Bear hunting ban initiative takes to the streets

on Enns
amish Chief

The gathering of 210,000 signatures required for an initiative to prohibit the killing of bears in British Columbia is this week.

The initiative seeks a ban on all sport trophy hunting of bears in B.C., as well as increased penalties for poaching and trafficking in bear parts.

Paul George, founder of Western Canada Wilderness Committee, said he believes that "pro-bear-hunting lobby are mistaken if they believe that hunting big, beautiful, wild bears for fun or for profit is acceptable behavior to the average British Columbian today."

Western Canada Wilderness Committee is the only organization to be registered as an advertiser-sponsor under the Initiative and Recall Act. The act allows only individuals, not organizations, to propose a legislative initiative and carefully regulates the activities of those advocating and opposing it.

Forty-nine different organizations — including B.C. Wildlife Federation, B.C. Trappers Association, Guide Outfitters Association of B.C., along with 38 individuals, have registered with B.C.'s chief electoral officer as official opponents of the initiative.

A 1995 Angus Reid poll indicates that 60 per cent of the general population supports a ban on trophy hunting of bears. WCWC says the real opposition to the initiative is the apathy of the anti-bear-hunting "silent majority."

"Only a few individuals claim to be bear hunters or believe that sport hunting — killing bears for their parts, including heads, skins (trophies) and other body parts such as gall bladders — is morally right," George said.

B.C. Wildlife Federation executive director Doug Walker said he agrees with WCWC there should be tougher fines and penalties, including jail time for poachers. But he said hunting is a heritage for aboriginal and non-aboriginal people that should be continued.

"A lot of people do believe in hunting for sustenance," Walker said, adding it is the law that hunters must take all of the meat on bears they kill.

Walker said the 3,000 to 4,000 bears a year which are allowed to be legally killed allows the bear population to increase. He said the Environment Ministry takes into account native hunting and poaching when determining how many bear hunting tags will be issued.

The Environment Ministry estimates there are 120,000-160,000 black bears and 10,000-13,000 grizzly bears in B.C.

The Recall and Initiative Act requires that 10 per cent of registered voters in each of the 75 provincial ridings sign petitions for the initiative to proceed. So far, about 900 people have volunteered to help circulate the initiative and witness signatures. The signatures must be collected in a 90-day period, which began Sept. 9.

Hunting bears helps manage population

Ron Enns
amish Chief

There is some black bear hunting around Squamish and it is an excellent management tool to keep the number of black bears in check, says Squamish conservation officer Steve Jacobi.

Rapid human population growth throughout the Sea to Sky corridor is usually increasing bear habitat.

While developing the region in an environmentally friendly manner — leaving riparian vegetation along waterways and selectively clearing land to encourage the growth of small brush along with maintaining some covered forested areas — there is more room for berries to grow while still providing shelter for easily adaptable bears, Jacobi said.

As well, clear cuts are prime bear habitat. And with relatively few hunters in the Lower Mainland region, it is not surprising that more bears are shot by conservation officers responding to complaints from people than are shot by hunters, said Jack Evans, senior wildlife biologist with the Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks.

The black bear hunting season in the Squamish area is open from Sept. 10 to Dec. 31 and from April 1 to June 15. Hunters in the Squamish area are allowed to kill two black bears per year. There is no grizzly bear hunting season in the Lower Mainland region.

Britannia Beach watershed cleanup to proceed

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

Concerns of Britannia Beach residents about their water supply are being met by a plan to restore a watershed damaged by past forestry and mining practices.

Richmond Plywood, currently logging in the area, received a letter of approval-in-principle last week for renewal of the Britannia Creek watershed. The restoration application was submitted to Forest Renewal B.C. in January for a total value of $347,000 for the period of 1996 to 2000.

"The watershed, in its present condition, will be prone to flooding due to a complete lack of sound forestry practices over the last 100 years," said Mike Mason, president of the Britannia Beach Community Association. "Also, when the mine closed, all road maintenance ceased and these old, abandoned roads have led further to the instability of adjacent slopes."

Britannia Creek last flooded in August 1991. A debris torrent caused by mismanagement of old roads and dams far above the community caused extensive damage to the lower part of the village along Hwy. 99, about 10 kilometres south of Squamish.

The watershed restoration application, made jointly by Richmond Plywood and the Britannia Beach Community Association, was compiled by Mike O'Neill of Pro-Forest Enterprises, the consultant working for Richmond Plywood. About $23,000 has been approved to be spent in through 1997 to do assessments of the watershed. Richmond Plywood is now working on a detailed proposal, which is required before final approval on the entire restoration project is received.

Most of the restoration is to involve deactivation of logging and mining roads and some adjacent hills stabilization, said Tom Taylor, watershed technician the Squamish Forest District. Mitigation could be before winter, but it will more likely start next year, said.

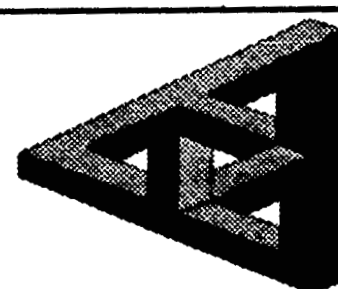

Britannia Beach obtains its water from the Britannia Creek watershed. Water cannot be used from Britannia Creek itself because of extensive acid rock drainage resulting from past copper mining activity.

The project had initially been disqualified because Britannia Creek is not a salmon spawning stream, Mason said that intense lobbying by Richmond Plywood and the community association for the much needed restoration work finally paid off.

In addition to the watershed proposal, Richmond Plywood received approval-in-principle earlier this year for a plan that involves juvenile tree spacing of 1 hectare in Britannia Creek during the next four years at an estimated total cost of $135,000.

Together, the projects are estimated to provide a total of 1,024 person-days of employment, including 177 person-days of on-the-job training, with the priority for training going to Britannia Beach residents.

Watershed restoration in the Squamish Forest District being done with Forest Renewal B.C. funding includes projects in the watersheds of the Stawamus River, Fur Creek, Mamquam River, High Falls Creek, Ashlu River, Squamish River, Brandywine Creek, Rutherford Creek, North Lizzie Creek and Kallahne Creek, and a pending project in the Indian River watershed.

Highway intersection changed

The Ministry of Transportation and Highways has made some changes to the new intersection on Hwy. 99 and Industrial Way at the entrance to the Squamish industrial park. Drivers exiting the industrial park southbound no longer have an acceleration lane. They must now yield to southbound traffic on Hwy. 99.

The Ministry of Transportation and Highways encourages the travelling public to stay within the speed limit through this area and not to use the curb lanes to pass other traffic," said Brenda Jones, the ministry's regional communications coordinator.

Gas lines could be dangerous

Recent natural gas line ruptures in Squamish have occurred because gas lines usually do not coincide with the physical location of the line, according to Squamish Fire Rescue Chief Pat Hampson.

Public works director Mike Darbyshire said municipal workers have experienced the problem. He said a plan will show that a gas line is one metre deep and one metre from the sidewalk. But when workers begin digging, they may find the gas line to be two metres underground and one foot off the sidewalk. "It could be a dangerous situation," Darbyshire said.

More RCMP officers requested

The Squamish RCMP detachment has requested three more members to help with the increasing workload. Sgt. Dwain Wetteland said the Port Alberni RCMP detachment, with 41 members, has almost double the manpower of the Squamish detachment, but handles 3,000 files per year compared to Squamish, which has 23 members. Last year, the Squamish detachment dealt with 12,633 files.

"We need more members in the field to respond to the public's concerns," Wetteland said, noting that Squamish has the third-highest caseload per member rate in British Columbia. Council agreed with the detachment's request, for planning purposes only.

Union joins parents in protesting elimination of crossing guards

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

Parents and the union which represents school district employees are putting pressure on the Howe Sound school board to reinstate adult crossing guards at school crossings.

Crossing guards were not rehired for the start of the 1996-97 school year because trustees in passing the budget in June eliminated the positions as a cost-cutting measure, saving about $30,000 in the $33.4 million budget.

Parents of Stawamus Elementary School students are particularly upset, believing the school crossing on Guilford Drive, with limited sightlines for drivers, is extremely dangerous.

The school's parents advisory council chair, Doug Hackett, will make a presentation to the school board at its meeting Wednesday at 6 p.m. As well, superintendent of schools Doug Courtice will present a proposal to the board with ways to possibly put crossing guards back on the job.

At Stawamus Elementary, parents have been volunteering to work as crossing guards in the morning and afternoon. Because the crossing guard positions fall under a union contract, the local is considering grieving the use of volunteer crossing guards.

"We have no quarrel with the parents," said Lynn Wilbur, president of Local 779 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

"This is about the safety of children and jobs that have been cut. Cuts should not put students' safety at risk. Out of a $30-million budget, this is a strange place to be cutting."

The recently negotiated three-year contract between the union and school board specifies jobs and duties that may be performed by volunteers.

Crossing guard is not one of them.

Courtice said neither the school district nor individual schools have solicited parents to be volunteer crossing guards, but added that the union does have a valid point.

Crossing guards are paid between $16 and $17 an hour, but work for short periods of time in the morning and afternoon and sometimes at noon. During the last school year, crossing guards worked at Squamish, Stawamus, Brackendale and Mamquam elementary schools. Courtice said he has examined several alternatives, which he will present to the board.

"In my view, the only one to make sense was to find some money and reinstate them."

He said he has identified about $35,000 to be taken from other unnamed programs to fund crossing guards.

Aerial ladder truck meets growing fire fighting needs

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

With the need for a new pumper truck and because of higher buildings being constructed in Squamish, the municipality will spend $572,760 on a new fire pumper with a 23-metre aerial ladder.

Council approved the expenditure at its meeting last week.

The new triple combination pumper with an aerial ladder and full complement of ground ladders will be delivered in the spring of 1997. The truck is being built by Smeal Fire Apparatus of Nebraska.

Fire underwriters state that Squamish Fire Rescue has to replace a 1991 pumper in 1996, said Squamish Fire Rescue Chief Pat Hampson. The cost would be about $331,000.

At the same time, new construction in Squamish has created buildings that are beyond the reach of the fire department's ground ladders.

The use of ground ladders to reach higher buildings being constructed is also a concern because they are heavy to raise and expose firefighters to risk of back injury, Hampson said.

"The best solution to the need for a replacement pumper and the need to access the higher buildings is to buy a vehicle that does both," Hampson said. The difference in cost is $241,600. He said the new vehicle is in the middle to low range in cost for aerial devices.

In the interim, Squamish

Fire Rescue has received a loaned truck with a 30-metre aerial ladder from Anderson's Engineering of Langley, the Smeal dealer representative. Fire rescue members will train on the loaned vehicle, improving the level of response to emergencies, Hampson said.

A truck with an aerial ladder would have been useful recently when Squamish Fire Rescue responded to arcing electrical circuitry on top of a restaurant, Hampson said.

Hunting trial continues after six days of court

 By Ron Enns
 Squamish Chief

After six days in the courtroom, the trial of two Squamish men charged with a total of 13 hunting-related offences has yet to be completed.

It was anticipated that the trial of Peter Daniel Leveque and Allen George Woods would be finished after three days in Fort St. John provincial court Aug. 28-30, but neither the Crown nor defence had made their closing arguments when the court adjourned on the Friday afternoon of a long weekend. Last February, the trial opened in Fort Nelson provincial court and was adjourned after three days.

The charges under the Wildlife Act against the two hunters stem from alleged incidents that occurred near Fort Nelson and Lac La Hache in September and October 1993.

Leveque is charged with unlawfully discharging a firearm from the side of the Alaska Highway, making a false statement on a compulsory inspection data sheet, unlawful possession of a dead caribou (two counts), failing to submit a mountain goat for compulsory inspection and hunting caribou during closed season.

Woods is charged with hunting bull elk with less than six points on one antler during closed season, failing to submit an elk for compulsory inspection, unlawful possession of an elk carcass, unlawful possession of a partially butchered elk carcass, unlawful possession of a pair of six-point elk antlers (two counts) and making a false statement on an elk species licence.

The court heard evidence from four defence witnesses. Testifying were Leveque, Woods, an expert biologist and a civilian hunter.

Eight Crown witnesses gave evidence to the court. Testifying were four conservation officers, two civilian hunters who made the initial observations which started the investigation, the butcher who cut up Leveque's caribou, and an expert in elk biology.

Crown counsel Peter Favell and defence lawyer James Hogan will be a part of a tele-conference call with the court in Fort St. John Sept. 24 to set a date for the completion of the trial, which is expected to last about another half-day.

Faltering business was to supply fire department with computers

Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

One week after municipal council approved buying two computers for $31 from Bandyman Computer Services, the company was locked out of its downtown store for failing to pay its rent for the past five months.

The closing of the retail store and training centre, located on Third Avenue, was the latest chapter in the recent woes of Bandyman. The company was $8,759 in arrears in its rent before a bailiff locked the doors on July 10. It left its rented space in Whistler's Village North in a shambles after getting behind in rent payments. Bandyman owners Tim Agnew and Bradley also closed down another company they owned, Whistler Language Adventures.

One of Bandyman's financial problems has been revealed through the local media. Nevertheless, Squamish council in early July had no choice but to follow its policy of awarding the contract to the best qualified bid, and authorized the purchase of the equipment for the fire department.

Coun. Ted Craddock said at the July 2 meeting that he was concerned about the subsequent servicing of the computers. There was a knowledge out there that Bandyman was having problems. I don't want to buy anything without knowing it will be serviced," Craddock said last week.

Craddock said he agrees the low bidder should be awarded the contract, but added that companies from which the municipality make purchases should be locked out in an attempt to avoid potential problems.

"I would hate to dump on people because they are having tough times, but you have to watch out for yourself."

the required components, Saurette said. By the end of July, Bandyman agreed to relieve the municipality of any responsibilities contained in the contract, Saurette said. The municipality then was legally able to offer the contract to the next lowest bidder, Brown's Video Ltd. of Squamish.

Brown's bid of $4,999 was only $157 more than Bandyman's. In the municipal budget, $5,000 was allocated for the purchase. The computers, which are being used by Squamish Fire Rescue for training, pre-emergency planning and fire prevention activities, were received by the municipality in mid-August.

Fire Chief Pat Hampson said "the municipality can make no assumptions" about businesses from it make its purchases.

Both of the two listed telephone numbers for Bandyman are no longer in service.

owned by Ed Vernon.

There is already a sign on the property advertising sales of Vernon's Marina Estates downtown waterfront condominium development.

Vernon said about 50 per cent of his business has come as a result of his highway sign.

He said the value of highway signage should not be underestimated and the Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company sign will benefit all downtown businesses.

The municipality's signage committee has recommended there be better signage at appropriate locations, but nothing has been done about it, said Coun. Bill McNeney.

Council approved the new sign on a one-year temporary basis. Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company is continuing to try to convince the Ministry of Transportation and Highways that its business deserves a blue highway sign of its own.

As well, council approved amending its sign bylaw, which concerns Lonsdale.

"If we amend the bylaw, it will be very difficult to say no to anybody" who requests large signs, she said. "Maybe we need an information centre out on Hwy. 99" to impact the community as a whole, she added.

Lonsdale and Coun. Don Ross voted against allowing the new sign to be put up.

School system is in trouble

Perhaps crisis is too strong a word, but our school system is certainly in trouble in this province. When budgets are so tight the safety of children is compromised by removing crossing guards, something is amiss. Add to that the fact there has been $50 million spent in the school district during the past three years on new schools, additions and renovations, and we are still using 36 portable classrooms. There are 17 portables in Squamish alone, the equivalent of at least one new school, and the population is growing.

When you stop and realize our problems are no different than those being experienced in the other 74 school districts around the province, the enormity of the problem becomes clear.

Questions are being raised about the relevance of what is being taught. Education Minister Moe Sihota announced last week a review of the career and personal planning curriculum, which he thinks has been pushed too fast and might not be accomplishing in reality what it set out to do on paper. He said the pace of change has to be slowed down. It seems every new Education Minister has new ideas, and those who deliver the product, the teachers, support staff, trustees and administrators, are caught in the middle. Every couple of years they are given a different focus.

It is time for a total, all-inclusive review of the education system. There have to be better ways of funding the service, better ways of assessing its effectiveness, and ways of keeping the politicians from tinkering with the system just so senior bureaucrats can keep busy. Education can not be static, and innovative ideas must be tried. But neither should it be in such disarray.

If education is truly our future, it is our duty to ensure the system is the best it possibly can be. Learning in portables and firing crossing guards hardly does service to the most important people receiving the service, the often forgotten students.

Rain hardly mattered

Fall rain showers for the many community events in Squamish over the weekend could have been predicted. But they hardly seemed to matter.

People flocked to the Brackendale Fall Fair to see the exhibits, pat the llamas, ride the rides and have some fun. Slo-pitch players wallowed in the mud at Centennial Field, splattered from head to toe but still grinning. Lumberjack Challenge participants did their best and the small handful of hardy spectators cheered, impersonating the anticipated cast of thousands. RCMP Torch Run participants paced their way through downtown, alternately smiling and panting while raising money for a great cause. Volunteers helped out at every event with a shrug and a smile.

But you can't fool Mother Nature. The weekend was supposed to be the start of soccer season, but they gave up their traditional start date for the provincial slo-pitch championships. It always rains for the start of soccer season. Sunshine would have been nicer, but it was a great weekend in Squamish regardless, in so many ways.

Anonymous planter appreciated

Randon acts of kindness are highlighted weekly in our daffodils, but some deserve special mention. People driving the new section of Finch Drive between Hwy. 99 and Loggers Lane may not have noticed, but somebody has brightened the area considerably by planting cosmos, daisies and other flowers. They are mostly annuals but readily reseed themselves, so the display will grow again next spring.

A community full of daffodils to the anonymous flower lover.

Ramblings of a newspaper junkie

I have a confession to make. I'm a newspaper junkie. My day is not complete without having gone through a newspaper or two, even when I'm on holidays.

Cathie and I spent 10 days in Washington and Oregon recently, and I picked up newspapers wherever we went, both dailies and weeklies. I've always felt any good idea is worth stealing, so I look for design aspects and story ideas which we can adapt here. There wasn't much worth stealing in any of the products I perused this time, but they certainly did give me food for thought.

Spending most of our time on the beach at Hood Canal west of Tacoma, I picked up the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, the state's biggest daily newspaper, almost every day. I was astounded to realize that, even in a city so close geographically and so closely tied economically, for Seattle P-I readers at least, Canada hardly exists.

Washington has several excellent junior hockey teams which compete against B.C. squads, so I anticipated some coverage of the World Cup hockey tournament. Wrong.

The only report I could find was one three-paragraph story in the back of the sports section after the American team beat the Russians. I learned more than I could ever hope to know about the Seattle Seahawks football team and the Seattle Mariners baseball team. And I have to admit there is something strange about wanting hockey news at the end of August and beginning of September, but I won't go into that. Obviously if they don't play the game in Seattle, it doesn't exist.

The sports section carried one other tidbit of B.C. news, the collapse of Nelson Skalbania's ownership of the B.C. Lions. Skalbania's demise was no surprise, given his record in Canadian sports team ownership (he collapsed the Montreal Alouette franchise several years ago, and it was only revived this year...by an American).

Americans see football in a much different light. They need football, while we see it as one more sport competing for a shrinking disposable income. While Skalbania hit the swamp when he couldn't get 15,000 paying customers out on a regular basis, the Seattle P-I informed me that the Tennessee Volunteers had 106,212 spectators out at Neyland Stadium to watch them clobber the tem in which party members pick the candidates, anyone in the U.S. who is successfully nominated is on the first ballot. Thus you can have seven Democrats, eight Republicans and five fringe party candidates or more for each position on the primary ballot. Remember, the Americans elect everyone from their county dog-catcher to the president. The top vote-getter for each party in the primaries goes on to the final vote.

As I See It

By Al Price

University of Nevada at Las Vegas 62-3 in college football. These aren't even the top national teams and they are drawing more for one game than the Lions get in half a season.

The only other Canadian story I saw was a lengthy piece on the results of a five-year study by a professor at the University of Toronto, who proved employers get more production and longer service from their employees by using encouragement rather than criticism. I looked for comparable coverage in Canadian papers on my return. I found nothing, which says something either about my eyesight or the comparative apathy of Canadian newspapers.

Most of the Seattle P-I coverage was devoted to the American elections, and the missile attack on Iraq. The American election process, in comparison to our own, is cumbersome and interminable. Voters are now in the middle of the "primaries" (there are no secondaries or tertiaries), in which they select the people who will be on the final ballot in November. Unlike our sys-

The whole process takes months and months, and voter information overload is rampant. Apathy sets in, people are elected to all kinds of powerful positions by a tiny portion of the eligible voters, and life goes on.

And as with papers everywhere, not all the news was bad. One story dealt with a section of U.S. 97 highway south of Klamath Falls, Oregon, which should be posted as a vampire-free zone. A truck loaded with garlic crashed into a ditch tossing its load across 30 metres of the highway. Cloves that weren't mangled in the mishap were minced by the tires of passing cars, prompting one highway patrol officer at the scene to offer his squad car for patrol duty in Transylvania.

In any case, the driver wasn't hurt, the mess was cleaned up and no doubt there will be a fine crop sprouting at the roadside come spring.

It was good to get away, good to visit another country, and good to be back. We have our own municipal elections in November, and no matter what happens, the process is so much more sensible. I think.

Stop the whining

Editor,
Squamish seems to be working hard to maintain its reputation as the corridor's winner. The latest example was "Eco-Challenge: they came, they saw, so what?" David Donaldson's opinion that Eco-Challenge was a non-event for Squamish is, I am sure, shared by others. How unfortunate, how wrong.

To quote John Howard, team leader for New Zealand's winning team Eco-Challenge/Reebok, "I've been in lots of countries, in South America and Europe. It was stunning in B.C. I recommend it as a place to come for anyone if they are interested in walking or climbing."

The long-term effect of the media coverage of this part of the world along with personal endorsements such as Howard's will draw many more people to this area in years to come. How Squamish capitalizes on this publicity remains to be seen.

It is interesting that both Pemberton and Gold Bridge, not tourism superstars like Whistler, received an immediate economic boost from the Eco-Challenge. Squamish should and could have done better. Competitors helping with the service project were delighted to receive complimentary tickets to the swimming pool and showed marked interest in the brew pub. By being Eco-Challenge friendly (for example, packaging suds and swim, muffins and meals, cappuccino and M&Ms, all in great demand), we would have attracted the entire Eco-Challenge encampment to Squamish, despite the weather, for the environmental service project and for the finish of the race (originally slated for Squamish).

Nevertheless, the visiting service project participants had a great time and will spread the word that Squamish is an interesting place, with friendly people and lots to do besides playing and slogging in the mud. Local participants, too, were terrific. Not a whine amongst the bunch.

P.S. Where were all these people from? Why did they come? What were their experiences out back? The event was more than a TV news spectacle (TV too had problems covering what was essentially a wilderness event). Print can do what TV can't in the same way Squamish has advantages that Whistler doesn't. A positive attitude wins, learn from our disappointments, work smarter and please, don't whine.

P.P.S. Thank you for the sports and service project coverage.

Visionary developers breathe life into the downtown core

Editor,
Kudos off to some of Squamish's newest, most thoughtful developments. The Howe Sound Inn and Sewing Company is definitely one of the most aesthetically pleasing and quality-crafted buildings in Squamish. The owners are certainly visionaries. Likewise, thanks to Marina Estates for a pleasant and practical use of space. Both these ventures will surely breathe life into the downtown core.

And now that Mountain Building Centres has found an appropriate new home in the Squamish industrial park, what will become of their old downtown site?

It would be a great place for the proposed Eagle

Rest Hotel, within walking distance to some of the finest dining, unique cafes and shops Squamish has to offer.

May thoughtful and visionary planning be able to dilute the drive-through, fly-through mentality of unimaginative highway development.

ECO-CHALLENGE SERVICE PROJECT
MAMQUAM BLIND CHANNEL CLEAN-UP

Firstly, to the District of Squamish Council and staff. Your comprehensive enthusiastic participation was first rate! Thank you.

The successful clean-up was made possible by the generous participation of the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society, the Soo Coalition for Sustainable Forests, Howe Sound Youth Soccer, Rotary Club, the Kiwanis, Howe Sound School District 48, and the many non-affiliated community volunteers who helped out including Bob Hemphill who drove the Black Tusk Realty bus, Rob Otto who operated the line saw, and Jack Wright, Gary Hastings, and Tony Raffael for the use of the site, along with countless others.

Business supporters included Carney's Waste Systems, Triton Steel, Squamish Freight, Scobe Industrial Supplies, Mountain Building Supply, Interfor, Triple C Logging, Ralph's Rentals, Squamish Terminals, Greg Gardner GM.

Logistic and financial support was contributed by the Sea to Sky Economic Development Commission, Community Futures Development Corporation of Howe Sound, and Eco-Challenge.

The excellent salmon barbecue was organized by Trish and Malcolm Scott, Fran Solar, and Marcie Phillips. Business supporters included SuperValu, Xocolatl, Howe Sound Brew Pub and Black Tusk Realty. Ice was provided by Squamish Days Loggers Sports. Donna Billy of the Squamish Nation welcomed the muddy workers to the feast. (Our thanks and apologies to the many businesses who wanted to help out and who couldn't be accommodated, at least this time.)

For generously getting the word out (and for playing, some say slogging, in the mud with the rest of us!), many thanks to Mountain FM staff. Sea to Sky Signs contributed the sponsors' sign. The Squamish Chief provided welcomed coverage and comment.

Special thanks to Eco-Challenge, the catalyst for this project (or we might have been waiting for another 100 years?) Both race organizers and competitors, including teams FoxTel (Australia), Suburu (Toronto), Red Wolf (Montana, Hawaii, etc.) to name but a few, provided in-the-mud help (and were delighted to receive complimentary swimming pool tickets afterwards!)

Bike helmets parents
moral obligation

Editor,

Re: Bike helmet averts tragedy.

I read with interest and compassion your addition to briefs regarding Wendy Hughes' son Sheldon, who was involved in a serious bicycle accident.

Approximately two months ago our son, Eric, age seven, went over the handle bars of his bike, knocking himself unconscious.

He landed on his left temple with his helmet absorbing most of the force. Eric still sustained injuries that tore off most of the skin from the left side of his face and closed his left eye for a week. He now has a black mark under his left eye which may or may not be permanent, a constant reminder of a brief moment of carelessness.

It was with a great sense of relief and emotion that we saw Eric off to his first day of school last week. It could have very easily been different.

I encourage all adults to set the example and all parents to ensure their children are properly equipped. Helmets are mandatory by law, but are also a moral obligation of parents.

Seniors happy with Eagle Grove

Editor,

In reply to Mr. Vernon's kind offer to take in Eagle Grove senior residents, thanks but no thanks, and I would like to offer the following reasons why we will be quite happy in our soon to be completed complex.

You realize that seniors desire peace and quiet, not to be hit in the ear by the shrill noise of the sawmill or the intrusion of sawdust. I like to have my windows open at night.

Then there is the whooping and yelling of children, not to mention the raised voices and music of other tenants. No thanks. We've all had that in our younger days. No more please.

Then there is the nearby highway. There are thousands of cars rushing by on weekends, not to mention those noisy motorcycles, the squeal of brakes and the steady whine of tires. This is tiring to say the least.

We are also built on the bottom of an old river bed so if there is an earth tremor, we have no worry of being moved. And what can I say about the view? No wires or poles to look at, like the viscera of some mechanical monster. Nothing but a clear and unobstructed view of Mount Garibaldi and the Tantalus Range, and the Stawamus Chief and Howe Sound to the south. This is the ideal view for an afternoon siesta.

My wife is pleased that we can walk a few hundred feet to the main shopping centre where our needs for food, clothing and medical care are located, and no traffic lights to contend with. There will be two shops included for the seniors with a creative bent.

Peace and quiet activities tend to make seniors live longer and happier. I speak for most, if not all of the seniors who will be living in the Eagle Grove complex when I say again thanks but no thanks.

Crossing guards needed for safety

Received by The Chief for publication:

Howe Sound School Board,

Dear board members:

Re: Stawamus Elementary School crossing guard reinstatement.

I am a parent with a child in primary division at Stawamus Elementary School and I write to you with much concern regarding the Stawamus school crossing with no guard on duty during critical hours.

This particular crossing is extremely hazardous to the children attending Stawamus and I strongly urge you to reinstate the school crossing guard.

I have observed from last year that not only does this guard have a critical job controlling traffic, but also has shown tremendous job controlling the children coming down the hill just before this hazardous crossing.

I feel it's a shame this issue was not taken seriously enough earlier. This vulnerable crossing could or will be disastrous if not addressed promptly.

I pray for your immediate reconsideration and reinstatement of a much needed service for our children's sake.

Day-care limitations should be relaxed, council agrees

Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

A bylaw to allow up to 10 children in residential child-care facilities has received preliminary approval from council.

At its meeting last week, council passed the first two of four readings required to amend the zoning bylaw to increase the number of children at day-care centres to 10 from the current allowable limit of five.

Camela Potts, of the Rise and Play program for Preschoolers, had previously written to council requesting permission to have 10 children at her facility.

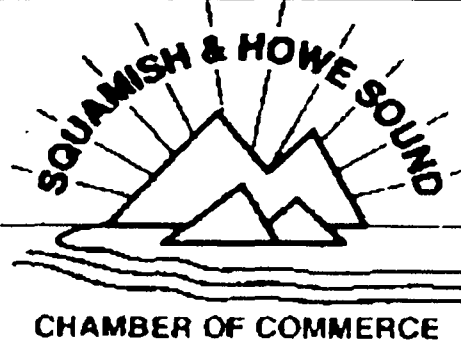

Potts told council at its meeting last week that increasing the limit would make it more feasible for her to hire additional staff. She said the increase in traffic would not be a concern because some parents already walk with their children to day-care centres. At most, there would be three more cars per day on residential streets where there are day-care centres, she said.

Mayor Corinne Lonsdale said it should be noted that the bylaw is a "blanket bylaw" affecting the entire municipality.

The bylaw was opposed only by Coun. Ron Barr, who said Potts should have to pay for the staff time to draft the bylaw because she made the initial request to have the allowable limit increased.

The public will now have an opportunity to comment on the proposed amendment. A public hearing will be held Sept. 24. The advisory planning commission is also to review and comment on the issue.

Be wary of late summer stings

By Ron Enns
Squamish Chief

Summer may be almost over, but the chances of getting stung by a wasp or bitten by an insect are greater than ever whether you are hiking in the backcountry or relaxing in the backyard.

"As summer winds down, many backyard insects begin to seek shelter indoors, dramatically increasing the chances of people getting bitten," said Isabella Losinger, a first aid coordinator with the Canadian Red Cross. "Insects like wasps nearing the end of their life-cycle become drowsy or aggressive, increasing the risk of getting stung."

In almost all cases, stings do cause some discomfort, but are not life-threatening. However, some people can develop a severe allergic reaction and go into anaphylactic shock, said Pamela Dithurbide, public health nurse in the Coast-Garibaldi health region. People often do not develop severe allergies until later in life, she said.

Fortunately there are simple measures that can be taken to reduce the chance of being bitten or stung:

- Don't leave food lying around outside.

- Don't leave sugary drinks and sweets exposed. Wash children's hands and faces after they have consumed sweet items.

- Avoid wearing brightly colored clothing.

- Keep doors and windows closed, or use screens.

- Make sure your home is clean, and check dark corners where insects may hide.

Should you get stung or bitten, the following first aid tips may help:

- If the stinger is still in the skin, remove it by scraping it away from the skin with a fingernail or plastic card. Do not use tweezers, because pressure can squeeze more poison into the skin.

- Wash the area with soap and water and cover to keep clean.

- Put ice or a cold pack over the area to reduce pain and swelling.

- Watch for signs and symptoms of an allergic reaction: light headedness; tingling and itching sensation all over the body; swelling on face, eyes, tongue; shortness of breath.

Anyone who is allergic to insect bites should seek emergency medical attention immediately, Dithurbide said. People who know they have severe allergies usually carry a bee sting kit, which may include adrenaline and antihistamines. Otherwise, just treat the wound and allow the healing action of time to work.

Eagle group issues apology about misinformation

By Al Price
Squamish Chief

The Brackendale Eagle Reserve Society has issued an apology for an error in its flyer which was distributed Saturday at the Brackendale Fall Fair.

The flyer claimed it was the society's efforts which resulted in the proposed Brackendale eagle reserve being short-listed by the provincial government under the protected areas strategy.

"That claim is not correct. In fact it was the efforts of dedicated individuals from the community, together with the assistance of the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society that resulted in the proposed eagle reserve being short-listed," said society president Carol Ann Berkley. "Only a very few of those people are members of the Brackendale Eagle Reserve Society," which was recently established for the purpose of continuing to promote the cause of the proposed eagle reserve, and to work to protect and preserve the eagles and their habitat over the long term.

"The Brackendale Eagle Reserve

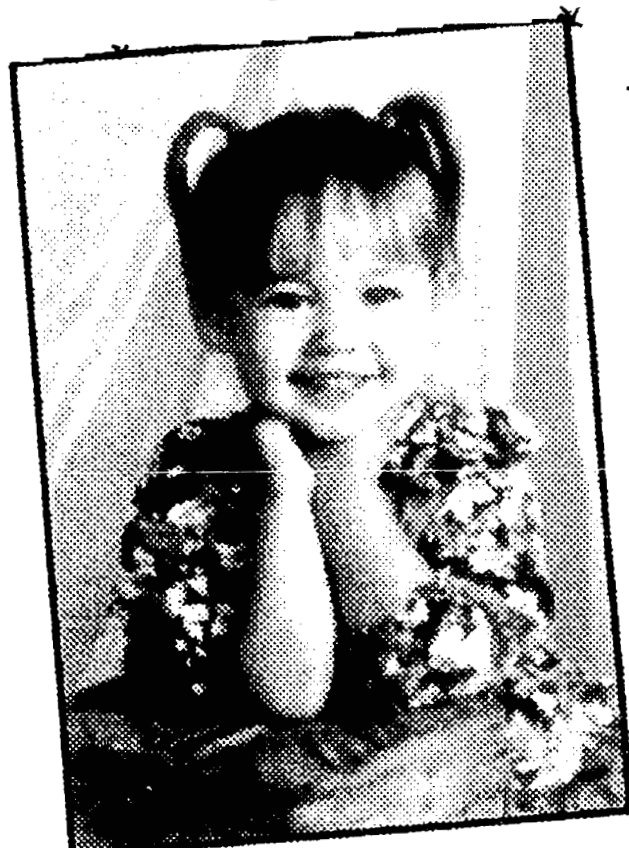

Society apologizes for the error and commends all of the individuals and groups for the efforts which have advanced the cause of the proposed eagle reserve."

Berkley said the group had a "tremendous response" at the fall fair, signing up many new members to the society, which is hoping to gain non-profit status.

"We want to make sure people know how important it is to protect this truly unique spot," said Berkley. Society efforts will focus on education through schools in Squamish, Canada and the United States.

Art auction funds diabetes workshops

By Al Price
Squamish Chief

Anyone who purchases the exciting local native art being auctioned at the Sea to Sky Hotel starting at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 20 will be helping the Squamish Nation tackle a serious problem head on.

Works by artists such as Rick Harry, as well as carving, pottery, beadwork and numerous other items will be under the gavel to raise funds for two workshops to help Squamish Nation members understand and begin to deal with the growing problem of diabetes.

"Diabetes is running rampant through our communities because of the changing diet," said Shirley Toman, who works with Squamish Nation elders.

"It's hitting everybody. Not too many children so far, but it seems like the older you get the easier it is to be getting this disease."

Toman, who is organizing the auction and workshops with Don John, says the two workshops for Squamish Nation members in October will try to raise awareness of the disease, what is causing it and how to deal with it.

"Our hope is to focus on the youth,"

Toman said. "We know if we have any chance at all of dealing with this problem in the future it has to start now. We want to make the young people aware they could have this problem, understand what the adults are going through with their diet change and medication, and how to deal with it."

One of the speakers at the seminar for Squamish Nation youths, to be held at Howe Sound Secondary School, is Kenn Whiteman of Pinnacle Youth Works in Port Alberni. He is experienced in teaching about diabetes and is a motivational speaker for young people. His partner will be Barbara King Hooper, a registered nurse and health and diabetes educational consultant from Vancouver.

The seminar entitled SEE-YI (friends) is being held at the school on a day when classes are in session so the estimated 45 Squamish Nation students will be able to attend easily. Toman said she is hoping the young people will spread the word, and ensure good attendance at both sessions. The adult workshop is being held at Totem Hall. Blood sugar testing will be done both days.

"We are hoping the problem has peaked, but I don't think so. This is something the elders thought would work."

Bugs invade Cap College video conferencing system

Distance education course launch delayed

By Mary Billy
Contributed to The Chief

New video conferencing and online equipment has finally been installed at the Squamish campus of Capilano College, however it came too late to allow courses planned for the fall semester to proceed.

The problem was not at the Squamish site but at the main campus in North Vancouver, said Peter Kellington, coordinator of the college's media resources department. A tentative date for the launch has been rescheduled for the spring term which begins in January.

However, Kellington suggested there may be some free marketing sessions organized by mid-fall, once the system is fine-tuned.

That process will be done with video conferencing headed by instructor Bill Inglis and staff at the Squamish, Sechelt and Lynnmore campuses. Team members can familiarize themselves with the technology, and plan to use it for staff meetings which previously required a lot of time and travel between campuses.

"After conferencing with staff we will decide what to run that will offer something the community wants and that the faculty are comfortable with. We want to let the excitement build and what people are available to do it," said Kellington.

He said it has been a "long and trying process." Initially the cost of transmission lines was prohibitive, however the college was eventually able to reach a compromise with B.C. Tel. Now they need time to get equipment installed and running satisfactorily.

"It will be a great addition to the accessibility of courses and programs that otherwise would not be available due to too few people to make up a class," said Kellington. "Normally, if only six people sign up for a course, it could very likely be cancelled."

With video-based teaching, the instructor doesn't have to travel, the cost of the class is kept down and the course would likely continue.

"Once we have our satellite dish in place, we will be able to receive video conferences from all over North America," he said.

Funds to establish the interactive video conferencing network were provided by B.C.'s Ministry of Skills, Training and Labor and from the Capilano College Foundation.

Woodfibre region's largest manufacturer

Western Pulp's Woodfibre pulp mill is the largest manufacturing plant in the region, employing more than 380 people. It began operations in 1912 and has remained a major employer in the area ever since.

The recent recovery of pulp and paper prices and reduction in supply resulted in steady employment and record shipments in the past few years.

Outward shipments in 1995 were down slightly from the previous year, but were still higher than the 10-year average.

Inputs for the pulp mill originate predominantly from Doman Industries' saw mill on Vancouver Island and its whole log chippers.

Kindree celebrates 75th birthday

Retirement not in the plans of Squamish's senior doctor

By Al Price
Squamish Chief

Dr. Laverne Kindree is happy to have reached the "ripe old age of 75," considering the alternative. The Squamish doctor, who for many years was the only doctor between Britannia Beach and Mount Currie, will be honored by his co-workers, friends and family Saturday, Sept. 14 at a 75th birthday celebration at the Sea to Sky Hotel ballroom.

Kindree was born Sept. 1, 1921 in Delisle, Sask.

He lived there through his early elementary school years, moved then to Tessier, Sask. where his father was a station agent for the CNR, and to Saskatoon where he finished high school.

Taking a year off school, Kindree studied telegraphy and worked as a telegrapher for CN.

He earned his bachelor of arts and pre-med degree at the University of Saskatchewan in 1945, and finished his medical degree at the University of Toronto two years later.

"I had been to the West Coast in 1939 with my family, and came to Vancouver to do a year of internship at St. Paul's," Kindree said.

"I thought a year out here would be a good test to see if I liked it."

During that year, he learned the small community of Squamish needed a doctor. He arrived by Canadian Steamship, and has been practising medicine here ever since.

He and his wife Norma were married before they came to Squamish, and set up housekeeping here as part of their honeymoon.

Their five children, Sharon, John, Pianne, Paul and David were raised here, but all were born at St. Paul's in Vancouver.

"They didn't have a hospital here for our years after I got here, and I was the only doctor for eight years. You don't take on your wife as an obstetric patient, so they were all born in Vancouver."

For the first four years, when not being doctor, the thrust of Kindree's effort was to have a hospital built. That was accomplished in 1952, and a short time later Kindree experienced the polio epidemic which swept through the community.

"Squamish was isolated, so I could watch it spread to the next group of patients and the next. I got to see how an epidemic spreads through a community."

For the first 20-25 years of his practice, Kindree looked after Pemberton and Mount Currie patients as well as those in Squamish. He remembers it as an enjoyable experience, meeting all the people and getting to know the country well. He also took on the medical duties for Britannia Beach prior to the closure of the mine.

"I see this past week the old building by the bridge which was used as the clinic is being torn down. It sat empty for a long time."

Another major milestone was the construction of Hilltop House intermediate care facility, and then the new acute care hospital.

Since he began, Kindree estimates he has delivered 2,500 to 3,000 babies in the corridor, though exact records have not been kept.

And he has seen major changes in medical practices and the health care delivery system. When Kindree started out, all medical care was paid for by the patients. Then MSA set up the first prepaid medical insurance system. Credit unions copied that system, and finally the provincial government took over with Medicare, and expanded the services.

And in addition to his medical pursuits, Kindree has been involved in the community in many other ways, serving the Boy Scouts, on council, for many years as a member of the chamber of commerce, Rotary, and other groups.

He is now president of the newly formed Squamish Health Care Foundation, and feels he has come full circle.

"When I first came here the big chore was to get a hospital. Hanna McCormack, who is now at Hilltop House, was the driving spirit on the committee to do that. Now the foundation is trying to fill the gap of failed government funding for capital needs for the hospital, so it feels like coming full circle in once again looking to the community for support for the hospital."

Kindree said he feels fortunate to have reached the age of 75 in a "relative degree" of good health while still being able to enjoy working in the community and spending time with his family.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed doing general family practice in Squamish. Squamish is very much home for me. I have never wanted to be anywhere else. My wife and I are happy to have lived, raised our family, and will retire here."

But retirement is not in the cards while Kindree's health holds up.

Those wishing to help Dr. Laverne Kindree celebrate his 75th birthday can purchase tickets for the party for $30 at the reception desk of Squamish General Hospital.

Cocktails at the Sea to Sky Hotel are from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m., dinner from 7-9 p.m., and dancing to the music of Dr. D and The Soul Demons carries on until 1 a.m.

COMMUNITY

Hilltop House welcomes contributions

The Sea to Sky Singers begin a new season tonight with registration for returning members at 6:30 p.m. in the Squamish Pentecostal Church. I believe there is still time for new members to join the choir but a voice placement interview is required. For information contact Peg Tinney at 898-5260 or Murray Purdie at 898-4266.

Oct. 5 is the annual Hilltop House Harvest Tea, bazaar, and raffle. Contributions of homemade crafts and items for the bake table will be most welcome. Please give Ruth a call at 898-3368 if you are able to contribute anything. Members of the Hilltop House support group will be selling raffle tickets at Highlands Mall Sept. 13 and Save-On-Foods Sept. 14 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

Anyone interested in attending Dr. Laverne Kindree's 75th birthday celebration on Sept. 14 at the Sea to Sky Hotel ballroom is asked to purchase tickets at the reception desk at Squamish General Hospital at $30.

Journey of Hope is a free, comprehensive 12-week course specifically designed for families of persons with major depression, bi-polar illness or schizophrenia. It begins Monday, Sept. 16. To register or for further information, call 892-5796 (days) or 898-9794 (evenings).

Women's studies will include great discussions, guest speakers and films all focused on a variety of women's issues. The first session begins on Sept. 16 at Howe Sound Women's Centre with a morning class from 9:30 a.m.-11:30 a.m. and possibly an evening class depending on numbers. Cost is $40 and six seats have been donated by local businesses and the women's centre to ensure access for those on low income, and there are still a few left. Facilitator Mary Billy says it's important to call and register, at 892-5723 (or 892-5748 between noon and 4 p.m. at the women's centre) as she is willing to change the day if it will more easily accommodate those who would like to attend.

The Sea to Sky Youth Choir held its registration and first rehearsal Monday. There is still space in both the junior choir (grades 2-5) and the senior choir (grades 6-10) for enthusiastic singers. The highlight of the fall-winter season will be the spectacular musical Once Upon A Christmas performed with the Sea to Sky Singers Dec. 18 in the Brennan Park Leisure Centre.

Congratulations to Tag and Monita Neighbor on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary. They were married in Jasper, Alta. on Sept. 2, 1946. A celebration was hosted by their sons and spouses, Bruce and Lois of Squamish and Ted and Caroline of Vancouver. Family and friends came from the Lower Mainland, Salmon Arm, Kamloops and Squamish.

On August 24, the Harbins held their house warming party to celebrate their new house and return to Squamish after a two-year stay in San Diego. Guests were family, friends and new neighbors from Squamish, Vancouver and Washington. The Harbins are thrilled to be back in the community. Daniela is eager to get a local ITC (speaker's club) going again and if you are interested, call her at 898-2581. The Harbins extend a heartfelt thank you to all their friends for the gifts and warm welcome back.

Saturday, Sept. 14, David Neville celebrates his first birthday.

A casting call has been issued by Howe Sound Players. Actors and actresses are required for the upcoming Christmas production. The theatre group is looking for men and women between the ages of 19 and 70. Children and teenagers are required as well. Auditions will be held Thursday, Sept. 12 at 7 p.m. and Sunday, Sept. 15 at 3 p.m. at 1010 Centennial Way. Anyone interested in the production side is also welcome to attend. For more information call 898-3332.

HOROSCOPE

By C.C. Clark - eTVData Features Syndicate

September 8 through September 14, 1996

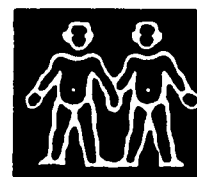

Aries (March 21 - April 20)

You know what must be done with matters of the heart; now do it. Make plans now to take some time to rest and relax.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20)

You are walking on shaky ground, and it isn't easy. Be prepared to accept the many changes coming your way.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)

You will have an opportunity to learn a new skill, or a new job will be presented. Get ready to take charge of the task at hand.

Cancer (June 21 - July 20)

Swift changes are on the way, and you must sit back and go with the flow. Out of the ashes rises the phoenix.

Leo (July 21 - Aug. 21)

Things may not be going well on the domestic front. Too many responsibilities may make it impossible to do them all well. It's time to prioritize.

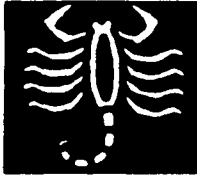

Virgo (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22)

You may feel as though your hands are tied when making a major decision. Take a closer look at the situation. All may not be what it seems.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)

There is a need for spiritual fulfillment. Too much of your life is based on material gains. Take notice of the many gifts around you.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 22)

This is no time to make foolish choices where finances and family are concerned. Responsibilities weigh heavy.

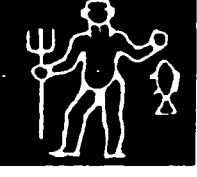

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 - Dec. 20)

You may be experiencing some edginess and anxiety over a recent turn of events. An objective viewpoint is needed.

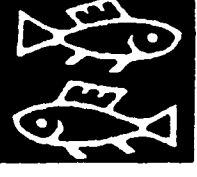

Capricorn (Dec. 21 - Jan. 19)

A medical problem should be taken care of as soon as possible. Depression due to illness may cloud your perspective.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)

Taking the easy way out of a difficult situation is not advised. The alternative will be more productive in the long run.

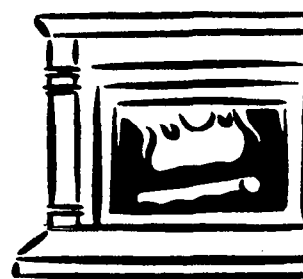

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20)

Spiritual guidance is needed now. Do not allow your pride to prevent you from asking for help when you need it.

Darts & Daffodils

Want to say thanks and make sure everyone knows why? Or maybe offer a little constructive criticism without confrontation? Send your Dart or Daffodil to The Editor, The Squamish Chief, Box 3500, Squamish, B.C. V0N 3G0 or drop it off at our office at 38113 Second Avenue, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. You can also fax your message to 892-8483 or e-mail to: sqchief@mountain-inter.net.

An Indy carload of daffodils to B.J. Doyle and Mountain FM for demonstrating their support of Squamish youth by raising $200 for our Youth in Action Committee.

This isn't a dart or daffodil, but we would like to apologize to our neighbors for our noisy Friday night. We were a little loud and we are sorry. There was only four of us and we were having a little too much fun, I guess. No hard feelings for the unexpected visitor we had and we hope our "singing" and "backup music" hasn't left too bad of a taste. Please accept our apology.

A hospital full of daffodils to all my friends and family for all the flowers, gifts and cards I received while in Lions Gate Hospital. A special bouquet of daffodils to my daughter-in-law Jan, for all her caring and concern. Evelyn Dawson.

A huge bouquet of daffodils to Sherri Lee and Laura Wirachowsky of Howe Sound Business Centre. Working for you over the last two years has been an excellent experience and very enjoyable. Having your sponsorship in the Miss Squamish Youth Ambassador Pageant was an honor and I hope I made you proud. Thanks for the flexible schedule during the pageant and for your encouraging words and support. Love, Jodi Lewis.

An Olympic size pool full of daffodils from the Squamish aquatic staff to everyone who made our summer enjoyable. A pool size thank you.

1959 T-Birds full of daffodils to the Lions Club for its efforts to raise money for community projects.

A signal light full of darts to the rude woman who honked at me for not using mine. You should go back to driving school if you don't know that someone's left arm straight out means they're turning left. I hope I didn't make you late by having to wait the extra two seconds to turn.

A bicycle helmet full of daffodils to ambulance drivers Larry and Mike for their prompt and excellent care. More daffodils to Cheryl and her neighbors on Montrose for their quick action and concern when Ryan crashed. Thank you from Ryan and his family.

Darts to the individual who vandalized our bird bath statue which has been in front of our house for the last 30 years. It is of no value to anyone, because it is broken just above the legs. I'd like to have it back so I can repair it. If you have a conscience at all, please return it.

A fall fair field of daffodils to Kathleen Brennan and Nick Candy. Without your support and hard work we could not have pulled off the fair. Thank you to all the Brennan family for the use of your farm. Thanks again from your partner in crime, Trish Scott.

A birthday cake decorated with daffodils to Wendy Magee for giving up her cake at Tim Horton's in August to the lady with the van full of birthday party kids. It was greatly appreciated.

Anderson Lake full of daffodils to Cal and Kim Hartnell, Bob Meredith and to anyone else who helped us all during our end of summer hurricane disaster at the Red Barn Campground. Your kindness and help will not be forgotten. Greatly appreciated from the Spreckers, DeCooks and Kostiuks.

A truck full of daffodils to Steven Munro of Squamish Terminals for his emotional and financial support of the Journey of Hope. Gas money was greatly appreciated. Thanks. Brenda.

A bank machine full of daffodils to the honest individual who turned in the cash I foolishly left at the ATM at the Sea to Sky Town Pantry. The honesty and integrity of the young people employed there is to be highly commended.

Eight lb. 12 oz. of daffodils to Dr. Cudmore and all the nurses at Squamish General Hospital. And a very quick taxi ride of daffodils to Lori at Aaron Cabs for getting us to the hospital in time. Thanks for everything from Crystal and new baby Marcy.

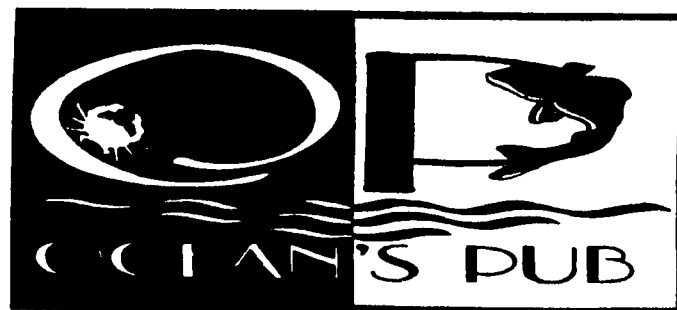

A huge bunch of daffodils to Fawn, the DJ at the Cliffside Pub. You're doing a great job. It's great to have a DJ who plays the songs requested by the patrons.

The continent of Australia covered in daffodils for Save-On-Foods and their support of our fund-raising. Without their support, the community of Squamish could not have shown its generosity so well. It is great to be part of such a supportive community. Everyone who purchased hot dogs or donated to our sale shall not be forgotten. Thank you.

A trailer full of daffodils to Ted and Pat Craddock for the use of your trailer. Our camping trip was wonderful thanks to you both.

Recycled containers of daffodils to the teachers and pupils of Valleycliffe Elementary School for starting the school year with the three Rs, reduce, reuse and recycle. You are doing a great job. Thanks from Recycleman and Recyclemom.

Bunches of baby daffodils to Auntie Sheryl for all the support and hand holding she gave my mom before and during my entry into this world. I'm so glad you were there for my arrival. Lifelong love from your nephew Cory James.

Supported employment helps mentally challenged

By Al Price
Squamish Chief

Mentally challenged individuals are traditionally considered to be unable to work at regular jobs. That is simply not true, says Bonnie Menhinick, interim manager of the Squamish supported employment program which is funded by the Ministry of Social Services and operated through Sea to Sky Community Services. She has shining examples to prove her point.

Several of her clients are currently working at McDonald's, Tim Hortons, Panagopoulos Pizza and the Midway restaurant at the Sea to Sky Hotel, doing such things as washing dishes and cleaning tables.

"The training may take a while, but you can depend on these people," said Menhinick.

"They are all quite highly functioning, and they usually get to work early. They are really enthusiastic."

The program is based on the belief that people labeled mentally challenged, with specific training and support, are fully capable of participating as employees and business and industry in the community. Employment helps them develop social contacts with co-workers and increase their self-esteem, as well as earn improved wages.

Each person in the program goes through their own assessment process, and Menhinick attempts to match the person's skills with what each job requires. The employer, employee and Menhinick work together to provide on-the-job training at the work site, and ongoing contact with the employee is maintained to ensure there is always a level of support.

"I want to make the community aware of this program and let them know people in the program can do a lot of things," she said. "This community has been really accepting of our people. Squamish is a good town for that."

Employers who would like to become involved in the program or know someone who would benefit from supported employment are invited to contact Menhinick at Sea to Sky Community Services at 892-5796.

Squamish piano students shine in Royal Conservatory testing

By Al Price
Squamish Chief

Squamish piano students came through with flying colors when they were tested by the Royal Conservatory of Music here in May.

Four students earned first class honors, including Katherine Anne Baumann in Grade 3 piano, Jennifer Galloway and Sarah Kristina Wilson in Grade 2 piano and Helen Jarvis in Grade 1 piano.

Others results included: Katrin Rutishauser, honors Grade 8 piano; Carina Lee, honors Grade 7 piano; Virginnia Bouwman and Katrin Klausner, honors Grade 6 piano; Melissa Rose Ayearst, Cheryl Caldwell and James Kirkham, honors Grade 4 piano; Nella Rita Amenta, Mathew Adrian Rutishauser, Meghan Louise Doyle, Leah Toews and Frances Reilly honors, and Tracey Strom pass in Grade 3 piano; Leanne Lam, Katrina-Marie Low and Adam Quiring honors Grade 2 piano; Skai Edwards and Lisa Lam honors and Nicola Toews pass in Grade 1 piano.

Joanna Schwarz of the Howe Sound Performing Arts Association, which coordinated the exams, said first class honor marks range from 80-100 (the top students are awarded gold medals), honors from 70-80 and pass from 60-70.

"People should know that honors is a very honorable mark," Schwarz said. "Especially when you realize the national average is in the high 70s. These are good results."

Schwarz will be coordinating the spring session again next year, so Squamish piano students don't have to go to Vancouver for testing. Anyone wanting application forms or more information can contact her at 898-5503.

Gorgonzola a great cheese for many Italian dishes

Gorgonzola. It sounds like the beast from a terrible horror movie. For some people it's about as scary. You have to love blue-veined cheeses to appreciate Gorgonzola. It is one of Italy's great cheeses, named after the town of Gorgonzola, near Milan. At one time cows wintered here, after grazing on alpine slopes. This is the great dairy region of Italy. Lavish amounts of butter, cream and cheese go into the dishes from Lombardy.

Gorgonzola is one of the sharpest tasting blue-veined cheeses.

When buying a piece, look for lots of veins that contrast nicely with the cheese. Near the rind, the cheese should not be grayish-brown or hard and crumbly. It should be soft to the touch. The flavor should be sharp but never bitter.

Always taste before buying.

Blue-veined cheeses are difficult to store. Buy only enough to use up within a few days. Store it loosely wrapped in waxed paper in the fridge. Bring to room temperature before serving.

Cheese, fruit and bread bring an Italian meal to a natural close.

Few pleasures rival the simple, universal combination of cheese and good crusty bread. It's the best way to serve a fine piece of Gorgonzola. Then again, creamy, piquant Gorgonzola sauce is particularly happy with potato gnocchi.

Potato Gnocchi with Gorgonzola Sauce

for the gnocchi (dumplings):

2 1/2 lb. baking type potatoes (about 4 or 5 large)
2 egg yolks
1/2 tsp. salt

1 Tbsp. butter

2 cups (more or less) all-purpose flour

for the sauce:

1 1/2 cups whipping cream

3/4 cup crumbled Gorgonzola

1/4 cup freshly grated Parmesan

For the dumplings: Bake the potatoes until tender.

Cool until warm, scoop out the insides. Mash the potatoes until smooth. Add the egg yolks, salt and butter.

Beat in one cup of the flour. Turn the dough onto a well-floured surface and knead in more flour. Some potatoes take more flour than others, so it's best not to add it all at once. Stop adding flour when the dough is soft, smooth and slightly sticky.

Shape into sausage-like rolls as thick as your thumb. Cut the rolls into 3/4 inch pieces.

Keep the gnocchi, your hands and the work surface well-floured. Either pinch the centre of each dumpling to form a depression (so it cooks more evenly) or roll down the tines of a fork to form grooves (they catch the sauce).

This is done by pressing each dumpling against the inside curve of the fork (with one finger) and flicking down the tines, towards the handle.

Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Drop about 2 dozen dumplings into the water. When they float to the surface, let them cook for another 10 seconds or so. Remove them with a slotted spoon to a clean dry cloth to drain while the other dumplings cook. Transfer the drained gnocchi to a deep, warm platter. Pour the sauce over them and serve. Makes 4 servings.

For the sauce: Bring the cream to a boil in heavy saucepan. Boil until slightly thickened, a few minutes. Stir in the Gorgonzola, until melted. Season with freshly ground black pepper. Pour over gnocchi and sprinkle with Parmesan.

If Gorgonzola is too strong for your tastes, perhaps the hybrid Cambozola will do. This cheese is a layer of mild Camembert cheese. The combination is creamy and much more gentle tasting. It works well as a topping for beef steak.

Cambozola Sauce for Steak

2 beef tenderloin or New York steaks about 4 oz. Cambozola cheese, cut into small pieces

1 clove garlic, minced

minced white part of a green onion

2/3 cup beef stock

1/4 cup brandy

1 Tbsp. chopped fresh rosemary

Either pan-fry or grill the steaks on a barbecue. Keep warm in the oven while the sauce is made. If pan-fried use the pan drippings. Otherwise add about 2 Tbsp. butter to a skillet.

Fry the garlic and onion until soft, but not browned. Pour in the brandy and boil down to almost a glaze.

Add the beef stock and reduce by at least half. Season to taste with salt and a few grinds of black pepper.

Sprinkle the cheese over top of the steaks. Pour the sauce over the steaks and serve at once.

Many ways to beat the lunchbag blues

Like it or not, we as parents are the ultimate gatekeepers of our children's nutrition. What we buy, how we cook, the foods we eat and refuse — these behaviors send messages about food to our kids.

The food companies are pros when it comes to marketing low nutrients to kids. With their buying power, the top purchases of children include heavily advertised gum, candy, soft drinks, salty snacks and fast food.

As Connie Evers, from Carrot Press states: "We parents and teachers can work to minimize the effects of food advertising. Exploring the motives behind the messages and voicing opinions to food companies and television networks are starting points in fighting this uphill battle."

Most important, the food available to children must match the message they are hearing. Whether at home, school, the park or a restaurant, healthful choices that appeal to kids are essential.

It is our responsibility to select and buy nourishing food that our kids will eat.

Forget bean dip if friends are going to make fun of it or sprouts if they don't like them. The child's responsibility is to choose how much and whether to eat or not. Working together in planning choices usually takes care of this.

Try soft encouragement such as pointing out "cool" foods, suggesting they help themselves to whatever is in the fridge, or offering to share what you are eating.

Kids don't get proficient at playing the piano, solving logic problems or scoring soccer goals without practice.

The same is true of healthy food choices.

Pitza Pockets

Cut a pita pocket in half and fill with any or all of the following:

Tuna salad, lean chicken or turkey, cheese, peanut butter and banana, tomato slice, leafy lettuce, sprouts, grated carrot, chopped cabbage, cucumber rings, mustard, homemade mayo, relish, devilled egg.

Youngsters enjoying school again

The TV commercial showing the father floating down the aisles of the supermarket, picking up school supplies and singing, "It's the most wonderful time of the year" hasn't got it quite right. It shows his son and daughter standing with long faces by the shopping cart, failing to share his exuberance over summer coming to an end. From what I saw last Tuesday morning, that is far from being the truth of the matter.

In the elementary schools at least, mothers said their youngsters had been counting the days until school would re-open. They wanted to get back with all their friends again and have some new and interesting things to do. For the youngest, the first day back marked a real step up from babyhood. Going from kindergarten to Grade 1 made them genuine students, and they were strutting their stuff for younger siblings who had come to witness this momentous occasion.

Squamish Elementary School

In Ms. Rourke's class at Squamish elementary, last year's kindergarten children were spending one final day in her room before moving up to the next level.

One little girl was being very practical. She had clearly decided if this was to be her final day in this exciting room, she was going to make the most of its amenities.

Completely ignoring everybody else, she had set herself a place at the little table in the play kitchen and was getting toy food out of the refrigerator. She put down a plate of realistic looking bacon and eggs before going back to fetch the toast. A teapot and a vase of flowers were already on the table, so she was all ready for a delightful breakfast. The two months of summer had certainly not dimmed her memory of where everything is kept and how it should be used.

First Day of High School

The first day for Grade 8 students at Howe Sound Secondary School was a little different. From having had a year of glory as seniors in their elementary school, they have now become the juniors in high school. The ones in Ms. McLaughlin's English class did not look unduly dismayed at the prospect. They already had their noses deep in a novel and had been promised the treat of a spelling test the next day.

Stawamus Elementary School

Back at the elementary school level, fresh students have stepped into the shoes of the former Grade 7s and are all set to take over. At Stawamus, this includes manning the office telephone during the lunch break – only it was a bevy of young women who were taking on that responsibility last week. They were taking and relaying messages most efficiently and getting valuable experience.

Valleycliffe Elementary School

On opening day, parents with babes-in-arms and tiny tots in strollers had brought their Grade 1 beginners to Valleycliffe, and had taken the opportunity to get re-acquainted over coffee and cookies in the library. It was a lively social occasion, with the exchange of news and views, and envious four-year-olds taking in all the wonders they will have to wait to experience. At least they could look along the book shelves and share some picture books.

In Ms. Booth's classroom they got to share something even more exciting – pet mice. Ms. Booth lifted the tiny creatures out of their cages and let a "mature" Grade 3 student hold each one for a few moments to be admired by younger brothers and sisters. She reminded students they must always wash their hands thoroughly after handling mice.

Brackendale Elementary School

A beautiful new building just smells exciting and adds to the challenge for the intermediate students, but it can be a bit overwhelming for a small person who has only recently finished kindergarten. Lucas was upset and a bit teary when he went to his old classroom and found it occupied by people he didn't know. Luckily, his sister, Désirée, was checking on him and we finally got him safely delivered to the right place.

Garibaldi Highlands Elementary

The new classrooms at Garibaldi Highlands Elementary School are now in use and becoming familiar to the students. It was well worth the upset of construction to have these bright areas to work in. Enrolment is a bit higher than expected but not to such an extent as at Brackendale elementary.

Mamquam – L'École Francophone

The French school has started up at Mamquam in a portable. Mlle. McElwain has 14 students, ranging in age from kindergarten to Grade 4, and all are encouraged to speak French almost exclusively. When I first met the students, they were being given a tour of the school, since they have come to Mamquam from the other elementary schools.

Brackendale Secondary School

Mr. Croft is glad to be back at BSS again and is looking forward to working with his staff, several of whom are new this year, to get all the programs up and running successfully.

We look all set for a good year – even if we are bulging at the seams in places – and growth is what education is all about.

Foul ball weather didn't stop the B.C. Provincial Slo-pitch Championships from being a success

Saturday's soggy weather didn't deter participants in the Squamish-hosted 1996 B.C. Provincial Slo-pitch Championships from giving their all in the tournament.

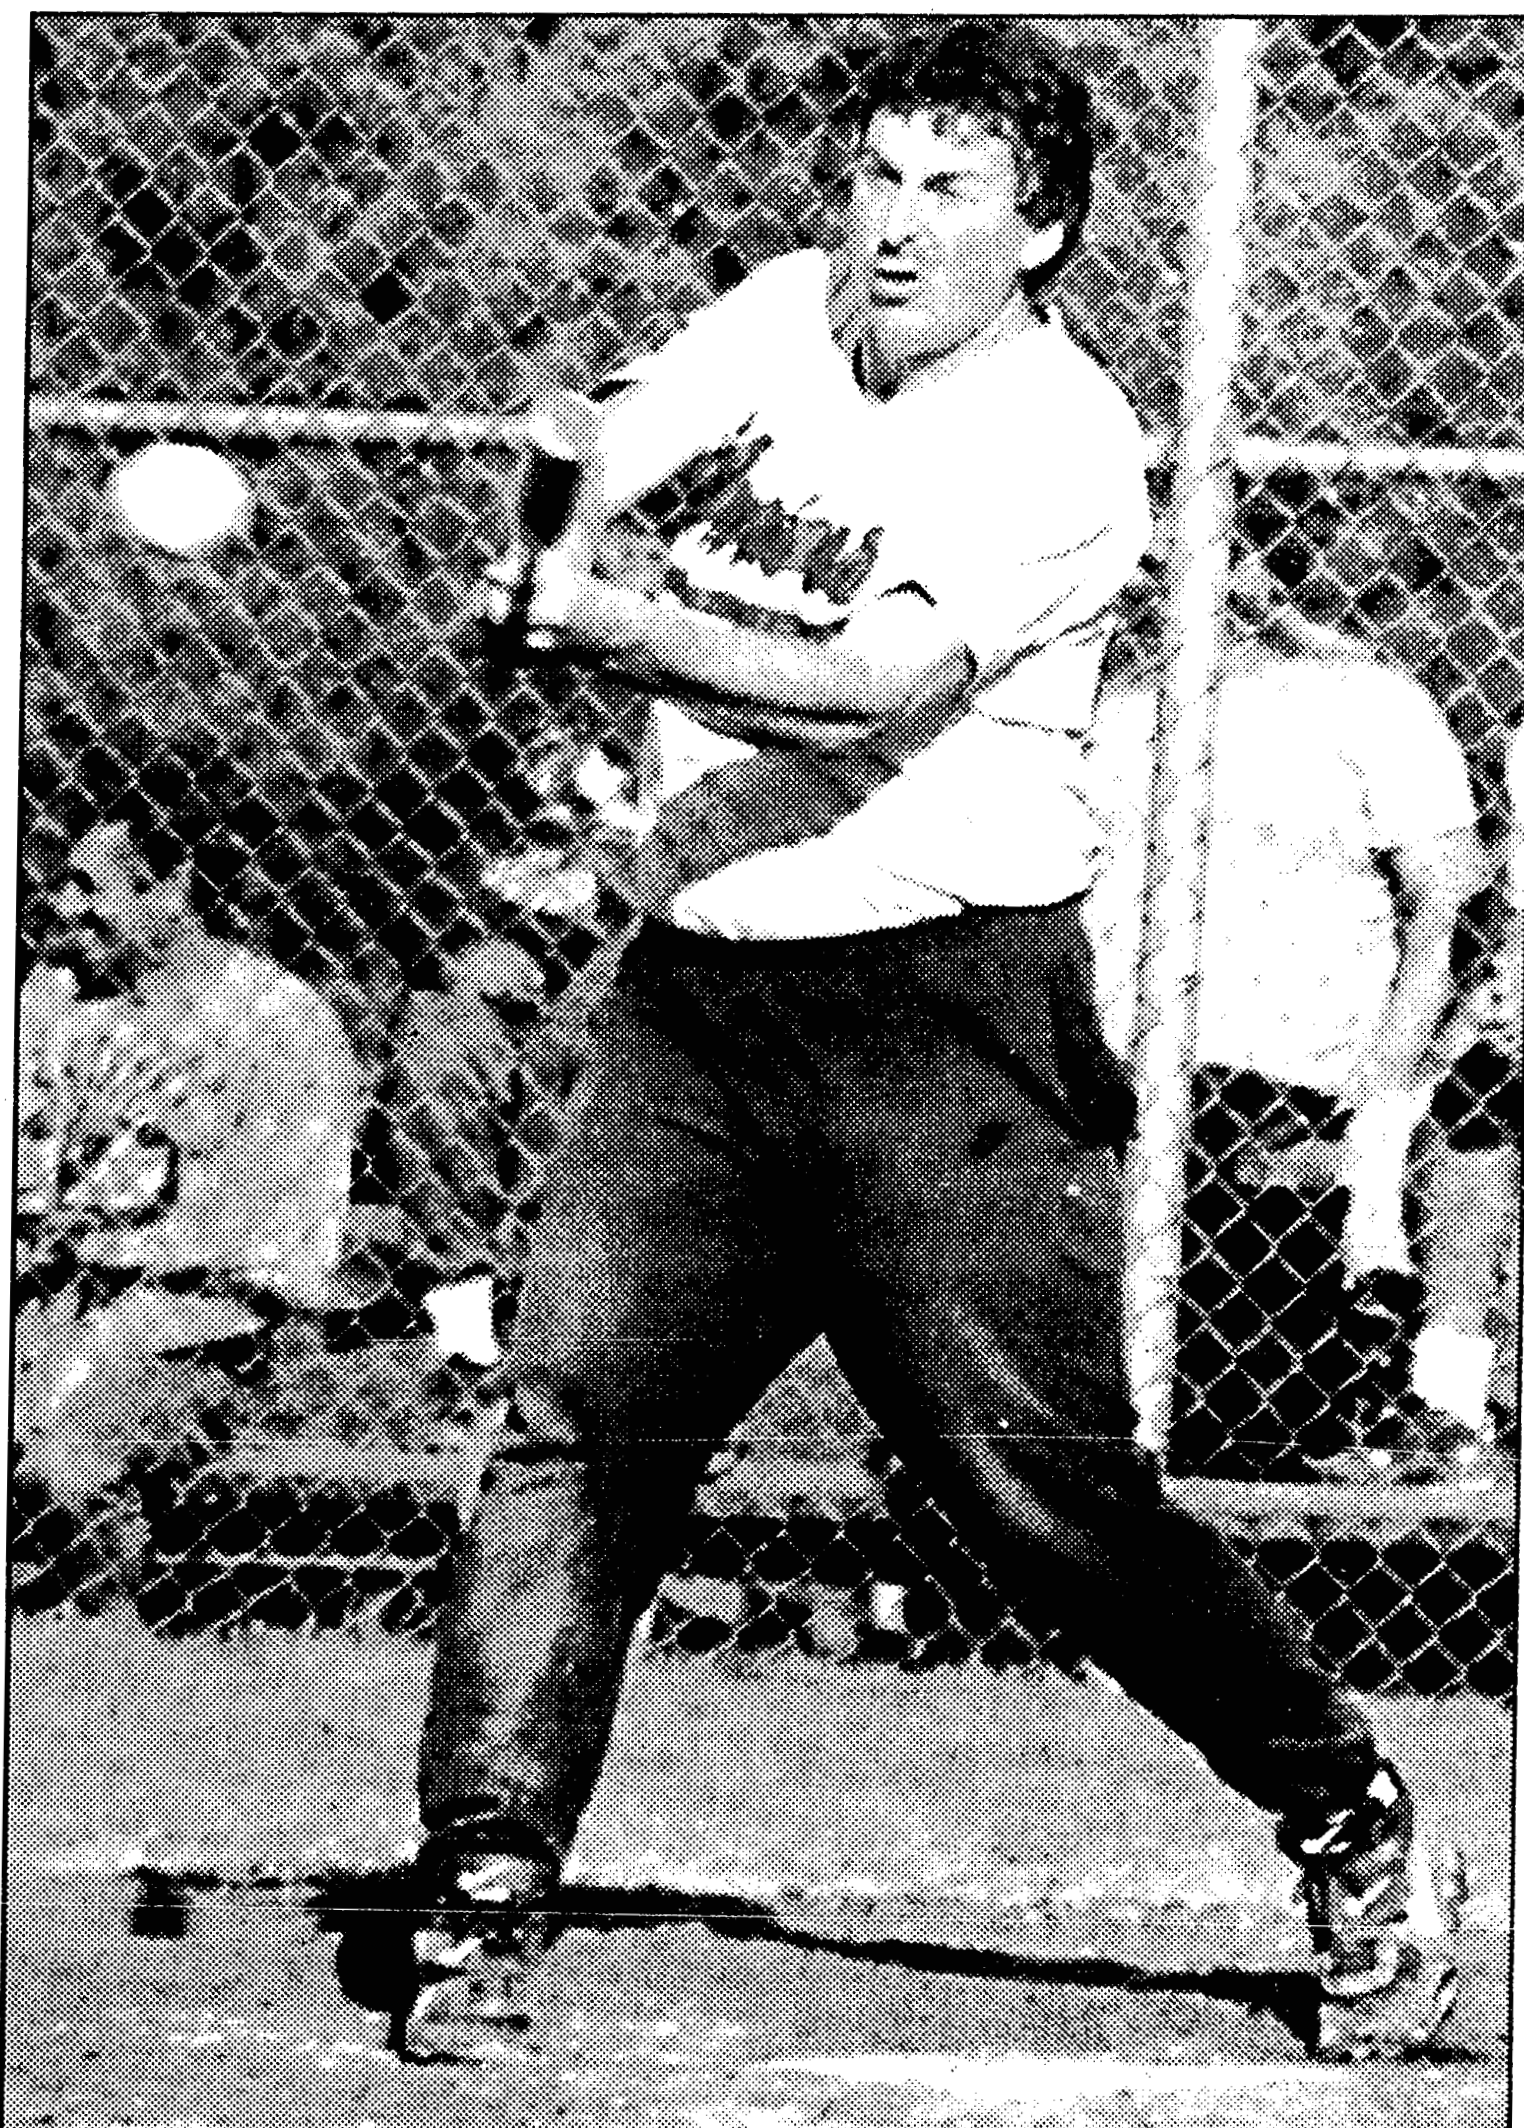

Twenty co-ed C teams and 35 co-ed D teams, including six from Squamish, came to Centennial Field from all over the province for the contest last weekend.

Bad Company beat the Rockies 4-2 to win the D finals, Katz and Dawgs was third and the Warriors was fourth.

SPS Athletics was first in the C final, beating Cheers 5-2. The Burnaby Athletics was third, followed by the Pilots.

The Squamish Nation Wild Ones came closest to the top, finishing first in its division with three wins, no losses and one tie, but was knocked by the Warriors in the first round of single-knockout playoffs. This could qualify the Wild Ones to play in the nationals next season.

Mountain Building Centres finished third in its division with a win, two losses and a tie. The Squamish Elks was fourth in its division with the same record. Eagle Run Motors and Bush Rats were fourth in their divisions, both with a one win, three loss record, and Smillie's Hammers was fifth in its division with no wins and four losses.

An evening of extreme stories and sights awaits those who attend Sea to Sky Kayaking School's Whitewater Night at the Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company Sept. 28.

There is room for up to 120 to attend this event, launching the new maintenance fund for the Mamquam River Kayaking Site. The evening is hosted by Don Jamieson, co-founder of the Sea to Sky Kayaking School, and will feature special guests Margaret Langford and Kevin Henderson.

Langford is an Olympic kayaker from Lions Bay who periodically trains at the Mamquam site and the current Canadian national champion. She will be showing video footage from this year's Olympic competition at the Ocoee River in Tennessee.

Whitewater kayaking is an exciting sport to watch as racers attempt to travel through rapids and around the race gates in the shortest time. Videos of extreme whitewater kayaking with huge drops and gigantic rapids will also be shown.

Henderson is a former STSKS student and one of Canada's top playboaters who recently placed in the top 10 in the Pre-World Playboating Rodeo competition in Ottawa. He will show a video presentation on freestyle paddling techniques.

Using specially designed boats, playboaters perform freestyle acrobatics in hydraulic holes. Rodeos allow limited time periods, such as 60 seconds, to perform these acrobatic tricks.

Event coordinator Aenea Cameron says the evening will be fun for both kayakers and those who have never taken up a paddle.

"It's going to be very entertaining — especially playboating — they're doing amazing acrobatics.

"The other aspect is meeting and listening to an actual Olympian. There are not that many of us who have met a 1996 Olympian."

Free appetizers and cash bar service await those who attend the show beginning at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 28 at the Howe Sound Inn. Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door. Advance tickets can be purchased at the Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company and the Sea to Sky Kayaking School, and a portion of each ticket sale will be donated to the new maintenance fund for the Mamquam River Site.

Olympic kayaker Margaret Langford often trains on the Mamquam River. She will give a presentation at Whitewater Night.

Mamquam kayaking site maintenance fund will ensure future for competitive paddlers

By David Donaldson
Squamish Chief

The new maintenance fund for the Mamquam River Kayaking Site is being launched by Paula and Don Jamieson, owners of the Sea to Sky Kayaking School, and their Kayaddicts Kayaking club.

The site was originally developed, maintained and financed by the Jamiesons, and money raised from the ticket sales for Whitewater Night at the Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company Sept. 28 will start the fund.

"The fund is to raise money for the continued development of the roadway, race gates and trails in the area of the race site," says Don Jamieson.

The site was developed "for the benefit of kayakers and racers in the Lower Mainland and the Sea to Sky area...and mostly what it is for is a development site for junior kayakers who will be our future Olympians and national team members."

The course is used periodically as a training site for members of the national kayaking team, Olympic kayaker Margaret Langford, and North Vancouver's Nathan Davis, who Jamieson says is a "hopeful Olympian for Canada."

The site includes a whitewater playboating area, a whitewater training area, a put-in for recreational paddlers and a slalom kayak racing facility with race gates, trails and river access. Building and maintaining the site has included disposing of litter, building and maintaining trails, building and repairing race gates and removing hazardous obstacles such as trees and debris from the river.

The location is used extensively by elite and recreational kayakers because of its unique characteristics for training and playboating, ease of access and proximity to Vancouver, Squamish and Whistler. The Sea to Sky Kayaking School organizes and conducts provincial qualifying and recreational kayak races at the site every spring and fall, drawing racers from Canada and the United States.

The first projects to be financed by the fund will be to finish the road to the area and install proper drainage. Jamieson says maintenance of the race course will be a continual cost. Race gates get caught in high water and pulled down by errant fishing lines, and the course can get clogged with wood debris.

Money earned from provincial qualifying races and the annual spring and Fall Classic races (this year's Fall Classic is Oct. 19-20) will go towards keeping the site at a high quality and level of use, ensuring its prominence as a provincial training and competitive race location.

Scorpions take top spots in tournament

By David Donaldson
Squamish Chief

The Squamish Scorpions soccer teams were only formed this year and are already stealing top honors from Vancouver teams.

The Scorpions travelled to Lynn Valley for the Lions Gate Invitational tournament Labor Day weekend where the under 13 team won the silver medal and the under 15 team took the gold.

Coach Richard Dawson said both teams "played absolutely excellent. There was a lot of team spirit."

The under 13 team won all its games but the second, losing 1-0, due only to the opposition's exceptional goalkeeper, Dawson said. Their first game was won 10-1, the third game 6-1 and the fourth 10-1.

The under 15 team won all its games in the tournament, hosted by the Lynn Valley team which went out of its way to make exceptions for the Scorpions' travel schedule.

Last weekend the under 13 Scorpions went on to defeat the Kerrisdale Cougars 6-0 in Vancouver, while the under 15 team was trounced 6-1 playing in the upper gold division against Cliff Avenue at Burnaby Lake Park.

Dawson says the under 15 Scorpions is really a silver division team but there was no room and it had to be placed in gold. After a five-game evaluation, the team may be moved to silver with a rearranged schedule.

The Squamish Scorpions garbage-athon and hot dog sale fund raisers were a huge success. Dawson reports in one day the players picked up 49 bags of garbage near Super-Valu and 66 near Save-On-Foods. Most of the garbage was non-recyclable items such as fast food containers.

"There was nowhere in Squamish where garbage was not to be found," he said, thanking the community for its support.

The Scorpions will have home game this Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

Axemen rugby club has successful try in third division

The newly promoted Squamish Axemen Rugby Football Club played its first game in the Vancouver Rugby Union's third division against Vancouver Meraloma last weekend suffering a narrow defeat 35-27 at Connaught Park.

Third division play requires higher technical skills and level of fitness, and the sanctioned referees demand cleaner play than fourth division, where the Axemen played last year. This year's team is made up of both veterans and newcomers to the game.

Squamish stormed out at the beginning of the first half, punching the ball down the field with John Kearns finishing the run off with a 10-metre jaunt for an unconverted try.

This woke up Meraloma and for the rest of the half the Vancouver team stepped up its play a notch, scoring three tries (one converted) and two penalty kicks, the only penalty points they got directly. However penalties proved a problem for Squamish and the first half ended at 23-5 for Vancouver.

Meraloma eluded the Squamish defence on a long run, scoring another try at the beginning of the second half. At this point the Squamish forwards bore down and began to take control.

Squamish stole the ball against the head (from Meraloma's possession in the scrum) on the five-metre line and George Lewis picked up the ball, turning it upfield for the first of four consecutive Squamish tries.

Peter Frisk, later named man of the match, also scored his first try off a set and his next came a minute later when the Vancouver flyhalf sent the ball directly to Frisk on a kick which he returned 40 metres, bringing the score up to 28-22.

Towards the end of the second half, Brian Buchholz scored the last Squamish try (unconverted) to bring the score to 28-27. Meraloma added another try after a five-minute converted goalstand by the Axemen to make the final score 35-27 for Vancouver.

The narrow defeat was "an excellent effort to build on for the club in its first third division game," said Axemen director Gord Johnson.

Squamish climber third in North American championships

Paul Iarocci
Contributed to The Chief

Squamish rock climber and guide Jola Sandford placed third at the 1996 North American Climbing Championship held at the PNE in Vancouver over the four-day weekend. Two 14-metre fiberglass climbing walls equipped with bolt-on holds were erected for the competition. Climbers are specialized at indoor climbing and follow high intensity, specific training programs. But Sandford didn't train seriously for the competition and says she had a lazy summer.

She climbed seven days in a row before the competition and took two days off. I did lots of easy climbing and movement felt really good. The guiding was relaxing. Sandford said she felt this schedule gave her an edge.

Seventeen women, including some of the top competitors on the continent, battled for a top prize of $10,000. Of those, a dozen competitors ranging in age from 12 to 37 qualified for the semi-final round and six advanced to the final.

At the start of each round, competitors previewed the route as a group before entering an isolation room to climb on their turn. Competitors were only allowed one attempt at each route. A predetermined number of competitors were cut from each round. Success was based on style or speed but the relative height that each competitor achieved on the route.

Sandford "flashed" the qualifier — meaning she climbed the entire route without falling. This advanced her to the semi-final round where she climbed approximately three quarters of an extremely sequential route, a performance that earned her a place in the final.

The final route was long and overhanging, but Sandford says she "felt at home" on the steep terrain. Only one woman flashed the route, 37-year-old Mia Axon, considered to be one of the best female climbers in the world. Sandford fell high on the route at the same hold as second place winner Tiffany Levine. The judge counted back to the prior round to break the tie. Since Levine flashed the semi-final, she took second place.

Sandford has not competed at a World Cup level since 1988. At that time, competitive climbing was in its infancy and contests were often held on real rock. She recalls a Russian competition in 1988 which took place on cliffs skirting the beaches of the Black Sea.

Before each competition day, she rose early and headed to Squamish's Smoke Bluffs for three easy warm-up pitches, before descending to her basement climbing wall to do three difficult routes.

"It was fun and I was fully satisfied with my performance." She also placed third in the speed climbing event.

Sandford plans to compete more in the near future. Her emphasis is on having fun. "Being there to have fun is important. I think that's why the kids do so well. They are not always thinking about their sponsors or reputations. It's harder for the older climbers. They have more to lose."

In recent years Sandford has ascended some of the most difficult routes in Squamish. Her strength and fitness is almost unparalleled. The competition results help to confirm what local climbers already suspect — that Sandford is one of the strongest female climbers in North America.

Terry Fox Run needs more help from Squamish

By David Donaldson
Squamish Chief

The call is out to the citizens of Squamish to get off their rumps and help fight the terrible disease of cancer.

On Sunday, Sept. 22 thousands of Canadians will be pounding the pavement to raise money for cancer research in the 16th annual Terry Fox Run. Last year was the run's most successful with nearly $11 million raised in national and international Terry Fox Runs.

The community of Squamish raised over $5,000 last year, which organizer Ray Wilburn says is a good amount for a smaller community dollar-wise but he's disappointed with the meager showing of 40-50 people in recent years.

"I don't know if people are aware the run is a pledge format or if people just don't like raising pledges — think it's easy," he says. "I find it easy because it's such a good cause."

When Terry Fox began his Marathon of Hope in 1980 to raise awareness of the critical need to find a cure for cancer, his goal was to raise $1 from every Canadian. Although he died before his goal was realized, the Marathon of Hope ended up raising $24.17 million, accomplishing the goal. To date more than $168 million has been raised worldwide in Terry Fox's name.

If every person in Squamish followed the spirit of the original Marathon of Hope and pledged $1 in this year's Terry Fox Run, up to $15,000 could be raised, tripling last year's efforts.

The Terry Fox Run is a 1-10 kilometre non-competitive event. Whether you walk, run, bike, skate or wheel, you will be helping to keep Terry's dream to find a cure for cancer alive. The run starts at 9 a.m. at the Squamish Pavilion on Cleveland Avenue. The 10-kilometre run follows a course through town to Government Road and doubles back at No Name Road to the beginning. The five-kilometre run follows a similar course, doubling back at Greg Gardner GM.

If you are unable to participate in the run you can pledge a family member or friend, or make your own donation to the Terry Fox Foundation. Pledge sheets are available at The Squamish Chief, Mountain FM, Timber Foods, Save-On-Foods and Super-Valu.
