Garibaidi resort backers pay visit

Should approval be given for a major ski resort near Garibaldi Mountain, a close relationship will be struck between Squamish Council and Garibaldi Alpen Resorts Ltd., its backers say.

Garibaldi Alpen chairman Wolfgang Richter flew in from California to join Jay Flood, the resort's chief designer and entrepreneur Roberto Aquilini in a visit to Squamish Council May 15.

for employee housing, Flood said, adding that it will be a "wonderful opportunity" for employees to live at the resort.

One million dollars will be set saids to construct levy and aside to construct low and middle income employee housing, he said.

If approved by Crown Lands, the project will provide employment for approximately 1,000 workers in the building stage, and between 250 and 1,000 permanent employees

By Shari Bishop Editor - The Times

"As soon as they [Crown Lands] let us go, we'll be spending a lot of time with you," said Flood, who headed the presentation to Council.
"We hope there will be a favourable review of the application by July 1."

Flood, who was director of land development for Idaho's Sun Valley in the 1960's, said the investment group behind the current project realizes "it's going to take a lot of private money" to provide an infrastructure — roads, water and sewers — for the 1,280-hectares slated for the ski resort.

"We have the market, we have the players to give this thing a shot."

Another point recognized at the concept stage was the need over the next 10 years.

Ald. Chuck Harvey questioned the proposal's presentation as primarily a ski resort, and secondly as a real estate venture. He noted the number of hotels, condominiums, single family, and commercial spaces planned for in the development proposal:

"The real estate isn't going to work unless the skiing works," Flood said.

While skiing will be the focus of the resort -- the proposal states there is potential for a 195-day season -- other recreational opportunities offered in nearby Squamish will also attract visitors.

Fairfield convicted of 12 charges

A Vancouver man has been convicted of attempted sexual assault and attempted abduction charges laid by Squamish RCMP in September last year.

David Fairfield, 52, appeared in Vancouver County Court Friday before Judge Harding to hear the decision on 12 charges laid after three elementary school girls were approached at the beginning of the school year. He was convicted of all 12.

Driving a rented red '89 Dodge Spirit, Fairfield approached young girls near Mamquam Elementary School Sept. 7 and near Brackendale Elementary Sept. 20.

According to Const. Julio Krenz, the general investigator on the case in Squamish, the Crown Prosecutor will make an application to the Attorney-General's Department to designate Fairfield a dangerous sex offender. This could mean a lengthy jail term with regular psychiatric assessment.

The application, reviewed by the Attorney General, will be followed by a hearing, anticipated in July, Krenz said.

Aldermen increase their indemnities

Council members will be getting a raise this year. At a special Council meeting Friday, Squamish aldermen gave themselves a five per cent increase and increased the mayor's indemnity $500.

Mayor Phil Turner alone opposed the raises, which will put the aldermen's indemnity at just over $10,000 a year and the Mayor's at about $18,000.

The raises were not justified given the aldermen's time commitments have been reduced with the dissolution of the mayor's advisory committee system, Turner said.

He accused the aldermen of "feathering your own nests" and "lining your own pockets" at the public's expense.

In a memo to Council, which was distributed to all media in Sea to Sky Country, he accused the Council of the day of having "deliberately deceived the local media and taxpayers by significantly increasing the mayor's indemnity by 70 per cent and Council's [the aldermen's] indemnity by 50 per cent in one year."

He said it was "scandalous" that the mayor's and the aldermen's indemnities had risen 104 per cent and 114 per cent respectively and that he was "disappointed" that the media had not covered the issue.

"However, after having witnessed and personally experiencing [sic] the brunt of immature and irresponsible sensationalist, interpretive, and misleading reporting in The Squamish Times during my term in office, I can understand how this occurred," Turner said.

Ald. Corinne Lonsdale said the aldermen were not looking for a big increase, but only for what was in line with the rising cost of living.

Ald. Ron Barr, a Council member for 11 years, told The Times there have been rapid increases in recent years to bring Council members' indemnities in line with other municipalities in B.C.

"I don't care what [percentages] he [Turner] quotes. It's only brought us on a level with other communities.

"We were getting poverty pay, compared to other communities."

Ald. Lynn Wilbur said keeping the indemnities up would make sitting on Council feasible for people from all walks of life, including those paid hourly wages.

Hours spent at meetings and events are not compensated for by their regular employers. Those members who are salaried or self employed must often make up time spent on Council work on weekends and evenings.

If Turner did not want his raise, some of the Aldermen had suggestions on what he could do with it.

"I think you can take your raise and buy a bigger hat," Ald. Chuck Harvey said.

Wilbur suggested Turner donate the difference to the municipality if he doesn't want it

$3.4 million pool design accepted; referendum looms

Design plans for a $3.4 million indoor pool for the community have been accepted by Squamish Council, and a referendum could be held as early as this July.

could stand," he said.

Ald. Corinne Lonsdale agreed, saying that taxpayers are more informed and aware of where their dollars are going when called upon to pay their taxpayers can expect with the construction of a pool, Treasurer Charlie Schilberg took a selection of "sample owners" in Squamish, applying three alternatives of funding: 'A': $1 million received, 'B': $500,000 received, and 'C': no funding received.

By Shari Bishop Editor - The Times

"It's realistic," Ald. Chuck Harvey said at Council's May 15 meeting. "Now it's up to us to present a package to the community."

Members of the Parks and Recreation Commission, including its Indoor Pool Sub-Committee attended Council when the design plans for the proposed facility were finally rolled out on the table.

- In order to keep the pool within a feasible budget -while still maintaining the desired amenities -- designs created by Edmonton's Camrec Facilities Consultants Ltd. were revised a total of three times.

After a number of meetings with the architects, members of the Pool Sub-Committee said they felt it was important to provide a six-lane pool, as well as some facilities that would encourage public use. These include a 25-seat whirl pool, a separate shallow pool, a steam room, an outdoor patio, and a wide expanse of deck space.
With land at the field side of the Civic Centre set aside for the pool, the design allows for future expansion.

The Recreation Commission recommended that Council go ahead with a referendum for a number of reasons.

With the possibility of a fall election in B.C., there may be a better chance of receiving a larger portion of GO BC funds, construction begun before the GST takes effect would keep costs down, and a referendum held in the near future would keep the swimming pool issue a "non-elections issue".

Harvey, Council's representative on the Commission, said the major structure of the pool could be constructed within 90 days of a referendum.

Just when the referendum should be held was debated among Council and those members of the Recreation Commission present.

With tax notices in the mail very soon, some argued that July -- the earliest possible time a referendum could be organized - may be a poor time to ask taxpayers to open their purses even wider.

But Dr. Richard Cudmore, an original Squamish Swimming Pool Society member, said a referendum should be timed to get the best favourable response to applications for GO BC funds. Even if the referendum were posed in July "we think the merit of the project local share. 'Their awareness should be higher then than at any other time."

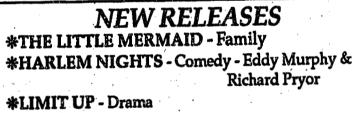

The referendum will be brought before the May 28 meeting of the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District, which will handle financing for the pool on behalf of Squamish and its outlying areas A specified part of Area D will be included in the referendum.

To provide information on how much of a tax increase

The average assessment of a home in Squamish was approximately $77,000 last year. With 'A', this homeowner can expect a $67 tax increase; with 'B', the homeowner will pay $77 more, and with 'C', he will pay $86 more in taxes.

Lonsdale said that while these assessments are current, people should take into account that an increased tax base from more development may bring the cost to taxpayers to a lower level in future years.

Weldwood earnings down nearly $10 million

Disappointing first quarter earnings for Weldwood of Canada Limited can be attributed to production problems at the joint-venture Cariboo Pulp operation in Quesnel and at the Hinton, Alberta pulp mill, Welwood president and CEO Thomas A. Buell says.

Earnings for the first quarter of 1990 were down nearly $10 million to $6.3 million.

At the time of Buell's Apr. 26 report to shareholders, shares cost 17 cents each, compared with 44 cents per share in 1989's corresponding quarter. Sales for the first three months of 1990 were recorded at $160 million. down from the 1989 figure of $194.4 million.

"At Hinton, production losses were associated with the shutdown and final tie-in and startup for the expanded operation," Buell said. "At Cariboo Pulp, a recovery boiler problem shut down this mill for four days early in the quarter."

In February, he said, an "accidental white liquor spill at the Ouesnel pulp operation once again caused a four-day shutdown and reduced normal capacity."

This spill resulted in charges being laid against Cariboo Pulp and Paper by B.C.'s Environment Ministry.

Another factor contributing to lower quarter earnings, Buell said was results from Weldwood's CanWel building distribution business, of which 50 per cent is owned by the company. Poor results were due to depressed markets in eastern Canada.

In Weldwood's solid wood business, he said, there has been little improvement from the last quarter of 1989.

"High interest rates and low housing starts in both the U.S. and eastern Canada have and will obviously continue to have a strong effect on all building material markets."

Buell concluded his report by saving the outlook for the next few months will be significantly influenced by world pulp markets and the start-up of the expanded Hinton pulp

Court to hear Woodfibre pollution charges

The B.C. Supreme Court rejected an attempt by Western Pulp's Woodfibre mill to have pollution charges quashed Friday, the Vancouver Sun reported.

The pulp company had argued it had an agreement with the B.C. Environment Ministry that no charges would be laid if the mill operated normally and continued with its $70 million clean-up program.

But Justice Patrick Dohm said he found no agreement in confidential correspondence between government officials and Western Pulp.

The judge said better evidence would be needed before the court would exercise its discretion to quash the charges.

During a hearing Thursday, Justice Dohm said the provincial government's failure to enforce pollution permits "just makes the whole system ridiculous."

The comment was triggered by the contention of a lawyer for the mill that although the operation violates its provincial pollution permit daily, it shouldn't be charged.

Mill lawyer Edward Chiasson cited passages in confidential letters between his clients and the federal and provincial environment departments to argue there was an implicit agreement not to lay charges if Western Pulp operated normally and continued its $70 million cleanup program.

The province laid a dozen pollution charges against the mill last August.

Chiasson conceded he "can't point to a hard, specific contractual agreement," but said the letters corroborate the company's understanding. He said it was "natural, logical and sensible" to have an agreement, because the Woodfibre mill "could be charged and charged and charged and charged and charged and charged every day of its operation."

Justice Dohm, asked by the Environment Ministry, neither set certain dates for compliance nor warned Western Pulp it would go out of business or be charged if the deadlines weren't met.

"Decisions should be made about this mill, but maybe this is the wrong place to get a decision," he said.

Chiasson said Western Pulp sought to have a dozen pollution charges laid against the mill last summer prohibited from being heard in court because it would be an abuse-ofprocess.

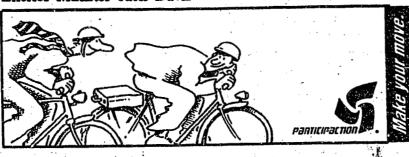

It is the second time Western Pulp has used an abuse-of-process motion to fight pollution charges. In 1988, letters exchanged in 1971 between former B.C. cabinet minister Ray Williston and then-Federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said that improvements to reduce air pollution would have a higher priority than measures to reduce water pollution.

Lawyer Steen Blechingberg of the B.C. Attorney-General's Ministry declared there was no agreement that would give Western Pulp immunity from prosecution.

Blechingberg noted the charges were laid in August 1989, after the expiry in January 1988 of a special "variance order" granted by then-B.C. Environment Minister Tony Brummet.

Variance orders are granted when a minister deems for unspecified reasons that a firm needs "relief" from the pollution limits in its B.C. wastemanagement permit. The orders specify the pollution controls are to be installed by certain dates.

Aldermen's raise a non-issue

Mayor Phil Turner has done his utmost to make the Council members' cost-ofliving raise a big issue. So far, it hasn't gone far.

Where did the motivation for his attack on the aldermen come from? We haven't heard outraged cries along the lines of "Those good for nothing electeds have lived high on the fat of the land!" ringing off the mountains or whispered in the coffee shops.

Council members are called upon to do a lot, give up a lot and put up with a lot. They give up their privacy, much of their family life and a chunk of their working week. Time spent on Council matters is time away from work.

If being a member of Council is not to become a financial burden on elected officials or to effectively become the private domain of a priveleged few, salaries for both the mayor and aldermen must reasonably compensate them for time away from work.

Increasing the indemnities annually by the cost of living fends off the tax-payerrankling sudden shocks of intermittent wholloping leaps. The five per cent will mean less than a dollar to your annual municipal taxes.

At which windmills is Turner tilting as he charges against his fellow elected officials? They are hard to find.

It would seem Turner fancies himself the sole arbiter of what is good and right. However, the mayor's job is not to dictate Council's position, but to attempt to reach a consensus. Failing that, at least a workable compromise should be sought. This is one reason why the mayor only votes to break ties.

Certainly, the mayor should make his views known, but flinging accusations down from on high is not constructive and convinced no one of anything other than that, yes indeed, Turner was grand-standing again.

Million dollar potato industry needs protection

Dear Editor,

Our Pemberton Seed Potato Control Area provides the basis of a million dollar industry to this valley. The unique isolation offered by the mountain ranges surrounding the Pemberton Valley allows for control and elimination of potato diseases, viruses and insects.

Potatoes from this valley are shipped all over the world each year, and Pemberton is a major supplier of elite seed potatoes for Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Alberta and B.C.

The Seed Potato Control Area was established in 1949, with legislation to control the movement of potatoes into the area, as well as to control the movement of potatoes into the area, as well as to control insects, diseases and weeds that are not kept in check by farmers and home gardeners.

In 1967, Pemberton was the first commercial seed potato area in the world to grow "virus-free" seed potatoes. With careful monitoring, inspection and testing, along with the natural isolation offered by the mountain ranges, the seed potato industry in Pemberton Valley continues to enjoy world renowned success.

With the development of the Whistler ski resort, there exists the potential for vegetable production in Pemberton which would partially supply the produce requirements of this resort. However, this would also increase the potential for insect and disease problems, which could jeopordize the historical significance of the seed potato industry in Pemberton.

Excellent cooperation from the public has maintained this area as an ideal region for the production of seed potatoes.

We need your continued cooperation.

We request that everyone in the Pemberton area wishing to grow potatoes, purchase only seed potatoes that are grown locally in the valley. An ongoing supply of seed is available at Pemberton Valley Nursery on Portage Road.

Forestry debate censored

Dear Editor,

There are ever increasing questions about the wisdom of the forestry practice known as clearcutting. Where has UBC's School of Forestry been in this and other public debates?

Last fall, a five-person committee chaired by UBC vice-president of research Robert Miller, released a 20-page review which examined UBC's School of Forestry. When it came to the School's role in facilitating public information gathering, the committee concluded:

'Don't Smoke-AThon' a big success

Dear Editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all those individuals and businesses who contributed to the "Buttbusters Don't Smoke-A-Thon" last month. The pledges are all in and the total amount raised is $642.72. The entire amount goes to the Canadian Cancer Society and receipts are being issued to those who requested them.

We would also like to thank Maureen Gilmour and Mike Mooney at The Times for their help, as well as the staff at Mountain FM for helping promote this event.

Squamish was the first community to attempt a "Don't Smoke-A-Thon", and the Canadian Cancer Society is now suggesting this as a fund-raiser to other groups across the province.

Once again, our sincere gratitude for your contributions and support.

NEW OWNERS FOR FERGIES-For more than 40 years, Fergies Lodge and cabins have been recognized as the steelhead fishing centre of southwestern B.C. Faculty challenged

"It is seen as not meeting expectations, nor rising to challenges nor exploiting opportunities. It is believed to be insular and uncommunicative. There is good reason to agree that these perceptions and beliefs are solidly grounded in facts." (Executive Summary, p.1)

In an angry, ten-page memo dated Dec. 7, 1989, School of Forestry Dean Robert Kennedy made this biased reply:

"To be completely realistic, the faculty must be circumspect about their involvement in controversial or emotional issues. The large integrated companies are increasingly sponsoring or supporting our faculty's research. They can easily be alienated by the perception that the faculty is promoting a subject which they deem not to be in their best interest." (p.8)

Considering that the main forestry building on the UBC campus is called the MacMillan Building, such comments are not surprising. Jim Pine Victoria

Squamish crews retrofit aging locomotives

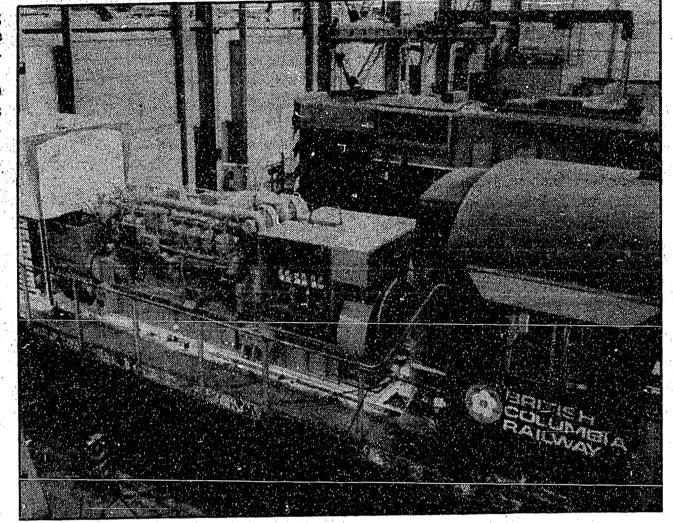

Squamish crews are replacing 27 of BC Rail's locomotive engines to cost-effectively extend the units' working lives.

The railway is fitting 2000 h.p. Caterpillar diesel engines and advanced controls to prevent wheel slip on the locomotives, which were originally built as 1800 h.p. units based on a U.S. design by Montreal Locomotive Works (MLW).

Al Gronius, BC Rail superviser of motor power planning, said the $15 million rebuilding program is possible because the locomotives are equipped with exceptionally heavy frames which have resisted the stresses of more than a million kilometers of accumulated service.

Refitting the locomotives with new engines is much less expensive than buying new locomotives, he said.

HOME SOUNDINGS by Rose Tatlow

There are many reasons why people travel. Some do it because they have to, others go because they want to, and some do it to learn more about the world around them. But whatever the reason, more people are travelling than ever before. But one often wonders why people travel, at considerable expense, supposedly just to see something different.

Maybe it is because they want to see a different country or its culture. But that's not really the answer. Often, through television, they can see more of a country and its treasures than they can if they actually go there. Of course they can't experience the pleasure of seeing the museums and the great works of art first-hand, but they can experience them still in a second-hand way.

There was a time when people travelled to taste foreign cuisine, but in a city like Vancouver you can get almost any kind of foreign food you wish to taste. If there isn't a restaurant serving it, there's bound to be an ethnic food store which will carry the choicest items from many countries.

No, there must another reason to travel, and I sometimes think it is just that people like to move around; they enjoy the urge to wander that they seem to be born with. We are descended from prehistoric food gatherers and hunters who often had to travel long distances to find their prey or food. In fact, the Australian aborigines have a name for it. They go for a "walkabout". And that may be what we are doing when we hop a jet plane or a liner and head for other lands. Maybe that's why modern city dwellers pack their bags and head for distant lands as well. Maybe its an atavistic urge.

Possibly recreational travel is really an escape -- from the boss, from the job, from family chores -- and the change is necessary in our busy lives. When you are in a foreign country you are really away from it all, there is little of your normal life to remind you of your worries and cares.

Travel is supposed to be relaxing, but if your luggage fails to arrive on time, or if you have to rush madly to catch that connecting flight, and if you miss it, it can be anything but relaxing. You have to be prepared to forget about that lumpy bed or unappetizing meal, and chalk it up to experience. Maybe by the time you go home you will be able to laugh about it!

Travellers must learn to adapt to their surroundings and not expect everything to be the same as it is at home. There are bound to be problems with language if we go to a foreign country, and we have to learn to try to communicate in their language or to find someone who speaks ours. And there are sure to be misunderstandings. But a willingness to listen —and smile — can solve a lot of problems.

Years ago it was the thing for people to go on the grand tour of Europe. Only the wealthy could afford it, but today almost anyone can. There are guided tours you can take with a group and while many people scoff at packaged tours, many of these offer the best of a country with the least amount of discomfort. Everything is arranged, you know that there will be a roof over your head at night, and your train, bus or boat schedules are covered. There is one drawback to touring in groups -- you are usually with people of your own nationality and culture.

But we found, on a two-week bus tour of Italy and Greece many years ago, that there were people from European countries along as well, and we made friends from other lands. Granted they spoke English or could understand our limited French, but we communicated. And it was fun!

Group tours aren't really as bad as their detractors would have you believe. Most stay in hotels with local colour, have guides who know about the country and give you a fair sampling of the culture, cuisine and entertainment, as well as the local sights.

The ideal trip would be to visit a country and do just as one pleased. But modern conditions don't permit this. Perhaps the best way to do this is to hire a car, but that would restrict you to superhighways and often the most interesting places are off the beaten track. And trying to drive in cities like Mexico City or San Jose in Costa Rica would be a real headache!

Sometimes travelling is good for us, if only to make us realize how lucky we are to live in a country like ours, where we can enjoy our creature comforts. After several weeks spent in a dry country, coming back to damp, green B.C., where you can smell the moisture in the air instead of the baking heat, you appreciate what you have, even though you did enjoy the sunshine.

It is important to bring the right attitude with you when you travel. Don't expect it to be like home. Don't let the poverty or the dirt in some Third World countries upset you, and don't worry about the iguanas in the garden or the dust blowing in the wind. Just enjoy the different atmosphere and the attractions of the country you are visiting.

Travelling tends to open the mind. You never return home from a country without memories, and often you forget the unpleasant things and only remember the happy ones. You are always more appreciative of your home and its attractions after you have been away, and perhaps this is one of the best things about travelling, that it makes us realize how lucky we are:

Never again will you hear about a place you have visited without remembering it. And you will feel a thrill recalling your time spent there. You will watch a movie and see the hero walking down a street you have visited and say, "I've been there!" with a feeling of wonderment and delight, recalling your own experiences in that same setting.

Real travellers never stop travelling, even as they age. They are still travelling in their spirits, for they recall their travels and turn back to fall in love with the places they have visited.

I know that the smell of thyme and oregano will always bring back the memory of the white pillars of the temple of Poseidon at Cap Sunion in Greece, where we ran down a hillside covered with these herbs and bathed in the milk warm waters of the Aegean Sea under a perfect blue sky.

You are invited to an Open House to share updated information on the Kelly Lake to Cheekye transmission line project.

Last October, we held Open Houses to learn your thoughts and ideas on a proposed second 500 kV transmission line from Kelly Lake Substation near Clinton to Cheekye Substation near Squamish.

With your suggestions and the results of environmental and technical studies, we have refined the possible options. Now we'd like to share this information – and some light refreshments – with you, get your feedback and answer any questions.

Please plan to join us. We appreciate your interest and participation.

Open Houses will be held from 4 to 8 pm in all locations.

If the locomotive produces the adhesion Caterpillar predicts it will, BC Rail may be able to do away with slugs. Adhesion refers to the ability of a locomotive to deliver power to the tracks without having the wheels slip and slugs are ballasted, cut-down locomotives which retain electric traction motors, but not the diesel engines.

Slugs are teamed with fullyfunctioning locomotives allowing electrical output to be spread among more axles when developing full power at slow speeds.

BC Rail has 10 slugs which are used in yardwork at North Vancouver and Prince George.

Drugs have frightening effects on the unborn

Dear ADAPT

I think I might be pregnant. Before I knew, I took some drugs. Could this harm my baby?

The frightening thing about taking drugs when you are pregnant is that no one can predict whether it will have an effect on the baby. Different drugs can affect the baby in different ways. Frequency of use, amount taken and type of drug are all factors that impact on the chances of the baby being harmed.

It is very important to STOP taking drugs now that you think you might be pregnant. Also, go see your doctor as soon as possible. Make sure that the doctor you see will respect your confidentiality so that you can give specific details about your activities.

Here is some general information about drugs and pregnancy:

- 1) Caffeine, nicotine, aspirin, and alcohol are drugs and should be avoided.
- 2) Ongoing use is far more likely to cause damage than one-time use.
- 3) The fetus is most vulnerable to damage from drugs during the first three months of pregnancy.

- 4) Alcohol and marijuana use is associated with permanent brain damage, physical abnormalities, cardiac defects, small stature
- 5) Tranquilizer use is associated with lethargy, respiratory distress and apneic spells in infants.
- 6) Barbituate use is associated with persistent high-pitched crying, tremulousness, restlessness, hyperflexia, occasional convulsions.
- 7) Amphetamine (ie. cocaine) use can lead to babies born with withdrawal symptoms. Also associated with abruptio placenta, premature birth, spontaneous abortion, still birth, breech birth, post partum hemorrhage, premature membrane rupture, anemia, eclampsia.
- 8) Tobacco use is associated with smaller birth weights, behaviour and learning difficulties, respiratory illnesses.
- 9) Opiates (heroin, morphine, etc.) are associated with many tragic effects on babies, such as small size and withdrawal symptoms. Hepatitis and AIDS can be passed to infants from mothers who have contacted these diseases from using unsterile hypodermic needles.

Every year just about this time -- late spring or early summer -- Canadians trek to France to visit beaches once known as Gold, Juno or Sword.

There, they stand in silence where husbands, fathers, brothers, friends or, in some cases they themselves, began what Eisenhower called the Crusade in Europe.

And chances are they will pass through the tiny fishing town of Courselles and wonder about the Sherman tank that sits there. Nearby is the wreck of an anti-tank gun. On the flanks are two dead German bunkers.

They call it the Gariepy tank, the people who live there -- but it wasn't really Leo Gariepy's tank at all. Well, not in the strictest sense of the word.

Sgt. Leo Gariepy was a young tank commander with the 1st Canadian Hussars and when he first arrived in Courselles he arrived in style with all guns blazing.

Those who are left to remember will tell you they liked the extroverted Canadian who, when he asked where the Germans were, asked in a patois surprisingly like their own.

They told him that the centre of resistance was at city hall and that's where Leo took his tank. He blew the place apart.

Sgt. Leo Gariepy survived the war to return to his job with an oil company in Montreal but, somehow, things didn't work out. Lucky he may have been in war -- lucky he was not, apparently, in love.

Leo took a trip back to Courselles and, in an ironic twist of fate when you consider what he had done to the place, got a job in the engineering department -- at city hall.

Over the years he worked his way up until he was in charge of street maintenance, garbage collection -- that sort of thing. And eventually, the lad who had arrived as Sgt. Leo Gariepy became Mayor Leo Gariepy, a much-loved figure.

Then, in 1971, a fishing trawler snagged something in its nets. It was a Sherman tank, lying deep, where it had drowned during those wild days 27 years before.

It took a while but eventually, with the help of salvage experts and muscle provided by Canadian servicemen from the peacetime base in Lahr, Germany, the tank was raised.

It was hauled ashore where M. Gariepy -- the former hussar -- peoled back the hatch. It was empty. What happened to the crew? Nobody in Courselles could tell you.

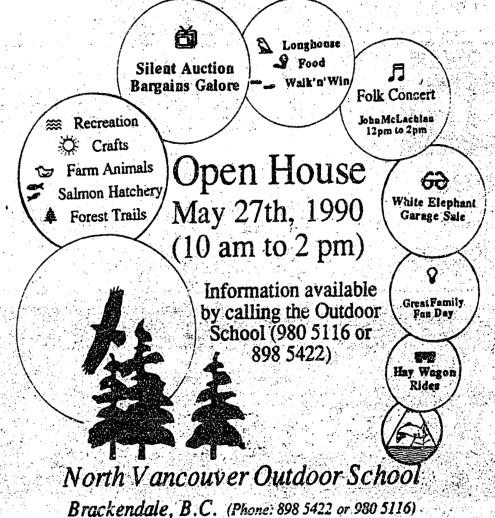

Today, the monster they call the Gariepy tank gleams with new paint. The turret is encircled with plaques of the various Canadian regiments that have paused here.

It stands on a corner. Its cannon and machineguns point skyward. White-painted chains mark off its place at the end of Rue Leo Gariepy.

The tank, which really wasn't Leo Gariepy's tank at all -- not the original, anyway -- was dedicated in 1974.

Just a few months after, the young gunner, by now a respected town father -- was buried in the small cemetary in the shadow of the tank.

There are answers to the growing waste problem

British Columbia's waste problem is growing, but we can choose to change our ways and reduce the problem, a recycling expert told those attending the Squamish Commerce Chamber of luncheon last week.

British Columbians generate over two million tonnes of solid waste each year, and while 90 per cent of what we consider garbage could be recycled or composted, very little is, said Judy Toth, executive director of the Recycling Council of B.C.

Reducing, re-using and recycling - the Three R's of the 'nineties -- need to become a greater part of our lifestyle because, of the 236 currently licensed landfills in B.C., 60 per cent are scheduled to close in the next 10 years. In 25 years 90 per cent of our landfills will if British closed Columbians continue our wasteful ways, Toth said.

Safe sunning

Our anticipation of summer's long, hot sunny days brings us outdoors more frequently to soak up "some extra rays" and the warmth of the sun.

May 7 through 13 was declared: "Sun Safety Awareness Week" in Canada by the Canadian Dermatology Association, with special emphasis on understanding the previously unrecognized damaging effects of ultraviolet A (UVA) radiation. UVA will be the skincare issue in the '90s.

If you are a sun worshipper, you may want to consider the risks involved in suntaming, and begin to take some steps towards a safe tan.

To understand why suntanning is dangerous, it is important to be aware that the sun contains invisible ultraviolet (UV) radiation. To achieve a tan, you must be exposed to this radiation which produces melanin in the skin -- nature's skin protection. Ultraviolet radiation consists of three wavelengths, two of which penetrate the ozone layer and reach the earth's surface - UVB and UVB light is the primary cause of sunburn and skin cancer. UVA light penetrates more deeply into the skin, causing damage to the skin's lower layer and adds to the UVB damage. UVA is the long-term cause of premature or photoaging (wrinkles, sagging, and dry, leathery skin) and photosensitivity (a heightened reaction to sunlight). Dermatologists now believe that 80 per cent of skin's aged appearance is directly due to sun (UVA) exposure.

Schools change the grade

Kids in the primary program won't be graded the way you were.

As the effects of the Year 2000 Paper sweep through education across the province, teachers will be grading how a student learns in addition to how well he or she does on written tests.

Students will be assessed in a number of ways on what they can do and will progress as they reach a set competency with each part of the curriculum.

Jim Spencer, assistant superintendent of School District 48, said the new curriculum does not mean a free-for-all in the classroom.

"It's not a return to the 'sixties laissez faire, where children learn what they want. Rather, the teacher has very specific developmental indicators which help the teachers guide the children through the different levels."

The students will be graded on their emotional development, social development, social responsibility, physical development, aesthetic and artistic development, and intellectual development. Each of these areas is broken down into sub-categories which have specific criteria, known as "descriptors", for each skill level.

The teacher assesses how well a child has mastered each descriptor according to prescribed "sign posts". The assessment is not restricted to the grades a child has received on a series of tests and assignments, but includes teacher observations and interviews with the student.

"You can't see how a child is developing from test scores. So we observe them and talk with them and keep samples of their work in a portfolio," Spencer said

"Now we have a very formal, structured process for measuring each child against the developmental criteria, and I don't think that was done in the past."

Previously, only the "end product", the test and assignment scores were measured. With the new system, how the end product has been arrived at will be looked at as well.

"We do that by referring to

The schools in the District are now in transition, with some having adopted a report card formula and some having yet to do so. All schools with a primary program will have the same report cards by September.

The District will be preparing a report card on itself before the end of the year and possibly before September. It will be a compilation of generalized school reports and will contain no information on individual students.

"Any information between teachers, students and parents will remain personal and confidential. The invidual reports will not be used in group comparisons or in evaluating schools in the District."

Young people offer dance, drama with a message

"Maxwell Workshop", a performing group of students from Maxwell International Baha'i School on Shawnigan Lake, will entertain at Trade Fair this weekend.

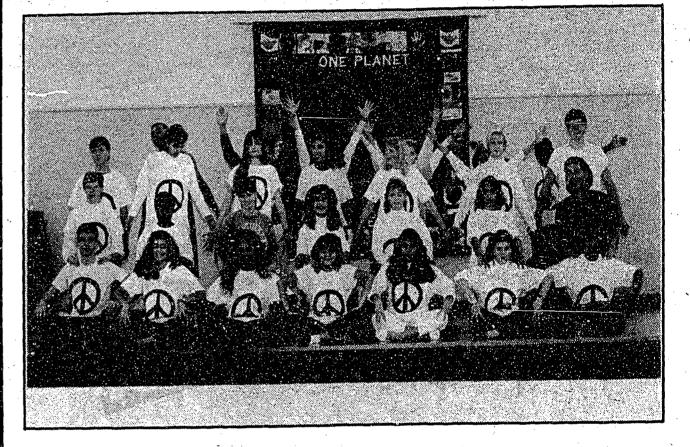

Young people between the ages of 12 and 17 will share their talents in dance and drama on Saturday at 3:30 p.m. in the Civic Centre auditorium.

The young members of Maxwell Workshop strive to be a positive example for other youth and to create an encouraging peer support group within the workshop itself.

The group reaches its audiences through dance, speech, music and drama, presenting meaningful and optimistic messages that deal with such issues as unity, equality of the sexes, peer pressure, racial harmony and world peace.

There are no professional dancers, actors, or choreographers in the workshop. Almost all of the material the workshop uses is created by the workshop members through long hours of consultation and hard work. Even though the membership of the workshop consists of youth from different nationalities, backgrounds and ages, through prayer and consultation, they strive to work together with utmost unity towards one common

Hop a train for Judge Begbie Days

Every year the members of the West Coast Railway Association sponsor a return railway trip to Lillooet to help the town celebrate its annual festival, "Judge Begbie Days".

This year the WCRA is selling tickets for the June 9 trip, taken in its private train coach, complete with guides, lunch in Lillooet and all the fun of the festival for $75 ($70 seniors and $38 children). Deaparture is at 7:30 a.m. from B.C. Rail's North Vancouver station, with a return that evening at about 9 p.m. This trip tends to sell out quickly each year because of its good value, stunning coast mountain scenery, and the enjoyment of a small town summer festival.

The following weekend (June 16) a daytrip by bus and ferry organized by the WCRA to the Samich Historical Artifects Society's open house will be of interest to all "steam buffs". Working sawmills, steam tractors, radio controlled boats and home cooking are all in store for the visitors.

For the afternoon, a visit to the Sooke Museum and its "Sooke River Railway" with 10-kilometre "speeder" rides rounds out a full day. This trip is $54 (($49 seniors, $28 children). Phone 524-1011 for more details, or write WCRA, P.O. Box 2790, Vancouver, B.C. V6B 3X2.

The West Coast Railway Association will be represented at Trade Fair this coming weekend. Be sure to stop by and see the working model railway and meet some of the members.

Opinion

Street Talk

If a referendum were held reparding a new indoor swimming pool for Squamish, to be built at the Civic Centre, would you vote 'yes', for the pool or 'no' against it, keeping in mind that building the pool would probably mean an increase in taxes?

Doranne Rempel: "I doubt if I would get to use it very much if it was there. I live in Park Place and I didn't even use the pool last summer. I have no idea (if I would vote for it). I prefer the lakes."

Gary Enkel: "I would probably vote yes for the pool, but I would want the particulars on what we are getting and how much it would cost. But I think Squamish needs a pool. I would be prepared to pay a little bit more (tax) but within reason. We don't need to build a country

Olga Junkin: "I would vote yes, because it's about time. we need a pool. It would be very worthwhile, the community really needs it."

yes. Taxes are always going to go up, and never come down, so we might as well put it into something useful. We sure need the pool. It's better to give the money to the pool than to give it to Vander Zalm, he's going to get part of it anyway. He doesn't need a new car, so we'll get him a new pool for Squamish."

10.9 APR/48 Month Financing or $750 Cash Back" aren't the only reasons people are buying Tempos and Topaz.

We believe in incentives, just like the next guy. In fact we offer a choice of 10.9% financing for up to 48 months or $750 cash back on two of British Columbia's best sellers, Tempo and Topaz. And we freely admit we do it to ease your payments.

But that's not the point. You buy a car for its quality, not just the savings. And we believe you should be able to get into a dependable car without paying through the nose. Consider the Tempo and Topaz L, with value packages 101A or 331A, they're packed full of features that include:

 four-wheel independent suspension • 2.3 L electronic fuel injected engine

*These offers may not be combined. Retail buyers choosing a reduced financing rate in lieu of cash rebate are eligible for 10.9% financing over a maximum 48 month term on approve credit. Special financing is available when you purchase or lease any new 1990 or prior model year Tempo or Topaz. Example for $15,000 financed over 48 months at 10.9% APR, the monthly payment is $386.95, the cost of borrowing is $3,573.60. And the total amount to be repaid is $18,573.60. Assuming a rebate of $ reduced financing rate instead of the cash rebate, legislation requires that the amount of the rebate must be included in the cost of bor rate. In the example given, the effective interest rate would be 13.02% and the total cost of borrowing includ said. He added that snowmobiling on Brohm Ridge is another activity the group would encourage, and even organize.

Richter said the visual link from the mountain resort and Squamish is very important, distinguishing it from anything else in North America. "You're gonna have a view from here to breakfast."

Flood had suggested several reasons why Garibaldi Alpen will succeed, even though a previous attempt at developing Brohm Ridge failed in the 1960s. Austrian immigrant Idi Bauer went bankrupt, leaving beautifully finished chalets and ski lifts behind.

"Although it was a dream, it wasn't very practical," he said. "The whole [Garibaldi Alpen] proposal is market driven." What the new proposal offers is many "ski-in, ski-out" opportunities, with runs ranging from beginner to advanced. Snow making will also extend the ski season. Access to the resort will be gained along a $8 million mountain road, winding 9.7 kilometres up to the base village.

In the '60's the resort was envisaged as an exclusive European-style resort, accessible only by lifts, Richter told The Province newspaper in a late April interview. "It was a totally impractical access strat-was mauled by a grizzly bear in 1987 at his previous posting at Bella Coola.

Some 120 stitches, a broken wrist and a chewed leg later, Squamish's chief C.O. can still cut the bear some slack: "She'd been harrassed and shot at -she'd had enough."

For his actions this particular day on-the-job, Rande was presented with the Governor General's Award for Bravery.

This life-threatening incident does not appear to have dampened his enthusiasm for the job: "I recommend anyone who likes the outdoors to get into the environmental field."

As well as the C.O.'s department, there are careers in the Fisheries, Waste Management, Water Management, and Pesticide Branches of the Environment Ministry, Rande says.

Training for a career in this field usually involves a twoyear college program in "renewable resource management". BCIT, Malaspina College and Lethbridge Community College are several which offer these programs.

In high school, students should take academic courses. particularly sciences, although some colleges offer upgrading.

Rande attended college at Lethbridge, where he trained in Fish and Wildlife Management.

For those interested in learning more about careers in this field, colleges offering studies in the environmental field often have 'ride-along' programs for potential students.

drilled a pilot tunnel under the river, used a "reamer" to widen it to an 18-inch diameter, then pulled a section of the 10-inch pipeline into place.

Directional drilling is more environmentally safe than traditional ways of crossing bodies of water with pipelines, but there are practical benefits as well, Cherrington survey engineer Greg Morton said.

Aside from disturbing the ecology, the traditional method of diverting the river so a trench can be dug in the riverbed, is very time consuming. Furthermore, the traditional method disturbs the river's banks. The consequential erosion when the river runs fast exposes the pipeline -"Then you got real problems."

Directional drilling under the Squamish starts 150 feet back from each bank and passes about 100 feet under the river

"We don't even get near [the river]," he said.

During the initial pass, the driller steers the five-inch pilot pipe much as a pilot steers an aircraft, turning left and right, and up and down. A computer monitors the exact location of the drill head which Morton described as something "much like a shower head."

The water blasts out the nozzle at pressures ranging from 400-1200 psi and higher "depending on what we're going through."

The computer monitoring keeps the drilling fairly accurate. Last Thursday, the drill popped out of the ground two feet from its target -- 1,341 feet across the river from where it started.

The B.C. Lung Association is launching Western Canada's largest photo contest as part of its clean air public awareness program.

"Protecting air quality in B.C. is a major objective of the Lung Association, as fresh air is vital in maintaining healthy lungs," Association president Rick Weinman said in a news release. "We hope the Fresh Air Photo Contest encourages people to appreciate and help preserve the air we breathe."

The Fresh Air Photo Contest is organized in conjunction with London Drugs and the Alberta Lung Association, and is expected to attract more than 10,000 entries from both provinces. The contest began in mid-April and runs to June 1. It allows amateur photographers to express themselves on film in a variety of categories: sports and leisure, scenery, animals and nature, and kids. Submissions will be accepted in colour or black and white prints or slides.

Photographers will be vying for thousands of dollars in prizes.

Fresh Air Photo Contest entry forms and contest details are available in Squamish at Prints in Minutes on Second Avenue.
