Guide predicts Coho devastation with new rules

DFO doing more harm than good, says Steve Cassell

The sport fishing industry in the Squamish area could be devastated by regulations issued by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans, a guide, who has been fishing the Squamish River and its tributaries for years, said the new rules could lead to complete destruction of some runs rather than saving them. On Oct. 1, all Squamish coho fisheries including the Mamquam, Kakamus, Cheekye and Elaho are catch and release only. On the Squamish River, chinook fishing is completely closed until Dec. 31. The chum fishery on the Squamish opens Oct. 31, with an allowable catch of two per day over 25 centimetres (9.8 inches) and under 35 centimetres (13.7 inches). All coho over 35 centimetres must be released. The coho season closes Oct. 31, allowing retention of chum per day over 30 centimetres, closes Nov. 17. Steve Cassell of Fishin' Out West, who has been fishing Squamish rivers for 30 years, says there are a lot of flaws in the new regulations. "Our native friends will still be net-salmon, although they have had restrictions. If we keep the small ones and they take the large ones, that doesn't leave too much. I think they're running into problems in this river. The (Daisy Lake) dam starts letting out water, as we know it always does in November, that high water washes out any fish still in the river." The Squamish Nation has been allocated 5,000 coho for food fish and ceremonial purposes. Federal funding woes have already put the future of the Tenderfoot Creek Hatchery in doubt. "If the hatchery goes down and that thing is not picked up privately, the area is in big time trouble," Cassell said. "Without the hatchery, spring salmon are gone. The DFO is doing more damage than good."

Squamish conservation officers have been appointed fishery officers under the Fisheries Act, and enforce regulations in the Squamish area.

Conservation officer Dan LeGrandeur said he doesn't know what prompted the catch reductions, but it could be related to a lack of data in the number of adult salmon returning to the Squamish River system.

Cassell said DFO would have been better off to prohibit catching the small fish and allow sport fishers to keep one larger coho per day.

"At least the smaller ones would have a chance," he said.

"It has been many years since I've seen coho under 14 inches. With a lure you won't pick up 14-inch fish because the hooks are just too big. Everybody will be forced to fish with bait, and if the fish are too big or too small and they've swallowed the hook, when you pull the hook out you pull the gills out. Or if you cut the line, they're already bleeding so the survival rate isn't very high. It just doesn't make any sense."

Cassell said the chum fishery is not big business because they are not popular sports fish.

"You might get the odd one that's still a bit bright, but by the time they hit fresh water they are multi-colored. After two weeks or so in fresh water they look so dirty you just don't keep them, nobody will."

Cassell said his business will be severely affected by the new rules. Some of his regular clients have said they won't bother fishing in the Squamish area. They won't be spending $10 each for their salmon tags because they aren't needed for catch and release. And they won't be staying in Squamish hotels, eating in local restaurants, buying fishing gear or fuel.

"I hear a lot of people saying they are completely disgusted with this decision. People are almost afraid to fish now there are so many laws."

Hoping to catch a big one, guide and sport fisher Steve Cassell of Fishin' Out West casts his line into the Squamish River Sunday morning. Cassell says new sport fishing rules will harm the resource. Brian Goldstone photo

Most provincial parks filled to capacity for the summer

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

Go north is the advice B.C. Parks is giving Sea to Sky Country visitors who wish to camp around Squamish and Whistler.

After a slow start with a cool spring, B.C. Parks campgrounds in the southern part of the Garibaldi district were almost always filled to capacity. Only at Birkenhead Lake Provincial Park — located about two hours from Squamish north of Pemberton on the road to D'Arcy — can campers be relatively assured there will be vacant sites during the peak season.

"Birkenhead has potential for increased visitation. You can usually get in there," said B.C. Parks extension officer Vicki Haberl. The area is being discovered as demand increases; campground use at Birkenhead was 25 per cent greater this summer than the summer of 1995.

With a new reservation system in place this year at the Alice Lake and Porteau Cove parks, people who reserved ahead liked having peace of mind knowing they would have a campsite waiting for them, Haberl said. The system, however, did not affect the number of people camping at either location; campgrounds that have always been full were still full. Seventy per cent of each campground was available for reservations.

There were fewer backcountry campers visiting the Diamond Head and Garibaldi Lake areas of Garibaldi Provincial Park this summer than last summer, likely due to snow on the trails until mid-July. Use at the Diamond Head campground was down 15 per cent and Garibaldi Lake campground use was down 21 per cent.

There are no plans for new or expanded B.C. Parks campgrounds because there is no capital funding available for development, Haberl said.

Work on the walk-in campground at the base of the Stawamus Chief, a new provincial park, makes formal the already-existing campsites that have been used for years by climbers.

"The improved facility will now provide a proper place to camp for international climbing visitors, Haberl said, adding that work to improve the trail to the top of the Chief will begin this week.

Despite recent rainy weather, the new campsites at the base of the Stawamus Chief have been busy. Improvements to the trail to the top of the Chief begin this week. Brian Goldstone photo

Last call for sensitive areas nominations

People who are concerned about Squamish's environmentally sensitive zones have another week to make submissions to the Squamish Environmental Mapping Committee. The committee is asking the people of Squamish to nominate environmentally sensitive areas for inclusion on a map that will be distributed throughout the community and used to educate people, and thus protect the areas from degradation. A map has been put up on the wall of the foyer in Municipal Hall, where people can write on the map and fill in a form to nominate areas. In addition to salmon spawning habitat, environmentally sensitive areas can include places such as deer over-wintering habitat, amphibian areas used by salamanders and frogs, and eagle viewing areas. The project is being done under the Land for Future project of the Federation of B.C. Naturalists. The deadline for submissions is Sept. 24.

Regional health board on tour

The Coast-Garibaldi Regional Health Board is touring health facilities in the Sea to Sky corridor this week. The tour starts Wednesday at the Pemberton Health Centre and continues later the same day when board members visit the Whistler Health Care Centre. A regional health board meeting will be held at the Whistler centre starting at 2:15 p.m. The board will be touring Squamish General Hospital and Hilltop House from 8:30-10 a.m. Thursday, with presentations from mental health, public health, continuing care, Sea to Sky Community Services and Howe Sound Home Support to follow.

Squamish author says police have vendetta against him

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

An obstruction charge recommended by the Squamish RCMP detachment against a Squamish man who says he is being targeted for harassment by police has been rejected by both the Squamish and Vancouver regional Crown counsel offices.

Michael Yates of Squamish, who was accused of obstructing a police officer in the execution of his duty, said some members of the Squamish RCMP have a vendetta against him for some his writing, which criticizes policing methods. As a result, Yates says he has lodged a complaint with the RCMP Public Complaints Commission.

Yates said he believes his recent encounter with the Squamish RCMP — in which a police officer used handcuffs and pepper spray on Yates after he allegedly failed to produce his driver's licence as requested — is a result of his criticism. He said other Squamish RCMP detachment members have told him he would be "in for a hassle."

"I put a blot on the escutcheon of the RCMP."

Yates wrote some newspaper columns in the now-defunct Squamish Times which called for a more proactive type of policing. And in Line Screw, a novel which is critical of the corrections system in which Yates used to work, he strongly chastises a Burnaby RCMP dog handler who allowed his dog to mutilate an already captured attempted escapee from jail.

Squamish RCMP Staff Sgt. Dwain Wetteland said police have been watching specifically for Yates not because of his writings, but because of calls received that he had been leaving bars on his motorcycle after drinking.

"If we were going to be upset with criticism and retaliate toward these people, we wouldn't have time to do anything else."

Wetteland said that on the afternoon of July 12 when Yates pulled up his motorcycle beside RCMP Const. Jeff Findlay, who was standing on a downtown street corner dealing with someone else, Findlay identified the motorcycle as matching a description with which he had been provided.

Wetteland said Yates "told (Findlay) where to go" when requested to hand over his driver's licence.

Yates said he was put in handcuffs while he was reaching for his wallet to produce his driver's licence.

Sgt. Dwain Wetteland says the technicalities of the law make it difficult for police.

He said the pepper spray was used after he was already on the ground and in handcuffs.

Wetteland said RCMP policy is to use pepper spray before using physical force. He said Findlay was acting within the scope of his duty and performing a legitimate investigation.

Wetteland said "Const. Findlay didn't do anything wrong."

After being arrested, Yates was taken to the detachment and spent six hours in a jail cell. He was released with a promise to appear in Squamish provincial court on Aug. 13 on a charge of obstruction. But when he arrived for court, he discovered his name was not on the docket. Squamish Crown counsel Phil Sebellin did not approve the recommended charge of obstructing a peace officer in the execution of his duty, and made a decision that it be dropped.

The RCMP then asked that the regional Crown counsel office review the case. Last week, Wetteland was told the regional Crown made the decision that the case should not proceed to court because of technicalities.

"Basically we didn't say enough words to Mr. Yates in order to make the charge go ahead," Wetteland said, noting that the police report did not make mention that Findlay pulled Yates over because he was suspected of driving while impaired. He said that when Yates refused to produce his driver's licence, Findlay immediately told him he would be arrested for obstruction.

Wetteland said the technicalities of the law make it difficult for police officers dealing with potentially volatile situations on the street. "Sometimes you miss things," he said, adding police officers do not have the luxury that the Crown has of "playing Monday morning quarterback."

Wetteland said the detachment's position is that cases of obstruction of a police officer must go to court because it is an offence under the Criminal Code of Canada to obstruct the duty of a peace officer.

"If we are not going to follow that up, let's get rid of that law," Wetteland said, adding that all too often charges recommended by police do not proceed to court.

Yates said he has filed a complaint against the Squamish RCMP detachment with the RCMP Public Complaints Commission, an independent body which investigates complaints against the RCMP. He said police used excessive force against him and assaulted him, and committed violations of procedure.

Wetteland said he has not received any word from the commission regarding the complaint.

Police issued Yates an alcohol-related 24-hour driving suspension after he was taken to the detachment. Yates said he had not been drinking.

Money destined for forests, workers destined to help balance budget

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

Money that was to be dedicated entirely to renewing British Columbia's forests will now also be used to help the provincial government balance its budget. The move has Squamish Mayor Corinne Lonsdale upset.

Forest Renewal B.C., which was expected to have a balance of about $900 million by the beginning of 1997, will transfer about $400 million to the province's general revenue fund this fiscal year, the Crown corporation board announced last week.

The government has been attempting to balance the provincial budget, but estimates have shown revenue projections are much less than originally forecast. Last week, Finance Minister Andrew Petter announced cuts of $750 million from projected government spending. Now the government is delivering on talks earlier this year in which it said it was considering using Forest Renewal B.C. funds to help reduce the deficit.

Petter, in a government news release, said the Forest Renewal B.C. decision is positive news for B.C. taxpayers and for B.C. forest communities.

"The allocation of FRBC surplus funds to the province will help government meet its financial objectives and respond to concerns about our debt expressed by British Columbians from every region of the province."

Forest Renewal B.C. collects money from the industry through increased royalties for the right to harvest timber on Crown land. The money was to be reinvested in communities from which it was taken to provide retraining and jobs for displaced forest workers, while doing a better job of managing forest land.

Lonsdale said she was upset Forest Renewal B.C. funds are being offered to the province's general revenue fund.

She said when she went to the initial announcement of Forest Renewal B.C. in 1994 — a time when most forest workers in Squamish were working 11 months a year — she was told "forest workers will no longer be seasonal employees. They haven't tried hard enough to do that." This year, many forest workers in Squamish are working only six months she said.

"I haven't seen Victoria take one proactive step to get out into the communities with that $800 million and get people working longer."

"I haven't seen Victoria take one proactive step to get out into the communities with that $800 million."

— Mayor Corinne Lonsdale

Lonsdale said she would like to see Forest Renewal B.C. money used to build dry kilns or mills in communities where forestry jobs are being lost. She said it is wrong to ship raw timber to places like Oregon and then have the finished product shipped back to B.C.

Since its start-up, Forest Renewal B.C. revenues have exceeded expenditures by a wide margin.

Royalties collected by the government are sensitive to market conditions — the lumber market is quite volatile — therefore, the amount collected on an annual basis will fluctuate. According to literature from the government announcement of the Forest Renewal Plan, funds collected would be set aside when lumber prices are high to sustain expenditures when prices are low.

The government news release said that to date, Forest Renewal B.C. has approved investments of more than $530 million in communities throughout B.C., and there are more planned for next year. Forests Minister David Zirnelt said Forest Renewal B.C. spending is continuing to increase as fast as the board considers wise.

The board's decision establishes a formula by which surplus funds of up to $400 million will be transferred to provincial revenues this fiscal year. The exact amount will depend on the precise balance of revenues and expenditures at the fiscal year-end.

School trustees fail to reinstate crossing guards

Don Enns
Squamish Chief

School board trustees with a split vote decided that crossing guards at Howe Sound district schools will not be reinstated.

Trustees cut the $30,000 per year item from the district's $33.4-million budget during deliberations earlier this year, with the proviso that the issue would be reviewed before school started in September. But when students returned to school a couple of weeks ago, crossing guards were not in place. An outcry by parents resulted in the issue being on the forefront at last week's school board meeting.

Doug Hackett, chairman of the Howe Sound Elementary School parents advisory council, said in a presentation to the board he is "very concerned that the physical safety of children does not appear to be a priority of this school board."

"There have been ample opportunities during the first reading of the budget for the school board to work with parents and teachers to ensure the safety of our children going to and from school, but no action was made, no contingency was put in place."

Howe Sound parents, realizing that the crossing on Guilford Drive with its limited sightlines is particularly dangerous, have been providing voluntary supervi-

Signal Hill Elementary School in Pemberton, the school principal has been performing crossing guard duty. Because crossing guard jobs were union positions, the Canadian Union of Public Employees local said it may be filing a grievance.

School board chairman Don Wilson said he believes school crossing guards are necessary because "safety is an essential part of education."

His position was it was foolish and irresponsible to remove them unilaterally without ensuring something was put in place," Wilson said after Wednesday's school board meeting.

Wilson considers stepping down from school board

Chouh Ghose
Editor Question

Politics around the Howe Sound school board have forced at least one trustee to consider drawing from the November's election race. This year's school board election will see the board reduced to nine. But it may see the loss of board member Don Wilson more than a decade ago to the district.

Following Wednesday's meeting, which ran from 11 p.m. to 1 a.m., Wilson expressed complete frustration with a board he has been a member of, on and off, for the past 15 years.

"I don't think some of the trustees are pulling their weight, I don't think they're being objective, I don't think they're working in the best interest of the district and in some cases I don't believe trustees are using the job as anything more than a form of employment," Wilson said.

Chairman Don Wilson is considering his future on the school board.

"The whole thing has to do with the personalities of the trustees — they have to learn to work for Voting with Wilson in favor of temporarily reinstating crossing guards, while a committee attempts to find a permanent solution, were trustees Mike Moorhouse, Constance Rulka and Jan Systad. Trustees Ele Clarke, Howard Kelly, Bonnie Munster and Laurie Vance voted against the motion. The tie vote means the motion was defeated.

Superintendent of schools Doug Courtice made a recommendation to trustees that the crossing guards be reinstated. Without providing specifics, he said there have been some changes in budget items that would make it possible to reallocate funds.

Kelly said he could vote for rehiring crossing guards only if he knew where the money was coming from. He said that without concrete information, he fears others will suffer from cutbacks elsewhere.

"I'll be the first to change my vote when (Courtice) shows me where the money comes from."

Kelly said that during budget meetings, which included representatives from parents advisory councils, 95 per cent of the people involved said the priority should be to keep the money in the classroom. "Crossing guards don't fall into that category."

Another plan is to pay for crossing guards with money that may be obtained from rental of the dormant Coast Mountain Outdoor School, located near Pemberton.

Five parties have expressed interest in the outdoor school and are to submit their proposals by Thursday. If one is accepted, money that was designated for mothballing the school could become available for other uses, Courtice said.

Wilson said the crossing guard issue will be revisited by the board when trustee Moira Biggin-Pound, who could not be at last week's meeting, returns.

Hackett said the danger of the Guilford Drive crossing could be at least partially alleviated by moving the crossing closer to Clarke Drive, which would require the cooperation of the municipality and the rerouting of a path to the school.

the district and not for their own individual communities," he said.

The Squamish lawyer's immediate reaction was to consider resigning from the board. But by Friday that decision gave way to reason with Wilson pondering whether his name will appear on November's election ballot.

"I thought of leaving earlier but there really isn't much point in that," he said.

"I'm certainly not going to put the board to a September byelection or step down because it might cause an even number (of trustees) which makes it difficult for the board to operate."

Whistler trustee Ele Clark admitted that many of the Howe Sound trustees are also feeling frustrated.

Trustees asleep at the wheel

What kind of representation are we getting, and how accountable are our school trustees, when their individual votes on any given issue are not recorded?

With the November elections already causing people to think about how they are going to vote, and with numerous controversial issues passing across their meeting table in recent months, the average person would think school trustees would want to have it well known where they stand.

But that is not the case. Individual votes are only recorded when a trustee asks for that to be done.

We tried last week to find out who voted for and who voted against reinstatement of crossing guards in the Howe Sound School District. We knew the vote in favor of reinstatement had failed, and thought readers and parents would like to know each trustee voted.

The recording secretary at the meeting didn't know. Board chair Don Wilson said he was so upset the motion failed he didn't notice who had voted against it. None of the trustees we contacted could remember the breakdown. One wasn't sure how she voted herself, and another said if we had contacted him right after the meeting he might have remembered, but by Sunday it was too late. Perhaps a lot can happen to confuse the mind in three days. The meeting at which the vote was taken was held Wednesday.

This was a serious issue on which they were voting, at least for a lot of children and parents. If you don't think questions of safety around schools can get parents cranked up, you've never met Trudy McKay or Doug Hackett. And they are only two representatives of a lot of parents who feel the same way.

The decision itself was short-sighted at best. It's like saying crime is costing us so much money we had better get rid of the police.

In the crossing guard issue, Hackett has put his money where his mouth is. He has spent his own money on making sure the community knew about the problem, and volunteered a lot of his time, along with others, to make sure the children are protected. In a letter on the adjoining page, he has also proposed a solution which would get the school board off the hook.

Though it would be one more case of senior governments offloading their responsibilities onto the community, the safety of the children is paramount. There must be a solution the community can live with to retain services of the crossing guards.

In any case, it's nice to know our trustees are so alert. And good luck to everyone in deciding who to vote for Nov. 16.

Spare some time for kids

September is Big Brothers and Big Sisters Month in Canada. On Page 35 in The Squamish Chief this week, you will find the Squamish chapter of Big Brothers and Big Sisters pleading for more volunteers to act as role models and companions for the 17 kids on their waiting list, and a lot more who need the service. The group also needs help on the board of directors, as there are now only six people active.

Being a Big Brother or a Big Sister is not the huge time commitment most people imagine. The biggest thing is being there, most often at the end of the phone, in case the Little Brother or Little Sister needs you. The rewards are enormous when you see a young person who might be headed in the wrong direction accept your influence and get back on the right track.

On Sept. 27-29, Squamish Big Brothers and Big Sisters are staging a pole sitting session and paint-a-thon at Squamish Station. Take the time to stop in and see what the group is all about. And consider giving up a small portion of your time. Both you and the community will be better for it.

GLEN CLARK ADDRESSES THE ISSUE OF GOVERNMENT ACCOUNTABILITY

Grabbing Forest Renewal B.C. funds destroys government credibility

Last week's provincial political scene was dominated by questions of money and trust. The two are intertwined.

Finance Minister Andrew Petter conceded the provincial budget, delivered only a couple of months ago, was highly optimistic on the revenue side. Rather than the "balanced budget" touted during the election campaign, without $750 million in spending cuts this year the government is facing a deficit approaching $1 billion. Documents from the Finance Ministry indicate this situation was known somewhat before and certainly during the election. But the NDP forged ahead with its policy of bragging about balancing the books.

Who knows if they convinced enough people to sway the election results in their favor, but with the Liberals gaining the majority of popular vote in a losing cause, the issue of fiscal responsibility could have tipped the scales.

How ironic that when the Liberals said during the election they would slash spending, the NDP jumped all over them.

The other financial issue arose when the government graciously accepted a donation of as much as $500 million from the "independent" board of Forest Renewal B.C.

To my way of thinking, this is a much more serious issue than the budget deficit. Few thinking people really believed the budget was balanced in the first place, taking into account the fact that Crown corporation borrowing and the B.C. 21 spending on such projects as the Vancouver Island Highway were not part of the equation.

Forest Renewal B.C. was established in April 1994 by the NDP. It is funded by forest companies through a stumpage increase, and the funds were dedicated to revitalizing forests and forest communities. We were told at the time by many NDP politicians that nobody could touch Forest Renewal B.C. funds for any purpose other than forest revitalization.

Since its creation, Forest Renewal B.C. has developed a cash reserve of some $800 million, and the bureaucracy created to spend those funds has been slow off the mark. As a result, its board, which was appointed by the NDP, somehow reached a decision to give back hundreds of millions of dollars to the government for general revenue. The board and the government insist their was no coercion involved. And I'm Queen of the May.

This cash grab will have several effects, none of them positive. It increases the uncertainty for forest workers who have already been battered in the last few years with the protected areas strategy, parks creation and the spotted owl conundrum. It also creates uncertainty for forest companies, which already pay the highest stumpage rates in the world.

As I See It

By Al Price

By taking this money for general revenue, the government has made the funding of Forest Renewal B.C. just another tax. If it can take $500 million now, it can take more in the future. What incentive is there for forest companies to invest in B.C. in such things as value-added manufacturing when the funds they paid for reforestation, silviculture and job retraining are now going to pay the lease on Premier Glen Clark's truck?

Investment uncertainty in one sector spills over into others. I suspect this government double-cross will have a damaging effect on all foreign investment. Especially when Forests Minister David Zirnelt explains the situation by saying "Don't forget that the government can do anything."

— Forests Minister David Zirnelt

By that he means it can break its promises, mislead its constituents, bend its facts and figures to suit its own purposes, and change the very laws it created as "sacrosanct." It can break its promises with impunity, having created such onerous recall legislation I doubt it will ever be tested.

Saddest of all, this fiasco has added to the cynicism of the general public about politicians. If nothing else, it is proof positive that in politics, power is everything. And absolute power does corrupt absolutely, as we can so plainly see. Even though the majority of politicians are honest and forthright, no one believes that any more. Simply put, this government can no longer be trusted about anything it says or does.

Crossing guard solution up to the community

Editor,
Last night I had a dream, or more correctly a nightmare. I dreamed that my child had been struck down in a school crossing that was without supervision. I saw my child's lifeless body, the driver of the car was possibly in more internal pain than I was. All of this because some adults could not sit down and resolve a very simple problem.
The crossing guard issue is a simple problem. Every school day we need six crossings, one at each previously guarded crossing, for half an hour in the morning and half an hour in the afternoon to help children cross the street.
The school board says it has no budget in Victoria, fine — let's get together and raise the money in our community. The school board says that the municipalities have a responsibility as well, great — let's get them at the table and find a solution. The school board says the union might get upset, maybe — but let's ask for their help, they are humans and they have children.

People of good will can always solve a problem when they work together.
I do not believe that the politicians, employers, parents, unions, service clubs, municipalities, corporations and other groups in this district can not get together and say "Our children matter, we will find a way to protect them."
I am willing to go anywhere in this district, at any time to help resolve this issue. Please, let's not wait until this becomes someone's living nightmare before we do something about it.

All we really have to do is get involved in projects

Editor,
In response to the column on Eco-Challenge — they came, they saw — so what?
Perhaps when the topic vision of some Squamish people is considered, Squamish will embrace opportunities such as Eco-Challenge for not only the economic but also the environmental and social benefits they bring. It was an opportunity not fully realized (or would I say we missed the boat) because it was viewed by some as a Whistler event rather than Sea to Sky corridor. It really was.
The error in attitude was we had to do everything possible to entice people from Whistler. All we really had to do was involve them.

Why didn't we sponsor a Squamish team? Why wasn't there a huge ban welcoming participants as they entered Squamish? Both these suggestions were made at a public meeting the number of commerce organized for interested individuals or groups. Where was the champion during the environmental service project?
Anyone who worked for, volunteered or watched Eco-Challenge couldn't help but catch the spirit of the event. And what a great event it was with more than 500 competitors from North America, Europe and Australasia. These competitors, their support teams and the media moved throughout the corridor as the race progressed. They weren't just in Whistler. It will be these people who leave with (hopefully) great memories of their visit, and the international media who will show Squamish and the Sea to Sky corridor to the rest of the world. The long-term economic benefits are immeasurable.
As for the environmental and social benefits, the environmental service project, cleaning up Mamquam Blind Channel, is a perfect example. Various groups and individuals from the community joined together with Eco-Challenge participants for a common purpose.
Some of us local participants hadn't even been in that area to see the beauty of our own waterfront. We learned a little bit about the ecology of the estuary and what is necessary to protect it.
The visitors I spoke to were in awe of our incredibly beautiful and rugged scenery and overwhelmed by the friendliness of the people in the corridor. It was teamwork and it was fun. Thank you Mayor Corinne Lonsdale for being there and for all the support of the municipality. Also thanks to Lynn Wilbur and Meg Fellowes for initiating and organizing this event.

The person who deserves our biggest thanks and congratulations is our economic development officer, Robert Fine. Without his vision, determination and ability as a team player, this world-class event would not have come to British Columbia, let alone the Sea to Sky corridor. In the words of Eco-Challenge organizer Mark Burnett: "Robert single-handedly convinced me to bring this event to B.C."
At the closing ceremony, Robert Fine expressed his appreciation to the people of Squamish, Whistler, Pemberton, Birken and D'Arcy who welcomed the participants into their communities and made the event possible. Let's do better next time, Squamish. We live in a world-class place, Sea to Sky Country. Let's have the vision to go with it.

Councillor sets the record straight

Editor,

Re: The letter from Dave Young, Sept. 3, about councillors questioning developers.

Yes, councillors must question information provided by anyone — and if Mr. Young had taken the time to check this out, I do it too.

To set the record straight, I believe that what is referred to deals with the potential hotel in the industrial park, which Mr. Young is against.

What I referenced was the fact that the proponents have spent major capital for a market research economic evaluation study and that they had committed a large amount of equity funding towards their project. If it made sense to them who was I to question that?

As this has been a high priority for the community in the last eight or nine years I still think that a hotel of this size and quality deserves full support.

If Mr. Young had been in council chambers when this issue was dealt with, perhaps he would have worded his letter differently? Could it be that he is considering running for council too?

Eagle preservation supporters urged to start writing letters

Editor,

Have no doubt that supporters of airport development are keeping very busy these days writing letters and lobbying against the establishment of the Brackendale eagle reserve under the protected areas strategy. It is in their best interest to do so.

Establishment of the Brackendale eagle reserve presents a challenge for airport development because the presence of the eagles so close to the airport poses very serious safety hazards for aircraft. Transport Canada's planning guidelines for land use around airports provides that "migratory waterfowl and game refuges or feeding stations" not be situated within 3.2 kilometres of an airport reference point.

If the proposed Brackendale eagle reserve is established, it could be much more difficult for the municipality to acquire Transport Canada certification to allow for regularly scheduled commercial flights.

The operator and the federal government have a duty in law to ensure the operation is safe and therefore, supporters of the development have a very strong motivation to lobby against the eagle reserve.

As a small-business person who was raised in a logging family, I have a healthy respect for the need for development to spin the wheels of the local economy. However, when the interests of development are in conflict with preservation of a unique natural phenomenon such as 3,000 wintering bald eagles, the interests of preservation absolutely must take precedence over the interests of development.

In politics, it is the squeaky wheel that gets the grease. Unfortunately, politics often takes precedence over science and common sense. All those who support the establishment of the Brackendale eagle reserve and the preservation of the eagles must get out their pens and start squeaking now before it's too late.

Gay women's stories wanted

Editor,

I am researching a book about gay women living in long-term couple relationships in B.C. and am soliciting your assistance as your community's communicator. I am interested in hearing from "ordinary" gay women, women with families, women who own homes and run businesses, women who are doing work that makes a positive contribution to their communities, women who, by their very lives, are helping to change for the better the way homosexuality is viewed by the mainstream of society.

Gay women living successfully in long-term couple relationships: Your lives and your work are stories of love and courage that I'd like to know more about for a book I'm researching.

Highway construction begins at Cleveland intersection

Price
Squamish Chief

Drivers on Hwy. 99 through Squamish will expect minor delays at the intersection of the highway and Cleveland Avenue this week as construction on the road alignment gets under way. Construction activity in the area will take place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. through Sept. 20. Two lanes of traffic will be open, with possible minor delays for turning and other construction activity. A flagperson will control the traffic. Other construction at the same site has been scheduled from Monday to Friday for approximately the next seven weeks.

Drivers heading to Whistler will face single-lane alternating traffic until Sept. 30 from the Cheakamus River bridge to Brandywine Falls Provincial Park and at Powerline Hill as paving is set to begin, weather permitting. Construction in these two areas will take place from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., with possible 20-minute delays depending on traffic volumes.

There is also the possibility of minor delays at the Cheakamus Canyon highway construction site 30 kilometres north of Squamish Wednesday, Sept. 18 from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Two lanes of traffic are expected to be open, with the 50 kilometre per hour construction speed zone in effect.

Project coordinator Meg Fellowes shows of a model of an eagle viewing shelter that will be built on the Squamish River dike. Ron Enns photo

Eagle watchers will have a shelter

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

People flocking to Squamish to view the annual gathering of wintering bald eagles will be able to do so this year sheltered from wind and rain.

As part of the Nature Conservancy of Canada and Forest Alliance of British Columbia partnership in the Eagles of Brackendale project, a new shelter will be built in the prime viewing location on the Squamish River dike across from the Easter Seal camp.

Project coordinator Meg Fellowes said the location for the six-metre by 18-metre shelter minimizes detrimental impact on eagles, most of which feed and roost on the opposite side of the wide river. As well, the building, adjacent to Government Road, has excellent access and makes visitor management easier.

Project coordinator Meg Fellowes said the shelter is desperately needed with the huge increase in winter tourists coming to Squamish from around the world to experience the natural phenomenon of the thousands of wintering eagles, which gorge themselves on spawned-out salmon.

"I think it will be a fabulous asset for Squamish as we build a tourism destination reputation."

The eagle viewing shelter will be more than a place to seek respite from the elements.

Signage telling the eagle story is an integral part of the $100,000 project, in which $50,000 is designated for the physical building and $50,000 for the signs, to be mounted on partitions within the shelter.

The building, designed by Peter Legere and Tony Nairn, features large timber roofline resembling stylized eagle wings. The sides of the buildings will remain open. The shelter is to be completed in November.

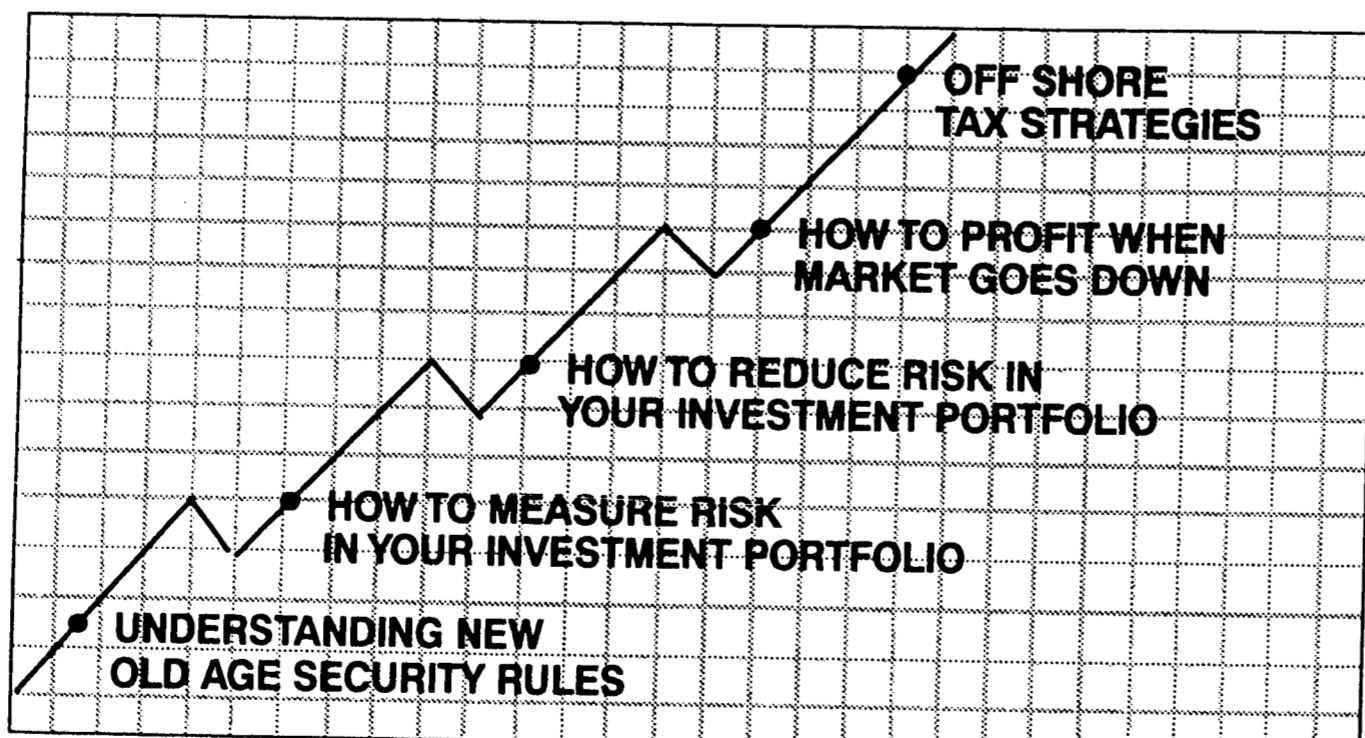

Fellowes said donations are being sought for materials. A list of materials that are needed and a model of the shelter are both located at Municipal Hall. For more information, call Meg Fellowes at 898-5093.

It is planned that eventually other eagle viewing shelters will be built at remote locations, including Tenderfoot Creek Fish Hatchery, Judd Slough, Mamquam River and Squamish Estuary.

Helmet rebate on until end of the month

Parents of young children can receive $10 when they purchase an approved cycling helmet.

The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia is participating in the provincial government's Safe Cycling Program by encouraging the use of helmets and by offering a rebate for helmets which are bought for children in Kindergarten to Grade 7. As of Sept. 3, children and adults are required by law to wear an approved helmet when riding a bicycle in B.C.

Wearing a helmet, along with practising sensible and safe bike riding techniques can prevent injuries. Studies show that head injuries are the cause of three-quarters of cycling deaths and account for more than half of all injuries.

"Helmets are now a basic accessory for cyclists. There's no reason for anyone, especially children, not to wear a helmet" said Alison Sydor, 1996 Olympic silver medalist and world champion cross-country mountain bike racer. She has two cracked helmets from previous accidents that happened on recreational rides.

More than 17,000 rebates have been handed out since the program began May 1. ICBC's rebate program is valid for helmets purchased before Sept. 30. A rebate form and purchase receipt can be mailed in to receive the $10. To be eligible for the offer, a new helmet must have a sticker that shows it meets one of the current safety standards.

Cocaine possession leads to trafficking charge

47-year-old Vancouver man has been charged with possession of cocaine for purpose of trafficking. Police apprehended a man on Second Avenue Sept. 5 about 7:45 p.m. and found he was in possession of cocaine. He was held in custody until a court appearance the following day. RCMP Sgt. Dwain Wetteland said cocaine is extremely prevalent in Squamish.

Between $350 and $400 was stolen from a battery machine during a break-in at the region in the early morning of Sept. 6. It appears that a crowbar was used to force open the front door, said police. The phone line was cut and there was an unsuccessful attempt to break into the house. A suspect vehicle was seen in the area. Anyone with information can call Crimestoppers at 892-TIPS(8477) or the detachment directly at 898-9611.

A 14-year-old boy received a warning from Video Update staff caught him attempting to steal a movie. He did not run out of the store with the movie, so police do not consider the incident a theft.

Tools and oil were stolen from a vehicle parked at the GBA log sort the night of Sept. 5-6. As well, the ignition of the vehicle was tampered with.

It was reported Sept. 9 that tapes were stolen from an unlocked vehicle parked in Kinsmen Park. "Lock it up, lose it," said RCMP Sgt. Dwain Wetteland.

It was reported Sept. 9 that a soft-top window and an ashtray were stolen from a car parked on Mamquam Road.

A small glass box of costume jewelry was stolen from a Government Road residence sometime between Aug. 6 and Sept. 1.

Property damage — including a broken windshield, stolen wipers and a bent antenna to a vehicle occurred the night of Sept. 10 on Clark Road in North Yards.

A large-screen television and VCR were stolen from North Vancouver Outdoor Pool the night of Sept. 6-7.

A vehicle backing out of a parking space on Cleveland Avenue collided with a vehicle travelling along the street Sept. 11 about 9 p.m. There was about $4,000 damage. No charges were laid.

Unsafe speed has been attributed as the cause of a single-vehicle accident on Hwy. 99 at the north end of the Furry Creek passing lane. A North Vancouver car lost control of the northbound car and ended up in the ditch. A female passenger sustained minor injuries. It was raining at the time of the accident.

A turquoise Zoowier baby stroller was stolen between Sept. 5 and Sept. 7 from the front porch of a Buckley Avenue residence.

Personal identification, passports, cameras, packs, clothing and glasses were stolen from six vehicles that were broken into Sept. 8 at the Shannon Falls parking lot.

A pickup truck driven by a Burnaby driver rear-ended a car driven by a New Westminster man on Hwy. 99 near Britannia Beach Sept. 8 at about 5:45 p.m. The southbound car had stopped on the highway and was waiting to turn left when it was struck. Damage totaled $2,500. There were no injuries.

Police seized a butterfly knife, a prohibited weapon, from a 14-year-old youth. The boy said he bought the knife from another youth, who in turn said he found the knife on a dike. Police discovered the knife as a result of an investigation of an altercation between two youths. No charges were laid.

Police have been receiving reports of hypodermic needles being found around town, mostly downtown. "We do have an intravenous drug population here," said Sgt. Dwain Wetteland. He said people should not pick up the needles with bare hands. Found needles can be brought to the RCMP detachment for proper disposal.

A 1984 Toyota van, stolen from Vancouver, was found near Hwy. 99 at Culliton Creek, Sept. 10 at about 8 p.m.

Squamish Search and Rescue members responded to a report of an injured hiker, located about half-way up the trail on the back side of the Stawamus Chief the evening of Sept. 10. The hiker was flown out by helicopter.

B.C. Ambulance Service and Squamish Search and Rescue members took an injured hiker out on a stretcher from the trail between Shannon Falls and Oleson Creek the afternoon of Sept. 11.

Police responding to a report of a person in possession of a submachine gun found a realistic-looking toy gun in a camper on Second Avenue and Victoria Street the evening of Sept. 11. The toy gun was disassembled by its owner and put away.

Conservation officers and police are investigating a report of hog fuel (wood chips) being dumped into Mamquam River in the vicinity of the gun range Sept. 11 at about 8:40 p.m. Investigators do have a suspect in the case. There have been numerous reports of this type of dumping in the area.

Police attended reports of four spousal assaults in the last week. In three of the cases, arrests were made and charges laid.

A Squamish RCMP officer responding to a motor vehicle accident three kilometres north of Britannia Beach Sunday morning lost control of the police car approximately one kilometre north of Britannia and ended up in the ditch. The officer sustained minor injuries in the mishap, which occurred at 7:31 a.m. An investigation into the accident is continuing.

It's easy to help save the eagles

Ask the politicians to help establish The Brackendale Eagle Reserve. The decision is pending in October. So quick action is a must.

What's more, there are interests hard at work who would rather not see a reserve established.

Yet the eagles are a vital part of our natural heritage. But once they are gone, they are gone for good.

The politicians will pay attention. So here's how to get their attention.

Just write a few lines and send a message to one or more these politicians. We'll even help you type up your letter. Just drop by the Brackendale Art Gallery Sunday, September 22nd, between noon and 4:00 p.m.

Long-term solutions needed to solve water shortages

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

Water restrictions imposed on Squamish households have allowed the municipality to stay within its water licence on Stawamus River. But longer-term solutions are needed to address water use in Squamish.

Throughout a hot and dry August, the municipality was below or right on the allowable daily withdrawal limit of 2.5 million gallons. Public works director Mike Darbyshire said he will "with pleasure" submit to the province the August results.

Prior to putting in place the water shortage response plan restrictions — in which lawn irrigation is prohibited — the municipality had been exceeding the licenced amount. During a particularly hot spell in early July, daily withdrawal amounts ranged from 2.8 million to 3.3 million gallons, and two years ago, the district withdrew up to 5.0 million gallons per day.

The restrictions, which remain in place, may not be enough to satisfy the Department of Fisheries and Oceans. DFO wants the municipality to ensure there is always an adequate rate of flow downstream from the intake so as to not compromise fish habitat. The older Stawamus River water licence does not have such a stipulation.

A newer water licence on Mashiter Creek — which supplies Garibaldi Highlands with its water and took pressure off of Stawamus River by supplying part of Brackendale with water during the summer — does have a condition that the flow downstream of the intake cannot fall below a specified rate.

"DFO wants downstream requirements immediately (on Stawamus River), Darbyshire said, adding that the municipality has countered, saying it is not possible to do so without jeopardizing public safety.

The municipality and DFO are working together to monitor Stawamus River flows and collect baseline data to use in determining what the minimum flow should be.

The demand on Stawamus River could be reduced when the municipality has ground water wells as an alternate source. A test production well has been drilled along Mamquam River near its confluence with Mashiter Creek. And work on proposed wells in the Powerhouse Creek area further upstream along Mamquam River is to begin in 1997. The abundant flows on Powerhouse Creek, which is fed from ground water beneath a lava flow in the Mamquam valley, actually increased during the summer, indicating the creek is fed by glacial runoff, Darbyshire said.

The flexibility of having ground water sources will also be invaluable because of potential problems with the Mashiter water intake. The intake has been susceptible to washouts during heavy rains and floods and needs "armoring to protect the investment," Darbyshire said. The $1.4-million intake became operational in 1991, but has never been completed, he said. Consultants Kerr Wood Leidal estimated another $400,000 to make the system run optimally.

To only armor the system would cost less.

Darbyshire is preparing a report for council to consider various options as Squamish's rapid growth is increasing demand on its water sources.

Child car seats, if used properly, will save young lives

Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

Karen Daleman cringes every time she sees a child improperly strapped into a child car seat or climbing on an empty seat while the vehicle is in motion. It was about four years ago that another vehicle T-boned her car, which landed on its roof while Daleman was driving a few blocks from her home. The impact broke her neck. A stuffed animal which Daleman's month-old son was holding was found about 30 metres from where the vehicle stopped. Her son was strapped into a child car seat. He had a mark on his shoulder from the impact. It is not known for sure if the petit mal seizures he still gets are the result of brain damage from the accident.

Eighty-five per cent of deaths of infants in motor-vehicle accidents in British Columbia can be attributed to negligence — the lack of use or improper use of child car seats.

"I see more children not strapped in properly than are," said Daleman, who is on a crusade to ensure parents are making sure child car seats are installed and used properly.

Daleman, who moved to Squamish earlier this year, is offering to inspect anyone's child car seat and teach them how to install and use it properly, free of charge.

She said manufacturers' instructions and drawings can be confusing and she doesn't want any parent to feel the way she would if her child died as a result of an improperly installed or used car seat.

"It would pretty well finish me off if it would be my fault that my baby died."

Police can fine drivers if infants or toddlers are not in a child car seat, but it is possible that a police officer might not realize that such a seat was not being used properly, Daleman said.

Whenever a parent gets into a vehicle with a child, the parent should be prepared as if an accident was going to happen. An accident can just as easily happen during a short trip to the grocery store in town as on a drive to the city, Daleman said.

For an appointment to have your child car seat checked by Karen Daleman, call 898-4234.

Tips on installing, using child car seats

Some important things to remember, according to Karen Daleman, when installing and using child car seats include:

- Use locking clips on retracting seat belts that are used to hold the child car seat.
- Make sure the tether strap is properly attached on rear-facing car seats.
- There should be room for only two fingers of space between the child's restraining belt and the child.
- The clip on the child's restraining belt should be held up high near the child's chin so the child cannot slide out from under the straps.
- The best place for a child car seat is in the middle of the back seat.
- Keep a knife or scissors in the glove compartment. In the event of an accident where the vehicle is on fire, seat belts may have to be cut to get out of the vehicle.
- Child car seats should not be used on seats with air bags. In a front-facing child car seat, the child could be suffocated. In a rear-facing child car seat, the impact of the air bag could crush the seat.

- Only use approved child car seats.
- Register with the company from which a child car seat is bought in case the seat is recalled.
- Find out the history of used child car seats. Get the manufacturer's phone number to find out if the seat has been recalled.
- A child car seat that has been in an accident should be discarded. Hairline fractures that may exist might not be seen.
- Stay current — age and ultraviolet radiation fatigues child car seats.
- Cover car seats while parked in the hot sun to avoid burning the child.
- It is illegal to use child seats in Canada that were purchased in the U.S. As well, U.S. models do not have to conform to the same safety standards as Canadian models.

Copper Beach Estates makes list of polluters for fifth time

By Ron Enns
 Squamish Chief

A Britannia Beach landholder is once again on the province's environmental protection noncompliance report. Copper Beach Estates made the Environment Ministry's list of offenders for the fifth time for: failure to collect all acid mine drainage and discharge at depth to Howe Sound, as required by a 1981 pollution abatement order; and failure to submit a plan to treat acid mine drainage so it does not cause pollution, as required by a 1993 pollution prevention and pollution abatement orders. The property is the subject of a court-ordered sale and is being managed by Coopers and Lybrand, a court-appointed receiver-manager, which is collecting rental income generated by the property. The majority of Britannia Beach residents live on the property in rented houses and mobile homes. Environment Minister Paul Ramsey said the distribution of the noncompliance list is an effective tool for ensuring change. "Being singled out in your community for damaging the environment is not a proud moment for anyone on this list." The Environment Ministry orders are a liability to the sale of the Britannia Beach property: prospective purchasers of the lands are aware of the orders. NTBC Research Corporation's on-site pilot plant testing of novel bio-sulphide technology shows promise for treatment of acid mine drainage at the site, the Environment Ministry reports. Ongoing monitoring of acid mine drainage and affected water courses is being conducted by B.C. Environment for B.C. Mines. The Britannia copper mine, which closed in 1974, was the largest producer of copper in the British Empire during peak production in the late-1920s. In the province's latest environmental protection noncompliance report, released last week, 112 operations were listed as failing to meet B.C. environmental standards between Oct. 1, 1995 and March 31, 1996. Other offenders included the Resort Municipality of Whistler for municipal sewage, Action Holdings Ltd. of Whistler for asphalt plant emissions, the Village of Pemberton for municipal sewage, and the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District for municipal refuse at Goldbridge. Ramsey said he is particularly concerned about the potential impact on ground water and other bodies of water as a result of poor sewage discharges. "It is essential for us to have clean water for human health and the health of fish who rely on lakes and rivers."

Wearing a bicycle helmet is a really good idea for kids and adults alike. In fact, this September it's also the law. So make sure your kids are wearing a properly fitted helmet when they pedal their way back to school. And with safe cycling skills, they can learn to steer clear of trouble before it happens. Kids aren't born with helmets. But good judgement can become second nature. And that's the best protection you can get.

Three workers are

It doesn't have to happen.

The statistics are painful. 785 workers are injured every day. Two workers are permanently disabled every hour. What makes these figures even more tragic is the knowledge that they didn't have to happen. But before we can change the statistics, we need to become more aware of workplace safety. By working together, we can prevent the tragedy of workplace injuries and deaths before they happen.

The magnitude of the problem may seem overwhelming, but it can be done. Our province, our families, our very lives depend on it.

OFF THE COUCH HEALTH, BEAUTY AND FITNESS GUIDE

SEPTEMBER 17, 1996 - FEATURE OF THE SQUAMISH CHIEF NEWSPAPER

More people taking health into their own hands

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

More people are beginning to take health into their own hands to proactively remain healthy rather than exclusively seeking to obtain treatment only after becoming ill.

Health food stores stock an amazing assortment of pills and potions to supplement diets and provide remedies to various maladies, but without knowing what they should be ingesting, people would be certainly at a loss or what they need.

Health 1st Natural Foods owner Tracie Bennett said one of the biggest trends she has seen in the business is that people are researching health issues more. They are discovering there are alternatives to going to a doctor when symptoms appear and obtaining a pharmaceutical prescription. In fact, most pharmaceuticals were originally derived from herbs, but are now commonly manufactured in a synthetic form.

"People are going back to their roots — people are going back to nature," Bennett said of the increase in use of herbs complementing modern Western medicine.

Jack Fowler, owner of Health Food Heaven, a new store opening in early October at Squamish Station shopping centre at the entrance to Squamish, said he will be focusing on providing information for his customers.

"I want to see people take more control of their health — that will prevent disease."

There has been a trend toward eating more organic food. But if people are not eating organic food, they should be taking multi-vitamins, vitamin C and vitamin B as supplements, Fowler said.

He said a lot of food today is "dead food" because it may be pesticide-filled, grown in nutrient-depleted soil and processed, which "takes the real life out of the food."

Bennett said some of the most popular products right now include: echinacea, which stimulates the immune system to help ward off colds and the flu; ginkgo biloba for increased memory, attention and concentration; grape seed extract and pycnogenol, which are both used as digestive enzymes; and sawpalnetto, used mostly by men to help relieve excessive urination due to a benign enlarged prostate.

Tracie Bennett, owner of Health 1st Natural Foods, displays some of the products her customers are using in an effort to stay healthy and prevent illness. Al Price photo

HEALTH, BEAUTY AND FITNESS

What to eat and what to avoid

It's estimated that one-third of all cancers in some way are linked to what we eat. Here are five nourishing ways to enhance your health:

Brassica family or cruciferous vegetables

These may reduce the risk of colon cancer. Foods such as cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, brussel sprouts, turnips.

Fibre and water

This will help keep the bowels regular, help to discourage overeating by taking up space in the digestive system, and cleanse the colon of impurities and waste. Soluble fibres can help reduce cholesterol levels in the blood. Look for grains that provide four grams of fibre per serving at least once a day and aim for 25 grams total each day.

Natural antioxidants

Foods rich in vitamins A, C and E can reduce the frequency of some cancers and improve the chances of preventing heart disease.

Excellent choices include dark leafy green vegetables, citrus fruits and juices, whole grains and wheat germ.

Low fat products

Replace many full fat choices with lower or no fat substitutes, such as 1 per cent mild or no-fat sour cream and lean animal products. Moderate the attraction to snack foods by eating regular, nourishing meals.

Look for choices to replace smoked, nitrate-cured and salted snacks and foods. If barbecuing, keep the grill high

Here are 10 foods we should rarely eat:

Old fashioned granola-type cereal

Does Mother Nature want us eating a tiny one-third cup serving of oats coated with two teaspoons of sugar and laden with more artery-clogging saturated fat than we'd get in a regular take out hamburger? If we are stuck on granola (and sugar), at least let's choose a low fat, high fibre product.

Plain cake doughnuts

We could end up with as much artery-clogging saturated fat as a large hamburger simply by eating a plain cake doughnut. Blame it on the trans fats in the shortening used for frying. Try a toasted bagel with jam instead.

Cup-of-noodles

What could be wrong with a cup of steaming-hot, high-carbohydrate noodles? Let's just say we would be better off with a small bag averaging 14 potato chips. That's because, like the chips, the noodles are pre-fried and salted. And some cup-of-noodles compound the problem by frying in artery-clogging palm oil and dumping on 19 times more sodium than the chips.

Movie theatre popcorn popped in coconut oil

A large bucket (20 cups) of unbuttered popcorn at theatres which pop in coconut oil has almost three days' worth of artery-clogging saturated fat. Add the fake butter and you'll boost the cholesterol-raising fat to almost four days' worth. Even a small bucket (seven cups) contains almost a day's worth of saturated fat. Choose a theatre that uses air-popped popcorn, or at least one that pops its corn in a heart healthier oil such as corn or sunflower.

Lunchables

It would be hard to invent a worse food than these combinations of heavily processed meat, artery-clogging cheese, and mostly-white-flour crackers. Some average six teaspoons of fat (that's 60 per cent of the calories).

Extra rich ice cream

Regular ice cream is fatty enough. Eat a cup of extra rich butter pecan, for example, and we have downed 48 grams of fat — about as much as half a stick of butter. That's more than a whole day's fat quota.

Regular canned soups

They're brimming with salt. Half a can averages 1,000 milligrams of sodium. That's about half our ideal quota for an entire day.

Prepared boxed rice-a-meals

One cup, a mere side dish can have more than half your day's limit of sodium. As for the vegetables, the two people who share the two-cup box will have to fight over the nine peas, 1 1/2 teaspoons of carrot slivers and teaspoon of tomato particles. Let's cook our own. Save money and add nutrition.

Fettucini Alfredo

An average dinner-size, take-out entree can contain an amazing 97 grams of fat — or 22 teaspoons of fat.

Stick butter or margarine

A tablespoon of stick butter has seven grams of saturated fat. Margarine aren't much better. If you add their saturated plus trans fat, the artery-clogging fat adds up.

Better yet, go for a low-fat soft tub margarine or fat reduced butter and use in moderation.

Dealing with stress can reduce heart problems

One of the many causes of heart problems is stress. Knowing what stress is and where it comes from leads to positive ways to manage the problem, says the Squamish Hearty Lifestyles Group.

Stress is the mental or physical tension which can result from any kind of demand on our body and systems. Stress is not necessarily a bad thing, it can actually be good for people. So it is important to recognize where stress comes from, when it is becoming "dis-stress," and what can be done to manage it in positive ways. Although the link between stress and heart disease is still being researched, it undoubtedly influences behaviors such as smoking and overeating, which puts people at greater risk of developing heart disease.

Stress can be caused by the day-to-day hassles of life such as traffic, losing things, noise, the demands of children or an argument with your spouse or boss. It can also come from hurriedness — the pressure to get things done and not enough time in which to do them. Sudden and serious events, as well as new stages in life such as childbirth, retirement or marriage can also cause stress.

When stress builds up, people feel increased anxiety, anger or depression, not to mention a whole series of physical ailments. Learn to recognize stress by some of these early warning signs: concentration problems, moodiness, irritability, pessimism, increased arguments, sleep problems, appetite changes and weight gain or loss, fidgeting, listlessness, increased dependence on drugs, alcohol, cigarettes or sedatives, susceptibility to colds and viruses, pain, headaches, muscle tension or stiffness, heart pounding, high pulse rate, or a change in breathing.

Though stress can't be eliminated, it can be managed so it is a healthy influence on lives. And there are several choices in coping with stress, including avoiding it, modifying it or adapting to it. All of these approaches are useful at different times.

To avoid stress:

- Escape for a while — lose yourself in a book or movie, listen to soothing music, take a drive in the country.

- Anticipate hassles ahead of time and make plans to avoid them — don't shop or drive at the busiest times, leave extra time for getting to work.

To modify stress:

- Relieve stress through exercise — go for a walk, do some gardening, play tennis.

- Make sure you get enough sleep and rest — being overtired makes problems seem even bigger.

- Don't try to cope alone — talk it out with someone you trust to ease the strain and get another perspective.

To adapt to stress:

- Tackle one thing at a time — set priorities and be flexible about things that aren't critical.

- Don't try to be "superhuman" — be realistic and recognize your limitations.

- Learn to manage time well — set realistic deadlines so you are active, not hurried.

Eco-Challenge's best is yet to come

Cam Cairns says international publicity will promote opportunities in the corridor

By David Donaldson
Squamish Chief

As a mountain guide, Cam Cairns has shown outdoor enthusiasts some of the most beautiful sights in B.C. So it's no wonder he settled in Squamish with his family to start his carpentry business.

When he found out a big adventure race would be running through the corridor he jumped at the chance to volunteer. With his considerable outdoor experience and knowledge of the area, Cairns was given the job of chauffeuring international media along the Eco-Challenge course to all the best photo opportunity sites.

"I had some really neat experiences — some good, some bad, the majority exceptional," Cairns said. "Overall I thought it was the best thing for the corridor in years."

Cairns believes for the communities of the Sea to Sky corridor to succeed as a tourist destination, they have to promote the area as one region, not separate communities.

"We have to look beyond Squamish as a recreation resort and see the entire area as a place that has something for everybody — that's what the Eco-Challenge will do."

Cairns says the race provided many opportunities for the area to promote itself, as well as for individuals and business owners to get in on the act. When the media crews from all over the world which were covering the event "put it all together and display this little corner of the world they'll do a better job than the Southwestern Tourism Association.

"When the winner of the race says he enjoyed the race because it was so beautiful, that satisfies a lot of outdoor people about where to go."

If local businesses or craftsmen wanted to get involved in the race there were plenty of opportunities for them, Cairns says. "Everywhere you looked there was an opportunity to get your foot in the door somehow, all you had to do was ask."

In addition to his volunteer work,

Cairns, a former boat builder, built a special canoe that was painted with native-style decorations by former Squamish artist Michelle Matthews. It was displayed throughout the event and is being considered for purchase by Eco-Challenge founder Mark Burnett.

Although many people in Squamish might not have realized it, a number of media representatives spent some time here. Since they weren't wearing clothes emblazoned with Eco-Challenge logos they went about unnoticed, Cairns says. He took at least eight of them to breakfast at Quinn's Cafe and had reports of others who were very impressed by Xanthine's.

"There will be lots of good repercussions from the race that haven't been felt yet," Cairns says, but believes it likely that a reporter from an international magazine could mention a certain very nice coffee shop in a small town in the middle of one of the world's most beautiful natural areas.

However, Cairns does feel that local media were ignored somewhat during the massive event. "They could have made sure locals had more direct attention, but when you're dealing with such a huge event that's the nature of the beast."

Having a race centred on outdoor etiquette and ecological impact in an area with sensitive issues such as logging practices gave special interest groups a great platform to voice their opinions, Cairns says.

"The opportunity for people to voice their opinions, whether industry or ecology, was outstanding," he says, noting how the Western Canadian Wilderness Committee set up a tent at a transition area on a logging slash.

"Eco-Challenge wants people to voice their opinions — by giving themselves that name they brought it on themselves."

Cairns says the best the Eco-Challenge can offer the corridor is yet to come, but may never be entirely visible because the area is in a constant state of growth anyway.

"Lots of people choose their holidays from a picture in a magazine or a television documentary. If the entire corridor doesn't get it together and promote itself as a unit we've missed the boat.

"I think a good follow-up for the region would be to promote outdoor recreation opportunities in the region as a whole — it would really be unfortunate not to."

He says benefits the region will receive from the extensive coverage of the race may be hard to recognize but there is "no question if you put $2-3 million promotion into an area you'll see benefits.

"It could be the lousiest promotion but you'll still see it."

Are restaurants for sale foreshadowing the demise of downtown?

Three downtown Squamish restaurants are for sale and up to five others, although not listed, may be on the block as well. Are the effects of rapid highway development being felt already in the downtown, are restaurateurs getting out while the business is still good or is there fear of a future dying downtown?

Along with a new proliferation of highway eateries has come new life downtown. A hotel, restaurant and brewpub at the southern end of Cleveland Avenue has helped traffic flow through downtown. The keeping of longer hours by many stores during the past few years has ensured more people regularly come downtown evenings and weekends.

In short, downtown appears to be busier than ever. But one restaurant owner does not think everyone in the food business in the area will last the winter.

"Our sales are up a lot from last year, but there are a lot that aren't," says Mark Lewis, part-owner of Derek's Cafe, which is for sale. "Everybody is running scared."

Other restaurants listed with the real estate board are Beemers Gourmet Sandwiches, and Alfreds Delights. Another handful of downtown eateries have either been for sale in the past while or are always open to offers. Selling may be a problem, however. Banks at the best of times are leery of lending to high-risk businesses like restaurants. Whether or not the plethora of fast-food eateries on the highway would influence a bank's decision to lend is debatable, but may be irrelevant because of the extremely risky proposition of lending to any restaurant in the first place.

The new highway restaurants are certainly doing more than attracting just highway traffic — locals have been steadily patronizing the new establishments. Time will tell if Squamishites are attracted by short-term novelty and if they will eventually return to former loyalties. Customer service also is part of the equation. Jack Fowler, who is opening Health Food Heaven and Jacko's Juice Bar in Squamish Station, says downtown business owners that have done an outstanding job in serving customers will see the people coming back to their businesses.

"If they haven't done the homework to see what their customers want, then they'll die."

The restaurant business demands that its owners be married to their business. Long hours, fickle customers and intense competition are a recipe for burnout. In Squamish, population 15,000, there are now 39 restaurants. Many of the town's 3,000 commuters, having been away from home long enough every day, would rather stay home with their families than go out to eat after an hour or more drive every afternoon.

Squamish is doing a fine job of developing the highway. So far, highway development has primarily occurred at nodes identified in the official community plan for such development: at the Cleveland Avenue entrance to downtown and in the Garibaldi Way area. And new businesses are providing jobs.

But more highway development could be dangerous if Squamish also wants to strengthen its downtown core, which our current council says it wants to see. Squamish is at a crossroads: it can become a bonafide highway stop for the tens of thousands people traveling daily through this municipality. Or it can start concentrating on finding new ways to bring highway travellers into this town. (A new sign on the highway encouraging people to drive into downtown will make a difference, but it certainly should not be viewed as a savior.) But it would be very difficult to do both well.

A new official community plan is being developed, helping shape Squamish's vision. Municipal elections, less than two months away, will put into place people who are to act upon that plan.

In the meantime, let's hope established businesses pay heed to the value of customer, let's hope that customers respond and — for the health of the community, the downtown core and all the restaurants and businesses — let's at least spread the wealth. With the amount of traffic travelling between Vancouver and Whistler, highway businesses do not have the same fears as those downtown.

Brake failure suspected in tour vehicle crash

Brake failure is being investigated as a possible cause for a serious single-vehicle accident on the Highline logging road between D'arcy and Seton Saturday afternoon.

The accident occurred just after 4 p.m. when a vehicle owned by Whistler's Off the Beaten Track Wilderness Expeditions was coming down a steep grade just north of D'arcy, Pemberton RCMP said. The vehicle's brakes are suspected to have given out, forcing the driver to hit a log at the side of the road in an attempt to slow the vehicle down, police said.

The vehicle rode up the log, rolled over several times and threw its four occupants from their seats, police said, adding the vehicle kept rolling down the hill.

"Serious tragedy was averted by these occupants being thrown from the vehicle," police said. "Had they remained inside the vehicle this would have been a multiple fatality motor vehicle accident."

Three of the occupants were treated for head injuries and transported to the Pemberton Health Care Centre by ambulance. The fourth occupant was medevaced to the Whistler Health Care Centre.

All of the vehicle's occupants were released from hospital Saturday night and were expected to recover. Three of those involved in the accident were tourists visiting from England.

Police are currently investigating the cause of the brake failure and Motor Vehicle Branch inspectors were expected to examine the vehicle this week. Off the Beaten Track representatives refused to comment on the accident Sunday but police said the company is housing the tourists in a Whistler motel.

COMMUNITY

Terry Fox Run needs more participants

The 16th annual Terry Fox Run to raise money for cancer research will be held Sunday, Sept. 22. The local organizer of the run, Ray Wilburn would love to see more community participation this year. More than $5,000 was raised last year but Ray hopes the total will be higher for 1996. By participating or giving a donation to the run you will help keep Terry Fox's dream alive of finding a cure for cancer.

The run starts at 9 a.m. from the Squamish Pavilion on Cleveland Avenue and you can walk, run, bike, in-line skate or wheel around the course. Pledge sheets are available at Timber Foods, Save-On-Foods, Super Valu, Mountain FM and The Squamish Chief. All donations of $10 or more automatically receive income tax receipts.

The Women's Auxiliary to Squamish General Hospital will meet at 1 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 19 in the hospital board room. New members are always welcome.

September birthdays will be celebrated at Hilltop House tomorrow, Sept. 18 at 2 p.m. Four residents, Ed Siatecki, Leo Davis, Marta Martinsen and Phillis Diabel will be honored. This is an excellent time to visit the residents and share fellowship over coffee and cake.

There will be a fine selection of local native art on display at the public auction being held at the Sea to Sky Hotel at 7:30 p.m. this Friday. Proceeds from the auction will go towards two workshops to help Squamish Nation members deal with the growing problem of diabetes. The organizers are Shirley Toman and Don John, and one of the local and talented artists participating will be Rick Harry.

There is still time to sign up for the German language classes for children and adults at Brennan Park Leisure Centre on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Check the fall brochure for details and register at the leisure centre. As an extension of these classes, the Howe Sound German School is offering play care and baby-sitting for fluent German speaking children. For details contact Brigit at 898-9006.

STORK STORY - HUGHES - Alan and Denise Hughes are pleased to announce the birth of their son, Scott Boyd, born at 2:50 p.m. on August 25 at Squamish General Hospital. The proud grandparents are Joan and Peter Perin of Nanoose Bay and Jean and Eric Hughes of Deep Cove. Alan and Denise express thanks to Dr. Louise Martin and the nursing staff.

The summer reading club at the Squamish Public Library wound up after a most successful summer. A total of 308 children registered in the reading club and read a combined total of 6,669 books in two months. The four high school students who coordinated the program, Kristen Albrighton, Emily Bullen, Dana Carmichael and Carina Gee, are to be congratulated for encouraging youngsters to sharpen their reading skills throughout July and August.

A ranch in 100 Mile House was the setting for a summer wedding on Aug. 3 when former resident Shelley Tinney, daughter of Peg Tinney of Squamish, and Dwayne Broster, son of Lloyd and Pat Broster of Prince George were married. The bride and groom were dressed western style for both their wedding and reception, held in Prince George Aug. 10. More than 100 guests included family and friends.

Eldercollege courses for those 55 years and over begin in October at the Capilano College Squamish campus. The fall brochure from Cap College has detailed descriptions of the courses — English literature with Constance Rulka, life writing with Audrey Rhodes, play reading led by Roseanna Rudolph, Canada within and beyond with a guest speaker each week, and great books second series with facilitator Harry Greenwood. Each course is $25 and registrations are accepted at Cap College, phone 892-5322.

law, Carolyn and Grigg Volroth. They attended the wedding of their granddaughter, Christy Ann, to Shawn Stephens, all of London, Ont. Also attending the wedding were the MacDonald's daughter and son-in-law, Marion and Singh Biln and four children of Squamish.

Stammtischabend meetings which arose from the spring class of German for adults are continuing every two weeks on Thursdays throughout the fall with the next meeting, Sept. 26. Call Christine and Alois at 892-5653 for more information.

The Squamish Public Library's annual book sale is Oct. 26. Books in good condition and suitable for resale can be dropped off at the book drops in Highlands Mall and Save-On-Foods. Also, Friends of the Library will hold its first meeting of the new season Thursday, Sept. 19 at the library. New members are most welcome. Check with the library for the meeting time.

Complimentary tickets for seniors for the Maple Leaf Choir concert are available at the Tantalus Senior Centre at 1471 Pemberton Ave. The choir, sponsored by the Squamish Lions Club, will perform at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre on Sunday, Sept. 29 at 2 p.m.

In 1966, Nancy Hutchinson moved here from the Queen Charlotte Islands with her two younger daughters Audrey and Jane. She taught at Brackendale Elementary School until 1978. She was an honored guest at the opening of the new school this past June. Nancy was an active member of the United Church, including the United Church Women. On Sunday, Sept. 8 a pot luck supper and evening program was held for Nancy at the church. She is moving to Stewart to live with her daughter Jan. Gifts were presented to Nancy on behalf of the church and the UCW. Guests in attendance included her daughters and sons-in-law, Margaret and Gary Herman and Audrey and Dave Brown of North Vancouver. Nancy is wished well in her move but she will be missed by many.

Children's bible hour at the Highlands Gospel Hall begins Monday, Sept. 23 at 7 p.m. For more information call 898-9334.

HOROSCOPE

By C.C. Clark - eTVData Features Syndicate

Sept. 15 through Sept. 21, 1996

Aries (March 21 - April 20)
A friend will help you see things in a different light. You are trying hard to stay on course, but isn't always easy.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20)
Inspect clothing items carefully before purchasing. Checking the fine print on contracts and bills is also necessary.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)
The flighty Gemini has trouble sticking with things for too long. Staying with a healthy diet and exercise program is important.

Cancer (June 21 - July 20)
Health problems are more a nuisance than cause for great concern. A friend will need your help with a troubling situation.

Leo (July 21 - Aug. 21)
This is no time to give up. Things will work out but it takes time. A special surprise will help your outlook.

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22)
Concentrate on being where you are at all times. Get out and enjoy life; don't let it pass you by. Live in the present.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)
Achieving inner harmony is sometimes the hardest thing to do. Learn new ways to meditate. Yoga classes may be helpful.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22)
Have confidence in yourself and what you are doing. You are capable of accomplishing more than you could ever imagine.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 20)
So many changes, so little time. Don't look for things to settle down anytime soon. Go with the flow.

Capricorn (Dec. 21 - Jan. 19)
Your patience level will be severely tested by those around you. It is time to work out all those unresolved issues.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)
Get out of the house and take a walk or run. Oxygen is needed to get your brain moving. Enjoy the beautiful fall days.

Darts & Daffodils

Darts to the owner of a local business who insists upon belittling his staff in front of the customers. May I suggest to you a course on interpersonal skills. And daffodils to your staff for tolerating those kinds of working conditions.

A big birdhouse full of daffodils to all the people who helped us catch our pet cockatiel, especially to the gentleman who let us use his net, to Melissa, Shea and Deneer for their great help, and a special bunch of daffodils to the great guy who gave up his work time to help us.

A gas tank full of daffodils to the staff of Garibaldi Chevron for rescuing my unemployment insurance cheque from the hands of two boys last week. Your quick action made my bank account a lot happier, and me too. The mystery continues as to just how they came to have it in their possession in the first place. Thanks again.

A yard full of daffodils to the gentleman who gave two ladies of the Order of the Eastern Star his prize dahlias from the fall fair. It made our day. Thank you. Grace and Ruth.

A daffodil to Const. Pearson for patiently bringing my son safely home in the wee hours of Sunday morning. A grateful mom.

An ambulance station full of daffodils to the B.C. Ambulance Service Squamish station paramedics. Thank you for your support and partnership over the past 10 years. I will miss the work but most of all I'll miss all of you. Special thanks to Mike and Sue Lyons for the wonderful presentation of the B.C. Ambulance Service plaque. I'll treasure it always. Sandy Hills.

A tricycle full of daffodils to the memory of Steve Tracy. Steve passed away recently and will be sorely missed. He enriched our lives every day with his warmth, sense of humor, honesty and smile. We miss his order of a senior coffee with two cream, and his enthusiasm for life.

His appreciation to us was so great that he proudly rode his tricycle carrying our flag in the recent Squamish Days parade. We will miss you. The staff and management of McDonald's.

Want to say thanks and make sure everyone knows why? Or maybe offer a little constructive criticism without confrontation? Send your Dart or Daffodil to The Editor, The Squamish Chief, Box 3500, Squamish, B.C. V0N 3G0 or drop it off at our office at 3811 Second Avenue, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. You can also fax your message to 892-8483 or e-mail to sqchief@mountain-inter.net.

Eight slo-pitch diamonds full of daffodils to all the volunteers who worked so hard to make the C and D of B.C. Provincial Slo-pitch Championships such a huge success. Special thanks to Jeff, Lois, Jennifer, Mike, Rick, Joyce, Darlene, Mike E., Bob, Don, Gerd, Shannon and Bill for your dedication and big hearts. We're a great team. K.S.

Golf carts full of daffodils to Margie, Sabrina, Windermere Sea to Sky real Estate, Tanac Land Developments and the community of Furry Creek. Your wonderful donation enables our agency to send children to camp, hold picnics, have Christmas parties and other such events.

Without your generosity this would not be possible. So on behalf of Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Squamish heartfelt thanks for putting smiles on young children's faces.

A road covered in darts to the District of Squamish and others for not repairing the condition of Government Road outside of Shannon Estates. The inconvenience has gone on long enough. No more excuses. Let's get it.

Darts to the airhead helicopter pilot who found it necessary to demonstrate his low flying skills to the residents of Ross Road on a Sunday morning at 7:25 a.m.

Lasagna pans full of daffodils to Diane's Diner for feeding your hungry hairdressers. It was delicious. Barb's Beehive.

A CD player full of daffodils to Trina, the wonderful DJ at the Cliffside, who always plays the best music.

A soup kettle full of bright yellow daffodils to Kathleen Brennan and Nick Candy of the Brackendale Fall Fair for donating the prize winning produce, baked items and moneys to the Squamish Soup Kitchen. Thanks for thinking of us once again. Special thanks to Shirley as well. It was a wonderful fair despite the rain. See you all next year.

A recycling warehouse full of bright yellow daffodils to Carney's Waste Systems for storing items donated to the Squamish Soup Kitchen until we had time to pick them up, and to your employees for helping us load them.

CONGRATULATIONS!

Squamish chamber sponsors resolutions on young offenders and land claims

President Ken Perry and manager Wendy Magee are attending the 67th annual general meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce to present two resolutions on behalf of the Squamish and Howe Sound Chamber of Commerce membership. If adopted by the delegates, who's combined memberships represent more than 170,000 Canadian businesses, these resolutions become the policy of the national chamber and are presented to the prime minister and cabinet. The Canadian Chamber of Commerce is the largest business association in Canada.

The first resolution proposed by the Squamish and Howe Sound Chamber recommends that the federal government abolish the Young Offenders Act, and that all offenders be tried in ordinary court. Increased crime has resulted in higher insurance premiums, lost hours of operation, court time, unsightly bars on our windows, and a general increase in the cost of doing business. Statistics indicate much of the increase in crime is attributable to our youth. In 1994, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce membership supported a resolution to amend the Young Offenders Act, requesting the maximum age of applicability of the act be changed from 18 to 15, and the penalty for crimes committed by young offenders be reviewed to match the crime. This resolution was updated in 1995. Since that time, little has been done. Crimes committed by young offenders continue to increase because young people realize this act protects them and not their innocent victims. For example, second-degree murder committed by a youth now carries a maximum sentence of just seven years, much of which will not be served. The Canadian business community and society must not continue to bear the burden, financially, physically and emotionally of this ineffective act, which has in fact contributed to an increase in the crime rate involving youth. In next week's column, I will provide details on the second resolution sponsored by the Squamish and Howe Sound Chamber of Commerce regarding aboriginal land claims.

Plenty of ways to keep winter pounds away in Squamish

By David Donaldson
Squamish Chief

Squamish is known throughout the province as one of the top areas for outdoor recreation, but when the weather turns chilly and the rain starts to fall, recreation opportunities seem to dry up.

There is no shortage of ways for fitness-minded people to stay in shape during the winter, or for those who don't scale large rock formations or brave running rapids to get into some regular exercise.

There are three fitness clubs in town — Club Flex, the Squamish Athletic Club and Eagle Run Fitness — all offering a variety of programs.

Jim Lorman, manager of the Squamish Athletic Club, says the club's circuit training program is an excellent way to keep fit for the winter. The program is "a combination of strength and cardiovascular training targeted to keep people fit or get them muscularly fit for skiing and curling and other winter activities."

Lorman says they always have trainers on duty to help members rework their workout routines because it's important to keep them from becoming boring to remain enthusiastic about getting in shape.

Cycling is a great all-season sport for staying fit and having fun, but sometimes Squamish's wet, windy weather may dampen the pleasure.

Tantalus Bike Shop's Al Ross, a pro rider, recommends winter weather gear — weather-proof leggings or long pants, long-sleeved jerseys or jackets and full-fingered gloves — for riding in the rainy season. Since bikes will pick up a lot of moisture and salt during winter riding, he suggests repacking the hubs and having the bike stripped down and cleaned when spring rolls around again.

Ross says cross-training with weights, stretches, push-ups and sit-ups, and playing indoor sports such as squash will keep those cycling muscles loose and limber for those who prefer to keep their bikes dry.

The Squamish Squash Club offers drop-in play, a competitive league and a new juniors program with organized play for people on a tight schedule who still want a good workout. The club is holding two open houses, Sept. 22 and Sept. 29 from 7-9 p.m. at the Squamish Valley Golf and Country Club for anyone who wants to try the sport or brush up on skills. Equipment will be provided and club members will be available to assist new players.

For those looking for indoor fitness with an edge the Squamish Rock Boxing Club offers a terrific way to get in shape and blow off some steam.

The Brennan Park Leisure Centre and aquatic centre have a wide variety of fall and winter programs for those who want to stay active and fit. Chief file photo

Boxing offers "a reasonably low impact cardiovascular entire body workout," says the club's trainer Wayne Jackson. "You can go through the motions of a workout and not stress your body."

The club offers programs for youths and adults, male and female, which allow participants to go at their own pace with the option to compete if they wish.

The Brennan Park Leisure Centre offers a wide variety of fitness programs for the whole family. From martial arts to drop-in floor hockey, badminton and volleyball there are plenty of sports to choose from. There are also ice skating, ice hockey and swimming programs available for all ages.

Cycling a fast-growing family activity

Even in fall and winter, a family bicycle ride can be fun and energising. All-weather gear is available, and remember that helmets are now mandatory for everyone on a bike. Chief file photo

Mirror, mirror on the wall...

Dania Matiation
Contributed to The Chief

What is beauty? If it's about looking like model Claudia Schiffer then most of us are in trouble. If it's about glowing health, confidence and a positive attitude, then we all have a chance. The truth is that we measure, judge or compare beauty in different ways. We might desire a lean body but not if it has cost the person the joy of eating. We might be in awe of a great sunset but not if the person was risking skin cancer. We could be attracted to a helperson as long as this was authentic. Let us feel and look our best when we manage our stress well. Having the energy to make positive choices for ourselves enhances our flow. Moderate drinking of alcohol and active living, and giving as well as receiving are some of the best antidotes.

Recipe for beauty inside and out:

- Eight hours sleep or rest each day.
- Plenty of clear water to drink and bathe in.
- Fresh veggies and fruits to add glow to the skin.
- Calcium-rich foods for strong bones.
- Well brushed and flossed teeth.
- Time for recreating or de-stressing.
- Activities and work that are satisfying.
- Making lemonade when life offers lemons.

Past fashions are trendy once again

Al Price
Squamish Chief

When it comes to fashions, hot trends from years gone by are likely to come back again. And one of the most popular ones over many years, such as jeans, never seem to go out of fashion.

The hottest fashion wear for men James at Stylezone this fall has been hip-hugger flares, for women of 12 to women older than 40. They range in price from $45-$70 and the most popular fabric for hip-huggers are satin, velvet and corduroy.

They are definitely it for the "stylish dressers," said James. "High platforms, big chunky shoes are hot, hot, hot. For boots, anything and clunky is what they want." Platforms in a variety of styles run from $40-$70 per pair. "Cigarette pants, thin and snug fitting, have been introduced this fall and are selling well at Stylezone."

And corduroy fabric in anything from pants, to jackets to sweaters for all age groups is extremely popular once again. "Sweaters in any clothing are in great demand." These things are all coming back...to haunt some of us," said James.

At Second Debut, which features upscale, quality pre-owned clothing, Calvin Kleins and Levi's as well as anything "retro" are popular for the younger set. Women age 25 and up are looking for the more tailored look with blazers and other fitted ensembles.

For Warren McDougall of Workwear World, Levi's "always have and always will be" among the most popular clothing item for people of all ages.

"The new Cat logo boots are selling well, the No Fear line is still really strong, and Prospector footwear is also popular," said McDougall. "The back to school season has always been strong for us and it was again this year."

Gary Morris at Morris' More than Workwear also finds corduroy popular once again, particularly in shirts.

"Anything with Adidas on it, clothes or shoes, for the younger crowd is selling well, and at this time of year fleece is in demand. Most people want comfy clothes that are going to last," Morris said.

Anything in denim, including pants, vests and jackets is selling like hotcakes for The Bargain Store.

And for those into fitness, Spandex is still the in thing, in shirts, tops and one-piece outfits.

For Douglas Riddle, manager of Saan, the fashion trend is away from career wear and into more casual clothing.

"We're selling a lot more denim and a lot less career wear because it seems the work environment is becoming more casual," said Riddle. "It sounds like a more healthy working environment to me, with the focus more on getting the work done and on personal relationships rather than the boss-employee structure. That is a trend we are seeing in all our stores, not just Squamish."

Don Dewar, manager of Fields Store, agrees "anything with denim" is in great demand.

"It's not just jeans but denim collars, shirts, vests, skirts, jumpers...anything with denim," Dewar said. "And fleece has changed this year. It's not just jogging suits. It has become a more upscale fashion, more polished."

Attack of the killer molasses

Apart from accidental poisonings or lethal food allergies, few foods turn around and kill people. Such stories are reserved for the realm of worse than Grade B fantasies — The Attack of the Killer Tomatoes or The Chicken Heart That Ate Chicago. But after reading about the Great Boston Molasses Flood, I'll think twice before turning my back on the sticky stuff.

This tragic event happened in 1919 on an unseasonably warm January day in Boston. Just after noon (Twilight Zone theme, please) a steel tank holding more than two million gallons of molasses collapsed in the north end of town.

A 30-foot high wall of goo surged through the narrow streets. Steel from the tank toppled elevated train tracks, while the molasses crushed trolley cars and knocked buildings off their foundations.

Fire boats in the harbor blasted at the syrup with salt water, and slowly the mess subsided. Countless injured horses, trapped in the streets, had to be shot. In all, 21 people died. Boston harbor was stained brown for six months. For years afterwards, molasses oozed from the cracks in the pavement. Strange that there's never been a movie.

Fortunately, Boston was not put off molasses, a signature ingredient in their Boston Baked Beans and Boston Brown Bread.

With cooler weather settling in, I can't think of a finer meal than a slow-simmered pot of beans. Steamed brown bread ends up with the texture of an English muffin and the flavor of a dark bran muffin. It tastes great toasted, then slathered with cream cheese and strawberry jam.

Be sure to use the lightest or fancy-grade molasses in the following recipes. Darker molasses tastes too strong, leaving a bitter, burnt flavor.

Baked Beans

- 1 lb. small, white dried beans (2 cups)
- 1/4 to 1/2 lb. salt pork
- 2 cup diced onions
- 2 cloves garlic, pressed
- 3 Tbsp. brown sugar
- 1/4 cup Dijon mustard
- 1/4 cup light molasses
- 1/2 cup tomato sauce

Rinse the dried beans. Place in large pot and cover with lots of water. Either leave to soak overnight or quick-soak.

To quick-soak — boil the beans for two minutes. Remove from heat, cover and let sit for one hour, we covered with water. After an hour they should have swelled up. Drain the soaking water, cover with fresh water and bring to boil again. Reduce heat and simmer for about 30 minutes, until the beans are just tender when you bite one. Pour the beans into a heavy casserole dish or bean pot with enough cooking liquid to cover.

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Slice the salt pork and fry lightly. Add the onions and garlic and cook until soft but not browned. Stir in the remaining ingredients. When blended, stir into the pot of beans. Cover and bake for 30 minutes, until bubbling.

Reduce heat to 250-275 degrees. Bake for another 4 to 6 hours.

Make sure there's always enough juice to cover the beans or the top layer turns into little rocks. As they cook, the beans turn a lovely reddish-brown and the juices thicken. Their point of doneness is up to you. Season to taste with salt and freshly ground black pepper.

Makes two quarts of beans — plenty for six people. They freeze well.

The batter for Boston Brown Bread is steamed rather than baked. Use two well-buttered 450-gram coffee tins or three 250-gram tins. Cover the tops with buttered tin foil, leaving a mushroom cap for the batter to expand into. Tie the top of the can with string. Set the tins on a rack in a large pot. Add a few inches of water, bring to boil, cover tightly, then reduce to a simmer.

Boston Brown Bread

- 1 cup cornmeal
- 1 cup rye flour
- 1 cup whole wheat flour
- 2 tsp. baking soda
- 1 tsp. salt
- 2 cups buttermilk
- 3/4 cup light molasses
- 1 cup chopped raisins

Mix dry ingredients. Combine buttermilk, molasses and raisins. Pour into dry ingredients and stir. Pour batter into prepared tins, filling only 2/3 full. Steam directed above for 2 1/2 hours. Remove from tins when done. Slice and serve warm, or cool, wrap well and store in the fridge.

Makes wonderful toast.

'Littles' need more 'big's'

Price
Squamish Chief

Brothers and Big Sisters of Squamish has a list of 17 children waiting to be matched up with adult pals. The waiting list is so long the group is not even accepting applications from many more children who would really benefit from the influence and guidance of a Big Brother or Big Sister.

That number grows daily. Every week there are more applications, but we haven't been able to process them because there are so many on the waiting list now," said Karen McDonald, a director of the non-profit society.

Children from ages 19-99 are needed who can spare a few hours a week, sometimes less, to act as a Big Brother or Big Sister (big) for a "little" between the ages of six and 13. Big volunteers have to go through a rigorous screening process and are expected to be a positive role model for their little.

"I think a lot of people, particularly men, think it is a big time commitment, and it's not," said McDonald. The thing is to be there at the other end of the phone when you're needed. I have a little sister, and some weeks I don't see her at all. Other weeks she babysits for me a few days a week, and we might go to a movie or for a walk."

McDonald said the group does not expect perfection of all the volunteers.

"We don't expect people to be angels. We're looking for wholesome, regular people. And some of the matches don't work. It might take two or three bigs to match with a little."

Big Brothers and Big Sisters could also use more volunteers for the board of directors. The board meets once a month for an hour. At the moment there are only six directors.

Once the littles reach their 14th birthday, the formal partnership is dissolved, said McDonald, although many little sisters and brothers keep an ongoing friendship with their bigs over the years.

"We'll do the things that are fun and rewarding. We're not trying to do the parenting, just be their buddies, and it can be really rewarding," said McDonald. "Everybody benefits, especially the community. Instead of sticking our heads in the sand and complaining about the youth of today, we need to get more involved. This is a perfect way of helping to turn some of our youth around."

and volunteers. Pamphlets and information sheets will be handed out, along with applications for bigs. On Sept. 28 from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m., youth groups in Squamish have been invited to join Big Brothers and Big Sisters in a paint-a-thon on the hoarding around Squamish Station along Cleveland Avenue and Hunter Place.

The Big Brothers and Big Sisters name and logo will be painted on the fence, along with silhouettes of the waiting littles and their biographies. Youth groups will be assigned different areas to depict their own activities.

"The merchants at Squamish Station have been extremely supportive," said Big Brothers and Big Sisters board member Karen McDonald.

"They are totally committed to the young people in the community. We are all hoping for a nice dry weekend at the end of the month."

Brackendale Elementary students studying squid

It was the first week of school and this was the Grade 4 students' first visit to the science lab in Brackendale Elementary's new building. They had been prepared with a lesson on squid and had diagrams showing a cross-section of the insides. They were to cut up the squid and match the names on the diagrams to the actual transparent bits.

Reactions ranged from being squeamish about handling the ink sac and the tentacles to displaying a lot of bravado in holding the edible part over one's mouth. There was serious effort to identify the various parts and genuine interest in what was revealed under the microscope.

Students were learning a lot, not only about marine life but about working as teams and being responsible of the job in hand. They worked in small groups of two or three, and took turns at handling both the fish and the microscope.

Living close to Howe Sound as they do, and having the benefit of demonstrations at Porteau Cove as well as teachers such as Mr. Winterburn to supply the squid, the students are probably justified in the common dream they seem to share of becoming marine biologists in the future.

Sly Si

Students in Ms. Halvorsen's class at Mamquam Elementary School had their attention focused on quite a different kind of animal. A new, life-sized puppet has come to join Waldo the dog and the rest of the colorful menagerie in their room. He is Sly Si, a most handsome fox with thick, rich fur, and a splendid brush of a tail.

The students have already learned his special song and he helps them learn other lessons as well. David had been a specially attentive listener so he was chosen to stand at the front and manipulate Si, opening and closing the fox's mouth to fit the words of the song.

Getting to School

The small people in Ms Wilson's Grade 1-2 class farther down the hallway were following tracks of a different kind. They had simple charts and were using them to record how many of the class came to school by bus, how many walked, how many rode their bikes and how many got a lift in their parents' cars. Each means of transport was represented by a ladder of squares, each square to be colored in to stand for one student. So the study of graphs begins.

Words

Members of M. Oetter's Grade 3-4 class were having quite a complicated philosophical discussion for people of their age. They had been looking at some of the vocabulary from the story they had read, and had wrestled with the two difficult words: "waterproof" and "water-logged". Then they came to a question of what is strength and what is weakness. They decided depends on the circumstances. The same thing can be both weak and strong. One thoughtful boy put forward the example of an oil tanker which is big and powerful but can be destroyed by a small leak. The oil is not strong but it can kill sea-birds. Some pretty profound thinking here.

Our Former Students Abroad

It is always encouraging to hear about former students of ours who have succeeded in their careers, often overseas or in other parts of this continent.

Philip Christianson has sent greetings from Hawaii, courtesy of Mr. Baumann. Philip now owns one of the largest operations in that part of the world for the manufacture of square glass blocks, a commodity much in demand. It is good to hear of his success as an entrepreneur.

Susan Winterburn, whose parents visited her in South Africa over the summer, is a chartered accountant and holds the rank of manager with the firm of Deloitte and Touche in Johannesburg. Jackie Hildering is coordinator of the International School in Rotterdam, Holland and was one of the group which put together the international curriculum in Geneva, Switzerland.

We are proud of the Howe Sound Secondary School graduates. Undoubtedly there are others and we should like to hear about them.

Leadership

As a follow-up to the Bowron Lakes trip the Grade 6 students from Garibaldi Highlands Elementary enjoyed so much in June, Mr. Weeks plans to have them, now transformed into experienced Grade 7s and the school's natural leaders, use the lessons they learned to be a good influence on the rest of the student body. They are going to make the Bowron trip again this month and prepare themselves for their new role.

It will be almost like a retreat, in that they will be the only ones staying at the lodge and will be able to have their own workshops each evening. There will still be all the adventure and excitement of outdoor activities, but there will also be talks from members of the RCMP and other professionals about responsibilities and about making wise decisions. Above all, they will be learning to operate as a team and help each other to solve the kinds of examples their juniors need.

The trip will last the five days, but the helpful effects should last more than the 10 months of a school year.

Three new teams debut in men's soccer league season opener

By David Donaldson
Squamish Chief

The Mountain Building Centres Men's Soccer league got its usual soggy start for the new season Sunday at Centennial Field. This year the league's numbers have swollen to 11 teams with the addition of the Steel Heads, Squamish Sikh Society, Emerald FC and Whistler Painting FC, and the dissolution of the Dynamos.

It will take some time to see how these new teams will affect the top teams of the old guard but it will make for an interesting season, says former league chair Sean Keightly, who notes the Squamish Sikhs — a splinter of the Khalsa team — has a good lineup of young players, and Whistler Painting has quite a stacked team with five former Cheeky Charlie's players and a number of ex-Squamish FC players.

The most noticeable effect of the new teams is the breakup of the old talent cores of the older teams.

"When you go from eight teams to 11 teams you've diluted a lot of teams...there's going to be big discrepancies in the scores," Keightly says. Also, with an odd number of teams, each week a different team gets a bye. Last weekend's season opener already showed some higher scoring games than usual, but the newer teams failed to bring the old boys down right away. Local 170 beat the Steel Heads 12-0, Squamish Sikh Society edged out Whistler Painting 3-1, Thunder Hawks led the Coyotes 7-0, Ellis Moving

A Cheeky Charlie's player takes the low road on the slippery field to check an Emerald FC forward. David Donaldson photos

Cheeky Charlie's used their heads to take control of the ball.

Eagles beat Continental Power Services 3-1 and Cheeky Charlie's overcame Emerald FC 7-0.

Cheeky Charlie's didn't come by that 7-0 victory easily, however. "The first half they (Emerald FC) were full of enterprise and the play was equal," said Cheeky Charlie's Keightly. "We scored two goals and made better inroads into their box than they did into ours but the midfield was pretty even."

At the start of the second half, Cheeky

Charlie's was all over Emerald, putting lots of pressure on the play to keep it in Emerald's half as they kept knocking in goals.

Although pleased to win the season's first game, Keightly says the team isn't counting its chickens yet, especially with the loss of seven players from last year's team.

"We're not the team we were in previous years. Hopefully we can get everything together and be a challenger at the end of the season."

Titus claims second individual gruel title

Rahoul Ghose
Whistler Question

liquid sunshine, copious amounts of snowflakes the size of loonies and rigid temperatures all greeted competitors during Saturday's second annual Ribaldi Gruel adventure race on Whistler Mountain.

Ninety-four individuals and 31 teams were challenged this year's race, battling hypothermia, slick course conditions and low visibility.

But not even the weather could stop the team of Paul Rawlinson, Dale Douglas and Chris Bishop from capturing the team title. The Blackcomb team finished the three legs in 2:21.06, more than 11 minutes faster than the second place trio of Chris Colbeck, Rob Segawa and Ken Marler.

At the finish line by Whistler's gondola, mud-soaked Rawlinson was grinning from ear-to-ear.

It was pretty harsh out there — it was pouring half-way down the Green Chair," Rolo said. "The individual people are the ones people should be cheering for. That's pretty major, what they're going through."

Rawlinson said the final descent resembled a river the whole way down.

"I didn't even bother going fast. It was more dangerous to go fast than to just be smooth and not make any mistakes."

Colbeck said during the final descent he had to keep wiping the mud off his goggles.

"In the climb they kept getting steamed up and in the descent they got muddy so I had to take them off."

Colbeck, who made the decision not to compete in the world downhill championships in Australia this month due primarily to financial reasons, added he had to tighten his brakes several times on the gruel course to compensate for the slick conditions.

For the top individual finisher, Whistler's Kevin Titus, those slick conditions resulted in at least one major fall during the descent.

Titus hit the finish line in 2:37.14, placing third overall, but was definitely feeling the effects of the cold during post-race interviews.

Covered in mud and shivering uncontrollably, Titus said he flipped over his handlebars during the descent and ended up sliding in the mud for several metres.

"We were riding in puddles the whole time and it was cold," he said. "My hands are basically numb and I couldn't really feel my brakes at all...I couldn't feel anything but I survived."

Racers started the gruel in Whistler Village around 10 a.m. with a 1,200-vertical-metre mountain bike climb to Pika's before swapping wheels for a pair of running shoes. The running-hiking leg took competitors through three alpine bowls before circling back to Pika's. The final leg returned riders to their knobby-tired mounts for a climb and final descent.

The descent leg was altered slightly due to the harsh weather conditions, organizer Chris Kent said, adding the decision was made primarily for safety reasons.

"You can't race in this stuff...you just have to survive out there," Kent said.

The trio of Cherri Titus, Iain Weatherston and Sean Howie topped the mixed teams and finished fourth overall in 2:39.14.

Matthew Decore was the second individual finisher, taking fifth overall in 2:41.33, about four minutes behind Titus.

The top all-women's team of Sylvie Allen, Wendy Kenear and Heather Campbell clocked in at 3:04.13, placing 25th overall while the top individual woman was Lynn Grenier who finished the three legs in 3:07.43.

This year's new half gruel drew eight entries including local ski hero Steve Podborski. Geoff Playfair topped that event in a time of 1:46.20.

In the full gruel other competitors finishing in the top 10 included:

- 6) Scott Hunter, Scott Rattray and Warren Scott; 2:43.52
- 7) Mike Vine; 2:44.52 (third individual)
- 8) Mike Edwards; 2:46.47 (fourth individual)
- 9) Chris Hennessey, Micheal Bryson and Pat Mulrooney; 2:46.48
- 10) Gord Ahraons, Rich Hamilton and Sally Carmichael; 2:46.52.

Scorpions sting Seymour to continue streak

By David Donaldson

The U13 Squamish Scorpions continued its winning streak on the weekend, defeating reputable soccer club ICSF Parma 10-1 in Burnaby.

The previous weekend Parma had won its game 5-0, as had the Scorpions, and head coach Bob Mahnger figured it would be a close game when the two teams met, but the Scorpions proved he didn't need to worry.

"Our guys are really pumped up now," he said. "We've got them really motivated and we'd like to move them into gold division this year."

The Tri-City Soccer League, which both Scorpions teams play in, has three levels of play: bronze, silver and gold. At the beginning of each season teams go through a five-game screening process to determine if they should stay at their current level. It's their next two games which will determine where the U13 Scorpions will stand.

"We have some big games to play against Burnaby Heights and Mount Seymour and that will let us know where we really stand," Mahnger said. "Those clubs are really tough and that will probably tell the tale if we go into gold or stay in silver."

Playing in the gold division, the U15 Scorpions had a home game at Centennial Field this weekend and lost 8-

1 to Mount Seymour. The U15 team was originally slated for silver but there was no room in the schedule. Head coach Richard Dawson says the team will probably be moved to silver where it can play more competitively.

Mount Seymour kept the Scorpions keeper on his toes.

Squamish All Stars take second in fastball tournament

By David Donaldson
Squamish Chief

Squamish once again proved it can produce fastball players that can swing with the best of them when the Squamish All Stars fastball team took second place in the Metro Umpires All Star Tournament at Surrey's Softball City Sept. 7-8.

The Squamish All Stars — formed from representatives of all the teams in the Howe Sound Men's Fastball League — went into the tournament with a slight disadvantage. Due to a high number of injuries at the end of the ball season only 10 players could be mustered for the team. Tournament organizers placed Squamish on the strong side of the tournament, facing intermediate A and senior B teams, although the Howe Sound league is ranked in intermediate C.

"We have a relatively small league but they put us against the top teams in the tournament," said Squamish pitcher Doug Allin. "That's why it was an exceptional tournament for us."

"We only have four teams to choose our players from where the other leagues have 10-12 teams. It works out for us — we go down there and surprise some teams."

Squamish fought its way to the semi-final against Connaught, and despite some excellent defensive plays from Richard Tetzlaff and Al Godin, was one run behind in the final inning. John Stuart, who led the tournament in home runs, hit a two-run homer to win the game and advance the team to the finals.

It took the Moody Park intermediate A team to finally shut Squamish down in the final with a 10-0 victory. The game went scoreless for the first four innings, which Allin said was "surprising a lot of people because they figured we were going to get beat pretty bad pretty early."

But fatigue eventually settled in on the short-handed Squamish team and players weren't able to return Moody Park's 10 runs. However, the second place finish was "the best finish ever for Squamish in the all star tournament," Allin said. "To make it to the finals and go four innings scoreless against (the top team)...it was a good tournament for us."

Course changes will challenge Cheakamus racers

By David Donaldson
Squamish Chief

Up to 1,500 of North America's toughest cyclists will test their mental and physical limits as they compete in the 14th Cheakamus Challenge Fall Classic mountain bike race beginning in Squamish Sept. 28.

Considered by many to be the toughest one-day race in the country, the Cheakamus Challenge takes riders from a level in Squamish through 68 kilometres of twisty singletrack and spectacular views, climbing 6,300 vertical feet to the mountains of Whistler.

The term 'celebration of pain' truly describes the event since racers encounter many phases of enjoyment and misery as they power their bikes towards the finish in Whistler," says organizer Grant Lamont.

This year's course will feature some changes, including a new singletrack section beside the Cheakamus River cross from the salt shed on Hwy. 99, which will take riders off the road, along the 1.6-kilometre trail and over a newly-constructed Doris Burma bridge. Racers will also be treated to an extended ride on the Whistler Mountain section, taking them 2.6 kilometres up the Whistler Mountain road for a thrilling singletrack descent after climbing up from the Northwest Passage exit.

There will be more than $30,000 in cash and prizes to be won by participants in all categories this year, and a $1,000 cash first prize will be awarded to the top male and female finishers in the pro division.

Last year's winners Kirk Molday and two-time world champion and Olympic silver-medalist Alison Sydor are both set to defend their titles against all the other top riders on the modified course.

Entry fees are $40 for licensed riders, and non-licensed riders can pay an extra $10 for a one-day licence and race as a citizen. Registration is available at the Tantalus Bike Shop in Squamish or Backroads and Grinders in Whistler until Sept. 27. There will be no day-of-race entries so early registration is recommended as spots are filling up quickly.

A portion of the proceeds will go towards building four kilometres of new trail for next year's race. The proceeds of last year's race financed the new sections of this year's event.

The race begins on Saturday, Sept. 28 at 9 a.m. at the Sunwolf Outdoor Centre in Cheekye.

Motorists are asked to take note of expected delays of up to 10 minutes on Hwy. 99 for the marshalling of riders near the salt sheds and Pinecrest between 9:30 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. on race day.

Check out boxing club's new facilities at open house

The Squamish Rock Boxing Club is hosting an open house sparring session at its new location in the Squamish industrial park Sept. 19.

Boxers from other clubs in the Lower Mainland including Astoria and Bensborough will come to the event, which invites the people of Squamish to view the club's new facilities and learn more about the club and the sport of boxing.

Rayne Jackson, the club's coach, has high hopes for SRBC and plans to build up to be one of the top boxing facilities in the province.

Up to 10 boxers from out of town will be sparring at the event, possibly including "the fighting professional" Manny Sobral, the Canadian welterweight champion. The open house will run from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 19 at the Squamish Rock Boxing Club's location at #6 38918 Progress Way in industrial park.

The club's next fund-raising event will be a youth dance at the Squamish Legion on Sept. 27 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Local DJ's Ziggy's Fix will provide live music and DJs Josh and Kevin will spin throughout the night. Tickets are available in advance and $10 at the door. For more information phone the club at 892-1266.

An Equal Opportunity Employer

GIRL FRIDAY

My name is Paul Sutton. I promote "Rock Festivals". My last festival in this area was the "Strawberry Mountain Rock Festival" at Paradise Valley in 1969.

I am currently planning another concert for next summer at 13-mile on the reserve (provided my plans meet with the approval of the Tribal council).

It will take place July 25, 26, 27 & 28. Since children are not allowed at my rock concerts, I am planning on having a special childrens' concert on June 12th, so as to make the little people feel included in things, and to sort of shake things out for the main event.

The main entertainment for the Squamish Strawberry Rock Festival of 1997, nicknamed "The Reunion" will be comprised of mainly the local bands in the area combined with those groups that played at the original festival in 1969 who can make it. Groups like: The Chambers Brothers, Canned Heat, Little Richard, Marylee Rush, Lee Michaels, Retina Light Circus, Country Joe and the Fish, Santana, Sly and the Family Stone, Chicago Transit Authority, Creme, Iron Butterfly, Creedance Clearwater and the list goes on.

Organizing this kind of event is "totalling" to the system and an exhausting undertaking, which brings me to the main point of this ad...

I need a secretary. This position requires special social skills along with extraordinary professional business acumen and a desire to travel.

The most important qualification for this job is a natural ability to be a lady in any moment. Knowing how to spell is second.

If you are single and unattached and ready to go, and desire a secure financial future, then this is the job for you.

Send your resume to: GIRL FRIDAY
