Random shootings scare residents

Help sought on pellet gun incidents

Ron Enns
Young adults armed with pellet guns shot a man in the week, almost hit a woman who was sitting in her living room, and at some other people walking downtown and caused about $7,000 damage to houses and vehicles last week.

Police arrested five people — Squamish males in their late teens and early 20s and all well known to police — in a room in Ocean Port Hotel Wednesday night. Squamish RCMP members seized three pellet guns — two were air-powered handguns and one is a CO2 cartridge-powered handgun. Some pellet guns were stolen from True Value hardware earlier last week.

Charges related to the random shootings have not been laid. Police did charge one of the men, Nick Tregidgo, 18, with each of recognizance. Tregidgo was held in custody overnight and appeared Thursday in Pemberton provincial court.

In an incident the afternoon of Nov. 7, a Squamish man was struck in the cheek with a pellet while walking on Clarke Drive Valleycliffe. The man heard pellets hitting the ground around him before he was hit. A male suspected of the shooting, ran off into the bush where the man was shot. The man received a minor injury to cheek.

The next morning, between 7 a.m. and 9:20 a.m., a vehicle parked at the recycling bins at Clarke Drive and Hwy. 99 had its rear window shot out by a pellet and had a few dents in it from pellets hitting the vehicle. On Wednesday evening, windows of downtown houses and cars were shot out with pellets. In one incident, a pellet whizzed by the head of the woman who was sitting in her living room. In other shootings, a shot was fired by someone in bushes along Fifth Avenue at a person walking up to a house. And people walking downtown were being shot at by someone from a hotel room window at the Ocean Port Hotel.

Most pellet guns are not classified as firearms because their muzzle velocity is not high enough. However, criminal charges in the incidents involving pellets guns could include possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace, mischief for damage done to property and mischief for endangering a life, said Squamish RCMP Sgt. Dwaine Wettleland.

Police are requesting anyone with information on any of the shootings call the Squamish RCMP detachment at 898-9611 or Crimestoppers at 892-TIPS (8477).

Missing man found dead in Alice Lake area

The body of a man who had disappeared and was believed to be living in the bush near Alice Lake was found by a hiker on Nov. 4.

The body was identified as Ronald Leo Scheufen, 35, a homeless man from Sarnia, Ont. He was found near the boundary of Alice Lake Provincial Park. There was no indication of how long Scheufen had been dead or the cause of death, however, police said there is no reason to suspect foul play. A tarp and a sleeping bag were found nearby in the bush. An autopsy of the body was done last week, but results are not yet available.

Scheufen, who was known to camp and use the bush wherever he went, may have been in need of medical attention. Searches for Scheufen took place after an overdue rental vehicle in his name was discovered in the Alice Lake parking lot Oct. 15. Squamish RCMP did ground searches using a dog and Squamish Search and Rescue members did ground and helicopter searches of the area. RCMP also later used heat-sensing equipment while searching the area by helicopter. There had been a possible sighting of Scheufen the night of Nov. 1 in the Alice Lake area.

Tourism inquiries skyrocket

The number of tourism inquiries continues to escalate at the Squamish travel information centre. In August alone, 6,083 visitors dropped in at the Cleveland Avenue centre. In August 1994 there were 2,800 visitors and in August 1993 there were 2,000 visitors. July and September were also markedly busier this year than in the last two years. The increased number of visitors — most of them come from the C. Lower Mainland and the entire southwestern part of the province — can be attributed to Squamish's diverse outdoor recreation opportunities, says travel information centre manager Wendy Magee. She said there is a huge increase in people coming to Squamish as a destination to take part in activities like mountain biking, rock climbing, kayaking, river rafting, windsurfing and hiking.

Nebbeling resigns from Sea to Sky Economic Development Commission

Whistler Mayor Ted Nebbeling, who has been chairman of the Sea to Sky Economic Development Commission for the past four years, announced last week his resignation from the board of directors of that organization.

Nebbeling, who is the B.C. Liberal candidate for the West Vancouver-Garibaldi riding, said he feels that with an election upcoming, his candidacy might jeopardize support that has been provided to the commission by the province of British Columbia.

"I have enjoyed my four years with the commission and am proud of our many accomplishments. With my candidacy for the B.C. Liberal Party and the election within the next year, I am concerned that my involvement with the commission may lead to a lack of cooperation from the province of B.C. As well, I do not wish to impugn the integrity of the commission by being actively involved with an election on the horizon," Nebbeling said.

Squamish Station receives approval to proceed

Battle of the shopping centres heats up

By Ron Enns

A shopping centre planned for the entrance to downtown Squamish is the first of two proposals to receive council's approval to proceed, but plans for a competing project are not far behind.

B.C. Rail has already started preloading the Squamish Station shopping centre site on the southwest corner of Cleveland Avenue and Hwy. 99. Council adopted bylaws last week allowing work to move ahead. Early in the new year, buildings will begin to rise and by summer the 5,700-square-metre shopping centre, anchored by an IGA Plus grocery store, should be complete, according to BCR Properties manager Brad Cooper.

Just a few kilometres up the highway at the Mamquam Road intersection, tall grasses flow in the winter winds on the site where the Gulf Pacific's Garibaldi Plaza shopping centre is to be located, while Gulf Pacific continues to negotiate a cost-sharing agreement with the Ministry of Transportation and Highways, and the District of Squamish and the ministry finalize the area's roadway network plan.

The looming presence of the proposals for two new shopping centres has concerned some Squamish residents and merchants during the last year. B.C. Rail has had the jump right from the start and beat out Gulf Pacific in receiving council's fourth and final reading. But Gulf Pacific president Bruce Russell said BCR's progress is independent of Gulf Pacific's work and does not change his plans or focus at all. Russell said he expects bylaws that will allow Garibaldi Plaza to proceed will receive their fourth readings in December. After that, "the market will still be the ultimate judge if one or both developments go ahead," he said.

"Neither us, nor BCR, I presume, is interested in building a shopping centre the vast majority of which will be vacant."

Russell said he would want the assurance that 60-70 per cent of the project be preleased. Like Squamish Station, Garibaldi Plaza is to have a grocery store as an anchor tenant as well as numerous retail stores, a financial institution and restaurants. In addition, Gulf Pacific has plans for a movie theatre, office space and a new Diamond Head Royal Canadian

Ready For Change — The entrance to downtown Squamish will be changed forever when B.C. Rail's Squamish Station development gets under way. Legion building. The area of the Gulf Pacific proposal, excluding the new Legion, is 11,900 square metres, about twice as big as the BCR proposal.

Cooper said he is not concerned about the possibility of the Gulf Pacific proposal proceeding at the same time as the BCR project.

"We're confident that ours will be successful. We know in time the other one will be as well."

Cooper said Squamish Station already has a 50 per cent occupancy rate without construction not yet started.

The competition to attract to merchants appears to be heating up between the two developers.

Cooper said Squamish Station will extend downtown to the highway, providing a gateway to the downtown core.

Russell said the Gulf Pacific's site has "supremacy in every way, shape and form" because the shopping centre is better able to attract the majority of traffic on Hwy. 99 that never ventures downtown.

Newsprint costs force price hike

Spiraling newsprint prices over the past two years have been good news for B.C.'s pulp industry but bad news for newspapers. In the past year alone, newsprint prices have risen 47 per cent, which was passed on to newspaper publishers through five separate printing cost increases.

To keep up with these increasing costs, The Squamish Chief has raised its news-stand rates for the first time in three years.

"Faced with a 47 per cent increase in printing costs, we are finding we have to share the cost with readers as well as advertisers," said Chief publisher Shari Bishop, announcing that as of today, non-subscribers will pay $1 including GST for their weekly paper published every Tuesday. The Chief's sister paper, the twice-weekly Whistler Question, put the same increase into effect last week.

The annual subscription rate for the Chief for home delivery in Squamish will remain at $30 until at least the end of this year, said Bishop, allowing subscribers to receive their paper for $0.58 per week.

"That is a great saving and a convenient way to get your paper every week at your doorstep," said Bishop. "Price increases are never easy, but we also feel we put out an excellent product with a good read every week."

Council allows Hwy. 99 eateries but dictates building design

By Ron Enns

Commercial development along the highway will be allowed to continue after Squamish council approved a proposal for Wendy's and Tim Horton's restaurants, side by side in one building and each with a drive-through window, on Hwy. 99 at Industrial Way.

The proposal was made possible after council approved in December 1994 rezoning the two pieces of property at the request of property owner by Norm Barr. Prior to rezoning, the property was zoned light industrial, a zone which does allow restaurants.

The intent of allowing restaurants in the zone was to permit the development of restaurants to primarily serve people who work in the area, said District of Squamish planner Margaret Thornton.

The rezoning to a special light industrial zone allows the restaurants on the property to have a drive-through window. With the highway frontage, the drive-through windows will allow easy access for people travelling along Hwy. 99 rather than catering to industrial park workers only.

At the rezoning public hearing held about one year ago, some residents said they did not want any more commercial development to occur along Hwy. 99. As well, the district planning department recommended not to proceed with the rezoning.

"The intent of establishing a 'restaurant and/or cafe' use in the industrial park was to service the employees of the industrial park, and is not to be highway commercial oriented, as is with this proposal," Thornton said a July 27, 1994 memo to council.

Council said that an amendment to the Squamish official community plan, which does not specifically address highway development in the area, was not necessary because it was felt the rezoning was only a technicality in the zoning bylaw, Thornton said.

As part of the requirements of the development permit, which was applied for by NRB Holdings, there is to be landscaping and clusters of trees between the development and the highway. A sign on the property that is designed to be 7.3 metres high and 5.5 metres wide will be allowed.

Council is requiring that the building have a pitched roof and that it have wood and /or river stone cladding, to reflect Squamish's surroundings, rather

District of Squamish plan department. In Cloverdale, in the City of Surrey, a Wendy's restaurant has been constructed using design elements to enhance Cloverdale's "front western" character.

"In these cases the proposal altered their 'standard corporate design' in order to be more sensitive to the community in which they were developing in," the planning department requested that the same consideration be given to the District of Squamish," the planning department report said.

Graves said that the additional design features, including than using the company's standard corporate design. A planning department report did not support the design as proposed, in which the building had a flat roof and red brick exterior, saying it did not conform to the official community plan.

Project manager Dale Graves told council that it would be good for Squamish and is important for the company to develop the restaurants following its "nationally recognizable image which we try to maintain at each development."

The planning department did a review of other Wendy's developments and found that in Canmore, Alta., a Wendy's restaurant is being developed with design features similar to what it being proposed by the pitched roof, landscaping, skylers, electrical power to the and additional development cost charges combine to make the total development expensive.

"We'd just like the district realize if we do conform to the requirements, then the project cost becomes very expensive, almost to the point where we just can't afford to do a building here in the District of Squamish."

Revised design drawings incorporating the district demands are to be submitted before the proposal is allowed to proceed.

Councillors Tom Bruusgaard and Meg Fellowes voted against the approval of the development permit.

Council refuses to consider long-term rock climbing plan

Economic impact of climbing in Squamish cited as $5.4 to $7.2 million a year

By Ron Enns

A long-term plan is necessary for the District of Squamish to adequately deal with the development of rock climbing, a Squamish councillor says. But at last week's council meeting a recommendation made by Coun. Meg Fellowes to have the parks and recreation director work on a long-term plan, which could be implemented by the private profit or private non-profit sectors or the District of Squamish, or any combination of the three, was rejected by council.

Only Fellowes and Coun. Don Ross voted in favor of the recommendation, while Mayor Corinne Lonsdale and councillors Ron Barr, Tom Bruusgaard and Ted Craddock voted against.

The issue arose when council was dealing with a letter from Ourom, director of the Climbers' Access Society of B.C. In his letter, Ourom said he was disappointed council did not consult with the rock climbing community prior to making a decision to support the Squamish Valley Rod and Gun Club, which was attempting to expand its lease area to include the Art Gallery, a rock climbing area located downrange of the club's ranges.

There have been complaints of bullets ricocheting near climbers.

Council made the decision in September to support the rod and gun club when the issue originally arose as the result of a previous letter from Ourom requesting that the Climbers' Access Society have input before decisions are made.

At that meeting, council allowed rod and gun club president Jim De La Mare the opportunity to address council. There was no representation from the climbing community or the Climbers' Access Society.

Coun. Meg Fellowes

Lonsdale at last week's meeting said De La Mare did not receive preferential treatment, but rather that "he just happened to be (at the meeting)."

Since that time, all access to The Art Gallery area has been prohibited by the Ministry of Transportation and Highways, which has an emergency rock quarry in the area.

Fellowes said activities like rock climbing, mountain biking and eagle viewing should be looked at in a "broader perspective" by council and become part of the district's economic development strategy.

She said a relatively small scale study would not have to cost much and would be a good starting point to address the issue.

Ourom, in his letter, said the economic impact of rock climbing at Squamish is three to four times as great as it is at Skaha (near Penticton), where a recent study showed an economic benefit of $1.8 million a year resulting from 11,000 climber-days a year.

There are four to five times as many climber-days a year in Squamish, which would result in an economic impact of $5.4 million to $7.2 million, according to Ourom's estimates.

Ourom said the Climbers' Access Society would like to work with council and other interested parties to help positively guide and manage changes in Squamish and plan for the future of rock climbing at Squamish.

Coun. Ron Barr said council would be going "overboard" to do such a rock climbing planning study after supporting the rod and gun club in September.

Pellet guns are far from harmless

Most of us think of pellet guns as harmless. Not so. Perhaps we are deceived a bit, thinking back to our own youth when many little boys had Daisy air rifles, called BB guns. These were hand crank gizmos which shot little copper BBs and had a muzzle velocity significantly lower than Aunt Matilda calling the cows in from the north 40 pasture.

Pellet guns, particularly those powered by CO2 cartridges, are another matter. Some can shoot a lead pellet through 1/4 inch plywood at 20 feet. If they can do that, clothing and skin don't stand a chance.

Think of what just one of these pellets could do if it hit someone's face, or an eye. They can kill. They aren't toys, and should be classified as firearms.

There is also the aspect of their appearance. Most pellet guns look like real firearms. In the hands of anyone, kids or adults, police don't know what they're dealing with. They have to treat every reported gun incident as if it is a real gun in the wrong hands. Many bank robberies and other serious crimes have been committed by criminals using real-looking plastic replica handguns.

We have all seen the TV reports from Vancouver and other cities in which a small child with a plastic gun replica is surrounded by the police emergency response team with heavy duty firearms. It is only a miracle that more people haven't been killed as they play games with these real-looking toys.

Unfortunately when incidents involving guns of any sort happen, real or replica, people get scared. They are reluctant to file complaints or testify in court for fear of reprisals. With pellet guns not classified as firearms, charges and corresponding sentences are lighter than if actual firearms were used. But serious charges can be laid, depending on the incidents.

In the last few weeks, particularly last week, there have been too many incidents of pellet guns being used carelessly or even criminally in Squamish. These guns have to be taken off the streets, along with the people who use them for nefarious purposes. Frightened though you might be, if you see people using pellet guns carelessly or criminally, report them to the RCMP or Crimestoppers as quickly as possible, before someone gets killed.

The wrong message

While they were at it, council might as well have changed the name of the Squamish industrial park. Perhaps to something a little softer and more inviting, to reflect the fact the majority of businesses in the industrial park are retail, not industry. Last week they approved a proposal for a combined Wendy's and Tim Horton's, each with drive-through windows, in one building at the corner of Hwy. 99 and Industrial Way.

A restaurant has long been planned for the property, which is zoned light industrial. How much lighter can you get? It was supposed to service employees of the industrial park, but we doubt those employees will be impressed. And there can be little doubt the two restaurants are intended to attract highway traffic. We suspect it won't take long for that intersection to become another major bottleneck.

And if council is going to ignore its planning staff, why not lay them off and save us all a few bucks? Planning recommendations should neither be followed blindly nor totally ignored. Squamish will be known by those driving the highway as merely a fast-food pit stop. Allowing drive-through windows to both restaurants tells visitors they don't even have to get out of their vehicles when they stop in Squamish. This proposal will do far more harm to downtown merchants than either of the two new shopping centres.

Is this really what we want for our community?

Reformer defends the NDP

Some aspects of politics are almost too scary for words. Why, just last week I actually caught myself agreeing with Herb Grubel. I had to give my head a shake, but I still agreed with him when the cobwebs were clear.

Grubel, MP for Capilano-Howe Sound, stood up for B.C. Social Services Minister Joy McPhail last week after she announced her government would enact a three-month waiting period for welfare recipients moving into B.C. I applaud McPhail for her initiative and Grubel for his defence.

Of course in politics, not everything is as it seems. And this little NDP foray against the feds has more twists and turns than an NCHS ledger.

Taken at face value, McPhail's move makes sense. Income assistance now costs all British Columbians $1.8 billion per year, nearly 10 per cent of the total provincial budget. The three-month waiting period would save $25 million, which is a good start.

In addition, there are almost 27,000 new welfare recipients a year coming to our province from elsewhere in Canada, adding to our burden. It seems only reasonable these people be expected to carry their own load for the first few months, or stay home.

Needless to say, the grand poohbahs in Ottawa screamed instantly. Human Resources Minister Lloyd Axworthy said B.C.'s actions are illegal. He said the three-month delay contravenes federal statutes and denies people their right to mobility. He also threatened to withhold federal transfer payments.

But Axworthy is on shaky ground. Sure, the B.C. action does contravene federal agreements. But the federal government has already put limits on the amounts it contributes to social programs in the "have" provinces such as B.C., Alberta and Ontario. While those three provinces get federal funding to cover 33 per cent of their welfare costs, other provinces get 50 per cent.

It is estimated that by 1997-98, Ottawa will be covering just 11 per cent of welfare costs, and zero per cent by 2001. As the woman said to the Pope about his rules on birth control, "You don't play the game, you don't make the rules."

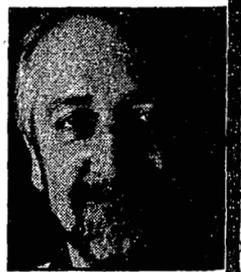

In addition, Axworthy has presided over the emaciation of the unemployment insurance program, which has driven many UI claimants onto welfare. Axworthy has done virtually nothing to protect the coun-reciprocal agreement which exists with Medicare. But the reaction from other provinces could have been predicted.

At least 30 per cent of the new people applying for welfare in B.C. have come from Alberta. And a great many others have come from Ontario, where Premier Mike Harris just slashed the Ontario welfare rates. Why would they possibly be interested in ponying up for their citizens for three months when they can offload the whole bill onto B.C. taxpayers? What McPhail has succeeded in doing, which I suspect will

As I See It

By Al Price

try's social programs, preferring to see them decimated by Finance Minister Paul Martin's budgets rather than helping constructively to cut the overall costs of government.

McPhail's policies and reasoning have virtually wiped the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society scandal from the news.

Clearly B.C. has to do something to cut its welfare costs. Following McPhail's announcement she said she hoped other provinces could be convinced to pay the welfare bills for the first three months after their residents moved to B.C., the same her intention all along, is waiting up all politicians across Canada. She has said even comparatively wealthy provinces can't afford the current rates. And other provinces can't offload their problems. I suspect there will be a provincial ministers' conference quite soon.

If not, McPhail's second like objective has also succeeded beyond her wildest dreams. Her policies and reasoning have virtually wiped the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society scandal from the news. And with an election mandatory within the next year, bashing the federal government is always popular. Especially when you stand a good chance of winning.

But I still can't get over the fact a member of the federal Reform Party stood up to defend the NDP government of B.C. Can I get over the fact that I agree with them both. Will wonders ever cease?

LETTERS

Extraordinary care

Editor,
I recently gave birth to a baby in Squamish General Hospital. I feel compelled to write this letter because the quality of care I received was extraordinary. Recently there have been numerous news articles referring to the decreasing quality of care we are receiving due to government cutbacks. Certainly in Vancouver, if you deliver a baby without complication, you're expected to go home within 24-48 hours. Some hospitals strongly encourage new moms to go home after as little as six to eight hours of recovery. The medical community in Squamish has managed to preserve the more traditional hospital stay of three to four days, as well as introducing a cost saving method that does not compromise on quality. New mothers have the choice in our community of staying in hospital longer and receiving around the clock, quality care, or can go home within 48 hours and participate in a new program called Best Beginnings. My stay in the hospital was wonderful. The calm professionalism of Dr. Martin and the nurses who helped with my delivery assured my husband and I that we were getting the best possible care. All the staff members at the hospital went out of their way to be friendly and helpful. I was fortunate in that my child was healthy and delivered without complication. I elected to go home early and participate in the Best Beginnings program. It was marvelous. For the first 10 days I was home a public health nurse came to my home any day I wanted, and called me often to see how things were going. Isabel Duff, the hospital physiotherapist, also made home visits to teach me post-partum exercises. The choice was the right one for me as it took a few days of being a mom and dealing with my daughter in my own home before I really had a lot of questions. The nurses were able to help with routine concerns such as bathing techniques, rashes and breast feeding. The nurses also weighed Jaime three times at home. I knew she was gaining well without having to take her down to the health office when she was really tiny. Thank you Sheila and Darcy for your timely advice and encouragement. Having had such a wonderful experience makes me really appreciate the level of commitment made by the health professionals in our town.

It goes where others fear to tread.

Slush, snow, sleet. It's amazing how well the Toyo Observe tire hangs on. Toyo's exclusive microbyte technology developed in Canada for Canadian winters is the reason. The Observe's aggressive uni-directional tread pattern digs into snow to get you moving fast. On ice, more than 5500 tiny sipes (slits) break the water film to help reduce sliding and ensure positive contact.

And the Observe's supercomputer-designed simulation means smoother, quieter running in the dry. Pick up a set of Toyo Observe tires before winter strikes. And leave your worries behind.

Parents need to spend more time with their kids

It happens all the time, a youth is beaten up, harassed, and threatened because of the way they look, how they talk, or even for what they believe in. This is just typical of the way things run these days. I don't know where it comes from, I suppose you could blame it on TV or music or something like that, but that's not it.

Ka-lei-do-scope
By Brad McGillivray

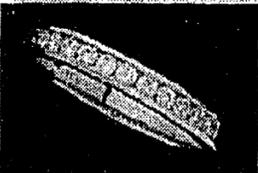

Most kids are smart enough to make their own decisions and know when and when not to act on them. A kid is not going to go and beat another kid because a song told him to. I don't believe in this stuff about how TV is killing our kids and doing whatever to them. To me that is just a flat out excuse on the part of people who do not believe this, and unfortunately most do. I believe the problem starts at home. Most parents never think there is a problem, it's always: "Oh my little Johnny is always good." But then their kid goes out and ends up coming home in the back of a police car. Parents don't supervise their kids enough, and most really don't set terribly good examples for them.

Before you know it there is a gang doing drugs and on a one-way road nowhere. People blame the police or teachers, but for the most part these people are just as much part of the problem as the next person. I think if parents spend more time with their kids, and people in general set better examples for this generation's youth, maybe the future would look a little brighter and be a little more positive for everyone.

Changes need agreement from all

Editor,
Re: Who benefits from community interaction days? which appeared in your paper of Oct. 24 — a letter to the editor from Sue Hutton.

For the record I would like to clarify a misunderstanding about the statement: "How many parents are aware that, through your parent advisory council, you are given the opportunity each year to cancel these two days and reinstate instructional days?" This is not correct.

The Ministry of Education memorandum to all superintendents dated May 1, 1995 states: "As required by the school calendar regulation and the minister's order designating two community interaction days, school boards must schedule two non-instructional days for school-community interaction activities, unless the board has specifically chosen, with the agreement of the parents, teachers and other board employees assigned to the school, not to schedule one or both of these days."

This means that all parties must agree not to have them. However, one of the parties does want to have one or both days then the day or day cannot be removed from the school calendar for that year.

Thank you for the opportunity to clarify a misunderstanding which could lead to more confusion.

Nature Conservancy wants to work with the community

Editor,
In the article "Eagle season requires management" (Squamish Chief, Oct. 24) the claim was made that the Nature Conservancy of Canada will work with the District of Squamish and the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society. It is more accurate to say that the Nature Conservancy wants to work with the community including: local government, the Squamish Nation, Brackendale Art Gallery, estuary society, Lions Club, North Vancouver Outdoor School, the business community, local property owners, anglers, dog walkers, and birdwatchers (no doubt, there are others I have missed). A successful visitor management plan must meet the needs of the eagles, visitors, private property owners and others. Widespread input is required and, over the course of the next few months, will be sought.

Meg Fellowes
Councillor
District of Squamish

Join the Christmas parade

A Christmas parade which involves the entire community will kick off the holiday season in Squamish on Saturday, Nov. 25.

Organized by the merchants at the Chieftain Centre in honor of the mall's 10th anniversary, the parade is intended to involve many different groups in the community — from businesses and clubs to youth groups and neighborhood associations.

The idea to hold a Christmas parade was suggested by Bob Patterson of the Gold Wing Road Riders chapter in Squamish, following its successful rally on the Labor Day long weekend.

"Jack (Fowler of Workwear World) brought the idea to one of our mall meetings and it just snowballed," said Trish James, owner of Stylezone.

The parade already involves more than 30 entries from the community, headed up, of course, by Santa Claus and Mrs. Claus themselves. The Clauses arrive via Vancouver Helicopters at 10 a.m. on the Squamish Elementary School field.

The parade begins at 11 a.m., heading out from the dryland sort at the south end of downtown, and follows the traditional route of the Squamish Days parade down Cleveland Avenue. The street will be closed for the event.

Parade marshal will be Tig Williams, a former Vancouver Canucks player who is now partner and coach of the Vancouver Voodoo rollerhockey team.

There will be floats decorated in the Christmas theme, mascots such as Gary Baldy and Bunker C. Bear, and music from the bands at Brackendale and Howe Sound Secondary schools.

More entries are encouraged from groups all over Squamish, James said, and because of the overwhelming response from the community, the entry deadline has been extended to Nov. 17.

Entry is free. The group of mall merchants is hoping to see more youth involved, she added, such as Girl Guides, Junior Forest Wardens or sports teams. James encourages anyone interested in entering to give her a call at 892-3516, or contact Michelle Wetteland, the chamber of commerce, at 892-9244.

"Local merchants are taking pride in Squamish," said Roland Badke of Gem Jewellers. "We know Squamish is a great place to be."

School district amalgamation unlikely, says chairman

School board chairman Don Wilson says it is unlikely the Howe Sound School District will amalgamate with another school board despite the B.C. School Trustees Association initiatives to restructure school district boundaries. A working committee has been established by the BCSTA to conduct a review of the existing school board areas. The amalgamation of some districts is being contemplated to save money and combine resources. But the Howe Sound School District's geographical circumstances makes its amalgamation with another school board unlikely, says Wilson. An amalgamation could result in even higher expenses for the school district.

School Briefs

Trustee Ele Clarke said the board should look at being proactive and consider ways of sharing some responsibilities with other school districts. Clarke concurred with trustee Laurie Vance that the value of remaining autonomous is important and the board needs to look at ways of saving money and reviewing the way it does business to justify remaining autonomous. Howe Sound School District experienced a five per cent increase in enrolment this year and is seen as a growing district with unique concerns and needs, said Wilson.

Howe Sound school board chairman Don Wilson said the board of trustees is aware that Pemberton Secondary School was built facing backwards on the site, but the mistake wasn't an oversight by anyone. He said the problem arose when the location of the school was changed but the position of the school on the site was not altered accordingly. But he would not clarify why this occurred. Wilson said the position of PSS may end up being more beneficial to the development of the area the way it currently sits. District parent advisory president Fran Cuthbert said it was "a shame" that the large glassed in area of the foyer/common room didn't face Mount Currie.

Howe Sound School District trustees voted unanimously to form a committee to look into the possibilities of developing a traditional school in the corridor. School board chairman Don Wilson recommended community proponents Frank and Marcia Martin included on the committee.

School district chief executive officer Doug Courtice gave an informal update of ongoing construction at the various capital projects in the Howe Sound School District at a school board meeting Nov. 8. The theatre seats and sound equipment were installed last week at Howe Sound Secondary School and the renovations of B wing in the old part of the school on schedule. Pemberton Secondary School's grand opening is Nov. 28. Whistler Secondary School construction is also on schedule. The new Brackendale Elementary School building is nearly closed. Courtice added that students currently occupying the gymnasium at Garibaldi Highlands Elementary School will be back in their classrooms by the end of the week.

The school board trustees have decided not to jump into plans for the now defunct Coquitlam Mountain Outdoor School District CEO Courtice asked the trustees' direction on how to react to several informal proposals to use the land and facilities that have been forwarded to him by people in the corridor. Trustees Constantine Rulka and Ele Clarke emphasized the need not to jump into any long-term commitments. Leases of the land because the potential of the property has not been determined. Rulka said future use of the property could change as the provincial government continues to emphasize environmental education. She said one possibility is to use the CMOS grounds could become a provincial outdoor facility. The trustees agreed to consider a short-term lease of the property to help pay for and fund the cost of digging a new well.

An ad hoc committee of the whole will be formed to look at all aspects of the potential CMOS and provide the school board with options.

Council accepts Patterson's bicycle route proposal

Council accepted a parks and recreation advisory commission recommendation to support a proposal by Squamish resident Terrill Patterson for bike paths in Squamish. Council also directed that the proposal be forwarded to the works and services committee for inclusion in the 1996 budget. The criteria required by the provincial government so the district can apply for grants for the purpose of 50/50 cost-sharing the construction of an alternative transportation bicycle route in Squamish include that a pathway be constructed which goes in the direction of traffic on both sides of the street and allows the community to utilize this pathway to get to all prime areas of the district.

Patterson presented to the commission a map showing a proposed route, which incorporates the current network of roadways within the municipality and at the same time would result in upgrading these roadways at a reduction in cost to the municipality. The original proposed map could be altered and adjusted once it has been submitted to the government. The municipality would have the flexibility to add and adjust as it sees fit.

Parks and recreation advisory commission meetings will no longer take place behind closed doors. In the past, individuals or groups could appear at a specific time during meetings as a delegation. But now, anyone will be able to sit and observe or listen to the meetings. Individuals or groups must seek permission through the commission's chair if they wish to make a submission or presentation. The meetings are held monthly, usually on the third Monday of the month at 7 p.m. in the council chambers. The next meetings are Nov. 20 and Dec. 11.

Council has approved spending $39,187 for the installation of a replacement telephone system. The bid by TTS Meridian Systems was the middle-priced of three bids received. The high bid from B.C. Tel was $62,705 and the low bid from Ericatel was $24,121.

The low bid was not recommended by the district's consultant because of a question about the long-term suitability of the proposed system and incompatibility with the leisure centre and fire hall phone systems.

The accepted bid was recommended on the basis of service and maintenance criteria as well as on the basis of technical specifications.

Coun. Ted Craddock said the $10,000 spent on the consultant turned out to be economically beneficial because the recommended bid and the consulting fee is still a total of $13,000 less than the B.C. Tel bid.

The advantage of the recommended system is that if the company which will be installing and maintaining the system cannot fulfil maintenance requirements, B.C. Tel, which is also a vendor of the specified equipment, could provide service the consultant said.

Squamish RCMP Staff Sgt. Ken Jones, in his monthly report to council, said there have been increased problems in the downtown core recently. Many of the problems involve young offenders, he said, adding that the police do have suspects in the major break-ins and thefts and have recovered some stolen property.

Coun. Ted Craddock suggested the possibility of setting a curfew in the downtown core.

Mayor Corinne Lonsdale, who rode along in police cruiser on Halloween night, said there should a curfew for youth on Halloween night who are over a certain age and are out on the streets. She said she saw numerous problems involving youth.

Jones said police on Halloween night used cellular phones to call the parents of youths they were questioning to ask the parents if they knew where their child was.

Squamish resident Norm Barr, an industrial park property owner speaking on behalf of other industrial park business people, said industrial park businesses approve of a proposed new hotel in the park along Hwy. 99 as long as businesses are not limited in their development.

As well, he said industrial park businesses are feeling the burden of a disproportionate share of the tax load in Squamish. He said tax rates in the Squamish industrial park are 20-50 per cent more than other industrial parks in the Lower Mainland.

However, with the higher price of land in the Lower Mainland, businesses in Lower Mainland industrial parks pay more in taxes than businesses in Squamish, even though the tax rate is higher in Squamish, Coun. Ron Barr said.

Helicopter crashes unavoidable: investigator

By Ron Enns

Nothing could have been done to prevent two helicopter crashes that occurred one week apart last summer at logging sites in the Meslilloet valley about 25 kilometres southeast of Squamish, says a Transportation Safety Board of Canada investigator.

In both cases, helicopters were operating in confined areas and subject to a lot of risk, said Damien Lawson.

"These accidents unfortunately will continue to happen."

The Transportation Safety Board of Canada released preliminary reports about the crashes, but will not proceed to produce a formal report because "there is not much we can do to prevent them. We can only be vigilant."

In an Aug. 31 crash, the crew of a Bell 214 owned by Black Tusk Helicopter picked up a 1,800-kilogram log on the 61-metre longline and began a transition to forward flight when the log struck some stumps. The shock loading caused a rapidly amplifying, in-flight, vertical oscillation in the helicopter.

When the pilot flying could not release the log using the electrical release switches, the co-pilot used the manual emergency hook release to drop the line and log; however, the action did not reduce the oscillation. The helicopter continued to bounce heavily and, after spinning several times, the pilot tried to land on a relatively flat area. The helicopter struck the ground hard and rolled over on its left side.

The crew escaped the cockpit and a small fire was extinguished by ground personnel. The pilot, who was not wearing a flying helmet, suffered minor head injuries. The co-pilot, who was wearing a helmet, was not injured. The helicopter was destroyed.

An examination of the helicopter found no mechanical defects that could have contributed to the accident.

On Sept. 7, about two kilometres southeast of the crash the week before, the pilot of a Bell 206B helicopter was attempting to land in a confined area. The normal landing pad, which was nearby, was occupied by heavy machinery.

The tail rotor struck a branch and was damaged. The helicopter then yawed, causing the tail rotor to strike a log, incurring additional damage on the touch down.

The rear skid cross tube was also damaged. The pilot was not injured.

Bowen Island has a vineyard

Lary and Elena Waldman are creating a vineyard on their property on Bowen Island.

The first bottling, scheduled for 1996, will be from the Pinot Noir, Pinot Blanc and Pinot Gris grapes planted on their 3.7 hectare home site vineyard.

Other locations providing grapes for the farmgate winery include 0.8 hectares planted in Gewurztraminer, 0.2 hectares in Pinot Noir and 0.8 hectares in Pinot Noir, Ortega and Siegerebbe.

By working in partnership with several other land owners, the Waldmans hope to have slightly more than eight hectares in grapes. The weather is usually hot through until the end of October, although Lary Waldman acknowledges the location is on the cusp of the wine growing climate.

The winery building has now been built and houses the hospitality side of this venture — a six-room guest house. Nestled on the side of Cates Hill, each guest room has a splendid view of the sunsets and Mount Garner. A full country breakfast is served every day by the stone fireplace in the main house. Guests can enjoy the in-ground swimming pool, relax on the patio by the gardens overlooking the vineyard, or explore some of the gentle pleasures of island living.

The major landscaping is now finished and the Waldmans have added special touches that make the winery's setting unique — gentle strolling paths wind past terraces banked with 30 kinds of colorful dahlias, sloping hillsides are covered with clusters of wild flowers, and the herb garden is any chef's dream.

The vineyard's banquet facilities are designed to handle every conceivable type of function — reception, exhibition, training seminar or workshop, meeting, wedding or even an outdoor barbecue on the pool-side patio.

The studio shop will be opening in time to meet Christmas needs. It will be retailing a wide array of arts, crafts, clothing and home furnishings produced by Elena, and, hopefully soon, bottles of the vineyard's own Pinot Noir.

Indoor rock climbing gym opens in Whistler

By Estelle Taylor

Their gym isn't quite finished yet — they are waiting for a toilet to arrive and the boulder cave upstairs isn't finished — but Geoff Creighton and Colin Whyte opened their long-awaited rock climbing gym Nov. 6 because, they say, people kept asking them to.

"People were driving us nuts," says Whyte good-naturedly.

The gym, in Function Junction, has been in the works for months. Previous owners had planned to open the gym in the summer but they defaulted on their rent and left town. Whyte — who owns a climbing gym in Vancouver — and Creighton thought the idea was a great one for Whistler and opened their gym in the same spot.

The spot is a bit deserted — the stretch of Alpha Lake Road leading to the gym is unlit and quiet in the evenings. But Creighton and Whyte don't think that will hurt business. Rock climbing gyms are always in industrial areas of town, says Whyte, because they need high ceilings.

The color inside the gym wipes away the dark outside. Red, orange, yellow, green and blue pieces of tape cover the high walls. They map the routes for the climbers and mark the route's difficulty. There are about 15 routes on the walls now, and more to be put up soon. The holds on the wall for people's fingers are in vibrant colors and shapes too, each one unique, it seems. Some are shaped for two fingers to grab, some for both hands to use. The five inches of gravel on the floor absorbs the shock of a landing.

This gym gives rock climbing enthusiasts a place to climb in the winter, says Creighton, wiping the chalk off his hands and coming over to talk. People can strap a chalk bag around their waist, tie a safety rope to their harness and be a wall climber.

"It's not like climbing a ladder," he says. Climbers try to tackle more and more difficult routes. Indoor rock climbing, even in a small gym is exciting and physically challenging, he says. It's also a great social activity.

Adam Diamond, one of the staff watching a climber, adds that the gym is great for beginners because the ceiling is not too high and beginners can handle many of the routes. Diamond has been a self-described "climbing junkie" for years and will be teaching the gym's first beginner course Nov. 14.

While Creighton and Whyte wait for business to pick up they are settling in to Whistler and becoming just like the locals — that is, they're both looking for a place to live.

Musician dies after collapsing on Longhorn Saloon stage

A packed house at the Longhorn Saloon and Grill watched in disbelief Thursday night as the main performer with a California rock group collapsed on stage and was taken away by paramedics.

Drummer and singer Country Dick Montana of San Diego's Beat Farmers was transported to the Whistler Health Care Centre, where he was pronounced dead in the early hours of Nov. 9.

The 40-year-old performer, whose real name was Daniel McLain, was no stranger to Whistler audiences, as he and his popular band made repeated visits to the resort with a series of incredibly energetic shows.

Montana and his fellow players were just beginning the third song of their first set in front of a sold-out audience, when he appeared to lose his breath and leaned over on his drum kit.

As confusion ensued in the bar, Montana collapsed on the floor and was assisted by bar staff and off-duty medical staff in the audience. Whistler Fire Department members and ambulance attendants quickly arrived on the scene and began administering care, transporting the unconscious performer from the bar minutes later.

An autopsy was performed Thursday and preliminary reports indicate that Montana died of an aortic aneurysm.

Written and spoken word all part of storyteller's tales

Max Tell is the first of many guest workshop leaders to perform for the Coast Mountain Corridor New Free School.

By Patricia Heintzman

It's called the Coast Mountain Corridor New Free School. It costs nothing, there is no registration and attendance is optional. The only prerequisite for the school, which assembles at the Brackendale Art Gallery every Thursday night at 7 p.m., is the free exchange of ideas, philosophies, suggestions on writing techniques and opinions.

The discussion, reading and writing group began a month ago under the tutelage of Squamish resident and author Mike Yates. And with Yates — who has 26 published works of poetry, fiction, non-fiction and plays to his credit and has been a professor of comparative literature at the University of Kansas City, U of Michigan, U of Ohio, U of Alaska, U of Arkansas, U of Texas and UBC — as the self-proclaimed ringmaster — discussion is lively and thought provoking, if not controversial.

The school hosts its first guest workshop leader Nov. 23. Writer and storyteller Robert (Max Tell) Stelmach will take the reigns in leading the group with performances and discussions of his work. Again there is no admission fee.

Max Tell, as he is commonly referred to in literary and storytelling circles, has performed in Hong Kong, Tokyo, Malaysia and Singapore as well as North America and Australia and other venues throughout the Pacific Rim. He has appeared as an honored guest at many international storytelling festivals including the Seattle Arts Festival, Vancouver's Storyteller's Festival, Australian Storytelling Festival, Malaysian Book Festival and the Singapore Storytelling Festival. Tell is the first guest workshop leader in a series of writers, video artists, producers, directors, actors, computer experts and others who will share experiences and knowledge with the members of the new free school, says Yates.

Tell recently returned from his fourth southeast Asian tour in as many years, this time with a wealth of stories for young adults. The thought provoking collection titled Razor Wire contains such stories as: Throng Chi the Ugly Boatman, a tale of how beauty can be ugly and the ugly can be beautiful; The Kite, a story of freedom and the lack of freedom; and A Fish of Bees, a personal story telling how Max Tell, in his early teens, fought to protect a hive of wild honey bees from destruction, even from himself, and how he won.

His first children's play, The Wild Rose And Half-A-Step, produced by Axis Mime Theatre, was nominated in 1991 for a Jessie Richardson Theatre Award for best children's play of the year. His professional acting experience, work in the film industry, bachelor of fine arts degree in theatre from Virginia Commonwealth University, creative writing studies at the Banff School of Fine Art and his extensive travel are all tapped and exploited during his storytelling workshops.

Tell also brings his teachings and performances to schools throughout British Columbia. Under his real name, Robert Stelmach, he has presented more than 300 hours of writing workshops for young people. This has included working in the classroom, at cultural centres and libraries.

Act the Story. Because of Tell's own experience as a reluctant reader, he prefers to work with non-readers in a storytelling workshop rather than a writing workshop. This way he hopes to break down a few of the barriers between the reluctant reader and the written word by opening up new vistas through the spoken word. Many of his other programs tie in with the Act the Story philosophy. Story Sports is an extension of Act the Story, similar to theatre sports. All of Tell's educational tools and storytelling is designed with the express purpose of making language interesting and relevant. Tell's storytelling should be complementary to the participatory style of the new free school, says Yates.

New free school members have also participated in an open microphone evening of songs and words at the Malcolm Lowry Room on Hastings Avenue in Vancouver to give the city a taste of Howe Sound verbal talent and/or abuse.

"The Malcolm Lowry Room is like the '60s coffee houses without the self-conscious laid-backness," says Yates. "The '60s was a bit contrived. These guys really seem comfortable with what they are doing. They are really reflective and not trendy. The Malcolm Lowry room is a fine place to perform or (be part of the) audience. Check it out. We need to cause all the arts support we can get from Vancouver, Popkum and Spuzzum."

Yates says he and many of the members of the school are looking forward to an evening of poetry and readings Friday at Xanthine's Coffee and Tea on Cleveland Avenue at 8 p.m. organized by the Howe Sound Secondary School writing club. An open microphone session will follow the readings.

The essence of life: dogs and kids

Sometimes I'm not sure which is more demanding — taking care of our dogs or taking care of our daughter. Anyone who has both responsibilities knows what I'm talking about.

In our family, the dogs arrived before the daughter, and they actually provided us with many valuable lessons that we now apply to our daughter (teaching the shake a paw trick is not one of them). The development of our daughter, who is not yet a year old, has been astounding. It's obvious to us now that children do grow and develop more in the first year than at any other time in their lives. We have seen amazing changes during the last 8 1/2 months.

Likewise, dogs grow and develop more in the first year than at any other time in their lives. The only difference is that their development plateaus quite quickly. Where our daughter will continue her development for the next couple of decades, most dogs reach their plateau two years after they are born. For some dogs it comes earlier. I would like to believe our dogs have at least reached the mental age of two, but sometimes it seems the age of one would be more accurate. And once dogs attain their maximum mental capacity, that's it: they are stupid for life. Sure, they are loyal, but brain power is not their strong suit.

So much for the prologue: what I was planning to write about this week was fence building. Moving into our new urban digs from the wilds of Ring Creek was a bit of an adjustment for us, but it was a huge transition for our two large dogs. Where we used to live, they had the run of the yard. They still do. However, our old yard consisted of endless forests, rushing creeks and countless squirrels taunting them from the trees, causing them to lunge at trees and smash their heads into the trunks (even the squirrels have more brains than our dogs).

Our new yard is bordered by other people's yards. It's easy for people to know where one yard ends and another begins, but dogs just don't get it. So we had to put up a fence.

Fortunately, most of the fence was already built. A section at the back, however, needed to be added. It looked simple, something I thought we could put up in a day or two. You know, write down how much wood the dogs were getting rather anxious, confined to the basement much longer than they would like. They wanted to be running around free, but I didn't want to earn the disdain of the entire neighborhood for the antics our dogs are capable of performing.

We finally got down to some serious building near the end of my days off. With the foundation — digging the holes for posts and solidly packing them in — finally done and the first we need, make a trip to the lumber yard and pound the pieces together with nails.

I had never built a fence before. In fact, I haven't ever done much carpentry, preferring to rather ramble through alpine meadows and along rolling ridges, cut tracks in the powder or cling from granite walls. My carpentry skills are not too different from the intellectual capacity of dogs, now that I reflect on it a bit. No matter: the master of home projects, my father, was in town.

When I was growing up I saw all kinds of improvements and repairs taking place around the house. Usually, however, I would try to escape to the park to play with my friends. Football was much more interesting to me than wiring the rec room or cleaning out a drain.

This time there was no escaping. In fact, I even pretended that I was in charge of the fence-building project. I quickly found out that if I wanted the fence to be built before my parents returned to the Prairies, I'd have to let the master builder call the shots. As well, section complete, progress sped up. It was even better once I learned the value of measuring everything precisely — preferably to at least one-eighth or even one-sixteenth of an inch — and making sure everything was perfectly straight and level (hint: don't ever use the words "good enough" around a master builder). Evenings I would put on my headlamp and light the Coleman lantern — shades of where we used to live — and be out in the far corner of the yard, taking in the sweet smell of the compost and scratching my hands on the holly to secure the yard all around. The fence was finally finished. All this for the dogs. Not to forget our daughter, of course. We still had time left over to do some projects inside the house, including making sandbags to place on the stand for the stereo speakers so they would not be easy for our daughter to topple. But then again, what would life be without dogs and kids? (Pretty boring, I'd say.) Needless to say, with all the work of late, I am really looking forward to some Diamond Head skiing.

Alpine Revegetation

The Red Heather meadows in the Diamond Head area of Garibaldi Provincial Park are now under blanket of snow, but in late summer this group of B.C. Parks staff and volunteers planted 8,000 grass plugs. It was the fifth year in an ongoing program to rehabilitate alpine areas damaged by vehicles and hikers. Grasses and plants are now starting to recover significantly in previously damaged areas.

HOROSCOPE

By C.C. Clark

Nov. 12 through Nov. 18, 1995

Aries (March 21 - April 20)

A romance may not be in as much trouble as you think. Honesty is needed in all areas. Be especially up front with yourself.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20)

Get yourself out of a rut by doing the things you enjoy most. Ask a friend for dinner or throw an impromptu party.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)

Put off making crucial decisions until you feel ready to take on the added responsibilities. Keep the lines of communication open.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22)

Put your nose to the grindstone, and get those projects finished. Someone will present a worthwhile idea that you can help bring to fruition.

Leo (July 23 - Aug. 22)

Financial investments should be considered carefully. Do not rely on others to decide what is best for you.

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22)

Start your day with some brisk exercise and realize the wonders of a little oxygen instead of caffeine in the morning.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)

Someone close will give you good advice. There needs to be some kind of contact made with a loved one who has wandered.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22)

Stubbornness can often get in the way of some very good ideas. Be more open-minded. You have some great ideas, but so do other people.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 21)

It may be necessary to delay important plans until things are a little less hectic. Take some time to spend with family.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19)

Never compromise your beliefs, even in the toughest situations. There is a way out of this; you just need to think a little harder.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)

A friend needs you more than ever. Take a deep breath, put everything aside and do what is necessary to help this person.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20)

A bold business venture could be just what you need to get your juices going again. Think things through before making commitments.

Darts & Daffodils

Want to say thanks and make sure everyone knows why? Or maybe offer a little constructive criticism without confrontation? Send your Dart or Daffodil to The Editor, The Squamish Chief, Box 3500, Squamish, B.C. V0N 3G0 or drop it off at our office at 38113 Second Avenue, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. You can also fax your message to 892-8483 or e-mail to: sqchief@mountain-inter.net.

Volumes of daffodils to Marjorie Buchanan and the many dedicated Friends of the Library who moved and sorted literally tonnes of books for the book sale, which raised more than $1,000 for the new library building fund.

Trees full of daffodils to Joan Graykin and her friends for their ongoing fund-raising projects also for the new library building fund.

A bar room full of daffodils to Lynda and Duncan, the new owners of the Chieftain Hotel. Many thanks for letting us hold and helping us stage the Canuck Place Halloween fund raiser.

Many thanks and a huge bouquet of daffodils to all the merchants who donated to our fund raiser.

Pumpkins full of darts to all those who think it is a joke to smash them.

To the five people who broke my five-year-old's heart when he saw his pumpkin all over the road, I hope your guilt caught up to you.

Big nasty darts to the loser who stole the wallet from our black and white pickup parked in the fire ground of the SS Prince George while I was fighting the fire on board. I have a family. I have a life. Obviously you don't.

Here's hoping you or someone who saw or knows you will turn it in so I don't lose even more to recover my ID. Daffodils to Mountain FM and the RCMP for their efforts.

A car full of daffodils to Peter from the beach for fixing my car even when it was dark and raining. Darts to the person who tried to siphon gas when it was stranded. You could have at least left the gas cap when you realized there was no gas.

A fridge full of daffodils to Dan, who wouldn't give up on my fridge. You're a true friend. Sorry about your finger. Daffodils also to Gus from Squamish Appliance, who came the next day to repair it. Thanks, guys.

A basement suite filled with bright daffodils to all my friends, RS, JL, TL, AL and their families for their help. I missed you. Thanks. TAS and KES.

Darts to the careless kids who were chasing each other in their cars late Wednesday night on The Boulevard and came roaring around the corner at Friedel Crescent and ran over and killed our cat. You did not even stop. Hope you had fun and slept well. Next time it may be a child.

A lens grinder full of daffodils to Precision Optical for providing a port during a storm. Thank you. A squad car full of daffodils to Squamish RCMP for their efficient handling of the situation despite the outcome, especially Const. Sherri Darrah for her reassurance and understanding.

Fields of daffodils to all the kind people who helped me when I was housebound. The cast is finally off. What a relief. Julie.

A car lot full of daffodils to Dan O'Kane for the best service ever in my purchase of a 1995 Ford Explorer. Also a locked Explorer full of daffodils to Joe at Squamish Ford. He had my car unlocked and keys in my hand within 15 minutes. Thank you both for your personal touches.

Bright orange daffodils to Super Valu for donating 10 pumpkins to Brackendale Secondary School on Halloween.

A hot tub full of daffodils to Linda for inviting us to dinner, wine and a soak in the tub. We would have loved to come if we knew who you were. Unfortunately you stuck the invitation on the windshield of the wrong grey Volvo station wagon. Sure hope Isabelle got invited anyway. Joanna.

A blue Sorel boot full of daffodils to Sharlene at Workwear World, who spent at least an hour with my family Tuesday night finding just the right winter boots and jeans for my very hyper son and indifferent daughter. The patience, good humor and the respect you showed to my children reflects very highly on you and your store. In spite of being busy and tired, you were consistently cheerful and courteous. Extremely professional. Thank you very much, from Nick's frazzled mom.

Spotlight on members

An original painting by Liz Mitten Ryan titled Clear Waters is on display at the Ship's Gallery located on Cleveland Avenue in downtown Squamish until Nov. 24.

The painting is a scene of the Squamish River in the shadow of Mount Garibaldi, full of spawning pink and chinook salmon. Perched on a tree stump in the river is a bald eagle which appears to be selecting his dinner from the smorgasbord of salmon running in the river below. The painting is valued at $12,500.

The timing couldn't have been better for expanded course offerings and the construction of a new college facility in Squamish. Capilano College runs classes days, evenings and weekends. This fall the college offers eight college credit courses including English 100, creative writing, psychology, sociology, accounting, early childhood education and adult upgrading, as well as a variety of computer classes, several first aid courses, certificate courses in food safe and air brakes, Eldercollege and several Canadian job strategy programs for people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. Starting in January, Cap College will offer human biolo-focus, career explorations, financial aid, flagging, computer class (basics, windows, word, Microsoft office and internet) and Eldercollege. A brochure will be sent out by mail to the community.

Charlotte's Web a tradition at Valleycliffe

"We've got a lot in common here it really counts... What we look like doesn't count an ounce!"

You may have a beak, and I may have a snout, but we're equally well equipped when we want to sniff things out. The tune was running through my head for the rest of the day. It's so bright and lively and the words could not have been more appropriate for the Remembrance Day weekend. We have had time, once more, to contemplate what happens when human beings are intolerant of each other's differences, so it was good to watch the youngsters involved in a fantasy about a sheep and a rat, a rooster and a spider all working together to save the life of one very special pig.

I have been to presentations of Charlotte's Web twice before at Valleycliffe. The first snowfall of the winter had brought grey skies pressing down from above and left a miserable layer of slush down below, and it was tempting just to stay warm and snug at home. However, I went out to the dress rehearsal to watch Ms. L'Hirondelle's class, and came away with much more warmth than I could have got if I had stayed inside the fire.

The classic story of Wilbur, the runt of the litter of pigs, and his escape from becoming bacon on the farmer's table, his rise to fame at the state fair through the friendship of a spider, and his care of the spider's eggs to ensure a new generation, is too familiar for there to be any element of surprise or novelty — or so I thought.

Then I realized feeling like that is the same as complaining about having turkey and pumpkin pie at Thanksgiving, simply because you have tasted them before.

This play has become a tradition at Valleycliffe. The audience knew all the songs and most of the words of the drama because many of them had held leading roles in the last production, or even the one before that. Ms. Paterson, who was in charge of the music, asked various students to stand up and identify the characters that they had played in previous years. The girl who originally acted the part of Wilbur some time ago is an older sister of the current Wilbur. It is a family tradition to make these appearances on the stage.

All of this year's performers were charming. Charlotte was played by a tiny, graceful girl who could balance up above Wilbur, and clearly got pleasure out of shocking everybody by telling them about a spider's diet — "only the victims don't feel a thing."

The boy who played the rat got equal pleasure out of twitching his long black nose and whiskers.

All the students knew their lines by heart and showed no signs of nervousness standing in the limelight.

Self-esteem
When Dr. Mel Levine was talking to parents and teachers recently in Whistler on the subject of attention deficits and other learning disorders, he advocated a "domain of excellence" for every child in order to foster self-esteem. After all, nothing can bolster a person's self-concept more than knowing that he/she knows more about a given topic than pretty well everybody else.

The child should be encouraged to develop one particular interest and pursue it over several years, finding out everything there is to know on the subject and becoming an expert. This interest must be spontaneous, not imposed from outside, even though parents may be at a loss to explain how their child ever came to take up such a topic. It may be anything from moths to steam engines, telephones to rocks. Once there is such an interest, research, perseverance, note-taking, detailed study will become pleasures instead of chores, and much of the child's attitude to life and work will be affected.

Women In Science And Technology
Excitement is building around the conference for Grade 9-10 girls to be held in Pemberton on Nov. 30. The Society for Canadian Women in Science and Technology, which is sponsoring the event, has said a video will probably be made of our conference so students in other areas may see what is being done here.

The keynote address and closure will be given by well-known experts in their particular fields, but we are particularly excited about the workshops. These will be given by women role models, mostly from our own area, who will be able to tell the girls the steps they followed to become successful in their chosen careers, the demands of their jobs, and their rewards.

Some of the jobs involved will be: veterinary medicine, massage therapy, dentistry, electrical engineering, various trades, physiotherapy, chemistry, computer science, pharmacy, wildlife and marine biology, architecture, forestry and medicine (prosthetics).

One of the most exiting features is that many of the presenters will be our own graduates.

CAPP
All these acronyms may be confusing, but this is one that we shall have to get used to fairly soon. It means career and personal planning, and in varying degrees it will affect all students from kindergarten to Grade 12.

Representatives from all the schools in our district have been meeting regularly with facilitators from Victoria to learn about innovations, and together they have already drafted the format to be used for student learning plans, portfolios and so on. The meetings have also been very valuable for exchanging information about what is going on in our various schools and sharing differing viewpoints.

New vegetables have what it takes to survive winter's rain, sleet, snow and cold out in the vegetable patch. But you can count on kale to give out some of the worst weather. When the garden is all but empty, kale is a reliable source of greens.

Winter-hardy kale is a veritable pharmacy of vitamins and minerals, making it one of those "eat it because it's good for you" vegetables.

Northern Europeans such as the Scots, Scandinavians and Russians survived their brutal winters thanks to nutritious kale. Lowland Scots depended so heavily on their "kail yairds" that Highlanders scoffed at kale eating as a symptom of femininity and weakness. Nettles were the only vegetable fit for the hardy Highlander. No wonder they were considered a fearsome race.

Today, kale is one of those much maligned vegetables that has suffered from poor growing and age conditions. Unimaginative cooking methods finished off its reputation. Grown properly, in cool season, kale develops an almost sweet, rich flavor. It's best when cooked in a cream sauce, as are many greens. I prefer to make the sauce without cooking the flour in butter. It reduces the fat in the recipe.

Kale in Cream Sauce

- 1/2 lb. kale
- 2 Tbsp. flour
- 1/2 cup chicken stock
- 1/2 cup milk or light cream
- salt and pepper to taste

Discard any tough outer stalks of kale. Steam the leaves for 5 to 10 minutes, until wilted and tender. Chop into small pieces. Heat the chicken stock in a heavy saucepan. In a tightly-lidded container shake together the flour and milk until well blended and lump free. Pour slowly into the hot stock, stirring all the time. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring until sauce is thick and smooth. Stir in the chopped kale. Season to taste with salt and pepper. This is a delicious side dish to roast pork, beef or chicken. It's also good with sausages.

Christmas gift ideas

I've been reading some books and listening to some music lately that you might find interesting, and who knows, might even help find the right gift for that special person.

First is a little gem, The Seven Spiritual Laws of Success, by Deepak Chopra; a practical guide to the fulfilment of your dreams. I don't know if any of you have seen Chopra on PBS, but he is a most affable lecturer, salting his lessons with poetry and philosophy from great minds from every nation of the world. His books are the same.

The language is lighthearted and inclusive, never talking down, while expounding great wisdom, faith, love, charity, responsibility and honor.

"With the knowledge and practice of spiritual law, we put ourselves in harmony with nature and create with carefreeness, joy and love...but success also includes good health, energy and enthusiasm for life, fulfilling relationships, creative freedom, emotional and psychological stability, a sense of well-being and peace of mind," he says.

"True success is therefore the experience of the miraculous. It is the unfolding of the divinity within us. When we begin to experience our life as the miraculous expression of divinity — not occasionally, but all the time — then we will know the true meaning of success."

Although, I have a bit of difficulty with the word success, because of the usual pressure and distorted meaning it entails, in Chopra's interpretation, he reclaims it for its higher meaning. This is an excellent little book to have on hand to dip into for a lift from the mundaneness of ordinary life.

A really fun book is Reservation Blues, by Sherman Alexie, written from the perspective of a resident of the Spokane Indian reservation, who with his friends forms a rock and roll band and goes to

Seattle and eventually to New York while enduring all the lack of support at home. As with most first nations stories there is a mixing of the mystical and mysterious, the supernatural with the real, the humorous with the serious, spiritual elements and lessons and fails to accept there a different view, the feminine which moves in "cycles and subject to the ebb and flow natural rhythms, but is seen in need of management. Military metaphors run rampant through the language western medical care. The of the trickster, the coyote, and Big Mama; and scattered throughout much good Indian humor.

It wasn't until I got near the end of it that I realized I'd read it before, but just like all good story telling within the native community it was as good if not better, the second time around. Alexie is a gifted writer and it will be interesting to see what he does next.

Another book recommended by a friend is Women's Bodies, Women's Wisdom; Creating physical and emotional health and healing, by Christiane Northrup, M.D. This book ties in nicely with another Deepak Chopra book, Ageless Body, Timeless Mind, in that it draws together the connection between the effect our emotions and occurrences in our lives have on our physical health, and how a more holistic approach demands that attention be paid to all parts: mental, physical, emotional, and spiritual.

"Unexpressed emotions tend to 'stay' in the body like small ticking time bombs — they are illnesses in incubation," Northrup says.

She talks about how modern medicine too often is seen from the patriarchal or male perspecease or tumor is 'the enemy' to be eliminated at all costs. It rarely, if ever seen as a messenger trying to get our attention. This is a huge book (700 pages) chock full of great information for women (and the men who care about them), only about $20 and is available at Mostly Books.

And finally, some favorite CDs. One is Jan Arden's, Under June, which I hear myself humming to as it plays. It makes good background music while working. Another (and this might surprise some of you for an old bat like me) but I like Hootie and the Blowfish and Crash Test Dummies, so anything by either group is okay by me. Right now it's Hootie's Cracked Rear View which has been at the top of the charts a long time.

One other CD, a double album that I play a lot, has chants that are great for meditation: From the Goddess to O Great Spirit. I don't know if you can get it locally, but it can be ordered from Springhill Music.

So that's it. I hope these may have been helpful for gift ideas if not, you might like them for your own pleasure and enlightenment.

Wild Water Winner — Lions Bay resident Margaret Langford hopes to make her second trip to the Olympic Games a winning one.

River of dreams paved with Olympic gold

by Patricia Heintzman

Searching for the elusive river of dreams is both a literal and figurative ambition for white water kayaker Margaret Langford. Four years ago, the Lions Bay resident's passion took her to Barcelona where she competed in the slalom white water kayaking event as a member of Canada's Olympic team.

Langford placed 15th at the 1992 Barcelona Games. Her river of dreams was a manmade creation of controlled hydraulics and unnatural predictability, not really to her liking. But her competitive edge and aggressive paddling style caught the attention of the international kayaking world. This time around, she hopes her river of dream is the Ocoee River, the site of the 1996 Atlanta Summer Olympic Games in July.

Athlete and sport first met in 1985 on the shores of Howe Sound near Lions Bay. It wasn't until her final year of high school at West Vancouver Secondary that Langford finally realize her passion and potential in the sport; her powerful frame of five-feet, two-inches complemented the sport well. She found herself competing at the 1988 Junior World Championships at the same venue as the 1992 Olympic course. It was a motivating experience she says really set the tone for the rest of her paddling career. "I just fell in love with the sport. It's a sport that combines a whole bunch of things that all have to come together on race day. It's a very technical sport that is also endurance and fitness. But it's the mind that has control of the boat. That's where experience comes into play."

Slalom kayak racing was a crowd favorite at the Munich Games in 1972. But site problems prevented the sport from inclusion in the following two decades of Olympic competition. 1992 marked the first appearance of white water kayakers since 1972, when it was included in the Barcelona Games and again became one of the Olympic Games' most popular spectator sports.

The year 1992 and the present are light years away for Langford. She recently graduated from the University of British Columbia with a degree in human kinetics, an aspect of her life she had put on hold in 1992 while she trained for the Olympics.

Langford says she is at the top of her training. Her goal is to peak in July when she challenges the Ocoee River near Atlanta and the rest of the world's kayaking elite at the Olympics. Her year is divided into different phases of training. The fall months are dedicated to developing an aerobic base and general strength developed through weight training. Foundation training follows, during which time more hours are spent on the river, and specific aspects of endurance and strength are honed. Technique is analyzed to help maximize performance and minimize extraneous effort. Come spring, the athletes' nemesis is tackled. Langford says it is at this time she tries to train her mind and body to cope with lactic acid build up. By the time the summer comes and the swollen rivers are providing kayakers with a cornucopia of challenges, all aspects of her training should have come to a crest which will hopefully result in peak performance.

Langford exudes confidence. She was pleased with her 1995 results and is convinced she has the potential to win. "Knowing when you are sitting on the start line that you can have a good run and have the potential to win every time you are competing, then that is half the battle," says Langford.

A successful 1995 racing season was marred by only one result. She won the Canadian National Championships in Nelson and was first and second in two Canadian team trials in Minden, Ont. She ended the 1995 season with a first-place national ranking. She also boasts two top 10 finishes in two of the five World Cup competitions in 1995. Her only really disappointing result was a 33rd place finish at the World Championships, at which she missed a gate and was heavily penalized. "At this level of competition you can't evaluate yourself as an athlete on one set of results," says Langford, adding that she is convinced an Olympic medal is within her grasp.

Four female kayakers compete for Canada in World Cup and World Championship events. But the Olympic criteria are more strict and only two Canadian women will have the opportunity to compete in Atlanta. Ottawa's Sheryl Boyle has already been selected for the Olympic team based on her result at the World Championships. Langford's closest competition is Vancouver's Saskia Van Morek, who has not met the selection standards that Langford has. "As far as I'm concerned, that spot (on the Olympic team) in the spring is mine," says a determined Langford.

Two weeks of training at the Ocoee River site is just wrapping up for Langford. The Ocoee River will mark the first time an Olympic slalom kayaking event will be staged on a natural watershed in a forested wilderness area. Although the river is natural, the Ocoee is managed as a hydroelectric system so water levels and flow can be standardized through the competition. The natural aspects of the Ocoee should benefit Langford. Much of her training is done on a river similar in conditions to the Ocoee. The Chilliwack River is the site where much of the national team trains. Langford also regularly travels the 20 minutes up the Sea to Sky Highway to practice at the Mamquam River training site near Squamish.

Langford's next test is the Pan-American Championships in Brazil Nov. 14-21. She is back in the water in earnest in January when she travels to Costa Rica for warm weather training for a month, and she will continue her training on the Olympic course in March and April. All of her training leads to the Olympic qualifying event in April, and ultimately the Olympics.

But the road to elite athleticism is not paved in gold. Langford says kayaking is poorly funded compared to many other sports, and most of the costs are absorbed by the athletes. Sponsorship helps in acquiring equipment, and some travel expenses are covered by provincial and federal athletic grants. But last year she says she incurred expenses of up to $38,000. Personal and financial sacrifices are all part of the elite athlete game, she adds.

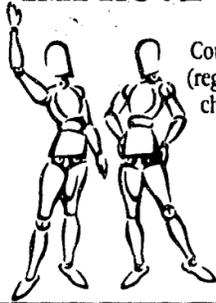

Langford also has another dimension to her elite athlete status. She is a member of the Esteem Team, which is made up of elite athletes who are role models and give motivational speeches to children and youths in the province.

"I like the whole idea of sharing my experiences and knowledge with young kids. Kids have to realize that you are not on a high all the time. There are sacrifices you have to make as an athlete. That often you have to really motivate yourself to get out there in the biting cold and paddle. But also that the benefits can be outstanding."

It's all about finding one's own unique river of dreams, says Langford.

GIVE HUGS! NOT DRUGS!

High Flying — Ross Ballard will be honoured for his prowess on the volleyball court and his dedication to athleticism and sport with the Premier's Sports Award in Victoria Dec. 5.

Ballard one of B.C.'s best

By Patricia Heintzman

Ross Ballard's list of achievements keeps growing. Two years ago he made the Canadian national B volleyball team, made up of promising university players. Last summer he added membership on Canada's national volleyball team to his list of many accomplishments. He was also an all-Canadian academic and a national first-team all-star in his last year as captain of the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds in 1994-95, a team on which he was a member for five years.

Ballard's prowess on the volleyball court has transported him around the globe. In October, he traveled to Fukuoka, Japan where he helped lead the Canadian university volleyball team to a sixth place finish out of 24 teams at the World University Games.

Now Ballard's dedication to volleyball and athleticism in general brings him not only on the road to the Olympics, but also a certain degree of fame. Ballard will be honored Dec. 5 in a ceremony in Victoria with the Premier's Sports Award, an award given out annually to a few select athletes in the province. His name will also appear in the hallowed halls of the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame at B.C. Place in Vancouver.

Ballard, who began his volleyball career wearing the yellow and gold of Howe Sound Secondary School, graduated from UBC last spring and currently resides in Calgary where the national team is based. He returned to Japan Saturday for a week of practice and preparation before the World Championships in Tokyo and Osaka Nov. 17-30.

He was also an all-Canadian academic.

The World Championships is the second test for the national team in its quest to compete at the summer Olympic Games in Atlanta in July. A top-three finish at the 12-team tournament would assure Canada an Olympic berth. Last year, Canada placed ninth at the worlds, and is currently ranked the same.

Realistically, unless the team can pull off a major upset, Canada will have to wait until a regional Olympic qualifying event in Edmonton in spring. If Cuba, ranked fourth in the world, places in the three at the world championships, Canada's chances of the Edmonton event become even greater. The United States ranked third in the world already qualified for the Olympic Games in a NORCECA — one of five regions in the world and includes all the countries in the Americas — tournament in September in Edmonton. The United States and Cuba will provide Canada with the greatest challenge. NORCECA. Puerto Rico and Mexico are the two other NORCECA countries which could mount a challenge to Canada's Olympic bid.

A NORCECA tournament Dec. 12-16 and another Olympic qualifying games tournament in May in Edmonton will be final opportunities for Canada to qualify for the Olympic Games if the team has already done so by then. Ballard will be connected through Squamish after the World Championship experience around Dec. 3, said father Frank, before he headed to Victoria to receive the Premier's Sports Award from Premier Mike Harcourt Dec. 5.

Squamish skaters golden at regional championships

Patricia Heintzman

Squamish figure skaters impressed judges and spectators alike at the B.C. Regional Figure Skating Championships in Powell River Nov. 8-11. A group of six competitors from the Squamish Skating Club brought home two gold medals and two provincial championship titles.

Keegan Murphy continued to dazzle the judges as he won the pre-novice men's event. Murphy, whose mother Eileen is the SSC coach, is touted as one of the province's most promising young stars, and lived up to this expectations at the Powell River event. The win at the provincial level in the pre-skate program gives Murphy a berth in the Western Divisional Championships in Medicine Hat, Alta. the first week in December. This year marks the first time pre-novice skaters will compete at the divisional level. Murphy also experienced a few moments of fame as CBC television did a story on him last week.

Squamish's other golden skaters are juvenile dance competitors Dallas Smith and Morgan Price. Price and Smith won both the compulsory dance and the variations aspects of the event and in doing so, came away with the title of provincial champions.

Smith, competing individually in his first regional event in novice, was ninth in the original program and seventh in the free-skating event for a seventh place overall finish. Smith was just behind fellow men's novice skater from Squamish, Gordon Harrison, who fell just short of the top four cut off that will represent B.C. at the divisional competition. Harrison was fourth in the original program and fifth in the free skate to slip to fifth place overall. As an alternate for the provincial team, Harrison will take one of the top four finishers' places if injury prevents them from competing in Medicine Hat.

Ryan Shollert is off to a good start in his first season as a junior competitor. Last year Shollert was the top men's novice skater in the province. He has made the jump to the extremely competitive world of junior with relative ease, says Eileen Murphy. Shollert was eighth after the original program but pulled together an impressive sixth-place in the free skate, to give him sixth place overall.

Cyclones lose barnburner

Patricia Heintzman

The sound of sticks striking shin pads, lost tempers and pucks ricocheting off goal posts became constant as the Squamish Cyclones faced visiting PoCo Blues Sunday. But when the tempers settled, and the chippy play was over, it was the Blues who persevered in a 6-4 win.

No serious fights broke out in the game but passion ran hot from the first drop of the puck and by the time the final buzzer sounded, several players from both teams were already in the dressing room with game misconduct penalties. The flow of the game was also marred by several injuries and scuffles which kept the referee and linesmen busy discussing calls around the scorekeeper's box.

PoCo struck first and by the midpoint of the second period, the visitors had a 5-1 lead. At that point, Cyclones goalie Rob Cybak lost his temper and was ejected from the game. Cybak will probably be suspended from the league for three to five games and has been suspended indefinitely from the Cyclones, said coach John Bradbury.

"That was a little embarrassing. We're trying to promote a family atmosphere. That sort of childish behavior will not be tolerated on any team of mine."

It looked as though the Cyclones would continue to sink at that point as the Blues had a two-man advantage for nearly five minutes. But with only three skaters on the ice, the Cyclones scored two short-handed goals to narrow the margin to 5-3. The Blues got one of the goals back against substitute goalie Darrin Yonin just seconds after the major penalties expired, for 6-3 lead.

The Cyclones appeared to score as the buzzer sounded to end the second period, but the goal was disallowed because the referee said time had run out before the puck crossed the goal line.

Yonin held the Blue scoreless in the abbreviated 10-minute third period. But the home team could manage only one more marker and lost 6-4.

The Cyclones have a two-week hiatus before playing again in the West Coast Senior AA Hockey League. The time off will hopefully allow several key players to recover from injuries. The Cyclones host the New Westminster Beavers Nov. 25 at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre arena.

Goalie makes Lower Mainland ringette team

By Patricia Heintzman

Evelyn Schellenberg continues to make her mark on the provincial ringette scene. As one of two goalies on the Lower Mainland Ringette belle all-star team, Schellenberg is the only player from the Howe Sound area to make the team.

Two years ago, the Howe Sound Secondary School Grade 12 student made the Lower Mainland junior belle team and represented British Columbia at the national championships. Schellenberg will earn her second trip to the national championships this year if the Lower Mainland team beats an all-star squad from the interior in a provincial playdown.

Lack of players in her age group forced Schellenberg to join the North/West Vancouver team.

Schellenberg's attraction to the position of goalie was a natural one. Her older brother played between the posts as well.

Twelve years have passed since Schellenberg first laced up skates as a ringette goalie. Her stand-up style and butterfly reflexes are the skills she brings to any team with which she plays. But it is her mental toughness that sets her apart from many of her peers. She has developed the reputation as a goalie who makes the big saves under pressure.

Schellenberg's ringette schedule with the Lower Mainland all-star team includes several practices and exhibition games in the next two months. Provincial playdowns against the B.C. interior all-star team Dec. 16-17 in Enderby. The winning team wins a berth in the National Championships Gloucester, Ont. March 30-April 7.

Peewee rep undefeated in season and home openers

By Patricia Heintzman

The Howe Sound peewee rep team continues its strong play going into the regular season with an undefeated record after two games. The peewee Eagles opened the season with a 4-2 win against the Mission Stars Friday in Mission. Ryan Chapman led the way with a three-point performance including two goals. Scott Harrison followed with a goal and an assist and David Smillie tallied the lone goal. Nick Ciuk, Brandon Hurren and Dino Pagliardi contributed with a helper each.

End to end action continued Sunday as the Eagles took on visiting Killarney. The suspense-filled game resulted in a 2-2 tie. Brad Cameron scored Howe Sound's first marker, assisted by Hurren. Smillie scored his second goal of the year as Karl Lemcke and Cameron assisted on the play.

The Howe Sound Eagles peewee rep team boasted a 5-4-2 winning record after tiering round play. All minor hockey teams compete a series of tiering/exhibition games to determine which league teams will play in during the season. Backed by the solid goaltending of Mike Hewitt, who had three shutouts in 11 games, the team put together several solid efforts.

Top scorers Kris Furmanek, who had 12 goals and four assists in 11 games, and Harrison (six goals, 10 assists) and the strong two-way play of Chapman (seven goals and, six assists) led the way for the Eagles. Cameron and Ciuk also contributed with strong play and have 12 and 11 points respectively after tiering play.

The defensive core of Hurren, Kyle Misewich, Pagliardi and Jason Vandergaag worked hard to keep the team's goals against to a minimum. The team boasted a 53 goals, 25 goals against record, which is a sign of the team's good work effort, says coach Robin Hurren.

Under the tutelage of coaches Hurren and Rob Lemcke, the team traveled to Whistler, Grandview, Richmond, the Agrodome at Arbutus during tiering. Only PoCo in an exhibition game, and Seafair in tiering, showed clear domination of the Eagles. Both Seafair and PoCo ended up in a higher tier than Howe Sound in regular season play. The Howe Sound peewee Eagles rep team is tier III and travels to Seattle Sunday. The team's next home game is Monday at 7 p.m. at the leisure centre arena.

The Sea to Sky corridor has not been known as a hotbed for table tennis.

But it was heavy duty, industrial-strength coaching and playing power at Diamond Head Billiards Wednesday night as coach Simi Johal was joined by some of the province's best table tennis players to help her conduct the third of four free clinics. The four-week clinic will be capped off with a tournament Saturday.

Among the talented table tennis players who ventured up Hwy. 99 Wednesday were the British Columbia Table Tennis Association junior development coach Tse Yiutak, the current president of the BCTTA C.Y. Chan, and Chandra Madhosingh, who coached Johal when she was a member of the provincial table tennis team 10 years ago.

Whistler resident and European champion contender from the Czech Republic, Jana Mrstikova, was also on hand to lend her expertise to the clinic.

The visiting table tennis talent played demonstration games of singles and doubles and helped Johal coach the participants of the clinic.

The Howe Sound area is now part of BCTTA zone 6 on the B.C. table tennis map. Tryouts for the B.C. Winter Games are in North Vancouver. Call the BCTTA office at 604-737-3012 for more information about the Winter Games, the B.C. Closed Tournament Jan. 20-21, the Richmond Open Feb. 10-11 and the B.C. and Chinatown Open March 16-17.

A progressive table tennis tournament continues at Diamond Head Billiards.
