By Julie Anderson

A pack of dogs running through the streets of Brackendale late at night killing small pets and creating havoc has residents concerned the dogs may hurt a child next.

The extent of the damage to Yvonne Thorne's rabbit cage in her yard led her to believe coyotes were the animals to blame for killing her two rabbits late Friday evening.

"They destroyed the cage to get at the rabbits by ripping the wood right off the back," said Thorne with frustration.

On Saturday evening when the animals returned to Thorne's yard "barking and wailing" she realized it was a pack of dogs.

"I saw the pack in the yard, but did not go out to scare them off for fear of what they may do to me," Thorne said.

There were about 10 to 12 dogs with at least two being German shepherd breed, she said. "I guess they were after my remaining rabbit, which I now keep in the house."

The dogs usually come out in the evening, but who is to say they will not appear during the day, said Thorne, who is worried the children in the neighborhood could be hurt by the pack. This has been going on for quite some time, said Thorne, who after complaining to police, the dog pound and the conservation office, is worried nothing is being done about the problem.

District of Squamish deputy clerk Trudy Coates said that during the last couple of weeks the municipality has received a number of dog complaints from Brackendale residents. Complaints range from one to 12 dogs, usually roaming between the hours of midnight to about 4 a.m., Coates said.

Complainants said when the dogs were scared away they ran towards the Squamish Nation reserve, and because of this, correspondence was sent to the Squamish Nation indicating the problem, Coates said.

Also, the municipality sent a report to RCMP, who can deal with the situation under the Livestock Protection Act, which means if deemed necessary, they can shoot the dogs.

RCMP Const. Suk Pal said they have been working with the Squamish Nation Peacekeepers and the Squamish Nation band council and believe the problem will be brought under control in a more diplomatic way.

"We can't just go out and start shooting dogs," Pal said. "However, if it gets to the point where they are a danger to the public, then yes we will take those measures." In the meantime, Pal said extra police patrols are watching the area.

Coates reminds dog owners throughout the community that their pets must be completely contained in a fenced area at all times, or tied in the yard, and must be kept on a leash when walking.

Two to plead guilty to wood waste charges

By Ron Enns

Two Squamish area residents will plead guilty to pollution charges after allegedly allowing large quantities of wood waste to be dumped on their property without authorization.

Marty Vanderhoef and Susan Hethrington will enter guilty pleas at a sentencing hearing Aug. 1 at 11:30 a.m. in Squamish provincial court, defence lawyer Brian Hughes told the court July 11.

However, another issue has arisen: the question of the use of force against Vanderhoef in the case, Crown counsel Peter Favell told the court.

Hughes said there may be cause for mitigation because of force on the part of police in the serving of a document to Vanderhoef.

"The report noted force was used at some point. It is an issue," Hughes told the court.

Squamish RCMP Const. Greg Gillis and Vanderhoef are to be called as witnesses when the matter of force is dealt with at the sentencing hearing.

Vanderhoef and Hethrington were each charged with three counts under the Waste Management Act for introducing business waste into the environment, introducing waste into the environment in such a manner or quantity as to cause pollution and contravention of an order made under the Waste Management Act by a manager for failing to remove wood waste from the property. Favell told the court there was a stay of proceedings on the third charge against each of the accused.

The charges follow an investigation by B.C. Environment in which the accused, since October 1992, or earlier, allegedly allowed large amounts of cedar wood waste from local mills to be dumped on their property in exchange for money, according to a Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks news release. The property owners allegedly did not have authorization or were not properly permitted to accept the wood waste, the news release says. The property lies within the flood plain of the Squamish River.

Judge C.I. Walker said he will determine whether or not Vanderhoef and Hethrington will be sentenced at the Aug. 1 hearing.

The maximum penalty for each offence is $1 million and/or six months in prison.

Briefs

Fire hazard high in Squamish Forest District

People are encouraged to recreate cautiously with the high fire hazard rating that currently exists throughout the Squamish Forest District. There have not been any campfire bans issued, but campers are encouraged not to make any campfires. If people do insist on lighting a campfire, it must be done according to campfire regulations, said Squamish Forest District fire protection officer Jim Pietila. Fires must be made on mineral soil surrounded by rocks with water on site. The fire must always be attended and put out completely when leaving the area. A person should be able to stick a hand in the remains of the fire after it has been put out. The Squamish Forest District has cancelled all burning permits.

Logging companies are working the early shift to avoid the midday heat. The fire hazard rating was extreme in the southern part of the interfor tree farm licence north of Squamish on Monday, but was still open to the public. However, if the hot, dry weather continues and pushes the fire hazard rating to extreme throughout the area, logging operations could cease and all access to the area could be restricted, said Empire Logging field engineer Dave Guilbride. The Squamish Forest District has been lucky this year. There have only been two wild fires, both small, in the district this year: one at Lillooet Lake about two weeks ago was brought under control within one day, and a fire that started as a result of a campfire Saturday night at Shannon Falls was extinguished quickly.

Stage two water
restrictions required

Water use on the Stawamus River exceeded the licenced amount over the weekend. Since the weather forecast is for continuing dry weather, stage two of the District of Squamish's water conservation response plan is required to limit the demand on the Stawamus source. Lawn sprinkling is restricted to the hours of 4-9 a.m. and 7-10 p.m. on Wednesday and Saturday for even addresses and Thursday and Sunday for odd addresses. These restrictions apply to those areas served by the Stawamus intake including Brackendale, Garibaldi Estates, North Yards, Dentville, Downtown and Valleycliffe. The Garibaldi Highlands and those properties served by domestic wells are excluded.

These restrictions will be in force until further notice.

Speech therapy cuts upset parents

By Julie Anderson

Several parents of special needs children attended Wednesday night's school board meeting in support of a request to stop cuts in speech and language services within the Howe Sound School District.

Susan Barry, representing several regional support groups, and as a parent of a special needs child, gave a presentation requesting the board reconsider its decision to cut a full-time therapist's position to part-time, and more importantly, the elimination of a part-time therapist's position.

The number of children in the district requiring speech and language services is increasing, while the level of service has eroded, Barry said.

"We are talking about children whose communication problems prohibit them from peer interaction, accessing educational materials, understanding instructions, relaying information and dealing with confusion and frustrations.

"Access to speech and language services should be of utmost importance. Denying a child the opportunity to learn to communicate, to ask questions, to interact with peers and school staff, is to deny that child the opportunity to learn and grow and reach his full potential," Barry said.

For most of these children, communication and socialization does not come easily, she said. The person holding the part-time position not only worked with the child, but provided training and support to their families, teachers and care givers, Barry said.

Ministry of Education statistics provided by Barry indicate money coming into the district for special education has not decreased but increased by $123,393 for the 1995/96 school year.

"The Ministry of Education seems to have allotted substantial funds for Special Health Services (speech/language services, occupational and physical therapy), so they must recognize the need for these services," Barry said.

There have been no cutbacks at the ministry level, she said, and is concerned the money is being spent elsewhere in the educational system.

"According to figures, they (speech pathologists) are already carrying a caseload far greater than the recommended level," Barry said.

"It looks like the ratio for School District No. 48 will be one full-time equivalent position per 2,500 students."

If the district does not reconsider its position on the issue, then Barry asked for an explanation as to where the funding has been spent and why speech services are lacking. The board unanimously agreed to accept and consider Barry's concerns and refer the issue to the district superintendent for further consideration.

Logger's family pleased with inquest results

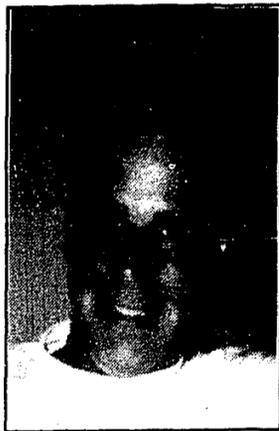

By Julie Anderson

The inquest into the death of Squamish logger Donald Caldwell leaves his family with hopes the resulting recommendations will be followed so the system does not fail another young person.

Caldwell, 29, was seriously injured in a logging accident April 27, 1994 near mile 13 of the MacMillan Bloedel logging road in the Mamquam River valley.

He was treated at Squamish General Hospital and was later transferred to Lions Gate Hospital in North Vancouver where he died the same day.

The inquest held June 28, 29, and

Donald Caldwell

July 4, 5 was held to determine how, where and by what means Caldwell came to his death.

"The system failed my son and hopefully, if recommendations are followed, it will not fail another," said Ted Caldwell, Donald's father who traveled from Gabriola Island to attend the four-day inquest.

"Some of the recommendations, I know, will fall by the wayside due to monetary and political reasons," said Caldwell, who hopes the more crucial recommendations will be followed.

Six of the 12 recommendations were directed to Squamish General Hospital, three to the logging industry, one to the Squamish Lillooet Regional District and two recommendations were forwarded to the Workers' Compensation Board.

Caldwell said he was disappointed with some of the testimony he heard from Squamish doctors and nurses regarding the treatment of his son.

Heather Bragg, Donald Caldwell's mother, said from her home in Kamloops, "I knew he should not have died. Call it a mother's instinct, but I knew he didn't need to die."

Both parents agree the inquest was handled extremely well by presiding regional coroner Larry Campbell and coroner's counsel Robert Kennedy.

They were helpful, friendly and handled the inquest with great sensitivity, Caldwell said.

"It (the inquest) went as well as can be expected under the circumstances," Bragg said.

Marijuana with a possible street value in excess of $50,000 was seized by Squamish RCMP in the Squamish valley Thursday afternoon.

Shortly after noon a RCMP helicopter flew a team of officers from the Squamish detachment up the valley to check out a possible marijuana grow operation. Two sites were located, one near mile 23 and another near mile 16.

A total of 148 plants were seized from the two sites, ranging from 45 centimetres to 1.2 metres in height.

Both plantations were located on Crown land, and no arrests have been made in connection with either grow operation. Cpl. Cliff Doherty of the Squamish RCMP asks that anyone with information on either of these marijuana operations or any others which are spotted in the district contact either the RCMP or Crimestoppers.

Residents urged to voice their opinions in community survey

How satisfied are you with life in Squamish? How do you rate the services? The recreation opportunities? How do you feel about the changes which have been occurring in the community recently? Which development issues in the municipality do you support?

These are some of the questions which residents will be asked to respond to in the 1995 Squamish Community Survey, which is being delivered to every household mailbox this week. The survey is part of a research project being undertaken by professor Alison Gill at the department of geography, Simon Fraser University, and professor Maureen Reed, at the department of geography, University of British Columbia. They are examining community change in the Howe Sound-Whistler corridor.

"Squamish is an especially dynamic community as various forces of change result in numerous types of adjustment," says Gill. "On the one hand there are changes occurring in the traditional resource-based industries and at the same time growth in Vancouver and Whistler is creating a demand for housing. The high quality recreation environment that the region offers also attracts tourists. All of these factors create pressures which the community must deal with."

The survey was developed in collaboration with the Squamish planning department and the Sea to Sky Economic Development Commission to ensure that the questions are relevant to the community, and the survey was approved by Squamish council. The municipality will have access to the information collected in the survey, which will help with various planning issues.

"As the community diversifies" says Gill, "there is an even greater need to understand differences in residents' attitudes about development and future growth in the community. Only then can planners work towards ensuring that all views are considered. This survey is one means, although not the only one, by which residents can have a voice in what goes on in the community."

It is anticipated that preliminary results of the survey will be available in the planning department at Municipal Hall in the fall.

Tall Ship sails bottled beer

By Patricia Heintzman

Four months ago, Tall Ship Ale company of Squamish made international headlines in what was dubbed loosely by many media outlets as the David versus Goliath battle of the tall ship breweries. The dispute centred around Molson Breweries' allegations that the Tall Ship Ale logo of a masted ship closely resemble that of Molson Export, beer sold predominately in eastern Canada, and infringed on Molson's trademark. The two companies finally settled out of court with Molson picking up the tab for all the redesign and redistribution costs of Tall Ship Ale's logo. "Basically we went to a side view of a ship instead of a front view," says David Philp as he points to a pewter relief of a ship above the door that leads to the beer brewing area at their Squamish Industrial Park location.

"We're really happy with the result. It looks more like a ship this way. I'm still going through the process of taking all our stuff with the old logo out of the market. I've got hundreds of posters of the old logo that I can't do anything with."

Looking back at the Molson issue, Tall Ship partners Bill Herdman and Philp agree that despite a slight increase in sales at the time due to media attention, the duo would have preferred to avoid the whole situation and concentrate at their job at hand. "We're in the business of making beer. We don't really have the time or care to worry about these other things," says Philp.

Business has been going well enough for the Squamish based brewery. It now produces two brews, the original Tall Ship Ale and Raspberry Ale, which Philp says is becoming quite popular during the summer months. And the company is moving into a new market as it prepares to bottle its products and sell it in liquor and beer stores around the Lower Mainland.

"A shipment of 42,000 bottles just arrived on our doorstep last week," Philp says, a storeroom of palettes of empty beer bottles from Mexico towering behind him.

"We hope to have the product on the shelves by the August long weekend (Aug. 5). The benefit of putting out a bottle and having more products is we can direct our beer to market directly to the consumer."

The beer-making duo also purchased a Meheen computer controlled, micro-master automatic beer bottling machine with onboard computer controls, which includes bottle fill level and pressure controls.

"This means we can put out 1,500 per hour at top speed," said Philp, adding that the output would probably not be that high.

The new Tall Ship bottle is a 473 millilitre bottle, one U.S. pint, and the Tall Ship products will sell for about $2.20 plus deposit at liquor stores.

Which is the pot?

With a narrow vote against, the provincial government passed its new Election Act last week. Among the most controversial aspects of the new legislation, for the media at least, is a section which cracks down on the reporting of opinion polls during an election. Fines up to $5,000 or a year in jail could be levied against editors who are proven to have released polling information without including at least a dozen technical details, including giving a political party 24 hours notice before releasing details of any polls which the party might have commissioned.

Polls can indeed be misleading. We know of a few people at least who, given the opportunity, would deliberately attempt to skew the results of a political phone survey. Partly from a deep seated loathing of all political parties, and partly because of an equally deep seated loathing of phone solicitation.

But polls properly done can indeed be informative, showing trends in larger areas while always keeping in mind, in even the most scientific survey, the undecided votes and the margin for error. At the same time, polls are only one indicator, and any politician who has to rely on polls is indeed out of touch with the electorate.

One curious aspect of the debate on this new act were statements made by our own MLA David Mitchell. He supported the act, and questioned why the polling restrictions were being limited to election campaigns. He cited as particularly offensive a survey in the North Shore News which predicted a Liberal victory. Mitchell is currently an independent MLA, was elected as a Liberal, and is now being courted by the B.C. Reform Party. Not hard to figure out his attitude towards polls.

But we recall at least one occasion, perhaps there were more, where Mitchell sent out information on the results of polling he had done in his own riding. We did not print the material because he did not explain the survey, when it was done, how it was done, by whom, who chose which households to call, and the possible margin of error.

So the question becomes, between Mitchell and the media, who is the pot and who is the kettle? Perhaps we should take a poll.

Nuke the testing

News must take a while to get to France. Perhaps someone should tell the French government the Cold War is over.

How else to explain France's insane plan to resume nuclear testing in the South Pacific?

The front pages of papers around the world last week were plastered with images of French troops ramming and storming Greenpeace's Rainbow Warrior II after it breached the 20-kilometre exclusion zone around Mururoa Atoll, where the testing is to resume. The boarding took place almost 10 years to the day since French secret agents planted a mine aboard the original Rainbow Warrior tied up in the harbor at Auckland, New Zealand. The resulting explosion killed greenpeace photographer Fernando Periera, who was the only person aboard the vessel at the time.

Starting in September, France plans a series of eight underground explosions. It says the tests are necessary in the development of a new generation of nuclear warheads for its submarines.

Is this really necessary? Is France expecting a war in the near future? Does it plan to send submarines up the St. Lawrence Seaway to support Quebec independence?

If France insists in carrying through with this testing program, it should do so under the Eiffel Tower. Or perhaps the Louvre.

There should be such a massive international outcry so as to make the blockade of Iraq look like a playground tiff. There is no need for nuclear testing in this day and age. China gets away with it because no western nations are willing to risk such a lucrative burgeoning export market. France has no such advantage, and neither nation has any excuse.

Bring on the photo radar

Coming soon to a dangerous road near you, the province's latest plan to reduce speeding and stop the carnage on our highways: photo radar.

For those who have been living in a shoe for the past few years, photo radar is an electronically altered camera attached to a radar unit which takes a photo of any vehicles which are speeding. Processed and printed, the film reveals the licence plate number, and the registered owner of said vehicle is sent a ticket for speeding.

The same system has been in use for the past year in Ontario, but it was turfed last week by Conservative leader Mike Harris, who promised to do just that in the campaign which led to his recent election. Ontarians have said the system was an infringement on their rights, nothing but a tax grab, too impersonal, fallible in that the registered owner might not have even been driving the car.

But the major complaint about photo radar in Ontario is that it was suspected as the leading cause in the frequent depletion of an extensive number of bank accounts. Poor babies.

Ontarians seem to treat their inherent right to speed the question of: if a tree falls in the forest and there is no one there to see it, does it really make a sound?

In other words, if there is no human attached to the radar gun, and no person wearing a Smoky the Bear hat, with blue pants and yellow racing stripes issuing a ticket, are they really speeding?

Not now.

But in B.C. they will be, and I am all in favor. Particularly on Hwy. 99.

For starters, I think photo radar is more fair. The camera works so fast it will get all speeders. With a team of police officers busy giving out a ticket, that is a licence for others to roar past until the first ticket is issued and a second speeder is caught. That is selective ticketing at best.

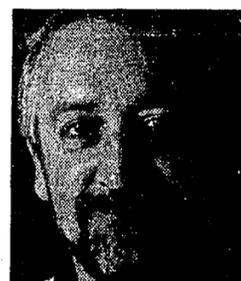

For another thing, police officers will not have to risk life and limb trying to flag down the driver of a Corvette going at warp speed back to Vancouver Sunday night in Whistler or Vancouver without having to see someone, perhaps an acquaintance, friend, relative or someone we don't even know, splattered all over the road. And by the way, I'm all in favor of erecting crosses and small tributes to those who have been killed on the highway. I think it's excellent a more permanent memorial has been erected to honor the three young Squamish men killed on the highway in the Cheakamus Canyon, and I'm still mystified why the roadside tribute to Bob Hills near the entrance to the industrial park was removed.

While it's true such memoriorder to arrive before the nearest beer and wine store closes. And police officers will have more time to go after the really bad guys. What a concept!

There are already some people in the province, including a few here in the corridor, who say this unstaffed speed catching system is an infringement of their rights.

Well, tough noogies, folks. I also have rights, and one of them is the right to drive Hwy. 99 in a relative degree of safety, free from the fear of some nipplnose doing 160 kilometres per hour passing me on a double solid line in a blind corner. You think I'm exaggerating? Talk to any commuter, and this occurs more often than not.

I also think we all have the right to travel the highway to als could cover almost every inch of the highway, anything to reduce the carnage should be welcome.

To be sure, photo radar won't solve all the problems. But what a way to pay for the driver education programs everyone knows are so necessary. What a way to pay for highway improvements. What a way to pay the health care bills of those people injured by speeders.

Sure it's a cash grab. So what? Why not take the cash from people who are obviously breaking the law, rather than raising taxes for all of us?

We all agree there have been some horrendous accidents on Hwy. 99 in recent years, and in the end, we all agree it is not so much the fault of the highway as it is of the drivers. So drivers, be forewarned.

If the provincial government doesn't already have your number, it soon will.

Hiking potential tremendous but some trails need work

Editor,

Hey, Al, here in Squamolia we don't charge extra for the ticks. Kind of keep the tick thing under your hat; everybody will want one. I've climbed virtually every bump between the north shore and Duffy Lake and never have I picked up a tick. And I'm pretty sure it isn't because of blazing speed over the trails. Consider yourself among the chosen.

I couldn't agree more about the marking of trails.

The problem isn't limited to Brohm.

I was in Whistler the other day to deal with a piece of broken equipment. The guy who owned the sports shop observed that "Squamish has 50 times the recreational potential of Whistler."

Not only can we not get it together to develop it, but we don't take good care of what we already have.

A few years back, I had rather the eldritch task of taking a woman you work with over the Smoke Bluffs trail for the first time. Eldritch because she was born and grew up here.

Smoke Bluffs is a trail for everyone.

There are well over 200 rockclimbing routes along the trail and anyone interested can stop and get a much better look at how it's done rather than squinting through binoculars or a spotting scope at the Stawamus Chief. It's circular so you don't have to retrace steps. Flora and fauna are very nifty.

You can poke along and do the circuit in 40 minutes or an hour.

Or if you're working on your hiking legs, you can do a high-gear roll-on and do it in 20 minutes or less.

It's one of my favourite training trails. At least as good as DeBeck's Hill which is another good one; you can start from the far parking lot at Alice Lake where you see the yellow gate.

Back to Smoke Bluffs.

When places near both ends of the trail were developed, parking was a little tough for a time and there was much tension between rock-climbers and the developer. It is now possible to find parking again, but there is another problem. There is an institution called The Federation of Mountain Clubs of B.C. (FMBC). Their courses virtually put a number of corridor guiding companies out of work here in the corridor and elsewhere.

Their standards were lousy — I speak from experience.

On a rock face shortly after the beginning of the south end of the trail, a metal tag proudly says that the Smoke Bluffs trail is an FMBC project. They may have sponsored its creation, but they certainly haven't maintained it.

I've taken many people over that trail and several have fallen (I've had to take a couple to SGH emergency) because of loose rock, log stairs which gave way, etc. I think they should be contacted or perhaps better, perhaps the parks and recreation department can work something out with Social Services and/or people on unemployment insurance and do a little shoring up of the trail.

Despite the resistance to the tourist industry, we are indeed rich in recreational resources.

Full stride ahead and damn the ticks.

Mike Yates, President of Vice, SOFHA (Slow Old Fat Hikers Association)

Courtesy goes a long way when driving the highway

Editor,

Oh those killer drivers on Hwy. 99. The recent column by Ron Enns in the Chief re: the many killers on Hwy. 99 is the most ridiculous column I have ever seen. Mr. Enns seems to think he is the local god of Hwy. 99 between Vancouver and Whistler, and therefore can dictate everybody's speed.

The fact is, there are at least 50 spots between Squamish and Whistler where one can let any driver pass. Even on a double solid line. I have done it many times.

I don't own the highway. I share it with others, and if anyone wants to pass me I let him do so at the next best opportunity. It works all the time.

Motorhomes are the biggest traffic violators on this highway. Most of them drive something which is three times too big for their driving capabilities, and tie up traffic for miles going 50 kilometres an hour. You'd think they would pull over and let other cars go by. They speed up on a passing lane and give you a testy look when you finally are able to pass them at 110 km-h.

As for bad tires and no chains in the winter, I have seen them all because I drive to Whistler every day for six years. Most people are too cheap to winterize their cars or trucks.

As for photo radar on the highway, the police should use drug sniffing dogs and enforce zero tolerance like they have in the States. Canada does not have a restriction code for being high on drugs.

You would be surprised how many more roadside suspensions there would be. That is what the police are doing now in Europe.

What they found out is that the majority of speeders are not really drunk, but are high on drugs.

I consider that driving is my right. I have to pay for my driving licence, car, insurance and gasoline. If the government gives me all that, only then would it be a privilege for me to drive my car.

As a matter of fact, I always love to drive Hwy. 99. It is a challenge to me. The highway is good and there is lots of room for me and the other cars on it. I am in no position to dictate my speed limit to others. The signs are all there, and if anybody wants to go faster than me, that is his or her choice.

Why aggravate other motorists when there is a simple solution for it? Courtesy.

But most people don't know what this word means when they are driving a car.

Farewell downtown core, as tumbleweeds move in

Editor,
Well, it's official. We can now bid adieu to Squamish's downtown core with yet another mall being given the stamp of approval by the narrowest of democratic margins.

With this latest nail in the coffin, it's only a matter of time before we start seeing the tumbleweeds start to roll down the main drag. We may never even get the time to read the last rites.

Every bit of that million dollar tax investment put into revitalizing downtown seems now to have all been forgotten. So if we can't trust some of our local politicians to make common sense decisions about the future of this town, then democracy definitely needs a sharp kick in the butt.

I think Chrissy Hynds of the Pretenders summed it up best when she wrote the following lyrics which refer to the fate suffered by her own home town in Ohio (I've taken the liberty of changing a few words):

I went to Squamo.
But my little town was gone
There was no train station
There was no downtown...
I went back to Squamo.
But my pretty countryside
Had been paved down the middle
By the government that had no pride

The character of Squamo Has been replaced by shopping malls

And muzak fills the air From Brackendale to the Shannon Falls

I say, eh, oh, way to go, Squamo.

I know all this sounds overly pessimistic. But believe me, Squamish is slowly being stripped of its character, pride and spirit, things that once flourished not long ago.

A strip mall indeed. May the town's soul rest in peace.

Children will be that much stronger from our move

Editor,
I was recently inspired by an article in the Vancouver Sun (May 20 — Cultural diversity is so...Canadian). Mr. D'Andrea helped me understand what my family has been experiencing lately. In his article he said, "...all immigrants experience a similar process of acculturation — often difficult, some times less so, and at varying rates... as long as they retain some of the traditions of their birthplaces."

My fiance and I bought a house, and with my three kids (12,13 and 14) moved from Musqueam Reserve to Garibaldi Highlands in Squamish. Like all kids, they didn't want to leave their friends and family. They could count about 20 kids their own ages on the reserve they were related to, and still have more friends on top of that.

Musqueam boasts incredible youth activities and sports programs. They start out at the age of four or five attending the pre-school on the reserve. They live within a five-block radius of the children that they will be spending the following years in elementary and high school with. They play soccer in the summer, and basketball and indoor soccer in the winter. They have drug and alcohol-free dances for the youth, and they travel to soccer tournaments around the province together.

The kids learn to clean fish, and then to operate boats. The whole community fleet fishes together. They walk down the road and greet their uncles and aunts, and know all the elders by name. They go to all the funerals. We often called it Playton Place. I rented a house and was tired of throwing money out the window. At one time I owned a house on-reserve with my ex-husband. You can't sell the house and unfortunately there are no policies that exist on our reserve dealing with divorce settlements when both band members are of Musqueam descent.

A nation unto itself with its own laws and rules. It's difficult to find lawyers that understand law as it relates to Crown reserve lands who are willing to work on a messy divorce. Most are too busy on land claims and constitutional questions.

I long ago realized that there are good First Nation governments and bad ones. I also knew there was little chance that John Watson or Ron Irwin of Indian Affairs really cared what was happening to families in communities. They are also consumed with treaty processes.

My fiancee Gary is of-East Indian descent, a policeman in Vancouver. He did what I think few people would do. He came and lived on the reserve for three years, and shared in our life there and saw the good and bad. Three years ago we started to prepare my children for 'the big move'. We maintained that the day was coming when we would have to leave and live off-reserve....people do it all the time.

We constantly told them there was life on the other side of Marine Drive. On vacations we drove in order to show them others ways of living. They were amazed in Alberta (for a while) driving across miles of colorful fields. On the road to Disneyland they were fascinated with sand dunes, surf, and the Golden Gate Bridge. They were overwhelmed to see children begging in Tijuana.

Many articles, letters and comics in B.C. newspapers today talk about land claims, native rights and blockades. Some of them are far fetched and authors and artists know nothing about lives in native communities. We're inundated with all these opinions from people who don't try and learn more about aboriginal people in B.C.

Week five of the big move. The kids are adjusting. It's difficult for them. They face new challenges and their hearts ache for friends and home. But they will be all the stronger for their experiences.

I am confident that my children will one day feel that this new community, and all the beauty it offers, will be a home to them as well. And that "...the process of acculturation, often difficult, sometimes less so, and varying rates — as long as they retain some of the traditions of their birthplace" happens for them in a successful and positive way. Welcome to Canada kids.

Chase ends in recovery of stolen ATVs

By Patricia Heintzman

An early morning police chase on Government Road in Squamish July 9 led to the arrest and conviction of a 19-year-old man and the recovery of several all-terrain vehicles stolen from Whistler the night before. Duncan Labaucon of no fixed address, but who is known to frequent both the Williams Lake and Squamish areas, appeared in Squamish provincial court June 10 and plead guilty to break and enter and possession of stolen property. He received an 8-month jail sentence.

The Sunday morning chase was sparked when a Squamish RCMP member was alerted by a suspicious looking truck following two all-terrain vehicles heading south on Government Road at approximately 5 a.m. July 9. A short two- to three-kilometre chase ensued. The truck was found abandoned and it appeared as if the driver of the vehicle had run into the bushes, said Sargent Dwain Wetteland of the Squamish RCMP.

Wetteland said a tracking dog was brought in and the driver of the vehicle was found hiding in the bushes soon after. The two ATVs were eventually located but there was no trace of the drivers. As a result of the arrest and subsequent investigation, six more ATVs were located in various location in the district, said Wetteland. "It appears as if they were driven to various places and just left where they ran out of gas."

Wetteland added that it is unlikely the ATVs had been abandoned, rather they had been stashed until they could be recovered at a later date. It was determined that the truck and one of the ATVs had been stolen from Williams Lake at an earlier date. The remaining ATVs were stolen June 8 from the Whistler ATV Club.

Further investigation has been put on hold, said Wetteland, unless there is a break in the case. "If anything comes to light then we'll look into it of course but this guy isn't talking, so we don't have any strong leads to follow up on at the moment."

Youths arrested

Two youths have been charged with theft, possession of a stolen vehicle and breach of probation after a person at the Darrell Bay area notified police of two suspicious youths walking on the railway tracks in the area.

The scenario began when a Squamish RCMP member on his way to work, observed a vehicle running a red light on Garibaldi Way at 5:38 a.m. July 9. The officer stopped the vehicle and directed the driver to follow him to the police station where he could properly deal with the offence. The driver of the vehicle, a van, followed the officer for a short distance then sped away in the opposite direction. The officer followed the van and obtained a licence plate number.

The vehicle was found later abandoned behind Stawamus Elementary School. A police dog was brought in but it was unable to locate the occupants of the van.

Approximately two hours later, police received the call from the person at Darrell Bay informing them of the youths on the train tracks. Squamish RCMP attended and apprehended the males who were later identified by the member who had stopped the van for running a red light as being the same two males seen in the fleeing van earlier in the morning. The van was reported stolen to the Vancouver Police Department a short time later. The driver of the van was also fined for several traffic violations totaling $450.

Members of the Squamish RCMP responded to an alarm at Pharmasave on Cleveland Avenue in downtown Squamish at 1 a.m. July 11. A window had been broken and a male was found behind a garbage bin near the premises. Nothing had apparently been stolen and the man was released without being charged.

Nine motor vehicle accidents occurred in the Squamish area between June 6 to June 13. None of the incidents were of a serious nature, said Sargent Dwain Wetteland. Four vehicles stolen from Vancouver were recovered in the Squamish area and 21 erratic driving complaints on Hwy. 99 were reported to the RCMP during that time.

Writer stages bylaw protest

By Patricia Heintzman

Michael Yates chats to passers-by in what can only be described as Yatesisms. His self-decreed Squamish speaker's corner at the intersection of Cleveland Avenue and Victoria Street outside Mostly Books was his forum of debate and discussion last week as he sold copies of several of his 26 published works of fiction, poetry and non-fiction.

"What I'm doing is illegal," says Yates. "I'm breaking a bylaw (the district of Squamish business licence bylaw 651) here. I haven't been approached once by that ghost bylaw officer."

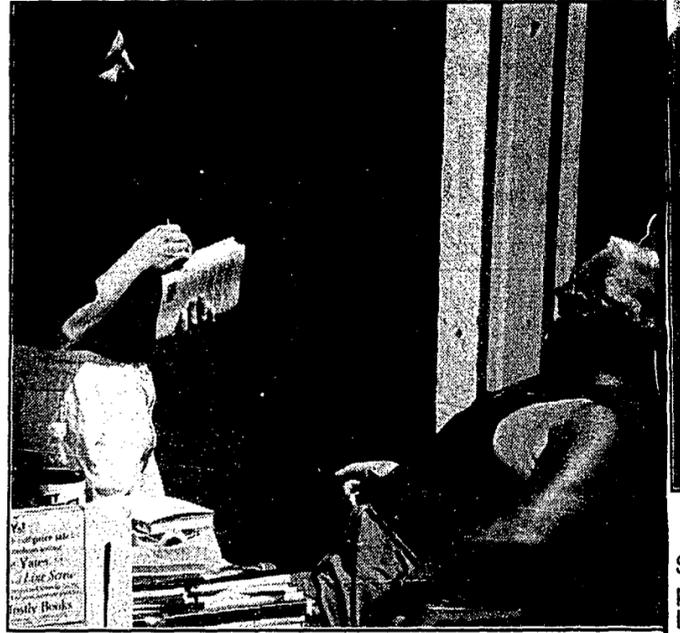

When asked why he thinks he hasn't been asked to stop his actions — which amount to discussing poetry, peddling his latest literary endeavor Line Screw, an autobiographical account of his 12 years as a prison guard in three British Columbia prisons, and directing passers-by to any number of eateries in the downtown area — he is quick to answer.

"They fear my media connections," he says with confidence. "They know that I could have BCTV, UTV, anyone of the television stations from Vancouver up here to shoot me being carted away."

"If the municipality hasn't got the guts to improve the atmosphere of this street then someone has got to do it. Squamish is the most beautiful garden spot on the face of the planet. If I knew a place more beautiful and with more potential I would be there."

"And furthermore, I love this town. I want people to be able to come to this town and have fun. I was talking with this guy in Whistler last week when I was getting a backpack fixed who said to me 'Squamish has 50 times the recreational potential, maybe 100 times more than Whistler'. But because council is so irresponsible nothing ever gets going."

Yates's political activity concerning his defiance of bylaw 651 — which allows council to regulate the carrying on of business within the District of Squamish and to fix and impose and provide for the collection of licence fees and the granting issuing and transferring of licences — dates back two years when he and several other artists in the community, including well known Squamish Nation artists Rick Harry and Stan Joseph, staged a civil disobedience rally outside former municipal councillor Norm Verner's The Ship's Gallery.

In Yates's last effort to bring awareness to a bylaw that he considers to be detrimental to Squamish's artistic community and the downtown core, he said he had hoped his actions would solicit some reaction from the bylaw officer in Squamish.

"I think our bylaw officer is doing a terrible job," says Yates. "He gets paid $24,000 a year for a 20-hour a week job and you never see the guy. I even had singers out here with me on Wednesday and nothing. No sign of him."

"The bylaw needs to be changed," continues Yates. "We need singers, and street theatre and people painting kids' faces. There is a lot of talent in Squamish. If I'm the only thing entertaining the crowd then we're in trouble."

Yates says he believes that in order to seduce Royal Hudson visitors to stay in the downtown area during the trip's two-hour sojourn in Squamish, the downtown area has to become more interesting and vital.

"The artists in this community, in order to survive, need to be able to promote their work. As it stands now you have to go through a ton of red tape and applications, and appear before council and justify what you are requesting before you can even be considered (to get a vendors licence). Even if artists had the money (to make the proper applications) they wouldn't do it anyway on principle."

Another Royal Hudson visitor stops to talk to Yates and asks for suggestions of a place to eat lunch.

"Well it all depends on what you are looking for," Yates replies. "You could try ..."

Servicing agreement breached

By Julie Anderson

A servicing agreement between the Howe Sound School District board of trustees and the Village of Pemberton has been breached by Pemberton, says school district superintendent Doug Courtice.

The duties of development by the school board and the Village of Pemberton regarding construction of the new Pemberton Secondary School is outlined in a servicing agreement signed by both parties.

Part of the agreement states the board must give the Village of Pemberton $150,000 as a contribution to the upgrading of the municipal sewage treatment plant, required to be complete by July 31.

"We were concerned about the sewer, and as a result of that, prior to sending the cheque, we wanted to get some greater assurance from the municipality of whether or not the $150,000 guaranteed it (sewage upgrade) was going to happen.

"We checked in February to make sure things were on line. We asked them, and got a response saying 'yes' there is (sewage) capacity for the Pemberton Secondary School, so the project continued," Courtice said.

Pemberton council passed a resolution at a special meeting July 5 saying the village had no alternative but to deny the connection of waste water from the new school to the sewage treatment plant, after provincial funding for expansion of the treatment facility was not received.

The breach of the agreement by Pemberton means the school board will be looking to the village to cover any expenses the school district incurred, and will incur in the future as a result of their inability to comply with the terms of the agreement, said school board chair Don Wilson.

An example of costs to date are the disconnection of equipment at the old high school, the preparation of heavy equipment for moving to the new school and, possibly, the moving of portables to the new site, Wilson said.

The school board's primary concern is assuring Pemberton Secondary School's doors are open for students in September. They will continue to work together with the municipality and senior levels of government to ensure this happens, said Wilson.

School district's field trip policy to be reviewed

People inaccurately assume all students are included in school field trips, says Howe Sound school board trustee Ele Clarke.

Parents must pay for their children to attend most field trips and some parents are unable to cover these costs, which Clarke says may be construed as class or racial discrimination.

Clarke recommended to the board that field trip costs be considered in the planning stages of the outing. If it is known that a number of parents are likely to find it a financial hardship, then either the funds for the trip should be raised by the class, another means of financing the trip should be found, or the trip should not proceed.

The board accepted the recommendation and agreed the policy needs to be reviewed in its entirety.

Richter hosts Brohm Ridge tour Saturday

Anyone interested in a tour of the proposed village site and Brohm Ridge ski area is welcome to join a day trip to the area hosted by Wolfgang Richter of Garibaldi Alpen.

The tour will take place Saturday beginning at 9:30 a.m. at Squamish Municipal Hall.

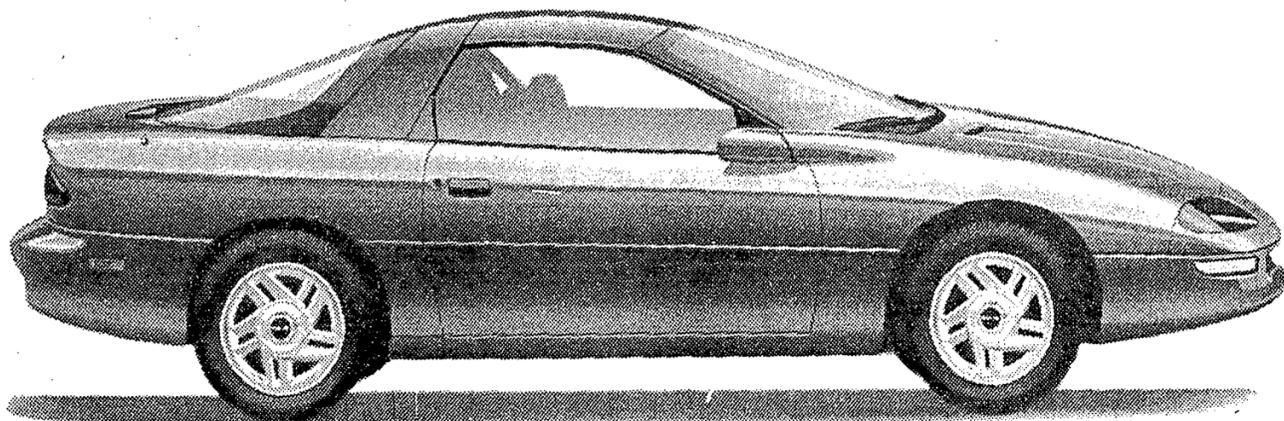

People are asked to bring four-wheel drive vehicles, if possible, to help transport others to the area.

The tour will take most of the day.

Home maternity program set up in the Sea to Sky corridor

On Monday, the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit, in partnership with Squamish Health Care Society started offering the Best Beginnings — Maternity Care at Home Program, for families with newborn babies who go home within 48 hours of giving birth. This program was chosen as one of the Closer to Home initiatives by the Howe Sound New Directions steering committee and approved through New Directions in Health.

This program provides professional care by qualified nurses who have the appropriate education and experience to assist new parents and newborns in their homes. To qualify for the Best Beginnings — Maternity Care at Home Program, both newborn babies and mothers must be healthy and choose to go home within 48 hours of delivery. Families must also live in Squamish, Whistler or Pemberton and have access to a telephone.

Once discharged home, a Best Beginnings nurse will visit and keep in contact with the family for up to 10 days. These nurses will provide high quality care similar to the care received in hospital. This includes ensuring that the health and well-being of new mothers and their babies is maintained. Best Beginnings nurses will also provide information on caring for and feeding a new baby, breastfeeding support, changes the new baby brings to the family, and community resources. All new families in the Best Beginnings — Maternity Care at Home Program will have access to a 24-hour phone line with nurses available to provide assistance and answer any questions.

The Best Beginnings — Maternity Care at Home Program looks slightly different in each community. Participants who live in Squamish will be visited by a Best Beginnings nurse within 24 hours of discharge seven days a week. Families in Whistler and Pemberton will have home visits within 24 hours of discharge Monday to Friday and telephone contact and assistance on weekends and holidays.

The Best Beginnings nurse will work closely with community physicians and the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit to ensure the new family is healthy and that any difficulties are taken care of quickly. After 10 days, further follow-up with a public health nurse may also be arranged.

This program offers the communities of Howe Sound an unique opportunity to have well-qualified, individual nursing care provided in the comfort and privacy of one's own home. For further information, please call the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit in Squamish at 892-3585, in Whistler at 932-3202, and in Pemberton at 894-6367.

MOVIE MAGIC

Film crews took over the Prince George last week to shoot a Canadian produced film starring martial arts actor Gary Daniels. The week of filming was highlighted by the apparent blowing up of the vessel Friday in Britannia Beach.

Whistler entertainment company setting up to test local talent for film and fashion industry

By Rahoul Ghose

Three transplanted Whistlerites hope to take advantage of B.C.'s growing movie industry by opening Whistler's first talent-entertainment company this summer.

Jeff Leggat, Leah Balderson and Ivan McQuillan are shooting for Sept. 1 as an official opening date for Holton International Entertainment Services Inc., which will combine a bank of movie extras and actors, with fashion print and runway models, site location resources for production companies and possibly an acting-modeling school teaching self-improvement and self-confidence courses.

And though Leggat admits there is heavy competition from Vancouver-based companies, he quickly adds, "Nobody will be as all-encompassing as us."

Leggat, who worked as a public relations consultant for Molson Breweries in Toronto, said the trio of partners decided to start up their own company after an abundance of first-hand experience with existing casting companies made them realize there was a niche for a more diverse and honest talent agency.

"In the industry, things aren't always what they're made out to be," said McQuillan, an actor whose work includes spots on CBC's Side Effects, CTV's RoboCop and YTV's Catwalk.

"We've all dealt with the industry and know what it's like to be abused and misused," he said.

Balderson, whose experience lies in the fashion industry as a model, added, "Many companies sign anyone who comes into their offices. We don't want to take anyone we can't use."

The entertainment company, which is currently negotiating for office space in Marketplace, will be holding initial casting calls in the coming weeks for Sea to Sky candidates and will follow up with talent searches in North Van, Vancouver and Victoria later in the summer.

A secondary Vancouver branch of Holton is also tentatively scheduled to open Dec. 1, combining office space and living quarters for actors or models who are called into the city for more than one day of work.

"We are looking for all types, all backgrounds, all ages," Leggat said, adding there is a high demand for aboriginal actors right now.

"And professionals don't think they have the time for it. But they're the type of people used in all sorts of magazine ads. It's the perfect opportunity to see the inside and outside of the entertainment industry."

Leggat said when Ski Nuts was being filmed in Whistler recently the production company was so desperate for extras they were going from store to store.

With Whistler's population constantly in flux, the 27-year-old said he hopes to maintain a roster of about 400 to 600 extras at any one time though he admits that roster will be forever changing.

However, the international flavor of Whistler's seasonal visitors will provide an interesting pool of perspective extras to choose from, he said.

"People come from all over the world to ski," he said.

McQuillan said B.C.'s film and television industry has taken off because of the variety of locations available for shooting such series as Neon Rider and the X-Files. The current exchange on the Canadian dollar and the ease at which U.S. production companies can obtain shooting permits for filming in the streets is also a benefit, he said.

Holton will also be grooming a small number of actors for secondary or supporting roles in television and film productions as well as searching for fresh new faces to be models.

Balderson said today the fashion magazine industry is looking for unique photogenic faces which can change dramatically from one photo to the next.

"We'll be looking aggressively for models to mold into something we can sell the industry," Leggat said.

In an effort to increase their exposure the Holton partners will even be adopting stage names which are more memorable.

In the industry, Leggat will be known as Damon Powers, Balderson as Leah Adams and McQuillan as Ivan James.

The trio are already in the process of making contact with all staging managers of productions currently shooting in Vancouver and also have plans to travel to Los Angeles to meet with American production companies already utilizing B.C. and Vancouver.

Anyone wanting more information about Holton International can call 938-0307.

However, prospective talent are asked not to audition over the phone.

Leggat said on one occasion while trying to book a room for a production company, he had the person answering the phone start to sing when she found out he was a talent agent as well.

"It was just amazing," he said, rolling his eyes.

The porch is sadly missed

One of the airiest, brightest, freshest, most pleasant spaces in a house is in danger of extinction. In fact, in many neighborhoods it no longer exists. The porch, in style for so many decades, has all but disappeared.

You still see them in downtown Squamish, mostly on houses built early this century. And in older areas of some cities, they prevail on nearly every house.

But take a look in neighborhoods developed within the past few decades and there's something missing. Welcoming you at the front of the house is a small concrete pad. Step inside some homes and the foyer is immense. Sure, it's a great welcoming area, but how much time does one actually spend in the foyer? Shuffle everyone off into the house instead. Bypassing the porch isn't even an option anymore. I contend that the demise of the porch is one of the reasons contributing to the downfall of neighborhoods as they were once known.

I recently talked to some people who have lived in a Squamish neighborhood for more than a year. They didn't know of some friends of mine just around the corner who are also fairly new residents in the area. When I lived in Squamish I profess I did not know any of my neighbors, except the people who lived upstairs. I suspect there are many others who have lived in their homes for years and while they may know the neighbors on either side of them, it might not go much past that.

When I was a youngster, we knew everyone up and down our street and most of the people on surrounding streets. In times when most houses had porches and people frequented them, they interacted with other people in the neighborhood. They said hello to neighbors strolling by for an evening walk. Kids playing down the street were never alone with porches occupied.

Why today are the characteristics of neighborhoods so different? It's the porch. People do not sit outside on the porch after dinner sipping their coffee or tea because there is no porch on which to sit. But that's not the only reason. Television has taken the centre stage with the seating arrangement in living yet trashy TV news-magazine ripoff.

But neither are porches a place to put yourself on display: porches come with a sense of modesty and can be a place of privacy with shrubs and vines growing up their

Surroundings

By Ron Enns

rooms focused around the TV. The porch is out — if one even exists.

Today people take to the refuge of their homes. Or they retreat to the deck, the '80s and '90s version of the porch. The only problem is that the deck is usually stuck in the back yard, a private place, with a propane barbecue and possibly a hot tub. There is nothing wrong with a deck. Decks are fabulous places for parties and being outside with family and friends. But decks are not a substitute for the trusty old porch.

The culture of the porch
has been lost,
but not forgotten.
Hopefully the porch will not become extinct.

Porches have the charm associated with sitting in a worn-in rocking chair out in the front of your house, surveying the small dominion of your front lawn and garden. Porches provide a warm welcome for friends and neighbors to stop by for a quick chat — something they would not tend to do if they had to knock on your door and interrupt the after-dinner sit-com, or worse sides. But usually being at the front of house, porches remain a welcoming presence.

The police in Squamish — and many other places — are trying to find ways to combat growing crime rate.

The term community policing seems to be heard more often. There is talk of storefront police offices, possibly downtown and in Garibaldi Estates, to increase police presence in communities.

Some neighborhoods in Squamish are attempting to have residents become involved in the Neighborhood Watch program. It's great that these initiatives are occurring. The porch, when it was in existence, was a great deterrent for would-be thieves.

It was easier for neighbors to watch out for each other when porches were occupied. But sadly, today you better lock your front door if you're out in the back yard. And with many people confined to their houses glued to the television, don't expect your neighbors to be able to keep an eye on your place while you're away.

The culture of the porch has been lost, but not forgotten. If people really want porches again, it's up to them to convince house builders of the positive aspects and qualities a porch brings to a home, and a neighborhood.

The porch may be endangered; hopefully it will not become extinct.

New actors auditioned tonight

Between Shifts Theatre Company is holding auditions tonight, July 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Sea to Sky Community Services office on Second Avenue. Mark McConchie and Kathy Daniels, the founding members of Between Shifts, invite interested actors to bring whatever they wish to read to the audition. The audition will eventually lead up to the casting for the next production of Leaving Home.

Got a flair for writing? Consider submitting a one-act play of 15 to 30 minutes in length and submit it to: Between Shifts, Box 5121, Squamish, V0N 3G0. The winning play will be produced on Community Cable 10.

Sontown Family Celebration is the theme for Vacation Bible School at Valleycliffe Christian Fellowship Church on Monday, July 24 through to Friday, July 28 from 9:30 a.m. to noon each day for children ages four to 13 years. There will be lots of singing, a skit each day, bible stories, crafts, games and refreshments. To register or for information you are asked to phone 898-3328 or 898-4935. There is no registration fee but donation are welcome.

Hilltop House celebrates July birthdays tomorrow, July 19 at 2 p.m. Residents to be honored are: Margaret Priest, Phyllis Kay, Mary Smart and Thelma Johnson. You are invited to join the folks for delicious birthday cake, tea or coffee and of course for fellowship.

After knowing it as the Squamish civic centre it will take some getting used to calling it the Brennan Park Leisure Centre but it does make sense as the park is named after late mayor Pat Brennan.

A popular event during Squamish Days is the 10K race and this year it will be held on Sunday, Aug. 6.

Volunteers for course marshalling and/or water stations are needed, and individuals or groups who would like to get involved are asked to get in touch with Liz Shepherd at 898-9776.

HOROSCOPE

By C.C. Clark

July 16 through July 22, 1995

Aries (March 21 - April 20)

A friend needs some good cheer, and you are just the person to help. A spontaneous dinner invitation and stimulating conversation are a good start.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20)

You need to take care of some details where your family finances are concerned. Something may slip through the cracks if you are not careful.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)

It's time to get serious about watching your food intake and getting some exercise. The right foods could give you the energy you need.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22)

Your habit of trying to wear too many hats at one time is going to get you into trouble. Learning to say no is hard but necessary.

Leo (July 23 - Aug. 22)

You thought it couldn't get any crazier. Boy, were you wrong. Take heart, it won't slow down, but it will be more fun.

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22)

Sharing memories with loved ones can make for a really good time. Write some of the stories down; you may need them later.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)

Your social calendar will need to be revised, but only to make room for some exciting new developments.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22)

This is a time when actions speak louder than words, especially where family and co-workers are concerned. Do what you have to do.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 21)

A disagreement with a loved one can get way out of hand if you are not careful. Try to find some common ground.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19)

Writing isn't always easy for you, but it can be cathartic when it deals with feelings. Be ready for a new project that is on the way.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)

Dreams can be important guides to your daylight hours if used the right way. Open your mind to new possibilities in a relationship.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20)

You have to mediate a disagreement between warring family members. Keep your cool and try to help them see the light.

Silly Superstitions

A superstition is something people believe in or practice because they fear something unknown. There are many superstitions surrounding gemstones. Opals are said to bring bad luck to anyone not born in October. At one time, it was believed that people could protect their homes from lightning and storms by touching them with rubies. Early Christians believed that looking upon a sapphire would make them think of Heaven. On the lines below, see how many words you can make from these "superstitious" stones.

Dynamic Differences

Diamonds are the hardest substances formed in nature. They are also among the most valuable. Diamonds are crystals made up mostly of carbon, the same substance of which coal is made. Nearly all diamond crystals form "octahedrons," which means they have eight faces, or sides. Diamonds are found mainly in Australia, Zaire, South Africa, Botswana, and Russia. They are very hard to mine. Even where the largest number of diamonds are found, tons of rock must be mined and crushed to produce one small diamond. Once these "rough" diamonds are found, they must be cut and polished to make the beautiful stones that we see in jewelry. Some people choose to buy imitation diamonds instead of real diamonds because they cost much less. The cubic zirconia is one example of an imitation diamond. Unlike cubic zirconias, there are no two diamonds that are exactly alike. Gemologist Alfie Alligator has stumbled across some cubic zirconias and says there are two that are the same. Can you find them?

answer: c and g are alike

Want to say thanks and make sure everyone knows why? Or maybe offer a little constructive criticism without confrontation? Send your Dart or Daffodil to The Editor, The Squamish Chief, Box 3500, Squamish, B.C. V0N 3G0 or drop it off at our office at 38113 Second Avenue, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. You can also fax your message to us at 892-8483.

A phone call full of darts to the woman who forgot there are always two sides to every story. It is sincerely hoped that in the future she puts her brain in gear before putting her mouth in motion.

A litter box full of darts to the driver who hit me and left. Paws full of daffodils to Sarah and Claudine, who found me and took me to Dr. Hoff. From Shadow.

A parking lot full of daffodils to the two young gentlemen who witnessed my car being hit and run in the Brennan Park parking lot during the Elks slo-pitch tournament. With the information you left, the RCMP will get their man or woman as the case may be. But ICBC requires the names of witnesses to waive the deductible in a hit and run case. Please contact me at 898-2026.

A ballfield full of darts to the mothers and daughters who think birthday parties are more important than supporting your team.

Also for letting your daughter backtalk an adult without disciplining her. Where is your team spirit?

An equipment cart full of daffodils to all the pool staff for their help. See you in the fall. Anne.

A large example full of daffodils to the Squamish Chief for the responsible representation of the bald eagle on the new masthead (unlike certain six-foot furry creatures and town banners).

A brim full of daffodils to Edie for tracking down a man's dress hat and to Earl for lending it. It was just the finishing touch needed to create an old-time reporter's costume for my son's part in his school play. Thank you!

A ballfield full of daffodils to Terra for a great season. You made our girls enjoy being on your team.

You gave your all, and the girls all learned to give theirs!. Thanks again. Most of them learned team spirit.

Bunches of red, maple leaf shaped daffodils to Wendy Magee and the local talent who put on a great July 1 evening show. Much better than expensive fireworks, and more enjoyable.

Beds of darts to the municipal gardeners who spend tax dollars to buy perennials to beautify places such as the swimming pool grounds (that's great) but then let the weeds grow and re-seed. What a mess!

Daffodils from the Cat Lake crew to Destra Signs, Moore Enviro Systems, Carney's Waste Systems, Mr. Tube Steak, B.C. Forest Service and the RCMP. Also to Dave L. for his Visa, Chia Chet for financial aid, Richard, Joe B. and Kevin for providing and setting up tarps, Bob C., Adam and Darren for their generators, Landscape Dave with the big blue truck for everything he did. We would also like to thank all of you who gave up your hard earned money to make a donation. And of course all the bands which donated their time and talent. God bless you all.

An endless supply of daffodils to Squamish ambulance staff, Squamish Fire Rescue and to everyone at Squamish General Hospital for all you did for our loved one following his accident on Sunday.

A very special daffodil to Daniel Hoff, an off-duty EMA II from Pemberton, who was first on the scene.

You are a true hero. From Darren's family.

Garbage bags of darts to the dolts who cannot understand the concept of recycling. If you can't put the proper items in their proper blue bins, stay away.

at Needles & Pins

You don't have to be a sewing enthusiast or crafts nut to appreciate Needles & Pins. There's a good chance you'll soon discover the joys of either or both of these activities when you take a look through the great variety of high quality fabrics and notions, crafts kits and quilting supplies at the Cleveland Avenue shop.

New owner Lorrie Trudeau could qualify as both a crafts nut and an avid sewer. The option of purchasing the store last February made perfect sense to her. "I really enjoy sewing and meeting people," she says.

As an established business in the downtown core for 13 years, Needles & Pins has many devoted customers from the Sea to Sky Corridor and the Lower Mainland. Lorrie and her staff plan to continue offering the great service and selection for which the shop has become known.

"Most of the fabrics are 100 per cent cotton," Lorrie says. "You'll find it's really good quality and a great variety for such a small store."

Lorrie has been sewing since she was young, and these days enjoys quilting — a passion she's happy to share with other sewers.

The popular sewing and crafts classes will begin again this fall at the store, offering instruction (and camaraderie) in quilting, Christmas wall hangings, Quillo, silk ribbon embroidery, lampshades and much more. Classes range from beginner to advanced.

For those who don't have the time to take a class, Lorrie is considering a Quilt of the Month Club, where everyone works together at home to create a particular quilt.

"We try to have a small class so everybody gets attention," says Lorrie, adding that class schedules will be available in August at the store for classes starting in September. Those on the mailing list will receive a schedule in August as well.

Seniors Day at Needles & Pins is the first Monday of every month, when the "65 and better" set get 15 per cent off.

A new feature at the store is a stock of knitting supplies and yarn. Patons, Beehive, Astra and Weekender Cotton are some of the popular names in stock; however, if not in stock, the store has sample cards of wool that can be ordered in.

Lorrie is enthusiastic about her new endeavor, always willing to help her customers find what they need. Every day and every customer brings new challenges — and lots of questions about everything there is to know about crafts and sewing. While she doesn't profess to know it all, you'll soon find that Lorrie will make the extra effort to solve a sewing or crafts puzzle.

"I'm modest," she says with a grin. "I'll say to them, 'We'll figure this out together'."

China flood help needed

The International Red Cross urgently needs funds for emergency relief in the wake of severe flooding in central and southeastern China. Heavy rain, compounded by natural disasters such as typhoons, cyclones and an earthquake have resulted in losses of $2.24 billion. It is estimated 38 million people have been affected by the flooding," said Jane Fairbanks, international services coordinator for the Pacific/Yukon Division of the Red Cross. "A total of 665 people have been killed, more than two million homes have been damaged, and the worst monsoon rainfall is still to come in August and September." The Red Cross needs cash donations to purchase relief items including medicines, food, clothing, blankets and chemicals to ensure clean drinking water and adequate sanitation. The Red Cross has already dispatched medical teams to the worst hit provinces. British Columbians have been extremely supportive of the flood appeals for China, raising as much as $1.5 million in 1994. In particular, the province's large Chinese population has worked closely with the local Red Cross to raise emergency funds for the Chinese floods. One hundred per cent of donations to the China Flood Relief Fund will go towards the relief effort," says Fairbanks. "No money goes through government bodies — the funds are channeled through the Red Cross movement, which purchases the relief supplies and distributes them to those in need." Donations to the China Flood Relief Fund can be made at any Red Cross office, or by calling 1-800-565-8000. Cheques should be earmarked "China Floods".

Post-traumatic stress is the worst kind

Last week I told you about a TV program I saw about stress and related problems, and how to cope. There was more information than would fit in one column so here's some more.

Stress of one kind or another seems to be a factor in almost everybody's life these days. If it lasts too long, it might be an "adjustment disorder." You feel yourself when it's going on too long, when it's dysfunctional and you're isolating. Or someone might point it out to you that it's time to seek help.

Post traumatic stress disorder (PTS) is another possible diagnosis for people who have suffered through a plane crash, bomb explosion, murder, fire, flood, war, or the loss of everything. They have recurrent memories of the incident or they numb out so as not to feel anything and deny or omit memories altogether. Similar things can happen to people when there have been an extraordinarily shocking or terrorizing events such as childhood sexual abuse, or wife battering. Or an intrusive experience such as rape.

With post traumatic stress disorder, whatever drove you nuts, whether as in the case of Vietnam Vets, it was the bugs in the jungle or loud noises of war, that can trigger flashbacks later.

It may be for only seconds, but sometimes it's longer. Adrenaline pumps; they begin to shake and lose control. Their response is to isolate, stay away from people and use drugs or alcohol.

There is a question as to whether these kinds of major stresses cause chemical changes in the body which compound as time goes on.

One woman who was in the 13-25 percent of rape victims who suffer from PTS, had recurring memories, couldn't get it out of her mind. Her stomach would start cartwheeling, her heart pounding, her throat constricting. She went to work, but otherwise stayed in her apartment for seven to eight months after. It had happened in the morning, yet she was most frightened at night and would panic.

She said, "You think it's never going to happen to you, so when it does, you feel very vulnerable. It is a self-shattering experience and you tend to go underground, avoid relationships with men and be good and keep smiling, put up a front, but are quaking inside."

Strategies for men to cope with stress are to educate that the macho image has to go. Men have to be able to talk about their feelings and cry when they've been hurt, terrified, or suffered trauma loss.

During this time, sometimes the best way for their friends to help is to offer practical help such as fixing the roof, or taking care of the kids.

Most survivors have no one to talk to. However, for both men and women, when the story has been told many times and has just become rhetoric or obsessive, then they may be stuck and need psychotherapy to get past it.

Self-help groups or therapy with a good facilitator can also be most beneficial. Healing takes time.

Coping techniques are needed when we feel hopeless and powerless, practical things like where to begin adding the real from the trauma.

Between the Lines
 By Mary Billy

Relaxation techniques, such as deep breathing, meditation, deep muscle relaxation, and guided visualizations can learn how to get a grip and tie down. And break it down into parts to develop self-to get through upcoming stressful events.

Other ways are learning to complain effectively, even make jokes, or rehearse what to get away when necessary and find time to share with friends. We need to learn that we all have meaning and value, we can't change the past, but we can change the future. We have choices to even small steps toward our own recovery and turn a negative experience into a positive action.

I hope this has been of some help in understanding the effects stress can have on us, but even more importantly, it may help those we live and associate with understand the more of what's going on and how they can be supportive and aid in their loved one's recovery.

The last thing a person suffering from stress needs is criticism, judging, nagging or blaming. What they do need is support, and much, much patience and our love and assurance that we won't desert or forsake them.

Someone once said that no one gets more than they can bear, but that's not true. Most have broken under the strain and sometimes a lifetime is long enough for recovery.

So, take care of yourself, okay?

Spars head to provincial championships

Patricia Heintzman

For the first time in nine years, the ladies fastball team from Squamish will be going to the provincial championships. The best Coast Spars of the Howe Sound Ladies Fastball League earned a berth at the provincial tournament, which will decide the ladies fastball supremacy in British Columbia Aug. 5-7 at Memorial Park in Vancouver, by coming second in zone play-downs Sunday at Centennial Field.

Sunday's North Shore zone playdowns action followed the Howe Sound league championship tournament Saturday at Centennial Field. The Spars had gone undefeated in the league championship tournament until the final game, when it lost to Whistler. Whistler won the league championships in the final week of league action when it broke a three-way tie between Whistler, Spars and Belanger Loaders by beating the Loaders 8-5 July 10. The Loaders and Spars tied for second place and the Mountain Builders brought up the rear in the league's final results.

Whistler lost its first contest against the Spars in the championships tournament but won the remainder of its games to win a berth in the finals.

Whistler took a one-run lead in the bottom of the first inning but the Spars bounced back with a run in the third and again in the fourth innings to take a 2-1 lead which it held until the bottom of the sixth.

But an "inning from hell", said Spars coach LaRoy Watt, resulted in five Whistler runs in the bottom of the sixth inning. Whistler went on to win the league championship tournament 6-2. But sweet revenge was in the air Sunday as the Spars and Whistler faced-off again in the zone playdowns, which included the top two teams from the Howe Sound league and two teams from North Vancouver. The Spars started the playdowns with a loss to the North Vancouver Ravens. The team's next match was a must win against Whistler. It was the bottom of the seventh with two outs when Spar Jill Webb stepped to the plate and belted a solid single that scored two base runners and gave the Spars a 7-6 victory. The Spars secured their provincial tournament berth with a win against the Ravens. The North Vancouver Laredos will accompany the Spars to the provincials to represent the North Shore zone.

The Spars will pick up three players from the Howe Sound Women's Fastball League for the provincials but Watt said he hasn't determined who they will be as of yet.

Another problem for Watt is that he will have to disappoint team sponsor Brian Couture of West Coast Logging Shows because, as part of the sponsorship deal, the Spars were supposed to help time the events at Squamish Days Logger Sports, which is the same weekend as the provincials.

"That was the deal we made but now he'll have to be scrambling to find people to take our place," said Watt. "All kidding aside, I'm sure he's very happy for us. We're pretty excited about this. It's the first time a Squamish team has been there (to the provincials) in nine years."

Triathlete shines in cloudy Victoria

Patricia Heintzman

It was one of the best races of his life, says Squamish triathlete Bob McIntosh of the Victoria Olympic distance triathlon July 9. "I don't know why this race was any better than any other. The weather was abhorrent and I didn't do all that much different than other races. But for some reason my result was really good."

McIntosh won the 35-39 age category and was 16th overall at the Victoria race. Only elite and professional triathletes lettered his mark of 4 hours and 30 minutes. A mass start at the beginning of the swim was a factor in his good result, said McIntosh. "Instead of starting behind the elite and pro athletes there was a mass start and I was able to come out of the water with the leaders."

The Victoria race came on the heels of a sprint distance race (.8 kilometre swim, 20 kilometre bike and an eight kilometre run) in Bellingham the week before.

"It was interesting to be at both ends of the spectrum in two weeks," said McIntosh. "I held off a guy 20 seconds behind me (in Bellingham). This is a good benchmark for my early season fitness." McIntosh won his age category at the Bellingham race in 1:11, three minutes better than last year's result at the same venue.

"I'm about five or six weeks ahead of last year's training schedule," he said. "The half-ironman early in the season really set up my fitness level for the remainder of the season. I think I'll always try to fit in a long distance race early in the season."

Squamish's Helle Wilburn also participated in the Bellingham race and came third in the 40-44 age category. "The swim was a little overwhelming," said Wilburn. "It was the first race in which the swim was in a lake. You can't prepare for that, when you swim in a lake with 400 other people. Now that I've done it I'll have more confidence the next time."

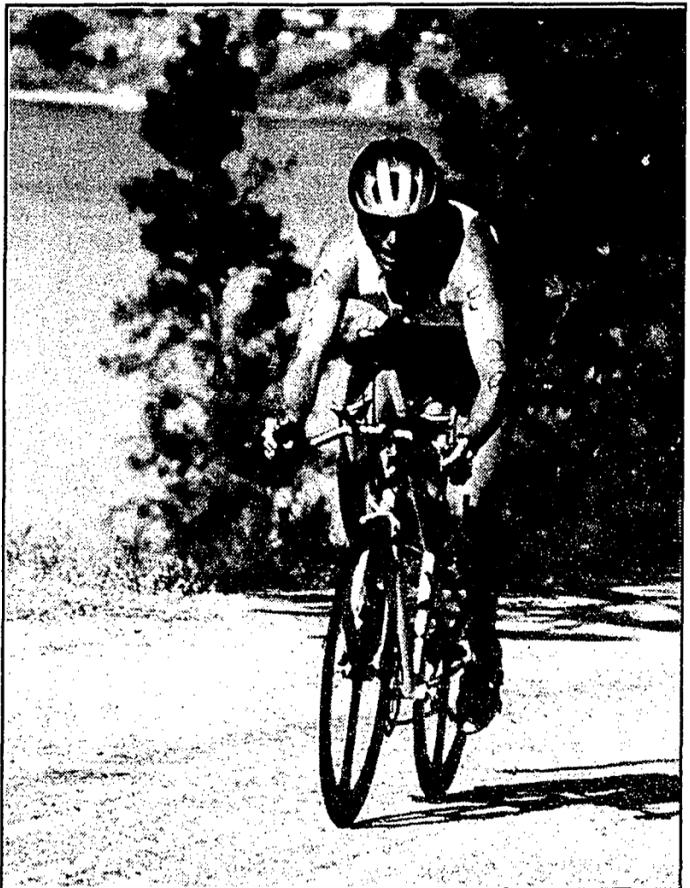

"The half-ironman early in the season really set up my fitness level for the remainder of the season."
— Bob McIntosh

I had a good run and bike though."

Wilburn's next competitive race will be the Kelowna Olympic distance triathlon Aug. 20.

McIntosh will enter several triathlons and the B.C. duathlon championships (which is a run, bike, run race) leading up to the Crescent Beach triathlon in White Rock Aug. 13, which is a B.C. team qualifying event.

He also hopes to be competing at the Canadian National Triathlon Championships, Aug. 20 in Fort McMurray, Alta.

Squamish FC prepares for upcoming season

By Patricia Heintzman

Squamish's Metro Senior Soccer League Division 1 entry is already gearing up for the upcoming season. Practices and tryouts for Squamish FC begin Aug. 1 at Centennial Field at 6 p.m. in what team manager Tom Johnstone says should be an exciting rebuilding year for the team.

Several veteran players, including Johnstone, are retiring from the team this year to make room for promising young players.

Squamish FC finished sixth out of 10 teams in its Division 1 league last year in the team's first year at that level in several years. If the team finishes first in Division 1 it climbs to the Premier Division.

Johnstone says the team's goals are to build on the strong season it had last year by reducing mental errors and working at putting out a consistent effort every game.

The team continued to play well in June when it won the Mount Currie tournament.

As for the future, Squamish FC is entered in the Sno-ho-mish, Wash. tournament June 22-23, at which 102 over 30 men's and women's team, mostly from Washington State, will compete. The Squamish FC team entered in the Sno-ho-mish tourney will consist of FC players 30 and older and several players from the Mountain Building Centres Men's Soccer League. A women's over 30 team from Squamish is also competing in the tournament.

Johnstone is organizing a summer Trueline Trophies Tournament Aug. 26-27 in Squamish to help local teams prepare for the upcoming season.

Eight women's teams and eight men's team will compete at the pre-season event.

Labor Day weekend Squamish FC travels to the Sunshine Coast for the annual Sechelt tournament at which Squamish FC was runner-up last year.

Anyone interested in trying out for Squamish FC and playing competitive soccer in Division 1 of the Metro Senior Soccer League is invited to try out for team.

"They should show up fit and not the tryout as a way to get fit," said Johnstone.

Allin returns to haunt old mates

By Jim Monahan

Former Tapley's A's pitcher Doug Allin was back at Meadow Park in Whistler on Wednesday night.

Wearing a Mexx Pub Bulls uniform, Allin tossed an impressive two-hitter as the Bulls blanked the Subway Black Sox 11-0.

Lunch bucket in hand, Allin went right to work, drawing a walk and scoring a run for the Bulls in the top of the first inning. He then set the tone by striking out the side in the bottom half.

With a riser dipped in plenty of picante sauce and a sharp-breaking drop, Allin sent a total of 11 Sox batsmen to the pine, via the strike out route. He still didn't feel that he'd had his best outing.

"Yes and no. I was okay for five innings but then kind of lost it. My head wasn't into it," said Allin.

The Bulls broke open the game in the third, when a 3-run shot by Barry Woodward cleared the left field fence and put them up 5-0. The Black Sox threatened in the fifth, with back-to-back singles by Scott Charleton and Jeremy Wenzel.

Despite a two-out walk to Mark Henderson to load the bases, Allin recorded three K's in the 11th inning to dispel any notion of a Sox comeback.

Bill Harvey and second baseman Jacques Reid were the only other Sox base runners and both got aboard on errors. Reid gave a good ride in his first at bat when his flyball to deep left bounced off the glove of the retreating Bulls' outfielder.

"He was fast and tricky. I got change-up to hit. If he throws you a fat one, you've got to swing away. You won't get many. He's tough, as a batter you can't take too many pitches or he'll be ahead of you," said Reid.

Base lines: entering the first week of the regular season, the 12-3-1 Bulls lead the standings by two games over Mount Cott Builders...the Raiders and the Sox are tied in third place in the 5-team circuit.

Allin and 'Home Run' Harvey will join the Squamish baseball Greg Gardner GM team in Say Lake City for a run at the World AA championship, in late August.

Scuba: discovering inner space

Bubbles flutter past my face to the water's surface. Feet first, I sink slowly. Pressure mounts. I plug my nose and gently attempt to blow air out through my blocked nostrils to equalize. I sit at the bottom of the pool. A grin reveals my pleasure.

There is something satisfying and intriguing about defying nature. The perks of being a human are that we have the capacity to determine and control our environment, the intelligence to manipulate our relationship to natural law and the coordination and dexterity to follow through on our imagination.

The Wright brothers looked at gravity in the eye and dared to defy it. Neil Armstrong's time-glass words, "one small step for man, one giant step for mankind" epitomizes the unlimited potential of human adventure.

Until I think of these human achievements as I sit on the bottom of the Squamish Aquatic Centre pool Wednesday night. In essence, I should be drowning. I've been under 12 feet of water for several minutes, contemplating a scary situation. A stream of bubbles which blurs my vision for a moment follows a fresh intake of cool air.

My small dare against nature pales in comparison to the pioneers that fill my mind as my fellow classmates float, swim and sink around me. But it's exhilarating to breathe under water using a self-contained underwater breathing apparatus (scuba). Instincts of survival must be overcome and pushed from one's consciousness. Relaxed and self-assured, scuba diving is a real trip.

I've wanted to take a Professional Association of Diving Instructors (PADI) open water course for many years but never had the time nor the opportunity. Now that Squamish is my home, it is over the world. There are several extremely important aspects of scuba diving that cannot be overlooked. One of the first instincts when going under water is to hold one's breath. But the golden rule of scuba diving is never hold your breath. Holding one's breath under water can cause pressure changes so severe that could easily rup-only natural for me to want to explore another dimension of the earth — inner space.

Snorkeling in a variety of places around the world has given me a glimpse into the possibilities of underwater adventure, though it only scratched the surface of the potential that abounds. But scuba diving is not an activity that can be taken up without education.

In fact PADI has established standards for diver training throughout the world. And a PADI open water certificate, which my class of seven other fledgling scuba divers at the Sea to Sky Ocean Sports open water course and myself will have by month's end, will permit me to rent scuba gear all ture one's lungs. We've now completed three of five in-pool sessions towards our PADI open water certificate. Two more pool sessions this week, followed by a written exam, leads to my class's first ocean dive next weekend. At that time a whole new world of discovery will be opened up to me.

Those interested in learning more about scuba diving and equipment can attend one of two slide presentations on underwater photography by instructor Rod Yaremkevich and the Sea to Sky Ocean Sports crew at 9 p.m. July 21 at the Porteau Cove Provincial Park amphitheatre or 9 p.m. July 22 at the amphitheatre at Alice Lake Provincial Park.

Palm flying high after Knee Knackering triumph

By Rahoul Ghose

Squamish's Mae Palm is flying high after knocking more than hour off her record in the seventh annual Knee-Knackering North Shore Trail Run July 8, and capturing her third successive veteran women's title.

The 55-year-old marathoner, whose list of accomplishments includes six Boston Marathons, approached the 48-kilometre race from Horseshoe Bay to Deep Cove differently this year.

After a successful trial run of the course Friday, Palm decided to start the race from the middle of the pack rather than at the back, as she had done in previous years. She also elected not to carry a backpack or water bottle during the race to improve her stability, confidence and speed.

"I found it encouraging to be keeping up with people who run a lot faster than me," she said.

The race, which starts at 6 a.m., takes participants from Horseshoe Bay to Deep Cove via the 48.6-kilometre Baden-Powell trail. Runners go up, over and around the major North Shore Mountains — Cypress, Grouse and Seymour — gaining more than 2,400 metres in elevation along the way.

This year's event attracted 151 participants from across North America.

A record 143 runners finished the race under the 10-hour time limit.

At the halfway mark of the race, Palm had already posted a time of three hours and 35 minutes, almost 45 minutes faster than her mid-point time last year.

"It put me on such a high," she said. "But then I thought, I've probably blown it and the second half is going to be a lot tougher."

But as Palm got closer to the finish in Deep Cove, she realized the only thing that would stop her would be a twisted ankle.

"I had a good feeling I would have a great time, as long as I didn't fall or DNF," she said.

"When I got to the end I was on such a high, I was jumping up and down. I knocked an hour and a minute off my time. It was unbelievable — I was just on cloud nine."

Palm finished the race in 7:20:26, blowing away last year's result of 8:37 and her record of 8:21:33, set in 1993.

The South African native's rival, Irene Neave of Maple Ridge, also beat Palm's old record, finishing second this year with a time of 8:13:12.

Palm said running the race three times has taught her the basics of knowing where to step on the trails to avoid injury and how to run downhill fast without falling.

"I used to fall constantly in the beginning because I'm a road runner, normally," she said.

Palm will have a new rival to contend with for the Knee Knackering Run in 1996, with this year's masters women's champion, Marcia Winger Sardis, turning 50 next year. Sardis will provide Palm with a challenge, as she posted a time of 6:26:25 this year despite an injured ankle.
