B.C. Rail explores the book business

Crown corporation submits one of two library proposals

Ron Enns

B.C. Rail is making its first foray into a commercial shopping centre development by building Squamish Station at the entrance to downtown. Now the company is entering into a partnership with the District of Squamish to build a new library. Another land development company — Mitchell Kime Thompson Inc. of Vancouver — has also put forth a proposal to the district for a private-public library partnership. The Squamish council is exploring the joint venture concept for a new library in an effort to spend less money on the project. Squamish voters by a narrow, but legally binding, margin approved in a 1993 referendum of spending up to $3.2 million on a new library. The referendum passed more than 50 per cent to pass. The result was a 51-11 vote above the 50 per cent mark. Council, however, said the vote was too close to mandate building a library, which had already been designed. At the time of the referendum, council has agreed to spend something in the order of about $2 million should it build a new library, prompting the conception of a private-public library in which a private developer would likely construct and pay for a building, the majority portion of which would be a long-term lease agreement with the district.

District staff members are now working with the two proponents on the proposals, neither of which was acceptable in its originally submitted form. A report is expected to be presented to council at its May 7 meeting, said Mayor Corinne Lonsdale.

The details of the proposals are confidential because they involve land matters. However, BCR Properties manager of investment and sales, Peter Martin, said the company's proposal is on District of Squamish and B.C. Rail land located south of Municipal Hall. The proposal is for a building that would house the library only, with no other commercial development.

Martin said that BCR Properties did consider the possibility of housing the library in its new Squamish Station shopping centre. But he said that idea was scrapped because it appears the company is going to have good success at leasing the shopping centre at higher rates than a library could afford.

"And secondly, we are quite keen on promoting the redevelopment of the downtown area. Not entirely for altruistic reasons, we own a lot of land downtown. Personally, I have always seen the downtown as eventually having potential for a much better kind of development down there. We thought it might provide a nice anchor there, just as we worked with the brew pub to make land available to them," Martin said, referring to Howe Sound Brewing Company restaurant and inn, under construction at the south end of Cleveland Avenue.

A representative from proponent Mitchell Kime Thompson could not be reached prior to the newspaper's deadline Monday.

Council was required to have made a decision by its last council meeting if the library issue were to go to referendum at the same time as the May 11 byelection. However, neither of the proposals — mired in the revising process with district staff — was ready in time.

"It doesn't preclude us from going to referendum at another time. We could still do that, but I don't know that we would — November is not that far away now," Lonsdale said, referring to the next general municipal election, at which time a referendum question could be placed on the ballot again.

However, Lonsdale said if council chooses to approve one of the proposals, it is possible that a referendum may not be needed. She said she wants a decision on the library to be made within the next couple of months.

"I'd be very embarrassed to have it an issue come November."

Howe Sound school district spared from amalgamation

By Patricia Wheeler

The provincial government announced Tuesday that the number of school districts will be reduced from 75 to 57, effective Dec. 1, 1996. The Howe Sound district is not among those districts to be amalgamated.

Originally, the Education Ministry planned to reduce the total number of B.C. school districts to 37. School trustees are pleased with the announcement, but say the government's latest word is only the beginning of what could be a long process.

"I am pleased with the announcement and I guess we are going to wait for the other shoe to drop, which will be the further announcements we will get related to the budget," said school district trustee, Laurie Vance.

The budget was expected to be announced late Wednesday afternoon.

"We all knew that regardless of what the outcome was going to be, we were going to face cut-backs. Generally speaking, I would have to say I am very pleased. I think the board worked very hard to show that we've been doing a really effective job of managing this school district and it is reasonable and rational to keep it as it is for now."

Late last month, Howe Sound school district officials made their official amalgamation proposal to the Education Ministry's steering committee. The district asked to remain on its own.

While the board supported the stand-alone option, Alex Miller of the Howe Sound Teacher's Association said that group and members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees made submissions to Education Minister Paul Ramsey supporting amalgamation with other districts. He cited the high administrative costs as one reason the existing district could not survive on its own.

Originally, the ministry proposed that the Howe Sound district be amalgamated with the smaller Lillooet district or the West Vancouver district and the Sunshine Coast. Those proposals were dropped by the ministry, however, in favor of the Garibaldi proposal to combine the Howe Sound districts with Powell River and the Sunshine Coast.

In an earlier interview with the Whistler Question, Miller said Howe Sound teachers were not necessarily in favor of the Garibaldi option, claiming a link to the North Shore would be more natural.

The ministry's new plan is expected to save $120 million over four years, including a $70,000 cut to block funding for basic operation.

All school boards in the province have also been ordered to cut costs by sharing services.

The plan spares school districts in the Lower Mainland, including North Vancouver, West Vancouver and New Westminster, where opposition to amalgamation has been strong.

Miller said the government likely wanted to upset as few people as possible with its latest announcement.

"I think the government doesn't want to offend anybody just before an election, quite honestly," he said.

Ramsey said he based the new restructure on recommendations made by the public education restructuring committee, which released its report on amalgamation Tuesday. The committee, appointed by past Education Minister Art Charbonneau, was chaired by officials from the B.C. School Trustees' Association and the istry.

Miller said teachers aren't convinced classrooms won't suffer from the expected cut-backs.

"I would like to see details. We've heard a lot of announcements before that say saving will be administrative, find out they end up in a classroom," he said.

Vance said cuts will have to be shared throughout the district.

"I think it's important that everybody share the cuts," said Vance. "It's that's reasonable and expected." She said could be made to all, including administrative the number of trustees and the way the district conducts its business.

"Those are the kind of things that we really to start talking about we've got to look at everywhere. We to make a conscious effort to take the least possible away from the classroom — and if we can avoid completely, in a perfect world, that would be what we would do. But I to be reality-based and have to know that there will be some cuts. But don't know what that will be. I think that the community should be very pleased with the result because, yes, it has paid off, and just shows that the district does have much more common than it does diversity."

School capital funding to help expand BSS

Capital funding of more than $1 million announced Friday by Education, Skills and Training Minister Paul Ramsey includes approximately $800,000 to plan an addition and renovations to Brackendale Secondary School, increasing its enrolment capacity by 100 to 600 student spaces.

Final approval of the funding is subject to study of the school site, which is located in the Cheekye River flood plain, to determine the most cost-effective way to reduce the potential for flood damage.

The total funding also includes $123,000 to renovate roofs at various schools, $238,465 for school bus upgrades and $75,455 for a new school.

The funding is being provided by BC 21, a crown corporation.

Community services offers summer camp for kids

Parents looking for summer activity programs for their children aged five to 10 are encouraged to consider the Summer Fun Club being operated by Sea to Sky Community Services.

The club will provide Squamish children with a day camp program of activities and field trips beginning July 2 and ending Aug. 1, operating from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. The weekly fee is $125. For information call Deb at 892-9176. Spaces are limited.

Conservation Society, Squamish Nation host watershed stewardship workshop

The Squamish stewardship workshop being hosted by the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society and the Squamish Nation will be held Saturday, April 20 starting at 8:30 a.m. at Totem Hall. Participants will receive an overview of government regulations and stewardship tools, hear case studies in an effort to develop skills for effective stewardship project implementation, learn how to identify, prioritize and protect streams and important natural areas, and focus on the function and role of municipal government in environmental management and land use planning.

For details, contact Edith Tobe of Squamish at 898-9171. Registration is limited to 40 people, but late registrations will be accepted.

Corridor companies, governments cited for pollution in latest report

By Ron Enns

Pollution of Howe Sound from acid mine drainage at Britannia Beach and from pulp and paper mill emissions at Port Mellon is listed in the province's latest environment non-compliance report. And the squeaky-clean image of Whistler has been tarnished with two citations in the B.C. Environment report, released last week.

The reports covers the period from April 1, 1995 to Sept. 30, 1995 and lists 109 operations that failed to meet environmental protection standards, a decrease of 22 from the previous six-month reporting period.

"The non-compliance report is one of the most effective tools we have to get operations and individuals to adhere to B.C.'s environmental protection laws," Environment Minister Moe Sihota said. "No one likes to see their name in the paper for something as serious as harming the environment."

Copper Beach Estates Ltd. of Britannia Beach seems not to be concerned with the media attention: it is one of 25 operations listed in the report four or more times. And the company is in receivership with the property the subject of a court-ordered sale. Prospective purchasers of the lands are aware of a pollution abatement and pollution prevention orders, which are significant detractors to the property's marketability.

Copper Beach Estates was cited for failure to collect all acid mine drainage and discharge at depth to Howe Sound as required by a 1981 pollution abatement order. And the company has failed to submit a plan to treat acid mine drainage so that it does not cause pollution as required by a 1993 pollution prevention and pollution abatement order.

There is ongoing monitoring of the acid mine drainage being done by the province and a private firm is conducting on-site pilot plant testing of novel bio-sulphide technology for possible treatment of acid mine drainage at the site.

Further south and on the west side of the sound, Howe Sound Pulp and Paper Limited at Port Mellon is on the report for the second time. The mill exceeded permit limits for nitrogen oxides and sulphur dioxide from a wood residue boiler in five of the six months of the reporting period. The company has retained a consultant to investigate the situation.

The Resort Municipality of Whistler is on the list for the sixth time for exceeding permit limits for municipal sewage. The municipality is cited twice: once for exceeding permit limits for effluent flow and again for exceeding permit limits for five-day biochemical oxygen demand at the Emerald Estates satellite plant.

A liquid waste management plan was approved in November 1993, however, the associated operational certificates have not been finalized due to federal funding not being received. Funding has now been received and the municipality has since been working with B.C. Environment to finalize the operational certificate.

The Village of Pemberton is also listed in the report — for the second time — for exceeding permit limits for five-day biochemical oxygen demand for municipal sewage and failure to submit some related data. A permit amendment application for plant upgrading is in abeyance since the municipality is trying to secure alternative sources of funding for the required upgrading. Its funding request under the federal-provincial infrastructure program was denied in June.

Depending on the severity of the non-compliance, operations may be subject to charges and penalties. This is the twelfth non-compliance report released in B.C., which is the only province to release a comprehensive list of operations that do not comply with environmental protection.

Dispute over girlfriend leads to charges, fine

Two Squamish men were fined a total of $4,500 in B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver as a result of an assault which occurred because of a dispute over a girlfriend.

Gregory Bruce Lindsay, 23, was found guilty of two counts of assault causing bodily harm on a Squamish man. And Phillip Robert Billy, 26, was found guilty of one count of assault causing bodily harm on the same man.

Both pleaded guilty and were sentenced in court March 7. Lindsay was fined $2,500 and Billy was fined $2,000. The assault took place at Meager Creek hot springs north of Pemberton Sept. 8, 1993. Lindsay and his girlfriend had broken up and when Lindsay found a Squamish man in the company of his ex-girlfriend, he and Billy became violent toward this man. As well, Lindsay assaulted the same man in Squamish on Aug. 31, 1993.

The man who was assaulted suffered bruises and cuts and was treated at the Pemberton Health Care Centre. Both men have been given time to pay their fines. Defaulting on the payment of the fines could result in six months in jail.

Developers dictate majority of community plan amendments

By Ron Enns

Squamish is indeed a blessed community. People and businesses flock to Squamish for what they believe is a high quality of life and an attractive place to locate. Other communities in British Columbia and Canada are not so fortunate: a flagging economy forces some residents to relocate and development is at a standstill. Virtually anyone or any developer — from bona fide to fly by night — is embraced with open arms by these "have-not" communities.

"I feel Squamish is a very desirable place to be," Margaret Thornton, planning director for the District of Squamish. "I haven't really seen a slowdown in growth here when the province has gone through a bit of a recessionary time. I don't see Squamish as a desperate community — we have got it and we have got it good."

Thornton said she is as busy as ever processing development applications made to the district. And the district responds to their requests with an "unheard of fast turnaround" time, she added.

But even though developers continue to come to Squamish with their proposals, and even though people moving here continue to ensure this is one of the fastest-growing communities in the province, Squamish council bows to developers by constantly changing the official community plan at the behest of developers.

"We have developers putting pressure on the community for their specific developments rather than as a community saying, 'Hey, we want this certain type of tourism development or this certain type of industrial development,'" and then going out and marketing it," Thornton said.

In Whistler, the philosophy is opposite of Squamish's way of thinking. As in Squamish, developers are regular visitors to the municipal offices. But when developers arrive in Whistler, they know the official community plan — the community's vision for its development — is sacred: it is the holy book, telling those who read exactly what is and what is not allowed.

"They have a strong OCP and a strong sense of vision and they don't deviate from that. The council has stuck with it," Thornton said.

"The other thing I commend Whistler for, in terms of development, is that they are in the driver's seat. They determined 'we need summer activities,' so then they went out and said 'we will only accept applications that have a summer activity component.'" And subsequently, golf courses and tennis resorts — the kind of facilities that fit with Whistler's stated vision — were developed.

Squamish's official community plan was last updated in 1989. Since that time, it has been amended 10 times with three more applications — including an amendment to develop and expand the airport — on file as well as another — a proposal for a hotel in the industrial park — that is bound to return after council turned it down a couple of weeks ago.

Site-specific amendments requested by developers have changed the face of Squamish dramatically: they have allowed condominium and housing developments to occur in several areas of Squamish, including Newport Ridge Estates (a new golf course is planned as well), along the Mamquam Blind Channel waterfront and on Mamquam Road across the road from the Mamquam sewage treatment plant, dog pound and municipal works yard; and they have made provision for a factory outlet mall in the industrial park.

Municipal Act suggests the plan should be updated every five years. Council plans to spend the rest of this year and probably at least part of next year on the project. Council has budgeted $30,000 in 1996 — and is counting on the province matching that figure — to work on a new official community plan. (Council is planning to apply for another $30,000 matching grant from the province in 1997, bringing the cost of developing a new official community to $120,000. The cost does not include planning department time.) Some of the work will be done by district staff — remember, they are busy with a steady stream of development applications — and some will be contracted to a consultant.

"Recent applications point to the need to revise the OCP," Lonsdale said. She said a new official community plan would help avoid recent confrontational public hearings. Another factor in avoiding confrontation is having an official plan that is "tightened up," where uses in specific areas are more clearly defined.

Both Lonsdale and Thornton agree the current official community is "loose" and provides a general vision. Thornton said a new plan may include individual neighborhood plans.

It will be a difficult task to develop a new official community plan. Since the last plan was completed in 1989, the demographics of Squamish have diversified significantly.

"Ten years ago nobody would have been able to convince me we'd have as much of our population commuting back and forth to Vancouver," Lonsdale said. "I would certainly have never recognized the eagles as being a major tourist attraction. Those things are new to us in the last ten years. Ten years ago I surely didn't see the forest industry declining the way it has either."

And it is intended that there will be ample opportunity for anyone in Squamish who wishes to provide input into the development of the new official community plan — Squamish's vision.

Undaunted by the challenge, Lonsdale said that she believes Squamish can still establish a vision, "a vision that would marry all of these various interests so that we can work in harmony and live together and keep the quality of life that we have today."

Margaret Thornton

Current applications to amend the official community plan will continue to change the look of this town: it is likely council will pass the amendments regarding expansion and development of the airport, a step to allow regularly scheduled air service between Seattle and Squamish; B.C. Rail has applied to allow commercial development between Squamish Elementary School and its new shopping centre along Hwy. 99 at the entrance to downtown Squamish; there is an application for a new large-scale subdivision along Loggers Lane southeast of Brennan Park Leisure Centre; and proponents of 120-room hotel planned for highway frontage in the industrial park say they are not giving up, even though council with a tie vote halted — at least temporarily — their plans.

Squamish Mayor Corinne Lonsdale said it will now be council's top priority to update the entire official community plan. The

Highway upgrade allows speed limit increase

Ron Enns

The speed limit will be increased on a portion of Hwy. 99 north of Squamish because the upgraded highway is capable of handling higher speeds. The speed limit from Depot Road in Blackendale to the orange bridge over the Millit Creek is being increased from its current 80 km/h to the new 90 km/h. An upgrade of the nine-kilometre three-lane highway was completed in 1989. Since then, traffic studies have shown the higher speed is possible without compromising safety.

Allowing traffic to sort itself out in the improved area before the speed returns to 80 km/h heading north into the Peakamus canyon area and south through Squamish will make the drive along Hwy. 99 safer, said Menno Martens, district highway technician for the Ministry of Transportation and Highways.

Squamish RCMP members have clocked some of the highest speeds on the road to Sky Highway in the Brohm Lake area, located along the section of the highway where the speed limit is being increased. Sgt. Dwain Wetteland said the highest speed he has personally clocked with radar in the area is a motorcycle travelling 198 km/h. The highest speed known of that police have clocked in the area is the 210 km/h a BMW car was travelling about four years ago.

The area around Brohm Lake has also seen a high accident area. Most of the accidents, however, involve excessive speed, and the higher speed limit of 90 km/h will not affect drivers who speed well beyond the speed limit, Wetteland said. In fact, some of the high-speed accidents were single-vehicle accidents where the driver lost control of the vehicle and went off the road.

The new speed limit does not pose a safety concern, Wetteland said. He said the 80 km/h speed limit in the area is unrealistic, according to a study prepared for the Ministry of Transportation and Highways.

Martens said the Ministry of Transportation and Highways tries to set speed limits to what the general motoring public feels they can drive. "Motorists will tell you how fast they can drive safely."

Martens said that as more sections of the highway are upgraded, the speed limit may be increased if the section is long enough to warrant it.

The speed limit on Hwy. 99 through Squamish will remain unchanged. New traffic lights will be installed this summer at Industrial Way, and an overhead warning light before the intersection will signal drivers to prepare to stop before the light changes to red. Martens said the signal spacing between the Cleveland Avenue and Industrial Way intersections on Hwy. 99 is sufficient to keep the speed limit at 80 km/h. With the construction of the B.C. Rail Squamish Station shopping centre, there will be two left-turn lanes from Cleveland Avenue onto Hwy. 99 and two lanes northbound for a short distance on Hwy. 99 to allow traffic to merge into the one northbound lane.

As well, the Ministry of Transportation and Highways is demanding that the developer of Garibaldi Plaza — a proposed new shopping centre along Hwy. 99 at Mamquam Road — pay for upgrades to areas of the highway in that will be affected. The Highways Ministry has said that the section of highway in the area should be four lanes.

OPINIONS/LETTERS*Image of teenagers a concern

Editor,
I read the Squamish Chief every Tuesday. I usually read each and every page in the newspaper, and my favorites are the letter to the editor, police blotter and darts and daffodils. Each of the three I have mentioned have bothered me all in the same way. What I may write might offend others, but that is not my intent. My intention is to make known of a struggle within a certain age group which roam our city - teenagers.

Concern number one. Every Tuesday, I will sit down and read the Squamish Chief. The first thing I look at are the letters to the editor, mainly because they appear in the first few pages of the newspaper, and also because I like them. Some of the letters I read relate to teenagers. How? People write about break-ins which occur in our community, and who do they blame? Teenagers. Other people write about people roaming the streets late at night, and who are they talking about? Teenagers. Then there are the people who complain about the large amount of hitchhikers in Squamish. They usually talk about all the hitchhikers, but whom in particular? Teenagers. The letters to the editor are a great idea to express and share our personal feelings about the community or an issue. Those ideas don't have to criticize others, do they?

Concern number two. After reading the letters to the editor, I will skim through the newspaper until I reach the police blotter column. I love this section because it helps us in the community to know what criminal issues are going on. We also feel encouraged by the blotters because it helps to be reassured on our safety and security. Last but not least, the police blotter gives the citizens of Squamish an opportunity to help the police apprehend a suspect, or contribute to a case. Most of what you read in the police blotter are crimes mentioned of young offenders. And what are those young offenders considered as? Teenagers. Excuse me, but it is about time that people realize that one teenager does not do what all teenagers do. Each of them has their own personality which gives them unique abilities. One of those abilities is to commit a crime, but most teenagers decide that it would not be wise. Instead of becoming criminals, teenagers become responsible as they make a mature decision.

I know it is wrong to steal, and many become affected by it, but why are most of those darts being directed at one age group?

Unfortunately, there are teenagers that do commit crimes and end up on the police blotter.

Concern number three. Darts and daffodils give Squamish citizens a chance to express their thanks in a positive or negative manner. Thankfully, the newspaper has agreed not to put in any negative dart or daffodil which directly aims at someone. I read many daffodils which express thanks to someone from someone. It fills my heart with joy to see these measures of gratitude. Then there are the darts. I do not personally like them, but I respect them because it gives people the right to express their anger on a personal issue. Some of them talk about how one goes and steals from another. Mostly from their yards, vehicles, or basically behind their backs. I know it is wrong to steal, and many become affected by it, but why are most of those darts being directed at one age group? Teenagers. It is in fact that mostly all teenagers do not commit the crime of stealing, or do pranks, but I understand people's anger and that they are expressing it through that feeling. I just don't see why there is one dart aiming towards a teenager that results in other teenagers being criticized.

Three main concerns which have resulted in many teenagers receiving a bad name, are basically coming from the newspaper. Please do not stop, but be aware that the way you write some of your concerns in the newspaper inflict on more people than you realize. Many teenagers. Just in case you have not been caught on by now, I am a teenager in Squamish who is currently enrolled in Grade 11 at Howe Sound Secondary School. I do not speak on behalf of many teenagers, or any all, but from my own personal concerns which other teenagers may feel. Squamish is getting too hard on others, and teenagers in particular. I am not saying teenagers are to blame, but not all of them deserve what they receive. I feel as if they need to rebuild their trusts towards teenagers, and learn that there are many responsible young adults in Squamish at the teenage level. I, one, would like to be considered a responsible and mature young adult. My last concern can be stated in three or four questions, and this is the main reason why I am writing.

Teenagers roam the streets late at night, break into homes and businesses, and hitchhike. Many of these things, and don't ask the reasons. As a teenager, I think the reasons is because there is a transportation provided after 7 and Sundays in order for us to go downtown, we roam the streets while other teenagers break into homes and businesses late at night because there is nothing else to do. As a teenager, I ask why hasn't been an effort to meet needs and wants in order for us to be entertained and kept out of the streets? Many teenagers like me often wished there was a theater something else that will satisfy our wants for entertainment. I thank you for reading my letter as it means a lot to me because I would like nothing more than have the community of Squamish realize things about teenagers.

Kids should be brought up in a decent manner

Editor,

Parents: when you turn out the lights tonight and snuggle into bed, do you know your teenage is out there somewhere? Is your child out on the streets intoxicated, falling all over the place making a complete menace of him or herself? Or is that your child kicking in some shop windows downtown?

Or maybe it's your kid who's in a fight right now with some gang, getting his head kicked in? Or even worse, how about that vehicle speeding around the streets in the early hours of the morning overloaded with kids most likely intoxicated, is that one of your kids? How about when you send your kids off to school each day, is it your kid who's making some other kid's life hell because of his or her race, or because the other individual does not fit in with the so call crowd? "Oh no," say, "not my kid."

When your kid comes home from school, are you looking for him or her? Or are you maybe working or trying to finish your education somewhere, while in the meantime little Johnny is running the streets and beating on some little kid across the way?

How sad it is to hear of a kid getting his nose punched in, or a boy beaten unconscious while attending school, or out of school some girl beating another girl to the point where she has to be hospitalized. Sadly enough these vicious kids do belong to parents and my question is, where are they getting all their aggression from?

Why aren't these parents bringing their kids up in a good and decent manner, teaching them to respect others, teaching them to be home at a decent time, knowing who they are with and where they are?

Unfortunately, a lot of parents are still trying to be the perfect parent, living up the good life, many mothers bring home one boyfriend after another. What impact does this have on the children?

As parents, it's our duty to put our kids first, teach them good morals, respect, and love for others, and explain being there for them.

But unfortunately so many parents are so wrapped up in their own selfish pleasures and needs, the children grow up to become rebels, lacking love and attention and going on to hurt innocent people.

Paramedics reach tentative agreement

Paramedics will not be forced to transfer and there will be no layoffs based on a tentative agreement signed by B.C. Ambulance Paramedics and B.C. Ambulance Service.

A three-day Ready mediated talks between the union and B.C. Ambulance Service for eight days, culminating in a four-year tentative agreement reached late on the evening of March 29.

The agreement has addressed every one of the main issues we had on the table, said Jim Patterson, president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 873 representing B.C. Ambulance Paramedics.

Paramedics would also receive a three per cent wage increase over the four-year term of the agreement, factoring in overtime.

One of the union's main issues was its concern about downsizing ambulance stations. Paramedics' ambulance call statistics were significantly higher than B.C. Ambulance Service's call volumes and the union didn't want to see stations downsized based on numbers it believed did not accurately reflect the situation.

One community backs up another and doesn't transfer a patient, this is not considered in B.C. Ambulance Service's statistics, Patterson said in a previous interview.

Communities around the province prepared community profiles addressing population, types of calls and other information which the union presented during the negotiations.

"There was no agreement on the staffing formula," said Patterson.

"Oh no," but as a compromise, the agreement states there will be no forced layoffs or transfers, he said.

Some stations might be downsized, however, as a result of attrition when someone retires or quits, in the meantime, Patterson said.

The employer would have to make a political decision at the time if they will fill it or not.

The level of required training for entry level paramedics made significant strides in the new tentative agreement. Now all three Emergency Medical Assistant levels of training must meet the Canadian Medical Association standards, rather than the two higher levels from before, said Patterson.

Under the new agreement, the basic training time required for every entry-level paramedic would increase by 105 hours, including in-hospital training.

For the rural areas, this is quite an increase in training, Patterson said. "It will certainly increase the primary care in the field."

The union also made gains on its request for a patient transfer service. The new agreement would see an increase in transfer service start in Vancouver and Victoria, providing transportation for patients from their homes and from hospitals and between facilities. It's possible the service might expand to the interior or perhaps the Sea to Sky area, depending on traffic volume, Patterson said.

Paramedics would also see their short-term disability increase from 60 to 75 per cent under the new agreement. The ratification vote, involving a mail-in ballot, should conclude by May 15, said Patterson.

Byelection candidates include experienced and rookies

By Ron Enns

Six of nine candidates vying for a seat on Squamish council in the May 11 byelection have either been on council previously or have aspired to be a member of council.

Terrill Patterson, Lynn Wilbur and Brian Edwards are all former one-term councillors and Gino Pagliardi, Debra McBride and Bill Brown have in the past unsuccessfully run for council. That leaves newcomers to the council scene Gwyer Webber, Neil McDonald and Paul Lalli.

Terrill Patterson, who was a councillor for a term in the mid-1980s and has lived his entire life in the Howe Sound area, has always taken an active interest in the politics of this town: his usual seat in the gallery of the council chamber is always occupied and he is a regular attendee at virtually every other public meeting.

"My concern is for fairness to those who are unfairly treated," said Patterson, who spends a lot of his efforts in attempting to convince council to hold taxes down.

Lynn Wilbur was on council from 1987 to 1989 and has lived in Squamish since 1975. He is employed as an electrician with the Howe Sound School District and previously operated an electrical contracting company in Squamish. He has been president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, local 779, for the past two years. Wilbur said his campaign will focus on the issue of planning, which has arisen recently with issues like the development of the airport and commercial development.

"I would like to inject a new respect for community planning," he said, adding that he wants consistency in council decisions and an improvement of the democratic process so that council decisions are made representing the majority of the residents.

Wilbur noted that council is supporting the development and expansion of the municipal airport in Brackendale, even though many Brackendale residents vehemently oppose the plan.

Brian Edwards, a councillor from 1990 to 1993, did not run in the last general municipal election so that he could spend more time with his primary school-aged children. He was also a town councillor in Pemberton in the 1970s. Edwards said he is now ready to once again commit more time to municipal matters. He is the principal of Mamquam Elementary School and is nearing the end of his career as an educational administrator. He has worked in the Howe Sound School District for 34 years and has lived in Squamish since 1974.

"I'm intensely interested in the quality of life in our community and I want to see Squamish's continued growth take place in a planned, common sense and balanced manner."

Edwards said that one of his strengths when he was a councillor was listening impartially to the information that was provided and then using a rational basis to determine the best step to follow.

Debra McBride is a perennial candidate for council. She has lived in Squamish for 18 years and is a founding director of both the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society and the Howe Sound Women's Centre. She has in the past been secretary for Big Brothers/Big Sisters and Sea to Sky Community Services Society.

McBride said that as a councillor she would work toward retaining residential values in Squamish and not let industry take over.

"We have lived in a protected area for 20 years, but now that the estuary management plan is signed, developers have a free hand and a rubber stamp with council."

Brian Edwards

Gino Pagliardi ran for council in a byelection one year ago and is running again with a multitude of ideas. He has lived in Squamish since 1988. He is a rigger fitter and certified welder and is active in the Boilermakers Union, local 359.

Pagliardi wants a faster building permit process for small builders. He is an advocate of opening up the waterfront to the public, believes strict forest practices code regulations will create more jobs through increased heli-logging and is a supporter of airport development and expansion. As well, he wants the issue of illegal secondary suites settled as part of dealing affordable housing.

Bill Brown last ran for council in 1990. He has lived in the Howe Sound area since 1976. He is an accountant and bookkeeper at the Sea to Sky Hotel and prior to that operated his own bookkeeping and tax service for 10 years. He has been a member of the Squamish Credit Union board for 10 years.

Brown said that he is interested in examining all aspects of the official community plan and particularly the proposed amendments to allow airport development and expansion.

He said he is concerned that the interests of Brackendale residents are not being considered with the airport plan and is concerned that the costs to taxpayers could outweigh the potential benefits to Squamish.

Gwyer Webber has taken a recent interest in council as a result of the planned airport development and expansion and the proposed Garibaldi Plaza shopping centre. He has lived in Squamish for 17 years and commutes to Whistler to his job in network maintenance for B.C. in the northern part of the Sea to Sky corridor.

Webber said it appears that council currently is concerned with the whole rather than each neighborhood.

"Every neighborhood is distinctive," he said, adding that in the City of Vancouver neighborhoods are looked at on an individual basis. Webber, who has in the past appeared before council speaking about transportation alternatives, said he does not oppose development, but believes that council is abiding by the official community plan. He said the airport should be left as it is and that pedestrian safety, including that of school children, is an issue at the proposed new mall on Hwy. 99 and Mamquam Road.

Neil McDonald has also recently taken an interest in council, saying he is "fed up with the way things are handled" and that people in the community need a stronger voice. He has lived in Squamish since 1980 and owns and operates Turbidity Woodheat and Ceramic Tile.

McDonald recently founded the group People's Choice Community Planning because he believes council is not doing a proper job of following the official community plan. He said there was a lot of thought put into the official community plan, but added that council continues to make decisions against what is laid out in the plan. He said an opportunity for development must be provided, but that it should be decided what is suitable for each neighborhood.

He said one of the official community plan's objectives, to "protect neighborhood livability," would be met through the development and expansion of the airport at Brackendale.

Paul Lalli has taken an active interest in several groups in Squamish and now wants to represent the community at large. Lalli was born and raised in Squamish and employed at the Sea to Sky Hotel and at the Bank of Montreal. He is director of the chamber of commerce and a member of the Squamish merchants' association, the Sea to Sky film committee and the chamber tourism marketing committee.

Lalli said he wants to encourage and create opportunities for industry in Squamish — both in the industrial park and the downtown south area — so that tax rates can be lowered.

He said he would like to see controlled growth in Squamish where the community is "in the driver's seat." He said a vision must be developed and followed as inevitable growth occurs.

The Chief's coverage of the byelection continues next week with council candidates discussing Squamish's "new economy." The week after candidates will focus on the way council should handle its dealings. The week of the election candidates will portray their vision for Squamish.

New rules to make beer garden operators more accountable

David Donaldson

Organizations who hold beer gardens at community events in Squamish will be required to submit detailed financial reports to the parks and recreation commission, according to a recent amendment in the beer garden permit request for 1996.

Groups which held beer gardens in 1995 will have to report how much money was raised and where that money went before receiving permission to have a beer garden in 1996. The commission will provide groups with forms detailing a new format for reporting 1996 expenses.

They're using public lands to raise funds," says parks and recreation director Bob Kusch. "The municipality should have a right to know where that money is going."

Another change in the permit request will see 35 per cent of each group's beer garden profits donated to a local charity or a community organization other than the group conducting the event.

Kusch says these policies have met with mixed feedback.

Tom Johnstone, who is organizing the Trueline Olympics/Squamish FC Soccer Fest tournament for the first weekend of April, is relying on the beer garden to help raise $9,000 for prize money.

"I don't agree with the 35 per cent donation," he says. "That's why you have a tournament — to pay for everything. It costs a lot of money to run a team every year. I don't like we're raising money to go to Mexico."

Johnstone also disagrees with the new expense reporting procedures. According to law, it's only Victoria that has to know what the district to even ask for (expense reports) is long. But we have to abide by it otherwise we don't (a beer garden), which isn't right."

Kusch said the district is trying to make sure individuals aren't making personal profits from beer gardens, that the money is going to community use.

If any group is found to have misreported its earnings, it will not be allowed to hold beer gardens in the future.

"We wouldn't want to see individuals making money off the beer gardens because then it's a business and not a community enterprise," says Kusch.

Squamish RCMP will be reviewing beer garden applications carefully this summer to ensure user groups are meeting the legal requirements of the permits.

"From our perspective we have had some concerns about some of the events," said Const. Fran Bethell.

Specific concerns include over-serving of beer, the number of people in the designated beer garden area, containment of beer within that area and serving underage drinkers.

Kusch says beer garden events are difficult to enforce by district employees because they have no enforcement authority, but agrees more enforcement is needed.

"If the RCMP has concerns and they're willing to police more than that's great because those things shouldn't be happening."

Beer garden servers must have a Serving It Right certificate, a provincial requirement to serve alcohol, for the group to obtain the permit.

Bethell said the RCMP will review each event individually when deciding whether to grant its approval. Performance of groups who have had beer gardens in the past will be taken into consideration.

To obtain a beer garden permit a group must submit a proposal to the parks and recreation commission which, if approved, is sent to council for municipal approval. Then the application goes back to parks and recreation with a deposit and proof of insurance and is then sent to the RCMP for review.

If the proposal is approved by the police, the group gets its permit.

No requests for beer gardens were turned down by Squamish RCMP last year.

Young girl succumbs to injuries from car accident

A four-year-old Brackendale girl died after a single-vehicle accident on Hwy. 99 near Britannia Beach April 10.

Natasha Paige Bolkowy succumbed to her injuries in Squamish General Hospital.

The accident occurred when the car in which the girl's mother and twin sister were travelling went out of control and into the east ditch while heading north into Britannia Beach at about 4:30 p.m.

Natasha was in the front seat with her seat belt on when the accident happened. Her sister, in the back seat, and mother both had their seat belts on as well.

The mother and other child were both taken to Squamish General Hospital with non-life-threatening injuries.

Bomb scare fails to materialize

Police are continuing their investigation after a phone call to Mountain FM warning of a bomb at the Squamish municipal airport was traced to a phone at the Woodfibre pulp mill. Mountain FM received the call April 5 at about 9 a.m. The caller said there was a bomb at the airport in Brackendale that would explode the next day. The person at Mountain FM who took the call used a call display feature to find out the number of the phone from which the call was made. A police dog searched all buildings, vehicles and equipment at the airport and found no sign of a bomb. A bomb did not, as promised, detonate the next day.

Police have been receiving complaints of traffic speeding through the school zone on Guilford Drive between in the vicinity of Stawamus Elementary School and Squamish General Hospital. The speed limit in all school zones between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on school days is 30 km/h. Police request that motorists pay more attention when driving in school zones.

A 14-year-old Squamish girl stumbled on a slope and fell down an embankment in the residential area of Britannia Beach April 4 at about 6:30 p.m. The girl, who was unconscious after hitting her head on a rock in the fall, was taken by ambulance to Lions Gate Hospital. Britannia Beach Volunteer Fire Department members assisted B.C. Ambulance Service members in the rescue.

A Squamish man has been charged with assault after his 15-year-old daughter was pushed around and slapped in the face. The incident occurred April 5 at about 6 p.m. The investigating police officer took the girl to Squamish General Hospital. The father was arrested and released with a promise to appear in court.

A Surrey man and a female passenger were taken to Whistler Health Clinic after the car in which they were travelling rolled over along Hwy. 99 just south of Rubble Creek April 6 at 1:45 p.m. The driver lost control of the Acura on a curve and flipped into the ditch. The driver had neck injuries and the woman had a possible fracture. Police said the cause of the accident was attributed to driving without due care.

Two Squamish youths have been charged with theft under $5,000 after a Honda 5,000-watt generator and a Sears mitre saw were stolen from the garage of a Greenwood Way residence April 7 at about 4 p.m. At about 5 p.m., a neighbor found the generator and the saw in the area hidden under a stump. The two boys — aged 15 and 16 — were arrested and released with a promise to appear in court. As well, a curfew of 8 p.m. to 6 p.m. was imposed on the 15-year-old boy and he is required to stay in Squamish unless he is in the custody of a parent.

A 26-year-old Squamish man has been charged under the Criminal Code with driving while disqualified after police stopped him in a routine traffic check on Cleveland Avenue April 7 at about 10 p.m. The man has been charged in the past for driving while disqualified.

Cash, a global positioning system, a mountain bike, a hand-held radio transceiver were stolen from the Mountain Spirit Aviation building at the airport sometime between 10 p.m. April 7 and 10 a.m. April 8. The loss was $5,000. Police continue the investigation.

A Vancouver woman was taken to Squamish General Hospital by ambulance after the vehicle she was driving went off Hwy. 99 and into Daisy Creek near Britannia Beach March 29 at about 10 p.m. The woman was charged with failing to keep her vehicle in the right lane.

Damage at two municipal parks was recently reported. On March 25 it was noticed that railings had been kicked out on the bridge in Cottonwood Park and graffiti had been put on playground equipment. It cost $400 to repair the damage. And on two different occasions March 23 and March 28 — it was noticed that boards had been kicked out at the downtown pavilion. Damage totalled $300.

A VCR, a cordless telephone, a 35 mm camcorder, skis, poles, ski boots, assorted jewelry — including rings, necklaces, watches and a small antique music box — were stolen from a trailer in the Spirit trailer court April 3 between 1:45 p.m. and 5 p.m. Police continue the investigation.

A Vancouver man was charged with possession of a narcotic after police discovered two grams of marijuana during a routine traffic check on Hwy. 99 near Valley Drive March 28 at about 5:45 p.m.

Earth Day activities focus on the estuary

The Squamish Estuary Conservation Society is hosting a variety of Earth Day activities this year with the help of a grant from the Science provincial government. The society was one of seven organizations in the province to get such a grant for a variety of activities, including Science Week in the fall. Local experts will share their information on Earth Day in Squamish and there will be demonstrations in which everyone can participate.

The focus of the activities will be on the banks of the estuary this year, with tours of nesting sites.

Everyone will also have the opportunity to build a bird house.

There will be exploration of the critters in the mud and water, short walking tours describing the plant life in the area, and there will be pamphlets and explanations of the many good walking trails in the estuary.

The activities are designed for everyone, from club leaders and teenagers to families, tourists, grandparents and after schoolers who already know a lot about the estuary but want to learn more.

It is an ideal time to get to know the estuary for people expecting summer visitors and looking for places to explore, and estuary science grant coordinator Sandi Paterson.

Participants are asked to meet at the estuary sign at the end of Vancouver Street at 1 p.m. Sunday, April 21. For more information contact Sandi Paterson at 898-3913.

HEU hopes 'yes' strike vote will act as 'wake-up call'

By Cheryl Baudin

The Hospital Employees' Union hopes a vote in favor of strike action will be a "wake-up" call for the Health Employers' Association of B.C. to reach an agreement soon.

"We hope the employers will see that our members are united and it's time to work out a deal," said Chris Gainor, the union's communications officer.

About 20,000 union members voted 80.5 per cent in favor of striking, he said Friday morning when the official announcement was made.

Half of the affected membership voted, including members of the HEU, the B.C. Government Employees' Union and the International Union of Operating Engineers. About 19,000 of the voters represented the HEU, said Gainor.

Four years ago, the Hospital Employees' Union alone voted 78 per cent in favor of strike action, he said.

Meanwhile, Vince Ready continues to mediate talks between the association and these unions as well as the Health Sciences Association of B.C. and B.C.

Nurses' Union.

The latter two unions represent nurses, lab, X-ray and physiotherapy staff, including casuals.

The employer presented its employment security position Thursday night but it was not well-received by the HEU.

"This is the key issue in our eyes," said Gainor. "We want to see that health services are protected and now there's a protection in the position from the employers."

Union leaders announced a four-hour strike is set for Thursday morning at hospitals and long-term care facilities.

Nurses' union president Ivory Warner said a recommendation will be made regarding a strike vote.

She adds there is no protection for nurses in the employers' association employment security position.

While Warner said she has not heard proposed layoffs in the Sea to Sky area, a number of registered nurses may be off at the Prince George Hospital, on information stewards received from hospital management.

Corridor flights scaled back

By Andy Stonehouse

A Lower Mainland-based airline providing the only regularly scheduled passenger flights into the Sea to Sky corridor is cutting back its services after frequently flying empty planes into the region's airports.

North Vancouver Air had previously been running two flights a day to either the Squamish or Pemberton airport — depending on the weather — from its bases in Vancouver and Victoria, but those flights will now be run on demand only.

Passengers after landing are then shuttled by bus to hotels in Whistler.

"We've decided to continue to do our Whistler flights, but they will now be based on a minimum booking of two passengers per flight," marketing coordinator Shelley Tate said. "In the past we were running regardless of bookings, but the demand seems to have slowed down."

North Vancouver Air is also cancelling the daily flights it had offered from the Seattle/Tacoma area to the Sea to Sky corridor.

The company will, if demand warrants it, still have planes available for morning and afternoon departures from both Vancouver and Victoria, with return flights starting at $276 per person.

"We're getting a lot of phone calls for the summer and we're hoping to have a fairly good return on our services," Tate said.

Prime Air is waiting for the completion of the $1-million Pemberton airport terminal before beginning scheduled flights using Dash 7 aircraft.

And Seattle-based Pacific Cascade is providing regularly scheduled air service between Seattle and Squamish using Dash 7 aircraft, pending planned development of expansion of Squamish municipal port, located in Brackendale.

99 Watch seeking drivers with cell phones

Volunteer group plans expansion to Whistler, Pemberton in the near future

Al Price

Nine new members joined the Squamish chapter of 99 Watch at its first meeting of the year last week, and organizers of the volunteer group which reports problems along the highway to the RCMP are hoping to increase participation even more.

We would love to see a lot more cellular users on our team."

— Lesley Rommel

99 Watch was originally formed in Lions Bay two years ago to assist the RCMP in getting problem drivers off the road. Volunteers receive training from the RCMP in what to watch for and what not to do.

Those with cellular phones who drive the highway on a regular basis are able to quickly contact the RCMP when there is an accident or "eyes," when a driver is noted driving erratically or dangerously. Police are then often able to stop the driver and issue either a ticket or a four-hour warning.

A lot of people have cellular phones, and we would like more people to realize there are not a lot of obligations to being a member of 99 Watch, said secretary Lesley Rommel. There are very few meetings and there is a half-hour training session with Const. Dave Ritchie on what to look for on the highway and what not to do.

We would love to see a lot more cellular users on our team."

Rommel said she is also going to get B.C. Tel to install more pay phones along the highway so everyone can report accidents or problem drivers more quickly.

People waste a lot of time going to a pay phone because I think there are only two along the highway between here and West Vancouver, one in Britannia and one in Lions Bay. With the highway the way it is people can spend a lot of time getting to the nearest phone."

At the meeting, 99 Watch under Michael Broughn of Lions Bay gave a brief history of the organization, and David Swales of the Ministry of Transportation and Highways answered questions. John Howes was introduced as the new coordinator of the Squamish chapter of 99 Watch, having taken over recently from previous coordinator Ted Mousseau.

99 Watch is also hoping to get chapters up and running as soon as possible in Whistler and Pemberton, Rommel said.

"It is particularly important to have a group in Whistler. Most of the traffic flow is going to and from Whistler, so we need to target those drivers and make them a little more aware of just how tricky driving this highway can be. It's bad enough when you're sober and it's a nice day, never mind having had a couple of beers and you're tired after a day of skiing and driving in the dark."

Robert Bedgood of Squamish is now in the process of setting up 99 Watch with a page on Mountain Internet, and within a couple of months there should be detailed history and current activities of the group available to anyone on the system, along with the capability of sending and receiving e-mail.

Anyone wanting more information on the 99 Watch program is asked to contact Lesley Rommel at 898-3133.

Former MLA says 'no thanks' to watchdog job

By Michael Laycock

Former West Vancouver-Garibaldi MLA David Mitchell says he has no plans to take on the role of conflict-of-interest commissioner again.

Although he says Premier Glen Clark has encouraged him to have his name in the running again for the job, he has declined.

"I've told (Liberal leader Gordon) Campbell and Clark personally that I do not wish to be considered any further for the position," Mitchell said Friday. "I don't wish to be any more controversial than I have been."

Mitchell was appointed to the governmental watchdog position in late March, but stepped down only days later after former commissioner Ted Hughes, who had planned to retire this year, told the media he had been pushed out of his job.

Mitchell was also under pressure from members of the Liberal and Reform parties who questioned his neutrality.

Clark apologized for the way the turnover was handled and reinstated Hughes, who is not slated to be replaced until May 23.

Two weeks ago, Mitchell said he was unsure whether or not he would accept the job if it were offered again. However, on Friday, he said the affair has been a learning experience but he no longer wants the job.

Mitchell's original decision to accept the job meant he had to resign as MLA.

That resignation has led to criticism by West Vancouver-Garibaldi Liberal candidate Ted Nebbeling, who says the riding has been left without an official voice in the legislature.

"There is a vacuum there," Nebbeling said, adding that many issues such as transportation and education need to be addressed.

"We have no representation. There is a need for people to have that direct line to Victoria."

Nebbeling said his office has received about 300 letters and telephone calls from constituents concerned about various issues, and he has asked West Vancouver-Capilano Liberal MLA Jeremy Dalton to address the concerns.

Nebbeling argued that Mitchell no longer has standing in the legislature and thereby has no political clout.

"He is no longer an MLA, he is just 'citizen Mitchell,'" he said. "Once you're out, you're out."

But Mitchell said he is continuing to perform the role of MLA on a volunteer basis.

"It's not a real issue," he said, noting that the legislature is not currently in session. "The MLA serves as a conduit for constituents. I continue to play that role."

He added that he may no longer technically be the MLA, but the provincial government remains responsive to his constituents and legislative offices, which he plans to keep open to or through the next election.

"No one will be left in the lurch," he said. "We're in the office every day. We're on the job."

Mitchell added that an election is likely in the next months, and he reaffirmed his decision not to seek election.

Once the election is called, Mitchell plans to be involved in media work, offering political comment and analysis on radio, in print and on television. He has several book projects in the works, in addition to a one-hour television documentary on the life of former premier W. A. C. Bennett.

The elusive and multi-talented violist makes a Simply Classic debut

David Donaldson

The theme for this year's Simply Classic variety concert is novelty.

The third annual Howe Sound Performing Arts Association presentation will feature an unusual ensemble including Squamish United Church minister Claire Bowers, a professional storyteller, and violist Bruce Henczel.

To see a professional storyteller weave an elaborate tale is rare enough, but what is so novel about a viola?

The viola is a stringed instrument similar to the violin, but with a lower sound closer to a cello. Most music is written with a treble or bass clef but viola music is written with a tenor clef, which many musicians can't read. Between 30 and 40 violins can be found in an orchestra, whereas only five or six violas are usually present.

Henczel says Hollywood actually substitutes the slightly larger viola when a character is supposed to be playing violin, for the deeper, warmer sound.

For people, the 24-year-old father of three switched to viola at age six after three years of violin, and studied until he was 13. The rigorous practice schedule of Vancouver to six hours a day interfered with school work and he had to stop practising with two years to go in school. It wasn't originally Henczel's choice to switch over to viola, but it was necessary to fit in with the family string quartet with his two brothers on violin and sister on cello. He says the viola is tougher to play than the violin because you need stronger wrists and fingers to press the strings harder and you have to be dead-on with your finger placement.

Rebellion to his classical upbringing, Henczel took up the drums and to his parents' disapproval, was playing night clubs at age 13. After burning himself out from five years of drumming speed al, he has slowed down and now plays in local jazz band VONITO (a play on a local postal code).

It's a totally different style of playing," he says. "Drums aren't as disciplined, it's more laid back."

Henczel plays drums for fun and profit, making a little money at teaching on the side, but plays the viola to unwind.

"It soothes me. I find it very relaxing to play after a hard day."

He wouldn't want to teach viola, however, because it requires so much time and discipline to instruct someone properly, and that means a lot of time.

Bruce Henczel gives his fingers a good workout in preparation for the third annual Simply Classic concert, which will be held May 9 at the Squamish Baptist Church. David Donaldson photo

"I'm very happy teaching drums. I love to see a kid get good at this instrument."

Henczel prefers to work with younger children because they are undecided about their future and are more receptive to learning different styles of music.

He hopes to one day start a band with his young sons. His five-year-old has expressed a great interest in the bass and even watches instructional videos, while his three-year-old could be shaping up to be a drummer.

It has been eight years since Henczel has performed in public with the viola and he's a little nervous about his solo. He will be performing Franz Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2, a difficult piece he arranged himself, with no piano accompaniment to cover any potential mistakes. Most people will recognize the piece, which is very popular with children, as it was once featured in a Bugs Bunny cartoon.

Henczel will also perform a Telemann concerto with Heather Beckmyer on piano. Beckmyer, who holds a degree from the Royal Conservatory of Music will also perform a piece by Beethoven in a piano solo.

Also on the bill is Heinz Ratzlaff, a classical guitarist who will accompany Bowers's storytelling.

Such a gathering of talent and unusual performances is a "rare treat" for Squamish audiences says Joanna Schwarz of the HSPAA.

Simply Classic #3 will be held at the Squamish Baptist Church at 8 p.m. May 9. Admission is by donation with all proceeds going towards the HSPAA's grand piano fund.

Beauty is easy to find in the Squamish estuary

When I first arrived in Squamish about four years ago, one of my first assignments was to plunk myself down at my desk, read more than a year's worth of back issues and sift through mounds of files compiled about issues pertaining to this area. The term estuary, and Squamish Estuary Management Plan, and Squamish Estuary Coordinating Committee and Squamish Estuary Conservation Society kept appearing over and over. And because of the similarity of the acronyms of SEMP, SECC and SECS — and the fact that I didn't even really what the estuary was — I was having one heck of a time trying to figure out what all the hubbub was over this estuary.

I read through drafts of the Squamish Estuary Management Plan and was further confused by the designation of various sites in the estuary by letter. To me, Site E just did not mean very much. To others though — especially members of the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society — it must have meant a lot with the vigor they demonstrated. At the time, they pretty had me convinced that they really would lie down along the rail tracks bisecting the estuary in an attempt to stop further development of environmentally sensitive land.

I wanted to know more about the estuary so I called Meg Fellowes — the estuary conservation society president at the time — and we went on a walking tour of the estuary. It was a whirlwind tour, which helped me understand a little bit better about the things I had been reading, but I still didn't really understand the importance of the estuary.

Four years later, I am still discovering the estuary and learning about it. It didn't take long to learn that the estuary is a transition zone for salmon moving from their freshwater spawning grounds in tributaries along the Squamish River to the salt water of Howe Sound and beyond. The estuary is a protective place compared to the big ocean, where fish have a chance to mature. The estuary also is home to many species of birds, reptiles, various form of aquatic life and mammals.

During the winter, I was in the estuary almost every day, walking the dogs and showing our daughter the wonders of this peaceful place. I also for the first time this winter discovered the estuary using another mode of transportation: the canoe. Being right on the water, the estuary has a different perspective. You can silently glide past ducks and birds like the herons. The sound of the wings and call of trumpeter swans as they flap breaks the stillness of the clam inner channels of the estuary.

I remember when I first moved here that the estuary conservation society had buttons that read: The Squamish estuary: yours to enjoy, not destroy. The estuary is not all peace and tranquillity: there has been destruction in the estuary over the years. The training dike leading to the windsurfing area effectively cut off access for young salmon from the Squamish River. It is heartening to see the recent work by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans and the District of Squamish in

Surroundings

By Ron Enns

opening up channels and installing culverts to reconnect the two water systems. Just last weekend, I saw schools of salmon swimming in one of the recently opened channels.

As well, littered throughout the estuary is evidence some people's attitudes that the estuary is little more than a convenient dumping ground. Abandoned and burned-out vehicles are scattered throughout the estuary, as is household garbage.

But dig a little deeper into the estuary and the beauty is easy to find. A bit of bushwhacking or easier travel on some of the trails leads to grassy meadows. Earlier in the century, high-quality Timothy hay was commercially grown in some of these meadows. There are some impressive trees left in the estuary as well. Some old-growth sitka spruces and red cedars stand tall among the proliferation of maple, cottonwood and alder trees. The beauty of the estuary is also in the keepers of the estuary, particularly the tireless efforts of Len Goldsmith, who is always building more bird and duck boxes. Some of the boxes are made from plastic buckets he has found littered in the estuary. A bit of cutting and some camouflage paint, and presto, a new home is created for some of our feathered friends.

This Earth Day, on Sunday, the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society is focusing its activities on the estuary. The event is for everyone, all ages: from people like me who want to learn more about the estuary to experts who already know a lot about the estuary, but want to know even more. The more people learn about the estuary, the more they will respect it and protect it. Meet at the estuary sign at the end of Vancouver Street Sunday at 1 p.m. For more information, call Sandi Paterson at 898-3913.

Abandoned Pooch Gets Another Chance

SPCA volunteers Colleen Miller, left, and Donna Spiece gave the appropriately named dog Chance a fighting chance when Miller rescued him from near the highway north of Squamish. He was undernourished, had open wounds and ticks which were all taken care of, and now has a new home with a family in Pemberton. David Donaldson photo

COMMUNITY

Hilltop House needs sale items

Hilltop House will hold its annual spring garage sale on Saturday, April 20, from 10 a.m. until noon. The morning will also include crafts, a bake sale and samosas and coffee will be available. Donations to the garage sale, crafts and baked items would be much appreciated. Clothing is not accepted for the sale. A member of the HTH Support Society will be at Hilltop on Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to accept donations.

Thinking of Hilltop House, a birthday party for April residents will be held tomorrow, Wednesday, April 17, at 2 p.m. Those to be honored include: Frank Erridge, Sylvia Buchanan, Dot Wain, Winnifred Carter, Lillian Grass and Herb Rudolph.

The Valleycliffe Christian Fellowship Church will welcome a 40-member youth group from the South Langley Church on Sunday, April 21 at 11 a.m. The young people will present the musical Living on the Edge. There is no charge and everyone is welcome.

Sea to Sky Magazine, a variety talk show on Community Cable 10 is introducing a new segment called Advocate's Corner hosted by Mark McConchie. In it he will answer your letters, complaints and concerns about the community. If you would like to write to him, please mail to: Sea to Sky Magazine — Advocate's Corner, Community Cable 10 TV, Box 369, Squamish, V0N 3G0 or fax him at 892-5396.

Members of the Tantalus Seniors Centre Society will be selling tickets for their raffle coming up on May 3. A table will be set up at Highlands Mall on Friday and Saturday, April 19-20 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The Howe Sound Performing Arts Association sends a message to those 55 years and over to "get your act together" in preparation for the talent contest on June 7. For a group, duo or single, the maximum performing time is five minutes. The contest will be held on the same evening as the teen talent contest and will be held in the new theatre at Howe Sound Secondary School. For more information please phone Joanna at 898-5503 or Carol at 898-3483.

STORK STORY - THROWER - Melanie and Murray are pleased to announce the birth of their second son, Joshua William Dean, weighing 9 lb. 9 oz. and born in Squamish General Hospital on March 17. This is a brother for Dalton. Proud grandparents are Jeanine and Horace Itoku in Honolulu, Hawaii, Shirley Biglow of Squamish, John and Kim Thrower of Vancouver and Bill and Carol Clausen of Campbell River. Pleased great-grandparents are Alice Drader of New Westminster and Wick and Annie Christianson of Duncan. Melanie and Murray express thanks to Dr. Louise Martin and the nursing staff.

Tickets for the Mother's Day basket raffle will be available from members of the Women's Auxiliary to Squamish General Hospital on Friday and Saturday, April 19-20 at Save-On-Foods.

Squamish Days Loggers Sports will be held the first weekend in August, and in preparation for the big weekend, volunteers are needed. For the Miss Squamish Youth Ambassador pageant a choreographer is required, as are those able to assist with set design and construction. The souvenir booth will also need volunteers. If you can help out please contact Debbie Patterson at 898-5305 in the evening.

On April 19, Kyle Burroughs-Wilkinson will celebrate his first birthday.

If you read the feature in last week's issue of The Chief on the play Leaving Home being presented by Between Shifts Theatre, then I would think you would want to see how this two-family drama unfolds. Performances in the new community theatre at Howe Sound Secondary School run April 17-20 and April 24-27 with an 8 p.m. start each night. Tickets at $7.50 for seniors and students and $10 for adults are available at Stylezone, Slalom Photo, Barb's Beehive, Mostly Books and Fruit of the Vine.

The annual general meeting for the Eagle Grove Housing Co-Op for Seniors will be held at 10 a.m., Friday April 19 in the Tantalus Seniors Centre.

Support and assistance is available to those who are bereaved, through the grief recovery program offered by the Squamish Hospice Society. The six sessions at no charge begin Thursday, April 25. For more information please phone Denise Evans at 898-9854.

Sea to Sky Singers spring concert is planned for Sunday, April 28, at the Squamish Baptist Church with performances at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. The theme will be The Rhythm of Life. Tickets at $5 for adults and $2 for youths and children (five and under free), are available at IDA Pharmacy, Mostly Books, Seekers and from members.

STORK STORY - DAHLMAN/BOYER - Michaelann and Chè are pleased to announce the birth of their first son, Chè Riel Dahlman, Jr., born in B.C. Women's Hospital at 3:19 a.m., April 5, weighing 7 lb. 9 1/2 oz. This is the second great-grandchild for Maggie Anderson of Rainy River, Ont. and Emmett Boyer of Georgia, U.S.A., and a second grandchild for Doranne Rempel of Squamish and Emmett Boyer, Jr., of Vancouver. Chè is also a ninth grandchild for Laura and Bryan Conway of Nanaimo and a 19th grandchild for Bill and Estelle Dahlman of Rossland. Chè is welcomed home by his half-brothers Gordie and Dylan.

Girl Guide Cookie Week is coming soon on April 26 to May 6 when Sparks, Brownies, Guides and Pathfinders will be found around Squamish selling their famous cookies at a bargain price of $3 per box. This is the Girl Guides of Canada annual fund raiser and your support will be welcomed.

A former long-time resident of Squamish, Fred Leeworthy, died at his home in Penticton on April 3. He was predeceased by his wife May, on Feb. 21. Fred and May were owners of the Squamish Bakery for many years and both were fine musicians. Condolences can be sent to Audrey Legge, 1707 West 63rd Ave., Vancouver V6P 2H7.

HOROSCOPE

By C.C. Clark - eTVData Features Syndicate

April 14 through April 20, 1996

Aries (March 21 - April 20)

It's not as if you don't have anything else to worry about, but romantic relationships will be tense. Arguments will not be settled easily.

Taurus (April 21 - May 21)

The focus is on action in all areas of your life. Things have been at a stalemate too long and you will have to make the first move.

Gemini (May 22 - June 21)

Your need for freedom may soon outweigh all reasonable thoughts. Give yourself a break and take a few days off.

Cancer (June 22 - July 23)

Lately everything seems to be happening all at once. Take a deep breath. Then organize your priorities and do only what is necessary.

Leo (July 24 - Aug. 23)

You feel a need for inner harmony. You should consider making changes in your diet and exercise routine.

Virgo (Aug. 24 - Sept. 23)

A phrase or work of art may inspire you to do something creative. Put your practical side away and have some fun.

Libra (Sept. 24 - Oct. 23)

Too much confidence in financial matters could be your downfall. Always check for pitfalls as carefully as you look for loopholes.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22)

A manipulative person will make you think twice about long-standing relationships. The good news is business will pick up soon.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 21)

The accent is on creativity and sensitivity. Poor judgment in financial matters could leave you needing an expert's help.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 20)

A misunderstanding could lead to a down and dirty brawl if you are not careful. Walk away from the situation if necessary.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19)

It may be difficult to see things from another person's perspective. Keep your emotions out of an important decision.

Pisces (Feb. 20 - March 20)

A new love relationship is on the horizon. But take it slowly and make sure this person is the right one for you.

Eagle's Eye

Comet Over Squamish

Squamish computer whiz, amateur photographer and stargazer Detlef Rudolph took this photograph of Comet Hyakutake the sky over Squamish April 10 with a Nikkormat camera with a Nikon f 1.4 lens using Kodak Gold film ISO 200 in a two minute exposure.

Photographers Wanted

We welcome submissions to the Eagle's Eye from anyone of any age — and you don't have to be a professional photographer either. Mail to The Squamish Chief, Box 350, Squamish, BC V0N 3G0, or drop it off at 38113 Second Avenue.

Those who are published will receive a FREE 5x7 enlargement (from 35 mm neg).

To receive your FREE print, take the published print, copy plus photo to:

What does the chamber do?

Not a day goes by that we at the chamber office are not asked this question: "What is the chamber of commerce?" For those who are not familiar with the chamber of commerce, the Squamish and Howe Sound District Chamber of Commerce has been actively promoting the commercial, industrial and social growth of Squamish and the surrounding area from Lions Bay to Whistler since it was incorporated in 1934. The policies and programs of the chamber are determined by its board, elected by the membership. They in turn employ a manager whose responsibility it is to organize and execute the chamber's programs and carry out its policies.

The chamber represents and promotes our community's economic, environmental, cultural and government concerns. This encourages business, residential and industrial development, broadening the tax base and provides employment.

To business prospects and newcomers, the Squamish and Howe Sound District Chamber of Commerce represents a viable force in finding solutions to social and economic problems because we are in touch with municipal, provincial and federal issues affecting our community.

Why should you become a member? Your chamber of commerce markets our community and businesses, unceasingly promoting the products and services of Squamish and the surrounding area including Britannia Beach and Furry Creek. At the same time it is watchdog protecting our interests, particularly in the political arena. The united voice of the chamber of commerce proves effective to businesses and residents where a single voice goes unheard.

With membership comes numerous benefits. Most recently the chamber negotiated a fleet card program with PetroCan. Members can access three cent per litre discount on gasoline and diesel purchases, three per cent off purchases of propane and natural gas, and five per cent discount off service at Certigard Car Care centers. For more information at the chamber of commerce at 892-9244.

Just 37 days until the Sea to Sky Country Trade Fair which this year has the theme of folk tales and nursery rhymes.

Maple sugar sustained early settlers

The red sugar maple leaf is the national icon of Canada, flying proudly in our flag. It's the universal symbol of Canada and the Canadian spirit. Fine gesture, considering how much we owe the sugar maple. Eastern forests of them sustained communities of native North Americans, and later the first European settlers.

By the time Europeans arrived in eastern Canada, the five Indians could only say that maple sugar came in a time so long past its origins had been lost in time. A myth, so old it had become universal among Western Woodland tribes tells of the Creator taking life too easy for the People. He had maple trees with thick, sweet sap flowing year-round.

According to legend, a young chief-maker, Glooskap, found a village of his people strangely silent. No dogs bark. Gardens are overgrown and the smoking fires are dead. He finally discovers the dangers in their maple groves, and there they lie men, women, children and dogs — eyes closed and the luscious syrup dripping from the trees into their mouths.

With his special powers, Glooskap brought fresh water from the lake. Rising above the trees, he filled them up until the syrup ran thin and fast. Finally it stopped running altogether. He told the People to return to their fishing, hunting and tending gardens of corn, squash and beans. The sap would only run at the end of winter when game was scarce, lakes were still frozen and no crops could grow. They would have to gather it in birchbark buckets and boil it with hot stones for a long time until it turned to syrup. Such hard work would make the people appreciate the Creator's gift of maple syrup. Maple syrup or sugar could mean life or death in the food-scarce months of early spring. The first full moon of the sap-running season in March or April was widely known as the Maple or Sugar Moon. The Iroquois celebrated its arrival with the Maple Dance. French Canadians learned from the Indians to make syrup from the maple sap. There are several early accounts of woodsmen living on nothing but maple sugar when all other foods ran out. A hunter in 1760 records his experience, "we ate nothing but our sugar during the whole month of April . . . each man consumed a pound a day, desired on other food, and was visibly nourished by it." Maple sugar proved to be a great gift indeed.

Today maple syrup is a delicious luxury, forecasting the beginnings of spring for winter-bound Easterns. You'll find maple syrup in different colors. The darker the color, the stronger the flavor. The lightest has the finest bouquet, best for the table. Use the darker grade for cooking. Once open, keep maple syrup refrigerated or frozen. It can be frozen and thawed without any problems. If any mold grows, throw out the syrup.

Maple syrup has a woody flavor, with suggests of wind-blown leaves and a whiff of smoke, capturing the essence of the wood itself. It's a flavor that lends itself well to any dish cooked with smoky bacon, as a sweetening in oatmeal or cornmeal breads. Combine it with melted butter for basting roasting chickens or sweet vegetables like squash and carrots. Combine maple syrup with soy sauce, dry sherry, garlic and ginger for a teriyaki marinade for salmon or chicken. Then there's desserts. Maple gives a delicate, round sweetness never reached by brown sugar. Beat it into whipping cream. Or try these maple squares and swoon.

Maple Pecan Squares

for the crust:
1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/3 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter, at room temperature for the filling:
3/4 cup maple syrup
2/3 cup sugar
2 large eggs, beaten
1 tsp. pure vanilla extract
2 Tbsp. flour
pinch of salt
1 cup chopped pecans (make sure they're fresh)

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Butter a 9 inch square pan. Combine flour and sugar, cut in the butter until mixture resembles coarse cornmeal. Press into the bottom of prepared pan. Bake for 15 minutes and set aside. Reduce oven to 350 degrees.

Combine all ingredients but pecans. Beat well. Stir in nuts. Pour over crust and bake for 35 to 45 minutes, or until set. Cool and cut into squares.

Are organic foods more nutritious?

Many people know organic can taste better, but the nutritional benefits are still subject of debate. There have been some studies done on the nutritional value of organic produce compared to commercially grown food.

The challenge is the difficulty in controlling soil factors, looking at the organic matter used, temperatures, seed sources, planting and harvesting rates as well as post-harvest handling.

Some researchers from the U.S. Centre for Science in the Public Interest believe that organically grown produce contains more vitamin C and lower nitrate levels.

They also say that since you don't have to peel organic fruits and vegetables to get rid of wax coatings or fungicide residues, you can get a lot more fibre from organic produce.

Another study shows that organic pears, apples, potatoes and wheat had over 90 per cent more of the minerals than conventionally grown food.

Our best bet for organic health is to moderate or reduce animal fat in our eating choices. These are the main storage bins for pesticide residues and toxins. And growing our own organic produce ensures that the products are clean and come from excellent soil.

The big challenge comes with products from Third World countries.

Coffee, cocoa beans, and milk products can be questionable. This is a case where there is no doubt that organic is preferable.

Buying B.C. and local, if not harvesting our own organic garden, green and integrated pest management in B.C. is about the best we can get without buying strict organics.

And even better, our own farmer's markets offer clean, fresh choices right on our doorstep.

So is organic and closer to home-grown better? You bet. A small tasty investment in our health today can pay off big time tomorrow.

Rabbit theme sparks B elementary school fun

Sound Schools By Constance Rulka

The poster in the library at Squamish Elementary School advises students to get the rabbit habit and hop along home with a few books to nibble on over the week-end. The members of Ms. Rourke's kindergarten class were taking the advice a bit further, though. Terry, a senior student, had brought along her white rabbit, Bugs, in his cage for them to pet. It was just before the long weekend, when bunnies have their annual moment of glory, so Bugs was the centre of an admiring group, all anxious to be remembered when it came to distributing chocolate eggs.

The Mad Hatter

If he could have modeled for the white rabbit in Alice in Wonderland muttering to himself, "Oh, my ears and whiskers!" as he scuttled off down the burrow, Brackendale Elementary School that same day could have been the setting for the Mad Hatter's tea party. It was the day for displaying fancy headgear, and almost everybody seemed to have got into the spirit of the thing. There were baseball caps of all kinds, a sombrero, hats covered with masses of spring flowers, a few stove-pipes, an enormous top hat, garden party hats with drooping brims, tam-o'-shanters, and a bunch of balloons tied to the wearer's head with strings. Every shape, size and color of bonnet was there and they were all fantastic.

Nesting Eggs

Ukrainian decorated eggs and Russian nesting dolls (the kind where one large wooden doll has another five of graduated sizes, all concealed inside it) were the focus of attention for Grade 2-3 students in the Squamish Elementary School library.

Students clustered, holding their stuffed monkeys, bears, dinosaurs, dogs and cats, around Ms. Hoyrup, who had just bought a new Winnie the Pooh book, appropriately called Easter. It was all about a mysterious decorated egg that Pooh had found at the top of a hill. He called his friends Eeyore, Tigger, Piglet and the rest to come and see. They all agreed it was the most enormous egg they had ever seen, and wondered where it had come from.

Since it would not talk to them, they thought it might be shy amongst strangers, so to make it more at home they decorated themselves to look the way it did. They covered themselves with pink squiggles and purple stripes, lavender polka-dots and wavy red lines. It still would not tell them what sort of egg it was, but O was sure it did not belong to any kind of bird he knew.

It was Christopher Robin who solved the mystery by unscrewing the top of the egg. Inside it was a slightly smaller egg, shaped like Winnie the Pooh. That was a still smaller one like Tigger, and so on, until the very last, and smallest one was an image of Piglet. Christopher Robin said he had made it himself. To tell all his friends how important they were to him.

It was a most satisfying story, and the youngsters were then in just the right mood to make some greeting cards for their friends. Luckily Ms. Hoyrup just happened to have some cards of exactly the right size which would do nicely. She also had some rubber stamps and ink pads, so that the outline of a rabbit carrying a basketful of eggs could be stamped on to a card ready for coloring.

There were also sheets of paper covered with egg shapes which were simply begging to be decorated, and a book showing some of the elaborate designs using the traditional Ukrainian craft of making ornaments from eggs. Ms. Hoyrup described to the students how she had learned about this as a child from her own grandmother, who showed her how to beat out the contents of the egg, then make patterns on the hollow shell with wax and paints.

Many of the children decided to use flowers and geometric shapes to beautify the egg outlines on their cards, but Ms. Hoyrup and Jeff felt that the characters from Star Wars would be more interesting. They worked them in quite skillfully to a design of planets and space ships.

Hop-A-Thon

Ms. Hilder's kindergarten class at Stawick took a rather more serious view of Brer Rabbit. They held a hop-a-thon to raise money to combat muscular dystrophy. The event took place in the school gym, with parents helping to count and record. Please turn to Page 31 for more details.

Crazy hats were the order of the day at Brackendale Elementary School's Mad Hatter's tea party. Constance Rulka photos

BES students recycling to save the rain forests

those bunny-jumps. The competitors were rabbit ears attached to their headbands and put a lot of spring into the exercise. The youngsters could keep it up for incredibly long time, and Michelle performed more than 10 hops.

For their reward, in addition to knowing that they were helping the people, was a set of coloring books from the muscular dystrophy organization. It was quite a relief to settle down to such a peaceful task after all that jumping around.

Rain Forests

Some more students who are working to help improve our world are in Ms. MacCallum's class in Brackendale Elementary school. After seeing some videos about what is happening to the rain forests in Brazil, and after learning they can buy an acre of a forest for $25, the children determined to become land owners. They are raising the money needed to make their purchase by collecting empty pop cans in a way they combine their project with recycling as well, and asking other classes to collect them too.

When I asked why they should go to all this bother for something so far away, Amanda gave me the overall picture of how fast the forest is disappearing and how its loss affects us all. Stephanie also explained that we are losing valuable medicines which can be obtained from the plants that grow there, such as the chinchona tree, whose bark produces quinine which cures malaria. Lindsey's sympathy was for the animals and birds that are losing their homes. Everybody tried to explain how important the forest is to the quality of our air.

The big drive is lasting from April 9 to April 19, scarcely enough time to enable the class to "just buy up the whole forest," as one young man suggested.

How the Other Half Lives

Some Grade 11 students are in Ms. Johnson's and Mr. Sheffield's socials-humanities classes, and their courses include an examination of life in an inner urban community. To accomplish this, their teachers took the students for a day to the downtown east side area of Vancouver, near Hastings Street. Volunteers who work in that district welcomed them to their headquarters in the First United Church and explained the arrangements for the day.

From 10-11 a.m. the workers talked to the students about what they do and about the people they try to help. They asked the students to think about the factors which make a community ideal and to identify the signs they should look for to show what kind of community they are in. They then gave the students lists of questions for which they should find the answers, and divided them into groups. Each group was given a map of the small area they were to cover during the next two hours, and each student had $3 to buy lunch. The two teachers were given composite maps so that they could keep an eye on all five groups from a distance.

At 1 p.m. everybody returned to the church for a debriefing. The students had a lot to tell about their experiences. They were most impressed by the number of people they had seen helping people. One group visited a women's shelter and were given free soup and a sandwich like all the others who came there. The students left their $3 allowances as a donation to the cause when they saw how many hungry and needy had to be fed.

They had not previously known how many organizations exist to help with the problems, such as Operation Go Home, which works to get runaway young people to stop living on the streets and go back to their families. The church where they were meeting is a well established charity with lots of volunteers to help those in want, and supply food to the hungry. The students had come expecting, maybe, to see violence and some degradation, but they had seen a community basically like any other, with a lot of people giving a helping hand to those in trouble. It was not all negative but they did get a closer look at some of society's problems.

Carnival

On a lighter note, French immersion students at Mamquam are busy getting ready for their spring carnival. That has meant devising games with a French flavor, and the school library has been a lot of help.

Two girls, using reference books, have produced a cardboard model of the Eiffel Tower. Other groups have been working on other projects: a game based on a cycle tour around a map of Belgium, a competition set in Zaire, and a form of darts that somehow includes a French version of the Simpson family. All this has involved a surprising amount of research — into maps of places such as Luxembourg, flags of French territories, and statistics of all kinds. Both books and computers have been well used in the search for relevant information.

National Physiotherapy Week celebrates all the right moves

The theme for National Physiotherapy Week 1996, taking place April 21-27, is All Right Moves. Sponsored by the Canadian Physiotherapy Association of over 8,000 members including Urte Devery and her associates at the Squamish Physiotherapy Centre, the week will give physiotherapists across the country an opportunity to show the public and their communities their role in health promotion as well as how they are helping shape the future of health care in Canada.

Having just celebrated its 75th anniversary, the physiotherapy profession knows about keeping Canadians in motion. We feel our 1996 theme is very much in line with the fact that physiotherapists have helped Canadians achieve the highest level of physical functioning for more than seven decades," says Arlis McQuarrie, CPA president. "That expertise and commitment to high-quality therapy places physiotherapists in an ideal position to work with governments and other health care providers in promoting good health for Canadians."

Physiotherapists across the country will be using National Physiotherapy Week as an opportunity not only to celebrate the successes of the profession but, more importantly, to educate the public about the benefits of physiotherapy services and expertise as well as promoting healthy lifestyles and wellness.

"Physiotherapists work in a variety of settings, from hospitals to private and community clinics; with patients and clients from the very young to the elderly; dealing with complex neurological conditions following strokes and motor vehicle accidents to sports-related injuries, back care, whiplash, ergonomics and repetitive strain injury," said McQuarrie. "The common thread, though, in the provision of physiotherapy services is the fact that therapists are helping clients achieve their optimum physical functioning following an injury or illness."

Seniors have a chance to show their hidden talent

Seniors 55 and older, now is your chance to show off those hidden talents. There will be a fun talent night at the Squamish community theatre at Howe Sound Secondary School June 7. The Extra Years of Zest Talent Contest will be held together with the PNE Youth Talent Search. Both events are sponsored by the Howe Sound Performing Arts Association. Anyone interested please phone Joanna at 898-5503 or Carol at 898-3483 prior to June 6.

Walking Club News

Not too many were out for last week's walk, but hopefully the weather will be better this Thursday, April 18, for a Brackendale dike walk. We meet in front of the Easter Seal Camp at 10 a.m.

Last week, 33 were out for the first day of the senior men's golfing. If you are interested in joining them, they meet every Wednesday morning at 8:30 a.m.

The senior ladies' golfing is Thursdays at 9 a.m. Phone Fran Hurren at 892-5153 if you are interested.

April 30 is the deadline for filing your income tax return. Charles Schilberg will be at the Tantalus Seniors Centre Monday mornings to assist seniors, or give him a call at 898-9393.

Branch #70 News

For those who didn't attend the March meeting, Elaine has a bus trip planned for Sechelt on Wednesday, May 22. We will be visiting their seniors' complex and maybe get a few ideas for our future building. Give Elaine a call at 898-5463 for cost and details. Elaine is happy to report the bus for Miss Saigon has been filled. The boat trip for Howe Sound on May 28 is also full, but if you have reserved tickets please give Elaine a call.

Tantalus Seniors Centre

Open Monday to Friday, 1-4 p.m., closed weekends and holidays.

Last week, guests at the Wellness Council spent an enjoyable afternoon with music therapist Kristine Miles. Everyone actively participated in music making and learning about music therapy. We watched an interesting video of music therapists from the Lower Mainland working with seniors, autistic children, the mentally handicapped, street kids and youth. We enjoyed singing some oldies with Kristine accompanying us with her guitar. Refreshments were served to climax an interesting and enjoyable afternoon.

Don't forget, tonight is the general meeting of the Squamish and District Diabetes Association at the Tantalus Seniors Centre at 7:30 p.m. Everyone welcome.

The Tantalus Seniors Centre crib club members would like to thank Rosemary Barr for engraving the crib trophy.

Get well wishes to Ellen Robson, Vivian Olson and Wanda Hildebrand in hospital and Ed Antosh and Eliason convalescing at home.

Belated condolences to the family of Gerry Rudkin, who passed away recently. Gerry was a long-time resident of Woodfibre.

Chamber members taking students to dinner

The new addition to Howe Sound Secondary School including a community theatre is complete. Capilano College is expanding its courses at the new campus neighboring the secondary school, including a chamber course. Chef instructor Tony Minichiello welcomes the opportunity to showcase the talents of his students. From this, a new concept for a chamber of commerce general meeting was born. Members are encouraged to invite their favorite student(s) attending high school to Capilano College to be their guest at the April 16 general meeting, which will be held in the multi-purpose room at Howe Sound Secondary at 6 p.m. and will be catered by the Capilano College chef class.

The guest speaker will be Stephanie Forsyth, dean of community and foundation programs at Capilano College. For details call the chamber at 892-9244.

COMMUNITY

Communities and Industry invited to participate in Science and Technology Week

Communities and industry throughout British Columbia are being encouraged to participate in the province's eighth annual Science and Technology Week, October 18-27.

Science and Technology Week is a 10-day provincewide initiative to increase awareness of and participation in science and mathematics, particularly with young people. As in previous years, the Minister of Employment and Investment Dan Miller will be providing funding for Science and Technology Week projects throughout the province.

Applications must be received by June 28 to qualify for funding. Preference will be given to projects that are original and imaginative.

Projects must also support the Science and Technology Week goal, which is to celebrate B.C.'s innovative achievements and potential in science and technology, and to illustrate and demonstrate to youth, and the general public, the vital link between science technology and careers.

To obtain an application form for project funding, or to find out more information about Science and Technology Week '96, contact the provincial coordinator at (604) 387-1628 in Victoria.

It's a bout time for Golden Gloves in Squamish

By David Donaldson

The Squamish Rock Boxing Club is coming out of hiding next month to make the sport of boxing a high-profile activity in the community. The club leaves its underground roots in a Brackendale carport to move to a much larger facility in the Squamish industrial park May 1 to accommodate its growing membership.

Formerly the Squamish Amateur Boxing Association, the club was reborn after successfully hosting the B.C. Provincial Boxing Championships at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre in October 1995, and has been operating in Brackendale since November under the guidance of four-time provincial heavyweight champion and two-time B.C. Golden Gloves winner Wayne Jackson. The club is expecting to be working with more than 40 members in the new facility with as many as 10 boxers beginning competition in the fall.

The community will be able to catch the excitement of boxing first-hand when the Squamish Rock Boxing Club brings the 1996 B.C. Golden Gloves to Squamish May 18-19 at the Howe Sound Secondary School gym. The event is expected to bring between 40 and 50 top level boxers from all over the province and the Pacific Northwest to battle for top place in this prestigious event. The winner of B.C. Golden Gloves is generally considered to be the top boxer in the province.

Local competitors will include Jackson, who recently graduated to the super heavyweight division and is currently in Anchorage, Alaska for the Pacific Rim Invitational Championships. As part of the B.C. team he will be facing opponents from as far away as Russia and Mongolia, and will be fighting alongside his arch-rival Robert Montgomery of Prince George. Jackson originally defeated the southpaw in October at the provincial championships in Squamish, but Montgomery evened the score with a victory at the Silver Gloves in Kelowna. The two will determine who is toughest at the B.C. Golden Gloves.

Also representing Squamish will be 17-year-old Tsukasa Asano of Japan. Asano is the current B.C. Golden Gloves flyweight champion and also won the 1995 Canadian National Female Boxing Championships and earlier this year won the Atlanta Golden Gloves title.

The Squamish Rock Boxing Club hopes to host two or three amateur events a year and has proposed a show as a new event for Squamish Days Logger Sports.

The SRBC is a non-profit club chartered by the British Columbia Amateur Boxing Association and membership is open to both male and female athletes from age 12 to adult. The goal of the club is to provide a quality training facility for those interested in either competing as a boxer, or in the intense training regimen of boxing for personal development. The club plans to hold weekend classes after school to accommodate students.

The SRBC needs volunteers to help organize the Golden Gloves event and is inviting anyone who wishes to help to a meeting Wednesday, May 1 at the Brackendale Art Gallery. For more information contact Wayne Jackson at 898-1644.

Soccer festering Squamish with annual tournament

By David Donaldson

A year's worth of soccer action will be crammed into one exciting weekend as 32 teams from all over the Lower Mainland converge on Centennial Field in Squamish April 27-28 for the eighth annual Trueline Trophies-Squamish FC Soccer Fest.

Men's and women's teams from the Fraser Valley and Metro leagues will be competing with local teams for $9,000 in prize money. Regular FIFA rules will apply to all groups with the exception of no offsides in the women's groups, no slide tackles for women's over 30 and men's over 40, and men's over 40 are not allowed to hit each other with their bellies.

Local players will be extremely active in the tournament with Metro team Squamish FC, Ellis Moving Eagles, Lil'wat Coyotes and Thunder Hawks of the men's league playing in the men's open category. Men's over 30 will feature Squamish Khalsa, and Mickey D's will represent Squamish in the women's open, while the Squamish Breakers compete in the women's over 30.

The teams will be divided into groups of four for a three-game round robin competition. The winners will advance to the semi-finals with a hat draw determining which teams will face each other. The losers of the semi-finals will play each other in the consolation finals while the semi-final winners will battle out for first place in the finals.

Tournament organizer Johnstone says the teams to beat in the men's open will be Sapperton and Squamish FC, which will be bolstered by four pickups including Olympic player John Hughes and Metro division 1 player Andrew Jensen. Looking good for men's over 30 is North Shore Olympic player Johnstone.

SPORTS

Young ball player takes a swing at the big leagues in the recent tryouts for the major leagues. Howe Sound Minor Baseball gets under way May 5. David Donaldson photo

Minor ball leading off to a new season

The Howe Sound Minor Baseball Association has preparations under way for the 1996 baseball season.

This year, Howe Sound has entered teams from three divisions to play an inter-league schedule with teams from North and West Vancouver. The junior (13 years), senior (14-15) and Big League division teams will play double headers against the North and West Van teams every weekend starting at the end of April. The junior and senior teams will also play their local league schedule on weekday evenings.

All other divisions of Howe Sound Little League: T-ball, farm, minor and major will commence play after May 5.

On April 27 the Howe Sound Minor Baseball Association is holding a clinic to train new and returning umpires for the 1996 season. The association pays umpires a small fee for their duties, ensuring participation and training for anyone interested in umpiring.

The umpire clinic will be held at the Elk's Lodge on Second Avenue from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. with registration at 8:30 a.m. Minor baseball will cover the cost of the clinic and provide lunch for anyone age 13 and up willing to umpire for minor ball. There is an urgent need for adults willing to umpire.

To register or for more information call Ian Sutherland at 892-3575.

Bantam C team springs a silver from Coquitlam tournament

The Howe Sound Speedy Auto Glass Bantam C hockey team shattered its opponents to take the silver medal in this year's Coquitlam Spring Festival Bantam Tournament at the Planet Ice Arena March 28-31.

After a three-week break from playing, Howe Sound lost its first game Friday to the Coquitlam Bruins 5-1 with the single goal scored by Danny Brooks, assisted by Anthony Hughson and Ricky Lasher. Howe Sound's Sam Szeziak was awarded game MVP by the opposition's paragon, while his team ended the game with eight penalty minutes compared to only one for the Bruins, who went on to win the tournament in the A flight of the tournament.

Howe Sound turned it around for a 4-0 victory over the Coquitlam Chiefs Saturday. This game saw the only shutout of the tournament, earning goalie Troy Wilton the game MVP. First period goals were scored by Brooks assisted by Lasher and Ryan Nichols, and then by Harrington assisted by Jessie Anderson and Szeziak. Goals in the second period came from Brooks assisted by Brad Smith, and Smith assisted by Darren Cox.

Howe Sound got its second win against the Coquitlam Red Wings later that day. Johnson, a peewee player brought up to fill out the roster, had the tournament's only hat trick to help net a 7-4 victory. Goals in the first period came from Johnson assisted by Nichols and Harrington, and Brooks assisted by Hughson and Lasher, while both second period goals came from Johnson assisted by Nichols and Katy Jones, and third period goals came from Brooks assisted by Hughson, Harrington assisted by Jones and Johnson, and Hughson assisted by Brooks, who was voted MVP.

The final game saw Howe Sound players fight the penalty clock as hard as they fought the Abbotsford Flyers to a 3-2 loss. Howe Sound played 22 minutes of the game shorthanded, while the Flyers only spent 10 minutes in the penalty box. Howe Sound was outshot by the Flyers 41-10 with first period goals from Hughson assisted by Brooks, and the second period goal from Johnson, unassisted.

Coach Bill Hogan and assistant coach John Brooks were pleased with the team's performance, and one organizer said Howe Sound would have received an award for sportsmanship if there had been one.

About the recent power outages . . .

Electric Service Interruptions
March 26 and 28, 1996

Unscheduled interruptions of service occurred in the Hospital Hill, Valleycliffe and Highway 99 (South) areas of Squamish on March 26 and 28 resulting in outages of up to 3 hours.

These outages were caused during recent construction work on the relocation of transmission lines supplying Squamish Substation. The relocation is required to facilitate the widening of Highway 99, junction improvements in the vicinity of Cleveland Avenue, Loggers Lane and Highway 99 and the shopping centre development by B.C. Rail. Service reliability improvements are an additional benefit to the community.

We regret any inconveniences caused to our customers, and if you experienced any electrical problems please call our Service Centre at 1-800-267-1474. If you have any question regarding the recent work please call our Project Manager, Jo Hahn, at 604-528-2939.

Men's playoffs sees best and worst

The kickoff to the Mountain Building Centres Men's Soccer League playoffs ended on the wrong cleat for the Ellis Moving Eagles as they fell prey to Cheeky Charlie's United in a 4-1 loss Sunday.

"We played pretty flat. It was the worst game of the season for us, said Eagles player James Ellis.

Three early goals for Cheeky Charlie's knocked the wind from the Eagles' wings before Dan Ellis scored their only goal off a corner kick near the end of the first half. The Eagles came back to play a good end in the second half with some good chances that didn't pan out with goals. Goalkeeper Gavin Guy made some outstanding saves but didn't stand a chance on the ones that got past him.

"We should have been more up for a playoff game," said Ellis, whose team was missing some key midfielders. "Hopefully we'll be more together against Khalsa next weekend."

Cheeky Charlie's was also a few players short but managed to turn out "one of our best performances," said Sean Keightly who scored two goals, one-timing the first into the net in mid-air. "They always give us a good game."

Quick-footed Jim Walker scored Cheeky Charlie's third goal and Sean Sweeny scored the fourth in the second half.

On the other fields Khalsa beat Continental Power Services 6-1, the Thunder Hawks overcame the Lil'wat Coyotes 7-4 and Local 170 tied the Dynamos 2-2. The teams are competing in two separate round robin matches; the top four league finishers are playing for the Premiership Cup, while the bottom four compete for the Divisional Cup. Each of the victors earns five points while the losers get zero. There are no points for ties.

Popular soccer tournament reaches capacity

and Squamish Khalsa, while Germania, with Squamish goalkeeper Barry Galley, is shaping up to be the top team in men's over 40. The North Shore Spartans should be tough competition for other teams in the women's open, and Metro league teams Bounty Hunters and Devils will be tough to beat in women's over 30.

The tournament has been consistently successful over years, growing from a four team event of another name 15 years ago to teams last year. With teams participating year and the addition of the men's over 40 division the tournament reached its capacity eight teams had to be on a waiting list because Squamish doesn't have field space to accommodate them.

Johnstone says the tournament is so popular because the prize money available is more than in other tournaments teams have a better chance because premier division teams are excluded.

To keep players entertained off the field, a buffet dinner from Cheeky Charlie's restaurant will be held at the Brennan Leisure Centre Saturday night, followed by a dance with live music. A beer garden will be held at the event to help fund the event.

A local 170 player heads the ball past the Dynamo keeper in Sunday's 2-2 tie game.

The two teams with the most points in each division will play in the cup matches May 4.

The next round of games April 21 will see Khalsa take on the Eagles, Cheeky Charlie's against CPS, Local 170 will face the Coyotes and the Dynamos play the Thunder Hawks.

Super Trooper

White Spot Squamish

THE OPPORTUNITY - We're opening a new restaurant in the growing community of Squamish and we require a General Manager to share in the challenge and rewards of this exciting venture. As we approach our July 96 opening we will be hiring Assistant Managers and staff, but for now we are concentrating on this key position.

PRIDE - Since 1998 White Spot's growth and industry leadership has depended on energetic managers directing a committed employee team which provides our guests with quality food products, exceptional taste and value and superior service.

PEOPLE - Your managerial experience, winning attitude, ability to lead and thorough knowledge of the family restaurant industry will guide the Squamish White Spot to a position of excellence within the community. You are well respected by your staff, a decision maker, organized and able to set priorities, and in the process you are able to communicate with, motivate and train a superior guest service team.

PERFORMANCE - Your responsibilities will include ensuring total guest satisfaction, hiring and training, assisting in marketing and promotional programs and the overall profitability of the restaurant. Here, you can make a difference! Confidence in your abilities will take you far, and the support and experience of the White Spot organization will help you succeed.

THE PACKAGE - You will receive a competitive salary, generous benefits package, a bonus plan and you may warrant the opportunity of equity participation.

Please send a resume in confidence to the Squamish White Spot c/o Box 2510, Squamish, B.C. V0N 3G0.

OBITUARIES

LEEWORTHY, Frederick Douglas. Born August 22, 1910 in Vancouver. Died peacefully at home in Penticton on April 3, 1996. Loving and devoted husband of May Leeworthy, who predeceased him on February 21, 1996; beloved father of Audrey Legge and Kolin Lymworth of Vancouver; kind storytelling grand-dad of Alethea and Sean Lymworth. A baker, musician, a helper to many - and always a gentleman. His generosity of spirit lives on, encouraging us all. "They don't make 'em like that anymore." In lieu of flowers or donations, Fred and May would want you to be happy and to love life and one another. Send love to the family c/o Audrey Legge, 1707 West 63rd Ave., Vancouver, B.C. V6P 2H7 or phone (604)266-7858. A Memorial Gathering is set for Saturday, May 11 at 3:30 p.m. in the Rec Centre at Caravilla Estates, 3105 S. Main St., Penticton. Arrangements in care of Personal Alternative Funeral Services. 16

DeCOURSEY, Willington Harris "Duke", Born on May 31, 1913 at Choteau, Montana. Duke left us on Friday, April 12, 1996. Predeceased by his and partner of 53 years Maude (Barager). Encouraged by Doctors, Nurses, and the rest of the terrific staff of the Squamish General Hospital and Hilltop House, Duke fought a courageous nine month battle. Family includes; children Bill DeCoursey (Noi) Coquitlam, B.C., Vivien Russell (George) Squamish, B.C., Al Bentley (Marilyn) Tappen B.C., brother Dr. William James DeCoursey, Sisters; Alice King and Lois Phasey. Grandchildren James and William, Jackie, Darren, Donna and four great grandchildren.

Duke was raised in Rimbey, Alberta. Duke and Maude lived and established newspapers in Yellowknife N.W.T., Dauphin & Thompson, Manitoba as well as other communities. Founder and publisher of "The News of the North", "The Thompson Citizen" and Parkview Publishing. Member of the Armed Forces during W.W.II. Loved people, travel, cars, books and dogs. A partner in W. DeCourseys Ltd., Timber Town Estate and Squamish Office Supply. Squamish residents for the last 24 years. Duke & Maude enjoyed 14 wonderful winters with friends in Indio, California. While in his seventies wrote, published and was the traveling salesman for the books The Yellowknife Years and Newspapering and Other Pioneer Adventures.
A friend of Bill W.

The District of Squamish Public Information

PUBLIC NOTICE Removal from the FOREST LAND RESERVE

In accordance with Section 20 of the FOREST LAND ACT, Georgia Basin Holdings Limited, an affiliate company of Merrill and Ring is applying to have approximately 174 ha (430 acres) of District Lot 510 and a portion of District Lot 509 west of Mashiter Creek, as shown on the map below, removed from the FOREST LAND RESERVE.

Please notify Margaret-Ann Thornton, Community Planning Director, District of Squamish at 37955 — 2nd Avenue, P.O. Box 310, Squamish, BC V0N 3G0 or telephone (604) 815-5002 if you wish to comment on the above or require further information.

NOTICE INVITATION TO TENDER

The District of Squamish invites tenders for the construction of the Climber's Parking Lot on Logger's Lane.

This work is to be performed in accordance with all Federal, Provincial and Municipal requirements.

Tender documents are available at the Public Works Department 37955 Second Ave., Squamish. An on-site meeting will be held Friday, April 19, 1996 at 1:30 p.m. local time to review the scope of work.

Tenders will be received up to 11:00 am local time on Friday, April 26, 1996. Address all tenders to:

Mike Darbyshire, Public Works Director
District of Squamish Public Works Department
37955 Second Avenue
Box 310
Squamish, BC
V0N 3G0

All tenders are to be marked "CONFIDENTIAL". The District of Squamish reserves the right to refuse any or all tenders. The lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE is hereby given that the public including all persons who deem their interest in property affected by the following proposed bylaw will be afforded an opportunity to be heard respecting matters contained in the proposed bylaw at a public hearing to be held at 7:00 p.m. on Thursday, the 2nd day of May, 1996 at The Royal Canadian Legion, 1851 Mamquam Road, Garibaldi Estates, Squamish, British Columbia.

In general terms the purpose of the proposed "District of Squamish Official Community Plan Bylaw No. 1034, 1989, Amendment Bylaw (Airport Runway) No. 1406, 1996 is as follows:

1. To redesignate parcels of land as outlined on Schedule "A" of the District of Squamish Official Community Plan Bylaw No. 1034, 1989, Amendment Bylaw (Airport Runway) No. 1406, 1996 from Limited Use (LIM) to Industrial (IND);
2. Section 3.13.1 be amended by deleting the words "the airport" from the second paragraph of section 3.13.1 and adding the following:

"The Airport is designated Industrial (IND) to reflect its use and expected expansion and development for airport use and airport related development. There is to be no extension of the Airport runway length without an amendment to this section of the Official Community Plan".
3. Section 3.13.2 be amended by changing the period at the end of section 3.13.2 to a comma, and adding the following:

"except in connection with the expansion and development of the airport".

The general purpose and intent of the proposed District of Squamish Official Community Plan Bylaw No. 1034, 1989, Amendment Bylaw (Airport Runway) No. 1406, 1996 is to permit development at the Squamish Airport without authorizing an extension of the municipal runway length.

Persons interested in specific particulars are directed to obtain a copy of the proposed bylaw as indicated below. Also available for inspection are copies of the District of Squamish Official Community Plan which would be amended by the proposed bylaw and various reports and plans which have been considered by Council.

A copy of the proposed bylaw and an information package may be inspected at the Municipal Hall, 37955 — 2nd Avenue, Squamish, British Columbia, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday to Friday inclusive, excluding statutory holidays from April 16th, 1996 to May 2nd, 1996 inclusive.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that anyone who wishes to comment on the proposed District of Squamish Official Community Plan Bylaw No. 1034, 1989, Amendment Bylaw (Airport Runway) No. 1406, 1996 may do so by:

1. Making a written submission to the Council of the District of Squamish which must be received in the offices of the District of Squamish, by 4:30 p.m. on the 25th day of April, 1996 to be included in the Public Hearing Agenda distribution; and/or
2. Appearing as a delegation before the Council of the District of Squamish on the 2nd day of May, 1996 at 7:00 p.m. at The Royal Canadian Legion, 1851 Mamquam Road, Garibaldi Estates, Squamish, British Columbia.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that no verbal or written communication will be received by the Council of the District of Squamish after the time and date specified above.

Margaret-Ann Thornton J.E. Barry, Clerk
Community Planning Director

THIS IS THE FIRST OF TWO SUCH NOTICES OF PUBLIC HEARING.
