000 tons, and will mean increased loading potential of the port.

New railway tie plant in Squamish

An Australian steel company has finalized a deal with B.C. Rail to establish a steel tie manufacturing plant in Squamish.

The plant is expected to employ up to eight people, according to Brian Giles, chairman of the Industrial Development Committee of council who has been negotiating the deal.

Giles said the company, BHP Steel International Group, Long Products Division, of Australia, was considering both Prince George and Squamish as possible sites for the location of the plant, but confirmed Mar. 1 its decision to go with Squamish.

"It's a good foot in the door for Squamish," Giles said, calling the proposed plant a "good, clean secondary industry."

The plant will be built on property leased from B.C. Rail known as the former site of Triton Steel, near CanOxy. Giles said the plant will be modern and feature state-of-the-art computer equipment.

Raw steel needed in the manufacturing of the railway ties will be shipped in to the Squamish Terminals and transported to the plant via the B.C. Rail line.

Giles said to date one-third of the production needed by the new plant in order to break even has been assured by B.C. Rail, and the company is hoping to secure further contracts.

Giles said steel-rail ties have become widely used in Australia as opposed to wooden ties, due to a rampant termite problem. He added steel ties are "an extremely efficient way to go", in terms of durability.

Nuclear free zone defeated

The Squamish-Lillooet Regional District will not be forwarding a 'nuclear weapons free zone' resolution to other municipalities in B.C.

According to Director Brian Giles, the Board vote ended with an eight to eight tie, at the Feb. 29 Regional District meeting in Pemberton.

At the last meeting, Directors Brian Giles, Lynn Wilbur and Paul Burrows argued and then successfully won a "weighted" vote at the Feb. 29 meeting.

But, the tied vote resulted in a defeated resolution.

At the Jan. 25 meeting, Chairman Dan Cumming said he would hold an "un-weighted" vote based on what he had read from the Municipal Act and according to Robert's Rules of Order.

However, after some opposition to that decision, Cumming pushed the vote to the Feb. 29 meeting, whereupon Cumming said he would have consulted with a lawyer or the Union of British Columbia Municipalities in regards to the proper procedures.

In a letter to District Administrator Ivan Knowles, Director of Administrative Services N.A. McCrimmon writes that "section 787(1) of the Municipal Act" appears to apply. Also, that "... the resolution should have been decided on the weighted vote basis."

With a weighted vote, Squamish Directors Giles and Wilbur and Whistler director Burrows held eight votes (fifty percent of the District vote). But together Pemberton, Lillooet, and the four electoral areas held the eight negative votes that squashed the attempted motion.

The opposed Board members were: Director Shirley Henry (Pemberton), Director J.P. Harder (Lillooet), Director S.L. Garrard (Electoral area A), Director J.T. Thur (Electoral area B), Director F.O. Rollert (Electoral area C) and Chairman Dan Cumming (Electoral area D).

However, in a telephone interview, Giles said as a "concession" the Board passed a motion to send a letter to Prime Minister Mulroney stating the Regional District is not in favor of field-testing of cruise missiles in Canada.

In a letter to the Chairman and the Board members, Squamish Mayor Egon Tobus urged that "all Councils" in B.C. let the P.M. know missile testing should be stopped.

Giles requests committee reappointment

A move by Squamish Alderman Brian Giles to have City Clerk Bill Bloxham removed from the Squamish Estuary Management Coordinating Committee (SECC) and an alderman appointed in his stead, was voted down by council at the Mar. 1 meeting.

Giles introduced the motion to have an alderman appointed to the committee in place of the Clerk because he said a politically elected official would better represent council's position on the estuary.

"I feel the Clerk is not qualified (to serve on the committee) in that he is not politically representative of the community," Giles said at the Mar. 1 meeting.

The committee, SECC, which Bloxham said meets about every two months, was set up to review activity and development of the Squamish Estuary. It is comprised of representatives of various levels of government including the Dept. of Fisheries and Wildlife, Ministries of Industry and Small Business, Environment, and Lands, Parks and Housing, Environment Canada and B.C. Rail. A representative of the District of Squamish, currently the Clerk, also sits on the committee.

But according to Giles, Squamish has not been adequately represented by the Clerk, not by the Clerk's fault, he said, but because council has not requested more active participation on the committee.

Giles did point out, however, that Bloxham has not regularly supplied council with updated information on estuary proposals or committee minutes. Giles also expressed concern that Bloxham, due to conflict with council and other meetings, has not been able to attend every committee meeting, and has no alternate to attend in his absence.

Giles said more council involvement is necessary in light of the increasing importance of the estuary.

"Inasmuch as there are major developments both ongoing and proposed for the estuary study area, it seems extremely remiss for council not to be properly informed about current activities," Giles wrote in a formal motion request to council.

"The expenditures are in the realm of millions of dollars and the impacts on the community are major and in some instances controversial." Giles dismissed the notion that the committee is merely a "bureaucratic body."

"It is a political arena making decisions vital to the future of this municipality and as such should be attended by an alderman who is responsible to the voters."

But the Clerk defended his seat on the committee, saying he has kept council abreast of committee activities.

"Your (council's) position has been solidly maintained," Bloxham said.

Other members of council concurred that the Clerk was best suited to represent the municipality on the committee.

Alderman Corinne Lonsdale said she prior to the meeting contacted former mayor, Jim Elliott, who was in office at the time the committee was established, and asked him why the Clerk was appointed to represent Squamish. Elliott, she said, told her that at the time it was believed a nonpolitical representative would best serve the municipality's interests, and would provide continuity in representation, since elected officials are apt to come and go as elections dictate.

Alderman Ron Barr suggested there could be the potential for bias on the part of particular members of council, in dealing with the estuary.

"It's better to have someone not politically biased," he said.

Both Barr and Lonsdale agreed that council should direct the Clerk to report back on any important or controversial issues facing the committee. Council should then provide direction for the Clerk on matters of concern, they said.

Mayor Egon Tobus concurred. "With the right direction, Mr. Bloxham can make our views known."

But Giles maintained his view that an alderman should be appointed to replace the Clerk on the committee.

"We're dealing with 600 hectares of property which we've been given the duty to protect. We should not be waiting for second-hand reports about what's going on in that estuary."

"This council is missing the chance to bend the ear of the minister concerned," he added.

Giles' motion was defeated, with Aldermen Lonsdale, Barr, McCreedy and Harvey voting against it.

Council members did agree, however, that an alternate was needed to represent the district on the committee in the Clerk's absence. Brenda Sims, deputy clerk, was named Bloxham's alternate.

Police report rash of vehicle thefts

Several thefts from vehicles were reported to the Squamish RCMP the morning of Feb. 29.

In the Garibaldi Highlands area, approximately $2,400 worth of goods, including ski boots, camera and lens, was reported stolen about 8 a.m. from a vehicle parked at a residence on Highlands Way North.

Another resident in the Highlands reported several small items taken from a vehicle parked outside the residence.

Two vehicle thefts were also reported the same morning in the downtown area. Goods valued at $500, including cassette tapes, golf shoes, and a fishing rod and reel, were reported stolen from a vehicle parked on Third Ave.

Another theft was reported from a vehicle parked on Fourth Ave. Thieves made off with a cassette deck, valued at $75.

According to Cpl. Dan Larratt, none of the vehicles were locked at the time of the thefts.

Anyone with information regarding any of the thefts is urged to contact the Squamish RCMP.

Alderman urges public input

An attempt by Squamish Alderman Lynn Wilbur to change council procedure to allow for greater access of the public to municipal proceedings met with resistance from the rest of council at the Mar. 1 meeting.

Wilbur introduced two motions, both defeated by council, which he believed would open up council meetings to the public.

The first motion provided for a half-hour period at the start of each council meeting at which time members of the public would be allotted up to 10 minutes each to address council. Currently, the public are invited to appear before council at the close of each meeting.

"It's essentially a fundamental public right for people to have input into their own business,"

Wilbur said.

The motion was quickly defeated by council.

"We have an agenda, people should be put on the agenda," Alderman Corinne Lonsdale said, speaking against the motion.

Wilbur's second motion addressed the possibility of having the council agenda published in the newspaper and aired on the local community television channel each week prior to the meeting. The motion called for the administration to investigate the costs of such publication. Wilbur also suggested council meetings be changed to Wednesdays from Tuesdays to allow the public time to read the agenda in the Tuesday newspaper.

Alderman Brian Giles lauded the idea, calling it a "public and democratic service."

But the motion was defeated.

Alderman Ron Barr, speaking against the idea of publishing the agenda, said people could not determine just by reading the agenda if there was an item on personal interest on it.

"People would look at the agenda and say, 'What does it mean?'" Barr said.

Mayor Egon Tobus said he doubted changing the meeting from Tuesday to Wednesday would result in any increase in public attendance. He said when council decided to hold one evening meeting a month to accommodate the working public, there was no change in attendance.

"People are still just as apathetic," he said.

Wanted: one ambassador

Last week's editorial, "A Crowning Glory", drew considerable outcry from organizers and friends of the highly popular annual event, the Squamish Days Timber Queen Pageant.

Pro-pageantists remain steadfast in their goal that the Miss Squamish contest be not a popularity or beauty race, but rather an occasion to select a young woman capable and worthy of presiding over the annual Loggers Sports events, and taking on the year-long task of being Squamish's goodwill ambassador.

The intention of this newspaper is not to discredit those motives. Indeed, the Timber Queen Pageant has become what many believe to be the highlight of Squamish Days. And the young ladies who have proudly worn the coveted crown in past years have been a credit to their community.

Thus, the hunt will soon commence for that candidate who will best represent Squamish to sister communities throughout the province. Organizers are busy recruiting sponsors to ensure another successful pageant year.

And in that ever-changing society, it is comforting to know that the successful candidate may indeed be chosen for her abilities as an ambassador, and not for the trappings of her gender.

No holds "Barr'd"

Squamish Alderman Ron Barr made the correct—and responsible—decision in removing himself from further vote on the matter of the proposed $10 million shipping berth at Squamish Terminals.

By doing so, Barr effectively removed himself from any allegations of conflict of interest, bias, or undue motive.

And Barr is no worse for the wear in abstaining from the vote, since his fellow council members successfully reinforced support for the proposed berth and shot down attempts by Alderman Wilbur to upset the apple cart.

Let's hope Barr's decision sets a precedent for the rest of council in future matters involving potential conflict of interest, be it obvious or inferred. If in doubt, get the hell out.

What's your favorite restaurant in Squamish?

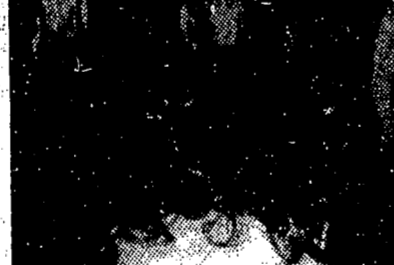

Angus Pinchin, 7, student: "I like McDonald's because they have nice food there. (Preference?) The Big Mac."

Janice Lipsey, 53, retired cook: "Seven Seas around five o'clock in the afternoon for Chinese food. It's fresh then. And Mykonos for Italian and steaks or pizza. Besides it's right beside liquor store."

Lynn MacDonald, 23, housewife-mother: "It's a toss-up between Vera Cruz Restaurant and Mykonos. They serve Italian pizza - everything - (good) variety."

Margaret Muehlfarth, unknown age or occupation: "Vera Cruz. Nice tender steaks, and spicy foods. I don't mind spending a buck if the food is good."

Get the facts straight

Dear Editor:

I agree with the Wilkinsons and Mr. D. Morris in that I would not want a whole bunch of duplexes all around my house.

However, both of the letters which appeared in the paper had some things in them which showed these people do not have all the facts about the Basha affair. But before I go on, a couple of points. To the Wilkinsons, I don't think you should hide behind lofty ideals of maintaining affordable single-family housing when you admit that the duplexes would drop property values. It would seem to me that the single-family dwellings that were left would be lower priced if prices dropped because of the duplexes.

Let's face it. One of the reasons you don't want duplexes is because it could drop your house's property value! That's all right, it's how most of us feel. Just tell it like it is.

To Mr. D. Morris: We may or may not like or respect Mr. Patterson, but he has as much right as you or I do to make requests or complaints to council. You see, Mr. Morris, if we don't like the way things are in town, we can express our opinion, and if we have enough people to support us we can make changes (unlike in some lands). You should also know that Mr. Basha is not an absentee landlord. Doesn't he live across the street from you?

Again, I must state, if I lived in downtown Squamish I would not want more duplexes (I would want some nice apartments). Many people are unaware of how this situation was thrust upon Mr. Basha. Mr. Basha was looking to build a duplex in downtown Squamish. He saw some land zoned R2 and requested that the real estate people confirm with the district as to the legality of building a duplex on the lot. He was informed to the positive. To be sure, Mr. Basha went to city hall himself to confirm the lot's eligibility to have a duplex built on it. Again, he was told okay. Mr. Basha buys the lot. A few months later, he is told he no can do. Who is responsible for his predicament?

I don't believe Mr. Basha is impatient at all. All of this happened nine months ago. At this time, all Mr. Basha wants is a public hearing (a timely one as well; the other public hearings, which we have had recently, came and went within a short time frame, while Mr. Basha is left to dangle in the wind). I believe he is entitled to one. I suppose that Mr.

Basha has a legal recourse if the public decides to go against him. Of course, all the delays and the cost of a legal recourse are against the little man, as Mr. B. knows.

The public should also know that for six months, an alderman, who shall remain nameless, voted in favor of Mr. Basha until he found out that Mr. Basha's lot was too small (this alderman is in the know, eh?). While another alderman, who has at least been consistent in opposing Mr. Basha, suggested Mr. Basha just go ahead and build an illegal duplex. All the while, the Mayor has been stating, "I don't believe that you have been misled by this council."

Council...I call on you to let the public decide the fate of Mr. Basha's property.

Richard Eby

Don't sign on the dotted line

Dear Editor:

I would like to warn people who sign any papers without reading all the fine print. We have a very good example with the cardholders rental agreement of the 7-11 store. The fine print is so fine that most people need a magnifying glass to be able to read it.

Would you sign this, if you were able to read it?: In case you don't return items, shall permit the Lessor to enter onto Customer's premises, vehicle or other location without further notice in order to repossess the items. The 7-11 store assumes more power than the RCMP, who need a warrant to enter your home.

Also, many forms ask for Social Insurance number. This number is for government use only. Banks, stores who want your SIN, you don't have to give it to them.

The government has you already paying taxes on everything, wearing seatbelts, telling women what to do with their bodies, assigning you a SIN.

Campaign a success

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the British Columbia Lung Association, I wish to extend a most sincere thank you to your newspaper, your readers, and regional Christmas Seal chairperson Irene Vickers, of Squamish, for the generous support given to the 1987 Christmas Seal Campaign.

The Campaign officially ended January 31 with donations reaching $1,031,262 provincewide, a three percent increase over the projected goal of $1 million. Contributors from the Squamish area were directly responsible for $4,913.

Monies raised through the Christmas Seal Campaign held fund lung disease research, public and professional education programs, school programs promoting lung health among children, and awareness campaigns highlighting the harmful effects of air pollution, tobacco use and occupational respiratory hazards.

Again, thank you all very much.

Maurice Cownden

Stop dredging

Dear Editor:

Thank you for continuing to inform the public of the shady situation at council and the Squamish Terminals.

To the point: That part of the Estuary will have been killed if the dredging isn't stopped now; before, all this talk gets around to stopping it.

This person involved says STOP!

Thanks for the opportunity, for myself, to speak on saving the Estuary and us all from INDUSTRIAL SUICIDE.

Debra Thorne

HOWE SOUNDINGS

by Rose Tstlow

Garibaldi Park and the surrounding area has attracted people for many years. From the time the mountain first got its name in the 1860's, when a squadron of the British navy was navigating the waters of the Gulf of Georgia and Howe Sound and heard that Guiseppi Garibaldi had unified Italy, and named the mountain after him, to the present day, it has attracted thousands of people.

The sailors approved of the action of the Italian patriot, fired a salute in his honor, and named the snowy peak after him. It was the first event that attracted sustained attention to the region.

There were many trails north of Howe Sound, but for many years none of them led to Mount Garibaldi. But interest in the mountain grew, and while there was no road, or railroad either, there were trails, and these spread through the area.

The first trails that led to the ascent of Mount Garibaldi came through the area now known as Diamond Head. The trail snaked past Columnar Mountain, made entirely of six or eight-sided columns of rock, and approached the coastal giant from the south.

The first ascent of the mountain was made in 1907 by a party of six climbers. Their names have been given to a number of sites in the area, and include: J.J. Trorey, A.T. Dalton, T. Pattison, Atwell D. King, and G.B. Warren. The names have been preserved in Dalton Dome, Atwell Peak, and Warren Glacier.

Shortly after it was climbed by J.C. Bishop and Dr. W.E. Bridgman. Bishop gave his name to Bishop Glacier.

In the next few years, many dedicated climbers in the B.C.

Mountaineering Club and the Alpine Club of Canada visited the area, and soon the pressure was on the government to make the whole picturesque area a park.

Before long, the original route into the mountain fell into disuse, and where the old Pemberton Trail along the Cheakamus grew into the beginnings of a wagon road and later into a railroad, a new access route was found.

Access to the Garibaldi parklands and to the beautiful band of meadows around the basaltic core of an extinct volcano which protruded through the ice many thousands of years ago, from the railway was first made in 1912, when W.J. Gray blazed a trail from the confluence of Rubble Creek and the Cheakamus River to Black Tusk Meadows.

Members of the B.C. Mountaineering Club sent in a group to camp and explore the country. The meadow campground became increasingly popular and drew many people to the mountains surrounding them.

Exploration proceeded each year, and the first sketch map of the area was produced by Gray in 1913. Nine years later, Don Munday, a pioneer and well-known climber, produced a small booklet entitled, "Mt. Garibaldi Park."

A sketch map of the Garibaldi volcanic area appeared in 1918, but it was not until 1926 was a photographic survey of the known climbing area made by Dr. Neal Carter, who also made an exploratory trip across to the headwaters of the Pitt River.

For years, the press in Vancouver had been urging that a provincial park area be created on the mainland and in the Garibaldi area. As it became increasingly apparent that the beautiful alpine country was unique and should be preserved, the Garibaldi Park Act was passed in 1927 and the boundaries extended in 1928.

This situation continued for a number of years, with the park being administered by a board, until it became a full park under the parks department with proper protection in the 1950's.

No story about Garibaldi Park would be complete without mention of the Brandvolds: Emil, Ottar and Joan. Emil and Ottar were two Norwegian brothers who teamed up with Joan Matthews, who later married Ottar, to find a place in, or near, Garibaldi, where they could build a chalet where people could come to ski in winter and hike in summer.

They found their dream site at the end of a ridge near two small lakes, and there they built the lodge that soon became famous all over North America and even in Europe.

Laboriously, working with a team of horses in the short alpine summer, they built the sod-roofed chalet, and it was a welcome sight to many a weary hiker and climber who had trudged in over the long six and a half mile trail which climbed 2,500 feet from Base Camp. But there was always a hot cup of coffee or soup waiting at the end of the trail, and a warm bed if you wanted to stay for the night.

For twenty years, the Brandvolds provided a mountain haven for climbers and skiers. They maintained a road passable for four-wheel vehicles in summer and for snowmobiles in winter, and perhaps made the area better known than the Black Tusk.

But the chalet became the park ranger's home and a special shelter built for campers and skiers, and the chalet's glory days are only a memory.

In the past twenty years, trail programs and other improvements in the Black Tusk area made it increasingly popular, and today, some of the areas are threatened with overuse.

But the attractions which brought the first hikers to the area are still there: the snow-capped mountains, the glaciers, the icy mountain streams tumbling from the peaks and snow fields, and the meadows.

How can one describe the meadows? Standing in the middle of them, you look up the slopes to the black lava cores of the old volcano, jagged and sharp as the elements have honed them, the multi-hued flowers creating almost an oriental rug effect as they climb the slopes.

The clear lakes, fringed by flowery meadows, the watchful marmots on the mountainsides, and maybe the odd glimpse of a mountain goat or other animal makes you realize that this park is one of the finest assets we have.

If you have never visited Black Tusk Meadows or Diamond Head, plan to do so this summer. Sure, it's a long hike, but you will be rewarded by the beauty of the mountain meadows and feel the same way I did when I climbed up to them. I can easily realize why primitive people equated mountains, lakes and woods with gods. When I go into the mountains, it always reminds me of the old hymn, "Unto the hills around do I lift up...my longing eyes."

New area parks created

Two new provincial parks have been created in the Squamish area.

Lake Lovely Water Provincial Park, comprised of 1,300 ha., is located close to Squamish in the mountains across the Squamish River from Cheekye. Scenic and virtually untouched, and within driving distance from Vancouver, the park has been popular among rockclimbers for many years, and the Alpine Club of Canada has a cabin on the park's lake.

The lake, which is the heart of the area, is reached by a steep trail on the east side of the Squamish River, about 10 miles north of Squamish. The mountains surrounding the lake are excellent for climbing, and offer a challenge to the experienced as well as the novice climber.

The second park, Joffre Lake

Provincial Park, comprised of 1,460 ha., is located 25 miles east of Pemberton along the Duffey Lake Road. It is a popular spot and attracts many hikers each year.

Two other parks were announced by the B.C. Ministry of Environment and Parks, along with the two local parks. Those parks are the Columbia Lake Provincial Park in the Kootenays, and the Adams Lake Recreational Area, 30 km north of Chase, on the west shore of Adams Lake.

Garibaldi Park Superintendent Jim Delikatney will be in charge of the two local parks as well as the two local parks already under his jurisdiction.

"They (parks) will be administered by the Parks Department," Delikatney said, "and this is the first step towards having them declared Class 'A' provincial parks."

Public input sought on Garibaldi Park

A public meeting will be held in Squamish Mar. 16 to allow members of the public to contribute to a master plan for Garibaldi Provincial Park.

The meeting, called by the Ministry of Environment and Parks, will be held between 6:30 and 10 p.m. in the Seniors' Lounge at the Civic Centre.

Similar meetings will also be held Mar. 15 at the Robson Square Media Centre in Vancouver and Mar. 17 at the Jordan Room, Conference Centre, Whistler.

In announcing the meetings, Environment and Parks Minister Bruce Strachan said park master plans provide long-term direction for the entire spectrum of park activities, including resource conservation, recreation, and the provision of public facilities and services.

"All people wanting input into the development of the plan for this important park are invited to attend public forums," he said.

Loan meeting March 11

The annual general meeting of the Howe Sound Students' Loan Association will be held Friday, Mar. 11 at 7:30 p.m. at the School Board Office.

At the meeting, President Margaret Marchant will give a report on the 25th year of operation of the association. Also included in the agenda, Treasurer Margaret Candy will present the financial reports, and an election of officers will take place.

Britannia Mine a national historic site

The Britannia Mill is now designated a national historic site.

The M.P. for North Vancouver/Howe Sound, Mary Collins, made the announcement on Feb. 18.

Collins was talking on behalf of the Minister of the Environment, Tom McMillan, at a Britannia Beach Historical Society press conference at the Engineers Club in Vancouver.

In a note to the Times, Britannia Beach Museum Curator Susan Green wrote, "This is a very big announcement for the Museum and for our region."

At the press conference, Dr. Dianne Newell (UBC professor of History) talked about the significance of the site and the Mill and "the link between UBC and Britannia, which dates back to the mine's early days."

According to a press release, the Mill was used for concentrating copper ore from Britannia Mountain and was part of a low grade copper mining complex which operated for 70 years.

During that time, Britannia employed over 60,000 people and produced over 50 million tons of raw copper ore. The operation was a leading producer of copper from 1925 to 1930.

In those years, the mine changed hands a few times, finally resting under the responsibility of the Britannia Beach Historical Society. The people of Britannia wanted to preserve their past heritage.

Also, the Mill is "gravity fed", which is rare in North America. It is unique in the sense that the public can easily access the museum structure from nearby Vancouver via Highway 99.

This year, marks the centennial of the first discovery of copper at Britannia.

To celebrate, the museum will have a special Discovery Day event open to the public on May 14. It will be sponsored by the Royal Hudson and B.C.R.

According to Executive Director Marilyn Mullan, the visitors will experience "a day in the life of a mining village."

Last year, the mine had about 20,000 visitors. That's down from their high of 45,000.

Therefore, this year, the Mining Museum will be open only five days a week and not seven days as in previous years (Wednesday to Sunday). Mullan said there are concerns about the condition of the highway.

Also, this year, tours will be escorted around the Mill, and not inside.

The museum may get sued if someone gets hurt inside, Mullan said.

However, other parts of the tour are unaffected.

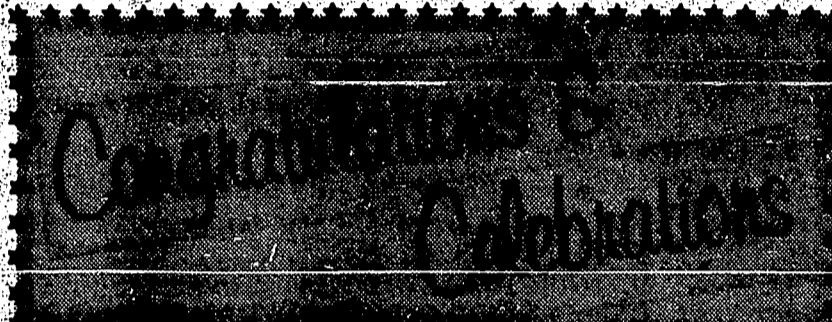

One part of the visit that may prove exciting anytime, is the tour of the mine itself.

A special train goes a quarter mile into the mountain.

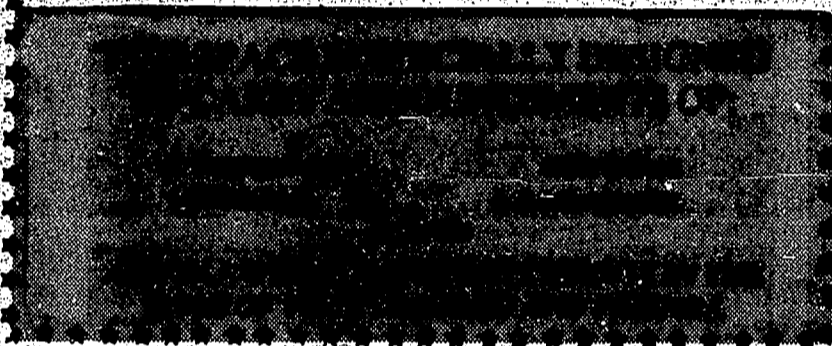

It's interesting to note that the original beams are still supporting the mine.

Squamish benefits from the exhibit as well.

The museum does about 90 percent of its purchasing in Squamish.

Log homes Japan-bound

The entrepreneurial spirit is alive and well in Squamish.

Brent McIvor, 34, a former school teacher, now heads up a log house building company whose future looks favorable.

After eight years of making 'custom luxury' homes in Whistler, McIvor has tapped into the Japanese market.

His company, Ultimate Log Homes Ltd., hand crafts the log houses from a work site at the end of Pemberton St. in Squamish. Part of the operation can be seen from the Blind Channel bridge.

The company builds the log houses from the bottom up. McIvor emphasizes the houses are custom made with 'master craftsmanship' and not mass produced with 'interchangeable' parts or machine cut. This makes replacing a missing or damaged piece difficult, but the safety and security of the homes is ensured in an unusual way.

After sanding and hand filing each log to fit, assembling the house, cutting out the arches, attaching the roof, and giving the wood three coats of finish, the complete log house is disassembled.

Each log is numbered and then individually wrapped to protect the finish during the overseas voyage that awaits. The custom cut logs are then put into a container and taken to the port where they are loaded onto a ship heading for Japan.

The procedure may seem repetitive, but for McIvor it makes business sense.

"This is for the most part master craftsmanship. How many (craftsmen) would want to relocate? The cost is too much (in Japan)."

Instead, in Japan, trained workers under the direction of a contractor, reassemble the homes. McIvor said his houses are bought as recreational houses or homes away from home by upper-middle class Japanese.

McIvor employs between 10 and 14 people. Each crew works four days on (10 to 12 hour shifts) and four days off. Currently, the company produces one complete log home per month with an average 1,000 square feet of space.

"I envisage at least these many (employees) and possibly doubling (the number)."

Later, he said, "No reason we couldn't be building four or five houses, at this size, a month."

"We are to Japan as Mexico is to the U.S. (not that we don't pay the fellows well) but in terms of the exchange rate," McIvor said.

However, he said there are "growing pains of dealing with Japanese. It's a long slow process. (But, we're) swamped with work."

Ultimate Log Homes Ltd. uses Western Red Cedar. The logs are usually about 120 to 200 years old.

Perhaps the pull for his cedar log houses is the special place cedar has in the hearts and heritage of some Japanese.

McIvor said shoguns had a similar type of cedar planted in the areas they frequented about 300 to 600 years ago. They are now good-sized trees.

Also, the red cedar has a resin that is resistant to fungus and that termites dislike.

McIvor first started dealing with the Japanese market when Mitsui, one of Japan's big trading companies, sent seven of its men on a round-the-world tour.

The men were impressed with McIvor's company because it did hand crafted red cedar log homes.

Since then, about 30 different Japanese companies have approached him.

McIvor would not reveal any financial facts about his company, but he did say this: "(The product is) very high quality. Anything less is not good (enough) for the Japanese.

For example, where the roof meets the outside wall of the house, an arch is cut free hand with the use of a template. The arch serves as a support for the roof over-hang.

Also, after the finish is applied to the wood inside and outside, McIvor said, it "literally looks like furniture."

McIvor worked with Keith Kendall, a former physical education teacher, but now in the log home industry, over in Japan for a month. Both former teachers said they enjoy what they are doing now and like working with the Japanese.

"Very hospitable, honest people," Kendall said.

McIvor agreed. "(They are) good people to deal with."

If log homes are not making a comeback here, the trend in Japan seems to be pointing the other way. That is good news for McIvor and his company. He said there is a possibility of doing a hotel project for Mitsui.

Finally, McIvor said, "The spin-off in terms of Canadian jobs is quite considerable from the Japanese economy."

If things go well, Squamish area craftsmen may look forward to a few more jobs coming their way.

Garibaldi Communications, a new local branch of Canadian Electronics Corporation, has opened its doors for communications sales and service to customers in Squamish, Whistler and Pemberton. Here, owners Richard Toop (right) and David Antonides pose at their new location, 40350 Government Road, next to Howe Sound Equipment.

Communications business new to Squamish

A new business offering communications sales and service to Squamish, Whistler and Pemberton has set up office in Squamish.

Garibaldi Communications is a subsidiary of Canadian Electronics Corporation, a national Motorola sales and service agent which has served Powell River, North Vancouver Island, and the Sunshine Coast for the past 30 years under the trade name, Powellcom Electronics.

The company recently expanded to open its Squamish branch at 40350 Government Road, next to Howe Sound Equipment.

The Squamish branch has full-time technicians on staff working from "state of the art" electronic labs, which are complemented by sales divisions.

Over past years, the company has provided communications systems from start to finish for many municipalities, cities and regional districts located throughout the province, as well as provincial and federal government agencies, including fire departments and emergency health and ambulance.

Owners Richard Toop and David Antonides, both from Powell River, say Canadian Electronics "prides" itself on every facet of operation, which includes a large rental inventory to meet the immediate requirements of the communications industry, combined with a staff licensed by the Ministry of the Attorney General and experienced in the design, installation, and service of both fire and intrusion protection systems.

Canadian Electronics also acts as an agent for the following companies: B.C. Tel-Autotel Communications, Racal Decca Canada-Marine Radar, Southern Marine Research-Marine Electronics, and Panasonic Ltd.-C.C.T.V. Division.

Toop, who will remain in Powell River but travel to Squamish twice monthly, and his partner, Antonides, who will reside in Squamish, say their company attempts to keep abreast of new technological changes in the electronic industry and intends to service the community with the high standard of performance it has provided during past years.

CAR & CYCLE CARE

Commonly Asked Maintenance Questions

Special Contract Rates Are Available For This Feature! Call Doug 892-5131 - 892-3018

Q: I want to make sure that my car's exhaust system is working properly. What should I look for?

A: Due to the necessity of having to inspect the undercarriage of the vehicle, this check should be carried out by a properly equipped garage. This should be done at least once a year.

NOTE: A faulty exhaust system can lead to carbon monoxide poisoning. You can't see, smell or taste this deadly gas. Warning of its presence includes: drowsiness, lightheadedness or headache. If you notice any of these symptoms while driving, open all the windows and head for the nearest garage to have the leak repaired.

When in doubt - check your owner's manual. Your manual was developed by the company that manufactured your car, and they should know best.

If you want answers to other questions regarding vehicle maintenance, BCAA members can contact BCAA Technical Advisory.

'The Wonder Years': Low-concept angst

By Evan Levine

Television's view of the child as protagonist has ranged from the endlessly adorable ("Family Affair") to the supposedly typical ("Leave it to Beaver") to the winsomely precocious ("The Courtship of Eddie's Father"). Adult views of children have ranged from the patronizing to the sympathetic. But no show has fused the adult view with that of the child's. Now, ABC's "The Wonder Years," debuting Tuesday, March 15, attempts to explore the inner life of an adolescent by combining his views with those of his adult self; an ironic voice-over gives the show its definition.

Alley Mills

The series, set in 1968, was created by Neal Marlens and Carol Black, who were previously known as a team for writing the film "Soul Man." "The Wonder Years" looks at the adolescent angst of Kevin Arnold (Fred Savage), a suburbanite with such typical trappings as a malevolent older brother (Jason Hervey), a dizzy older sister (Olivia Dabo), a stay-at-home mom (Alley Mills) and an overworked dad (Dan Lauria). While the elements are not new, the commentary that contradicts the action because of the adult view and the on-target writing are.

"The format is different," admits Marlens, who is married to Black. "The whole idea of an accurate depiction of kids told in this format is new." Kevin's first kiss, choosing an outfit for the first day of school and appropriate dinner conversation ("Don't upset your father," Mom says, while Karen, Kevin's sister, takes that moment to announce, "I'm getting birth control pills"), ring especially true.

In ABC's "The Wonder Years," Fred Savage stars as an adolescent growing up in the late '60s. The series, which uses a voice-over narration of the adult Kevin looking back, airs Tuesday, March 15.

One of the duo's most pressing reasons for creating the series was to dispel the myth of the suburbanite as uninformed drudge. "This covers our experiences," says Black. "Everything you see - from waiting to gauge dad's mood when he comes home, to the whole climate of the war and the feelings of doom. There were a lot of predictions of doom. Everyone thought that by 1988, we'd be living in glass houses that were going to blow up."

The show is at its best when the '60s become a backdrop, and the everyday nuances of Kevin's life shine through. "It's very low-concept," admits Marlens, who also created ABC's "Growing Pains." "There are no talking horses or anything."

And what do the two want from the series? For Black, it's favorable notices from her hometown paper, The Washington Post. "They hate whatever I write," she says. "All I want is not to be trashed by them."

The movie listings for March 9 thru March 15 were unavailable at press time. We apologize for any inconvenience.

Move over Monopoly, Trivial Pursuit and Pic-tionary... "Squamish" is the hot new name of the game.

The Squamish Centennial Committee has come up with a board game, The Game of Squamish, which it will produce and market in conjunction with this 100th birthday year of the settlement of Squamish. It looks like Monopoly, but instead of "Boardwalk" and "Park Place" there are squares featuring local companies, businesses, and organizations. The Committee anticipates the game will be a hit with local residents, and appeal to visitors as a souvenir of their stay in Squamish. The Committee also hopes sales of the game, which will retail for about $18.95, will generate funds for the various Centennial projects planned throughout the year. An initial order of 500 games is planned.

But, in order to produce the game, the Committee needs to sell the 28 advertising spaces available on the game board. Spaces cost $225, and will be allocated on a first-come, first-served basis.

Any business or organization interested in participating by buying ad space is asked to contact committee member Ken Warkentin at 892-3112, Wayne Broomfield, Mtn-FM Radio, at 892-9381, or Maureen Gilmour, Squamish Times, at 892-5131.

Win or lose, Squamish-style

Squaring off...Overwaitea Manager Ron Ballard (left) and IGA Manager Dan Shollert trade maneuvers in a friendly--but frenzied--battle of wits and determination. The game? The Game of Squamish, a new board game to be produced and marketed by the Centennial Committee to help raise money for Squamish's 100th birthday celebration.

GARIBALDI PROVINCIAL PARK OPEN HOUSE

In an effort to prepare the best possible management plan for Garibaldi Park an open house will be held to discuss background information and issues and to obtain public input.

Howe Sound Ringette Association is holding a super garage sale on Saturday, starting at 10 a.m., in the Squamish Elementary School parking lot. Three teams from the Association are heading to Prince George for the B.C. Provincial Tournament on March 24-27, and the girls would really love your support at this sale. Anyone wishing to donate items is asked to call 892-5768 or 898-5298. Arrangements will be made for pick up of goods as well.

Mr. and Mrs. George McKeeman of Montague, Prince Edward Island, are enjoying an extended visit with their family, Gail and Merrill Ross.

At the Chamber of Commerce meeting on Tuesday, March 15, the guest speaker will be Carl Rathburn, vice-president of Weldwood. The meeting will be held in the Chieftain Hotel at 12 noon.

Dick and Evelyn Dawson are pleased to have their daughter-in-law, Jan Dawson, and grandsons, Tyrel and Lorne, visiting them from the Queen Charlottes. Jan's mother, Mary Grapentine, from Winnipeg, arrived last weekend for a visit.

Registrations are still being taken for the workshop on "Helping the Family Deal With Death and Grieving." It was originally scheduled for the School Board Media Centre on Saturday, but the location has been changed to Howe Sound Secondary School, from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Please call the School Board office at 892-5228, local 113, to register. Those wishing to are welcome to take a bag lunch along with them.

Checking out the latest shows and other attractions at Las Vegas recently were Bob and Pindy Mahnger.

The next offering by Howe Sound Drama Club, the comedy, "Lord Arthur Savile's Crime", is set in the 1890's. To complete the set, Victorian-style furniture—love seat, tables and chairs—is needed. Roseanna at 898-5023 would like to hear from you if you are able to assist the Club. Great care will be taken of any furniture loaned to the Club.

Our reporter, Martin Powell, arrived here from Toronto in early January, and he is still getting to know the area. Well, I'll bet he knows a whole lot more about the community after squiring around a couple of his friends, Rob Bacchin and Dale Nolan, who arrived from Toronto last week. It is their first visit west and...they are having a great time!

When the Variety Club Telethon takes to the air waves on BCTV March 26 and 27, the Squamish Baptist Church Kids Chorale will have a nice donation ready to present. Another garage sale, sponsored by these ambitious young people, will be held on Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 2553 Boulevard (corner Highway North).

Wedding anniversary wishes to: Mr. and Mrs. George Furniss, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Schnurr, Mr. and Mrs. Art Davis, Mr. and Mrs. John Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Del Alton, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Noble, and Mr. and Mrs. Brad McStay.

The time is fast approaching...when the Vancouver Opera Society will present An Evening of Opera, "Bizet to Broadway." The opera company will be on stage at the Civic Centre auditorium on Friday night at 7:30 p.m. Squamish Public Library is sponsoring this event for the community's enjoyment and naturally, the Board is hoping for a good turnout. Tickets ($10 adults, $5 seniors and under 15) are available at the Library, Mostly Books, and Sea to Sky Books. If you are unable to purchase tickets ahead of time, pick yours up at the door.

I don't think I ever watched as much television as I did during the two weeks of the Olympics. Besides the competition, the world found out what Western hospitality—Calgarian-style—was all about! Probably many people from here attended, but a couple I know who did for sure was Bert and Diane Ionson, and daughters, Dana and Cari. They had a great time and took in many events. Thanks so much for sending me those post-cards from the Olympics, Bert.

Guys and gals who haven't registered for the Howe Sound Minor Baseball season will have a chance to do so on Wednesday and Thursday this week, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the Civic Centre. Parents or players wishing more information should call 898-5682.

It's birthday time this week for: Evelyn Dawson (you're getting younger-looking every year, Ev), Nola Sidsworth, Mark Van Den Maagdenberg, Brian Gauthier, Glen Jackson, Roseina Pillay, Geraldine Moody, Larry Marshall, Jack Edwards, Joseph Brooks, David Phillips, George Moody, Marianne Mooman, Shannon Rosser, Candace Ayres, Tanya Wulff, Darryl Dougall, and Wayne French.

Congrats also to: Heather Gatzke, Shalvenie Nand, Rory Fogarty, Courtney Kent, Paula Turner, Alex Ryan, Billy McCutcheon, Mathew Packard, Patrick Moloney, Lyndsey Brohman, Michael Gaal, Deo Pontini, Jean Morey, Marjorie Toman, Linda Mae Akers, John Flook, Shawna Tamburini, Trevor Hebert, Zoe Anderson, Alexis Ciuk, Doris Kennedy, Danny Ellis, Phil Ellis, Jim MacNeil, Brandie Pickering, Miranda Hadden, Michael McStay, Stephanie Maroulis, Michael Esplen, and Kelvin Johnston.

Today, Miss Lisa Baker-Natral celebrates her first birthday.

Officially, Ev McCartney only gets to celebrate her birthday every four years. Belated greetings to this lady, whose birthday was Feb. 29.

Isn't it nice when someone else does the baking and you get to enjoy it?? St. Joseph's Catholic Women's League is holding a bake sale at Overweatea this Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and I know the tables will be laden with an assortment of luscious cakes, pies, squares, etc.

Sporting winter tans after spending two weeks in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, are Harold and Shirley Halvorson. Shirley said they met several Squamish residents, who were also soaking up the sunshine.

Sean Trudeau "showered" by Times

Sean Trudeau, advertising manager at the Squamish Times, was given a surprise bridal shower by fellow co-workers Feb. 12:

The bride-to-be was "kidnapped" from her office by Mickie Gilmour and Carol Adams, and taken to the home of her colleague, Betty Clay, where co-workers awaited her arrival armed with food, drink and gifts.

Co-conspirators included Lorena Merlo, Jesse Mahnger, Edwina Eckersley, Rose Tallow, and Dorothy Hoodspith. Maureen Gilmour, unable to attend, sent along best wishes and later admitted equal guilt in the kidnapping plot.

Guests drooled along with Sean as she opened her gifts, all featuring a "lingerie" theme.

Later, Sean obligingly posed for pictures wearing the unusual square-shaped bridal bonnet, artistically arranged by Jesse Mahnger. The guests then feasted on assorted delicacies, the piece de resistance of which was the heart-shaped shower cake, made by the loving hands of Mickie Gilmour and Carol Adams.

Following the shower, the guest of honor and her cohorts proceeded to the Cliffside Pub for a continuation of the merriment, where she was met by the groom-to-be, Wayne Potter. Wayne was presented with "his" shower gift (also featuring the "lingerie" theme), compliments of Betty, Mickie and Carol.

Sean and Wayne have since married, and are currently vacationing in Puerto Vallarta. Sean's Times pals, meanwhile, sit glumly back at the office, taking turns throwing darts at their soon-to-be tanned colleague's picture.

Here's to a great honeymoon, Sean and Wayne (nudge, nudge)!

Couple chooses March wedding

Betty Burge, a nine-year resident of Squamish, will be united in marriage with Steven Daschuk of Burnaby, on March 12.

The ceremony and reception will be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Sowerby of Garibaldi Highlands.

A scriptural talk and legal vows will be performed by Mr. Arthur Twiss, also of Squamish.

April wedding for Susan Cannon

Earl and Diane Cannon of Squamish are pleased to announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Susan Janet, to Calvin Sam, son of Juke and Pauline Sam of Vancouver.

The wedding ceremony will take place at 3:30 p.m., April 30, in East Burnaby United Church, Burnaby.

You might say the game of ringette has been kind to Squamish.

Though in the beginning, the problem was always a lack of players and an opposition willing to travel the highway; the local organization, through hard work and dedication, has persevered, for the most part.

That work has paid off in the form of creating a competitive atmosphere, while giving the players an outlet to simply enjoy the sport, not to mention some great memories.

But, not to ignore the accomplishments of those who continue to play out of the Civic Centre, a few local girls have moved on to reach the ultimate of their sport.

Yvonne Hunter and Carla Brozer are two such girls.

Many people are familiar with just what Hunter has done in ringette, and in other sports. Playing out of the North Shore Winter Club, Yvonne has gone to the national championships five times, named to the second all-star team two years ago, making the first string last year.

This year, competing at the 18-26 age group, or Debs, Hunter will travel to Winnipeg in April for her sixth consecutive nationals.

To get there, she and her team, which is just that instead of a group of all-stars for the first time in B.C., representing North-West Van and the NSWC, had to knock off PoCo-Langley-Aldergrove zone in a best of three series, 7-4 and 8-7.

And that is where a strange twist enters the picture.

The assistant coach of the latter squad, Jim Wright, also happens to be the coach of the 16 to 17-year-old B.C. Belle All-Star team, who will be going to Manitoba as well for the Canadian finals.

And on that team, between the pipes, is another Squamishite, Carla Brozer.

Like Hunter, Brozer plays out of Vancouver, and though this may not be her first trip to the nationals, an injury prevented her from playing the first time she was named to the team.

On February 27, Brozer and her teammates, along with Wright and manager Donna Harvey, were in town for an evening of fund-raising bingo. Despite being a group of teenagers who come from a variety of backgrounds and teams, they shared several things in common, not to mention a love for ringette and a willingness to sacrifice other things and to tighten their belts when it comes to school.

"It means we have less time to study," said keeper Stephanie Maki, after explaining that besides practising and playing with the B.C. team, each individual has to practise and compete on their league squads as well.

Dividing their time between two teams, school, work and the like isn't easy, but on each face one can see that they are all enjoying the experience.

Meeting new friends is high on their lists of thrills, and perhaps none typifies that more than Amy Holt and Michelle Baillie.

"Before I played with her on the same team," said Holt about Baillie (the former plays out of North-West Van, the latter, PoCo), "we hated each other. I never knew how nice she was."

Tongue out of cheek, it was Coach Wright (some players sport buttons proclaiming, "I love Jim") who best summed up the team and the work involved.

"This is the most evenly balanced team I've ever coached (he's had six). It may not be the most talented, but they're diggers. They give their heart and soul for the team.

"It takes dedication by the players to be at this level. Last year, we (the B.C. Belles) got a bronze at the nationals and people here don't realize what that means for us; to get third when we're picking from 36-40 kids to form a team, while back east (where the sport is very popular), there are thousands who are playing constantly together as a team.

"In B.C., there are too many other things for the kids to do, such as skiing, for example. The girls can take their boyfriends skiing, but you won't see any of them at a ringette game, and I don't blame them."

ICE CHIPS--The nationals, which will be celebrating its 10th anniversary, takes place April 11-17. The Belle team would like to thank Overwaita and the Legion for their help in the bingo night.

The B.C. Belle All-Star Team. (Top row, left to right) Donna Harvey (manager), Joyce Rogers (PoCo), Michelle Baillie (PoCo), Marjorie Mayrs (N.W. Van), Kelly Dairon (NSWC), Jill Lundin (PoCo), Laura Knowles (NSWC), Shelley Harvey (Langley). (Bottom row) Marni Heed (N.W. Van), Stephanie Maki (NSWC), Carla Brozer (NSWC), Kim Osmond (PoCo), Jim Wright (coach). Missing: Amy Holt (N.W. Van).

Garibaldi Bowling Lanes played host to 80 bowlers, including 60 from Gibsons and the North Shore, in the zone finals of the National Classified on Sunday.

Divided into teams representing their home lanes, Garibaldi bowlers fared quite well.

In the men's division, locals Lance Yearly, Ron Barr, Lyn Lindsay, Gerd Schultheiss, and Ken Schneider finished in 2nd place, with a three-game total pin fall of 2,893, just one pin behind the winners from Gibsons Lanes.

In the women's division, Garibaldi Lanes again put in a good showing, with one team, made up of Marg Lobesz, Pam Miller, Teresa Zimmaro, Sheryl Mundy, and Norma Slee, bowling a 2,745, good for second place and 39 pins behind the winners from North Shore Bowl.

Tied for third with 2,675, was another Garibaldi Lanes quintet of Anne Fryer, Shannon Morrison, Terry Miller, Liz Anderson, and Debbie Kary. Kary recently returned from a trip to Palm Springs which she won in December's Sun Bowl.

And speaking of trips, two more patrons of Garibaldi Lanes will be flying to Hawaii for a week's vacation.

On Saturday in Kamloops, the tandem of Larry Burroughs and Christine Eckersley each won a trip for two, as they went 310 pins over their average in five games to win the Provincial P.O.A. Tournament.

Also competing was the team of Ken Schneider and Adrian Wilson, finishing 16th overall. Meanwhile, Evelyn Tourand, in Kamloops to compete in the Provincial League Executive Tournament, came in second. Great bowling and enjoy your trips!

This week has been a busy one on the ice for local teams, and it promises to get busier as the Howe Sound Midget Rep Squad and the Howe Sound Ringette Juniors prepare to leave for the Winter Games in Dawson Creek.

And while everyone is wishing them luck, this past week the ringers relied on simple hard work.

On Friday, the Juniors knocked off Chilliwack 8-6, followed up with a Saturday 6-6 tie versus Aldergrove, and on Sunday at home they defeated Chilliwack 10-2.

Meanwhile, the Tweens played twice on Sunday, winning 8-3 against Burnaby in the morning, and tying 6-6 with a bolstered PoCo line-up later in the day.

The Petites lost 9-4 to PoCo #2.

This week, be on the lookout for ringette players fund-raising for their trip to the Games.

The second division Pharmasave, on goals by Glen Rivett and Reg Fogarty, defeated Jerry's Cove 2-0 on Sunday.

Despite a shortage of players, which made them use every available man, Pharmasave put in a strong team performance, including solid efforts by the front line of John Cameron, Rivett, and Fogarty.

Barry Galley collected the shutout in net, as Pharmasave, with three games left, including a home date Sunday at 2 p.m. versus Meridian Arms, can capture the league title with wins.

The Squamish Terminals, suffering a disappointing 2-0 loss at the hands of North Vancouver, were knocked out of the Provincial Cup on Sunday.

Down to the minimum 11 players, and missing some key players, the Terminals stayed even until the second half when North Vancouver was able to capitalize on two of their chances for the deserving victory.

But the season is far from over for Squamish, as they center the attentions on the league and the league cup.

On March 19, they will be playing Killarney at Killarney Stadium in North Vancouver, in the League Three District Final.

Tennis Club meeting March 20

The Squamish Tennis Club will hold its first general meeting for 1988 on Sunday, Mar. 20, at 8 p.m.

The general meeting, which will be preceded by an executive meeting, will be held in the junior lounge at the Civic Centre.

Committees will report on a number of exciting projects for the new season. Plans will also be discussed for a full and active tennis season, with emphasis on instruction and tournaments for all ages, from beginners to competitive players.

According to President Parm Johal, "Club activities will be designed to have everyone participating, regardless of skills."

SOAR sets sail

Plans for the annual Squamish Open Air Regatta (SOAR) are underway, and organizers are expecting some 30 to 40 out-of-town competitors.

This year's event will be held Aug. 6 and 7.

The popular sailboat race draws many Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island competitors, who flock to the Howe Sound competition which boasts ideal wind and water conditions.

Foster families needed

British Columbia is currently facing a "desperate" shortage of foster homes, according to Claude Richmond, Minister of Social Services and Housing.

In an effort to recruit foster families, the Ministry is undertaking a major advertising campaign to encourage families to provide temporary homes for children and young people in need.

"We now need to establish a partnership with community groups to take the message to the grassroots and to seek out new foster families," the Minister said.

Ministry staff will hold a community consultation for the Squamish area on Tuesday, Mar. 8, from noon to 2 p.m., at the Garibaldi Highlander Hotel. At that meeting, staff will explain how the problem is impacting the Squamish area, Richmond said.

"Our research suggests there are many people who would be prepared to respond to the needs of children and young people who, for a variety of reasons, need a temporary home away from home.

"It appears they are unaware of the need or perhaps need to learn a little more about what is involved before coming forward."

Representatives of various community groups and organizations have been invited to attend the luncheon meeting.

Organization aids community

The Squamish Grand Knight of Knights of Columbus wants to tell people what his group does.

"(I want to) shed a bit of light on us," Grand Knight Joe Bukowsky said.

He said he realized not many people know what the group is about or stands for when he was questioned recently at a local bakery.

Bukowsky told the Times that the organization primarily raises money for charities.

The Squamish chapter formed about three years ago, and so far has raised $6,000, or about $2,000 a year.

Some of the charities the group helps in the community are: soccer teams, Boy Scouts, Big Brothers, Big Sisters, Birthright, Hilltop House, and scholarships available within the Knights of Columbus membership.

The Squamish Knights of Columbus council is Number 8943 of a world-wide organization. It has 37 members in Squamish, 76 councils in B.C. and the Yukon, and 1.5 million world-wide.

"People don't realize how big we are," Bukowsky said.

One of the best ideas the Squamish group has had is the Soccer Shootout competition for young players aged nine to 15, according to Bukowsky.

This year, he said, the competition will be renamed from the "Howe Sound Soccer Shootout" to the "Walter Sweeney Memorial Shootout".

Joe Bukowsky and his son Myles.

The Knights of Columbus raise money by member dues, B.C. Charity Appeal lottery tickets, and other events. Last week, they held a garage sale.

In the fiscal year 1986 to 1987, together all the councils raised $66 million for charity and donated 20 million man-hours.

Bukowsky said the Knights of Columbus is a Catholic men's group that has four ideals: charity, unity, fraternity, and patriotism.

The ideals are synonymous with the Catholic Church. The group is also anti-pornography and pro-life, and believes the family unit is the backbone of society, he said.

The international organization owns a life insurance company that Bukowsky said is one of the top four insurance firms.

The Knights of Columbus originated in 1881 in the U.S. mining town of New Haven. A parish priest provided aid to widows and orphans of miners who died.

The international organization has also helped mentally retarded people.

"Squamish is a small piece of a very large puzzle. The mentally retarded receive a lot of help from the Knights of Columbus."

He said the basic fundamental of the organization is charity, and to "love thy neighbor."

"We are available for help. Contact me," Bukowsky said. He said his name and telephone number are registered at the Chamber of Commerce.

To sum up the meaning of the group, Bukowsky said, "(It's for the) betterment of mankind."

COURT

Appearing in Squamish Provincial Court Feb. 23, Duncan Fairfield, charged with possession of a narcotic, was fined $100, in default 10 days.

Richard Candy, charged with possession of a prohibited weapon, was given a conditional discharge and placed on probation for one year.

Glen Jackson, charged with theft over, was sentenced to six months in jail and placed on three years' probation.

David Thornton, charged with driving without due care and attention, was fined $100.

Robert Daws, charged with possession of a narcotic, was fined $100, in default 10 days.

Scott Olson, charged with possession of a narcotic, was given a conditional discharge and placed on probation for one year.

Douglas Kempf, charged with possession of a narcotic, was given a conditional discharge and placed on probation for one year.

Appearing Feb. 25, Frederick Baker, charged with assaulting a peace officer, was given a conditional discharge and six months' probation.

Kenneth Tamburini, charged with dangerous driving, was sentenced to 45 days in jail, to be served intermittently.

POLICE

V.C. Rail police reported Feb. 13 that someone had placed on the tracks some railway "torpedoes", emergency explosive devices to warn oncoming trains of hazardous situations ahead.

Squamish RCMP are advising the public that the torpedoes are explosives and could be ignited if tampered with, posing potential threat to fingers and eyesight.

Cpl. Dan Larratt said the torpedoes, usually fluorescent red in color, are marked with caution warnings.

Larratt said anyone who comes into possession of one of these devices should turn it in to the RCMP.

Papa Tony's pizza place was the victim of a bogus order for two pizzas placed by telephone Feb. 13.

Police said when the delivery person arrived at the address given, the resident said he had not placed any pizza order.

Cpl. Dan Larratt of the Squamish RCMP commented that such an incident is "frustrating" to the businessman, who must absorb the loss, which eventually gets passed on to the consumer.

"Rest assured, if we ever do resolve who placed that order, he will be charged," Larratt said.

Six windows were reported broken at the Garibaldi Highlands Elementary School at approximately 3:45 p.m. Feb. 14.

Police have no suspects.

Tools and goods valued in excess of $50,000 were reported stolen from the Weldwood shop at 21 mile in the Upper Squamish Feb. 15.

Police have no suspects to date.

Payless Auto Towing reported the theft of two dollies from a tow truck Feb. 20.

Police have no suspects.

A billfold containing I.D. and a small amount of cash was reported stolen from a vehicle parked at a residence on Diamond Head Road Feb. 22.

Reliance Distributors reported the theft of a receiving antenna from its Clarke Road location.

Police have no suspects.

New play in the works

The Howe Sound Drama Club is busy working on a large production scheduled for the second and third weekend in April.

The three-act play, "Lord Arthur Savile's Crime", is directed by Roseanna Rudolph, and has a cast of 10. This zany, madcap comedy is set in the 1890's, with set and costumes reflecting this time period.

The Club will also be entering the North Shore Drama Festival this spring with the one-act play, "Patio." It was presented last fall in the Brackendale Art Gallery.

Members and newcomers are requested to attend the next general meeting of the Howe Sound Drama Club on Tuesday, Mar. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in Brackendale Art Gallery.

Store offers shopping alternative

Need new clothes but find yourself short of cash?

A local store may just have the solution for people with tight budgets or families whose children seem to be growing out of their clothes by the day.

Hidden Value Boutique, located on Cleveland Ave. just opposite the post office, offers a wide range of ladies', men's and children's used clothing at practically giveaway prices.

Children's clothing items sell for about 50 cents apiece, ladies' blouses go for $1, dresses for $2, and coats--the most expensive items--are about $5.

Everything is clean, says store owner Elizabeth Torkoly, who haunts flea markets and garage sales in Vancouver for her merchandise, "and cheap."

Hidden Value Boutique is open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

daily, closed Sundays and Mondays.
