

New life for industrial park hotel proposal

Council adopts a vision to form basis of official community plan amendment

by Patricia Heintzman

A new vision for land use in the Squamish industrial park has given a proposed hotel in the park new life. Municipal council adopted a land use plan developed by the economic development committee which facilitates the development of not only the hotel, but also extends industrial park use to include service, tourism and recreation, high technology, light industry, institutional services and a factory outlet mall.

Council voted at a November meeting to table a request by the proponents of the proposed hotel to amend the official community plan and a zoning bylaw to allow for service, tourism and commercial development on the highway frontage site. The request was tabled until the EDC report outlining a vision for the industrial park was complete.

Following the adoption of a land use plan for the industrial park Tuesday at council, the planning department was directed to look into rezoning the highway frontage land to accommodate the hotel. The rezoning request will probably be given first reading at the next council meeting Feb. 6, said Mayor Corinne Monsdale.

The debate over industrial park land use at the economic development committee level was far from unanimous, said Coun. Meg Fellowes, except on the issue of not permitting office development.

After thorough consideration, four options were brought forward and voted on by the committee as possible visions for the industrial park. The main discrepancy between the options had to do with the inclusion or exclusion of a factory outlet mall.

Council rejected the recommendation of the committee to adopt option three as developed by the EDC. Option three encompasses a vision for both phase 1 and phase 2 of the park, and features service and tourist commercial highway frontage, high technology located in the northeast corner of the park, heavy industry in the southern section and a mix of light industrial and recreational and institutional uses in the central and northern sectors. No specific designation was given for factory outlet mall.

Planning Made Simple

Director of planning Margaret Thornton was the guest speaker at a Howe Sound and District Chamber of Commerce luncheon Tuesday at the Squamish Valley Golf and Country Club. She clarified the intricacies of planning to the audience and touched on the new vision for the industrial park supported by municipal council Tuesday. Patricia Heintzman photo

They voted instead in favor of option one, which includes an area designated for a factory outlet mall with some highway frontage.

In debate over the inclusion of a factory outlet at council Tuesday, Coun. Ted Craddock spoke in favor of option one. He said a factory outlet would become an attraction for many visitors to the area, and emphasized its importance in developing phase 2 of the park.

"They are the only people asking for a significant portion of the land in phase 2," Craddock said. "I wouldn't be pleased to drop the factory outlet mall because it would provide jobs."

Fellowes disagreed, stating a factory outlet mall would bring "hordes of people" which would add to the "people pollution" in the area.

By including a factory outlet mall in the industrial park vision "we're saying we're not committed to industrial", she said.

Coun. Bill McNeney joined Fellowes in her vote against option one, but the motion passed.

The inclusion of a factory outlet mall is also not supported by the membership of the chamber of commerce.

Option one will now become the basis of an official community plan amendment.

Recreational and institutional uses will be added to the uses in phase 1 of the industrial park.

Provisional budget deficit to be worked on, final budget yet to come

by Patricia Heintzman

A deficit plagues the municipal provisional budget, leaving much room for improvement, says Coun. Ron Barr. "We're in pretty bad shape. Let's hope we get some BCR money or something," he said in response to a general revenue fund deficit of $2,446,027 this year.

The provisional budget is a working document which will be improved upon through the administration review process. Administrator Bob Miles said the department reviews should be wrapped up by the end of January. "We're looking at the end of February for the budget," he added.

Once the reviews are complete, they will be

"When staff promise certain things we should expect those things."

— Coun. Meg Fellowes

submitted to council for discussion, amendment and ratification. The provisional budget is required to authorize expenditures which take place between Jan. 1 and the adoption of the final budget. For example, roof repairs at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre will proceed under the authority of the provisional budget.

Treasurer Kim Anema expressed concern that departments have not conformed to budget requirements. "We're not getting results here," he said. "I don't find it too good."

Coun. Meg Fellowes added that significant variances in the budget cannot be tolerated. "When staff promise certain things we should expect those things."

Cuerrier appeal could set a precedent for public policy

By Patricia Heintzman

A potentially precedent setting case in the B.C. Court of Appeal involving a Squamish man who withheld information on his HIV status from two female sexual partners has been adjourned until June. Three judges made the decision Thursday to adjourn the case until June 18-19 to allow five justices to preside because of the implication the case could have on public policy in Canada.

The case against Henry Cuerrier began June 29, 1994 when he was arrested and charged with two counts of aggravated assault related to the withholding of his positive HIV status. He was subsequently held in custody without bail for six months due to the risk he posed to society. He was eventually acquitted of both charges in B.C. Supreme Court last January.

Trial Judge, Ian Drost, ruled there was insufficient evidence to convict the 32-year-old Cuerrier. Drost concluded that both women consented to have unprotected sex, even if they weren't informed of Cuerrier's condition, and therefore the degree of fraud was not clear. Crown prosecutor's said at that time they would appeal the decision.

When an appeal was initially submitted, Crown prosecutor William Ehrcke requested the appeal be reviewed by a five-judge division because of the precedent setting potential of the case with respect to public policy. But only three judges were slated to hear the case Thursday in Vancouver, at which time both Ehrcke and defence lawyer Douglas Stewart were prepared to argue the appeal.

Ehrcke began to outline the case and initial trial, but the relevance to public policy and the impact a successful appeal would have on an existing law soon became apparent to the three judges hearing the appeal.

If an appeal in the Cuerrier case is successful, it would set a precedent regarding consent obtained by fraud, and make withholding information on a person's HIV status when having sexual intercourse a criminal offense under the Criminal Code of Canada.

Ehrcke is basing the appeal on the belief Drost "erred in concluding no evidence."

"His (Drost's) finding was that in law, there was no evidence of lack of consent," said Ehrcke. "Silence under these circumstances constitutes fraud."

Cuerrier tested HIV-positive in August 1992. Human immunodeficiency virus is believed to be linked to acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS). He was told at that time by a public health nurse at Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit he should inform his sexual partners of his HIV status before consenting to sex, and that he must use a condom to prevent the possible spread of the virus. He responded by telling the nurse he would not do that because it would detrimentally affect his sex life, said Ehrcke during the appeal. One month later he initiated a sexual relationship with the first woman.

In June 1994, the health unit sent Cuerrier a letter telling him he must inform his sexual partners of his status and use condoms during sexual intercourse. A few days later he engaged in a sexual relationship with the second woman.

During the trial a year ago, both alleged victims said they were not informed by Cuerrier of his status and would not have had sexual intercourse with him, especially unprotected intercourse, had they known of his status. Those facts were accepted by Drost, said Ehrcke.

One of the victims, a woman, said she had been charged with a weapon charge and was found to be HIV positive. She had been tested for HIV nine months before the trial and found to be positive.

"Assault becomes aggravated assault if endangering a life," said Ehrcke. "This man, by his conduct, placed the women at risk of contracting HIV." In the case both of the women's lives were endangered, he said. The fact that neither woman tested positive for HIV is immaterial.

Ehrcke said that during the original trial, the judge was influenced by a similar case in Ontario in which a man was acquitted of criminal negligence for withholding his HIV status.

In that case, the victims contracted HIV. The case was in the midst of an appeal when the accused died. The appeal was therefore never completed.

In the end, Ehrcke didn't have a chance to completed his summation Thursday. The three judges discussed the importance of the case with respect to public policy, and adjourned the appeal until June 18 to allow a five-judge division to preside over the matter.

Ehrcke was instructed by the judges to canvass interested groups which might be interested in the public policy issues at the core of the case. The group may be given status to intervene in the appeal through appearance in court or memorandum submissions.

RCMP seek help in rash of car fires

Squamish RCMP are asking for help from the public in finding the cuprits responsible for three car fires behind Westway Village. Two cars were extensively damaged in the area at approximately 1 a.m. Jan. 18.

Another car was deliberately set on fire at approximately 7:56 p.m. that night. Thanks to two people who were passing by and immediately called police, the third car was not badly damaged.

Anyone with information on any of these incidents is asked to call the RCMP at 898-9611 or Crimestoppers at 892-TIPS (892-8477).

Correction

The hours supplied by the B.C. Paint Care Association and published in The Squamish Chief last week for the permanent paint collection facility at Carney's Waste Systems, 116 Queens Way in the Squamish industrial park were incorrect. The proper hours of operation are from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Our apologies for any inconvenience.

Injured man charged with possession of an illegal weapon

Police attempts to assist an injured man outside the Chieftain Hotel at 4:45 p.m. Friday were met with resistance. Squamish RCMP were called to assist the man, who had an injured hand and may have been in need of medical attention.

Refusing medical attention from ambulance attendants and becoming extremely uncooperative with police, the man was arrested and taken to Squamish General Hospital for treatment.

At that time, a sawed off shotgun was discovered tucked in the man's pants behind his back, underneath his jacket. The man was charged with possession of a prohibited weapon and is scheduled to appear in court in Squamish this week.

Trustees approve French school

By Patricia Heintzman

French speaking families in the area will be able to enroll their children in a French school in accordance with the provincial School Act and the Canadian Charter of Rights in the next school year.

A year ago, nine families approached the school board about developing a Programme Cadre de Français in the Squamish area. Under the Charter of Rights, francophone students are entitled to a French school program as long as there are 10 students. As many as 13 students are now committed to the program, says Marie St. Pierre, who began looking for francophones interested in starting a Programme Cadre in the community in 1993.

Trustees approved a recommendation from assistant superintendent of schools Judith Knapp to establish a Programme Cadre in the Squamish area beginning September 1996.

St. Pierre says she believes more francophone families will come forward as the word gets out that Programme Cadre has started in Squamish. A similar program has existed in Whistler since 1991. The program had only eight students when it began, but there are 40 francophone students enrolled in Programme Cadre at Whistler's Myrtle Philip School.

Since the number of francophone students is still relatively small, all students ranging from Kindergarten to Grade 7, will be taught in a mixed-grade program. St. Pierre says the francophone students who will be enrolled in Programme Cadre in the new year range from Kindergarten to Grade 4.

Programme Cadre in Squamish will probably be fashioned after the one in Whistler, says St. Pierre, but much will depend on the direction of the new teacher. In Whistler, the French students are paired with a buddy in another class so minimal segregation occurs. Programme Cadre students are also involved and integrated with other students during school activities.

Three locations, Stawamus, Valleycliffe and Mamquam elementary schools, are being considered as possible locations for the French school. But Knapp says the existing French immersion program in Grade 6, and the possibility of combining resources in the library at Mamquam Elementary School might have a bearing on the final decision.

Now that St. Pierre and the other parents who intend to enroll their children in Programme Cadre have been assured the program will go ahead, there still remains uncertainty about funding. The Howe Sound School District is responsible for little of the funding for Programme Cadre. Federal and provincial grants provide funds for start-up. The school district's responsibilities are to provide a facility within a school for the students.

St. Pierre says the parents are aware of the problems associated with a bare-bones Programme Cadre due to the uncertainty of funding because of the possible amalgamation of school districts. But she adds they are also aware of the benefits: being taught in their mother-tongue and being bilingual.

"It is very difficult to remain bilingual in Squamish without any French influences," says St. Pierre. "When TV is in English, and everything is taught in English, and conversations between friends are in English, it is very easy to lose your French."

Mamquam Blind Channel could benefit from urban salmon habitat program

By Patricia Heintzman

Fish habitat in the Mamquam Blind Channel area may get a boost from government sources as council applies to B.C. Environment for funding under the urban salmon habitat program. Rapid urbanization and growth throughout the municipality, with the development of land for residential, commercial and industrial purposes, encroaches on traditional fish habitat areas by altering drainage and the quality and quantity of salmonid habitat, says director of community planning Margaret Thornton in the application.

The purpose of the urban salmon habitat program is to provide grants up to $50,000 for municipal governments to undertake salmon habitat assessment and protection projects. The focus of the grant application is to hire a coordinator who will provide an enhanced fish habitat case study to address numerous issues such as drainage patterns, public education and recreational use for a detailed analysis of the upper Mamquam Blind Channel — identified in the Squamish Estuary Management Plan as an area in need of habitat improvement. Along with fishery enhancement, the task of looking into park development will be addressed. Public education is also an important component of the project if it should get funding, and the coordinator's role will include salmon habitat education and developing stream stewardship goals for the area.

The work done by who ever is hired to examine the Mamquam Blind Channel will build on an existing report entitled, Vision for the Upper Reaches Mamquam Blind Channel, prepared in December by the municipality. In conjunction with the district of Squamish and other government agencies, the project coordinator will investigate the feasibility of rewatering the upper Mamquam Blind Channel and initiate a review of planning assessment areas that encroach on the channel.

The maximum grant of $50,000 will be applied for by the municipality to cover the proposed contract for the project.

Inquiry reveals death could have been prevented

By Patricia Heintzman

Findings of a coroners inquiry emphasized serious safety hazards in operating a motor vehicle which has a combination of radial and bias ply tires. The inquiry into the death Mary Ellen Parson of Squamish also revealed the circumstances of her death were preventable, and the existence of serious flaws in the mechanical service of Parsons' vehicle.

Parsons died as a result of injuries sustained in a two-vehicle accident June 12, 1995 when she lost control while negotiating a corner on Hwy. 99 just south of Loggers Creek. The jaws of life were used to extract Parsons from her car. She was rushed by ambulance to Lions Gate Hospital where she was pronounced dead on arrival. Due to the circumstances of her death, an autopsy was ordered by the B.C. Coroners Service.

Although the autopsy revealed no evidence of alcohol, opiates or prescription drugs in her blood system, the inspection of Parson's vehicle by the motor vehicle branch of the Ministry of Transportation and Highways found serious mechanical problems.

A pre-existing leak in the power steering system of Parson's car probably made the steering of her vehicle very stiff, says the coroners service report. In addition, the front wheels were out of alignment.

"But the most serious problem," says the report by coroner

Peter Gordon of Squamish, "was that the vehicle was equipped with radial tires on the front axle and bias ply snow tires on the rear axle. This is not permitted in British Columbia.

"The effect of this configuration is that the driver is subject to losing control of the vehicle when cornering on wet pavement. It would appear that this is what happened in this particular case."

Service records obtained during the coroner's inquiry indicate bias ply snow tires had been installed "by a bona fide automobile mechanical shop" on the car which was already equipped with radial tires approximately seven months before the accident. This "is a concern," said Gordon in the report.

Recommendations by Gordon as a result of the inquiry have been forwarded to, among others, the executive director of the Automotive Retailers Association. In it, Gordon recommends the "association consider sending a memorandum to all association members emphasizing the serious safety hazard of operating a motor vehicle that has the combination of radial and bias ply tires. And further that they be informed operating a vehicle in this condition is illegal and they should refuse the request to install tires in this configuration."

The recommendations also extend to include guidelines that would ensure any service done on a vehicle complies with the Motor Vehicle Act of and that after service, the vehicle is safe for operation.

Gordon says although automotive repair shops may be aware of the danger involved with the operation of a vehicle equipped with a mixture of radial and bias ply tire, "they may not fully appreciate the extent of the danger, and this is illegal."

Gordon recommends forwarding the provincial apprenticeship board, Ministry of Skills and Labor, that it consider "among its criteria for qualification automotive mechanics include a code of conduct which compels mechanics to ensure none of the work they carry out is in contravention of the Motor Vehicle Act or other laws."

Gordon also recommends appropriate action be taken, including suspension or cancellation of licenses, should a certificate holder be found in violation of the proposed code.

"There appears to be a lack of criteria to be met pertaining to conduct and ethics," said Patricia Gordon in the inquiry report. "The general public has a low expectation that licensed mechanics will not and should not be expected to carry out work which, when completed, will render the vehicle unsafe or illegal to travel or unsafe."

A copy of the inquiry report has been sent to Ministers, including Skills and Labor Dan Miller, and the Minister of Transportation and Highways Jackie Peme-

Urgency of new schools to be conveyed to ministry

Patricia Heintzman

Discrepancies between the school board and the Ministry of Education's capital projects carrying plan have trustees concerned the need for more schools in the school district will not be met.

The differences concern the priority of several projects, including upgrades of Signal Hill Elementary School and Pemberton and Squamish elementary schools from high, prioritized by the school district, to medium, as indicated by the province. Also, funding for other capital projects in the district, such as renovations at Howe Sound Secondary School, were completely omitted in the Ministry of Education's 1996/97 capital plan — year one project requests.

Trustees voted to send a letter to Education Minister Art Charbonneau expressing the board's concerns about these and other discrepancies.

The issue of inadequate school facilities for the growing population in Pemberton is of utmost concern, said trustee Janet Systad at the school board meeting Jan. 17. She and the rest of the trustees agreed an upgrade of Signal Hill and the development of another elementary school in the Pemberton area are both high priorities, and the urgency and importance of the projects needs to be expressed to the Ministry of Education.

The two other projects deemed to be of the highest priority by the Howe Sound school district are a new Whistler elementary school and a Brackendale Secondary School addition and upgrade to increase the capacity of the school. Both received high status from the province.

In a letter to all school boards in the province, Charbonneau warned that as a result of "deep cuts in federal transfer payment, the Ministry of Education will experience reductions in its capital envelopes allocated for the upcoming capital year and the foreseeable future."

The Howe Sound School District may have an advantage in receiving funding for new schools because the district already owns land in the Pemberton area, the old Pemberton Secondary School location, on which a new elementary school could be constructed.

But uncertainty about the education minister's proposed amalgamation plan with the Sunshine Coast and Powell River districts continues to cast an ominous shadow on any educational needs and proposals in the district.

School board firing
steeped in irony

Education Minister Art Charbonneau shocked the North Vancouver School Board last week when he fired the entire board. For months the trustees have been wrestling with an accumulated debt of $5 million with little success.

Charbonneau had asked the board this year to retire $500,000 of the debt. But trustees said the district was underfunded, and the Ministry of Education was unwilling to help the district. So they were fired.

There are a couple of delicious ironies in Charbonneau's actions.

In 1985, the Social Credit government of the day fired the entire Vancouver School Board for the same reasons. And the NDP, then in opposition, called it "A black day for democracy." Has something changed?

Also, Charbonneau is a cabinet minister in a government which has presided over massive increases in the provincial debt during its term of office, hiding the debt in Crown corporations while claiming to have "balanced" its budget. And he is a minister in a government which has made political recall next to impossible.

School boards just can't go around running up massive debts. But there is so much political tinkering in the education system these days, with mandated programs but little funding. And the funding formulae are inconsistent at best. Perhaps the North Vancouver School Board is well rid of its current problem. Let the minister deal with it, if he can.

More irony in Clark's
call for bingo inquiry

Probably more significant in terms of irony on the provincial political scene last week was NDP leadership hopeful Glen Clark's announcement that if he becomes premier, he will call a public inquiry into the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society bingo scandal. This is the same Glen Clark, as Minister of Employment and Investment, who maintained cabinet solidarity with his leader Mike Harcourt in saying, up until a week ago, that a public inquiry was not necessary.

But the politics of leadership does strange things to a person. Clark now claims a public inquiry is the only way to clear the air. And none of his cabinet colleagues seems inclined to disagree, perhaps knowing Clark will become leader, and as such will have the power to organize his own cabinet.

Wasn't it just three short weeks ago that another possible leadership contender, Nelson Riis of Kamloops, was virtually chased from the race when he announced he would call a public inquiry into the bingo scandal if he became premier? And wasn't it just a couple of weeks before Riis was slapped down that another leadership contender, Joan Smallwood, was booted from cabinet by Harcourt for mildly criticizing his handling of the scandal?

Conveniently for Clark, Harcourt was out of the country when he announced his intentions. It will be interesting when he returns this week to hear what he thinks of Clark's plan. Because Harcourt is still premier, and Clark is still a cabinet minister until the NDP convention in February. Clark has obviously decided Harcourt is premier in name only.

Clark has also obviously decided his move is the only way to blunt criticism from the Liberals and Reformers. But the decision could come back to haunt him, unless he calls an election immediately after winning the leadership, as most expect he will. Even then, unless the terms of the inquiry are acceptable to all, Clark could still suffer a backlash.

Notes from all over

Throughout my occasional forays into the world of sports in my column over the years, I have wondered in the back of my mind how long the Ben Johnson drug scandal would hang over the heads of those who compete for Canada in track and field.

It appears the hangover continues, if the recent choice of national Athlete of the Year is any measure.

Two Canadian sprinters, Donovan Bailey and Bruny Surin, had what could only be called banner years on the international track and field scene last year. Surin has been running world class times since the early 1990s, but is better known in Europe than he ever has been at home. And Bailey only managed to become the top 100-metre sprinter in the world last year, winning a gold medal in that event at the World Track and Field Championships in Gothenburg, Sweden. Surin came a close second in that race, and the pair ended the year ranked numbers one and two in the world.

I watched the race on TV, and was really proud that Canada could have the top two sprinters in the world on the day. But it was not the intensity of pride I had when I saw Johnson win the 100-metres at the Olympics in Seoul, Korea. That brought tears to my eyes, and a deep seated anger in my heart a few hours later when I heard the first reports about Johnson's positive drug test.

I suspect the Athlete of the Year judges experienced the same trepidation as I had when they voted for the country's top athlete last year. They chose Jacques Villeneuve, admittedly a talented driver, but he needs a car to go fast. And a team of engineers and mechanics to make sure the car is in top shape. Without them, and the fuel for the car, Villeneuve would go nowhere.

To be sure, there are also athletic talents needed, strength, stamina, reflexes and coordination. But somehow in the field of athletic endeavor, I rate race car driving in the same category as equestrian events or horse racing. I think the horses should get as much, if not more, recognition than the rider.

All Bailey needs is a pair of sneakers and a pair of shorts. The rest is up to him.

Before the Johnson fiasco, a world champion runner in Canada would have been a lock for Athlete of the Year. This year, Donovan Bailey got hosed by a ghost from the past.

free water to be poured into plastic bottle worth pennies and sold to me in my weakest moment by a convenience store clerk earning minimum wage to now be told it might be full of bugs which don't even have the decency to let me see them.

I guess I'll have to go back to my best trick from my young days, purifying any water I drink, be it from a tap or a bottle. I long ago reasoned that good scotch makes a fine antibacterial agent. And if I'm wrong, will I really care?

As I See It

By Al Price

Even though it has become trendy over the years, or perhaps because of that, I've never had much to do with bottled water. Just couldn't see the sense in paying through the nose for what Mother Nature provided in abundance.

That attitude changed last summer, however, when Cathie and I were in California. It was stinking hot, and we could only drink so much wine. When it's 30 degrees centigrade at 9 a.m., you know wine isn't going to get you through the day without severe dehydration, so we broke down and bought bottled water. It was a godsend.

Then last week I read in the Vancouver Sun that one out of every six bottled waters tested failed to meet federal health standards for bacteria levels. Terrific. I have finally been convinced of the value of spending several dollars for essentially on TV Saturday night, and thought it was horrible. In a bid to make the game more appealing to American viewers, FOX TV has invented a computer chip which, when installed in the puck, makes it leave either red or blue comet trails across the TV screen so you can see where the puck is going. The differing colors relate to how fast the puck is moving.

I'm all for improving sports when they need it, but this invention is strictly off the wall. I was so distracted by the red and blue flame trails flying around the screen I couldn't concentrate on the hockey game, so I went back to my book. But it made me wonder what's next? Perhaps next Sunday for the Super Bowl we'll see a view from a minicam installed in the football's helmet. We can tell if the quarterback has thrown a spiral or not. Perhaps the Graval.

Hilltop support appreciated

Editor,

An open letter to the people of Squamish: Our sincerest thanks to all of you for your monetary support in the beginning and for your continuing support, all of which has made the Hilltop House wheelchair accessible van project such an outstanding success.

Our (your) van has been in operation for three years now and here are some notes of interest: The van is regularly scheduled for the Hilltop residents on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Weekday trips and evening outings also take place at times.

The van was purchased because the HandyDart was unable to meet all the needs of the Hilltop House residents. For example, the HandyDart does not run on Saturday, Sunday, evenings or holidays.

On average, each day the van goes out, it accommodates five to six residents. Around 20-25 different residents use the van each month, some of them four to eight times a month.

The residents themselves suggested in the beginning that they pay $1 per day for use.

In three years we have driven the van 30,000 kilometres.

And where would we be without drivers! Our sincerest thanks to all the following for being such dedicated and reliable volunteers: M. Baynham, C. Thurston, N. McLeod, M. England, F. McKenzie, R. Chapman, T. Aldridge, H. Midgley, D. Plaisance, T. Keeler, L. Conway, K. Guilbride, J. Gould, L. McMullen, P. Erskine, D. Schumacher, P. Fletcher, N. Rutherford, J. Dendekker, O. Olafsson, L. Zander, K. Newington, G. Halvorson.

Anyone interested in driving and/or joining the Hilltop House Support Society, please call Olaf, at 898-2388, or Betty Lloyd, at 892-3888. We are always looking for new members.

B.C. Rail project awaits approvals

Editor,

In response to your Jan. 9 article (B.C. Rail jumps the gun) concerning the railway's removal of trees on 600 feet of its property:

After receiving information that the land was within the Squamish Estuary Management Plan's boundaries, B.C. Rail immediately ceased work and has made every effort to follow appropriate procedures. We have filed an application with the Squamish Estuary Environmental Action Committee (SEEAC), whose written reply stated: "Since the area in question does not have serious environmental concerns, our committee approves of this work," subject to conditions.

Although the land in question is already within the commercial industrial zone of the estuary management plan, Squamish council has advised us there is a new municipal zoning bylaw, which we will adhere to before restarting work.

This land has remained untouched since October and will remain so until appropriate approvals have been received.

Ka-lei-do-scope

By Kiki Lightburn

I know there is a lot of controversy over whether condom machines should be put in schools. Some say it's immoral, some say it will encourage teens to have sex. What would you rather, four out of 10 teens having totally unprotected sex, or six out of 10 teens practicing safe sex? The second option would be my choice. Maybe it is time to take some action before the pregnancy rate gets higher. Talk about it, read about it, but don't ignore it, because really it affects us all.

Ka-lei-do-scope is written by a group of students from Brackendale Secondary School.

Editor,

It was reassuring to see letters from the opposition side printed in the Jan. 9 edition of our local paper. The letters from Trudy McKay and David Young were precise and to the point. Trudy posed a question which my husband and I have been asking for months, that is: Whose best interests are really being served in this issue? There's something rotten in the state of Denmark, and it's not dead fish or effluent from the Whistler sewage treatment plant.

The stench is emanating from the offices of four municipal councillors.

Whistler Secondary to open with a full range of courses

By Patricia Heintzman

After much debate, a decision about course implementation at Whistler Secondary and Pemberton Secondary School has been made. Both schools will open with a full range of subjects for the 1996/97 school year. The school board voted on a motion to support a proposal by superintendent Doug Courtice in conjunction with PSS principal Ron Albertin and principal in waiting at Whistler Secondary, Rick Smith.

The issues surrounding the opening of WS have been hotly debated by parents and students in both communities concerned that the range of subjects available would be compromised if grades 11 and 12 were offered at both schools.

"They won't have underwater basket weaving," said trustee Constance Rulka at the Jan. 15 school board meeting. "But both schools will have the same range of subjects (currently available at PSS)."

The plan outlined by Courtice provides funding for additional teachers needed to provide a full range of subjects to the students.

The debate was also influenced by the ambiguity of when and where the Education Minister Art Charbonneau's amalgamation plans to disassemble the existing school boards comes through. Funding uncertainty forced the trustees to hesitate at the December school board meeting at which a motion put forward by trustee Mike Moorehouse that Grade 11 and Grade 12 remain at Pemberton Secondary School was tabled. Moorehouse's motion was taken off the table at the Jan. 15 meeting and amended by trustee Jan Systad to include the phasing in of grades 11 and 12 at Whistler Secondary over the next two years.

But all the other trustees voted against the motion and supported Courtice's plan that would see both secondary schools open in September.

The plan to implement a full range of course selection at both schools has been the school board's intention since 1993, when then superintendent Dallas Cristofoli developed and put forward a proposal to implement grades 11 and 12 simultaneously with grades 7 through 10 at Whistler Secondary. The board accepted the proposal in June 1993. The plan is even more relevant now, said Courtice, because the construction of Whistler Secondary was delayed for a year by the Ministry of Education and there are more students than initially anticipated for both of the secondary schools in the north of the Howe Sound School District.

It is still unclear how much of the $80 million in budget cuts that are to come from the provincial government will be the responsibility of the Howe Sound School District. Courtice said Steve Barnett, the finance and administration branch of the Ministry of Education assured him that there are no anticipated changes to the small secondary school grant which could affect course implementation at both schools.

Airport use goes to public hearing

Voices in support of or opposed to augmented service at Squamish municipal airport will be expressed at a public hearing Feb. 29 at 7 p.m. at the Howe Sound Secondary School community theatre. The public hearing is being held as part of the process to amend the official community plan to allow use of the airport to be changed from minimal use to industrial use. Pacific Cascade of Seattle has been in discussions with the municipality of Squamish for two years about bringing regularly scheduled flights from Seattle to the Squamish airport, providing access to Whistler.

A referendum will decide the fate of a proposed neighborhood pub near the Garibaldi Highlands bus depot. Municipal council passed a motion to contract the neighborhood pub referendum to Mark Trend Research to determine whether or not the residents within a one mile radius of the proposed pub are in favor of the class D liquor licence at 452 Government Road. The cost of the referendum, $9,500, will be paid by the applicant, David Tornes, a resident of Garibaldi Highlands. A public information meeting, scheduled for Jan. 31 at 7 p.m. at the Easter Seal Camp will precede the March 2 referendum, which will be held at the Easter Seal Camp from 10 a.m.-8 p.m.. Numeration for the referendum will be done during the week of Feb. 19.

A proposed duplex development in Garibaldi Estates was given third reading after the proponent went relatively unchallenged at a public hearing in council chambers Jan. 16. Developer Wilf Dowad's proposal to create seven duplexes on a 2.5 acre parcel of land requires rezoning from R1 to R2 to provide side-by-side duplexes. Deputy community planner Frank Limshue said at the public hearing he had received several letters both in support and opposition to Dowad's proposal. Letters opposed to the development cited concerns for aesthetics and the reduction in property value in the area.

But Dowad said the proposal is for higher-end duplexes which are not necessarily intended as rental properties, although there is nothing preventing people from investing in the property for that reason.

Only two residents from the surrounding area spoke out against the proposal. Their main concern was the possibility that the duplexes would become rental properties. Coun. Ron Barr supported the residents in their complaint, saying rental properties tend to be poorly maintained.

But councillors Ted Craddock and Bill McNeney said the stigma attached to duplexes and rental properties is unfounded. Craddock said the need for affordable housing in the area is immediate.

Council accepted the offer of licence from the province of British Columbia for diking purposes on the Mamquam and Squamish rivers. Right of way documents are also being prepared for the dikes to secure tenure for the municipality for the operation and maintenance of the diking system regardless of the ownership of the dikes.

A Squamish Senior Centre public workshop and open house will be held Thursday, Feb. 15, from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Elks Hall. The event, sponsored by the senior advisory commission, is being held to look into the needs of the seniors in the community which can be provided for in a new seniors centre facility.

Council is making an application to the Ministry of Highways for cost sharing under the 1996/97 cycling network program for a shoulder bike way on Buckley Avenue from Castle Crossing to Carson Place, and on Government Road from Eagle Run Drive to Depot Road. The projects will be included in the 1996 capital budget.

Students gain Internet access

By Patricia Heintzman

Information and technology students at Howe Sound Secondary School will soon be driving the information highway as part of a school district initiative to get on-line.

The pilot project, which should be up and running in the next few weeks, will provide students access to the Internet and the World Wide Web through a server specifically designed to meet the needs of the students. The first users of the new service will be the information and technology class at HSSS.

The opportunity for the students to access to the fastest growing informational source in the world is being coordinated by Mountain Internet of Squamish, and is funded through the 1995/96 school district technology budget, said school district superintendent Doug Courtice while updating the school board on the progress of the project Wednesday at the school board meeting.

Courtice said certain aspects of the Internet, such as pornography and other material not suitable for students, will be censored using a program that will allow only certain sites to be downloaded into the school's Internet system. One of the developers of the program is HS graduate Jason Fiset of Tantalus Technologies at Mountain Internet.

"This is an exciting new resource for the students," said Courtice. "This will provide the Howe Sound school board with its own server and provide a new educational resource for the students."

As the guinea pigs, HSSS students and staff will work out policies and put processes into place over the next six months so the Internet service can in the future be made available to other schools in the district. Minimizing the Mountain Internet contract to the end of June allows the students opportunity to experiment, but will enable the service to be shut down during the summer when the students aren't in school, Courtice said.

Proposed amalgamation takes its toll

The lengthy process of amalgamation continues to take its toll on the school district. Chair Don Wilson and superintendent Doug Courtice have been meeting with representatives from other school districts to look into options for the province's proposed amalgamation of Howe Sound with the Sunshine Coast and Powell River.

One of the options Wilson says the school district is looking at is a consortium option in which several school districts will share services but retain their autonomy. Courtice and Wilson will be meeting with Education Minister Art Charbonneau to discuss amalgamation in the coming weeks. There will be an open meeting on amalgamation Jan. 24 at 2:30 p.m. at the school board office on Second Avenue.

All school district construction projects are progressing well, said superintendent Doug Courtice in his construction update to the school board Wednesday. Renovation of B wing at Howe Sound Secondary School is progressing, and a celebration of the new wing is scheduled March 7 during Education Week, despite the fact the wing will not be completely finished by that time.

Whistler Secondary construction is progressing without delay, with the completion of the building set for March and the project completion on schedule for May.

Brackendale Elementary School construction is also on schedule, with building completion estimated to take place in April and demolition of the old school to happen in July.

Garibaldi Highlands Elementary construction was stalled in December, but crews are back at work in January.

The chef's training program at Howe Sound Secondary School, in cooperation with Capilano College, is in its third week and doing well, said superintendent Doug Courtice.

The new chef lab in the HSSS new addition is the place where 12 HSSS students and 12 Capilano College students are taking part in a cooperative program that could be the beginning of greater partnership in the future between the two educational facilities, Courtice said.

Department of Fisheries and Oceans personnel would like to enhance Cottonwood Creek on the Coast Mountain Outdoor School property. Estimates of the productivity of the stream producing salmon range from 2,000 to 3,000 a year, and the stream would like to see the stream preserved as a salmon enhancement area.

School district superintendent Doug Courtice has given permission to do a survey of the stream to see what enhancement work needs to be done in the area. An engineering report will also be submitted to the board to facilitate its decision whether or not an enhancement program should be initiated on the school district's property.

Depending on the amount and type of work involved in enhancement of the stream, students may be involved in the clean up and stewardship of the salmon producing riparian zone.

A motion passed last year designed to make Howe Sound district schools safer, tracks suspensions and their causes. A total of 220 school suspensions ranging in length from a half day to a full term, were handed out in the district's schools between September and December. Suspensions resulting from smoking related incidents topped the list with 11. Inappropriate behavior and language, and fighting were next with 41 and 40 respectively. Eighteen students were suspended for illicit drug use, 16 for harassment, 14 for inappropriate conduct and creating unsafe conditions, 12 for disobeying teacher, five were alcohol related, four were for truancy (failure to attend class), four for damaging school property and three students were suspended for stealing. Nine suspensions were referred to the board judgment.

The idea is to track the number of suspensions and determine if there is a decrease as a result of the new safer school policy, Courtice said.

Howe Sound school trustees voted on a name for the new secondary school in Whistler. The school's official name is Whistler Secondary Community School.

Missing teenager located

A teenage girl reported missing by her family to RCMP has been located. Const. Fran Bethell of the Squamish detachment said because of the media coverage of the disappearance of 15-year-old Charlene Adams, several calls were received following police to determine her whereabouts. "She is alive and well," said Bethell.

Some time overnight Jan. 10-11, the Squamish Soup Kitchen was entered through a window which was broken. Items stolen include some food, plastic containers and other material valued at $50. Police have no suspects.

Six hit and run incidents involving vehicles were reported to Squamish RCMP last week. The incidents were apparently not related.

A 37-year-old Squamish resident was charged with possession of marijuana under the Narcotic Control Act following a routine traffic stop Jan. 11. Const. Fran Bethell said the officer smelled marijuana after he dropped the car and a subsequent search of the driver enhanced up 13 grams of the drug.

Sometime overnight Jan. 11-12, attempts were made to break in through the back doors of a number of businesses in the Chieftain Centre. No entry was gained to any of the businesses, though pry marks were found on the doors. Const. Fran Bethell said the investigating officer attributed the lack of success by the culprits to increased security measures taken by business owners.

At 8:30 a.m. Jan. 12 a vehicle sustained $4,000 in damage when it struck a tree across from the golf course on Mamquam Road. The driver was taken to hospital with minor injuries. Ice on the road was determined to have caused the mishap, and no charges were laid. Ten minutes later another accident occurred when a vehicle on Loggers Lane hit black ice and slid into a parked logging truck. The driver received minor injuries and the vehicle sustained $2,000 in damage.

Police were called to break up a fight during a large party at a house on Depot Road Jan. 13 at 10:10 p.m. The party was quieted down and one person was arrested and charged with being drunk in a public place.

The intersection of Garibaldi Way and Hwy. 99 was the site of three accidents in two days, with considerable vehicle damage but only minor injuries in one of the mishaps. The first mishap occurred at 3 p.m. Jan. 15 when two vehicles collided, causing minor injuries and a total of $7,000 in damage. One person was charged with failure to yield the right of way. A similar charge was laid against one of the drivers in an accident at the same intersection at 9:30 p.m. Jan. 16. This accident also caused a total of $7,000 in damage. Approximately an hour later $1,500 in damage was sustained to two vehicles at the same corner.

A break, enter and theft was reported Jan. 15 at a residence on Spruce Drive in Valleycliffe. Entry was gained through a back door panel which was kicked in. A VCR, stereo, money, jewelry and other assorted items were reported stolen. A residence on Diamond Head Road was broken into the next day between 5 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Computer equipment was stolen.

FINANCIAL NEWS

Taking charge of your financial future

By Mel Diamond

It often surprises me how little time people spend thinking about and planning for their financial future. At the risk of sounding trite, I'd say there are those who spend more time planning their vacations than they do planning their retirement. And that's a concern. With looming government deficits, inflation, the uncertainty of the availability of government pensions in the future and the increasing tax burden on the individual, astute financial management is absolutely critical to one's quality of life down the road.

The impact of inflation on one's savings, just as one example, is easily demonstrated. For every percentage point an investment portfolio grows, it must be adjusted downward to account for the erosion of purchasing power of the dollar. If, for example, you earn $40,000 per year, in 10 years you would have to earn $59,210 to retain the same purchasing power you have today, assuming an annual four per cent rate of inflation. In 25 years, that amount would rise to $106,663.

A good financial advisor can help make the difference. Financial advisors offer a variety of services and professional advice, ranging from portfolio management to tax reduction strategies to estate planning. And as Canadians have less and less time available for their ever more complex legal, financial and tax affairs, this service is becoming increasingly valuable.

Whatever your financial situation, whatever your level of investment experience, a good financial advisor will work with you to assess your personal objectives and recommend a strategy that's right for your needs. This is usually done through a series of meetings and a thorough review of your assets, financial goals and personal factors such as age, profession, and others.

What prevents many people from taking control of their financial destiny is skepticism and fear. A good financial advisor will help to dispel those fears by providing the client with knowledge and understanding about their investments. As a client, you should be encouraged to ask questions and take a thorough approach to your investment plan.

And if you sense that your financial advisor isn't willing to spend the time you'd like, or if you just don't feel comfortable with their approach, you should continue to search for the professional who meets your needs.

In selecting financial products for your investment plan, a full-service, independent financial advisor will have access to the more than 500 mutual fund products that are sold in Canada today. This means you'll receive considered advice on the full range of funds.

The best way to ensure your satisfaction with the financial advice you receive is to take your time, do your homework, choose carefully and choose wisely.

Select a financial planner carefully

Selecting a financial planner may well be one of your New Year's resolutions.

Consumers look to financial planners to provide objective, knowledgeable advice about managing an important aspect of their lives: their assets. Because the field is largely unregulated, the title financial planner does not guarantee any level of qualifications or expertise.

"Consumers need to exercise caution when choosing someone with whom to entrust financial resources," says Valerie MacLean, general manager of the Better Business Bureau.

Recommendations from friends, relatives, and colleagues may be a good first step to finding a financial planner. Carefully consider the educational and professional background of prospective planners. The following designations and programs are recognized by the Canadian Association of Financial Planners: Registered

Financial Planner (RFP), Chartered Financial Planner (CFP), Chartered Accountant (CA), Certified General Accountant (CGA), Certified Management Accountant (CMA), Canadian Investment Management (CIM), Chartered Life Underwriter (CLU), Chartered Financial Consultant (CHFC), Master of Business Administration with a specialty in finance or taxation (MBA), and certificate holders of some community college personal financial planning courses.

Once you have selected a prospective planner, schedule a preliminary interview. Question the financial planner about his or her professional background, education, employment history, investment philosophy, and areas of specialization. Ask for the names of recent clients and examples of plans and monitoring reports.

Does the planner keep current on financial matters through continuing education and training?

Also ask how the financial planner expects to be compensated (e.g., fees, commission or a combination of the two) and get a written estimate of the cost for services.

Remember, a good financial planner should help you get a clear picture of your financial situation and lay the foundation for future investment decisions. Avoid planners who use high pressure sales tactics or promise unusually high rates of return on investments.

Be on guard for possible Ponzi schemes that can masquerade as tax shelters, precious metals, commodities, high-tech stocks and other investment vehicles. Ensure the planner does not have a conflict-of-interest respect of services offered, and that his/her compensation is coming only from you for services rendered.

Further protect yourself against fraud by contacting your Better Business Bureau (682-2711) to determine the planner's reliability report.

Smart investors see the long-term benefits of RRSPs

Some investors only look at the short-term tax break that an RRSP can provide. They are usually younger investors who are not yet concerned with their retirement.

The smart investor, on the other hand, also sees the long-term benefits of accumulating assets in a tax-sheltered plan.

Investing in an RRSP over a long period of time makes sense: the longer the money stays sheltered from taxes, the greater the earning power of your investment. How many investments allow you to do that?

Consider what an RRSP can do for you. Suppose you contribute $1,000 a year to your RRSP for the next 30 years and earn on average 10 per cent compounded annually. In 30 years, you would have accumulated $165,000. At 12 per cent, your investment would be worth about $240,000.

Had you invested outside of an RRSP, your nest-egg would be worth much less. Your $30,000 principal invested at 10 per cent compounded annually would accumulate only about $79,000. Even if your average rate of return was 12 per cent, you would only accumulate about $98,000, assuming a tax rate of approximately 40 per cent.

There's a reason for the dramatic difference. Assuming you are in a 40 per cent tax bracket, the $1,000 you invest each year outside of an RRSP is worth only $600. Furthermore, your 10 per cent return is in reality only six per cent because you're also taxed on the interest.

The RRSP's strength is its compounding effect over a long period of time. Coupled with a high rate of return, a tax-sheltered investment such as an RRSP will play a major role in guaranteeing an investor has enough savings to support their financial needs during retirement. When considering an RRSP, the smart investor will seek out a high-yielding investment. While guaranteed, guaranteed investment certificates offer low rates of return. The best bet lies in equity or growth mutual funds. They are professionally managed, diversified and liquid.

While it is almost impossible to predict the performance of equity funds, they have historically performed far better over the long term than more conservative investments.

Obviously, the sooner you begin investing in an RRSP, the longer and faster your money will grow. Talk to your financial planner or stock broker today to find a fund that meets your financial needs and goals.

Tax and RRSP tips

To figure out how much you can contribute to your RRSP for 1995, keep in mind there are different guidelines for members of Registered Pension and Deferred Profit Sharing Plans.

Ordinarily, your deductible contributions to an RRSP are limited to 18 per cent of earned income, to a maximum of $14,500.

If you're a member of a Registered Pensions Plan or a Deferred Profit Sharing Plan, your deductible contributions are reduced by any so-called pension adjustments. Pension adjustments reflect the value of the benefit you received from being a plan member in a particular year. This amount can normally be found on your notice of assessment from Revenue Canada for your 1994 tax return.

Information for Tax and RRSP Tips is provided as a public service by the Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.

Squamish pair win $10,000 each in lottery

Audrey Spencer

Audrey Spencer of Garibaldi Highlands and Cathy Sprecker of Squamish have each won $10,000 instantly in the most recent lottery draw.

Spencer plans to use her prize to assist with her education. The 20-year-old is in her first year of studies towards becoming a legal secretary.

"I was just thinking that I wasn't sure if I was going to have the extra money for my schooling," said the Capilano College student. "Then I win this money!" Spencer purchased her lucky $1 Merry Money instant ticket from 7-Eleven in Squamish.

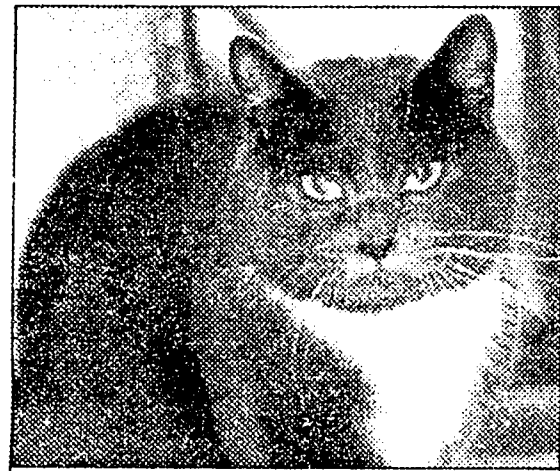

Sprecker, part owner/operator of SOS Log Hauling Inc., received her winning $1 Gold Rush instant ticket as a gift. "My mother had put two tickets in my Christmas stocking," said the 29-year-old mother of two. "On the first ticket I won $2, and on the second one I had a lot of zeros." All those zeros added up to $10,000.

"My husband, Steve, and I started jumping up and down. Then the tears started and I couldn't talk all morning," Sprecker has no plans for her prize yet.

Squamish estuary featured on Knowledge Network series

By David Donaldson

Squamish will soon have another notch in its television belt when a segment about the Squamish estuary airs on an episode of Westland on the Knowledge Network, Feb. 15. The Westland series is actually produced in Squamish, though filming takes place throughout the province.

The show on the Squamish estuary will focus on how different groups can work together to solve a problem by addressing the environmental and economic needs of a community, in this case the enhancing of the Squamish estuary habitat.

"I think it's a really positive story," says producer Jeanne McCartney. "Groups are working together to satisfy the community's environmental and economic needs."

The show will feature interviews with Squamish Mayor Corinne Lonsdale, Brad Cooper formerly of B.C. Rail, Kevin Conlin of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans and Jim Wisnia of the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society, and explains how they have worked together to protect the wildlife habitat by designating certain areas for conservation and other areas for economic development. With such projects as clearing the sand on the estuary dredged up from the Squamish River for a coal port back in 1970 and using it in construction, there will be more room for the habitat, and the needs of both areas are met, providing economic security for the community, says McCartney.

Like all the episodes of Westland, this segment will be a family operation, produced by McCartney and Mike Halleran and photographed by their son Terry Halleran and his wife Cathie. All the writing, narration and editing is done by the family as well, with McCartney spending one day per episode in Vancouver to format the segment for airing on the Knowledge Network.

Westland has produced 150 episodes since its premiere in 1983; it's first episode appearing six months after the Knowledge Network first went on the air. It is an information program dealing with the state of natural resources in British Columbia without getting into controversial issues and conflicts.

"We stay completely out of politics," says McCartney. "That's done enough by commercial stations."

Without addressing political issues, the program has managed to raise awareness about environmental problems such as habitat encroachment, the flooding of river valleys and the need for the new forest practices code.

Although the show airs on the Knowledge Network, Westland receives no funding from the station and the non-profit family company must raise money on its own. They ask for money unconditionally — no sponsor ever sees the show before it airs and has no control over the content, but gets a credit at the end of the program.

McCartney says they have a wide span of contributors including government agencies such as the Ministry of Forests and the B.C. Wildlife Federation because the show is based totally on facts and because it is inexpensive. The cost of a year's worth of Westland episodes is about the same as one half-hour segment of a big budget nature program.

"We do it for less money than most others because we do it at the kitchen table," she says.

The number of shows produced in a year depends on how much money is raised, so they usually have more story ideas than money to develop them. They like to have one wildlife program a year, one on forestry and one on natural history.

McCartney has no figures on Westland's ratings, but this is not important. She knows the show has a core audience of viewers who are genuinely interested in resources, and says the Knowledge Network would rather have a smaller, dedicated audience than a larger number of casual watchers. In fact, many colleges and businesses buy tapes of the program for use in courses and employee education.

Westland gains its credibility from the

The Final Edit — Jeanne McCartney does the final edit on a new Westland program in her office at her home in Squamish. The Westland series is aired on the Knowledge Network, and will feature the Squamish estuary in the program scheduled for Feb. 15. David Donaldson photo fact it is jointly presented by the Association of Professional Biologists of B.C. and the Association of Professional B.C. Foresters, two organizations which don't always see eye to eye, but are working together to provide the program with the scientific expertise it requires.

Not that the producers need much help. In addition to producing Westland for nearly 13 years, McCartney has been working for the provincial government teaching the forest practices code, and has recently been reappointed to the Habitat Conservation Board for a two-year term.

As one of the 12 board members in the province, McCartney gets to help review different enhancement proposals and decide which projects should receive funding. Once a year the 12 volunteer board members get to travel to one of the project areas and monitor the progress. She says this gives her a "good opportunity to have input into habitat needs."

The habitat needs of your own back yard can receive some of this input if you watch the Westland episode about Squamish airing Feb. 15, featuring tips on enhancing your yard for small wildlife.

This will include what kind of bushes to plant to encourage hummingbirds, and the importance of having some sort of water source in the yard for small birds. The episode will show you how having a pile of brush in the corner can be a home for many creatures, and to buy indigenous plants from nurseries rather than digging them up in the wild. To the consternation of your neighbors, you will learn to grow your lawn because short grass does nothing for wildlife.

"Sometimes neighbors are opposed to enhancing wildlife," says McCartney, "but it's important that we are more responsible in our back yards to enhance the habitats we encroach on."

McCartney hopes to film more episodes of Westland in Squamish, with themes such as children and the environment. She says they plan to continue to produce the show "for as long as we can get funding."

The Turkey of Brackendale

While visitors were pulling up in a limousine across from the Easter seal Camp to view the world famous eagles of Brackendale, above, a few hundred metres down the road local residents were fascinated by the sight of a turkey up a tree. Though it is technically a wild turkey, Lurkey was purchased commercially and raised at a home on Olsen Road, from where it escaped Thursday. There is no word on whether the Nature Conservancy of Canada will be creating a code of ethics for viewing turkeys, or erecting turkey viewing site signs. Photos by Ross Wahl, above, and Al Price

Thank you to: Finnings for 200 donated boxes of extra teddy bears from the Squamish Liquor Store; to the class of Mr. McKay of Mamquam Elementary school for a job very well done in collecting more than 800 tins of canned food; to Jan Purdie for stepping in as chairperson and to all the volunteers of CCC, including packers and drivers.

And a really big thanks to Mt. FM, The Squamish Chief and especially Al Price. And thanks to the community for your generous support and for making Christmas special for 350 children.

Lung Association offers tips for smoke-free '96

Smokers who make a resolution to start the new year smoke-free can get help from the British Columbia Lung Association.

The association urges all smokers to start 1996 in a healthy way, and offers free Quit Tips booklets with advice on kicking the habit.

"Cigarette smoking is the leading cause of preventable illness and premature death.

Each year, more than 5,000 British Columbians die from smoking-related diseases such as lung cancer, emphysema and chronic bronchitis; and second-hand smoke causes health problems for non-smokers exposed to it," says Kelly Ablog-Morant, B.C. Lung Association director of health education and program services. The Quit Tips booklet contains ideas on coping with nicotine withdrawal and handling social situations without smoking, and it suggests personal rewards for persevering with your goal to stay smoke-free.

For a free Quit Tips booklet, contact the B.C. Lung Association at 2675 Oak Street, Vancouver, BC, V6H 2K2, or call 731-5864. Outside the Lower Mainland, call toll-free to 1-800-665-5864.

About Town

By Maureen Gilmour

Earlier this month, Carlotta and Ueli Liechti had as their guest, Carlotta's niece, Naomi Akers from San Francisco. She enjoyed snow boarding and eagle watching with her cousins Margot, Erika and Jocelyn.

STORK STORY - FITSCHEN - Spencer and Teresa Fitschen are pleased to announce the birth of their second daughter, Alison Katherine, weighing 6 lb. 9 oz. and born at 2:53 p.m. on Dec. 22 in the Squamish General Hospital. This is a sister for Lauren. Proud grandparents are Bob and Teresa Wilson of Squamish and Jane Fitschen of Vancouver. Also pleased with Alison's arrival are great-grandmothers Dorothy Dixon of Vancouver and Rafaela and Maria in Mexico. Teresa and Spencer extend thanks to Dr. Guy Morum and the nursing staff, especially Karen and Robyn.

Special birthday wishes to Norman Saugstad, who celebrated his 80th birthday on Jan. 16. On this occasion, his wife Shirley hosted an open house when many friends and neighbors dropped in to offer their good wishes.

The chamber of commerce is accepting nominations for the businessperson of the year and the citizen of the year until Jan. 26. The citizen of the year award is presented to the per-

Friends of the late Ingrid Dahlen will be pleased to know her faithful pet and companion Sheppy has a good, loving home with Diane and Joe. Sheppy is healthy and happy and enjoys his regular walks to the top of the Stawamus Chief. His canine girlfriends Ashleigh and Ginnie are most protective of Sheppy.

It was most refreshing to read a positive story about Squamish in the Vancouver Sun on Jan. 13. The article was about lower cost housing in our area as compared to the Lower Mainland. I wonder how many people might consider a drive up our highway to see what we have to offer?

STORK STORY - RUSSELL/MURRAY RUSSELL - Mario and Sharon are happy to announce the arrival of their son, Nico Leo Russell, weighing 9 lb. 7 oz and born at 11:15 a.m. on Dec. 31 in B.C. Women's Hospital, Vancouver. Proud grandparents are Leo Murray of Langley and Margaret Russell in the Bahamas. Many thanks to Aunt Leona and Jani for their support and to the hospital staff.

Howe Sound Minor Baseball Association is holding registrations for the coming season on two nights this week, Jan. 24 and Jan. 25 from 6 - 8 p.m. in the Brennan Park Leisure Centre lobby.

HOROSCOPE

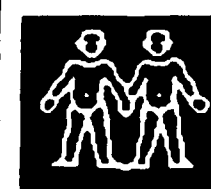

January 21 through January 27, 1996

Aries (March 21 - April 20)

It may take some fast talking to convince a disappointed friend of your sincerity. Always speak from the heart with those for whom you care.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20)

Get a sense of humor. If you don't start laughing at some of the craziness going on around you, there is a good chance you could fall off the deep end.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)

Restore your energy. Get a new haircut or buy some trendy clothes. Just do something to get your spirits revived.

Cancer (June 21 - July 20)

Be clever and stay out of the muck this time. Let people lead their own lives as they see fit. If you get involved, it will only mean trouble.

Leo (July 21 - Aug. 21)

Affairs of the heart can be complicated in more ways than you can count. Be as honest as possible with loved ones.

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22)

A colleague's idea could help you in a big way. It is never wise to stereotype people or situations of any kind.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)

Your diligence will pay off in a big way. Stay off the merry-go-round of relationships for now. Slow and steady wins the race.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22)

This is no time for procrastination. Roll up your sleeves and get to work on that important project. It will be done before you know it.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 20)

If you have been hedging on a lifelong ambition, now is the time to go for it. It is true: You never know unless you try.

Capricorn (Dec. 21 - Jan. 19)

Take some time to read a book or catch the play you have been wanting to see. There is a good chance an old friend is looking for you.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)

Aquarians have a tough time keeping their mouths closed, but it is best to do so for now. Keep an eye on what is really going on around you.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20)

These interesting situations are always more complicated once you begin to sort the pieces. But there is also a big surprise waiting.

Darts & Daffodils

Want to say thanks and make sure everyone knows why? Or maybe offer a little constructive criticism without confrontation? Send your Dart or Daffodil to The Editor, The Squamish Chief, Box 3500, Squamish, B.C. V0N 3G0 or drop it off at our office at 38113 Second Avenue, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. You can also fax your message to 892-8483 or e-mail to: sqchief@mountain-inter.net.

Twenty-five big, beautiful daffodils to each of our friends and relatives who helped us celebrate our 25th anniversary. Your friendship means a lot to us. Special thanks to our sons and their friends for two evenings of fun. Janet and Ron.

A soup kitchen full of daffodils to the Squamish Knights Hockey Club for your kind donation of monies for the holiday season. This was greatly appreciated. A soup kettle of daffodils to Marlene and her yoga meditation seminar for the kind donation of monies and foodstuff. A big bunch of daffodils to 7-Eleven, Sunwolf Outdoor Centre, Super Valu bakery girls, Sunflower Bakery and Timber foods for their kind donation of bread and cakes throughout the year. A special thank you to everyone who donated items to the soup kitchen throughout 1995. Special thanks to those individuals who donated turkeys, and thanks to Community Christmas Care for donating foodstuffs.

Bunches and bunches of daffodils to all the volunteers who have donated their time at the Squamish Soup Kitchen throughout the year. See you in 1996.

A daycare full of daffodils to the children of Sierra Daycare for donating their time making crafts, and donating monies to the Squamish Soup Kitchen. It was a real surprise for children that young to think of the less fortunate over the Christmas holidays.

Special thanks to Monica as well.

And special thanks to Stan and Janie for donating foodstuff to the Squamish Soup Kitchen. Nothing will go to waste.

A lawn full of daffodils to the persons who returned Winnie and Tigger. Even though it was a silly prank, thanks again.

Eagles and daffodils don't usually mix, however, garlands of daffs to all the volunteers who made Eagle Sunday such a success: the intrepid counters, the media hosts, the Eagle Watch interpreters, and the expat Montrealler who toured the Lower Mainland tour leaders' group so successfully. Bigger and better, soaring higher each year. Meg.

Wellies full of daffodils to Jack Fowler, who was kind enough to refer me to a local competitor to help find an item I didn't know the name of (and it turns out he can get). That is true retail spirit and customer service, and the way to keep business local.

Darts to the lowlife who stole my daughter's brand new pair of Boy London jeans from the swimming pool locker room. They were a Christmas present. Get a life or get a job. These jeans are marked and we know what they look like. We'll be watching.

Darts to a local video store for treating two young adults with total rudeness and disrespect when we tried to exchange a damaged Christmas present. Maybe you should be more respectful to people of every age because soon you will have no customers.

Darts to the person(s) who took my wallet from a grocery cart at Save-On-Foods. All my ID is enclosed, so please return it.

You have taken the money which was meant to feed my children and keep them warm. Please don't add the extra expense of me having to pay to replace my ID, children's immunization cards and much more. Drop it in any post box and will find its way to its rightful owner. Thanks.

Highways covered with daffodils to columnist David Donaldson for his piece on courteous drivers who, for some reason or other, will not put on their headlights, especially on these dreary rain days. My sentiments exactly David. I couldn't have said better.

A double-whammy spit ball full of darts to the four guys who sit behind me in Mrs. H. Grade 9 math class.

Darts or daffodils to the person in the brown pick-up truck which hit our car between 7:30 and 8 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 14 while was parked in our driveway on Laramee Road. Darts if you knew you hit it and ran away and daffodils if you now realize you hit it and come forward and pay for the damages before we locate you through our eyewitnesses description of your vehicle.

A post office full of daffodils to the person who found my business statement lying in the rain and reposted it.

A courtroom full of daffodils to Race and Co. (Doug Chaisson) for his support and compassion. From C. and W.

A willow tree full of daffodils to Geanie and Charlie for being the truest friends to the fullest. We love you guys a lot.

A restaurant full of darts to the personnel manager of local fast food restaurant. shouldn't take six weeks to hire a cleaning lady, and so relieve the other night staff of all the extra shifts they are having to work.

Spotlight on our members

"It looks fabulous! How did you people ever do all this in such a short time?" These are typical of the comments these days from visitors to the West Coast Railway Heritage Park located across from the B.C. Rail yards on Government Road. The major transformation is the finishing of the huge car shop building. Now completed with siding and painted, the structure dominates the first views of the property upon arrival. But much has also been done this past season, and the West Coast Railway Association is thrilled to declare phase one of the development complete.

Renovations include a new rolling gate at the entrance, two flagpoles next to the Wilkie Station flying the Canadian and British Columbian flags, the station has been freshly painted and has window flower boxes and a new canopy over the porch, new washrooms have been built next to PGE #2, but the main visual feature is the huge car shop building. It is almost impossible to describe the difference adequately. Outside, the facility is fully completed with the siding colors of cream with green trim. The windows are painted, adding a uniform, clear appearance in a light cream, and the mercury vapor lights are lit allowing full utilization of the facility after dusk. The sprinkler system is completed, tested and alarmed — not only affording the necessary protection for the structure and the collection pieces inside, but also permitting the building to officially open for work and occupancy.

The West Coast Railway Association is a non-profit organization of volunteers interested in the preservation of railway history. Squamish is extremely fortunate that the WCRA decided to locate this incredible attraction in our community.

Dave Philps of Tall Ship Ale contacted the chamber recently to announce that Tall Ship Ale will be expanding its operation, located in the Squamish industrial park, to include a gift shop and tours of the plant.

At the end of Cleveland Avenue in downtown Squamish, the Howe Sound Brew Pub and Inn is taking shape despite the rain experienced in early January.

The Soo Coalition for Sustainable Forests has published a discussion paper on the proposed Protected Area Strategy for this area. If this strategy is implemented in its current form, 104,000 hectares will be removed from the working forest. A huge part of this forest land is located in the Soo Timber Supply Area. Jan. 31 has been set to finalize the PAS. After that it will be forwarded to the provincial government as a recommendation. The discussions on the PAS have been taking place in the absence of input from local governments and communities and before socio-economic impact studies have been completed. This is wrong. We must have an opportunity to discuss the future of the forest industry in our area. Please take the time to be informed about what is being proposed for protected area designation. Stop by the Soo Coalition office located next to Mostly Books on Cleveland Avenue and pick up a copy of the discussion paper. We must become involved now before it's too late.

Car Shop Looks Great — The huge car shop at the West Coast Railway Heritage Park has been completed and is a tremendous addition to the popular tourist attraction in Squamish.

Marmalade a creation of the Scots

January brings not only Robbie Burns Night celebrations on Jan. 25, but the brief appearance of bitter marmalade oranges. By odd coincidence, Robbie Burns was born about the time marmalade was making Scotland famous. Marmalade is a tribute to Scots' thrift and inventiveness. In the town of Dundee around the early 1700s, a young man rashly bought a quantity of oranges from a Spanish ship. Unbeknownst to him, they were going cheap because of their bitter taste. No one would buy them from him. His wife, skilled in jams and jelly making, boiled the bitter fruit up into a conserve. The recipe caught on and the rest is history. Marmalade is one of Scotland's greatest gifts to the culinary world.

Oranges aren't the only citrus fruit suitable for marmalade. Limes have a deliciously exotic flavor. They are particularly fat and juicy at this time of year, perfect for marmalade.

Homemade marmalade is simple to make. It always sets without added pectin. The limes need cooking to tenderize their peels before they are sliced and boiled with sugar. The secret to fresh tasting, brightly colored marmalade is to boil it quickly, but not at maximum heat. High heat caramelizes the sugar and can scorch the bottom. If the marmalade is boiled too long it turns to glue.

Use 1/2 pint or pint sized canning jars. Sterilize them first in the oven at 225 degrees for 15 minutes. Boil the lids. Process for safe storage.

Lime Marmalade

1 lb. limes, about 4 large
2 lemons, about 1/2 lb.
4 cups water
4 cups sugar

Wash the limes and lemons thoroughly in soapy water. Rinse well. Remove the stem "buttons". Place them in a large saucepan and cover with the water. Cover, bring to a boil and simmer for about one hour, until the rinds are tender. Remove the fruit to cool, saving the cooking liquid. Working with a very sharp knife, cut each fruit in half. Scrape out the pulp and discard the seeds. Cut off and discard the thick ends of the peel. You'll end up discarding about one quarter of the rind, which still leaves a marmalade thick with peel. Discard more if you like marmalade with less rind. If you prefer long shreds of peel, cut the halves crosswise into very, very thin slices. For shorter bits of peel, cut each piece into half again, then slice. (This is tedious work and can be stopped at any point. Return the fruit, peel and pulp to the cooking liquid. Cover and chill until ready to continue. It will keep for days in the fridge.)

Combine the sliced peel, pulp and cooking liquid in a large, heavy saucepan. Bring to a boil on high heat. Add the sugar, stir to dissolve and reduce heat to medium high. Keep at a rolling boil, stirring to prevent scorching, for about 20 minutes.

If the heat is too high the sugar will caramelize, giving the marmalade a burnt taste. Start testing for doneness when the marmalade thickens somewhat.

Use the refrigerator test. Put a saucer in the freezer while the marmalade is cooking.

When ready to test, remove the saucepan from the heat (so it doesn't overcook while your back is turned) and pour a teaspoon of marmalade onto the chilled saucer. Put it back in the freezer for a minute.

If the marmalade firms up it's ready. If it stays runny, keep on boiling and testing. If you are using a thermometer, take the temperature up to about 220 degrees F. Back up the thermometer with the refrigerator test.

When done, remove from heat. Let it sit for five minutes or so to cool. Stir to make sure the peel doesn't float and settle at the top. Ladle into hot sterilized 1/2 pint canning jars, leaving 1/2 inch of headroom. Seal with sterilized lids. Process in a boiling water bath for 10 minutes. Makes 5 to 6 1/2 pint jars.

Where do they come from, S where do they go?

After writing last week's column about bald eagles, I realized I had no idea where they come from or where they go when they leave. So I phoned the one person I was sure would have all the answers, Len Goldsmith, and sure enough he did. He is such a rich resource, and has a love and care for these magnificent birds that warms your heart.

Len told me the eagles head south for a warmer climate when they leave here, anywhere there is open water and something to feed on. Then later they head north to the Gulf Islands or Alaska, or into the interior in B.C. or to Idaho in the U.S. Anywhere there are estuaries with their rich food source.

They can feed on herring as the schools boil up in the water, or oolichans, trout or other fish. Although they can eat small mammals and other birds such as ducks or seagulls, they prefer fish.

Ducks are too quick most of the time and avoid the eagles by zig-zagging along the surface of the water, but sometimes an eagle will force one to dive over and over until it tires. With seagulls, it's usually when one is injured or weakened in some way. However, they will eat small animals such as mice, rabbits, even a small dog or cat if hungry enough.

They nest and raise their young far from here in the interior, and tend to hang on to the same nesting area. They don't mate until their fourth or fifth year and have a long courtship during which, Len says, "They hold hands. They grasp talons high in the sky and roll and tumble through the air until they are only about 100 feet from the ground. This is not when they mate, as some people think, but a type of court-ship ritual. They mate the same way most other birds do, on the ground."

They usually lay two eggs which take about 32-35 days to hatch.

The young take a long time to fledge as they are such big birds. The parents must find and bring enough food to feed them at least three times a day.

beach. Do not stop anywhere near where rivers converge or where there is open water or large sand banks.

One of the most breathtaking moments is when we see eagles

Between the Lines

By Mary Billy

Eagles have no big scraps between each other over territory, but sometimes have disputes with ospreys over nests. The ospreys will dominate in the dispute, and harass the eagles so the eagles' nesting is not successful.

Len said the most important thing in our area is the presertake flight, and many of us have stood for long periods watching them soar on the thermal air currents off the mountains. Their wing span is close to six feet and they are truly magnificent in flight. If we all act as stewards for these birds, we can help protect both them and their habitat from the encroachment of industry and sight-seers, while still promoting tourism as something valuable to the area as a whole, and encouraging those lucky enough to spend a winter afternoon eagle watching.

Len says the eagles start out on the east

"They grasp talons high in the sky and roll and tumble through the air until they are only about 100 feet from the ground."

vation of old growth cedars in the mountains and gullies where they go to roost in groups. He does feel that the raft-tour guides are using as much care as they can and follow the ethics guide set out for them in regard to staying close to the east side of the river, not stopping anywhere there is open water, and keeping noise to a minimum.

He also said people should avoid walking their dogs in the Judd Slough area or anywhere there is open water, as those are especially appealing to the eagles as fishing areas. Respect is the key. Do not move fast, do not bring dogs, do not make noise, do not litter or leave anything behind if you choose to go on the river and have a picnic or barbecue on the bank of the river in the mornings, but as the number of people increases they move to the west bank to give themselves the safety of distance. Let's leave it to them. Do not go there, and most important of all, do not take dogs there.

The huge birds deserve all the space and peace and quiet they need to survive without fear. The answer is education, so do your part and share what you know with anyone who will listen. The needs of the eagles are more important than one more picture someone thinks they have to have. The real thing is so much better than any picture will ever be. If we don't take care of their environment, and have respect for their needs, pictures may be all we'll have left.

Hydro helps palliative upgrade at Lions Gate

B.C. Hydro has made a $30,000 corporate donation to Lions Gate Hospital. The funds are for the hospital's $1.5 million campaign for renovations to the palliative care unit.

North Vancouver/Lonsdale MLA and Hydro director David Schreck presented the cheque to Lions Gate Hospital president Bob Smith during a brief ceremony Thursday, Jan. 18.

"The current and future needs of the palliative care program have changed since the unit was built in 1962," said Schreck. "The renovations will upgrade the facility to meet the users' needs more effectively, and patients who are in the final stages of their lives will be cared for in a comfortable, home-like setting."

The renovated palliative care unit will be a 7,500 square foot, 16-bed facility on the seventh floor of the hospital. "The enhancements to the unit will also provide an atmosphere that reduces the anxiety and grieving for patients' family members and friends," Schreck said. "I'm pleased to see Hydro support such a worthwhile initiative."

Last year, more than 350 patients and their families used the resources of the palliative care unit.

More than 90 volunteers provided 9,176 hours of support in the form of bereavement support groups, one-to-one visits, massages, companionship and volunteer training.

Lions Gate Hospital is the fifth largest hospital in the province serving the 165,000 residents of the North Shore as well as the Sunshine Coast, Squamish, Whistler, Pemberton and Powell River. Hydro's donation is one of several made by the Crown corporation throughout the year in support of community projects across the province.

EDUCATION

m, Students learning to listen

"Close your eyes!" Nadine told Ms. Doherty. "Hold up your science book and I'll show you what everybody did wrong." She then did a lively pantomime of a child wriggling around on the floor, turning to talk to a neighbor, waving a hand in the air to interrupt, and generally paying no attention to the teacher.

The Grade 3 students at Stawamus were clustered on the floor around Ms. Doherty's chair, waiting to start the lesson. She asked them first to think back to the science lesson a few days earlier, when they had been told to return to their desks after only four minutes. She wondered if they could remember what had gone wrong, and Nadine's impromptu performance gave the answer. Everybody assured her this was never going to happen again, and they got ready for the next lesson in the Second Step series.

Then Ms. Doherty had to laugh as she told them the topic for the next lesson was how to carry on a conversation. She said it must seem odd that they had just been reminded about getting into trouble for talking too much and here they were getting ready to learn how to do something they already did too well. However, there are two parts to conversation, and they are not so good at the second one — listening. Talking non-stop and always waiting to interrupt the speaker shows that one does not have conversational skills.

How It's Done
As with all the lessons in this series, there is a greatly enlarged photograph for the children to study before they discuss the situation. This one showed Kate (a new girl in the neighborhood) at the bus stop, as Emily approached to wait for the school bus.

Each girl was clearly waiting for the other to say something. Ms. Doherty commented that, if they went on like that day after day, their coats would get acquainted, but Kate and Emily wouldn't. She asked for suggestions about what Emily could say and it was decided that "Hi" would be appropriate. When she asked what Kate should do in reply, the rather unexpected answer came, "Nothing! She shouldn't talk to strangers."

Ms. Doherty took this in stride and said that was a most sensible precaution. However, Emily was clearly only a child herself, and Kate must have seen her around, at school or on the bus. It was decided Emily would have done better to give her name, and the long word "introduce" was written on the board. The last question suggested was, "How old are you?" with the excuse that this is a rude question only when put to grown-ups. One boy immediately had to share a story. He had better remain anonymous, but he said that on her 40th birthday, his Mom got a card with a picture of a road going up a hill because, he explained, adults are "over the hill" after they are 40.

Life in the Arctic Circle

Students in Ms. Milne's class at Brackendale Elementary School are also starting a unit on the Inuit, and they began with quite a lot of knowledge taken from posters around the room and from a story they had been reading. They used words such as "nanook" and "kayak", and there was some fun with "agloo", that sounds like "igloo" but means a hole for fishing through the ice. The students thought it would be just great to ride to school on a snowmobile and to learn how to catch fish with a spear. They agreed that life in the Arctic might not be too bad, now that there is TV there, but they would miss shopping malls and trees and being able to ride a bike all the year round. The question of why houses there should be built on stilts had them puzzled for a while, until it was explained that the warmth of the house would eventually thaw the permanently frozen ground if it were built directly on top. Then they could see how odd it would be to have the kitchen sink to a lower level than the sitting room, for example.

Close to the Equator

Ms. Milne's class, like Ms. La Riviere's class at Garibaldi Highlands Elementary School, and students at Squamish Elementary (and probably at all the other schools in the district) are involved in Project Love. This will culminate on Valentine's Day with the sending of pens and pencils to school children in Ghana, West Africa. This really makes them think about life in other lands. I thought I would do a bit of propaganda and show them how much education is valued in Third World countries. I told them that the worst punishment one can give a class there is to refuse to allocate any homework. One of Ms. Milne's students took the wind out of my sails by saying: "You can send them ours!" However, all the students were concerned about what more they could do to help. Ms. La Riviere's class wanted to send candy or gum, even cloth, but they were told the kits will not hold anything so bulky. One little girl had the ingenious idea of making a rag doll which would squash flat, but they have to accept the fact that the writing materials will be precious enough and will really help somebody to learn.

Awards From the Elks

On Monday, Jan. 15, in a ceremony at the Elks' Hall in Squamish, a group of students received certificates and awards for the essays and posters they had produced in connection with Drug and Alcohol Awareness Week.

Jodi Lewis, a Grade 12 student at HSSS, had written a most impressive essay. Prize winners from Brackendale Secondary were Sarah Hendy and Alex Bernath. Mamquam had three successful entries: Wendy Warkentin, Sebastian Oreamuno and Catherine Baumann. Sebastian was particularly excited as his grandmother from Argentina is in Squamish on a visit and she was there to see him receive his award. Mr. Daly of Stawamus watched as Amanda Horton received her prize. The ladies and gentlemen from the Elks were in uniform and gave a sparkle to the whole occasion.

Winners — Sebastian Oreamuno, above, and Jodi Lewis, below, were among the winners in the Drug and Alcohol Awareness Week poster and essay contest sponsored by the Elks and Royal Purple. All the students who won were honored at a ceremony at the Elks Hall Jan. 15. Constance Rulka photos

It's a bout time to realize other goals

Wayne Jackson may have lost his chance at this year's Olympics, but he's not KO'd yet

By Patricia Heintzman

Wayne Jackson's hopes of representing Canada at the Atlanta Olympic Games crumbled on the far coast as he failed to land the deciding blow in the Olympic challenger series.

Jackson went into the Olympic challenger series in St. John's, Nfld. as the favorite to win the event. A successful outing in St. John's would enable him to continue on his Olympic quest and challenge the national champion for the right to represent Canada at the Olympic Games in July. But Jackson said in reflection: "It just wasn't my day. I guess the pressure got to me a little. I wasn't hitting my punches."

Jackson was forced to take the long route towards an Olympic berth when he lost a close battle in the first round of the national championships in Brampton, Ont. in December to the eventual national heavyweight champion, David Defaighbon.

"I went to the nationals really confident," said Jackson last week. "I felt I had a really good shot of winning. I thought it was my year. When I arrived, that was the first I heard of this new fighter (Defaighbon). Everyone was saying he's a real steamroller, known for his knock-out punch."

Defaighbon, who competed in the 1992 Barcelona Olympics and won the gold medal at the Auckland Commonwealth Games in 1991 under the Nigerian flag, has lived in Canada for three years and received his landed immigrant status just days before the competition. During his competitive years in Nigeria, Defaighbon was ranked ninth in the world. The Nova Scotian has since received his Canadian citizenship, which allows him to represent Canada at international competitions.

Despite the rumors about the formidable new opponent, Jackson said he was still confident of winning. "After all they were just rumors."

The bout was a close one, 3-0, decided on computer points. The result is considered an extremely low score for a three-round bout.

Although Jackson says he prefers not to blame the computer scoring system for his losses, he admits his frustration in not having the appropriate style of boxing conducive to winning when judged by computer points.

International boxing took a turn towards computer points after a fiasco at the Seoul Olympics in 1988. The controversy centred around a gold medal bout between a Korean and an American, in which the American clearly dominated but the Korean was given the win. The discrepancy between the observers' point-of-view and the judges was attributed to biased judging. The new system has the judges push a button every time they see a punch. If three of the five judges push the hit button in a fraction of a second as a result of a punch, a point is awarded.

The most noticeable punch to a judge is the jab that makes the opponent's head snap back, says Jackson. Hook punches and body blows are not always visible to all the judges and are therefore not as easily recorded by at least three of the judges.

"I think the computer points system is really negatively affecting boxing," said Jackson. "It favors the tall boxers who tend to punch in the head. The whole style of boxing is changing. Boxers will land a few obvious jabs for the judges and sit back and avoid being hit because that's the way to win."

Since Jackson is usually shorter than his opponents, he lands more punches to the body, and utilizes the uppercut and hook more often.

Defaighbon, tall and slender for a heavyweight, had a distinct advantage in height and reach, said Jackson. After the champ's inaugural bout against Jackson, he went on to knock out his two remaining opponents in the national tournament, including a first round knockout of last year's champion, Shane Hinton of Alberta. Hinton won last year's national heavyweight title in a controversial final when he kned Jackson in the groin twice and was not disqualified for doing so.

Jackson's challenger tournament kicked off with a bout against Ontario's Mark Simmons, ranked third in Canada behind Jackson and Hinton last year.

"He adopted a totally different style against me than he has in the past," Jackson said. "It was totally unexpected. He used his speed more and stayed away from me, which he hasn't done in the past. I guess I just didn't have it that day. I really anticipated a win in Newfoundland."

Simmons went on to dominate Hinton in the next bout and will challenge Defaighbon for a spot on the Olympic team Jan. 27-28 in Thunder Bay, Ont.

Mixed emotions cloud Jackson's future at the moment. Although disappointed at not fulfilling his Olympic dream, he still has hopes of one day being Canadian champion. Since he had set aside this year to train for the Olympics, he plans to continue in the amateur ranks until next year, in the hopes of one day wearing the Canadian crown.

Howe Sound Men's hockey league in full swing

By David Donaldson

It was a rough week for the guys of the Howe Sound Men's hockey league as some teams lost to high scores while others won in high penalty minutes.

The high scores started when Horth's Hornets swarmed Build-All in a 13-1 avalanche victory Jan. 14.

The Hornets scored an amazing eight goals in the first period and five to Build-All's one in the second. Build-All players were good sports about the one-sided defeat, with only two penalties awarded to the same player for the whole game.

Crushing defeat number two came Jan. 17 when the Squamish Tire Red Wings overran Pair Tree Thunder 11-5.

The Wings dominated the first period with five goals while Pair Tree could only manage a tripping penalty. Things picked up in the second period when Mike Marzocco put the Thunder on the board just over two minutes in. The Wings retaliated 15 seconds later with back to back goals from Al Schulte and Dale Hunter. With 14:12 to go, Bill Roach put another in for the Thunder, bringing the score to 7-2.

Pair Tree slowed down midway through the second as the Red Wings saw goals from Steve Sturgess, Barry Woodard and a shorthanded tally by Hunter at 7:40. At 5:58 Michael Tremblay put the Thunder's third goal in 14 seconds before the Wings' final goal from Dave DeBalinhard. Pair Tree scored twice more from Roach and Kevin Foster to bring the score to 11-5.

The Red Wings couldn't keep it going when they met McDonald's for an 8-5 loss Jan. 19 in a close, fast game.

McDonald's got the puck rolling with three goals in a row, with back to back goals from Darryl Craig and one from Brian Jahnke. The Wings put their two cents in with a goal from Woodard at 10:34 and Schulte with 25 seconds to go.

The second period saw a barrage of goals from both teams, starting with two for McDonald's from Ewinyshyn and two for the Wings from Evdo and DeBalinhard. Ken Mehan scored a short handed goal at 6:19 for the Wings to tie the game, but Ewinyshyn completed his hat trick with a power play goal at 5:16 and two more for McDonald's followed by Dave Thorarinson and Graham Newell to make the final score 8-5.

Later that night the Mexx Pub Flyers flew in for a 6-3 victory over the Hornets.

Myles Rosser had two on the board for the Flyers, including one short handed goal, before Ryan Chapman scored the Hornets' first goal at 5:12. Dan Sargent finished off the first, scoring for the Flyers with 1:27 to go.

Bob Cunneyworth revived the Hornets in the second with his power play goal at 16:07, but the Flyers remained two steps ahead with Randy Leblanc's short handed goal at 14:08, closely followed by Rosser completing his hat trick. With 5:44 remaining, Chapman scored the Hornets' final goal before Scott Thompson finished the game for the Flyers at 4:42. Penalties were high compared to the relatively passive other games last week, with 10 minutes to the Flyers and six to the Wings, but still light when compared to other games.

Penalty minutes outnumbered actual time played when Pair Tree Thunder met Build-All Construction for a 6-3 battle royal Jan. 20.

The Thunder's Warren Doak earned 51 of their 57 penalty minutes after mixing

Two Squamish hockey players heading for B.C. Winter Games

David Donaldson

Two Squamish hockey players have been chosen for the under 16 team representing zone 5 in the B.C. Winter Games in North Vancouver Feb. 22-25.

Scott Weiss of Brackendale was one of 1,000 boys in his age group evaluated, and one of 40 chosen for further testing for the zone team. Their skills were evaluated again over a two-day period, and all 40 were assessed again by at least five evaluators during a full scrimmage in North Vancouver, with Weiss being chosen for the defensive corps of the team.

To expose the players to high performance selection and competition, the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association used a selection process with the same objectives as Best Ever, World Junior and Olympic programs: education, equality of instruction for all participants, evaluation while respecting club commitments and parallelism with the national Program of Excellence.

Weiss says he is very excited about playing in the Games and is confident his team has a shot at a victory.

The team is only allowed six practice sessions together before their first game, but Weiss says they have been doing a lot of off-ice training and are starting to gel together as a team. They will be practicing in Squamish Feb. 17.

He is looking forward to playing in the Games because "it will boost my confidence and show I can play with better players at a higher level," he said.

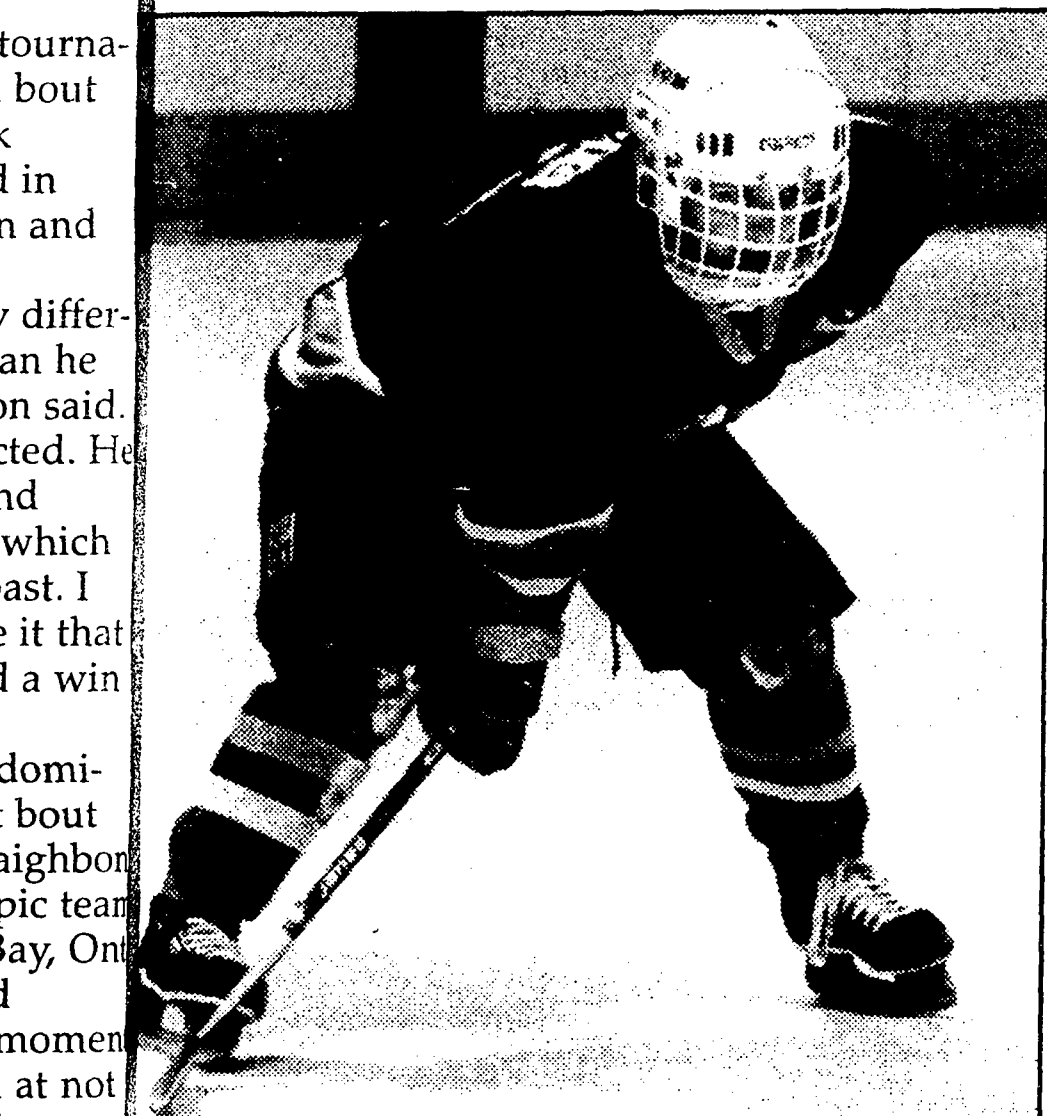

Jason Misewich, also of Squamish, was chosen as an alternate in case any of the regular team members are injured or drop out.

Katy Jones, a forward from Squamish, was chosen to play centre for the Zone 5 team in the girls' division after an open tryout in North Vancouver.

She says there was some tough competition in the tryouts, but only a few of the other girls were really good and the rest were average.

"I wasn't scared I wouldn't make it," said the only female minor hockey player in the Squamish area, who is tough competition herself after playing with the boys for so long.

The Winter Games team format was changed this year to an all-star concept rather than having full teams from throughout each zone play off to represent the zone. Each team is only allowed six hours of actual practice time together on ice before the competition.

In The League On Her Own — Katy Jones is the only female player in Squamish, but will team with other girls in the B.C. Winter Games.

Midget Eagles go for scholarships

Two Squamish hockey players were selected to compete in this year's Pacific Coast midget scholarship tournament, which began last weekend and finishes next weekend in Delta.

Craig Halliday and Jonathan Vanzella of the Howe Sound midget rep Eagles are among the many players from midget teams from all over the Lower Mainland and even Seattle, trying for one of four $500 educational bursaries from the Pacific Coast Hockey Association.

Each team can send the association five names of graduating second-year midget players who have no major penalties this year, with a C average in secondary school. Players are selected and divided into two Greater Vancouver and two Fraser Valley Conference teams playing a round robin tournament.

One player from each team is voted MVP for each game. The top two teams from the round robin will compete for gold and silver medals in the playoff game next Saturday, while the other two play for bronze and fourth. After the playoff, the MVP for the tournament from each team is awarded a $500 bursary.

This isn't the first time a Vanzella has participated in the scholarship tournament. Jon's two older brothers have made the team in previous years; Jeff was on the gold team in '93 and Jason's team took the bronze in '94. Last year their father Lawrence coached his team to a silver medal.

Action-packed men's games get high scores

It up in a one-on-one with Build-All's Steve Twilley with 2-24 to go in the first.

When the dust had settled, Doak was suspended for the rest of the season after racking up penalties for interference, instigating, fighting, unsportsmanlike conduct, gross misconduct, match (involving gross misconduct against an official) and three game misconducts. Twilley is out for three games with a fighting and game misconduct penalty.

At that point the game was tied 2-2, with the already short-staffed Thunder going into the second period a man short of Build-All who scored four more goals to Thunder's single.

"We might have won if it wasn't for all those penalties," said the Thunder's Tremblay. "We were short handed for most of the time."

The next men's league game is Wednesday at 8:45 p.m. when the Flyers take on the Thunder.

Bantam Eagles and Ice Hawks get talon-tied in close match

By David Donaldson

The Save-On-Foods bantam rep Eagles swooped out of a 3-1 deficit to tie their game against the Killarney Ice Hawks 5-5 at the leisure centre Saturday.

The first period was slow, with the Eagles unable to score on either of their power play opportunities midway through the period. The Hawks were first on the board with 2:54 to go in the first period.

The action intensified in the second period with three penalties awarded to the Eagles, including four minutes for Wade McBride's roughing and unsportsmanlike conduct at 8:07 after Killarney's second goal at 9:32.

The Eagles were able to shut down Killarney's power play until the Hawks drew a slashing penalty at 5:40. With the number of players on each team evened up, the Hawks made the score 3-0 at 2:56 before Howe
Sound finally scored with Todd

Barden's goal from Tyler Dufour with 2:04 left in the second.

The Eagles came back to life in the third period as the Hawks' spirits plummeted when one of their coaches was given a 10 minute game misconduct penalty, just before their fourth goal at 13:22.

After the Hawks received two minor penalties in a row, Dufour scored unassisted on the power play at 9:54. Killarney quickly responded with its final goal seven seconds later to bring the score to 5-2.

With the final period half over and two minor penalties incurred by Howe Sound, the game looked done.

But the Eagles were back in it when Ashton Robertson scored shorthanded at 5:46, assisted by Richard Collins. With all the players back on the ice, the puck was up and down until Todd with 1:04 to go. At this point,

Squamish J1 skier snows the competition

By Rahoul Ghose

In her first year of FIS racing,
Blackcomb Ski Club J1 racer
Jane Emerick is making her mark on the downhill circuit.

Emerick swept through Cavendish Farms Cup downhill and Super G races in Lake
Louise recently with two wins.

The Squamish 15-year-old was fifth and third during her downhill training runs and notched a second in her first downhill run Jan. 6, said Steve McNolty, assistant coach with Blackcomb's J1 squad.

Emerick turned up her competitive fire even more for the downhill Jan. 7, taking her first win this year and narrowly falling to second place in the Canadian Alpine Ski Series overall downhill standings, half a second behind Stephanie O'Brien of the Alberta Ski Club, who won the Jan. 6 race.

"This is a result that Jane has worked extremely hard for all summer and fall and it's great to see that when skiers put up a big effort and really try, it really pays off," said Jan Wengelin, Blackcomb's J1 head coach.

During downhill action Emerick's nearest local rival was the Whistler Mountain Ski Club's Lisa Yeates, who placed third, 0.22 of a second behind the Blackcomb speedster.

Emerick also pushed the edge during Super G action Jan.
8 and Jan. 9, falling during the first race but rebounding for her second win.

"She's really skiing well," McNolty said. "The ski rep were all out here and were really impressed; people like Salomon, so it was a really good time for her to turn it on."

The Lake Louise event is the only CASS downhill this season.

Local J1 downhill racers were in Rossland for the B.C. Cup races Jan. 20 and will return home later in February for a downhill competition on Blackcomb.

"She'll be really psyched to win that one," McNolty said.

Mountain bike club to hold meeting

The Squamish Off Road Cycling Association is having an annual general meeting Wednesday Jan. 31 at 7:30 p.m.

Anyone interested can come to Xanthines on Cleveland Ave. to meet with the executives. Topics to be discussed include: new trail developments, starting a mountain bike newsletter, the Squamish Mountain Bike Festival, the new off-road guide book for Squamish and Whistler, organizing a kids mountain bike group and organizing fun rides and events.

Squamish Axemen to start chopping

The Squamish Axemen Rugby Football Club is kicking off the new year with a match against the Vancouver Scribes in Vancouver on Saturday, Jan. 27. The last time they met, the Axemen erased the Scribes 31-3.

So far this season, the Axemen have three wins, eight losses and one tie. But director Gord Johnson says the team is steadily improving. Their first home game is Feb. 10.

For more information contact Gord Johnson at 892-3200.
