Council demands answers

PPELINEPANNED

By Shari Bishop Times Editor

Ongoing monitoring of the Vancouver Island Natural Gas Pipeline's route through unstable terrain is a concern for both Squamish Council and the environmental health officer at the local health unit.

In a letter to council, a representative from the B.C. Utilities Commission-said the committee charged with monitoring the pipeline had disbanded Dec. 31, but assured council that all was well when he inspected three sites that had experienced either slides or washouts.

But Len Clarkson, environmental health officer for the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit, was not satisfied with the report and raised several questions in a letter to district administrator Bob Miles.

"It is reasonable to expect that the pipeline will require maintenance and possibly emergency repairs," Clarkson said.

Squamish Council had asked that someone from the Utilities Commission attend a meeting to answer questions on restorative or rehabilitative work that may have to be done in slide areas, particularly in the Stawamus Canyon, the District's watershed.

Rather than a visit, they received the letter from Frank Leighton, the former chairman of the now-disbanded Project Monitoring Committee for the pipeline.

Of the Stawamus slide area, Leighton said: "The writer visited this site on Sept. 21, 1991 and advised the committee that, in his opinion, [Pacific Coast Energy Corporation] had done all that was possible to secure the stability of this inherently unstable slope."

But Clarkson said: "In my opinion, this should not be interpreted to mean that further work will not be required."

He added that Hardy BBT Ltd., the consultant which surveyed the area prior to pipeline construction, did not identify the Stawamus Canyon as being an 'inherently unstable slope'.

Clarkson suggested the pipeline construction company install monitoring probes upslope of the slide area in the vicinity of tension cracks. "This would enable accurate monitoring of any movement."

At last Tuesday's (Jan. 7) meeting, Mayor Egon Tobus said he felt council's concerns for monitoring the pipeline in unstable areas had not been adequately addressed.

"I'm still worried about a potential washout of our source of water," Tobus said.

Ald. Garth McCreedy said council should keep MLA David Mitchell informed of concerns regarding the pipeline.

Council will send another letter expressing their concerns for monitoring of unstable slopes along the pipeline route to the Utilities Commission.

Elderly main escapes fire

By Shari Bishop Times Editor

An elderly man's life was probably saved by the quick response of two neighbors who saw his motel room on fire, Fire Chief Hampson said Monday (Jan. 13).

John Vineyard, 79, spent a few hours in Squamish General Hospital being treated for smoke inhalation and 1st degree burns to his face and hands following the Saturday morning fire at the Howe Sound Motel.

According to Hampson, Dan DeCook and Mike Boothroyd saw smoke coming from Vineyard's unit and rushed over to pull him out.

He had been trying to extinguish the fire himself and had to be convinced to leave the building. Once outside, he collapsed.

"There was very little doubt in my mind that if they weren't there, he would have died in the fire," Hampson said.

The fire, which started in the bed, had spread quickly to the left half of the motel unit when firefighters were called at 11:10 a.m. By the time 17 firefighters on two pumpers had tackled the blaze, the motel unit and its cotents were destroyed and a neighboring unit scorched.

Hampson said if the motel units were connected the fire would have been far more

Loan boosts Diachem

Federal funding through the Ministry of Western Economic Diversification is allowing Diachem to find new markets for its Squamish subsidiary.

Capilano-Howe Sound M.P. Mary Collins said: "[The ministry] is assisting Diachem in marketing and ensuring we have these continuous markets and increases in production."

"We're supporting economy in Western Canada whether it's funding [products] or uses. We really try to go out to communities in the province and Diachem is a perfect example."

She said Diachem is taking imported European technology upgrading and enhancing it and keeping the company competitive province-wide and in North America.

Diachem Industries Ltd. will receive a $450,000 interest free loan to help the company market its line of water treatment chemicals. Diachem hopes to catch the market created by the environmental protection demands placed on pulp and paper mills, municipal water and waste water treatment facilities.

The main active ingredient in the product line is polyhydroxy aluminum chloride (PAC) which is produced in Diachem's new Squamish plant. The plant began production of PAC in December of 1990 with the help of Western Economic Diversification Canada.

Diachem President Stuart Fraser said: "Without Western Diversification funding this whole plant would not have been possible. We're now receiving further assistance to continue marketing in B.C. and the Pacific Northwest."

Diachem's Squamish Diapac plant currently employs 20 people with a production of 4,500 tonnes. The company hopes to increase staff in two years by six and increase production to 20,000 tonnes.

Mamquam under pressure to grow

Wen-Dow Holdings Ltd.'s proposal to subdivide a large parcel of property may be a catalyst for residential development north of Mamquam.

The company will seek public approval of the subdivision just northeast of Government Road and Harris Road at a public hearing Jan.21.

District administrator Bob Miles said if the by-law is adopted and subdivision proceeds, it is realistic to expect other applications for rezoning may take place on the same parcels.

The proposed subdivision has three components. The subdivions will create a six acre parcel, a five acre parcel and a ten acre parcel. Development of multi-family residential and residential are being suggested for two of the parcels.

Sewage audit ordered on aging local plants

An audit of Squamish's two sewage treatment plants will help the District develop an overall waste management plan, assistant works superintendent Mike Darbyshire told Squamish Council last Tuesday (Jan. 7).

Council authorized Darbyshire to seek proposals for an audit of the Mamquam and downtown sewage treatment plants. Darbyshire said the audit is expected to take six weeks to complete.

By analyzing the two plants, he said, cost effective solutions may be found to improving the performance of the plants.

Street lighting will be installed along Mamquam Road between Highlands Way South and Highway 99.

The works and services committee recommended the lights be installed after a request was received from an area resident.

"I believe a lot of people use that area for walking, it's poorly lit and it's fast traffic," Ald. Ron Barr said in support of installing the lighting.

The cost per year of lighting in the area will be $960.

A drainage study is underway in Brackendale, Darbyshire told a meeting of the works and services committee. Once it is complete, the consultant will meet with municipal staff and members of the public to discuss specific problem areas.

Squamish Council will consider supporting a move to change the boundaries of the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit after more input is gained from all affected areas.

The health unit is currently based in Gibsons and provides service to an area that stretches from Powell River on the Sunshine Coast north to Pemberton.

Nick Candy, president of the Squamish Health Care Society, wrote to council asking that a change be made in the boundaries of the health unit. He said his board of directors suggests investigating splitting up the health unit, joining the North Shore Health Unit or forming a separate unit.

Candy directed his request to local government in Gibsons, Powell River, Sechelt, Whistler and Pemberton, as well as Squamish.

Ald. Don Ross said consideration should be given to the school district, which is also served by the CGHU for school health services.

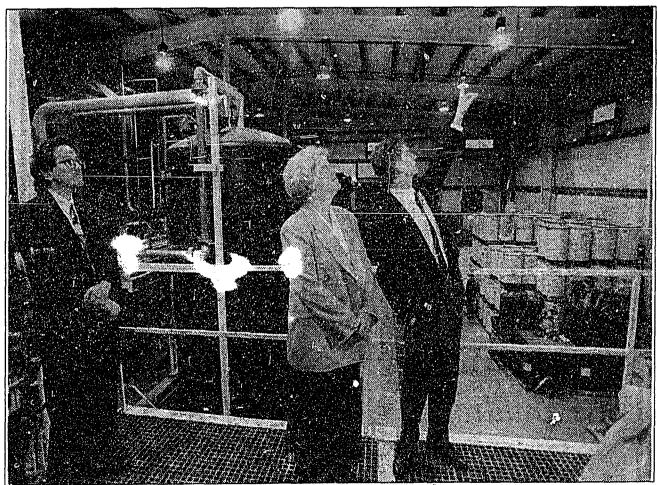

The existing Squamish Forest District building has been turned over to the Squamish Valley Museum and Historical Society, Ald. Garth McCreedy told council.

The building will be relocated from its current site on Loggers Lane to the Centennial Park area.

In 1992, the Sea to Sky Enterprise Centre Ltd. (SSEC Ltd.) plans to create 138 new jobs in the Corridor through loans, business counselling and the Self-Employment Assistance Program.

"Job creation through small business development is the single most important mandate of our services," said Rose Moon, general manager. "We help create jobs by lending money to new and existing businesses, providing free and confidential business counselling and through the Self-Employment Assistance Program." To Dec. 31, 370 jobs were created in the Corridor through these services. During 1991, 1,545 individuals made appointments with the centre's two business and loan counsellors.

At a ceremony held Friday (Jan. 10), at the centre, Capilano-Howe Sound MP Mary Collins presented volunteer board member Kerry Wallace with a cheque for $550,000 on behalf of Canada Employment and Immigration Commission through the Community Futures Program. This will provide the funds for loans and administration of the centre as it commences its fourth year of services.

The Howe Sound area was selected for Community Futures support in February 1989. Financial support from the federal government for the centre may be available for up to five years.

Moon said: "If you are starting a business or looking for expansion or business rescue dollars, it is often difficult to access the funds through traditional lending sources. That's where SSEC Ltd. fits in. Loans of up to $75,000 can be accessed in addition to business grants and free busi-

SSEC Ltd. plans to lend a total of $700,000 to new and existing businesses in 1992. Since June of 1989, SSEC Ltd. has approved a total of $1,103,200 to new and existing businesses.

More than half of the clients utilizing the services are from the Squamish area and 26.7 percent of loans have been made to businesses in the Squamish area. SSEC Ltd. has set a 1992 target to increase the percentage to 35 percent or more.

Victims' program aided 265 people during 1991

By Shari Bishop Times Editor

A by-product of growth in any community is an upsurge in the number of crimes domestic, violent, sexual that leave victims suffering in their wake.

Last year the Squamish Victims Assistance program aided 265 people suffering emotional and/or physical anguish following attacks upon their person or their property, program coordinator Diane Adams said Thursday (Jan. 9).

Victims' Assistance works closely with Squamish RCMP to act as a follow-up in cases involving victims, many of whom must testify in court.

Adams and a small group of volunteers work countless hours meeting with victims, informing them about the criminal justice system and their rights, and pointing them in the right direction of other services that will help them get on with their lives.

At the moment there are only eight volunteers assisting Adams, who is paid a part-time wage but has put in many more hours above that.

Of the eight volunteers, two live in Britannia and two in Lions Bay, leaving only four in Squamish.

A break-down of the 265 victims assisted last year is as follows: 66 domestic violence victims; 29 adult survivors of

Silence broken on estuary plan

The decision by Squamish Council to support the Estuary Management Plan reflects an ill in this community that has strangled away public involvement and real political representation from the decision-making process.

The silence over council's opinion of the land-swap was broken with a whimper rather than with the bang it deserved.

Since the issue was put on the boil, both sides of the development scale spoke about the Squamish Estuary Coordinating Committee's (BC Rail's) public relation's bungle.

One segment of the community spoke vehemently in opposition to the armlock placed on discussion when SECC chose to sit on documentation — that is, if studies do indeed exist.

At the same time, the business-oriented sector drilled the real estate barons with hard-nosed questions about industry, revenue, taxes, and jobs — questions that were side-stepped with the political hubris of double-breasted tycoons who make big bucks pulling the wool over unsuspecting eyes.

In the absence of frank and open discussions it was the duty of council to speak for the people whose lives will be changed by the proposed economic catalyst.

But when the public heat had finally simmered enough to allow a weak-kneed council to ask the questions SECC previously chose to mock, council gave mere lip service to an issue that may determine the future of this community.

One would think they would have enough information to ask some tough questions, never mind offering some straight-forward answers.

The process points to some pretty clever calls for action — clever, considering little is known on exactly what basis the calls are being made.

Council is whimpering in the affirmative rather than calling SECC on the carpet to speak to the issue of the day because they hope the less bumps on their ride to Election '93, the less chance of earning voter wrath

Council is counting on the electorate using the same kind of decision-making in casting votes that SECC offers for planning—one based on veiled promises and picking the lesser of two evils.

The community is being asked to choose between poverty and prosperity, with proponents hoping environmentally friendly development will be chosen on the basis of Mr. Cooper's and Mr. Deans' word.

But it's hard to trust a bunch of graying bureaucrats, fattened at the public trough, who smirk at concern for a lifestyle and an economy desperately in need of jobs—even though Squamish Council has somehow found a way.

It only matters that we're all Canadians

Dear Editor

This letter is in response to the opinions expressed by Mr. Percy Hammerstrom, (Jan. 7, 1991).

My nine brothers and sisters and I (NOT!) feel that Mr. Hammerstrom has the right to his opinion. Mr. Hammerstrom also said in his letter that, "We can't create the conditions for political strife in our society."

You may now sit down sir, you have had your say, now it's time for our slow pitch team to speak. Sir, what you are creating is nothing more than "racial strife," with these statements.

Mr. Hammerstrom, sir, you yourself are third generation Canadian, right, so that would make your great-great-grandfather nothing more than a landed immigrant, is that not correct?

Well, I am a first generation Canadian and my ten children will be second generation Canadian.

What's my point? Nothing, just like yours is. What it all boils down to is, it doesn't matter what generations we are from, it only matters that we are all Canadians.

I could take the easy route out and say that Mr. Hammerstrom is nothing but the "R" word, but I won't. I have been told by someone, (maybe they were Austrian, I don't recall), that to make unpleasant comments about someone is easy, but to give them a compliment is a lot harder

So my compliment to Mr. Hammerstrom is: Thank you for showing all Canadians that we still have a long way to go before we live in a united Canada.

K. Kaila, Garibaldi Highlands

Times a' changin'

We all have high hopes for the changes that are bound to come with this large new office back on Cleveland, where scarred familiar desks dating back to the nowdefunct Lions Gate Times sit next to the latest in Macintosh computer technology.

It has been eight months since Trinity Holdings (N.A.) Ltd. rode into town and bought The Squamish Times. While the deal was actually a long time in the making and done to the satisfaction of our former publisher Cloudesley Hoodspith, the change of ownership was an adjustment for all of us.

At the time we weren't sure what they had in store for us, although we were heartened by the award-winning collection of Lower Mainland newspapers with whom we were now associated.

Over the months we saw a string of unfamiliar faces pop in and out of each department. Their questions and suggestions never seemed out of line — we in editorial in particular were never told we'd have to change to fit some corporate mold.

Rather we were assured that we knew best what our community wanted, in terms of advertising, news stories, features, photographs and newspaper design.

While our new owners seemed confident we were in touch with our community, they recognized the frustration we felt with scant resources.

First came a full-time sports reporter, who unarguably pulls together the best local coverage of sports we've seen so far.

Next came help at streamlining some of the antiquated systems inherent in hands-on newspaper production. Cut and paste it had always been, but they showed us some shortcuts, gave us some new ideas for layout, design and structure of the paper.

Skip ahead to January '92. The biggest change is before us as we try our best to make a smooth change from behind-thetimes (in all truthfulness) to the absolute latest in computerized publishing technology. We are in the midst of some late nights learning how to get the most from our new equipment, but before long we will be the first community newspaper in western Canada using this type of system. We'd tell you more about it, but that might spoil a special open house we have planned for next month.

Technobabble aside, we embrace changes that help us do our jobs better, leaving our reporters and advertising representatives more time to do what they do best — reporting on events, providing a valuable service to business clients, and serving the community the best way they know how.

As always, we welcome your input on any changes that are to come. Your letters and comments are another valuable resource we can use to meet the changing Times.

Council supports estuary plan

By Shari Bishop Times Editor

Squamish Council has broken the silence and come out in support of amendments to the Squamish Estuary Management Plan.

Mayor Egon Tobus put the question to his councillors at last Tueday's (Jan. 7) meeting, where all but Ald. Don Ross voted in favour of supporting in principle the new Squamish Estuary Management Plan.

Tobus noted the largely positive response to the prosposed amendments in the public questionnaire. His motion states there were 124 positive, 20 negative and 15 neutral responses.

Ald Ron Barr said the new plan is "a major improvement on the old plan" because it turns an area formerly specified for "planning and assessment" into an area reserved for conservation.

Ald. Brian Edwards said the 700 acres of environmentally sensitive land identified in the swap will not only be conserved, but will be "put back into its natural state."

Until these amendments, added Ald. Tom Bruusgaard, there has been 10 to 12 years of "no movement" on estuary lands. While "there are still minor adjustments to be made" to the plan, Bruusgaard gave it his support.

Development has historically taken place in the estuary with no such plan in place, Mayor Tobus said, but with the amendments there is a guarantee of restorative work.

While development by BC Rail wouldn't benefit the community with property taxes, Tobus said, the amended plan opens up the possibility of many other types of development.

Tobus noted that those groups with an interest in development — notably the Squamish Chamber of Commerce and the Squamish Economic Development Commission — "were visibly absent from pro and con discussion [on the amendments] in the public forum."

While Ald. Ross agreed the amendments are an improvement over the 1981 plan, he said he couldn't support it until amendments suggested at the public meeting are made by the Squamish Estuary Coordinating Committee. In particular, he noted he concerns expressed by the Squamish Nation community bordering the estuary.

Mayor Tobus said if development is clean and safe, it can benefit the native people.

"There will always be pros and cons," he said.

The Tlingit legend of the Volcano Woman

One day a young raven prince and three of his friends went up river to spear salmon. As they were setting up camp, a huge frog came up to them and one of the men threw it into the fire, where it was destroyed.

They went to sleep that night but were haunted by woman's voice crying out, "Oh my child, give me back my child!" They heard her again all the next day and finally she said,

By Rose Tatlow

HOWE-SOUNDINGS

"If you do not give me back my child, your village will be destroyed."

No one paid any heed to this warning except for an old woman and her daughter who felt a terrible fate was going to fall on the village. She dug a cave near the village and she fled there every time she heard the wailing voice. Everyone laughed but she said if anything happened they would be safe in the cave.

Still no one paid any attention, although there were distant rumblings in the hills and these were soon followed by the appearance of smoke from the mountain tops with many great thunderclaps and a great engulfing torrent of fire. Now the people tried to escape but the flames had already consumed all the canoes.

But the woman and her daughter, who by this time were living in the cave she had dug, survived. After many days, as they were almost without water, the woman cautiously uncovered the entrance to her retreat. When she went out into the open she saw that the village had been entirely wiped out.

Yet she went from place to place calling out, "Has anyone survived the wrath of the great supernatural being?" But there was never any answer. Only the voice of the crying woman in the night saying, "I know that your uncles would avenge you my son! Had I only been given back your body all would have been well. As you were destroyed by fire, so your uncles have destroyed your slayers by fire."

The woman and her daughter set out to see if they could find any sign of life anywhere, but they could find nobody. As they were looking into the water at one point they saw a huge frog that seemed half human and again they heard the woman's voice wailing. "Oh, my child. Oh, my child. Your uncles are now at peace, now that they have destroyed the haughty and proud ones."

Later, as the mother was sleeping, a huge eagle swooped down out of the sky and carried her daughter to a distant island. There, filled with grief, she fell asleep in a place which happened to be the recent burial place of the only daughter of a Haida chief. Every day the chief and his wife would come to mourn over the grave.

It was on one of these occasions that they found the young woman sitting on a drift log near the burial spot. When they saw her they cried out, "Is it you my beloved child? Have you taken pity on us and come back to us? Come my child! Your mother, who is almost dead from grief, will live again!"

They never doubted that this was their daughter as the resemblance was very close. They led the girl to their canoe taking her as their own restored daughter.

When they landed at the village, the chief immediately beat his wooden invitation drum, summoning all the people to his house.

"Let us mourn no more for my daughter! She has returned from her sleep! She is here. Today we feast. Happiness has now returned to our village.

Mary the Carrier

As this is being written, a police hunt is on for a woman charged with sexual assault in that she had unprotected sex with two men — not having informed the men in question that she was a carrier of the AIDS virus.

Not made clear in any article I have seen on the subject is just what could be her punishment should she be found guilty as charged?

And if cleared, what message does that send?

Either way, what will be the impact on the murky, grey area where personal human rights collide with public human rights?

By Bruce Levett

What follows is the story of one such collision that happened about 85 years ago, in a time before human rights were guarded as zealously as they are today.

It is not meant to be taken as suggestion or recommendation — it's just a tale out of history; the story of a young woman whose name became a familiar part of the English language, and what happened to her.

Nothing more.

Mary Mallon, 20, pretty, red-haired, Irish and stubborn, worked as a cook for an affluent New York family until one day, following a hot summer luncheon in 1906, several of the guests were rushed to hospital with stomach upset.

The diagnosis was the dreaded typhoid fever and city health authorities set out to question the young cook.

Miss Mallon, however, had disappeared. The investigation that followed showed that she frequently changed jobs and as the doctors tracked her they found they were following a trail of severe illness.

The cook herself was in excellent health, never exhibiting a single symptom as those around her sickened and, in some cases, died.

Mary Mallon was a carrier.

Doctors pleaded with her to submit to tests but she refused, chased them away and vanished every time they got close.

Finally, she was arrested and forcibly tested for a solid year — tests that showed that while she herself was immune, she was a human germ factory.

She was given an ultimatum — either submit to surgical treatment or spend the rest of her life in hospital isolation. She hired a lawyer and fought the case for years until the authorities gave in and released her under the promise that she would never again work where food was handled and would report to the health department every 90 days.

She broke both promises, took a new identity and disappeared again.

Authorities chased from outbreak to outbreak before finally arresting her in 1915. Behind her were 51 cases of the fever, three of which had been fatal.

To the end, assuring all about her that she felt fine, she continued to refuse treatment and remained a prisoner in hospital as the years rolled by.

She died in hospital in 1938, of a stroke.

Doctors referred to her as "a human culture tube."

Through the newspapers she became known to the world as "Typhoid Mary."

Train to ski

Weekend skiers can now catch the train to Whistler on Friday nights, BC Rail announced last week.

The Friday night ski train from North Vancouver to Whistler is aimed at the growing number of weekend skiers who choose to leave their cars at home, a BC Rail news release said. The first Friday ski train left Friday, Jan. 10 at 7 p.m., launching a service that will continue until March 27.

The ski train is co-sponsored by Whistler's Lake Placid Lodge and radio station Z95.3, which are jointly offering prizes of accommodation and ski passes throughout the ski train season. Daily prize winners will be eligible to win a bi-weekly prize of ski passes and a weekend for four at Lake Placid Lodge.

Departure from the Squamish BC Rail passenger station is at 8:22 p.m., BC Rail spokesperson Sharon Beaulieu said. The adult one-way fare is $7, while youths and seniors pay $5.50. Roundtrip is double those sums. The train arrives in Whistler at 9:30 p.m. Shuttle bus service from the train to Whistler Village is included.

building as a seniors' and teens' recreation centre.

Council declared the week of Feb. 3 to 7 "International Development Week" despite one alderman's opposition to occasion, which is sponsored by the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA).

"It's just another bureacracy wasting more of the taxpayers' dollars, as far as I'm concerned," said Ald. Ron Barr.

Ald. Garth McCreedy, however, said the week is an opportunity to recognize that Canada is a leader in world development.

Educational materials such as activity guides, posters, maps and magazines are available free of charge to those organizing activities during International Development Week.

The District will opt out of the Crown Life Participaction Challenge, a nation-wide event that takes place during Canada's "Fitweek" May 22-31. The challenge between communities across Canada is to get as many citizens as possible to take part in 15 minutes of any activity which increase their heart rate.

While Squamish has taken part in the past, parks and recreation director Grant Dickey said the cost was great. Two staff people were tied up with organizing the event for two weeks, he said.

Ald. Don Ross volunteered to attend a free seminar on the Civic Pride Program sponsored by Pitch-In British Columbia, the organization which supports recycling initiatives and "Pitch-In Week" each May.

Civic Pride is a partnership

Budds booming

BC Rail passenger trains, which stop in Squamish, carried more than 102,000 passengers in 1991, topping the 100,000 mark for the first time in 34 years. The passenger count has been rising steadily since 1981, a BC Rail news release says, when the company began rejuvenating and expanding its fleet of self-propelled Budd cars and at the same time, upgrading on-board comfort and service.

The passenger count fell just short of 100,000 in 1989, with a total of 99,763 and in 1990, the numbers slumped to 88,684 as a result of blockaded lines and a 25-day strike. Between 1981 and 1991, however, figures rose overall from 74,600 to last year's 102,000-plus — representing growth of nearly 27 per cent.

BC Rail attributes the increase to renewed interest in rail travel continent-wide, more aggressive marketing and a growing awareness of the spectacular scenery passenger trains have to offer. As well as scheduled Dayliner services between North Vanouver and Prince George, the railway also operates scheduled and chartered Royal Hudson steam train excursions to Squamish.

program involving citizens, businesses, volunteer organizations, local government, educational institutions and the media. Its goal is to reduce litter in a year-round preventative program, which offers a step-by-step approach to reducing litter at its sources.

The Civic Pride seminar will also explain how "communities will need to control increased illegal dumping as tipping fees go up, items are banned from landfill and as user-pay strategies for waste disposal are implemented."

Council is planning to establish tipping fees at the community's landfill site.

On Friday, Mayor Egon Tobus will attend a meeting of the Fraser Basin Coalition in Richmond. The meeting will brief municipalities and regional districts within the Fraser Basin area of a proposed federal-provincial-local government management agreement.

In the federal government's Green Plan, released in June 1990, $100 million was allocated over six years for Fraser River clean-up initiatives.

Clerk/administrator Bob Miles told council he felt it would be worthwhile to send a representaive to the meeting "so that we can be in a better position to compare assistance obtained in the Fraser River vs. Squamish River Estuary and Howe Sound."

World Class Annual Squamish Bald Ego Count Underway

By Mike Yates Times Columnist

To Baldly Go Where No Man Has Gone Before.

—paraphrase of the most famous split infinitive in human history.

I was standing outside Brown's video coveting Froslev's flatbed truck when he stuck a sheet of B.A.G. flack in my hand and asked whether I was coming out to the annual bald ego count on the 12th.

Sure, Thor.

It'll be a nice day, Mike, count the egos in the morning and come back to the gallery for food and listen to Valdy.

Valdy Ego?

I'll tell him that, he'll like it.

See you on the 12th and I'll try to bring along some friends from Big Smoke. They never see any bald egos down there except for Jean-Luc Picard of the Star-ship; he's replacing Gracie Slick as lead singer. Later.

I left. It's impolite to watch what someone else watches on his VCR and I'm very well bred.

It all made perfect sense to me. Count the bald egos. They're becoming more and more an endangered species. Still plenty of egos around, but most of them are concealed. Damn few bald ones.

Bald-faced liars, yes; bald egos, no.

I didn't question that everyone was going to gather at the gallery. It's a good marshalling yard.

Then I read that people were going to be assigned parts of the river to watch. That didn't compute.

I was expecting a Freudian circus. The Ego is just a balancing point, a spectator, more or less a self. Freud called it das Ich (and indeed it derives from the Greek ego, meaning "the I"; only Anglophones would be dumb enough to turn the notion of self into an insult). I expected to see all these naked Egos looking on while the Ids(raw energy without form) and Super-Egos (vapid form without energy) put on a Buster Keaton movie in a pseudo duel to the death.

I was thinking about balding my own ego until I thought about the weather and the river temperature and I experienced considerable shortening of the nether enthusiasm.

When I got there, I found only a bunch of people bundled up and laden with binoculars, monoculars, and cameras with lenses as long as your forearm. They dispersed along the river.

Since there were no bald egos that I could discern, I scoped out what the people were scoping.

Just a bunch of damned fish-biting, pooping, rather dim-witted (compared to ravens) big birds of the buzzard family; all these nutburgers braving the weather and pretending to have a hell of a good time.

What could such behaviour have to do with the very important business of peering up one's psychic hoo-hoo in the service of therapy?

Were they psychologizing the blinking birds?

I dunno.

Here in the middle of middle mid-life, I have discovered certain hazards. In fact, my household is infested with these phenomena. Like C.H.S., C.S.S., C.R.S. (Can't Hear S—, Can't See S—, Can't Remember S—) and there's C.U.S. and others.

Doubtless we went to the wrong marshalling place. The friends from Big Smoke bitched, ate, listened and went back to their bad air.

Never mind, I'll get it straight and catch the Annual Count of Bald Egos next year.

I'll baldly go....

ON TRANSPORTATION

Blacktop: Key to economic gold

By Peter Busch Times Reporter

Throughout Canadian and British Columbian history, transportation routes whether for rail or car have been the catalyst for opening new economic frontiers. The power of blacktop to pave the way for development is so great that once unleashed the growth can alter lifestyles and services, diminishing part of the reason growth has occured.

The Lower Mainland is a case in point, where over the last 20 years congestion has forced government to create transportation planning.

Economic Development Officer Robert Fine says it is no longer a case of putting roads where people are, but using transportation networks to spur economic and community growth in key areas.

When the Lions Gate Bridge was built and paid for by the Guiness family in the depths of the Depression, development of North Vancouver began. In the late 1960s the Dease Island Tunnel let loose the urban sprawl into the Fraser Valley, and in the late '80s the Alex Fraser Bridge has released into North Delta and Surrey the development pressure from a burgeoning Metro Vancouver.

Provincial governments have continued to use the building of highways to open up the northern parts of the province, at first for resource extraction and then for the movement of goods and people. The Sea to Sky highway is no less important to the Corridor than the Coquihalla has been to the Interior. But cutbacks in the provincial transportation budget could put that future of the corridor's prosperity in jeopardy.

"Transportation is certainly the key to economic development and development of any kind," says Fine. "That road [the Sea to Sky] is probably the greatest piece of economic development that will take place in this corridor for quite a while — obviously barring no new highways or new routes."

He says when the paving of the Duffey Lake Road was finally finished and the circle route completed last summer, Lillooet experienced a miny boom. "For a while there it was actually hard to get a hotel room in Lillooet.

"Now there is a legitimate tour and the challenge now is whether we can develop infrastructure to meet the demand that will now come — and at the same time not damage the environment that they have come to see," Fine said.

"The challenge is to integrate the construction of destination hotels and other services as development comes along so we can make sure it is taking place congruous with the community, and while also meeting the demand."

Fine believes tourism development will occur first, but eventually, with the movement of goods through the Interior and into Alberta and Saskatchewan, the commercial and industrial sectors will develop along the route.

"If you build this highway to the Interior, you are eventually going to get secondary industry. You are going to get warehouse facilities that will then come up. You will get new demands on shipping which will create all sorts of servicing needs. That will eventually happen to Duffey Lake like any major road but it will be slow in coming."

Fine's optimism is tempered by the possibility of losing the promised highway upgrade until the provincial government's coffers are filled by a resurging economy. He believes tourism will develop regardless, but the industrial and commercial interests need the assurance that people and goods can move freely.

"From an investment point of view you look for stability, something you know is going to be there day in and day out," he says. "And the perception of the highway is that is not the case. And I stress the word perception."

Traffic congestion on the weekends, tight corners, the fatality rate—accidents making headlines—and the occasional disaster that is picked up by media outlets all create a perception that is not always appealing to people and industry looking to move into the area.

Whistler Mayor Ted Nebbeling believes it is that perception, coupled with the weekend congestion that will stymie growth if the upgrade doesn't happen, and happen soon.

"There are plans to make the economic base stronger and to a large extent that depends on the highway upgrade because a lot of people have the perception that it is a killer highway," he says. "And if the perception is that it is a killer highway, it is a killer highway."

Nebbeling says: "I have no problem with development and ski resorts throughout the corridor. It's a very European concept. But it will always come back to the question of how to deal with the sewer going into Howe Sound and the traffic on the highway.

"Even the upgrade would never be enough. Eventually we will need another highway which will meet our transportation needs to the year 2030. And God knows what type of transportation will be contemplated by that time. There are all sorts of things on the horizon."

Nebbeling links his optimism with the ability of politicians to get the provincial government investing in the corridor's transportation infrastructure. It is an idea that contrasts somewhat with that of Squamish Mayor Egon Tobus.

"I'm not necessarily in favour of creating a four-lane expressway to Whistler because of the unreal expense," says Tobus. "There is more to the province than Whistler.

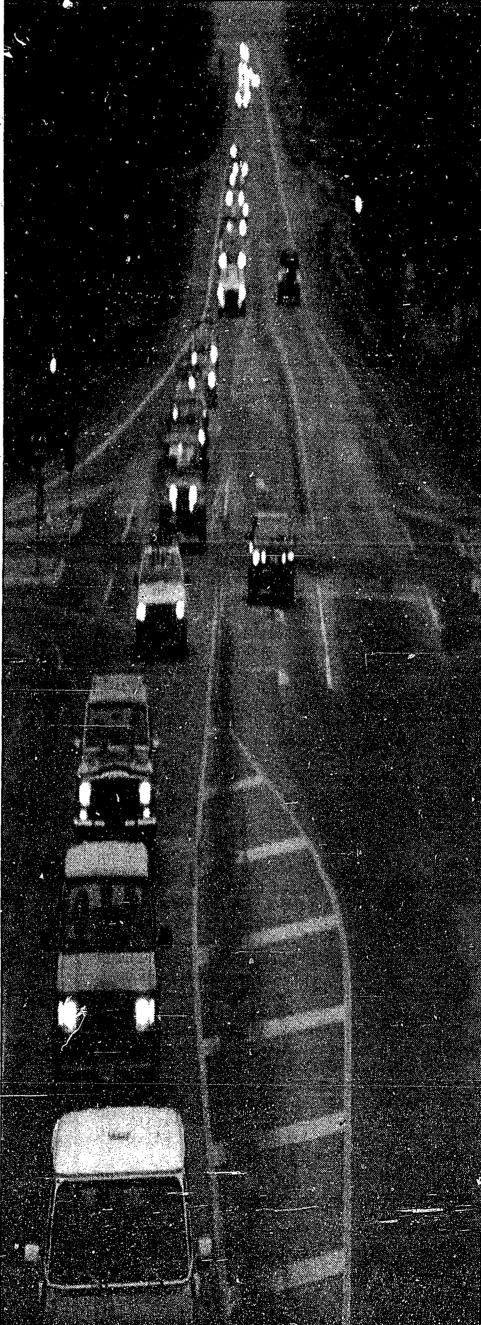

"I would like to see more passing lanes and a few tunnels. It would be enough if they just carry on as they have over the last 10 years," he says.

Tobus believes Squamish's natural assets of being a bedroom community to Vancouver and having cheap land will be enough. But Fine isn't so sure.

"We have such natural advantages of land costs, a great labour force, access to Vancouver, both airport and deep sea port," says Fine. "And it gets to the point where they are no good at all without a good highway.

"When we get inquiries from industry and developers I show them the highway plans and what is being proposed, because in the realm of government they could just turn around in two weeks and build a highway.

"But if the upgrade never happens, at what point will that stop projects coming forward and make a project less attractive to purchase?"

Scouts collect bottles

By Maureen Gilmour

The semi-annual bottle drive sponsored by the East Howe Sound Boy Scouts is planned for this Saturday in all areas of the community. The boys, leaders and parents appreciate your support. If you are not going to be at home on Saturday, please bag or box your bottles (all accepted), mark them "Boy Scouts" and leave them outside your door.

Congratulations to Angela Guy and Rob

Smith who are the parents of Squamish's New Year's baby. Miss Lindsey Seton Smith-Guy was born in the Squamish General Hospital at 7 a.m. on Jan. 3. She and her parents were the recipients of many lovely gifts courtesy of local merchants and businesses.

The Squamish Estuary Conservation Society is holding its annual general meeting in the Brackendale Art Gallery on Sunday at 1 p.m. Past, present, and future members are welcome to attend when guest speakers will be in attendance, and you are invited to participate in a panel discussion about estuary issues.

Stork Story—SLEE—Andrew and Tara Slee are first-time parents with the arrival of their son, Tanner John Lawrence, weighing 8 lbs. 12 ozs. and born in the Lions Gate Hospital at 5:12 a.m. on New Year's Day. Master Tanner was the first baby born to Squamish parents in Lions Gate. Proud grandparents are Jack and Norma Slee of Squamish, Daryl and Brenda Switzer of Grand Prairie, Alberta and Bob and Lorie Gainer of Agassiz. Pleased great grandparents are Mr. Lawrence Gainer of Chilliwack and Mr. and Mrs. George Slee of Merritt.

Squamish Community Services Society is offering three workshops with the focus on the family. The first, "Self-Esteem, a Family Affair" begins Jan. 14 to March 3; the second "Siblings Without Rivalry" begins Jan. 15 to Feb. 26; and a nine-week workshop entitled "S.T.E.P. - Systematic Training for Effective Parenting" runs from March 9 to April 29. Please refer to the ad in last week's issue of The Times as there is an application form to fill out. CSC is located at 38054 Second Ave. (side entrance to store front).

First birthday wishes to: Samuel Mallet, Scott McEachern, Dakoda Garrett, and Laura Webster.

Do you sing, play an instrument, dance, or read poetry? The Open Stage at Brackendale Art Gallery on Sunday night at 8 p.m. will give you a chance to display your talents. Phone Thor at 898-3333 to book a time. Everyone is welcome and there is no charge.

This week is the start of the 39th Annual Kinsmen Mothers' March and the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation of British Columbia has set a campaign goal of $1.75 million. Volunteers are the key to a successful door-to-door campaign and in Squamish, Kinsmen chairman Dan Morefield would like to hear from anyone interested in giving a few hours of their time. The campaign begins tomorrow, Wednesday, Jan. 15 through Friday, Jan. 31. Phone Dan at ICG Propane (898-3231) to volunteer or more info.

When Jan. birthdays are celebrated at Hill-top House tomorrow afternoon at 2 p.m., five residents will be honored. Congratulations to Bill Mitchell, Lol Henderson, Teddy Reynard, Ian Allwood and Vi Smith. You are invited to visit Hilltop and enjoy a cup of coffee or tea and birthday cake with them.

Scots and their friends are invited to the 25th Annual Burns Supper and Dance at the Legion on Saturday, Jan. 25. I've lots of Scottish blood in my veins but this is the only occasion when I try a wee bit of haggis! Entertainment will include performances by the Legion Pipe Band and Highland dancers. Tickets at $15 each are available at the Legion or from Merv Foote's Men's Wear.

Stork Story—PERRETT—Congratulations to Duane and Laurie Perrett of Whistler, who are the proud parents of the first baby born in Lion's Gate Hospital. Synthia Isabel, weighing 7 lbs. 8 ozs., arrived at 2:12 a.m. The pleased grandparents are John and Eva Perrett of Whistler and Grace and Dennis Carroll of Las Vegas, Nevada. proud great grandmothers are Mrs. Helen Blyth of White Rock and Mrs. Ingabord Petersohn of Sechelt. The new parents express thanks to Dr. Gordon Doyle and the Squamish Hospital nursing staff.

When the Squamish Women's Aglow Fellowship meets at the Easter Seal Camp on Friday at 7 p.m., Gwen Rivett will be the guest speaker. Tickets at $3.50 each at the door.

Wedding anniversary wishes to: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hoogenboom, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Cawdell, Mr. and Mrs. Mac MacKinnon, and Mr. and Mrs. Greg Boyd.

Who will be this year's Citizen of the Year? The recipient will be presented with the award at the 57th Annual General Meeting of the Squamish and Howe Sound Chamber of Commerce on Jan. 24. You are asked to nominate someone who through their time and energy has made Squamish a better place to live. Nominations must be received at the Chamber office, 37950 Cleveland Ave. or mailed to Box 1009, no later than 5 p.m., Jan. 20. Last year's Citizen of the Year was Stewart McLeod, while Jack Fowler was named Businessperson of the Year.

CHILLY DIP

A KICK-OFF DIP into chilly Porteau Cove by Kinsmen Club members Karl Wilson (1) and Dan Morefield launched the 39th annual Mothers' March Sunday. The door-to-door fundraising campaign runs Jan. 15 through 31.

28-day Chief ascent made history for pair

Now climb takes just three hours

By Rose Tatlow Editor Emeritus

It was just over 30 years ago, in the early summer of 1961, when two young men made the first frontal ascent of the Squamish Chief, the 1,700-foot high granite monolith which dominates the eastern rim of the then small town of Squamish (population 1,500) at the head of Howe Sound.

Twenty-one-year-old Jim Baldwin, a UBC student, and 22-year-old Jim Cooper of Tuxedo Junction, New York and Seattle, Washington, made the first ascent.

"It took them 28 days," Jim Sinclair, a friend of the two climbers, said last week when I met him in the post office, "and now there are people living here in Squamish, who make the same ascent using the same route, in three hours!"

Sinclair was in Squamish to "do a bit of climbing" he said modestly. He said there are now over 800 different routes on the face of the mountain and new ones are being developed every year.

Those were exciting days when people watched them make the laborious ascent, which took so long because they could only climb during daylight and came down each evening. Sometimes they would only be able to climb 50 or 60 feet a day and then begin coming down.

In the final five days of the ascent, they spent the entire time on the mountain, sleeping or trying to sleep, lashed to the crevices in the face, and to ledges, some of which sloped at a 30 degree angle.

After reaching the top it took them only 45 minutes to come down.

Sinclair, who is still an avid climber, said the two men made history when they pioneered the route up the face of the mountain in May and June, 31 years ago and their efforts have created a thriving recreational industry which each year brings thousands of people to Squamish, making the Chief world famous in climbing circles.

Hanging his hat in a new town

By Peter Busch Times Reporter

When Rick Raynor hangs his jacket up in the Squamish Fire Hall on Valentine's Day, his heart will be torn between a community he has helped shape and a new home that awaits his community spirit.

Squamish Fire Department Lieutenant Rick Raynor ends a 16-year long involvement in service groups and community events that have helped create the lifestyle for which people search.

"After living in Squamish for so long it'll feel strange starting a new job in a new town," said Raynor. "After living in a place so long you get attached to it."

A month from now the 38year old fire statute inspector will pack up his bags, and take his wife and two children to Sooke where he has been chosen as that community's new fire chief.

Raynor said during the period in which he has made Squamish his home the area has undergone a lot of changes. For example, Valleycliffe has doubled in size.

"I've seen a lot of development in Squamish. And because I was so involved in the community I feel that I'm part of that growth."

It took Raynor just two years after moving up from Vancouver with BC Tel to volunteer with the fire department and the ambulance service. In

Despite his attachment to Squamish he sees his move as advancing a career and will find comfort in the many things Sooke has in common with the community he is leaving behind.

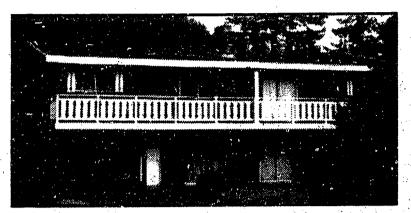

"It's a logging town and a bedroom community to a larger city. It has an emphasis on logging but also has farming and fishing as a base. It's a little smaller, not quite the downtown core — has more strip development along the main road — but it does have its own Loggers' Days," he said. "But we'll still miss all our friends. It won't be easy."

EAGLES SOARING TO NEW HIGHS?

Annual count drawing bird watchers to guard estuary ecosystem

By Peter Busch Times reporter

Gray dissipating clouds cling low over the forests lining the Squamish as the river flows towards its destination in the sound.

After serving as the tributary by which the chum salmon reach spawning beds, the river's role changes as swiftly as its flow, quickly becoming a watery storage from which eagles feast on fish carcasses.

The eighth annual Brackendale Eagle Count takes shape on its banks as volunteers sharpen their eyes to tally the birds of prey hanging low in the trees.

On Sunday 115 volunteers from Squamish and Greater Vancouver pointed, strained and stretched their way to identifying 1,675 bald eagles.

'The numbers have increased but we don't know if that is a reflection of increased population or more of an interest in the count," said organizer Dave Dunbar, of BC Wildlife.

"But there certainly hasn't been a decrease in the eagle population."

The 1992 January eagle count marks a return to province-wide tallies, and a hope that funding will enable the re-establishment of counts in Oregon and Washington. B.C. has almost half of the world's population of bald eagles.

The Brackendale count encompasses 15 areas and is part of the larger coastal region where eagles tend to winter. But because of the mild winter that has left other tributaries clear of ice, enabling the birds of prey to find carcasses, Cranbook, Williams Lake, Kamloops, and even the Kootenays are in on the count this year.

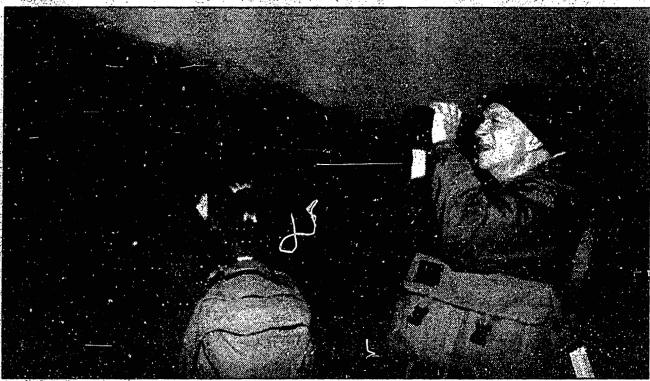

Provincial count coordinator Terry Salandini said it is important to keep track of the population and identify trends.

"Bald Eagles aren't an endangered or threatened species in the province but we like to see trends and identify critical wintering areas so we're not too complacent about habitat management," said Salandini.

Jim Wisnia of the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society brings the broader picture of habitat management into focus. The eagles are here because the salmon are here, and the salmon need a healthy estuary to sur-"It's very important for the salmonoids to have a calm, relatively undisturbed area before entering the sound and there are a lot of problems in the estuary for that to happen," said Wisnia.

"There is a lot of pressure to develop the estuary and we must do it in a thoughtful way, and logically. We can't lose the ability of future generations to [regenerate], and that includes all species, not just humans."

Hunter named to Tier II AII-Star squad

Scott Hunter, an 18-yearold Squamish resident playing for the Trail Junior Smoke Eaters has been selected as a starting right winger in the Rocky Mountain Junior Hockey League's All-Star game in Prince George on Jan. 18.

Hunter, who began playing hockey in Squamish's peewee house league when he was 12, played for four years at the North Shore Winter Club before joining Trail last fall.

"I thought I would have a tougher time than I did, but everything is going well," Hunter said. "My biggest surprise is how my confidence playing in this league has turned out for me. I wasn't very confident coming into this league, but things have worked out well."

Hunter is currently the leading goal scorer on the Junior Smoke Eaters with 31. He is eighth in the league in scoring while playing for a team that is in first place in the league's Kootenay Division.

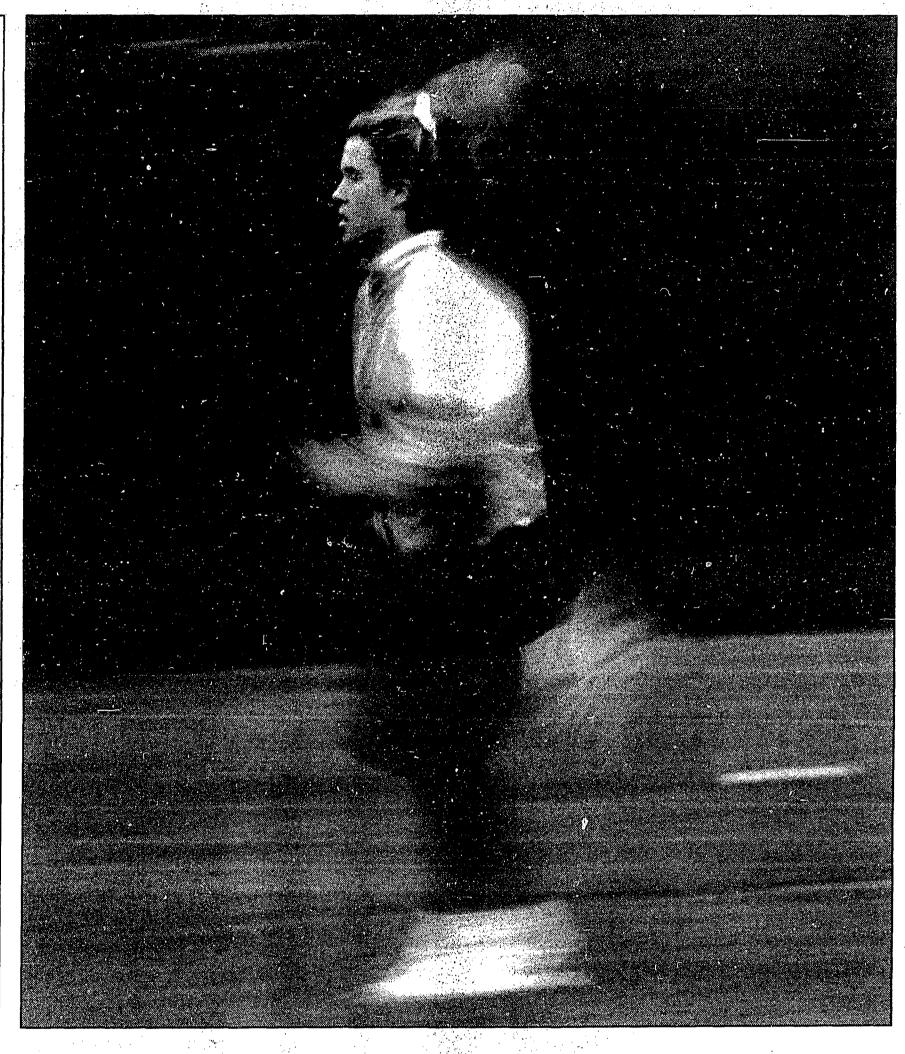

Standing 5' 8.5", Hunter said he went to Trail to pursue his goal of securing a scholarship to an American university. After attending an evaluation camp for U.S. schools last summer, Hunter elected to head for the Kootenays to get more playing experience.

"What I'm aiming for right now is to try and get a scholarship," Hunter said. "Dan Bradford [Trail's coach] phoned and showed a lot of interest so I went where I was wanted. It's far away from home, but so far it's turned out good.

"Colorado College has shown a lot of interest in me and a lot of scouts come to our games, but our coach doesn't tell us much just so we keep thinking about the team first."

Scott's parents, Rick and Elaine Hunter, are understandably proud of what their son has accomplished.

"We're very proud of him," Rick Hunter said. "He's been a good kid and he's always trained hard during the summer before training camp. I think that's why he does so well, he's always in good shape."

Christmas vacation did not stop Lindsay Weeks from sticking to her training schedule. The Howe Sound Secondary graduate is attending the University of Hawaii on a cross-country running scholarship.

Running from the rain

By Michael Booth Sports Reporter

It's a long way from the shores of Howe Sound to the beaches of Oahu, but Lindsay Weeks has found the transition to be surprisingly easy.

A 1990 graduate of Howe Sound Secondary, Weeks is currently attending the University of Hawaii on a full-ride scholarship for women's cross-country running. A standout basketball player in high school, Weeks credits her high school coaches for discovering her talent for distance running.

"The only reason I ran was to keep in shape for basketball," the first year sports medicine student said. "I liked track and field but I never really liked crosscountry.

"When I was younger, [Peter] Hotston did a lot of work with me because we were in a track club together. Cindy Hamilton [Weeks' coach in grade 11 and 12] gave me a lot of confidence...because I never thought of myself as a runner. I always thought I was a basketball player."

Following high school, Weeks spent one year studying in Thailand before returning to North America to further her education. University of Hawaii distance coach Johnny Faeber had seen videotapes of Weeks when she was competing in the Provincial High School Track and Field Championships and called with a scholarship offer.

The reputation of big-time college athletics in the United States was considered carefully before she accepted the University of Hawaii's offer. Weeks' parents had serious concerns about the type of education she would receive, but they were soon won over by the University of Hawaii's programme.

"We were concerned about the quality of education there," said Lindsay's father, Mike Weeks.

"We were also concerned about whether she would be able to maintain that level of athletics as well as her school work. I travelled over with her and met her coach, had a tour of the facility and was reassured that education did come first with the coach and the athletic department.

"I was really impressed with the athletic support staff they have at Hawaii. The coach is very concerned about the girls in the programme and she has access to health services, physiotherapy, weight training coaches and a nutritionist. The school also has mandatory drug testing — not that I'm worried about it — so they care about their athletes."

When she arrived at the university, Weeks was surprised at how popular university sports are on the islands. All the football team's games are sold out and the women's volleyball team draws well at the gate. Weeks attributes the popularity of university sport is in large part due to the absence of professional sports in Hawaii.

Another unexpected surprise was the number of Canadian athletes on scholarship at the university. Between five and 10 members of the football team are Canadian and other athletes from the Great White North are golfers, swimmers and runners. She added the Canadians fit in well with the university crowd.

"You get bugged about your accent, but that's about it," Weeks said. "Most of the athletes are from the Mainland so they view you as one of them. I didn't expect that there would be any other Canadians there so it was a really nice surprise. We all got together on Thanksgiving and had a Canadian Thanksgiving."

One of the things that has been difficult to adjust to has been the high temperatures that make the islands a desired vacation destination for many facing six months of North American winter. The temperature is a factor in all the athletes' training and special precautions are taken whenever possible.

Every week we're supposed to put in a 10 to 15-mile run," she said.

"Every Saturday we meet early in the morning and go on a long run before it gets too hot. One thing you have to do is schedule your running around where you can get water. When we do our 10 to 15-mile run we have a University of Hawaii van following us with ice water.

"Anytime we run between 12 and 4 [p.m.] we have to wear a hat. Our coach has been there so long he knows people along the way whose house we can stop and get water at."

Although Weeks is enjoying her stay in Hawaii, she welcomed the chance to return to Squamish for the American Thanksgiving holiday as well as the Christmas break.

"The air here is so much nicer to run in, I like it much better. It's crisp and clean and it's not polluted."

Triple C pulling away with two more wins

After spending the first half of the season catching and passing the Triton Hawks, Triple C is starting to pull away as the Howe Sound Men's Hockey League heads into its stretch drive.

With less than 10 games remaining for each team, Triple C has opened a six point lead atop the league standings following a pair of wins last week. The men in black downed McDonald's 5-1 on Friday night before thumping the Hawks 8-1 on Saturday. In the only other game last week, McKay's edged McDonald's 5-3.

In Friday's game, Tony Mahood scored the game's opening and closing goals and added one assist to lead Triple past McDonald's. McDonald's kept pace with Steve Hadden in the Triton Triple C for the first half as a goal by Pete Vukonic sent the two teams to the dressing rooms with the score knotted at

In the second half, Triple C slowly took command, scoring four goals and skating away with a 5-1 win. Greg MacDougall, Glen Antosh, and Richard Raffaele each scored once to compliment Mahood's second goal with Antosh adding two assists.

With the Howe Sound Cyclones playing Burnaby, both Triple C and the Triton Hawks experienced an acute shortage of bodies for their Saturday night clash. Triple C came out strong and built up a 3-1 lead after the first half despite the outstanding play of nets.

The second half followed the same script as the McDonald's game the previous night with Triple C erupting for seven goals to take control of the game en route to the 8-1 final score. Rob Confortin, Bob Versluis and Dave James each had two goals to pace triple C while single markers went to Raffaele and Glen Antosh. Dan Sargent was the lone Triton marksman to beat Triple C goaltender George Rozzman

On Sunday night, one week of inactivity did not slow Randy Leblanc down. In Mackay's only game last week, Leblanc was in on all the Flames' scoring as they dumped McDonald's 5-3.

After scoring once and adding two assists to help McKay's to a 3-3 tie at the half, Leblanc scored the winner and added an insurance marker to lead McKay's to the win. Single goals for the Flames went to Rick Rosser and Maurice Mountenay while Vukonic, Paul McFadden and Jerry Reed each scored one goal for McDonald's, all in the first half.

Simmons edged in zone final

It was a rough weekend for Squamish's high school curling teams as they went down to defeat at Pacific Coast zone play-offs. In Mill Bay on Vancouver Island, the Darryl Simmons foursome advanced to the finals of the Pacific Coast Lower Mainland Juvenile Championships before falling by a single point. Simmons and company opened the tournament by blowing out a Vancouver rink 12-0. In the next game, however, Port Alberni humbled the Squamish foursome 9-2. The Squamish rink bounced back to defeat Maple Ridge 10-5 and advance to the title round.

"After we blew away the other team in the first game, we were too overconfident when we played Port Alberni," Simmons explained.

Cyclones edged by Bingers

With a week to practice and think about the Seattle disaster, the Howe Sound Cyclones took their show on the road and managed to throw a scare into the Burnaby Bingers before ultimately succumbing by a score of 6-3.

After being humiliated 14-0 at the hands of the Seattle Indians in their own barn, the Cyclones struggled early before staging a third period comeback.

Burnaby built up period leads of 2-0 and 5-0 before newcomer Richard Holdane scored early in the third to end the Cyclones' goal drought at five periods. After taking the first two periods to get their offense untracked, the Cyclones went to the Bingers net more often in the third and came up with all three of their goals for the evening.

Paul Schulte banked in a shot off Dave deBalinhard's skate to make the count 5-2 before the Bingers scored to restore their four-goal lead. Schulte was once again the architect on the Cyclones' final goal as Eric Swan tipped in his point shot to make the final count 6-3.

The Cyclones now return home to host the Bingers this Saturday night at the Civic Centre. Game time is 8 p.m.

In the final, the Simmons rink had their backs to the wall as Port Alberni only had to win once for the title while the Squamish foursome needed to win twice. Simmons won the first game 10-5 but came up short in the second, dropping a 9-8 decision.

"In the final we all curled well, but we missed a couple of key shots and that gave them points," Simmons said. "We started to get it together near the end, but in the last end he took out our one rock that would have tied it."

The Simmons rink was not the only group of young the Rebecca Otto rink squared off with a Lower Mainland opponent for the Junior Girls' Championships. Zone Experience carried the day, however, as the veteran Allison McInnes rink cruised to a pair of wins by scores of 20-1 and 14-3.

Squamish curlers in action last weekend. In New Westminster,

Marshall Tichauer, Howe Sound's junior curling coordinator, said he was pleased with the progress the local teams have made and added it was proof positive of how competitive the curling in Squamish is.

All-star game out of touch with reality

The NHL's mid-season back-patting session is about to convene in Philadelphia this Saturday and, although the format has improved greatly in recent years, hockey's premier all-star game still falls short of its potential.

The biggest problem with the concept is that no less than three all-star teams are named at different points of the season. The first selections are made by a vote of the fans at the all-star break, a process whose results often raise more eyebrows than a stripper in church.

TECHNICALLY FOUL

By Michael Booth

Then, at the conclusion of the season, the NHL announces a first and second all-star team based on how the players performed during the recent season. This is followed by all-rookie team awards and a bevy of other prizes which are handed out liberally at the end of the season.

So which team is the true all-star team, the one in January or the one in June?

The fan selection process simply has to go. In its current form, the starting line-up for the Wales Conference is simply a reaffirmation that the people of Pittsburgh can recognize how their city is spelled when they look down the list of potential selections. How else do you explain four Penguins among the starting six players?

Granted, Mario Lemieux and Kevin Stevens are having terrific seasons, but Paul Coffey has been benched and shifted to left wing — hardly the qualifications of an all-star defenseman. And is Jaromir Jagr really better having a better season than Kirk Muller, Ray Ferraro, Owen Nolan and Randy Burridge?

On the Campbell Conference roster, the fans voting Ed Belfour a starting spot on the roster is a bad joke. Following a lengthy contract dispute, Belfour has been remarkably average this season and his selection merely means that he has taken Mike Vernon's spot on the roster—the one reserved for goaltenders trading on a reputation earned by their defensemen.

Unfortunately, the NHL's general managers could only select two reserve goaltenders and thus Bob Essensa, one of the best goalies in the league, will spend the weekend in Winnipeg. Surely he deserves a better fate than that.

But that is only the beginning of a parade of absurdities, not the least of which is a by-law that somebody from the Toronto Maple Leafs must play in the game.

Last week, the League announced that Larry Robinson and Brian Trottier would play in the all-star game in recognition for their years of service.

Enough already. Trottier and Robinson have been in more all-star contests than each man has fingers so it's doubtful their selection means more to them than a missed opportunity for a couple of extra days rest.

Furthermore, given the wide open style of play which occurs during the all-star game, their inclusion will amount to a live demonstration of why the Canadiens and the Islanders expected them to retire.

The best thing about the event's current format is the skills competition, but it doesn't go far enough. The league should take it upon itself to ensure that all the skills necessary to make it to the NHL are included in the skill competitions.

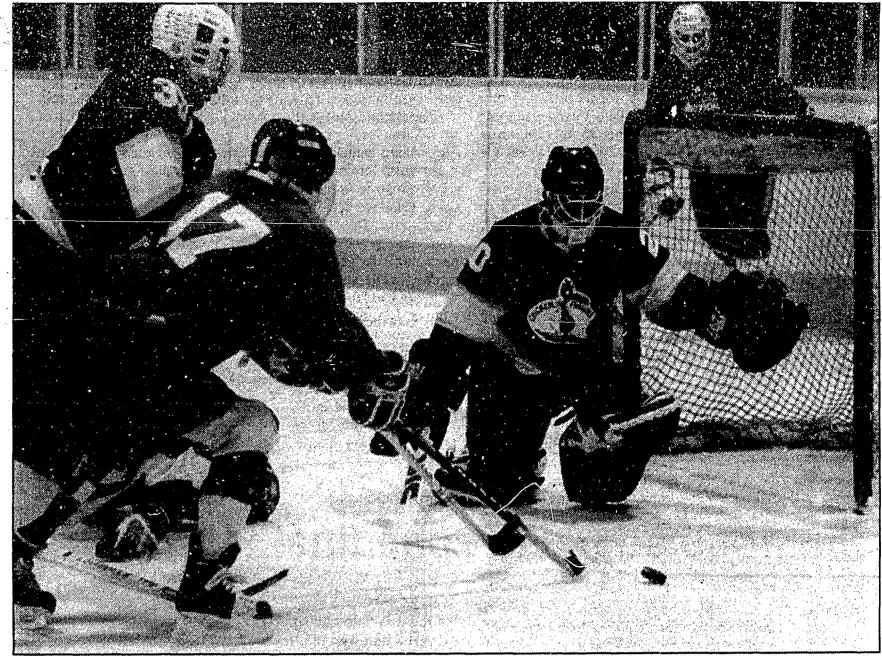

Let's have a diving contest, complete with figure skating-style judging, to learn if Claude "The Fraud" Lemieux really is the best diver since Greg Louganis.

And how about a competition which rewards the goaltender who can make a routine glove save look like a nerve-twitching, game-breaker in overtime of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Of course we can't forget the game's neanderthal element. To give this "skill" its due, two goons from each conference will be supplied with one European player and whoever knocks out their victim with the fewest number of punches is declared the winner

Just think of it: Link Gaetz against Sergei Fedorov, Bob Probert versus Mats Sundin, Gino Odjick and Jari Kurri. And Don Cherry could supply the play-by-play.

Oh, to live in a perfect world.

BCTV wins for charity

A shortstaffed BCTV squad had more than enough fire-power to subdue the Furry Creek Chickenhawks, posting a 7-5 win at the Civic Centre on Saturday night.

With most of the team absent due to preparations for the Vancouver-Pittsburgh telecast on Sunday afternoon, the BCTV Tubes were able to build up a 5-1 lead early in the third before the Furry Creek brood staged their comeback.

As far as the Chickenhawks were concerned, their luck changed after they ripped down a poster of BCTV's Newshour crew which had been taped up on the boards behind Furry Creek goaltender Orest "Dr. Toro" Semeniuk.

"We had to tear down the BCTV sign which was behind our goalie," said Furry Creek captain Dirk 'Mother Chickenhawk' Fleing. "Norm Grohman was a hex on Dr. Toro."

BCTV scored a pair of early markers to open up a 2-0 lead before Ian 'The Damned Attorney' Reith pulled the Chickenhawks to within one. The Brood had a chance to tie it moments later when Steve "Sparky" Beauregard sent Fleing in clear on a breakaway, but Fleing opted to dazzle the crowd with his Pavel Bure impersonation, firing the puck into the BCTV goaltender's chest

The Vancouver visitors added a goal in the second period and one more in the third before the Chickenhawks tore down the offending poster and began their resurgence.

A pair of rookies led the Furry Creek charge with Mike 'The Rookie' Otway scoring two goals and Barry 'Woody" Woodard scoring once as the 'Hawks pulled to within one. BCTV managed a sixth goal, but Woodard's second goal of the night brought the Brood back to within a goal.

Two late penalties wrung the Chickenhawks' collective neck as BCTV scored the insurance marker with a twoman advantage in the game's dying moments.

"I'll have to admit the rookie Chickenhawks outshone the elders," Fleing said. "Although when Ralphie 'The Hammer" Davis scores we win and he didn't score."

The game marked the debut of a new face behind the Furry

Creek bench as Orest Markowsky has agreed to serve as the Chickenhawks first-ever coach.

"BCTV stopped our winning streak, it was our first loss of 1992 so now we will have to get a coach," Fleing explained.

The big winner on the night, however, was Lions Club charities for handicapped kids with almost $400 raised at the door and from contributions by the two teams.

"We've done well with our cash calendar, but we have to work our butts off usually to make money," said Squamish Lions Club treasurer Sonny Davis.

"This has been, for the time we've put in, an easy [$350+] to make for us."

Shutz rink tops open

Squamish's Jim Shutz rink overcame fast ice and seasoned opposition to win the 1992 Howe Sound Men's Open on Sunday afternoon.

The Shutz rink, which included Lorne Campbell at third and the father and son pairing of Dan and Marshall Tichauer at second and lead respectively, knocked off a North Vancouver rink skipped by Brian White 7-2 in the A event final to lay claim to the championship.

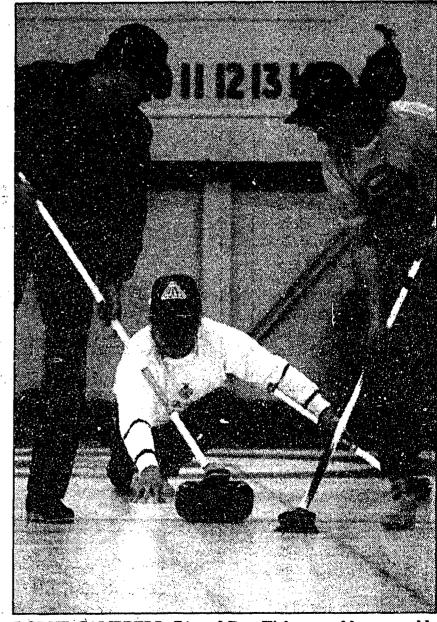

"They didn't seem to get their feet out of the blocks and they never really gained on us," Campbell said. "The ice was pretty keen and they were throwing heavy on their draw weight. The ice was fast all weekend, but by 4 p.m. and the finals, it was extremely quick

Shutz defeated Howe Sound's Ken Newington rink in the semi-finals to advance to the title game. In the final, the Squamish foursome grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first end and then rode a solid takeout game the rest of the way to the title.

"We were taking them out really we'll and we wanted to force them into a hitting game because we know their draw game — if it was up to snuff — would be extremely tough," Campbell said. "The score didn't really determine the type play. They just couldn't get a break and they were overthrowing the rocks on draws and takeouts."

The weekend tourney marked the fifth straight year the North Vancouver rink has taken part in the Open, experience which included an A event win in 1988 and a C event title in they only play together at the 1990.

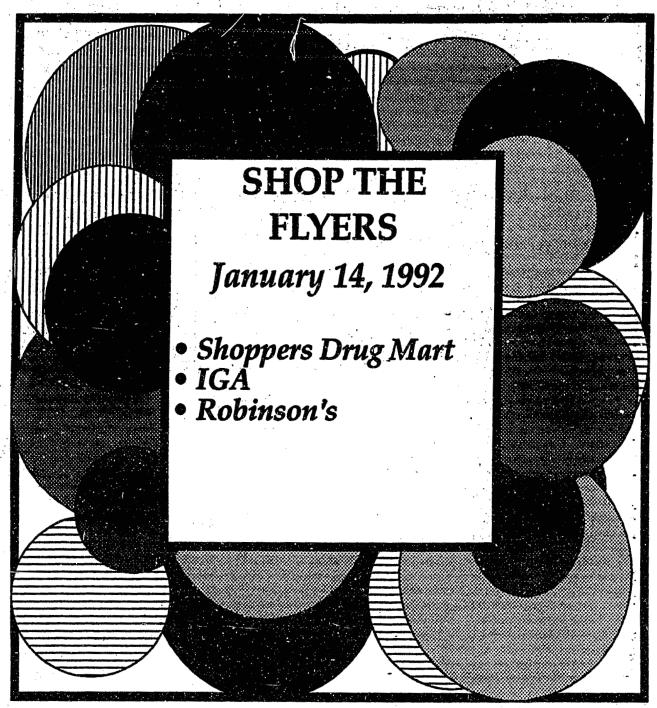

"It's an all around good 'spiel," said North Vancouver third Irwin Sellars. "It's in a small town so you always get good ice, good companionship and there's always good friends

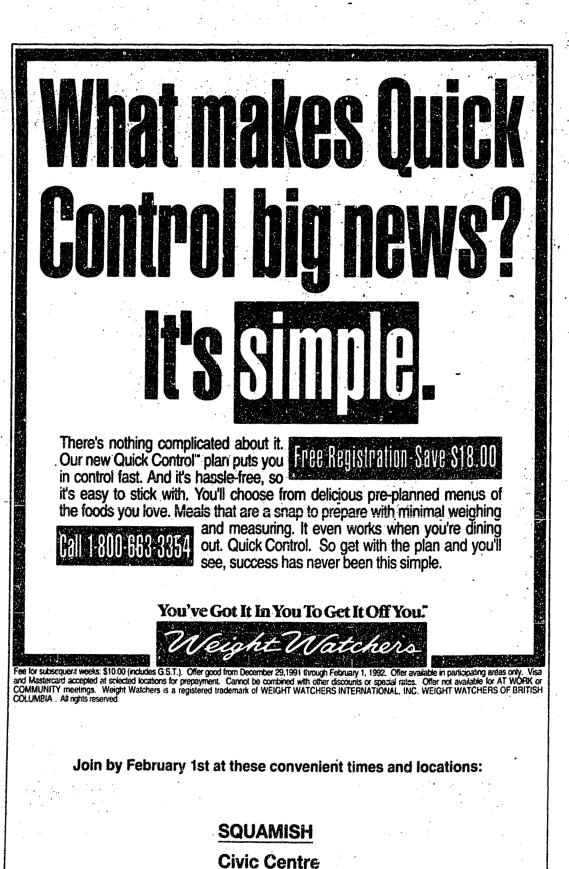

The White rink knocked off the defending champion Rick Reimer rink in the semi-finals before running into Shutz in the final. The team's string of success is remarkable since Howe Sound Open.

"We just come together for this bonspiel," Sellars said. "We've curled together before so we know how each other curls. Once you've got a style you generally don't change and it's not hard to pick up where you left off."
