WCWC seeking injunction to stop road building in TFL 38

By Ron Enns

A British Columbia Supreme Court justice is scheduled to hear on Wednesday a court injunction sought by the Western Canada Wilderness Committee to stop road building in the International Forest Products tree farm licence 38 north of Squamish.

WCWC made a notice of motion to the court Thursday seeking the injunction. WCWC is asking the court to stay approvals granted in June by Paul Kuster, district manager of the Squamish Forest District, allowing road building by Interfor in the upper Elaho River area to proceed. As well, WCWC on Thursday filed a petition in Supreme Court Thursday asking the court to: quash a road-building and cut block amendment made by Interfor and approved by Kuster; stay the approvals until the petition is heard; and make an order that Kuster must comply with the public notice and review and comment provisions of the forest practices code. The petition was filed on notice to Paul Kuster, International Forest Products Limited and the Attorney General of British Columbia.

Sierra Legal Defence Fund lawyer David Boyd, who is representing WCWC, on Monday said it was critical to seek the road-building injunction as soon as possible because Interfor is currently building the road into an area WCWC has identified as the 260,000-hectare Stoltmann wilderness area. The province, however, does not recognize WCWC's Stoltmann area boundaries, but is currently considering a smaller area within the WCWC boundaries for protection under the province's protected areas strategy.

Interfor, in its five-year plans, showed that the road was supposed to be built in 1997 and that logging of a cut block was to occur in 1998. But in May, Interfor applied to the Ministry of Forests to amend its five-year plans and road-building permit. The Squamish Forest District granted both amendments in June and by late June, the road building had begun. The grounds for the petition by WCWC include:

- That the Forest Practices Code of British Columbia Act and the Operational Planning Regulation require mandatory public notice and 60 days for public review and comment for amendments to operational plans that materially affect the public.

- That Kuster, in approving the amendment to the development plan, failed to exercise his jurisdiction, duties and obligations regarding the mandatory public notice, review and comment provisions of the forest practices code.

- That Kuster, in approving the amendment to the development plan, exceeded or improperly exceeded his jurisdiction or otherwise erred in law through his erroneous interpretation of the forest practices code.

- That Kuster's decision in approving the amendment was arbitrary, capricious and patently unreasonable.

Kuster, in an interview on Monday, said he approved the amendments based on the belief that the proposed road-building and cut block was not within the WCWC's original April 1994 Stoltmann wilderness proposal. He said that only after the approvals were granted did he find out that WCWC had changed the boundaries of the proposed Stoltmann area to include the Sundown Creek area.

"I didn't know of the shift in their boundary. It would have caused me to have another reflection," but he added that he could not say if his decision would have been any different.

Kuster said he made the decision to approve the amendments under the authority given to the district forest managers under the Forest Practices Code Act. He said he believed that because road-building and logging plans for the Sundown Creek area had been shown on development plans annually since 1991 — without receiving any written public comments specific to the area — that moving it up one year, which he said is a common occurrence, would not have a material effect on the public.

Kuster said Interfor voluntarily chose not to do anymore work in the Sims Creek and Clendenning Creek areas — including building bridges across both Sims Creek and the Elaho River to access the two drainages, for which Interfor already has written approval — because the areas are deemed more contentious as they are adjacent to the smaller proposed Stoltmann wilderness that the province's Lower Mainland regional protected areas committee is currently considering for protected area status.

Dave Doubek, operations engineer with Interfor's Empire Logging, which operates in the tree farm licence, said Interfor

Assault, robbery complaint leads to cabbie being charged with mischief

A Squamish man who was driving an Aaron Cabs taxi has been charged with mischief. Police have concluded a lengthy investigation into an alleged assault and robbery of a Squamish cabbie who drove a passenger from Squamish to Vancouver during the early morning of March 24.

The cabbie reported to police that morning that while he was getting something of the trunk of his cab, his passenger grabbed him from behind, punched him, stole some money and then pushed him into the trunk.

The cabbie reported to police that a passer-by let him out of the trunk.

Police said their investigation revealed that the complaint was false. The man is scheduled to appear in court Aug. 21.

Eagle Grove considers modular housing

By Ron Enns

A seniors' cooperative which is building a housing project in downtown Squamish is intending to place modular homes on the site, forgoing its original plan to build conventionally, in an effort to save money and reduce the time needed to complete the project.

Eagle Grove Equity Housing Cooperative members met recently to discuss plans for the project, which is in the midst of off-site construction, including an extension of Pemberton Avenue. Site preparation has taken place as well. Until now, Barclay 2000 Construction of Vancouver has done the majority of the work. The cooperative had not yet entered into a formal agreement with Barclay to build the actual housing portion of the project. After its recent meeting, the cooperative made a decision to negotiate with Award Developments of Vancouver, which has considerable experience with modular housing, while Barclay does not, said Doug Robinson of Access Building Association, consultant for the project. Modular housing differs from manufactured housing in that while it is factory built, a significant part of the construction is done on site. Manufactured houses, in contrast, are virtually ready to move into after they leave the factory.

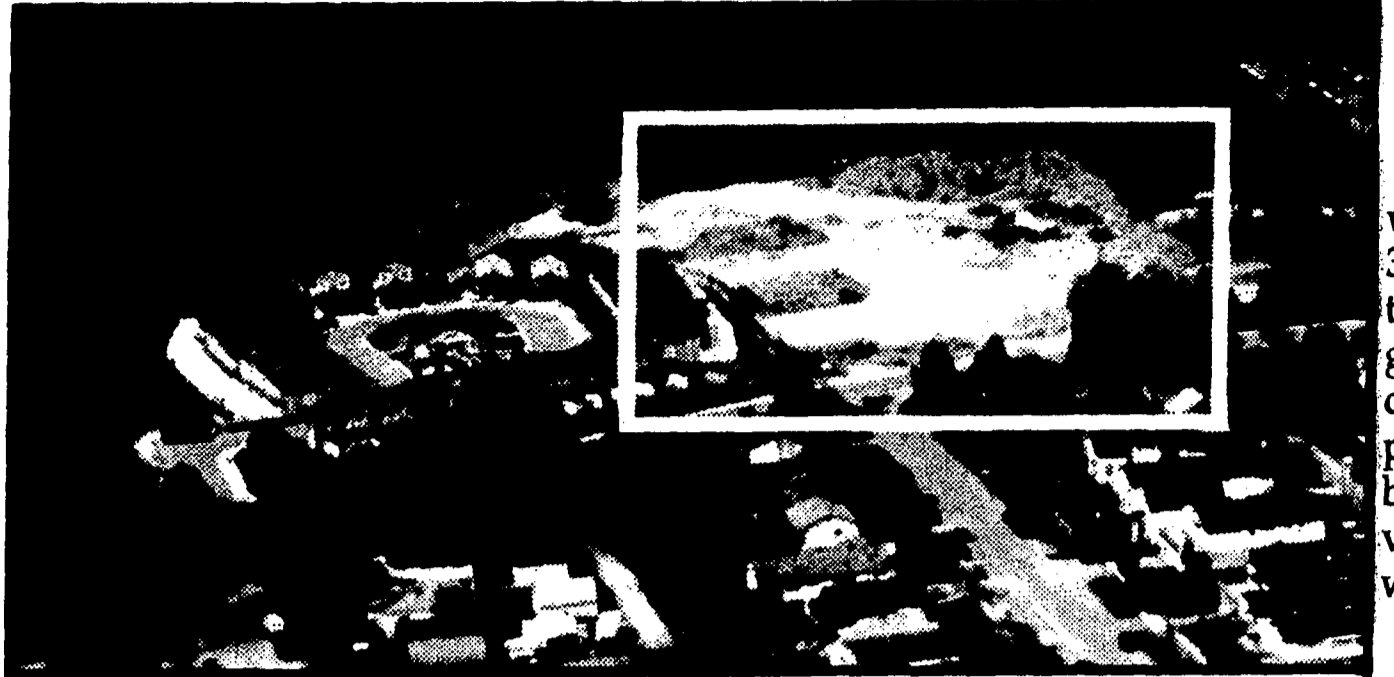

Eagle Grove is proposing a 63-unit project consisting of townhouse-style homes and condominium-style homes, located on a 1.2-hectare site along Pemberton Avenue between the Castle Rock housing complex and the Seniors Manor.

Robinson said the use of modular housing is being pursued by the cooperative because: the quality of construction is good; the targetted move-in date would be in January or February, as opposed to early next summer if conventional stick houses were being built; and about $250,000 in interest costs alone would be saved by having a shorter construction period.

As well, recent price fluctuations for materials such as cement and lumber resulted in the per unit cost rising higher than cooperative members were willing to pay. Eagle Grove president Joe Vriend said using modular homes reduced costs significantly.

"We were looking for ways to save money," Vriend said.

The underlying object of the cooperative is to sell the housing at cost to seniors 50 years of age and over. Comparable privately developed housing would sell for around the $150,000 range, but the cooperative intends to sell its units for about five to six per cent less, Robinson said. So far, about 70 per cent of the units have been sold.

The total cost of the project will be about $7.5 million.

Wil Croxall, past-president and project manager for the Squamish Non-profit Housing Association, said there is no question that the quality of factory-built houses is better than stick-built houses. However, he said that completing the on-site construction of modular houses is not a simple task and requires a lot of experience.

Croxall said labor costs, as a percentage of the total cost of building housing, is 60 per cent for a stick-built house, 40 per cent for a modular house and 15 per cent for a manufactured house.

The Squamish Non-profit Housing Association, which has about 200 members, is proposing to build a manufactured housing subdivision on Crown land in Brackendal. Croxall said the association supports the completion of the downtown project so its project can then proceed.

"We're even encouraging our members to buy into (Eagle Grove) while they are waiting...we don't know how long we'll have to wait," Croxall said, referring to the association's efforts to convince the provincial government to free up Crown land along Ross Road for the proposed manufactured housing project.

The Eagle Grove land, which was purchased from the District of Squamish, is currently zoned Residential-5, a high-density residential zoning. Under the current zoning, modular housing would not be allowed as a building construction type, said district planning director Margaret Thornton.

Injunction could impact jobs

specifically chose to work in the Sundown Creek area because of the difficulty in obtaining approvals for road-building in other parts of the WCWC's proposed Stoltmann wilderness and because Interfor, like Kuster, believed the area was outside of the WCWC's proposed boundaries for the Stoltmann wilderness.

There are currently four Interfor road crew workers building the logging road in question. The cut block proposed to be logged in 1997 will yield 21,000 cubic metres of timber, worth about $1 million in stumpage fees to the province. Not going ahead with logging the proposed cut block would have a 15 per cent negative impact on the 75 Interfor workers employed in the tree farm licence area, Doubek said. There are about another 75 contracted workers employed in the tree farm licence area. If WCWC is successful in obtaining the court injunction and thus halting work in the area, it will either "impact a small number of people a big way or a large number of people in smaller way," Doubek said.

WCWC has been campaigning for secure formal legal protection of the 260,000-hectare Randy Stoltmann wilderness area, named after young writer and conservationist who died in a mountaineering accident shortly after proposing protection of this region in 1994. The proposed Stoltmann wilderness encompasses the undeveloped watershed of the upper Elaho River, upper Lillooet River, Sims Creek and Clendenning Creek. WCWC's proposed area encompasses about one-third of the Interfor tree farm licence area of Crown land upon which Interfor has the exclusive right to harvest timber.

Brohm Ridge ski resort decision imminent

By Ron Enns

A decision about the future of developing an alpine ski resort on Brohm Ridge is to be made within one week.

A steering committee studying formal proposals made under the province's commercial alpine skiing policy by two companies — Garibaldi Alpen Resorts and Grand Adex Developments — left a meeting in Squamish last week without making a recommendation. The committee is to recommend whether one or neither of the applicants be allowed to proceed to the master planning stage for an alpine ski resort on Brohm Ridge, located about 18 kilometres north of Squamish on the slopes of Mt. Garibaldi.

The committee — comprised of representatives from the District of Squamish; the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District; the Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks; and the Ministry of Employment and Investment — is to meet again this week to continue to review the proposals.

Don van der Horst, a steering committee member and manager of development and marketing for B.C. Lands, said that more discussion is needed because the committee is dealing with a significant development. He said steering committee members are concerned that the correct decision must be made with "due diligence," but in a timely manner in order to provide direction to both applicants. Steering committee chair Al Colombo last Wednesday said a decision will be made "within seven to 10 days." Both applicants were required to submit their formal proposals this past spring with presentations made to the steering committee in late May.

A technical committee then studied the proposals and presented a report to the steering committee. Van der Horst said it is technical issues that need to be further discussed before the steering committee makes a recommendation to the Minister of Environment, Lands and Parks and the Minister of Employment and Investment.

Garibaldi Alpen Resorts is chaired by Wolfgang Richter, a British Columbian who has been working on the Brohm Ridge alpine ski resort concept since 1978.

Terry Hui, who is Hong Kong-born and has been a Vancouver resident for the past 10 years, is the CEO of Grand Adex Developments, a new player in the Brohm Ridge proposal.

Orange fired from slingshot breaks window

After two attempts at firing an orange from a three-man slingshot, three Squamish youths from the balcony of a Garibaldi Highlands house broke a neighbor's house window with the third shot. The incident occurred July 22 at about 6 p.m.

One youth was arrested by police and taken to the RCMP detachment, where he spent the night. He was sent to court in the morning. Two other youths remain unknown to police.

Police are recommending that a 17-year-old Squamish youth be charged with mischief and breach of probation. The youth cannot be named because of provisions in the Young Offenders Act.

Squamish remains on the verge of exceeding water licence

By Ron Erns

Squamish is at the cusp of its water licence on the Stawamus River, ensuring that water restrictions, including a prohibition on lawn sprinkling, will remain in effect until there is an extended period of rain and cooler weather.

The average of amount of water withdrawn from the Stawamus River — the main source of water for the municipality — last week was 2.4 million gallons per day, just 0.1 million gallons below the licenced allowable limit. But on Sunday, the amount of water withdrawn from the Stawamus River rose to 2.6 million gallons.

District of Squamish public works operations manager Kim Creed said people have, for the most part, been complying with stage two of the water restrictions — which allows people to water their gardens, but not their lawns — but need to conserve even more. If the district consistently exceeds its water licence on the Stawamus River, stage three of the water restrictions, in which only handheld watering of gardens is allowed, would have to be enacted.

The entire municipality — including Garibaldi Highlands, which is serviced from the Mashiter Creek water intake — is subject to the water restrictions. Some of the water from the Mashiter system is being diverted to Brackendale, which is usually serviced by the Stawamus system, in an effort to reduce the amount of water withdrawn from the Stawamus River.

Peak times for water usage are occurring from 5-7 p.m. and 9-11 p.m. Creed said gardens should not be watered in the heat of the day. He added that people should put out a saucer where they are watering. When the saucer is full, it's time to turn off the sprinkler.

Compliance with water restrictions continues to be good, said municipal clerk Joe BaRon. Since the mandatory stage two restrictions were enacted July 12 the district has issued 43 warnings for lawn sprinkling. No tickets, which are to be issued for a second offence, have been issued. District staff are making checks throughout all neighborhoods at varying times.

Under stage two, Squamish residents are still water their gardens and flowers using sprinklers. Newly planted areas are exempted, but a permit from the public works department is required. There is a charge for the permit.

Exceeding the water licence carries potential charges under the provincial Water Act and the general Fisheries Act. Fines imposed by the agencies would be referred through the water utility, which would have a direct influence on the rate Squamish taxpayers pay for water, said public works director Darbyshire.

munity amendment bylaw which would not allow hotel development on the site proposed by Turn-Keh, but would allow hotel development with highway frontage further north in the industrial park. Council on May 27 held a public open house regarding industrial park land use and is currently reviewing comments from the open house. The district planning department is awaiting direction from council whether to proceed to the public hearing stage required for the rezoning and official community plan amendments, or to amend the recently written bylaw.

As well, the planning department in its original consideration of the proposed hotel recommended that council not support the proposal because: the official community plan does not support it; there are conflicting land uses adjacent to the proposed hotel site; there are concerns that the site is too small and that there may be potential problems associated with the proposed off-site parking.

The site is currently zoned Industrial-1. For the hotel project to proceed, the site would have to be rezoned and the official community plan would have to be amended from industrial to commercial. Public hearings would be required for both and would be held concurrently.

But Barr said the intention of the industrial park has changed and it is now an industrial-commercial park. Just north of the proposed hotel site are new Wendy's and Tim Horton restaurants, which were approved by council.

Interest in Squamish from tourists and groups wishing to host sports tournaments and conventions demands that a large hotel is needed, Barr said.

"We have to envision what is transpiring," Barr said, noting a recent proposal to build a large slo-pitch facility in Squamish with the intention of hosting national championships. Squamish Fire Rescue is also proposing to host the national fire chiefs convention. And this summer, the large-scale international Eco-Challenge backcountry endurance race will take place in the Sea to Sky corridor. All have the potential of generating a great economic impact on the community, but "there is not enough accommodation," Barr said.

Enjoy the fun

The biggest celebration of the year, Squamish Days Loggers Sports, is upon us. From the first event Thursday night when 11 young women compete for the Miss Squamish Ambassador honors, to the final event Monday when the boxers compete for the brand new Timber Gloves titles, thousands of visitors will be flocking to Squamish for the long weekend.

Many will have been here for the same event in past years, but some will be newcomers, getting their first glimpse of Squamish. The lineup of events, published in a special supplement in this week's edition, should ensure our visitors are highly entertained. And for Squamish residents who have been to many loggers sports celebrations over the years, there are enough new events to keep their interest piqued.

Though some events, such as the pole climb, chopping and hand saw competitions celebrate the logging industry of years gone by, many of the competitors are still working loggers today, taking a break from their profession while many forests are shut down for the summer fire season.

As you watch the many events, please take the time to appreciate what the logging industry through the years has meant to the province as a whole and Squamish in particular. The logging industry, directly and through spin-offs, has provided a decent living for a large portion of our residents, and still does to this day.

Also take time to appreciate the massive volunteer effort which has gone into each and every event. The whole Squamish Days Loggers Sports celebration is a volunteer effort, and thousands of hours of volunteer time and effort have gone into making the five days of festivities this year a success. Get out and enjoy the fun. It's contagious.

Snapshots expensive

No doubt some of our visitors to Squamish Days Loggers Sports, and a few residents who travel Hwy. 99 on the long weekend, will be surprised to have their pictures taken. But these snapshots, delivered in the mail, come with a steep price tag.

On Friday, B.C. starts its new photo radar program, issuing tickets along with the photos, rather than just warnings. Registered owners of vehicles caught speeding on camera will receive $100 tickets, and those clocked at more than 40 kilometres per hour over the speed limit face a fine of $150, unless they can beat the case in court or prove someone else was driving.

Signs warning drivers about the program went up along Hwy. 99 last week. The program has not been without controversy. Some municipalities have rejected it, and our own MLA and Whistler Mayor Ted Nebbeling is not in favor of photo radar. Critics have said it will be simply a cash cow for the government.

But the bottom line has to be that, cash cow or not, whatever revenue is generated will be strictly from people who are breaking the law.

Bailey a credit to Canada

When Donovan Bailey won the 100-metre race at the World Championships last year, establishing himself as the world's fastest human, skepticism ran rampant around the world. It was considered a fluke, a once-in-a-lifetime occurrence, in a race which did not include many of the world's best. Saturday night at the Olympic Games in Atlanta, Bailey proved otherwise. He won the gold medal in convincing fashion, proving both physical and mental superiority against the toughest field ever assembled, setting a new world record in the process.

Give Bailey the credit due. He is the best in the world, the fastest runner the world has ever seen, and a terrific role model for Canadian youth.

He is a real credit to himself and to Canada.

Putting my best face forward

For more than 20 years I have put my head on the line on a weekly basis, writing columns and editorials for first daily then weekly newspapers. Most people have lots of opinions, but organizing them into a semi-coherent form each week is not as easy as many would think. In this position I have to think about who might be affected by what I say, and how they will react.

Reactions have ranged from mild annoyance to outright violence.

One Sunday night many years ago I was working as editor and minority owner of a paper in Maple Ridge. One of my reporters and I were working on a series of stories about a Maple Ridge motorcycle gang which was heavily into the drug trade. About half an hour after I got home the phone rang. It was the Maple Ridge RCMP asking me to meet them at the office. When I got there I found someone had driven by and strafed the front office windows with semi-automatic rifle fire. One of the bullets had gone through the window, an office wall, and lodged in a second wall about a foot above where my head had been 30 minutes earlier. To make a long story short, the police pinpointed a suspect, charge him and he was convicted.

But no matter what you say or how you say it, people will disagree with you to varying degrees. Some write letters in reply, while others just fume. So for all you fumers, and everyone else in the community for that matter, I am offering you an opportunity to get revenge in a much more direct way, and help a really good cause at the same time.

To share in the Squamish Days Loggers Sports festivities, I have agreed to poke my head through a sheet of plywood in the Timber Foods parking lot sometime Friday night between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. and let everyone and anyone who wants to throw a pie at me. I won't tell you the exact time so you have to stay in the downtown area and enjoy the entertainment and excitement being generated by many downtown merchants. And I have to inform you these are cream pies in this event. Bringing cow pies is against the rules.

Speaking of rules, there are some more. Even though I will be standing in the northeast corner of the parking lot, those aiming at me can stand no closer

The other good cause on this Friday evening, and indeed throughout the weekend, is support of the downtown merchants. Much as everybody seems to have nothing but horror stories about Squamish businesses, I am sensing a change in the downtown area. Though some businesses disappear, the storefronts don't seem to be staying empty for too long. We are getting more and more boutique-style stores

As I See It

By Al Price

er than the south side of Cleveland Avenue in front of Pharmasave. And while other victims will be faced (pardon the pun) with a barrage of eight-inch pies, those directed at my countenance must be no larger than a butter tart. And Patricia Heintzman can throw from no closer than Britannia Beach.

Okay, so I made up the last paragraph. All the more reason to throw another pie, and as I said, help a good cause. All proceeds from this event will go to the Squamish Soup Kitchen. The soup kitchen has a dedicated core of volunteers who really do help a lot of people in this community. While they always manage to provide sustenance to those in need, there is never enough, so throw early and throw often. I expect there will be a few Brackendale residents lining up, the odd member of council, perhaps Lonnie and Joyce will bring Mason, Russell and Colin down for a shot at the guy next door, and perhaps even a few of my co-workers, who don't worry me because they couldn't hit the side of a barn with an adjective.

which appeal to both visitors and residents alike.

It seems as if this change is being led by younger entrepreneurs, a majority of them women, who have realized that some of the new business trends in Vancouver don't have to be left down there. They are taking the best ideas, adapting them for the Squamish market, and in many cases improving on them. Not having to travel the highway for quality merchandise and services is a blessing in itself.

I know there are people in Squamish who avoid the downtown area like the plague. Perhaps they bought a faulty widget four years ago, and haven't forgotten. But the downtown area is changing rapidly, and there seems to be resurgence of spirit with the Downtown Merchants Association.

You really owe it to yourself to check out what's going on downtown, and Friday night would be an ideal time. Check Wendy Magee's column on Page 22 this week for more details. And bring your throw arm — and your purse or wallet — with you.

Hardly a case of NIMBY

Editor,
Mr. Enns (in his Surroundings column last week) singles out the residents of Brackendale opposed to the commercial airport expansion as being the same as the residents of the Smoke Bluffs, inasmuch as they purchased homes in the knowledge that rock climbers who bring in spin-off dollars would be using the bluffs, and therefore should not complain.

We purchased three years ago in Brackendale, with the knowledge that a train crossing was in close proximity and therefore would have our peace disturbed with train whistles. We were also aware there was an airport that was used by private flight companies, but at not a steady schedule that interfered with the environment. We were also enthralled that the bald eagle population chose Brackendale as its winter home. I am proud of this reputation and mention it when travelling. The spin-off dollars from this fact is obvious to me each time a car filled with tourists stops me on my walks and asks where the eagle viewing sites are.

However, we would not have purchased a home in Brackendale had we been informed that the airport would be enlarged to accommodate daily scheduled commercial flights which have absolutely no spin-off dollars to Brackendale or to Squamish, as a bus would no doubt meet the flights to whisk the tourists immediately up to Whistler.

This is hardly a case of NIMBY.

Squamish housing too expensive for those with mental illnesses

Received by The Chief for publication:
Dear Squamish municipal council members:

The Howe Sound Community Mental Health Advisory Committee wishes to express its concern for the lack of affordable housing within the Squamish area.

As you may be aware, stress is a contributing factor in the onset of mental illness.

A high stress level occurs when reasonable housing becomes unavailable or unaffordable for individuals in need. The committee brings this concern to your attention as our elected representatives.

Any support you may provide in the development of affordable housing would be very beneficial to the community as a whole, and particularly, to those in need such as persons with mental illness.

Police warn drivers to lock their vehicles, leave nothing inside

As usual, along with the hot, summer weather, thefts from vehicles are a common occurrence.

Police last week received seven reports of vehicle break-ins, both at Squamish residences and at parking lots of recreation areas.

The night of July 21-22 was particularly troublesome.

On July 22 at 1:10 a.m., a Government Road resident interrupted a suspect entering a vehicle. The suspect fled and could not be located. Also on Government Road, another vehicle was entered. The glovebox was emptied but nothing was stolen.

Just off Government Road, two vehicles at a Starview residence were rifled through, but nothing was taken. And at a business on the old dump road behind Chieftain Centre, a battery was stolen from a truck parked in a fenced compound.

Sometime between July 20 and July 22, clothing and sandals and a roof-top ski rack were stolen from a vehicle parked at the Lake Lovely Water access area. Also between July 20 and July 22, two sets of tools — one Mastercraft and one Benchmark — a Blue Water climbing helmet, a yellow dry bag and a wetsuit hood — worth a total of $175 — were stolen from a vehicle parked at the Garibaldi Provincial Park Diamond Head area parking lot. And sometime between July 19 and July 22, metal snowshoes worth $150 were stolen from a vehicle parked at the Garibaldi Provincial Park Black Tusk area parking lot.

Squamish RCMP Const. Fran Bethell said people should lock their vehicles and not leave anything inside of them.

Upgrading taking place at Stawamus Chief park

Campground construction at the base of the new Stawamus Chief Provincial Park is under way.

The area has long had an unofficial climbers' campground, but after the Chief was announced as a provincial park last year, funding from Forest Renewal B.C. was obtained to build more parking areas, upgrade the campground and improve trails.

Construction of the new parking lots and campgrounds began in the middle of July and will continue until the end of August. A conceptual drawing shows more day-use parking and camper parking under the hydro lines above and to the south of the existing parking lot along Hwy. 99, 45 walk-in campsites, 15 high-density vehicle campsites and toilets and water taps.

B.C. Parks is attempting to conduct the work in a way that causes the least inconvenience for visitors. However, for safety reasons, there will be temporary road closures and changes to areas designated for camping and parking during construction. Campfires are not permitted in the park.

The world-class Stawamus Chief — a 700-metre granite monolith — was announced a provincial park in October 1995, giving it the recognition and protection it deserves. It is an international destination rock climbing area and its trails are among the most heavily used in British Columbia. B.C. Parks is upgrading facilities to protect the natural resources and accommodate the climbers and hikers who come to enjoy the exciting recreational opportunities the park provides.

Police scale down search for woman missing from Whistler area

Whistler police will continue to investigate clues in the case of missing Whistler woman, Susanne Tam, but the search for the 33-year-old psychologist has been dramatically scaled down.

Police are urging the public to come forward with any information that might help them find Tam, now missing for more than two weeks.

Police believe Tam, 33, was last seen by her mother July 13. Her vehicle was located at Rick's Roost trail Monday, July 15 and since that time, articles of her clothing have been found in various locations.

Police say the investigation has revealed that it is out of character for Tam to take off by herself. They are confident there is no sign of foul play at this time.

At the time of her disappearance, Tam was wearing a blue, purple and green jumpsuit, a blue T-shirt and running shoes. She is 163 centimetres (5'4) tall and weighs about 55 kilograms (120 pounds). She is of oriental descent with black hair and brown eyes.

Tam's sister recently joined their mother in Whistler and police say the family is currently being assisted by the RCMP's victims services division. Police are asking that anyone with information regarding the possible whereabouts of Tam contact the local RCMP detachment.

Police seek clues about stolen vehicles

A black 1987 Jeep Cherokee which was stolen from Bluebird Place in Garibaldi Highlands July 10 at about 2:20 a.m. was found later the same morning, destroyed by fire. The vehicle was still smoking when RCMP arrived at 8 a.m. at the scene of the burned-out vehicle, at the Watts Point repeater tower near Murrin Provincial Park. No vehicles were seen arriving at or leaving the area.

As well, on the night of July 22-23, a Jeep owned by a Dawson Creek resident was stolen from a Cleveland Avenue business.

The Jeep was recovered by Surrey RCMP. The Jeep had a broken side window, but otherwise minimal damage, and was returned to its owner.

Anyone with information concerning these occurrences, or any other crime, is requested to contact the Squamish RCMP at 898-9611 or Crimestoppers at 892-TIPS (8477).

Police recommend charges following late-night fight

Police responded July 21 at about 1 a.m. to a report of a fight between an 18-year-old Squamish woman and a 19-year-old Squamish man on Garibaldi Way. Police arrived to find a fight in progress in which the woman allegedly struck the man with a one-metre long 2x4 piece of wood.

Police are recommending that an 18-year-old Squamish woman be charged with assault with a weapon.

A 28-year-old Squamish woman was charged under the Motor Vehicle Act with following too close after the truck which she was driving collided with a car in front of her on Garibaldi Way at Hwy. 99. Two of three passengers in the car, which was driven by a Richmond woman, sustained minor injuries in the accident. The mishap occurred July 18.

A fire extinguisher and spray paint stolen the night of July 18-19 from a locked construction trailer on Carson Place were recovered nearby. However, graffiti had been spray painted on Howe Sound Secondary School and a nearby building.

A rare mountain bike — one of only 10 national team-issue plum-colored Rocky Mountain Avalanches — was stolen from a Plateau-area garage the night of July 20-21. The bike is worth about $2,400.

Police are in possession of found property that has been turned in to the detachment, including:

- A Feather brand wooden oar found July 23 in the Judd Road area.
- A girls' blue Kangourou mountain bike found July 17 in the Braemar Park area.
- A boys' purple Free Spirit bike found July 18 on Highlands Way South.

Anyone who has lost these items should go to the Squamish RCMP detachment to identify and claim the property.

Police have announced that they will be increasing patrols during Squamish Days Loggers Sports, and remind people that drinking in public is not allowed.

Police were called to the Eagle Run store July 21 at about 7 p.m. after a vehicle had crashed into the front of the store. Police said the driver of the vehicle had stepped on the wrong pedal. There was extensive damage to the store, but only $500 damage to the vehicle.

A 16-year-old Squamish male was issued a written warning for driving without due care and attention. Police attribute the accident to driver inexperience.

Police on July 23 at about 7:30 p.m. received a call reporting that pavement about two metres across had sunk on Westway Avenue. Municipal workers barricaded the area for safety reasons.

Squamish man gets jail time after high-speed chase

By Patricia Wheeler

A Squamish man who stole a Whistler cab and led police on a high-speed chase to Squamish has been given a three-month jail sentence and a two-year driving suspension.

Kenneth James Ryan, 25, was charged with robbery and dangerous driving after the June 10 incident.

He appeared in court July 2, where he pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of theft and dangerous driving.

It was shortly before 10 a.m. Monday, June 10 when the man approached a cab driver in the Whistler taxi loop. Police say he stuck his finger into his shirt, pretending to have a gun.

The cab driver, after being threatened by Ryan, turned the car over and Ryan took off southbound, driving at speeds between 130 to 140 km/h toward the Cheakamus Canyon.

With police on his tail, Ryan drove the cab through the road closure at the rock slide at about 60 km/h.

Squamish RCMP picked up the chase on the other side of the slide. Two vehicles pursued the cab. Squamish RCMP attempted to lay spikes across the road near Alice Lake but were unsuccessful. The vehicle eventually stopped running about 10.5 kilometres along the Upper Squamish Valley.

Ryan was arrested without a struggle.

Firefighters contain Creekside brush fire

The lack of traditional afternoon winds Saturday was a key factor in allowing Whistler firefighters and forestry crews to put out a medium-sized brush fire that engulfed the hills above the Creekside train station.

At its worst the fire covered a 0.5-hectare area at the base of Sproat Mountain sending a plume of white smoke high over the Creekside area.

Gordon McKeever, manager of the Whistler Resort and Club, said two of the resort's guests noticed what they initially thought was smoke from a campfire around 1 p.m., prompting them to call the forestry hotline.

"You could see flames going up the slope," said McKeever. "Three trees just went up like a Roman candle...just whoosh." Whistler Fire Department assistant chief Norm Dedeluk added: "If that had been our usual afternoon, where we get the wind whipping up through the valley, it would have been really bad."

"But it went quite well considering the rate that it was growing when we first went in there to do a size-up. By the time we had applied water it had grown considerably."

Firefighters were able to pinch off the fire with hoses at the fire's north and south end.

Forestry officials will also be investigating the incident. Whistler RCMP Const. Doug Brecknell said witnesses had seen two hikers coming out of the area before the fire.

Brecknell said the area is also frequented by squatters, but added that the cause of the fire had yet to be determined.

SLRD rejects spousal funding

By Sheila Keenan

The regional district's travel and meeting expense policy that caused so much discussion at the last regional board meeting passed with barely a murmur at the board's July meeting Wednesday.

Squamish-Lillooet Regional District directors had previously insisted on including expenses for spouses, but that's not the policy district chairwoman Thelma Johnstone brought to board members to consider for final adoption July 24.

"I couldn't, on principle, present a policy that included expenses for spouses," said Johnstone.

At its June 24 meeting the regional district board voted in favor of paying for directors's spouses registration and accommodation at conventions.

But Johnstone said she had looked through the Municipal Act and said she didn't think it would be allowed.

The policy the board adopted Wednesday says: "No board of staff member shall be compensated for spousal expenses while attending a conference or convention." Director Corinne Lonsdale, also the mayor of Squamish, who had previously spoken in favor of paying spouses expenses wanted to know what the regional district administrator's experience had been.

"I would say that the vast majority of municipalities don't provide compensation for spousal expenses," said Rick Beauchamp.

New services offered at Chevron

There are new agents and new services being offered now at Squamish Chevron at the corner of Cleveland and Pemberton avenues. Dee Cates and Dan Heroux took over June 6 with five employees. In addition to the traditional gas station services, they are now offering auto detailing, steam cleaning, engine degreasing, wax and sealants and paint reconditioning.

Archie Boyce officially opened Mountain Man Grocery July 15 at 40022 Government Rd., in the space formerly occupied by the Broken Spoke, next to the Sunrise Japanese Restaurant. Boyce will have three employees in the new convenience store.

Squamish Radiator Service recently opened for business at 2021 Paco Rd. in the building formerly occupied by Squamish Transmission. With two employees, Squamish Radiator Service offers parts, service and sales of radiators, heater cores, gas tanks and air conditioning, both industrial and heavy duty.

Squamish Transmission, which specializes in transmission repair services, moved to a new location June 15 at #3 — 1120 Enterprise Way in the Squamish industrial park.

New directory hopes to bring more filming to the corridor

By David Donaldson

Squamish and the Sea to Sky corridor will be opening soon in a theatre near you as the release of the new Sea to Sky Film Directory gives the area a shot at being a top motion picture and television filming destination.

Approximately 2,000 directories have been printed and will be distributed to the B.C. Film Commission and corridor municipalities to provide to film companies which inquire about the area, and to companies which have previously filmed in the area. There will also be a selected mailout to all the major studios within the filming community in the Los Angeles-Orange County area of California.

The directory has been produced by the Sea to Sky Film Committee under the auspices of the Sea to Sky Economic Development Commission as a guide to the many services throughout the area available to locally based and visiting film and television professionals. It includes general information about film and television production in the corridor from Britannia Beach to D'Arcy, with categorized listings of individuals and companies which can provide these services, such as catering, casting, locations and props.

The purpose of the directory is two-fold, says economic development officer Robert Fine. It was developed "to create a greater awareness of what we have to shoot here and some of the opportunities. Secondly it's to highlight that indeed we are a film-ready community and there are services available in the Sea to Sky region as a whole and some very qualified individuals who work within the film industry."

He says it is "certainly the hope" the directory will bring more filming to the area than ever. The corridor has been a favorite filming location in recent years with such big-budget motion pictures as Jennifer 8 and Leaving Normal filmed in Squamish, Happy Gilmour in Furry Creek, and television shows X-Files and MacGyver in Britannia Beach.

The latest productions to be filmed in Squamish are Firestorm, an action adventure movie about smoke-jumpers — airborne forest firefighters — with scenes shot at the airport in Brackendale, and Free Willy 3, which will be shooting on a fishing village set being built at the Squamish marina and in Britannia Beach.

Some service providers may have more experience in the film industry than others, but the directory has no standards by which to judge a company's or individual's experience or quality.

"It's just like using the yellow pages," Fine says, "there's no qualifications there either."

"For the most part the experiences that film crews have had here in the past speak highly to the local services."

Robert Fine

Library Has True Friends

Friends of the Library is holding a raffle to raise money. Prizes to be awarded in the draw at the Lullaby Festival on Friday include a stuffed bear family, a Raggedy Ann family, a stuffed rabbit family and a Curious George family. Tickets are $2, available at the library.

Network made faster, more reliable

The Sea to Sky Communities Network (formerly Free-Net) was down until Monday at 5 p.m., at which time it started using a new, faster, and more reliable server. The Communities Network users have been experiencing frustrating, re-occurring problems because of old and tired equipment, said president Meg Fellowes.

The new server will facilitate expanded service to Pemberton and Whistler. Limited access has recently been available to those communities using phone number 905-4127 (a Whistler local).

The objectives of the Communities Network are: to provide at no cost, basic internet access to all Sea to Sky residents; and to provide Sea to Sky non-profit organizations with a costless, electronic way to publish information such as newsletters and activity calendars.

Recent additions to the Communities Network include information on the three interpretive forests: Shadow Lake, Whistler, and Brohm Lake; as well as information on the Squamish Youth Hot Line, Howe Sound Women's Centre, Squamish RCMP Victim Services, Sea to Sky Community Services, Soo Coalition for Sustainable Forests, and corridor forestry tours.

Riding the currents

Soaring in Pemberton sparks flights of fancy

By Adriane Polo

Looking up into the clear, endless sky has long been a source of fascination and dreams. To be free. To soar among the birds and the eagles, between mountain tops and valleys — to ride on the wind.

It is on that dream that the Pemberton Soaring Centre is built. From its scenic location — the foot of Mt. Currie in Pemberton — it offers glider flights into the sky of possibilities.

The small business operates between April and October, providing exhilarating rides on its two-seat sailplanes. These lightweight sailplanes, each resembling a graceful bird with a narrow, slick body, proud beak and a large outstretched wingspan, weigh about 270 kilograms.

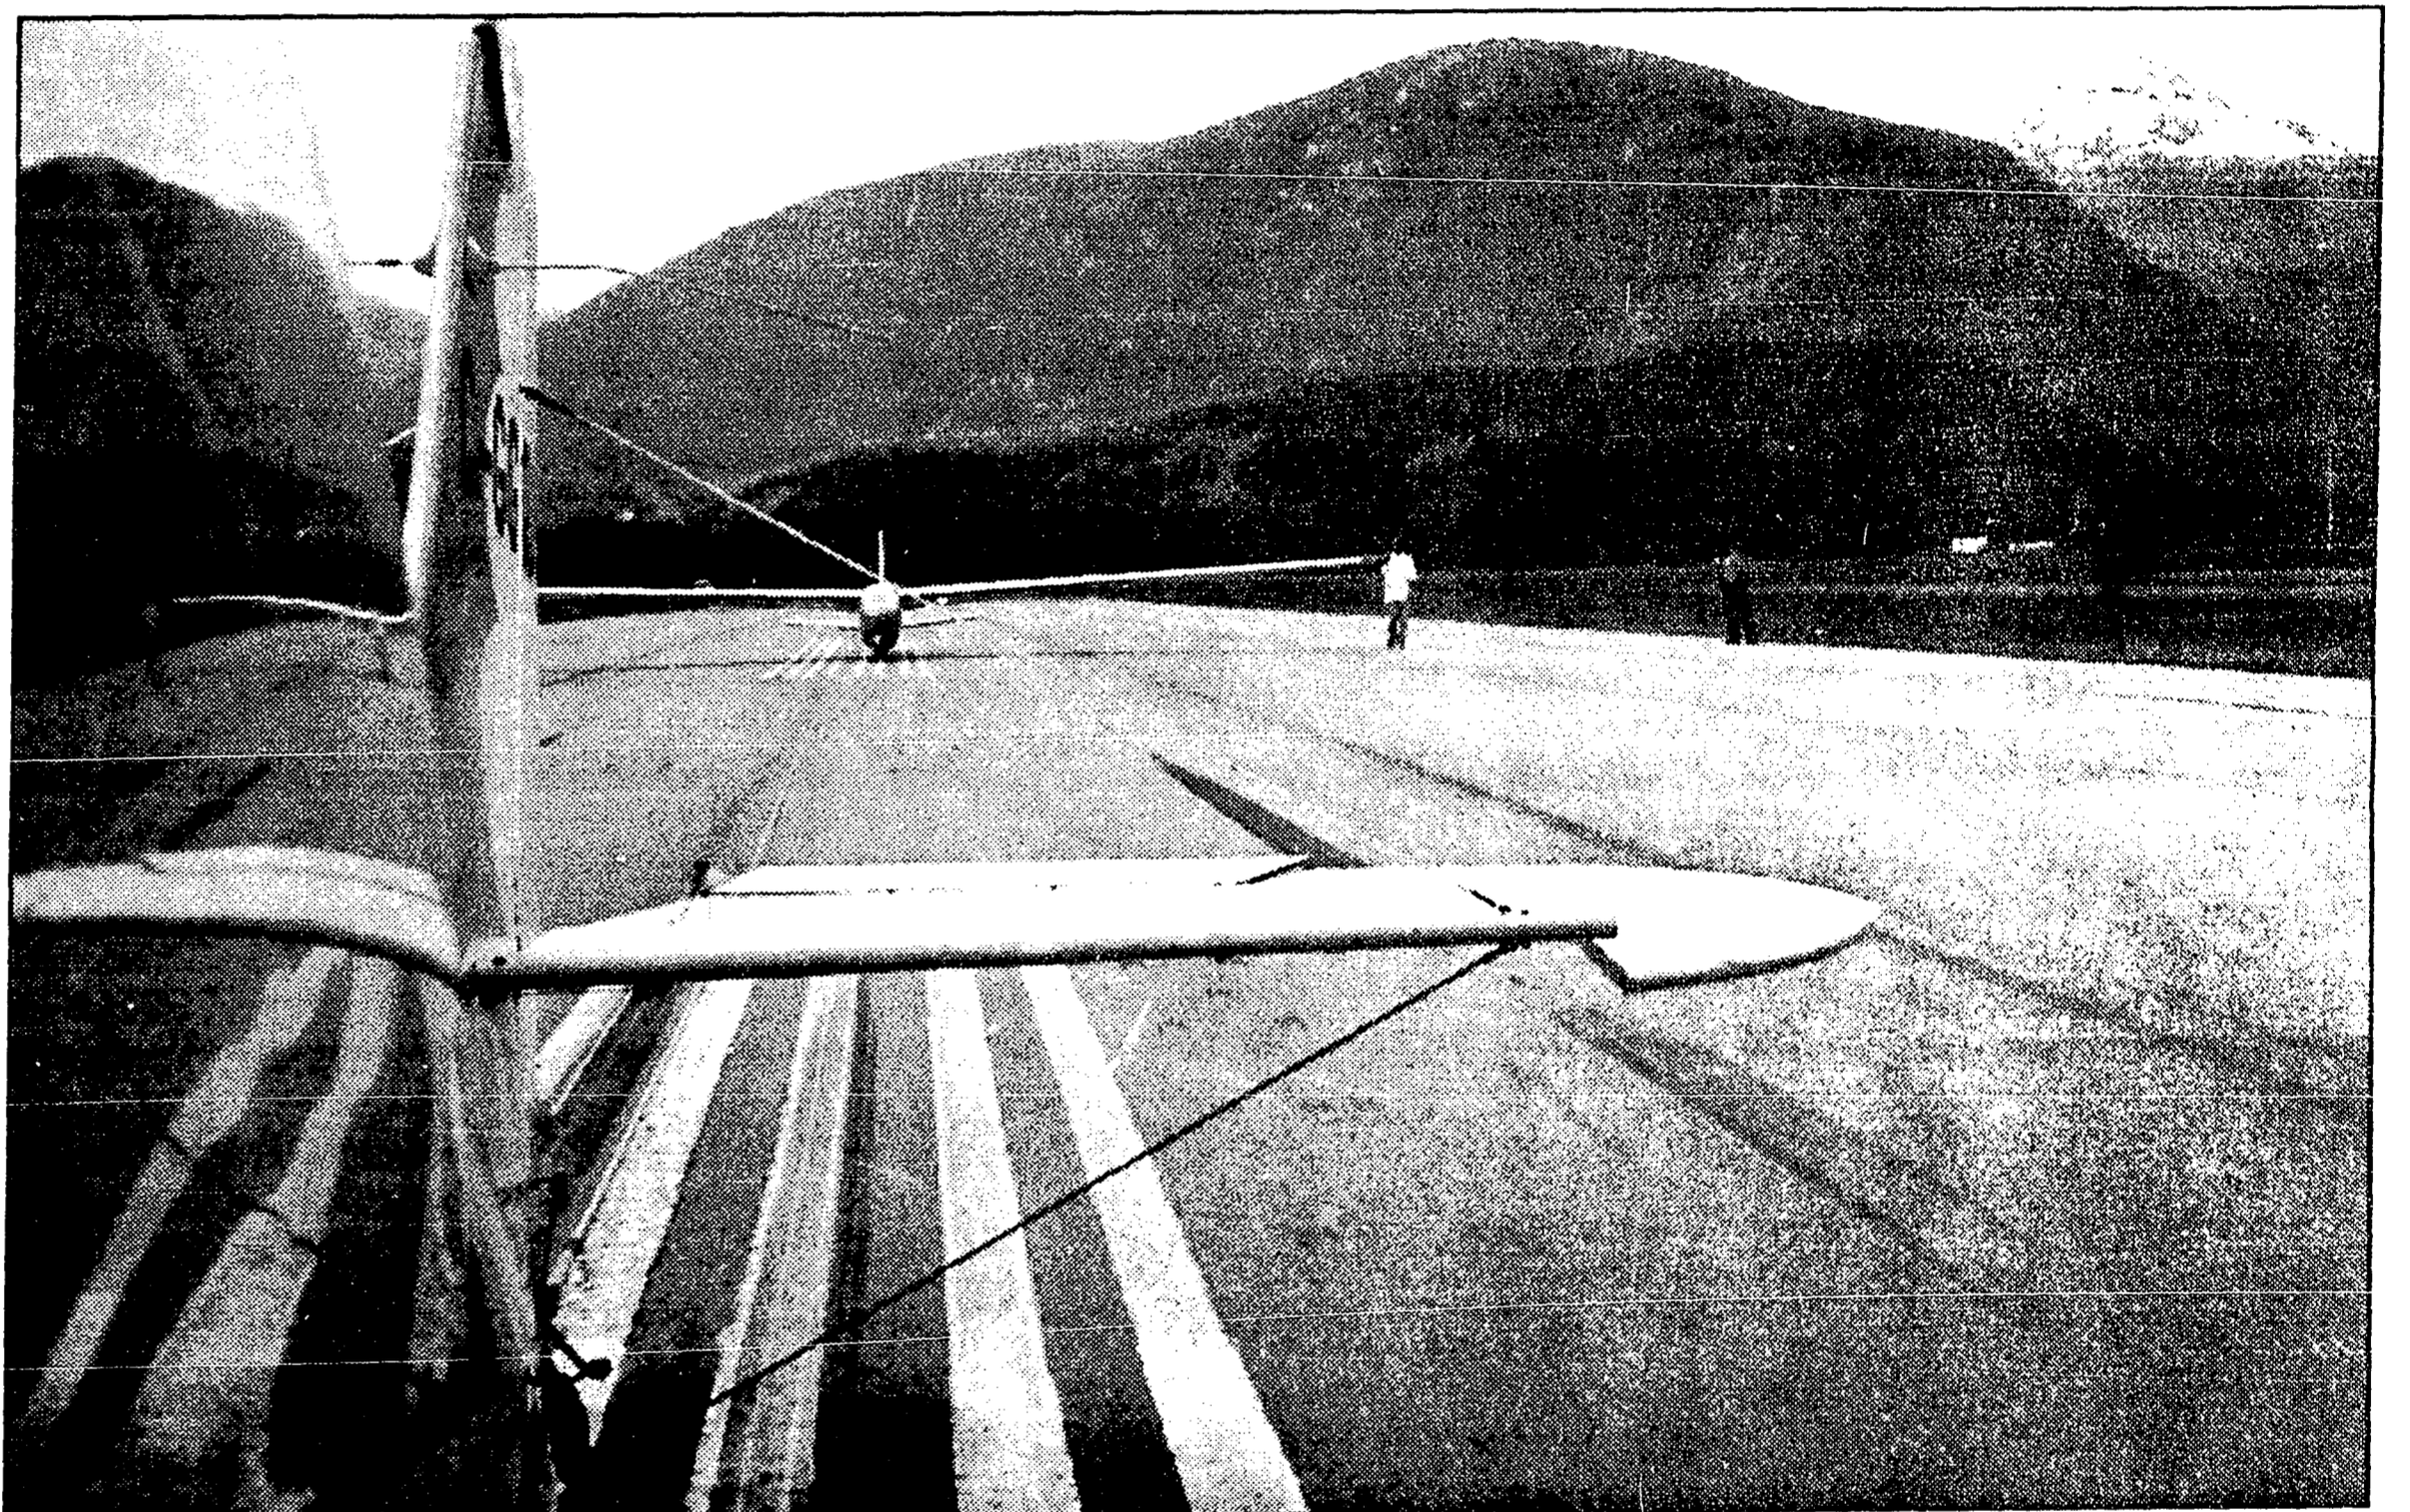

The sailplane is dependent on wind current, as it has no engine. It uses the wind current just like the sailboat uses its sails to capture the wind, thus propelling it forward. But, unlike a sailboat, the plane relies on a "push" from a towplane.

When a child throws a toy plane, the plane glides in the sky, rising and falling in the air current until it lands on the ground. The sailplane operates on the same principal. The single-engine towplane attaches a rope to the nose of the sailplane, then lifts it up. With the sailplane in tow, the towplane brings it up to approximately 1,200 metres, then the sailplane detaches itself from the rope. The sailplane is then free to glide, free of all noise, to ride the updrafts of the wind.

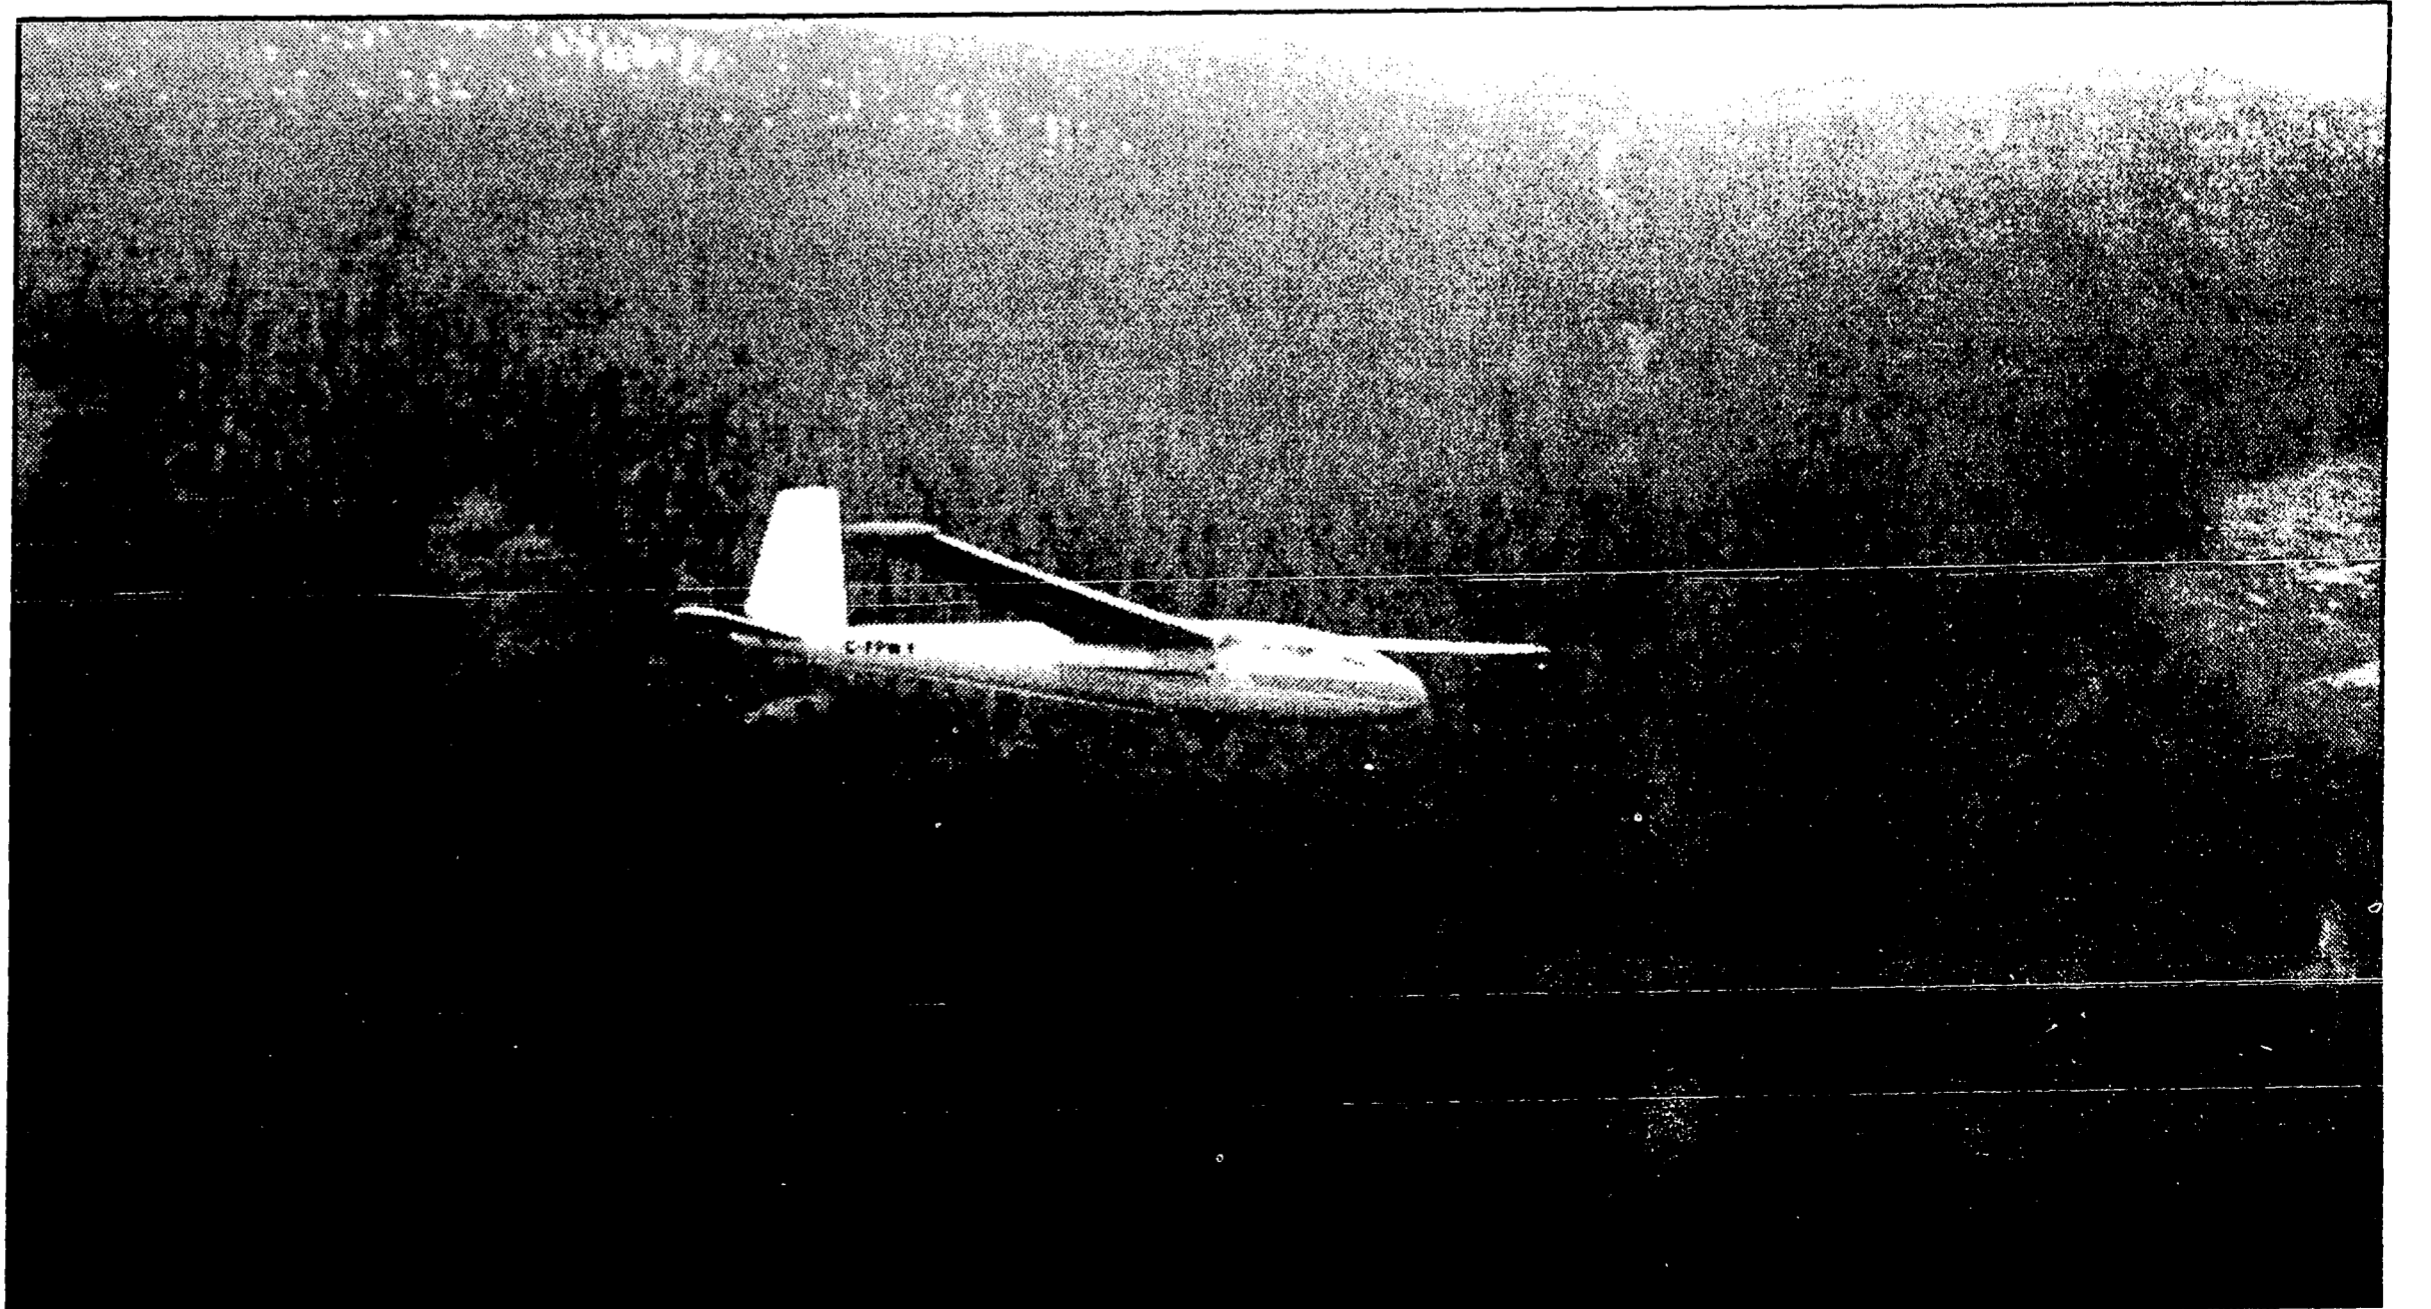

The sailplane rises on four different types of updrafts; ridge lift (wind blowing against mountain side), thermal (ground heated by the sun warms unevenly over different surfaces — for example, a field of dark soil will be very hot, thus producing a bubble updraft), sea breeze front (land is warmer than water — as warm air rises, the cold air from sea will push the warm air up), and lee wave (produced because air, like water, is fluid. Under certain conditions they both behave like waves). The sailplane surfs on these.

The company was started by Peter Timm and Rudy Rozsypalek about three years ago. Rozsypalek, who usually pilots the sailplane, can't get enough. "You never can tell exactly how the updraft current will behave. I am as excited today as I was when I started soaring more than 10 years ago."

Timm, a veteran pilot, speaks of the future of gliding as a sport. "Plane glid-

Eco-Challenge far from Squamish's savior

Hundreds of millions of people around the globe will be exposed via television to Eco-Challenge, the multi-discipline backcountry race in which an international field of corporate-sponsored teams will compete in a non-stop 1 1/2-week race along the length of the Sea to Sky corridor starting Aug. 24. The race itself and the spinoff effect will undoubtedly have a substantial positive economic impact in this corridor. Of course, Whistler — where the race will almost surely begin and end — will be the greatest beneficiary of Eco-Challenge. But the question is: What effect will this race have on Squamish, which is likely to be the southern terminus of the race with competitors attempting to get of town as quickly as possible?

There are those in Squamish who say this town will never be the same after this summer's Eco-Challenge, that we won't know what hit us when the hordes start arriving next year after viewing on television our spectacular surroundings and the associated adventure recreation opportunities. (There will be updates on NBC's Dateline and ABC's Good Morning America, as well as a five-part series to be aired on the Discovery Channel.) Conversely, there have been comments from even somewhat progressive people in this town — people who recognize that the future of Squamish lies in the diversification of its once-dominant resource extraction-based economy — that Eco-Challenge will do "diddly" for Squamish.

The answer to the burning question is bound to lie somewhere in between these two extremes. I know, that's not exactly an over-committed or daring guess, but allow me explain my reasons for stating such.

• Whistler's dominance — People who come to this corridor are predominantly bound for Whistler — the Disneyland of the north, the glamorous centre of Sea to Sky Country. Squamish is the proverbial bridesmaid. Only a minority — which realizes Squamish overshadows Whistler when it comes to outdoor recreation opportunities, but is sadly lacking in associated infrastructure — will stay in Squamish. Whistler is a powerful magnet in this corridor. And Whistler — already known as the number one ski resort in North America — will attract multitudes more of the media attention than Squamish will during Eco-Challenge. Squamish will continue to be known as a gas, food and coffee stop (hey, at least people will think we've made the big time, with a Starbucks on the highway) on the way to Whistler.

• Squamish's lack of infrastructure — Squamish is woefully inadequate in the areas of accommodation, goods and service providers and user-friendly development of natural attractions (i.e. trails and access and support services for adventure recreation activities), which will help ensure that even with globs of international media attention, Squamish will not overnight become an adventure sport mecca. As well, it lacks the associated coordinated marketing approach in this era of consumers who demand information, information and more information.

• Squamish's inferiority complex — In addition to its infrastructure woes, Squamish has a propensity to magnify its shortcomings and thus develop an inferiority complex. However, it is not as bad as it once was: there are a growing number of Squamishites who are proud to say they are from Squamish and want to show off its natural assets. Of course, a train of logging trucks circling the Pavilion combined with incessant blowing of horns while the dedication of the Stawamu-

Surroundings

By Ron Enns

Chief Provincial Park was taking place last fall, does little to enhance Squamish's image on the evening television news as a progressive community that is attempting to attract visitors.

On the other hand, there are still many people here who would like nothing better than to keep visitors away — some have gone so far as to say they would like it better if no one else moved here either. It is only within the last few months that Squamish's municipal council has begun to see what this town is all about: it put in a sorely needed parking area at the Smoke Bluffs climbing area and it has finally commissioned a tourism marketing plan.

August's Eco-Challenge may open the eyes of some leery locals and help them realize why competitors and non-competitive adventure sport seekers are coming here. The event will not create the boom some people are predicting, but it is another way to let the world get a glimpse of our spectacular setting.

As one former Squamish resident, who continues to invest in this community, told me last week, "Squamish will succeed in spite of itself." How true — the opportunities abound. But it will have to be up to Squamish people to make it possible. Eco-Challenge and the attention it will generate around the world is an unquestionable benefit, but it will hardly leave a legacy in Squamish in its wake.

Sailplane experience is mostly 'indescribable'

ing is becoming a more popular sport today, with the onset of lighter planes. Some planes can go across country, more than 1,100 kilometres, reaching up to 15,000 metres altitude." In the next Olympics, soaring will be a demonstration sport.

The sailplane flights start as low as $70 for a valley flight, which includes the aerotow and a flight around the village of Pemberton and the local ridges. It lasts approximately 20 minutes and passengers get a close look over Mount Currie, see the golf course down below and the snake-like Lillooet River unfolding. Other options include the ridge flight, mountain flight and the glacier flight, a full hour flight, soaring over the higher snowpeaked mountains and over the glaciers.

The Pemberton Soaring Centre also offers glider pilot training. Lessons are given in an L13 Blanik all-metal sailplane. Licensed power pilots may obtain glider pilot training as well.

Children from eight years up are allowed to go up alone with their pilot. "Smaller ones need an adult with them," said Squamish resident and towplane pilot Jim Watson. "We offer gift certificates for birthday presents, anniversaries, or any special occasion." Watson has been towing up sailplanes for years and enjoys the variety of comments people make before and after the flight. While they range from the pale, fear-struck look to thrillseeker anticipation, the consensus is the same: "It's indescribable." For Timm, even 40 years of gliding hasn't diminished the adventure and his enjoyment of the sport. The dream renews itself with each passenger.

For more information, call the Pemberton Soaring Centre at 894-5727 or fax at 894-5776 or visit the web site at <http://www.mountain-inter.net/soaring>.

Having finished the flight, pilot Rudy Rozsypalek brings the sailplane in for a soft landing. Adriane Polo photo

Good luck to pageant contestants

Community pride is on the line when the 39th annual Squamish Days Loggers Sports takes place this weekend. The Miss Squamish Youth Ambassador Pageant is the first event of the long weekend on Thursday at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre starting at 7 p.m. Each of the 11 young ladies vying for the titles have had a busy few weeks and I'm sure have gained much confidence and poise, and they will be ready to display their talents. Good luck to each one of them. The Loggers Sports committee is to be commended for assuring the children are not forgotten during Loggers Sports weekend. The Lullaby Festival over the years has become very popular and it will be held in the Squamish Pavilion on Friday from 1-6 p.m.

Always a hit with the kids is the Kiwanis children's decorated bicycle contest and field sports. It all begins at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at Stan Clarke Park and culminates about 11 a.m. with the arrival of Ronald McDonald. There will also be free hotdogs and drinks for the kids. Timber Foods will hold its second annual apple pie contest on Friday night. Dig out your favorite apple pie recipe, bake it and take it to Timber Foods by 6 p.m. The judging will take place at 8 p.m. and winning entries will take home some fine prizes. After the winners have been announced, slices of pie and ice cream (courtesy of Dairyland) will be sold and some pies will be sold. All proceeds will go to the Squamish Soup Kitchen.

On Saturday, Teresa Fuller will celebrate her first birthday.

On Sunday, Aug. 4, the Squamish Transit System will operate on a Saturday level of service for Squamish Days Loggers Sports.

A good times youth dance is planned is the banquet room at the new Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company downtown. It is sponsored by Youth-In-Action and will be held tomorrow evening, July 31 from 8 p.m. to midnight. Tickets at $10 are available at The Depot Shop and at Savory Slice Pizza.

Attitude of Gratitude is the theme of the 23rd annual Squamish AA Round-up on Aug. 9-11. I will have more information next week but the contact persons are Budd at 898-4267 and Marty at 892-6302.

STORK STORY - BROWN - Dave and Joanne are happy to announce the arrival of their baby girl, Caleigh Taylor, born in Squamish General Hospital on June 20, weighing 7 lb. 12 oz. Also welcoming Caleigh home are her big brothers, Allan and Brent, her grandparents, Ron and Mary Brown, Martin and Noella Bourque and her many aunts, uncles and cousins. Special thanks are expressed to Dr. Doyle and the Squamish General Hospital nursing staff.

Let's hope the rain doesn't wash away the Squamish Days Elks loggers breakfast on Sunday from 7-11 a.m. in the Elk's parking lot. All you can eat pancakes and all the trimmings make for a filling but delicious breakfast.

Coming up on the Royal Hudson and opening the World Class Open Loggers Sports Show at 1 p.m. on Sunday will be Michael Pallin. He is an original from Monty Python day.

A German Stammtischabend — an evening when German speaking people and those who are learning the language, gather together — is evolving into a regular event. The next gathering will be held Thursday, Aug. 1 at 7 p.m. at the new brewpub of the Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company, located at the south end of Cleveland Avenue. About 24 people turned out two weeks ago to socialize and speak German. The Howe Sound German School, which has organized the event, is planning to continue to hold a Stammtischabend every second Thursday at the brewpub. There is also talk of organizing an Octoberfest this fall. For more information, call Katie Bell at 892-5360 or Joe Rommel at 898-3133.

About Town

By Maureen Gilmour

The Squamish detachment of the RCMP is conducting a survey aimed at assessing the policing needs of our community. The police mailed out 1,257 surveys to postal boxes from Lions Bay to Brackendale. This is a reminder to residents who received surveys to return them to the RCMP via the stamped, self-addressed envelope or drop them off at the RCMP detachment at 40439 Tantalus Way, Garibaldi Highlands. The date to return the surveys has been extended to Aug. 6.

STORK STORY - HARVEY - John Harvey and his wife, Carole Comeau announce with pleasure the birth of their first child, a son, Luc Comeau Harvey, born in Lions Gate Hospital on April 7, weighing 8 lb. 5 oz. Proud grandparents are Mabel Baker, John Harvey and Jeanine and Lucien Comeau. Carole has just returned home after visiting her parents Jeanine and Lucien in St. Louise De Kent, N.B. to show off baby Luc to her family and friends.

STORK STORY - CASEY - Jessica and Rob Casey are pleased to announce the birth of their fourth child, a son, Robert William, weighing 8 lb. 12 oz and born in Squamish General Hospital on July 2. This is a brother for Ryan, Isabella and Alexandra. The proud grandparents are Leonard and Betty Silvey of Egmont and Llewella Casey of Squamish. The proud great-grandparents are Ted and Violet Casey of Coombs and Florence Williams of Egmont. Special thanks are extended to Dr. Cudmore and the wonderful nursing staff.

The Tantalus Seniors Centre Society is hoping to increase the visibility of its centre at 1471 Pemberton Ave., by taking part in the Squamish Days Loggers Sports celebrations. They will be holding an open house with a Yesteryears theme all three days with a display of goods from the past. Local arts and crafts will be for sale. Friday they plan to sell home-made blueberry pie, fudge, and jams. Saturday they will be catering a turkey and ham dinner from noon to 3 p.m. at a cost of $6 for adults and $3 for children under 12. Sunday a light lunch will be available from 11:30 a.m. featuring hot dogs for the children and authentic Polish perogies or sandwiches for the adults at modest prices. They hope people will drop by after the parade.

HOROSCOPE

By C.C. Clark - eTVData Features Syndicate

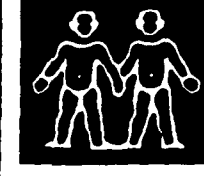

July 28 through Aug. 3, 1996

Aries (March 21 - April 20)
This may be a time of change where family is concerned. You may be called upon to give your approval to new living arrangements.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20)
There may be some people in your life who are promising you more than they should. Use your intuition.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)
You like to live life to the fullest, but that doesn't mean you should abuse food or drink. Get yourself back on track.

Cancer (June 21 - July 20)
A foolish decision may have you doing some serious backpedaling. There is no time like the present to make amends.

Leo (July 21 - Aug. 21)
Charging into a situation without checking the facts first could bring some financial troubles your way. Read all documents carefully.

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22)
You are troubled by the many responsibilities weighing you down. It is never too late to ask friends for a little help.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)
Your spiritual side could use a lift. Open your heart to a special cause. Helping others often gives us those feelings of goodwill we need.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22)
You may have been thinking of doing something that would be somewhat out of your moral code. Make sure you can live with yourself if you do.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 20)
That feeling of running around in circles will end soon. Prioritize what is most important and delegate the rest.

Capricorn (Dec. 21 - Jan. 19)
The domestic front isn't as peaceful as you might like. Communication may be the key to many of your troubles.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)
There is a woman who could cause you pain if you are not careful. She is capable of abusing the power you have given her.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20)
A family gathering may not be what you expected. There are some financial matters that require your immediate attention.

A swim dock full of darts to the individuals who ripped down signs, destroyed ramps and generally wreaked havoc for no good reason on a local summer camp facility. Daffodils by the dozen to the crew which rebuilt the ramp so campers did not miss swimming on one of the warmest days of the year.

A large basket of daffodils to Murray and Alana of Everyone's Employment Service for finding me a job. Their new service is greatly needed here in Squamish. I do hope more employers call for their services so we can keep small town business thriving. Thanks a bunch.

Darts to the irresponsible, heartless, bully owner of the beautiful yet neglected Chesapeake. There is more to owning an animal than sticking a bowl of food and water under its face. You do not deserve to own an animal. When a dog is pulling on his chain, jumping up and down, barking for hours on end, figure it out. He needs attention, and the neighbors don't need the annoyance. Find a good home so he may be treated the way he deserves.

Thirtysomething soccer fields of insured daffodils to Tom Dyas for donating travel insurance for our recent tournament in Snohomish, Wash. And more daffodils to Heather Janzen of Savory Slice Pizza so that our coach, Dirk Erkau, could be with us for the tournament. The Squamish Breakers.

A floating raft of daffodils to Dan DeCook and the Squamish Emergency Program from two very embarrassed rafters plucked from the Squamish River.

A bouquet of daffodils to Michelle at Fruit of the Vine for her generous help with my school project. Keep on smiling, and thanks again. Anna.

A nursing cap full of daffodils to Hazel. You helped me with my mom and now you were there for me and Lois for her mom. I know a lot of wonderful nurses and doctors and coordinators were involved in all the help and care for "one special little lady" and "one special guy," and from our hearts we are forever grateful. But from me to you, Hazel, I absolutely adore you. You are the kind of woman every woman dreams of being. God bless you, and thank you for making me feel I did okay.

An emergency room full of bright yellow daffodils to the emergency staff at Squamish General Hospital. I cannot thank you enough for the hard work and thoughtfulness you gave my father on the evening of July 5. My father had just arrived in Squamish from Coquitlam and he suffered a heart attack. I brought him up to you and you all did a wonderful job. He did have another heart attack the next morning. He is now feeling much better. He was released July 11 and is doing well at home. Andy sends a big daffodil to all of you. That is a large compliment because he has been in hospital numerous times and I have not once heard a compliment from him. You should all be very proud. You are wonderful people.

Daffodils to the lady at Needles and Pins who gave quick, small town service when fabric was needed in a hurry, saving a trip to Vancouver in the heat.

A cooler office room full of daffodils to Neil O'Neil and O'Neil James services. Because of your kindness the chamber of commerce staff and office has been a lot more comfortable during this heat wave. Thank you again for the use of your turbo dryer.

A restaurant full of daffodils to the manager and staff at Wendy's for inviting the seniors for a "dry run" before the restaurant opened. The lunch was delicious and the staff courteous. It was all much appreciated.

Darts to the municipality for imposing watering restrictions on its taxpaying citizens while its own sprinklers are running daily, keeping municipal lawns and flowers looking great while mine wither away. Bit of a double standard, isn't it?

A truck load of daffodils to the caring people of Hemlock Street for supplying us with cold drinks on such a hot day of work. From the District of Squamish road crew workers.

Three pillowcases full of daffodils for the kind lady who, out of the goodness of her heart, crocheted three beautiful travel pillows for my babies. Your kindness and generosity was overwhelming.

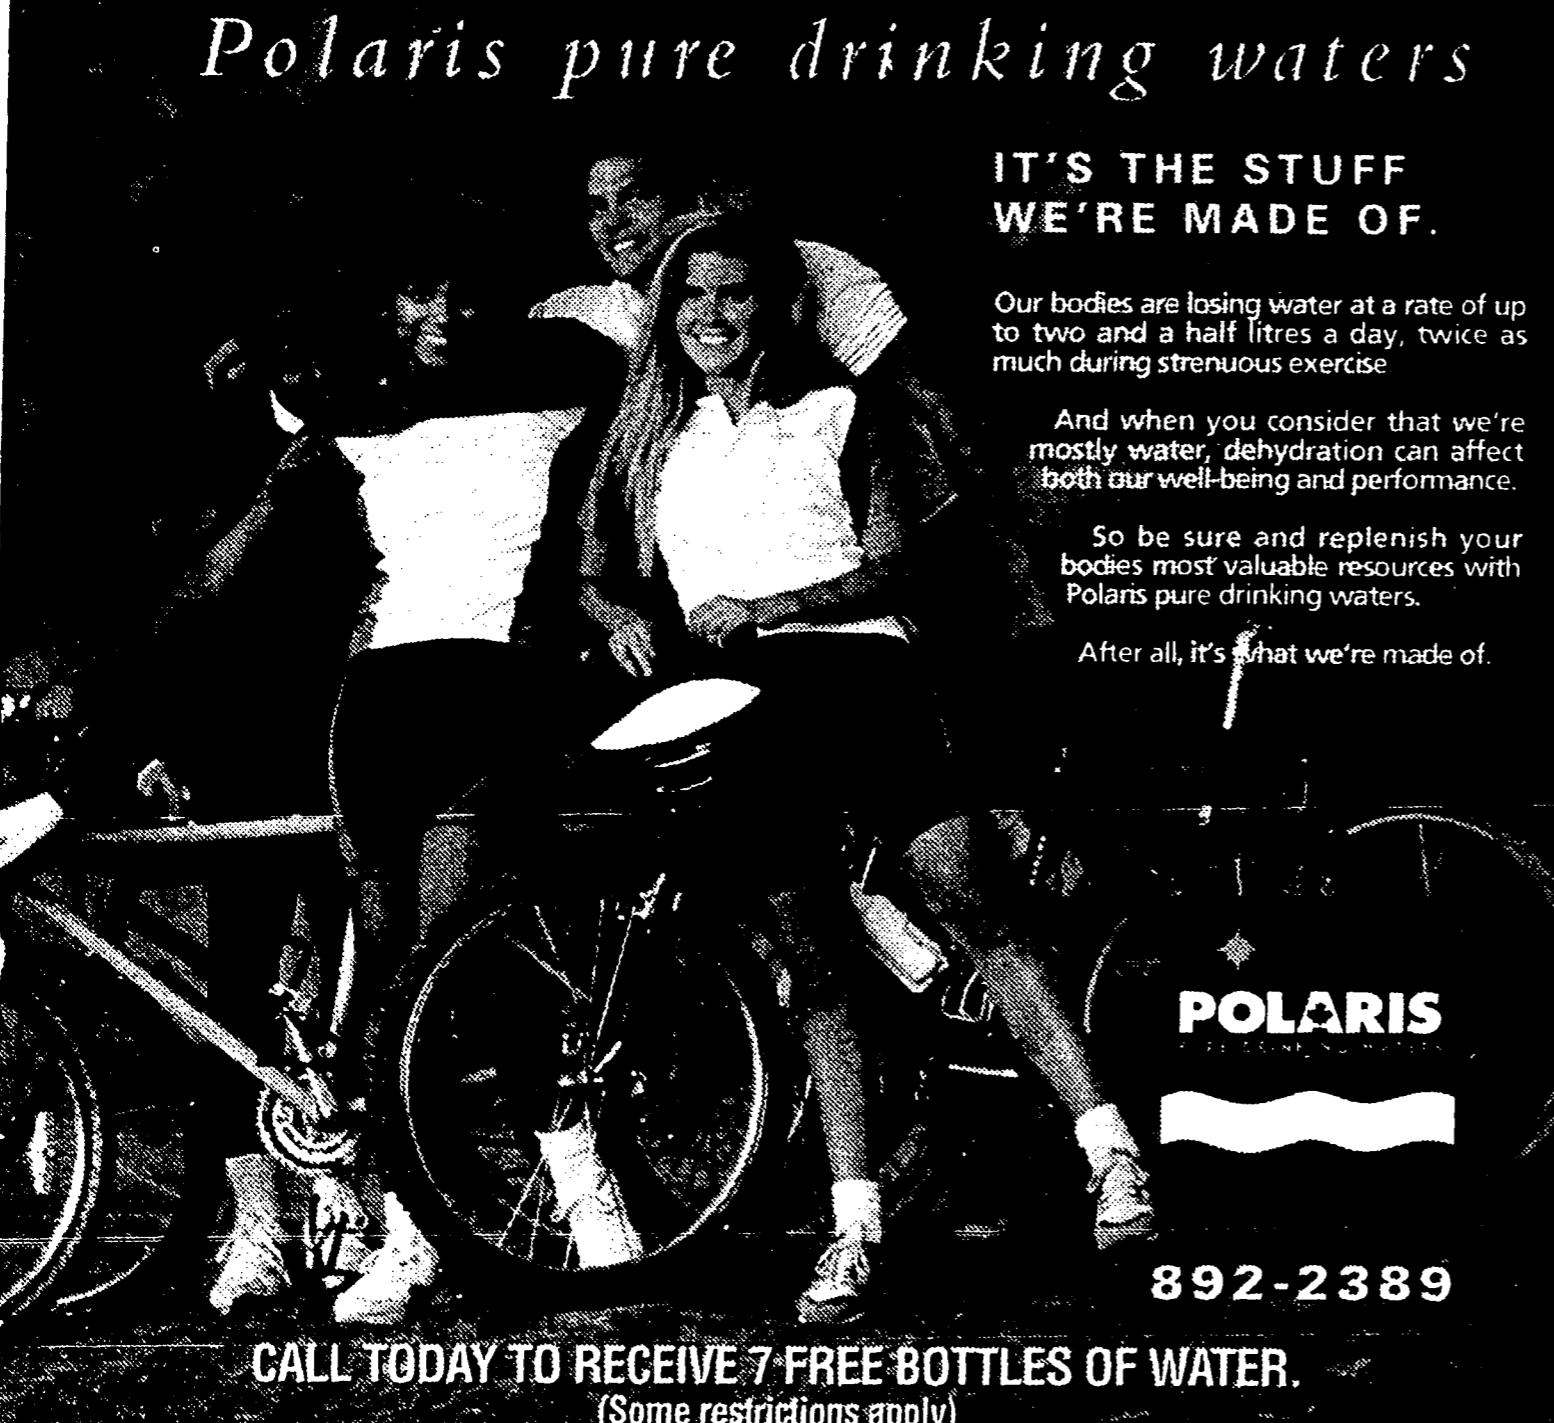

A jet full of daffodils to Anne and Vicky at Uniglobe Travel. Our trip was perfect. Thank you.

A gentle reminder that all darts and daffodils must be signed and include a phone number in case verification or clarification is necessary.

Darts are meant to provide constructive criticism and cannot include names of individuals or businesses.

Please write your darts and daffodils clearly, particularly those daffodils using names, to avoid errors.

Garlic has powers to heal, repel

As the garlic tops die down in the garden, ready for harvest, I can't help but think about how garlic has always inspired feelings as strong as smell. In the time of the Pharaohs, ancient Egyptians would buy a slave with 15 pounds of garlic. Until the middle of the 18th century in Siberia, 15 bulbs paid a peasant's annual taxes. Yet Greek priests wouldn't touch the stuff, refusing to admit garlic eaters into their most sacred temples.

Napoleon Bonaparte was anointed with garlic at birth. Cleopatra was entombed with it to ensure a well-sealed afterlife. But King Alfonso XI of Castile founded a health order based on his hatred of garlic. Medieval soldiers ate garlic to gain strength before battle and some used it for another strategy altogether. Known as the "stinking rose" in medieval Europe, garlic sometimes served the same purpose as a dozen of a woman's long stemmed beauties. In Boccaccio's "The Decameron," an infatuated young man sent garlic to his sweetheart. The bouquet's bouquet worked wonder. Garlic has been used to repel as well as attract. When hung in wreaths or rubbed on doorknobs and window frames, it was once a popular first-line defense against vampires. Today, gardeners grind up garlic and mix it into a spray against more tangible, but far less menacing garden pests.

In the days of folk medicine and herbal remedies, garlic never would have been wasted on the garden. Worldwide it was a treatment for such diverse ailments as leprosy, snake bites, dandruff, epilepsy and inflammation caused by wearing small shoes. Hippocrates, father of modern medicine, prescribed garlic for a variety of infections and intestinal disorders as well as toothaches and chest pains. During World War I, wounds were treated with garlic juice.

Modern science is beginning to discover what herbalists have known all along, that garlic is good for what ails you. In North America, garlic's praises are now sung not only in cooking schools but in medical schools. What a turnaround from when we were a nation of garlic haters. But that's the way it has always been with garlic — nothing if not inspirational. If peeling a lot of garlic is a pain, look for one of those handy garlic peelers. A little rubber tube, it strips the skin right off the clove in nothing flat. I wouldn't be surprised to find one in the kitchen.

Interestingly, the garlicky flavor of a dish depends not on the amount of garlic but on how it's handled. The sulfur compounds formed when the garlic's cell membranes are broken create the taste as well as the smell. The more violently the tissues are broken, the more pungent the garlic taste. Three minced cloves will taste more garlicky than 40 whole roasted cloves. The following recipes call for lots of chopped garlic, and end up pretty garlicky.

Sweet and Sour Garlic Chicken

- 4 lb. chicken thighs
- 3 Tbsp. oil
- 1 head of garlic, peeled and chopped (about a dozen cloves)
- 2 small dried hot red peppers
- 3/4 cup white vinegar
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 1/4 cup honey

Heat the oil in a large skillet and brown the chicken on all sides. Remove the chicken and drain off most of the fat. Add the garlic and peppers to the skillet and gently fry until garlic is soft but not browned. Return the chicken to the pan. Add remaining ingredients and cook over medium high heat until the chicken is cooked, about 20 minutes. Keep cooking until the sauce is reduced enough to glaze the chicken slightly. Serve with rice.

When it's just too hot to cook, I like nothing better than a cool Greek salad with soft pita bread dipped in garlicky humus.

Humus

- 1 large can chick peas (garbanzos)
- juice of a large lemon
- 3 or 4 large cloves garlic (or more)
- 3 to 4 Tbsp. tahini (sesame paste)
- 1 to 2 Tbsp. olive oil
- salt and pepper to taste

Drain the chick peas and rinse. Put all ingredients in a blender and blend until smooth. Add a bit of water if it doesn't blend easily. Adjust seasonings to taste. If you prefer a rough textured humus, mash the beans and press the garlic cloves. Stir in the remaining ingredients. Chill for a few hours to blend the flavors. Serve with warm pita. Humus keeps for a least a week if covered and chilled.

Squamish has a terrific climate for growing garlic. This haul was harvested last week from a garden in Garibaldi. It was planted in a one-metre-square raised box to enhance drainage. For best results, garlic should be planted in October for harvest the next June or July, although it can also be planted in early spring for a slightly smaller yield. Squamish nurseries stock the best garlic bulbs for planting. Al Price photo

Three days of fun planned for Loggers Sports weekend

As I mentioned in last week's column, there are three days of fun planned for Squamish Days Loggers Sports weekend at the Tantalus Senior Centre.

Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. there will be tables of arts and crafts. If you wish to rent a table please phone Julie Miles at 898-4316 or Mima Runzer at 898-3280.

Friday there will be blueberry pie and coffee available for the public. At 5 p.m. there will be a barbecue for members only. Bring your own meat to be barbecued. Salads and rolls will be provided. Tickets are $2.50 each, available at the centre or from Julie Miles or Mima Runzer.

Saturday from noon to 3 p.m. they will be serving a turkey and ham dinner. This is open to the public. Cost is $6 for adults and $3 for children under 12 years of age. Tickets can be pre-purchased at the centre or Saturday at the door. Sunday drop in after the parade and enjoy hot-dogs, authentic Polish perogies and tea and coffee.

There will be a Yesteryears display throughout the weekend.

The centre is open Monday to Friday from 10 - 4 p.m.

Mondays join the ladies for crafts. Tuesday, crib starts at 1 p.m. sharp. Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, open for games and cards. We are still looking for programs for these days. Any suggestions?

It isn't everyone that is welcomed in our Over the Hill Gang by a male dancer, but congratulations to Lillian for her 50th birthday and for being such a good sport. A great party was held by the Walking Club New

Approximately 15 walkers showed up for Ted's walk up the road towards Diamond Head last week. He took them on a little different route this time and they all said it was beautiful. This Thursday, August 1st, we meet at the True Value Hardware parking lot for an estuary walk at 10 a.m.

Mary Thomas, who has been away from Squamish for six years living in Creston, dropped in at the Tantalus Seniors Centre for a visit. Mary and her companion Jim Scarron are in town a few days visiting friends. When asked what she has been doing the past six years, she said she has been travelling. Last Thursday, approximately 30 seniors and 10 from Hilltop House enjoyed a luncheon at Wendy's as a run at its new restaurant in the Squamish industrial park. By the time this paper comes out you will all be enjoying their hamburgers and other goodies. Thanks to the management staff for hosting the seniors.

Condolences to the families of Dennis Baker and Crystal Hurren, who passed away last week.

Sea To Summit race beats Eco-Challenge to the corridor

David Donaldson

If you are an outdoor adventurer who likes to test your limits but may not wish to risk life and limb in the Eco-Challenge (or just can't get the time off work), the Sea To Summit Backcountry Challenge would be right up your creek.

Just like the Eco-Challenge, the Sea To Summit race is a multi-sport team event with competitors following a course through backcountry terrain utilizing various methods of transportation. Unlike the Eco-Challenge, competitors can compete individually, as teams of four or as relay teams of four in which each member does one leg on their own plus the whitewater rafting leg together. Competitors have two days — Aug. 18 — to make their way from the sea (North Vancouver's Deep Cove) to the summit (Whistler Mountain), incorporating ocean kayaking/canoeing, mountain biking, whitewater rafting and alpine hiking/running.

Organizer Dean Payne admits the race is inspired by the Eco-Challenge but says he and partner Greg Spoule began developing the idea last autumn, before they realized the Eco-Challenge was coming to B.C. this summer.

"We wanted to bring something like the Eco-Challenge to the average person on a smaller scale and locally," he says. Payne and Spoule were also inspired by extreme outdoor races that have been going on in Europe and Australia for some years. "We thought there's nothing going on here in B.C., which is the best place in the world for this stuff, so we'd just try it."

Although the Eco-Challenge will be drawing worldwide media coverage and has been receiving all the attention, it won't overshadow the Sea To Summit race, which beats the Eco-Challenge to the corridor by one week.

Competitors can brave the Elaho River without any previous rafting experience. Chief file photos

"It's actually helped because it's brought awareness to this sort of sport," says Payne.

The Sea To Summit race also differs in the fact that almost anyone can enter — from the recreational weekend warrior to the elite athlete — and it doesn't cost a lot in terms of time or money.

"Some of the people going into our race would be able to do the Eco-Challenge, but this is a smaller scale and a lot less expensive. It's a weekend event as opposed to going away into the bush for eight days."

Payne says for the average person who is not an elite athlete, the race will be challenging and the elite athletes should be able to sprint most of it. A lot of triathletes are entering the race because they are looking for an alternative endurance competition, but the majority of the competitors will be recreational, weekend athletes who want to find out what they are capable of.

"Many people enter these events, like the Sun Run, not to win but to finish," Payne says.

The race begins at 8 a.m. Aug. 17 with the first stage, an 18-kilometre ocean kayak/canoe leg. From the mass start at Cates Park near Deep Cove, competitors will paddle north to the end of Indian Arm, an ocean inlet with relatively calm, protected waters surrounded by mountains. This leg should take three to four hours for the average paddler.

Stage two is a 52-kilometre mountain bike ride beginning immediately after athletes transfer from their boats to their mountain bikes, similar to a triathlon transition. The first 23 kilometres is an ascent up the Indian River Valley on the Stawamus-Indian Forest Service Road, climaxing at an aid station with refreshment, first aid and bike repair. The next 13 kilometres is a descent through the Stawamus River Valley to the Valleycliffe Trails for the final 16 kilometres ending at Alice Lake.

The third stage begins at 6 a.m. on Sunday with a chilly splash of glacier water on the Elaho River for the 9.2-kilometre whitewater raft leg. Depending on the water level, rafters will likely be facing class 3 rapids with two teams per boat in a ride that should take about 1.5 hours. No rafting experience is necessary for this leg and the rafting guides will run the trip like a normal guided tour.

After being shuttled back from the river, competitors will transfer to their mountain bikes at Brackendale for stage four, a 46-kilometre mountain bike ride to Whistler. The route will combine trail riding, logging roads and some highway riding with an elevation gain of 675 metres. The trek through the Cheakamus Canyon will be scenic and grueling, with some of the best wilderness viewpoints in the world. There will be one aid station approximately halfway through the course, which should take average riders about four hours.

The final stage is a five-kilometre mountain ascent, five-kilometre descent on foot beginning at the transition point at the base of Whistler Mountain Creekside. Competitors will run, walk or crawl on a marked route of established trails and access roads to just past mid-station and descend to the base to the finish line at Garibaldi Lift Co. Bar and Grill for a barbecue party with live entertainment, door prizes and the awards ceremony. This stage should take three to four hours for the average hiker.

Safety plans are in effect for each stage of the race. Motorized safety boats with radio communication and safety supplies will monitor the kayakers and canoers, and the Squamish Emergency Program Society will have members strategically located and linked with radio equipment to provide safety for the mountain bike legs. The whitewater rafting stage will be guided by a professional rafting company and Whistler Mountain staff will be working on the marked and established route of the hiking stage.

There are no cash prizes for winning this event, but winning teams will receive trophies to recognize their accomplishments, and other non-cash and draw prizes will be awarded. All team members will receive a plaque with a team photo as a memento of the adventure.

The organizers of the Sea To Summit Backcountry Challenge are looking for volunteers to help coordinate the event. Volunteers receive a free weekend of camping, meals, a T-shirt and attend the finish line party. To register as a volunteer contact Dean at 1-604-737-8700.

Parts of the mountain bike legs will require racers to ride Hwy. 99.

No medals yet for local Olympians

Whistler police officer Taro Tan's dream of an Olympic gold ended last week at the hands of a Portuguese judoka.

After defeating his Round 2 opponent, Zhang Guangjun from the People's Republic of China, Thursday morning in Atlanta's Georgia World Congress Centre, Tan faced off against Portugal's Michel Almeida for a berth in the men's half light-weight quarter-finals.

But the 28-year-old fourth degree black belt's drive for the podium ended there.

Tan's win against China's Guangjun was through a move called Koka, which is awarded when the opponent is thrown on his or her side, thigh or buttock with some force or the opponent is held down for 10 to 19 seconds.

In his loss to Portugal's Almeida, Tan fell to a Yuko, awarded for a partially successful throw or a hold maintained for 20 to 24 seconds.

For the past four years Tan has been crowned as national champion in the under-65 kilogram judo category, this year winning the title in a final fight-off June 1 in Sept-Iles, Que. against club rival and friend Stephane Chretien.

Canada's only previous medal winner in the sport, Montreal's Nicolas Gill, who took bronze in the 1992 Barcelona Games, was also eliminated before the medal round.

Tan's Round 3 opponent, Almeida, didn't fare much better in the quarter finals, losing to eventual gold-medal winner Udo Quellmalz of Germany.

Japan's Yukimasa took silver in the half light-weight category while Cuba's Israel Hernandez Plana and Brazil's Henrique Guimaraes settled for bronze.

Lions Bay kayaker Margaret Langford finished eighth in the women's K1 final at the Olympic Games Saturday.

The race was run on the Ocoee River in Tennessee the first natural course for the event in the last the Games. Langford's first run came in at 193.49 with penalty seconds and her second at 173.59 with five penalty seconds.

Langford is ranked 19th in the world and finished 15th in the 1992 Olympics at Barcelona.

Local medal hopes now rest on North Vancouver's Alison Sydor who is favored to take the women's gold medal in the first-ever Olympic cross-country mountain biking event set for Tuesday, July 30.

Joining Sydor in the women's race will be North Vancouver's Leslie Tomlinson. Victoria's Andrea Hestler and Surrey's Warren Sallenback will represent Canada in the men's cross-country.

Currently the points leader on the World Cup circuit with five wins in her first six races, Sydor has relegated her American rival Julie Furtado into a distant second in the overall standings, more than 50 points behind.

Known for her hill-climbing strength and the ability to sprint through finishes, Sydor has blown by Furtado at the finish line in several World Cup events this year.

But her most recent encounter with the former World Cup champion in Mont-Ste-Anne, Que. June 16 was uneventful as Sydor finished nearly 10 minutes ahead of Furtado, who ended the race in a disappointing 33rd place. Following the event Sydor appeared confident in her ability to bring back a gold from the Olympic course in Georgia.

Sydor last raced in Whistler during the 1995 Cheakamus Challenge, where she took her third consecutive title despite suffering from jet lag and a slow race start.

The race win was less than a week after she defended her World Championship title in Germany for a second consecutive year.

Squamish hockey player to compete in Czech tournament

Squamish minor hockey player Scott Weiss will be traveling to the Czech Republic next week with Team B.C. to play in the Czech Challenge Cup.

Weiss was invited to join the team after his spectacular performance with the Vancouver Super Series team which recently won a silver medal playing in a tournament against teams from Alberta, Alaska and Utah.

Team B.C. will be playing 17 exhibition games across Europe Aug. 6-22, starting in Frankfurt, Germany and working its way across the continent to Prague for the cup tournament.

Weiss admits to being a little nervous about playing in an international tournament with teammates he hasn't even met yet, but they will have a three-day training camp in Germany before embarking on the road to Prague.

The Squamish FC men's senior soccer league team will be holding open training sessions beginning Tuesday, Aug. 6. Squamish FC is looking for soccer players young and old who are interested.

Bulls pitcher Doug Allin twists out a strike against the Raiders in the men's fastball final Sunday. The Bulls won 6-0. David Donaldson photos Raiders batter Graham Newell wasn't quick enough to catch this pitch but gave his team one of their few chances in the last inning when a flyball got him on base.

Bulls buck Raiders in fastball finals

By David Donaldson

Howe Sound Men's Fastball league champions the Mexx Pub Bulls beat every team in the finals this weekend to win the playoffs.

The closest the Bulls came to being knocked out was in the first game against Mountain Building Centres. They had to lend Mountain Building Centres two players (Barrie Woodard and Paul Schultie) for the game to count, which kept the play even until a two-run homer from Travis Moyle put the Bulls ahead 5-3 in extra innings.

"They kind of caught us off guard," said Bulls shortstop John Stuart. "Jim Raymond pitched a great game against us."

The Bulls had little trouble beating the Coast Valley Contracting Diggers 9-1 Saturday and pitcher Doug Allin held the Squamish Raiders to a no-hitter in the 6-0 final Sunday. A tight infield kept the Raiders from scoring in the first few innings, but after being called out trying to steal home, Allin bore down on the mound to strike out the Raiders' batters one at a time.

In the league awards, voted on by the players, the top outfielders were Mike Decook (Bulls), Jason Wright (Diggers) and Ryan Lucy (MBC). Best shortstop - John Stuart (Bulls), third base - Glen Davis (Raiders), second base - Kevin Horth (Raiders), first base - Al Godin (Bulls), pitcher - Doug Allin (Bulls), catcher - Kevin McChesney (Diggers). Most valuable player was Doug Allin, most improved player was Ryan Lucy and best batter was Al Godin with a .550 average.

Fastball action resumes this weekend with the Raiders Loggers Sports tournament, bringing 20 teams from around the Lower Mainland to Centennial Field.

Two medals for Squamish at Summer Games

Squamish athletes at the B.C. Summer Games are faring just as well and in some cases better than their Olympic-level mentors.

Ian Preston took fourth place in boys high jump and the silver medal in team wrestling. The Vancouver/Squamish boys basketball team with Squamish player Monjef Peeters defeated Fraser Valley 58-56 to win the bronze final after losing to Fraser River 50-42 and Thompson/Okanagan 42-41.

Lisa Puchmayr placed eighth in the pentathlon with 2,099 points and Sabrina Mattson placed 14th in girls long jump.

Laurie Aseltine finished seventh in javelin with 24.50 metres, 13th in discus with 19.24 metres and 17th in shotput with 8.08 metres.

Cross-country makes and breaks Cactus Cup racers

Pro competitors in this weekend's Cactus Cup stage race were again looking to the final 34-kilometre cross-country mountain biking event Sunday to crown an overall winner.

After the first three events less than 30 seconds separated the top three riders in the pro men's category with Specialized legend Ned Overend leading his nearest challenger by a mere nine seconds. But Victoria's Roland Green, riding for Kona, beat Overend by just under two minutes in the cross-country giving him a total time of 3:06:45.30 for first place, barely two minutes under Overend's total.

Melanie McQuaid's lead over the women's pro category, about one minute and 48 seconds, was also within the reach of several racers even though the Victoria rider posted wins in all three of her events.

McQuaid held on to win the cross-country with four minutes separating her and West Vancouver's Erin McGann. This gave McQuaid first place overall with a total time of 2:48:00.32 and McGann second place, six minutes behind. Pemberton's Alison MacDonald was fifth overall at 3:13:29.97.

After three pro events the top local racers on the men's side were Squamish's Scott Ross in 14th and Dale Douglas in 15th. Douglas was fifth in Friday's Fatboy event. Ross did not finish in the cross-country which put him out of the final results but Squamish's Dave Heisler finished 17th in the cross-country and 16th overall.

Whistler's Paul Rawlinson topped the expert men's 30 to 39 category after three events despite a collision during the last lap of the Fatboy event and finished second overall after a second place finish in the cross-country.

Rawlinson won his time trial and dirt crit races but settled for third in the Fatboy after his bike clashed with an opponent's wheel release bolt as the two riders overlapped.

The collision tore seven spokes from Rawlinson's wheel but he managed to nurse his bike over the finish line to earn a 10-second time bonus.

"It looked like .22 shots through my rim," he said, describing his wheel after the race.

Morris' More Than Workwear Athlete of the Month

For being selected from among the province's top hockey players to travel to the Czech Republic with Team B.C. to play in the Czech Challenge Cup, Squamish minor hockey player Scott Weiss has been named the July Athlete of the Month.

Upon receiving the award Weiss said "it feels great to know people are actually recognizing young athletes."

If you know a local athlete of any age who deserves special recognition, send your nomination with a brief description why to The Squamish Chief: Box 3500 Squamish, B.C. V0N 3G0, or fax it to 892-8483.

Sea to Sky Soccer School holding two more camps

in building a strong, competitive team. Practice sessions will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Centennial Field.

Squamish FC's regular season begins after the Labor Day weekend but it will be hosting a 12-men's, 12-women's team open tournament Aug. 24-25 to raise money for the Sea to Sky Soccer School.

After a successful first camp with 85 participants, the Sea to Sky Soccer School is hosting two more camps this summer: Aug. 12-16 and Aug. 26-30.

The school runs four programs at Centennial Field including: skill enhancement — toning up ball handling, passing and shooting skills ($57); goalkeeping clinic advanced techniques goaltending ($57); team development — teamwork and strategy ($57 with 10 or players from the same team). The camps run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. including lunch and swim in the leisure centre pool is also offered.

Participants in all camps receive a T-shirt, soccer ball, daily refreshment juice and oranges, popcorn and chips on Wednesday and coupons for McDonald's fries and Panagopolous pizza on Friday. Registration is at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre and the third participant from every family receives free registration.

Several Sea to Sky athletes took top placings in Penticton's Peach Classic triathlon July 21.

Squamish's Heather Wilburn was first in the women's 45-49 category with a time of 2:57:06, Whistler's Sharon Daly was third at 3:25:00 and Murray Coates of Whistler was first in the men's 55-60 category with a time of 2:42:37.

Daly said conditions were ideal for the Olympic distance race which combined a 1.5 kilometre swim, a 4 kilometre bike leg and a 10-kilometre run.

Next year the Peach Classic event is being considered as a qualifier for the world championships with the top two participants from each category earning the opportunity to compete in Perth, Australia.

The Squamish junior tennis team has been meeting weekly for practices since June and several of the team members have been participating in tournaments throughout B.C.

Ajit Johal won the boys' under 10 singles in the recent Ogoogo Classic Open in Penticton and the Nike Rookie Jr. at Stanley Park. Heather Clarkson, Ajmer Johal and Scott Jensen put in great effort at the Grant Connors Rookie Events at Whistler and Stanley Park.

In last week's Sports Shorts the Mountain Building Centres team won the Big Al Memorial fastball tournament was incorrectly identified as a slo-pitch team. We apologize for the mistake.
