Dillabough gone as health administration reorganized

BY AL PRICE
The Chief

After serving as administrator of Squamish General Hospital and Hilltop House for the past 20 years, John Dillabough's position has been eliminated as part of the massive administrative changes taking place in the new Sea to Sky Community Health Council.

Also gone are the administrator/CEO positions at the Whistler and Pemberton health centres, the director of nursing for SGH and Hilltop House, and the manager of home support. Taking their place as the new executive team of the Sea to Sky CHC are chief executive officer Brian Kines, former Pemberton Health Centre administrator Richard Bradsworth is now director of planning and evaluation, former home support manager Vilma Hendrickson is now director of home support, and a director of finance and information services will be hired. The finance position is currently contracted to Lions Gate Hospital in North Vancouver, but will be moved back to the corridor when a suitable candidate is found.

The new position of health services coordinator is being created for the hospital and Hilltop to be responsible for day to day administration, with RN Gloria Healy appointed acting coordinator for Squamish. Francesca Cole, BSN RN has been appointed acting health services coordinator for Whistler, while BSN RN Cathy McLeod, former head nurse at Pemberton, has been appointed health services coordinator for that community. The permanent positions in Squamish and Whistler are being advertised, with the incumbents invited to apply.

"The organizational structure we are announcing will provide good management of the facilities and will work with partners-in-care to achieve seamless delivery of health care services through integration and coordination," said Kines, who has been the senior member of the transition team implementing the Health Minister's New Directions program for the past six months.

"During the transition period, health care in the Sea to Sky corridor will be modified to achieve the goals established by the council," said Kines. "Specifically, the goals of providing a comprehensive range of services as close to home as possible within best practice guidelines, and managing the community health care system effectively and efficiently are served by these changes."

Kines said current services should not be interrupted, and further initiatives will be announced in the next few months to ensure access and coordinate the many aspects of health care delivery.

"John Dillabough served as administrator at Squamish General Hospital and Hilltop House for the past 20 years," said Kines. "His years of diligent work and dedication to health care are appreciated by staff and residents of the Sea to Sky corridor. We thank him for this and the support he has voiced for the changes to the health care system in this area."

Members of the Sea to Sky CHC, appointed by the Minister of Health, include chair Jim Miller and directors Nina Biln and Don Ross of Squamish, Elie Clark, Lee Parsons and Kris Shoup-Kleinman of Whistler, and Fran Cuthbert, Bruce McFayden and Sylvia Passmore of Pemberton. Minister Joy McPhail is expected to appoint three additional members to represent health care unions, physicians and First Nations.

ON THE COUNCIL AGENDA

Following are some of the items which are on the agenda for today's (Tuesday) council meeting which starts at 7 p.m. Municipal Hall, 37955 Second Ave.

Council will consider a recommendation to apply for Crown lands to be acquired for park or trail purposes on the side of the Mamquam Blind Channel as a result of the district planning department's report on a visioning workshop the area which was held in March.

Council will consider numerous recommendations from committee of the whole meetings regarding cutting red-flag items from the district's 1997 budget.

Council will consider adopting a bylaw to amend the district's official community plan redesignating the Squamish Municipal Airport from industrial use to limited use.

Mayor Corinne Lonsdale is expected to proclaim Elizabeth Fry Week from May 6-12 and Emergency Preparedness Week from May 5-11.

A proposal to plant trees on Arbour Day, May 8, along the north side of the Finch Drive connector will be considered.

Council support is being sought for the installation of lighting for the men's fast pitch diamond at Centennial Field so team can play night games during the summer.

Council favors limited use at airport

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

A relatively civil five-hour public hearing on land use at the Squamish airport resulted in little consensus and few results. But the final outcome of the April 8 meeting in the Brennan Park Leisure Centre brings the airport one step closer to reverting back to limited use.

More than 60 people voiced their opinions about an amendment bylaw to change zoning from industrial to limited use at the airport, which would curtail further expansion. The numbers of those for and those against the bylaw were about equal, including some undecided. Following the hearing, Squamish council gave third reading to the bylaw with a 4-3 vote, with Mayor Corinne Lonsdale and councillors Paul Lalli and Ron Barr opposed. It must still be formally adopted by council and is on tonight's (Tuesday's) agenda.

About 325 residents from all neighborhoods in Squamish, and some from Whistler and North Vancouver, filled the auditorium to voice their opinions and listen to ideas about what should be done with the airport.

"Helicopter logging is a growing industry and it will continue to grow," said Cheryl Bass of the Soo Coalition for Sustainable Forests. "The land use designation for an airport should be industrial."

Discussion ranged from protecting eagles to saving helicopter and logging jobs, and from expanding the current airport site to relocating it away from residential areas.

Squamish resident Barry Swift, who opposed the amendment, said the airport is needed for Squamish to remain competitive and the "not-in-my-backyard" approach by many Brackendale residents is self-serving and doesn't consider others.

"It is essential that the airport remains industrial use," said Swift. "We need to attract employment and good-paying jobs."

Randall Lewis of the Squamish Nation spoke in favor of the bylaw.

"Flight patterns are a big problem right now over our reserves," said Lewis. "We want to ensure our community isn't impacted any more."

Donna Billy, a councillor with the Squamish Nation, said helicopters flying over native land often interrupt funeral ceremonies.

"A relocation is the best thing I've heard tonight," said Billy.

But Hilda Rizun, who spoke on behalf of Black Tusk Helicopters, said the company has been looking for an alternate site and has not been successful. Rizun asked council to hold a referendum to hear the majority's decision.

"This issue is pitting neighborhood against neighborhood," said Rizun. "Let's put this issue to bed."

Many agreed relocation might be the best way to go, but not everyone. Once the hearing was closed, Lonsdale said the airport is an asset for Squamish and everyone in the community needs to put their heads together to come up with a way to solve the problem.

"I don't believe the community has spoken on this issue," she said.

And Lonsdale said relocation is not the way to go. "Relocating the airport is out of the question.

There is absolutely no way the district could afford it."

Coun. Sandra Bauer said the airport working group should be reinstated.

Coun. Ron Barr said he never supported limited use at the airport. Without industrial use zoning, the district can't issue leases to companies which could help to regulate their flight procedures.

"Even if it goes to limited use, the helicopters will still be there but there will be no control," said Barr.

And Coun. Paul Lalli, who supports a referendum, said there is a greater cost at stake.

"The cost of building the bridges in this community again is the bigger cost," said Lalli.

Coun. Meg Fellowes said she is under no illusion that passing the bylaw will solve the problem.

"I believe we need to step back a bit in order to go forward," said Fellowes.

Coun. David Young said he will lead the charge to ensure controls are put in place at the airport regardless of the land use designation.

"It is municipal land and we are your local government," said Young.

Airport decision 'biggest mistake ever': Lonsdale

By AL PRICE
The Chief

For Mayor Corinne Lonsdale, the most ironic aspect of council's move to return the Squamish Municipal Airport to limited use is that the very people who volunteered their time and equipment to build the facility some 25 years ago are now being told they are not welcome.

"In the length of time I have been on council, 11 years, I honestly believe this to be the biggest mistake we have made," said Lonsdale. Following a five-hour public hearing April 8, council voted 4-3, with Lonsdale and councillors Paul Lalli and Ron Barr opposed, to revert the airport land zoning to limited use from the industrial designation it had been given last year by the previous council.

"People in the forest industry built the airport, including Mike Saindon (owner of Black Mount Logging Inc. and Black Tusk Helicopters). He started out alone as a gypo contractor and has grown to a sizable company. The job opportunities he has brought into this valley are invaluable, and now we're telling him to take a hike? As far as I'm concerned this community needs more Mike Saindons."

When the airport was first built it was a Crown lease to the District of Squamish for airport use. It was then leased by the district to the Squamish Flying Club until 1984, when the district became involved again at the request of the flying club to oversee a commercial lease.

Over the years, use of the facility has grown, and to date, council has not taken advantage of the revenue opportunities. Along with increased use has come increased noise from a variety of aircraft.

"The concept of better managing the facility had not been dealt with until 1996, when it became very apparent we needed to address the nuisance issues," said Lonsdale. "We couldn't address those issues without spending money, and some could only be dealt with by having a manager on site and some leases on the land. The leases would offset the cost of management and control the uses, such as takeoff and landing patterns. We would have had lots of options in the leases, such as the times of flying, on-ground noise levels.

"Going back to limited use compounds the problem. It means we have absolutely no control over who lands there and who pays. The airport should be operated on a user-pay basis, and with limited use we can't do that. How can you charge and collect fees without a manager on site?"

The previous council's industrial designation anticipated running the airport at no cost to taxpayers. By erecting a temporary building for an on-site manager, landing fees and part of the lease revenue would have compensated for the manager's services.

"By doing this (changing to limited use) we're sending a message that we're not open for business," said Lonsdale. "We're saying out of one side of our face we're interested in diversifying the economy and developing tourism opportunities. From the other side we're saying we want to retain the small town atmosphere and want nothing to do with growth."

Lonsdale said all council members are in favor of diversification, but argues the direction of the vote is opposite to that. And she said starting the process over won't work.

"We've been in this process five years. There is a need for public consultation, but there has to be a ceiling on it. Council was elected to make decisions and to act in the best interest of the community as a whole, not to waffle or make no decisions. We have to occasionally take a stand and make decisions in the best interests of the community at large. I am concerned some council members are making their decisions on emotion and not weighing things out properly."

Lonsdale said she respects the people who spoke out at the public hearing and doesn't believe anyone wants to see jobs lost, either flying or in the logging industry. But she doesn't believe an alternate location is feasible for heli-logging operations because of the need for a maintenance structure with full services such as water, sewer and electricity.

"You'd be hard pressed to find a suitable site further away from a residential area than the airport is," she said.

Lonsdale said the potential for job losses is a major concern because they are good-paying positions, such as pilots, mechanics and the loggers themselves.

"We are talking about sending these people packing, telling them that they have to leave the community. We're moving into the next century. My God, what are we doing?"

She said council should consider one-year leases for businesses such as Glacier Air and Saindon's companies, and erect a temporary structure to replace the municipal building which burned down.

"We could agree to a moratorium on any further development until the nuisance issue is addressed, and we find out how we make out monitoring the noise issue and work out some type of management. We could come back in a year and take a look at how it's working. I'd like to think council will give this real close consideration."

Legion's future at stake as members search for solutions

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Branch 277 of the Royal Canadian Legion in Squamish may soon be forced to close its doors if its members are unable to find a way to solve the service club's financial woes.

"We are in big trouble," said Sandi Paterson, publicity spokesperson for the Legion. "We cannot continue to be a viable business with the way it is now."

Paterson and about a dozen other members made a presentation to Squamish council about the Legion's situation during a committee of the whole meeting April 8.

Paterson said the main purpose of the presentation was to get verbal support for the Legion from council members and to talk about the issue with district leaders.

She said since the development proposal from Gulf Pacific Investment Ltd. fell through, Legion members have been grown increasingly worried about the future of the local branch.

During a general meeting in February, members gave a number of suggestions to save the branch including selling the building, located near the corner of Mamquam Road and Hwy. 99, and moving to a new spot, trying to find another developer, developing the property themselves, or selling part of the land and renovating the existing building.

Although they didn't offer any concrete suggestions for the Legion, council members made a number of comments during the meeting. Many said they did not support the Gulf Pacific proposal because it was too large scale.

"I would favor a smaller-scale development or a mix of housing and business," said Coun. Meg Fellowes.

Mayor Corinne Lonsdale said she would support using part of the Legion's property for commercial zoning.

"We need more commercial areas," said Lonsdale.

But Coun. Sandra Bauer said she thinks there are too many vacant commercial spaces in the downtown core already and Squamish should look at that idea more closely.

Coun. Lyle Fenton said the Gulf Pacific proposal didn't fit the neighborhood and there were too many traffic concerns.

Coun. David Young said he would support the idea to use part of the property for housing.

"Council is behind the Legion 100 per cent," said Coun. Ron Barr.

The local group, like Legions across the country, raises funds through events such as bingos and poppy sales and then makes donations to various charities throughout the community. And as with other Legions, membership is declining due to the aging of many original members.

Paterson said the money raised through bar sales, membership fees, hall rentals and some donations are put towards operating the building. Branch 277 is run by four part-time employees and a number of volunteers. It has a membership of about 500.

"We have the best deal in town for hall rentals," said Paterson.

She said she plans to suggest to other members she thinks the best thing to do is to start advertising to attract another developer to the site, or perhaps Gulf Pacific again with a smaller proposal.

"The best scenario is to have a small development and a new smaller Legion and to have the old structure demolished," said Paterson.

The legion is always looking for new adult members. Regular members, or war veterans, and associate members, relatives of veterans, pay $28 annually. Anyone can become a fraternal member by paying $33.50 per year. For more information about the legion call 898-3233.

HSSS parking needs to be assessed

The school district is undertaking a site use study at Howe Sound Secondary School to determine whether the school's parking requirements can be accommodated without using on-street parking on the north side of Carson Place. As weather permits, line painting for parking and courts is to be done at Brackendale Elementary School, and minor landscaping at both Garibaldi Highlands and Squamish Elementary Schools.

The board of trustees gave first and second readings last week to a draft policy for protection of employees from violence in the workplace. The policy is to ensure a violence-free working environment while developing programs to contribute to the personal safety and security of employees. Under the policy, no act or threat of violence directed toward an employee by a non-employee, including students, would be tolerated. The draft must still be given third reading and adopted by the board and be circulated through the policy impact process before it is implemented. Superintendent Doug Courtice said the policy is required under Workers' Compensation Board regulations.

Trustees gave first and second readings last week to a draft policy concerning international pupils and B.C. residents who live outside of the district who request attending schools in Howe Sound. The policy states the board's first responsibility is to provide education to students who live in the district. The policy adds it may be beneficial to the community, its students and to students living outside the district if the latter are allowed to participate in district programs. "We are getting more and more requests from students who wish to come and spend time at our schools," said Courtice.

The draft must still be given third reading, adoption by the board and it must go through the policy impact process before being implemented.

School board rejects concert rent relief

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

The show will go on. Despite a decision by school trustees last week to not waive hall rental fees at Howe Sound Secondary School's community theatre for a Piano Six gala fundraiser, the performance will continue as scheduled.

And according to the president of the Rotary club of Squamish, tickets sales are going well. Larry Swift said about 185 tickets have been sold so far and he expects more to go before today's performance by internationally-known pianist Janina Fialkowska.

"It's not an issue," said Swift. "We just requested a donation on (the board's) part. Our goal is to sell 250 tickets."

The total estimate of costs for rental of the theatre comes to about $1,018 for the gala night.

If we make an exception for them, what happens if another group comes forward?" said trustee Amy Shoup. "Even if another school wants to use it, they are charged."

Tickets for the fund raiser are $90 each, covering the cost of the concert, refreshments, hors-d'oeuvres and a silent and live auction. Because it is a fund raiser, tax receipts will be issued for $60 of each ticket purchase. All proceeds from the performance are to be put towards a grand piano fund for the Howe Sound Performing Arts Association and a Rotary club park project.

The grand piano, when it is purchased, will be based in the community theatre under the care of the Howe Sound Performing Arts Association.

Swift said the Rotary club is working with Capilano College to create park space on college property near Hwy 99.

Tickets are available at the Squamish Valley Golf and Country Club and the Howe Sound Inn and Brew Pub.

Treasurer confirms municipal tax hike

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Tax increases are on their way for most Squamish property owners. Kim Anema, district treasurer, said average homeowners, based on a property assessment of $171,686, can expect their municipal taxes to go up by about $60 this year.

The district's finance committee held an all-day meeting April 7 to discuss property taxes in relation to this year's assessment roll. "We explored what was required to balance the budget," said Anema.

During budget meetings held the previous week, the finance committee managed to cut about $600,000 from the budget, leaving a shortfall of $284,500. Council has yet to determine whether the entire shortfall will be covered by taxes.

Anema said this was a particularly difficult year for budgeting due to municipal grant cutbacks from the provincial government and construction of the new public library.

The committee looked at the overall assessment values of 5,500 residential properties across Squamish. Of those properties, 3,574 had no increase in assessment. Property owners experiencing increases in assessment values will be required to pay more taxes.

"Some increased significantly, largely due to new constructions," said Anema. "These figures are meant to give a flavor of what's happening in these (areas). The numbers can be misleading."

In the north Squamish area, out of 255 properties, 178 had no change in assessment and 34 saw about a 10 per cent increase.

"By far the majority had no increases," said Anema.

Brackendale properties saw more adjustments. Out of 885 lots, 365 remained the same while 237 had saw increases of around 5 per cent. Twenty-eight experienced decreases up to one per cent.

"Valleycliffe looks a little different from other areas," said Anema.

Out of 846 properties, 578 stayed the same, but 81 decreased by about five per cent while 109 increased by five per cent.

Anema said decreases in assessment values could be determined largely by the marketplace during any given year.

Out of 470 rural residential properties, 463 saw no change in assessment values.

Anema said council is expected to pass tax bylaws by May 15 and bills will be in the mail shortly afterwards.

Suspicious fire destroys airport building

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

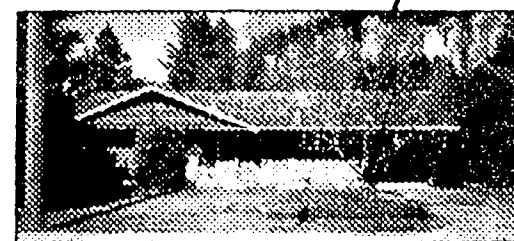

The weekend before the public hearing about land use at the Squamish airport, the building housing Mountain Spirit Aviation Ltd. was destroyed by fire. And Squamish's fire chief suspects it was arson.

Pat Hampson said Squamish Fire Rescue received a call from a nearby resident around 10:41 p.m. April 5. The fire was fully involved when crews arrived at the airport. It took 17 firefighters about 30 minutes to extinguish the blaze and get it under control.

"The west third of the building was completely burned out," he said. "It was completely gutted inside." Hampson said the fire was likely started from underneath the building.

Training program builds partnerships between employers and job-seekers

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Supporters of a workplace-training program new to Squamish are hoping it will help reduce unemployment in the community and give businesses an extra hand.

Members of the Squamish and Howe Sound Chamber of Commerce and Squamish council recently gave support-in-principle to Business Works, a program with a successful track record geared towards getting people who are living on social assistance back into the workforce.

"This is a grassroots community effort," said Kerry Slavens, communications coordinator for the program in Victoria. "The purpose is to alleviate chronic unemployment in B.C. and help people move into new fields."

Slavens said the program started on Vancouver Island and has been extremely beneficial there, placing more than 250 people in permanent jobs since it started in 1994. She said Business Works, formerly known as Community Works, gives people looking for jobs better access to employers.

No matches between employers and employees have yet been made through the program in Squamish, but Slavens hopes it will catch on quickly.

"We're not just trying to create jobs, we're trying to get communities together," she said.

Slavens said the program's goal is to place 750 people on Vancouver Island, the Lower Mainland and the Sunshine Coast into permanent, full-time jobs.

The program is a partnership involving businesses, local chambers of commerce and governments, the B.C. Chamber of Commerce, community agencies, the Ministry of Education, Skills and Training and people looking for work. Business Works offers training in the workplace and job placement assistance.

Field service representatives employed through the program make contact with those participating in each community.

For the employer, the program offers a $3,250 training allowance for approved workplace-based training and helps businesses set up training plans. Neither the employer or prospective employee are charged fees. For businesses to qualify for the allowance, they must be able to offer full-time work over a 12-month period, hire the applicant as an employee, and provide a well-planned training program.

"For employers who are really cash-strapped, this is really good incentive for them to get involved," said Slavens.

Those applicants eligible for training and job placement are people who have been assessed as being job-ready, have been on income assistance for a period of time, and are willing and able to work in a business environment.

Wendy Magee, manager of the Squamish and Howe Sound Chamber of Commerce, said the program will likely be beneficial for everyone involved.

"There are a lot of different programs out there, but very few recognize the financial contributions businesses make in training. Other programs have tried to encourage businesses to train people at the businesses' expense, but this program is different."

Lori Kopchia, the field service representative for the program in Squamish, North Vancouver and the Sunshine Coast, said her goal is to place nine applicants by the beginning of summer.

"We're just getting involved in Squamish and we have had interest from employers," said Kopchia.

Anna Kember puts her climbing skills to the test on the route Tools of Moss Destruction on the Smoke Bluffs Saturday. Last week's weather offered perfect climbing conditions.

Climbing complaints force renewed discussions

BY AL PRICE
 The Chief

Complaints from nearby residents about problems with climbers on the Smoke Bluffs have forced Mayor Corinne Lonsdale to call a meeting of all parties involved at the parks and recreation office in the leisure centre Wednesday.

"We have had complaints about parking and partying on the rocks," said Lonsdale. "There seems to be lots of freelance people who don't belong to any of the climbing groups. We all need to sit down and talk this out again."

Kevin McLane, a director of the Climbers Access Society, said he has heard talk of a fence being erected around the climbing area, or even the sale of the crags to one of the residents.

"If this discussion goes wrong (Wednesday), it's going to get very chilly indeed. The worst case scenario for climbers has implications for other recreationists. These crags have been busy for more than 10 years and climbers have been there more than 18 years. People who built houses there knew what they were getting into."

Lonsdale said one possible solution is for a representative of the climbing groups to be on the site during weekends to explain to visitors the protocol of climbing on the Smoke Bluffs.

"I'd like to see them continue to use the area. That will only happen if there is cooperation," she said.

Safety infractions draw fines

BY AL PRICE
 The Chief

A total of 28 employers including two in Squamish have recently been assessed Workers' Compensation Board (WCB) fines for non-compliance with health and safety regulations.

"The WCB's top priority is the prevention of workplace injury and disease," said Ralph McGinn, WCB's vice-president of prevention, in a press release announcing the penalties. Prevention officers are working with employers and workers to reduce injury claims, but where necessary, additional assessments or prosecutions may be applied to enforce the regulations and save lives."

In Squamish, KCT Construction and Trade Inc. was penalized $7,000 for "repeat violations of Industrial Health and Safety Regulations on fall protection" after it was inspected July 5, 1996. CLS Construction Ltd. was assessed a $6,500 penalty for the same infraction July 9, 1996.

Employers have the opportunity to present information regarding the safety infraction and proposed fine at a hearing. A further opportunity to appear before the WCB Appeal Division, which is independent of the WCB, is also available.

Pit bull tactics start to pay off

After years and years of beating their heads against a bureaucratic brick wall, it seems as if the Squamish Non-Profit Housing Association is getting somewhere. Association members have been working for years to establish a low-cost, manufactured housing development on Ross Road in Brackendale.

For at least the past four years, project manager and past president Wil Croxall, has been on the verge of a major announcement almost every month. Something has always cropped up at the last minute to thwart the project. But Croxall, who has the tenacity to make a pit bull look like a fawning UN diplomat, has never given up.

Somehow, he managed to get Shayne Ramsay, director of development services and other senior officials from the British Columbia Housing Management Commission, up to look at the site April 3. In a subsequent letter of thanks for the tour, Ramsay said "Seeing the property and the surrounding area has given us a better understanding of the issues surrounding the development of this property."

Not exactly a ringing endorsement, but everything helps. We know Croxall has managed to get West Vancouver-Garibaldi MLA Ted Nebbeling onside. Nebbeling is also known for giving stubbornness lessons to pit bulls.

There is still a long way to go, and we won't really believe the project is going ahead until the bulldozers move in. But in the meantime, it is being edged ever closer.

It is amazing the bureaucrats didn't give in to Croxall years ago. The paper and phone calls they could have saved would have more than paid for the project.

But then he just might have sunk his canines firmly into another cause and clamped down until they gave in. Hey, what ever it takes.

Council members must consider the consequences extremely carefully

It appears as if the four new members of council are having their way, and the Squamish Municipal Airport lands will be returned to limited use from the industrial designation given by the previous council. The four, who campaigned together on a number of issues, are paying back their supporters, the anti-airport crowd.

There is no question they have the legal right to do what they are doing, but the moral issue of whether it is in the best interest of the community as a whole is a much more complex matter.

Throughout several years of airport debate, emotion has reigned. A lot of misinformation has been pumped out in all quarters, to the point where most people don't know who to believe.

But it is a fairly safe bet to believe that if limited use is returned, jobs will be lost in the logging and aircraft industries. Helicopter companies can't work where they have no maintenance facilities. Their machinery costs millions of dollars, is worked hard, and must be maintained.

It is also true that if the heli-logging operators are forced to leave the airport, they will leave the Squamish valley entirely, putting the loggers on the ground in those operations out of work.

It might be easy to say it would only be a few jobs, but who on council would be willing to knock on the doors of the loggers affected and tell them, their wives and their families that dad is out of work? Who among us would like our lives to be turned upside down because council members, with their combined talent and wisdom, can't find an equitable solution to a problem which has hammered this whole community for several years.

All we ask is that all council members consider their actions extremely carefully. Try to see through the emotion to the reality of this situation. Project yourselves into the lives of those people your decisions will affect, and let your conscience be your guide.

Then be prepared to live with the consequences.

Peace not the goal

When the NDP government of Mike Harcourt decided to preserve 12 per cent of the provincial land base for parks and wilderness areas, it was hailed as a breakthrough by environmentalists. Forest companies, related businesses and loggers were skeptical, but they went along with the decision.

Since then, they have participated in a variety of processes, the most recent of which, the protected areas strategy (PAS), concluded last year. That process created 23 parks and protected areas totaling 136,000 hectares in the Lower Mainland, which amounts to 14 per cent of the most densely populated region in the province.

The process wasn't perfect. Nothing is. But it was a reasoned compromise between the needs of recreationists and environmentalists, industry, and government. It was supposed to bring peace to the forests after years of confrontation, or so we thought.

Last week the Vancouver media uncovered a training camp for anti-logging activists being conducted by American environmentalists at a YMCA camp in Port Moody. The representatives of the Ruckus Society, financed in large part by American media mogul Ted Turner, said they were invited up to teach their Canadian counterparts the fine art of civil disobedience, such as scaling buildings to unfurl eco-message banners, and forestry roadblock tactics. In interviews, they swore up and down they were not counselling trainees to break the law.

If you buy that, I have some swampland in Florida which would be perfect for you...cheap.

One of the Ruckus members is a former member of Earth First, another American group which advocated illegal tactics such as tree-spiking and forest equipment sabotage to accomplish its goals. A spokesperson for Greenpeace, which sponsored this training camp, said the person in question has renounced his beliefs in illegal activities.

If you believe that...see above.

One of the areas targeted for the latest war in the woods, promised by environmentalists of all stripes this summer, is the proposed Randy Stoltmann Wilderness Area. The Western Canada Wilderness Committee (WCWC) wanted 260,000 hectares set aside in honor of Randy Stoltmann, a highly respected conservationist who died in an avalanche in 1994.

The WCWC refused to participate in the PAS process, which involved more mainstream environmental groups. In the end, the PAS committee reached consensus on the protection of 50,000 hectares of the original Stoltmann proposal.

WCWC released a report last week that states saving the entire Stoltmann area would "only" cost 60 logging jobs and a loss of 634,000 cubic metres of timber a year. Insignificant, they say.

Tell that to the 60 loggers, their wives, their children, their friends. Tell that to the sawmill workers in Squamish who would likely also lose their jobs. Tell that to the businesses in Squamish which would suffer as well. The ripples keep going down the line. Where does it end? That's just the point. It has no end.

While the forest industry continues to compromise, the environmental groups keep moving the goalposts. Once they gain one concession, they want more. They got one-fifth of the Stoltmann, but now say less than six per cent is productive, biologically diverse, low-elevation rainforest.

WCWC is the biggest environmental group in the province now, having surpassed Greenpeace some time ago. It is big business. It is an industry unto itself. And it can only survive if there is continued confrontation. Donations, its lifeblood, would dry up if there was real peace in the woods.

Al Price

AS I SEE IT

The logical conclusion is that peace will only be achieved when the last faller is out of work. But therein lies the hypocrisy. Then there would be no more wood for the houses the environmentalists live in, no more paper for their flyers seeking donations to protect the "last rainforest."

I have to admit my own biases on this issue. The product you are reading is printed on paper, which pays my wages. Though I have never had a membership in an environmental group, I have worked with some voluntarily. I believe in preserving the environment in a balanced and sensible way. Reforestation must increase, stream protection must be paramount, alternate logging must be used wherever possible, and the forest practices code must be updated continually as we learn more, and enforced much more vigorously.

I believe in preserving birds, animals, fish, insects, plants, clean air and water. But I also believe in preserving people, and their families.

Loggers are people. Some of them are my friends and neighbors. I like them. They are good people.

I used to support environmental groups wholeheartedly. But their intransigence has made me realize some of them have become a large part of the problem, because they want no solution.

One speaker finally did show his true colors. In what could only be described as vindictive retaliation, former councillor, Ted Craddock, tried to discredit those currently on council who have indicated their desire to slow development at the airport. He brought up the fact that one

Following Mr. Craddock's new conflict of interest guidelines, we should remember that many of the councilors and mayor in the previous coun-

Carl Halvorson
Squamish

At the public hearing on rezoning the airport, common sense was exhibited by a few intelligent representatives on both sides.

Proponents for an industrial airport consisted mainly of loggers concerned about loss of jobs due to helicopter logging being deterred. When asked by a speaker for a count of people who would be willing to have taxes increased by $100, 14 loggers stood up to indicate their acceptance of this. Don't forget, our taxes are already going up to pay for the library, and Mayor Corinne Lonsdale stated in the local paper taxes will increase this year due to provincial cutbacks. How much money does a seasonal employee make?

Opponents of an industrial airport presented, again, three years of environmental concerns and factual research and stressed the need for an alternative site for helicopters.

The newly elected council must locate a site for helicopter business. A speaker from Whistler, a helicopter logging operator, said relocation for his business would be no problem, helicopters can land anywhere. So, relocate this business away from residential areas and schools. Whistler did just that. Why can't Squamish?

Coun. Dave Young received a standing ovation for his reasoning of a limited use airport. He stated, "We do have control of the airport, it's municipal land." He also said, "It will cost $350,000 for infrastructure if the airport stays industrial plus $50,000 a year for a manager."

Sounds like he has done some homework.

Coun. Ron Barr once again waffled. He is in favor of an industrial airport.

Ted Craddock made a weak presentation.

Lonsdale apparently kept a tally of pro and con speakers. She announced the score as an important bit of information. Strange, I don't recall this happening in the past three years of meetings where 400 to 500 taxpayers came out to protest the rezoning of the airport and five to 10 taxpayers spoke for rezoning. But then again, democracy has a different meaning to me.

Progress is a word used by political movements and it means whatever suits the movers' interests, it denies any middle ground. In this day, if you're against progress, you are against humanity. You are selfish and uncaring. So be it.

Solution sought for risky driving

Editor,

In general, people are not particularly well-informed about the risks that threaten their well-being.

More residents of the Sea to Sky Community Health Council area are admitted to hospital and even die after a car crash than in most areas of B.C. In five years, 1991-1995, 236 people in our area were hospitalized and 33 lost their lives in car accidents.

Driving is a health-related activity. It is one of the greatest threats to the health of young adults. Almost half of those hospitalized were under 25 years old. Fatal crashes caused the loss of 1,355 potential years of life during the five-year period.

If people are predisposed to taking risks, how can they be convinced to drive more cautiously? Besides more accurate assessment of the risk, how can we encourage safe and healthy living? That is our challenge.

Perhaps if you have good things to look forward to, you will surely want to be around long enough to enjoy them. If people can be persuaded to be more optimistic about their future, they may take fewer risks. This could result in healthier living practices, including safer driving.

We welcome your ideas. Please send them to your local Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit, Squamish: Box 130, 38075 Second Ave., V0N 3G0, or phone 892-3585. Please leave your name and number, so we can get back to you.

Respect must be earned by everyone

Editor,

A very good point was made last week in the letter by R. Smith, but it wasn't that young people must earn respect. The point of that letter was that respect must be earned, and that doesn't apply to just young people but to the "responsible adults" in the community as well.

I was outraged by the thought that I, as a young person, must respect my elders just because they are older than I am. I do respect them, but not because of their age.

I respect them because they know things and I can benefit from their knowledge.

I respect them because they help provide for the future of this world. And I respect them because they help to make sense in a collage of life that we call the world.

Young people are like anyone else who is 19 or older. We live in the same civilization, we walk on the same streets, and we breathe the same air. By this reasoning, young people also deserve the automatic respect of everyone else. This is not the case.

Respect is a two-way street. It must be given to be received. Only in old-school thought would society in general accept the "I'm older than you" approach.

That view is outdated, to the point where it is almost Neanderthal. We, the young people of the Squamish area, do not believe that we should yield the right-of-way to anyone just because we are younger than they are.

History has shown that just because someone is older, it doesn't mean they are any more intelligent or important than anyone else, young or old. All it means is they have been in the world longer.

Maybe they are wiser. Then again, maybe they aren't.

I hope this letter points out the significant flaw in the logic of some of the adults in our society. Society has progressed too far to slip into the crumpled views expressed last week.

Ruling defuses language furor

By AL PRICE
The Chief

West Vancouver-Garibaldi MLA Ted Nebbeling said Thursday he is satisfied with new language rules set down by the Speaker of the House last week.

Speaker Dale Lovick ruled that English is the official language of the legislature, and that anyone speaking in another language must give prior notice of their intent, provide a translation of the comments for all MLAs, and keep their comments brief.

The ruling came after Nebbeling was criticized for calling NDP MLA Jenny Kwan a "liar" in Cantonese during her four-minute Cantonese reply to the throne speech March 25.

"I am particularly pleased that we can now get on with the important business of the legislature," Nebbeling said in a press release. Kwan was also satisfied with the ruling.

Workshop teaches parents valuable advocacy skill

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Parents who want to find out more about becoming advocates for children in the education system are invited to an all-day introductory workshop about the British Columbia Community Parent Advisory Council's (BCCPAC) advocacy project.

The workshop, scheduled for Saturday, April 19 at the Best Western Sea to Sky Best, is free of charge. Jean Rattray, president of the District Parent Advisory Council (DPAC), said there is a need for parent advocates to take on an ombudsman's role in school districts.

"The purpose of this is so that parents become better advocates for their own children," said Rattray.

She said advocates work to provide fair, impartial resolutions to problems encountered by students, including conflicts with teachers, or to resolve issues surrounding education and children with special needs. Advocacy is needed whenever parents believe decisions have been made that are not in their children's best interest.

"It's about fairness, about accessing the system and supporting each other," said Rattray.

The workshop, sponsored by the Ministry of Education, Skills and Training and BCCPAC, will feature Cathy Bedard and Janet Phillips, co-founders of the BCCPAC advocacy project. The morning session starts at 8:30 a.m. with a continental breakfast and runs until noon, highlighting an overview of the advocacy project, discussion about advocacy, fair process and the role of advocates. The afternoon session runs from 1-3:30 p.m. and deals with parents acting as natural advocates for their children. Both sessions include an open floor period for questions and discussion.

Rattray said anyone interested in attending should register by phone (898-9132) or fax (898-9137) before Wednesday, April 16. Teachers and school administrators are also welcome.

Video games stolen in home break-in Squamish RCMP received a report of a break in between 6:30 p.m. March 18 and 4 p.m. March 19 at a home in Timbertown on Mamquam Road. Extensive damage was done to the door to gain entry, and Const. Fran Bethell said the culprits went straight to one of the children's bedrooms where they stole a number of Nintendo video games, controllers, memory cards, a video and eight music CDs.

"If any parents have kids who show up with unexplained children's games or Nintendo paraphernalia, we ask them to call our office," said Bethell.

Some time in the few days before March 28, a screen plant weighing in excess of two tonnes was stolen from a site on Industrial Way in the Squamish industrial park. The unit was 2 1/2x3 metres in size, was painted yellow, and is valued at $3,000.

A charge of possession of stolen property has been laid against a Squamish young offender. Police said the charge relates to the theft of a lawnmower. They allege the machine was given to a friend, who took it to the pawnshop, from where it was recovered and returned to its rightful owner.

A stolen 1994 Ford Ranger pickup truck is having a long swim with the fish at Britannia Beach. Police said a group of Squamish scuba divers found the vehicle March 28 about 40 feet down from the Britannia dock. The divers retrieved the front licence plate and the vehicle was determined to have been stolen previously in the Vancouver area.

Because of concerns about the stability of the dock, police have not yet been able to recover the vehicle. The incident is still being investigated.

A police officer doing routine traffic stops on Hwy. 99 around 8:30 p.m. March 31 was led on a merry chase by an undetermined number of youths. The officer observed a white four-door Subaru in which the driver committed some minor traffic offenses. He followed the vehicle and attempted to stop it.

The driver took off, then pulled into the driveway of a home on Diamond Head Road. The youths, including the driver, exited the car and took off. As the police car pulled into the driveway, the Subaru, which had been stolen earlier while parked outside the probation office, rolled back into the police car, causing minor damage.

A police dog was brought in and was able to track one of the culprits for some distance before losing the scent. A witness to the incident was able to describe one of the youths to police. The matter is still under investigation.

Municipal workers reported extensive damage at Centennial Park overnight April 1. They said there were beer cans all over the parking lot, broken beer bottles on the grass, a fire still burning in one of the garbage cans, an electrical booth was smashed and a fence was damaged when a vehicle was driven through it and onto the turf. The incident apparently took place either Friday or Saturday night, causing a total of $1,000 in damage. Police have several leads and the investigation is ongoing.

A skidder with the serial number 1237 was stolen from Mile 18 of the upper Squamish valley during the last two weeks. The yellow unit was valued at $6,500.

Squamish RCMP report receiving several calls from the M. F. Wagner carnival which was in Squamish April 3-6. Const. Todd Arsenault said the carnival workers were cooperative and had security staff on duty, who called police on several occasions about young people drinking in the area. Some liquor was seized.

Three impaired drivers were charged and six 24-hour roadside suspensions were issued last weekend. One Squamish man faces charges of impaired driving, refusing to give a breathalyzer sample, dangerous driving and assaulting a police officer when police stopped his vehicle following complaints from a member of the public about a vehicle being driven erratically on Hemlock Avenue April 5.

A rock climber from Port Moody was lucky to be alive Saturday after he fell 15 metres before being saved by his partners when two crampons came out while he was leading a climb on the Flying Circus route on the Stawamus Chief. The man was extricated by Squamish Search and Rescue shortly after 6 p.m. and was taken to Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster with back injuries.

A female cyclist was forced off the road on Buckley Avenue near Howe Sound Secondary School at 10:45 p.m. April 3. The vehicle, describes as an older white Thunderbird, sped away without stopping. The cyclist was not injured.

Guides set for their annual cookie drive

If spring has indeed sprung, it must be time for the taste treat of the season — Girl Guide cookies. From April 25-May 4, Girl Guide Cookie Week across Canada, Guides, Brownies and Sparks will be selling cookies throughout Squamish for $3 per box. In some areas they go door to door, but can usually be found at Highlands Mall, the Chieftain centre and at Squamish Credit Union. The cookies often sell out quickly.

Camp offered for children with learning disabilities

Advantage Society for Children with Learning Disabilities is looking for campers from all over B.C. to attend Eureka Outdoor Camp for the 1997 camping season. The only B.C. residential camp for children and adolescents with learning disabilities and associated disorders such as ADD/ADHD, Eureka Outdoor Camp is located 45 kilometres northeast of Princeton and offers traditional camp programs in a caring environment supported by a 2:1 child to staff ratio. The society is offering three programs this year. All applicants must be between 8 and 17 years old and diagnosed with learning disabilities and/or associated disorders.

For more information, call (604) 244-7999.

Lumberjack TV series seen across Canada

Last summer, Cheerleader Productions under the direction of Des Bradley, produced a six-part feature series for London Channel 4 Television, titled Lumberjacks OK!

This series showcases the forest industry and the people who work and play in the province's forest. The programs recently aired on Squamish Community Cable 10. The chamber of commerce, with the assistance of Community Cable 10, have been successful in having this feature aired on CableNet which airs programs throughout Canada including Courtney/Comox, Powell River, Chilliwack, Kamloops, Lethbridge, Alta., Wavertown, Oakville/Burlington and Kingston, Ont., as well as an additional 16 communities across Canada.

Creative self-discovery can be fun

By MARY BILLY
Contributed to The Chief

Lynda Cole has developed a four-week course in creative self-discovery which many of the participants enjoyed so much they're back for the third time.

The new course begins tonight, April 15, at Sun Spirit Studios, 38024 Cleveland Ave., at 7:30 p.m.

The focus of the group is on loosening up and having fun, letting go of the worries, tensions and judgements of everyday life by using forms of creative expression such as drawing, dance and movement, clay work, singing, writing, poetry, and storytelling.

"The idea is not to focus on how well you do these things, but just being with your own intuitiveness and self-awareness," said Cole. "By letting go of the judgements we have about what we do, letting go of the outcome and focussing on the process, we can come to self-awareness. Another focus of our group is having fun."

On two occasions the group had its sessions in a daycare centre, not because it was a daycare, but because it was a convenient space. However it had the added benefit of allowing some of the participants to loosen up and free themselves to the moment.

In the first session of the course, Cole leads the group in dance and movement as a way of opening up. In subsequent sessions there is drawing, clay work, drama, writing, poetry, singing and telling stories, some using visualizations, some using experiences, songs, and memories of favorite stories or even story books from childhood.

"Many didn't play much when they were kids, and being in a playroom gave them permission to laugh and be silly and act out different parts of themselves," said Cole.

She emphasizes that this group is geared to having fun, laughing, letting go of that critic present in everyday life, learning to stay in the moment and be aware of what they are doing, having a good time. It is, of course, deeper than just fun, but Cole believes we can have a lot of fun getting there, using the intuitive process while so much learning is going on.

She stresses that while a lot of laughing happens in this group as participants explore together, this time it takes place in a way many haven't had a chance to participate in unless there was a test score, or judgement of some kind at the end. And what they learn here spills over into everyday life, giving a new sense of freedom and willingness to try new things and not be so hard on themselves.

This is a mixed group, so men are welcome to participate, or Cole is willing to have a men-only group if they would be more comfortable that way and if enough want to register. A minimum of six is required.

Cole is a counselling therapist who has been in private practice in Squamish for seven years specializing in abuse, relationship counselling, trauma and depression. Each session is two hours, 7:30-9:30 p.m. and the cost is $50. Registration is required, either before or at the first session. Register at the store, or by phoning Sun Spirit Studios at 892-2228 or Lynda Cole at 898-4618.

Slide show to feature ancient goddesses

By MARY BILLY
Contributed to The Chief

The first event planned by the Squamish Arts Council will be a slide presentation by artist Ann Rosemary Conway, BFA, of Dream Hill Studio in Victoria. It will be held at the Howe Sound Inn, June 7, at 8 p.m.

Conway has spent the last several years making paintings and paper maché sculptures of the female deities, goddess sculptures and carvings discovered on her journeys to temples in Greece, Turkey, Crete, Malta, Egypt and Italy, some of which were even built in the shape of a woman. She discovered that many of the statues and sculptures were a long distance from their temples, so she photographed the temples, then travelled to where the statues and sculptures were and photographed them. Her slide presentation reinstates these female deities back into their rightful place in the temples where they belong.

She later travelled to Indonesia on a similar quest, and has also discovered female deities of west coast native cultures in the Royal Museum in Victoria, the Museum of Anthropology at UBC and on a petroglyph near Nanaimo.

When she could not find the rough textured paper she wanted to paint on, she learned how to make her own paper which has a rough, rock-like appearance, similar to what she found in many of the temples where she found these memorable remains of goddess history.

Her slide presentation will include a talk about the history of women's spirituality in ancient times. Tickets will be $8 for employed, $5 for unemployed. Watch for our ads and posters. (Please note change of date due to the holiday weekend, from May 17 to June 7.) This event is co-sponsored by The Squamish Arts Council and Howe Sound Women's Centre. For details call Mary Billy at 892-5723.

Rookie snowboarders have been bitten by the bug

From carving to big air, snowboarding is the bomb. This year we took the plunge and discovered what everybody has been talking about, something fresh, something dangerous, something with an edge. Welcome to the world of snowboarding.

Enter into the realm of pure energy, when the only rest-break you get is when you're strapping in.

Skiers often complain about inconsiderate boarders who are wild and out of control, always cutting them off and refusing to get out of the way. Let's set this straight. Snowboarders are full of passion and intensity. We want to go full out, take risks, otherwise there's no point. Speed is where it's at. When you're flying down the hill and the only thought running through your mind is "If I fall now I'll never get up," you'll understand what we mean.

The truth is, we are only rookies, we admit it. But we're learning, and we're loving it. We've realized that you either go full out or you don't go at all.

Some skiers refuse to see just how people get enjoyment out of this sport. As former skiers we both vow never to return to the awkward and somewhat boring world of skiing.

Even the language of snowboarding is more exciting (not to mention the wardrobe). Where else can you see moves named 720 rodeo, or backside 360?

Skiers tend to have a rather gawky look to them. Their costumes are usually brightly colored and a little on the tacky side. Snowboarders, on the other hand, look good, feel good, and therefore, perform well.

Everybody is trying it. Old folks are out there giving it their all, trying to set a good example for the toddlers who are squirming down the hill as well. Trust us on this one, anyone can do it, sure it'll be hard at first, but

Darts & Daffodils

Maternity staff appreciated for helping deliver a new baby boy

A delivery room full of daffodils to the maternity staff at Squamish General Hospital, including nurses Jane and Lori, and especially to Dr. Morum and Dr. Martin on the delivery of our big bouncing baby boy Kiel. There is no way we could have done it without all of you. Thanks for everything, from Chris and Pete.

A 40-year birthday party worth of daffodils to Dave and Steve at Howe Sound Inn for coming through and contributing to making my husband's birthday such a success. Daffodils also go to Barb and Daniel from Sunflower Bakery for the incredible female torso cake, Garibaldi Graphics for the rush job on invitations, and the Garden Centre for doing all those balloons. We all had a great time, made better by your help. Karen U.

Enough golden daffodils to fill our theatre to the authors, cast and helpers of Surprise Party. Definitely one of the best plays presented by Howe Sound Players, true to life with mixed emotions. As a charter member of the former Howe Sound Drama Club, I salute you Roseanna and John. Please don't make it your last. For those who missed it, what a shame.

A paddock full of daffodils to my niece Megan, her mom Suzanne, our trainer Karen, and of course Chuck, the horse. You all made me so proud of you, and thanks for your hard work. All very much enjoyed and appreciated. From limpy, AKA Denise.

My husband is a newly admitted resident of Hilltop House. He went to bed still wearing his glasses, so the ear piece broke off. Early Easter Monday morning, I took them down to Tom at Precision Optical for possible repair. By noon he phoned to say he had found the necessary pieces and the glasses were ready to be picked up, no charge. A bunch of daffodils isn't nearly enough thanks for such service. We're fortunate indeed to have people like Tom and Holly in our community.

Early morning daffodils to novice hockey coaches Doug Buckle and Jaclyn Jacquard for their hard work and cooperation which enabled me to juggle coaching in novice with a pee wee rep schedule.

Special thanks to the kids, particularly the older ones who answered to "Hey you?" or "Who is that guy?", and to the parents. I loved the gift. Holly.

A box full of paper daffodils to Jeff for his kindness, from a most grateful masonry company.

A whole street full of daffodils to the person who found my wallet on Thursday, April 11 and turned it in to the post office. Although there was no money in it, the cards and licences were extremely important to me. It's nice to live in a town where honesty is still a common virtue.

Daffodils to the two Brians at Mountain Building Centre for their generous donation of a picnic table to the Squamish General Hospital.

A mini-sawmill full of daffodils to Gerry McKinnon for his most generous donation to the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society.

A yard full of daffodils to my great neighbors on Dryden Road and MacDonald Place for being such good sports for Danielle's 13th birthday scavenger hunt. A special thanks to the Bernards and the beaver.

Daffodils to the ladies from Billie's Bouquet, Garden Centre and Squamish Liquor Store for participating in a birthday surprise.

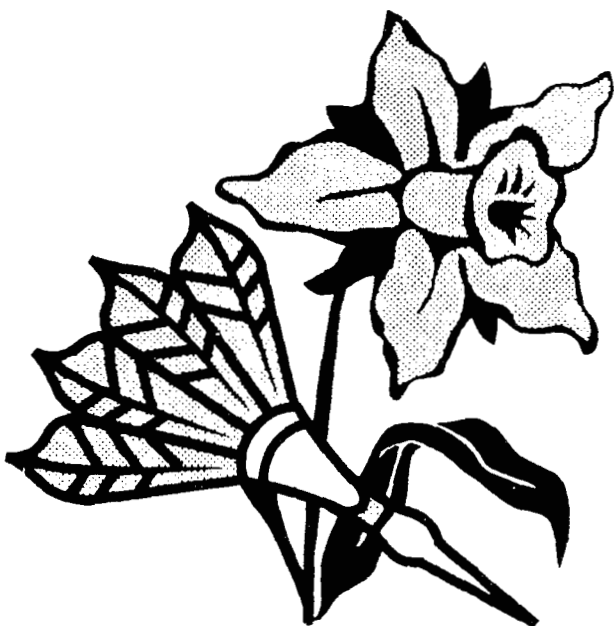

A hospital full of daffodils to John Dillabough for his years of dedication, compassion and fairness to all who worked with him over the past 20 years.

Good luck, John, in your new endeavors in the future.

Darts to the business which decided to let go the main reason why people go there. Letting go of someone who dedicated much of his time, at work and at home, to making the best of the place and encouraging customers is a very disturbing decision. He deserved to be treated in a much better manner than he was. A CD player full of daffodils to the man in question, all the best in your future. I am sure the next person who hires you will appreciate all you do for them. You were a great person to be around, and thanks for all those songs you played for us. You will be missed.

Want to say thanks and make sure everyone knows why? Or maybe offer a little constructive criticism without confrontation?

Send your Dart or Daffodil to The Editor, The Squamish Chief, Box 3500, Squamish, B.C. V0N 3G0 or drop it off at our office at 38113 Second Avenue, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. You can also fax your message to 892-8483 or e-mail to: sqchief@mountain-inter.net.

Squamish bank staffs help B.C. kids

By ROSE TERZARIOL
Contributed to The Chief

Each year at this time, employees of the Bank of Montreal, CIBC, Canada Trust, Hongkong Bank, Royal Bank Financial Group, ScotiaBank and TD Bank across the province set aside their business competition for a greater cause - helping kids who need B.C.'s Children's Hospital.

"Since the Children's Miracle Network Telethon began in B.C. back in 1988, financial institutions have raised more than $2 million for Children's Hospital," said BCCH Foundation chair Larry Van Hatten.

"This support has enabled the hospital to buy life-saving, state-of-the-art equipment like incubators and blood warmers for the special care nursery, and a kidney dialysis machine for the renal unit. It has also funded research and educational projects, and community outreach programs like the cardiology clinic in Kamloops."

Why do bank employees of these institutions in Squamish feel such a strong affinity to Children's Hospital? It's because they understand that the hospital is a truly provincial organization, that touches every community in B.C. In fact, in 1996, there were 334 patient visits from Squamish alone.

Financial institutions' employees understand better than most the importance of a sound investment. Each of these organizations have made an investment in our province's most precious resource, our children.

Pianist raises funds for piano and park

Howe Sound Performing Arts Association, the Rotary Club of Squamish plus many more local sponsors are pleased to have international pianist Janina Fialkowska as the feature artist at the gala fund raiser being held at the community theatre at Howe Sound Secondary School Friday night, April 18, at 7:30 p.m. A reception with the artist will follow the concert. The evening will also include a fund-raising auction. Proceeds will go into the Howe Sound Performing Arts Association's grand piano fund and to the Rotary park project. Tickets at $90 each ($60 income tax rebate) are available at Howe Sound Inn and at the Squamish Valley Golf and Country Club.

Members of the Women's Auxiliary to Squamish General Hospital will be in the Highlands Mall on Friday and Saturday, April 18-19, selling raffle tickets for their Mother's Day basket draw. It is filled with a lovely assortment of gifts any mother would be pleased to receive. The draw will take place during the annual spring white elephant and bake sale on May 3. Tickets for the raffle are also available at the gift shop at the Squamish hospital.

There will be a swap meet at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre on Sunday, April 20, from 9:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. Table bookings can be made at the centre at $15, or $20 plus GST for two tables. Sales of food products are not permitted unless a permit is obtained from the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit. There is a fifty cent admission fee.

First birthday wishes this week to: Joshua Camm, Quinton Cottrill, Bradley Hachey and Nicole Pederson.

Six residents of Hilltop House will celebrate April birthdays Wednesday, April 16 at 2 p.m. Those to be honored include Dorothy Shaw, Sylvia Buchanan, Herbert Rudolph, Lillian Crass, Doris Schlosser and Hugo Karvonen. An open invitation is given to everyone in the community.

Another event taking place at Hilltop House is the annual garage sale on Saturday, April 19 from 10 a.m. to noon. Anyone with items to donate are asked to take them to HTH on Friday between 1:30 p.m. and 3 p.m. If you wish more information please phone Ruth at 898-3368, Betty at 892-3888 or Jean at 898-2368.

Family gospel meetings continue at Highlands Gospel Hall each night at 7:30 p.m. (excluding Saturday) until and including April 20.

The next distribution day for the Squamish Food Bank is tomorrow, April 16, from noon to 2 p.m. in the Elk's Hall on Second Avenue. For the volunteers who have taken on this much needed project there is always a worry if they will have enough food for everyone. Your donations of non-perishable food items an/or your cash would be welcomed. Drop off or mail cash donations to Howe Sound Women's Centre, 38132 Second Ave., or mail to Box 2052, Squamish, B.C. V0N 3G0.

There will be a CHADD Squamish meeting at Howe Sound Secondary School library on Monday, April 21, from 7-9 p.m. and will feature a video night.

Maureen Gilmour

ABOUT TOWN

Rick Scott, a children's entertainer, will perform at the Brackendale Art Gallery on Sunday, April 20, at 7:30 p.m. Tickets at $7 for youths and $9 for adults are available at BAG or at Howe Sound Business Centre or phone the Centre at 892-2222 to reserve tickets.

The auditions for the PNE Youth Talent contest are only a month away on May 13 and will be held in the Garibaldi School of Dance on Sixth Avenue, at 7:30 p.m. Successful candidates 13-21 years, will be given further coaching for the 5th annual Star Search contest to be held in the community theatre at Howe Sound Secondary School on June 12. To enter or for more information contact Vicki Hoskins at 892-2372 or see your high school music teacher. The contest is sponsored by Howe Sound Performing Arts Association and the Squamish Credit Union. Some great local prizes will be awarded to the winners.

STORK STORY - NUNN - Proud grandparents, Tom and Sandy Rivett, of Squamish, announce with love the birth of their first grandchild, Brady Thomas Nunn. He was born to his very pleased parents, Chris and Stacey Nunn in Port Alberni Hospital on March 25, weighing 8 lb., 1 oz. Ray and Elizabeth Nunn of New Denver also welcome their new grandson.

Members of the Howe Sound Curling Club are requested to attend the semi-annual general meeting and election of officers on Thursday, April 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the upstairs lounge.

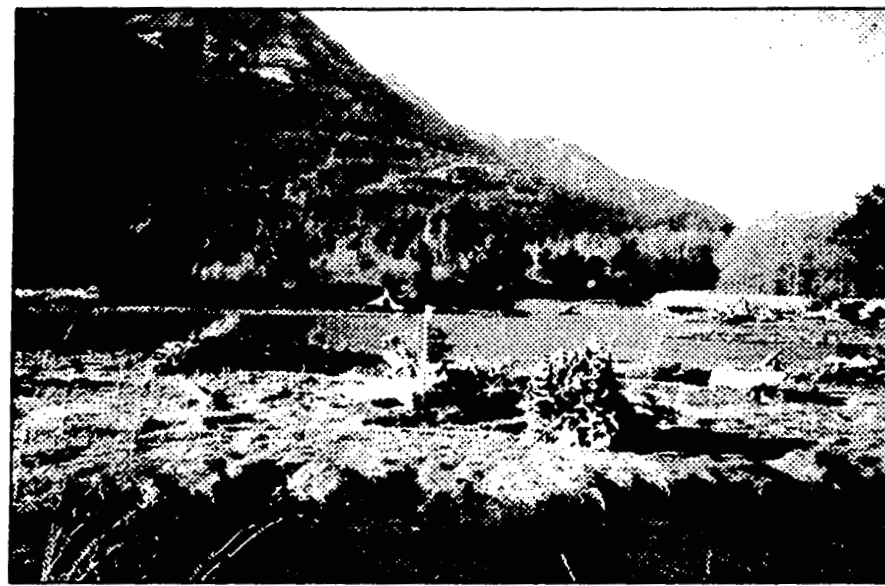

For those of you who missed Madame Rose, you'll be happy to know that the Squamish Public Library now has a copy available. Also, Whistle Cable was most impressed by Madame Rose and will be showing the sitcom on Whistle Cable 6, Friday, March 18, at 8 p.m.

If you love listening to the old familiar and traditional hymns, you will want to attend the concert at Valleycliffe Christian Fellowship Church this Saturday night, April 19, at 7 p.m. when the 48-member Abbotsford Male Chorus will perform. A love offering will be taken. Refreshments and a time of fellowship will follow.

STORK STORY - BARNES - Lisa and Patrick (PJ) Barnes are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter, Julia Rose Laneave, born April 6 at 8:02 a.m., weighing 7 lb., 9 oz. Proud grandparents are Giovanni and Kathy Pagliardi and Jim and Anna Barnes of Squamish and great-grandparents Fred and Irene Robinson also of Squamish, Irene Barnes of Winnipeg and Gladys Davidson of Ashern, Man.

When international pianist Janina Fialkowska comes to Squamish on April 18 for the evening concert, she will perform in the afternoon for 155 students from Garibaldi Highlands school as well as students from Howe Sound Secondary School. If space permits, students of local music teachers will also be in attendance. Since the Piano Six tour began in 1994, more than 12,000 students in remote areas of B.C. have enjoyed the unforgettable experience of a visit of a Piano Six virtuoso.

Garage sale being held Saturday at Hilltop House

Tonight, (Tuesday) the Squamish and District Diabetes Association is holding its regular monthly meeting in the Tantalus Seniors Centre at 7:30 p.m. Guest speaker is Sally Nichol, coordinator of the emergency home response program, Lifeline. Everyone, including non-diabetics, is welcome to attend.

Saturday, April 19 is the garage sale at Hilltop House. The sale begins at 10 a.m. and runs until noon. There is still time if you wish to make a donation of home-baking or good used items. Phone Ruth at 898-3368 or Betty at 892-3888 or Jean at 898-2368.

The residents at Hilltop welcome your company every Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. for their sing-along. Some may need your help in finding the right pages in their songbooks.

Branch #70 News

My apologies for not getting today's meeting in last week's column. Just hope you all remembered anyway. Elaine has a few seats left for her bus trip to the apple farm in Yarrow on April 28. This includes a side trip to the Birchwood Dairy in Sardis. May 27, it's a trip to the Burnaby Village Museum and the Dr. Sun Yat Sen Gardens. July 9, she is hoping to take in The Phantom of the Opera but needs some response before she can make definite plans. Please phone Elaine Ramsay for more information and costs on these trips at 898-5463.

The seniors trip to Bradner was wonderful. Due to the miserable weather we had the past few months, we didn't get to see the fields of daffodils as planned. They are about two weeks behind in their blooming. No one seemed to mind, as the weather was fantastic, which always makes everyone feel great. In Clayburn, we browsed around the old village store. We even took in a garage sale.

After our lunch in Mission it was on to Westminster Abbey, where Father Dumont gave us an awesome tour. The stained glass windows totalled 64, and each is 22 feet high. Each little piece of stained glass is 1 1/2 inches thick and is encased in cement so the windows are a tremendous weight. Most of us strolled the path to where we could look out over the river. Thanks for a well planned day, Elaine, and I know we all welcomed the juice coming home on the bus, compliments of Super Valu.

You still have two weeks to file those income tax returns. If you are needing help with yours there is a free service to seniors. Give Charles Schilberg a call at 898-9393 and he will be glad to help you.

Walking Club News

Thirteen were out for last week's walk. This Thursday, April 17, we meet in Tim Hortons parking lot at 10 a.m. for a walk in the industrial park and back to Tim Hortons for coffee.

The senior golfers had a great day last week as 40 were out. If you're interested they start at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday mornings. Senior ladies go out on Thursdays at 9 a.m. Join in the fun.

Tantalus Seniors Centre News

The centre is open Monday to Friday, 1 - 4 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays.

Mondays are craft days. We do knitting, crocheting and various craft projects. We have several items for sale. Ask the hostess.

Tuesdays they have an excellent crib club which starts at 1 p.m. sharp. If you are interested in the pot luck lunch prior to the games, please call Ann Gallant at 898-3384. Wednesdays, 10 a.m. to noon is the sketch and paint club and Wednesdays, 1-4 p.m., join the line-dancers.

Thursdays is Wellness Council day, and the centre is also open for cards and games.

Fridays, John Hughes has a bridge club and is looking for more players.

At the Wellness Council program last Thursday, 12 or 13 people enjoyed a delicious pot luck lunch. Thursday, April 17, they are having a special video on exercise for seniors. All seniors are welcome to attend.

A reminder to board members of the Tantalus Seniors Centre, you have a meeting at 10 a.m.

Beans were not always a valued food source

Feeling considerably more lively with the arrival of spring and finally, some spring-like weather? Then you are "full of beans."

That rather strange expression comes from 19th century stable slang. Horses were fed ripe broad beans, making them grow sleek and frisky. Although beans have long been considered a valuable food source, people have not always looked upon them kindly.

Those foolish enough to sleep in a bean field supposedly awoke insane, according to English folklore in the Middle Ages. Much earlier, the mathematician Pythagoras banned his vegetarian followers from eating beans. Eating them, he said, "was like eating the heads of your parents." A peeled broad bean does look eerily like a little human being. Eating them amounted to cannibalism.

The idea of beans as heads has survived into modern English slang — to "bean" someone is to hit them on the head, people used to address each other as "old bean", and the word "beanie" means a little hat.

The ancients also believed that the soul was breath, life breathed into us at creation. With that line of thinking, flatulence was angry dead souls (ingested in beans) fighting for an exit. People may well have imagined some of their own souls being farted away at the same time. Beans were sinister indeed!

Times have changed and beans are now considered the height of virtuosity. Economical and nutritious, beans promise to make us better people — kinder to the planet, our grocery bill and ourselves. As for those angry souls, "Beano" makes beans kinder for the rest of society.

You don't need to be vegetarian to love black bean soup. Recently a group of grannies became incensed when Earl's restaurant removed black bean soup from the regular menu. They resorted to terrorist tactics to make Earl's bring it back. At last word the restaurant was holding out. But for these determined women, the issue is not just a "hill of beans". I suspect they'll fight until Earl's gives in.

Black bean soup can take many forms, but there's a few essential ingredients which must be present. The beans, of course, some level of heat from chilies and something tart. In the following recipe lime juice and the juice from pickled jalapenos spice up this bowl of pure comfort.

Black Bean Soup

1 1/2 cups dried black beans
6 cups water or chicken stock
2 Tbsp. olive oil
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 large carrot, finely chopped
1 celery stalk and leaves, finely chopped
1/2 green bell pepper, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, pressed
1 tsp. ground cumin
1 to 2 Tbsp. pickled jalapenos, chopped
1 Tbsp. juice from pickled jalapenos juice of one lime

Soak the beans overnight in lots of water. Or quick-soak them by covering the beans with water in a saucepan. Bring to a boil. Boil hard for two minutes, remove the pan from the heat. Let stand for one hour. Make sure the beans are always covered by water. They should be fully swelled up. Drain and proceed with the recipe. Heat the oil in a large skillet over medium heat. Gently fry the onion, carrot, celery, green pepper and garlic for about five minutes, stirring until the vegetables are lightly golden. Stir in the cumin and cook for another two minutes, until fragrant.

Scrape the vegetables into a saucepan with the beans. Add the water, jalapenos and pickle juice. Bring to a boil, then simmer, covered for about 1 1/2 hours, until the beans are tender. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Stir in the lime juice. Puree the soup with a hand blender or in a food processor. Return soup to the pan and heat through. Ladle into bowls and top each with a dollop of sour and chopped green onions or salsa.

Ditch all those 'diet' pills

BY DANIA MATIATION AND JERI MANLEY
Contributed to The Chief

Tempted to pop diet pills with thoughts of shorts and bathing suits in mind? Let's consider some of the problems with this method of girth control.

Chromium has lost some of its shine. In November 1996, the Federal Trade Commission in the U.S. forced three of the leading marketers of chromium picolinate to stop claiming that the pills promote weight loss, burn fat, build muscle, lower cholesterol, regulate blood sugar, and treat or prevent diabetes. The commission concluded in August, 1996, these health claims had not been proven by scientific studies.

Fenfluramine is a popular type of diet pill and has been in the news lately. Meant for treatment of obesity, it helps reduce food intake and belongs to a class of appetite-suppressing drugs which must be obtained through a doctor's prescription.

In Canada, this medication is known as Ponderal and Pondimin and is meant to be used in combination with a calorie-reduced diet, increase in exercise and appropriate behavioral change.

The January issue of Healthy Weight Journal focuses on the use of fenfluramine medications and the new drug Redux in particular. The conclusion the authors reached is that "the pills don't work very well and there are some severe risks in taking them longer than three months."

This journal also points out some of the unpleasant and dangerous side effects of taking fenfluramine medications. Hypertension, a rare but lethal disease tops the list. And commonly reported adverse effects are drowsiness, dizziness, diarrhea, urinary frequency, nausea and dry mouth. Other effects can include anxiety and insomnia, confusion, lethargy, headache, lack of coordination and depression.

The price may be very high for the loss of a few pounds. What we need to do is to assess whether our weight is healthy. Many people begin a cycle of dieting when they are already at their healthy weight.

If we need to take steps to change our weight, let's look at increasing activity levels first. To modify food choices, begin with cutting fat intake and bulking the diet with vegetables and fruit. The focus needs to be on eating for health with a pattern that can be used long-term. The plan should provide at least 1,000 calories per day. And we might also get the advice of a health professional.

Dania Matiation and Jeri Manley are community nutritionists.

Physiotherapists and their patients work together to improve health

By AL PRICE
The Chief

The theme of this year's National Physiotherapy Week April 20-26 is Moving Together Towards Health, and Urte Devery of the Squamish Physiotherapy Centre says both patients and practitioners are doing exactly that in this community.

"The usage of physiotherapists is growing," said Devery, "mainly because it's effective. With sports, gardening or work injuries, it seems we are seeing those people earlier which means treatment is more effective."

Physiotherapists work in virtually all health care delivery settings from hospitals to private and community clinics, with patients of all ages. They deal with everything from muscle strains and sports injuries to complex neurological conditions following strokes and motor vehicle accidents, as well as conditions such as bursitis and rehabilitation following surgery.

"By nature we adapt very well to a variety of needs, as so much diversity exists within the profession," said Arlis McQuarrie, president of the Canadian Physiotherapists Association.

"With our range of specialized knowledge from orthopedics, we are constantly seeking ways to improve our treatment approaches and demonstrate the effectiveness of those approaches to prevent illness and injury."

Squamish physiotherapists are trying to get more involved with people in the workplace, said Devery.

"We're getting into prevention in a more active way at work sites doing job demand analysis, and getting people into a lot more fitness as well. We have also gone to sports teams to talk about injury prevention, and are quite willing and happy to do that sort of thing."

Promoting optimum health through physiotherapy

Physiotherapy is a form of health care which prevents, identifies, corrects and alleviates acute or prolonged movement dysfunction.

Promoting optimum health and function is the primary objective. Physiotherapists test and measure the function of the musculoskeletal, neurological, pulmonary and cardiovascular systems.

They also treat physical problems caused by illness, injury or birth defects.

To enter the profession, physiotherapists must graduate from an accredited education program and secure a license by successfully completing a provincial licensure examination.

Today's physiotherapists evaluate movement dysfunction, identify patient treatment goals, establish and implement individualized treatment programs, provide patient and family education, and conduct research to improve treatment techniques.

In the community, physiotherapists deliver rehabilitation care in the home, teach pre-natal and post-natal exercise classes, perform posture and scoliosis screenings in local schools and instruct back-care classes to prevent back pain and injury.

In industry they determine fitness requirements for specific jobs, evaluate employees with respect to job-related

In sports, physiotherapists evaluate performance weakness of athletes, condition athletes to correct physical deficiencies, recommend safety equipment to reduce injuries, and develop fitness programs for all segments of the general public.

In research they perform basic studies to develop and apply new technologies for patient care and design and conduct studies on the effectiveness of physical therapy.

New Lions Bay park named after local brothers

The Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks announced Thursday that 0.598 hectares of land has been granted to the Village of Lions Bay for a municipal park. The park, the David and Tom Wade Memorial Park, is dedicated to the memory of two local residents.

The Wade brothers lost their lives in a sudden flood of water and debris along Alberta Creek in Lions Bay in 1983.

The debris flow resulted in substantial damage to several properties along the creek.

After the flood, the Ministry of Transportation and Highways returned the remaining property to Crown lands.

In 1993 the Village of Lions Bay made an application to acquire the property as a municipal park in memory of the Wade brothers. The park is now complete.

Under the free Crown grant program, public land is allocated to communities for uses such as schools, firehalls, hospitals, recreation facilities and parks.

The new quilted fabric pall created for St. John's Anglican Church honors the memory of Rev. John McDougall.

Parish quilters add a touch of art to St. John's

BY MAUREEN MCDUGALL
Contributed to The Chief

A new piece of fabric art was dedicated at St. John's Anglican Church in Squamish on March 2. Though it was designed for use as a pall during funeral services, it serves the rest of the time as a wall hanging, adding a touch of beauty to the church.

It was made over a period of two years by five quilters in the parish, in a technique called watercolor quilting. It is 11 x 6 1/2 feet, and consists of 2,268 squares of 2 1/2-inch fabric of hundreds of different patterns.

Following a design chart, it was assembled in small sections which were then sewn together, and the border added. The quilting stitches, which bind the top, the interior batting, and the back together, are done entirely by hand and the design of these stitches is based on various church symbols.

The pall was the gift of St. John's Anglican Church Women in memory of the Reverend John McDougall who was an assistant at St. John's from 1972 to 1995.

The cross and the flames are a constant reminder to parishioners of the core of their Christian faith.

College offers summer ABE courses

BY VERN GIESBRECHT
Contributed to The Chief

Adult Basic Education (ABE) classes will continue in May and June at the Squamish campus of Capilano College this year. The spring term ends May 1, but for the first time a two-month summer term will be offered, beginning Monday, May 5, and ending Wednesday, June 25.

There will be three math-science classes each week during the summer term, two on Monday and one Wednesday evening, and two English classes, both on Wednesday. Instructors will be Richard Brand for math-science and Vern Giesbrecht for English.

Adult basic education courses are designed for adults who wish to finish high school, upgrade their education, or meet prerequisites for post-secondary training.

There is a $20 registration fee and each two-hour course costs $21.25 for the May-June term. Financial assistance is available for low-income students who qualify.

Capilano College is located at 1150 Carson Place, behind Howe Sound Secondary School. Current ABE students as well as new students are welcome to attend the Summer term. Adults who wish to continue their studies in the later part of summer may transfer to the Lynnmour campus of Capilano College in North Vancouver.

For more information, call the college at 892-5322.

GHE science students win honors at UBC

BY AL PRICE

The lack of a district science fair competition didn't deter the budding scientists at Garibaldi Highlands Elementary School.

They had their own fair, and last week five of them came home with medals and a special award from the highly competitive regional competition at UBC.

"The competition was tough and there were some really good projects," said Naomi Lang who, with her partner Teresa Spani won the special Truck Loggers Association award for their project on erosion by water, entered in the life science category.

Stephanie Sellers won a bronze medal in physical sciences for her display on inks and how they separate, while David Watson and Scott Sellers also brought home bronze medals in the computer science category for a project on electronic data storage.

More than 340 students from schools throughout the Lower Mainland submitted 225 projects to the regional competition, with 60 winning awards.

Workshops designed to enhance corridor business competitiveness

CONTRIBUTED TO
The Chief

Capilano College and the Squamish and Howe Sound Chamber of Commerce have entered into a training partnership to co-sponsor an annual workshop series called Business 2000.

The purpose of Business 2000 is to increase business competitiveness through human resource development in the Sea to Sky corridor. The series is designed specifically for business people as a means to stay current with new and developing business ideas and processes that suit the rapidly changing times.

Two one-day seminars will be offered annually:

- For managers and executives in October, during Small Business Week
- For administrative support staff in April, during Secretaries Week

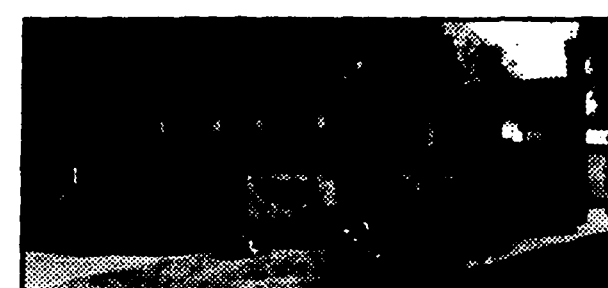

The first seminar for administrative support staff, Workplace 2000, is on April 24, at the Sea to Sky Hotel. Included will be sessions on business and work trends of the decade, secrets of networking and personal leadership in the workplace. Among the four people leading the seminar is Katy McIntosh, a business analyst and consultant to entrepreneurs in the Sea to Sky corridor.

McIntosh is the business counsellor and loans analyst at Community Futures. In the past she was business manager for Mr. Jax Fashions, and international operation which generated $25 million in sales annually.

The series offers multiple benefits. It is a cost-effective way to develop human resources. Business 2000 provides access to well known trainers without the added expense of time and travel outside the corridor. Workshop content is of immediate relevance to local business. Concepts and discussion can focus on local issues and developments.

The series provides an opportunity to expand one's sphere of productive business relationships. Strategic partnerships and informal alliances are increasingly a necessary part of business.

Wet cars help dry grad

Trace Hewitt did her human windshield washer impersonation Saturday as the Grade 12 class from Howe Sound Secondary School held a car wash at 7-Eleven. Funds raised will be used for the class dry grad this year.

Chris Wilkinson worked up a sweat making sure all the cars on Hwy. 99 knew about the car wash, and turned in.

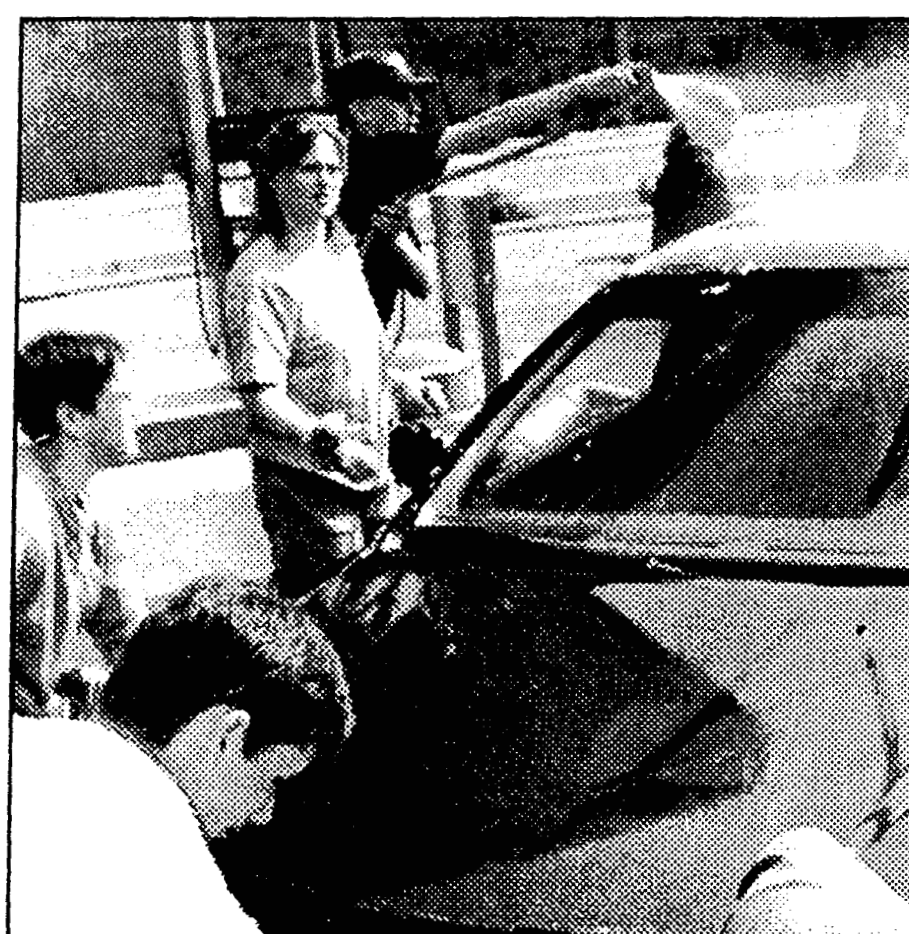

Jennifer Hurford played the part of the class hoser as she applied the rinse cycle to the cars.

Even the tires, and especially the chrome rims, got buffed.

Some cars got the whole team approach and were gleaming once again before the driver knew it.

Ken Jones was in charge of soaping this vehicle, and took his responsibilities very seriously.

Education

Students catch a glimpse of life in Saudi Arabia

Students in Ms. La Riviere's class at Garibaldi Highlands caught a glimpse of a very different part of the world last week when Mary Eaton showed them slides and talked to them about Saudi Arabia. She works with ultrasound and does tours of duty at a hospital there.

When the youngsters saw slides of inviting sandy beaches running alongside blue water, and were told that it is forbidden for women to swim there, they could not believe it is so. Nor could they really imagine a place where women are not allowed to drive cars and are forced by custom to wear the yashmak, which leaves only their eyes visible.

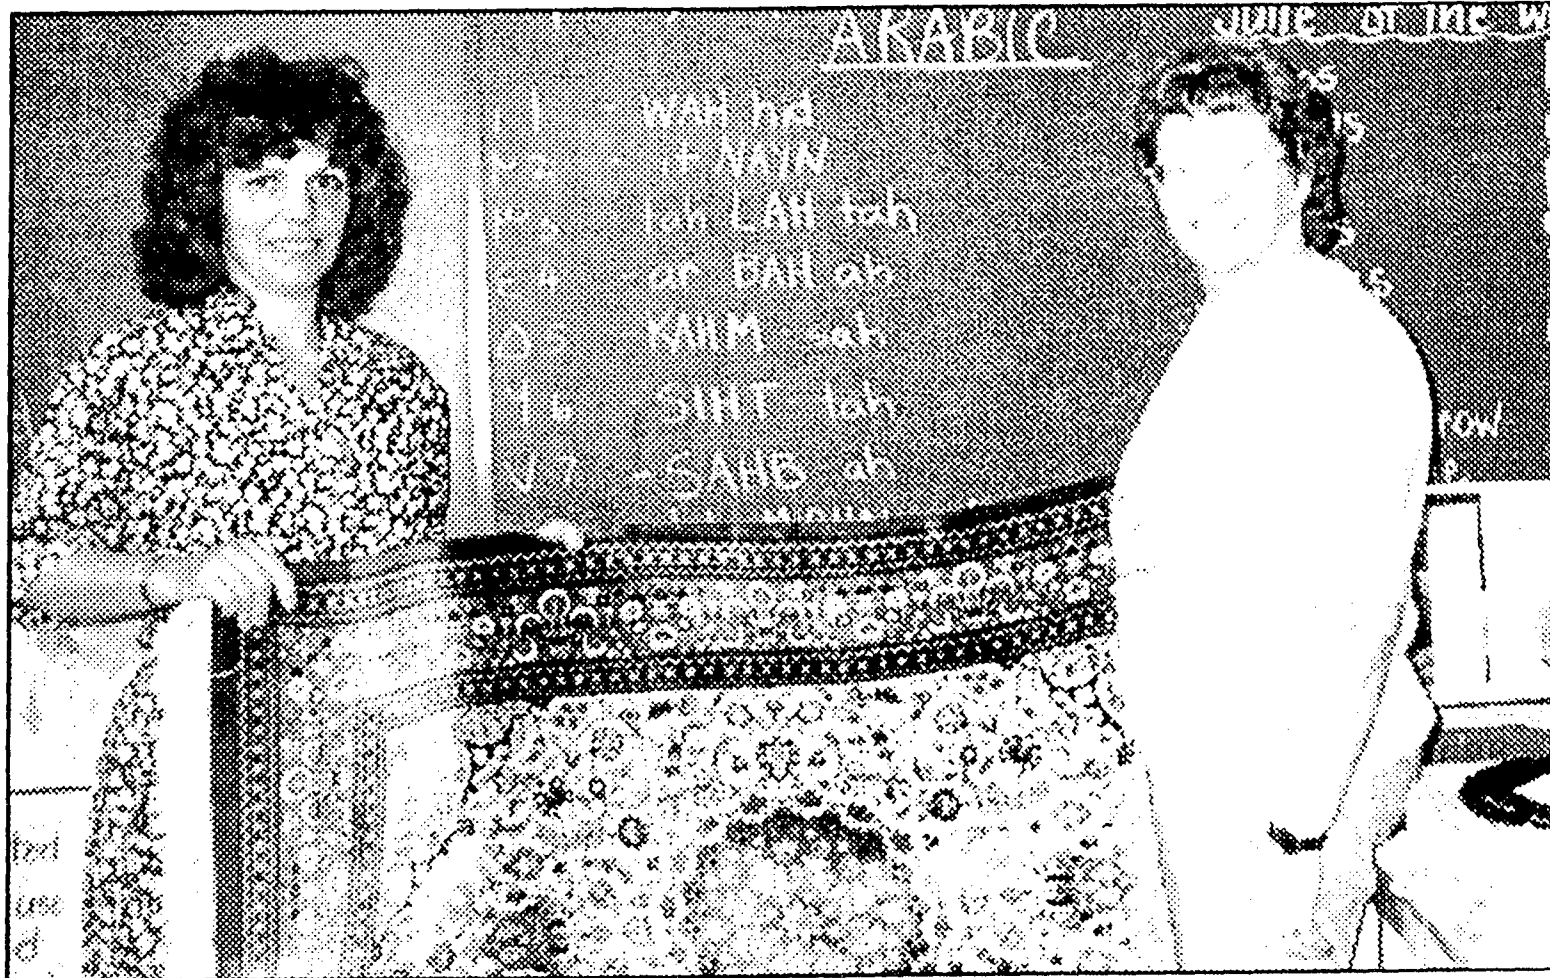

Ms. Eaton dressed the teacher in one of the enveloping, shapeless black garments the women have to wear out-of-doors, and Ms. La Riviere found it hot and uncomfortable even in our cool climate. Daniel, one of the boys in the class, modeled the white djellebah and red fez, the customary attire for males.

Some beautiful crafts Ms. Eaton displayed were very much admired. Woven carpets and leather slippers sewn with patterns of different colored leathers were examined, and the slides brought the scenery vividly to life. The frequent appearance of camels in the pictures, though, caused one student to comment that Ms. Eaton must be very fond of those particular animals.

The success of the whole presentation may be measured by the fact that the children were reluctant to have it end when the bell went for the beginning of noon hour.

Safety

A different kind of presentation was made by Const. Greg Lavorson of the RCMP to the students at Squamish Elementary. He talked to them about some common-sense ways of avoiding accidents and other forms of trouble. Before they would let him get down to the main topic, however, the youngsters felt they must first comment on his height. Lavorson is 213 cm (six feet nine inches) tall. When a student asked him if he often bumped his head going through doorways, I was pleased to hear him answer that being tall does not make one stupid.

He explained that his height does force him to look where he is going, perhaps more carefully than most people need to, and that many accidents could be prevented if young people would remember to do the same.

Most accidents occur close to home, in good, clear weather, and boys are more often involved than girls. When he asked for suggestions about why that should be so, a boy responded that boys are just always getting into trouble and taking the blame, but a girl suggested that boys are just more inclined to forget everything else when they are showing off.

There was considerable discussion about the importance of wearing helmets when cycling, and it was agreed the cost of buying a helmet is less than the cost of paying a fine for not wearing one. One student asked why the police officer sitting in his car near the school crosswalk does not go after students who ride by without helmets. The constable explained that the officer's first duty in that spot is to check speeding motorists to protect children crossing the road.

helped to celebrate the countdown to the year 2000.

Each team present at the Congress adopted a major project to be carried on in the interval. BSS representatives decided to adopt a school in a Third World country. The students are also going to establish a Global Citizens' Club. They will work on some local projects, such as Adopt a Grandparent. It all sounds extremely worthwhile.

Vancouver Youth Theatre

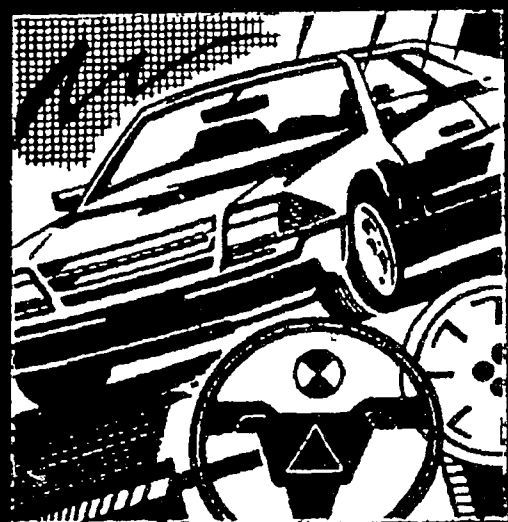

Jenna Galley has recently experienced the sweet taste of success. She entered her creative writing in a competition organized by the Vancouver Youth Theatre. This dramatic group read the submissions from students throughout the province and chose what they considered to be the 12 best stories or poems. They will use these as a basis for their future productions on stage.

Bowler earns silver

Squamish bowler John Spargo won the silver medal at the Youth Bowling Council provincial championships in Kelowna March 22-23. Spargo bowled a 257 average over five games to become the second best youth bowler in B.C.

Loonie Race tomorrow

The SORCA Loonie Race series begins tomorrow, April 16 at 5:45 p.m. with riders to meet at the yellow gate on Westway in Valleycliffe for a race in the Crumpit Woods.

Loonie races are for fun and exercise, and any skill level of mountain bike rider can enter. Races will be held every second Wednesday in different locations until the end of September. The $2 entry fees go to SORCA for trail maintenance.

Fishing fund raiser

In two years the Courtall's Classic celebrity fishing derby has raised $1.5 million for Canuck Place, the Vancouver hospice for terminally ill children and their parents.

Hosted by brothers Geoff Courtall of the St. Louis Blues and Russ Courtall of the New York Rangers, this year's Classic will be held June 26 at the Hotel Vancouver. Tickets are $350 per person. Following dinner, a live auction and a silent auction, derby participants and celebrity guests leave Vancouver for two days of fishing in the Queen Charlotte Islands. For information call (604) 899-7852/7853.

Boxing show no go

The Gloves of Granite II boxing show, which was scheduled for Saturday, April 12, was cancelled. Organizer Wayne Jackson of the Squamish Rock Boxing Club said most of the opponents for the Squamish boxers backed out at the last minute.

"It's a real challenge this time of year," he said because there are many other shows going on at this time. He also said he's having trouble finding opponents for Squamish boxers such as Steve Featherstone and Kevin Schellenberg, who have been successful in recent competitions. "No one really wants to mess with them."

The boxing club plans to host a show in June.

Cheeky Charlie's leads Premiership division

By DAVID DONALDSON
The Chief

With a 4-0 win over Squamish Khalsa Sunday, Cheeky Charlie's United rose to the top of the Premiership Cup standings in the Mountain Building Centre's Men's Soccer League playoffs.

"It was a great result for us," said sidelined Cheeky Charlie's player Gary Collins, who had to sit out the game due to injury. "Two good teams went at it...and our team came out on top."

Khalsa was out in full strength against the injury-riddled Cheeky Charlie's and Collins admits they're a more skillful team, but "on this particular day we played a more disciplined game than they did."

Khalsa's game broke down in the midfield as their backline tried to feed the long ball up to the forwards but "it never worked because our defence was gobbling it up all the time." They also got caught a lot in the offside trap.

"They got caught with their pants down and we took over in the midfield and that was that," Collins said. "If you look at the fundamentals of the game, we did something right, they didn't."

The first goal came late in the first half off a corner kick. The ball ended up on the ground in a muddle of players like in a rugby scrum and somehow got knocked in. The next three goals were all nicely done. Sean Keightley had the second and the third came from Dave Sweeney, who controlled it from the edge of the box "then bent the ball into the very top corner. It took forever to get in...it just crept and hooked and the goalie couldn't even move on it," said Collins. The fourth goal was scored by Richard Collins, who one-timed it on the volley from a free kick by Keightley.

Collins was very happy with a big win in such a tough contest. "Everyone comes out hard against us, they all raise their game to play us. It's nice in a way but it gets harder and harder every week, especially since we're the oldest team in the league."

"There's no substitute for young legs, let me tell you. I'd rather have a little bit of skill and lots of young legs than lots of skill and no legs."

In Sunday's other Premiership match, Ellis Moving Eagles bested the Squamish Sikh Society 4-1. For the Divisional Cup Continental Power Services beat Thunderhawks 4-2 and Local 170 earned a default win over Steelheads, who have now folded. This pushes ahead the Divisional final to this Sunday as Local 170 and Emerald FC play for the Cup. Ellis Moving plays Khalsa and Squamish Sikh Society faces Whistler Painting FC on the Premiership side, 10:30 a.m. at Centennial Field.

Austrians dominate Whistler Cup

By RAHOUL GHOSE
Whistler Question

Canadian and local skiers started Air Canada Whistler Cup competition off slowly Friday during Kinder 2 Super G action on Whistler Mountain's Ptarmigan run, taking only one of a possible six medals.

Quebec J2 Stephanie Ouellet-Decoste, skiing for team Canada, raced to silver finishing a mere .02 seconds behind the women's winner, Austria's Astrid Vierthaler who stopped the clock in 55.73 seconds. American Hilary McCloy raced to bronze in 55.89.

On the men's side Ontario's Adam Brown took the home side's top spot, finishing fourth with a time of 54.22.

Race favorite Piotr Kaczmarek of Poland topped the men's field in 53.57, while Austrians Marcel Lorenzin and Thomas Bogensperger captured silver and bronze.

Whistler's Ben Thornhill tied for a distant 12th, more than two seconds off the pace, while B.C. teammate Lowden Hunter took 14th.

When races turned to technical events Saturday on Raven/Ptarmigan the Austrians continued to dominate taking four of six Kinder 2 GS medals.

The Kinder 2 category features racers 13 and 14 years old while 11- and 12-year-olds compete in Kinder 1.

In the Kinder 2 GS Austria's Manuela Mair topped the women's field in 59.74. Austria's Petra Strassegger was second while Italy's Emmi Pezzedi finished third.

Whistler's Roxanne Rae, racing for Team Canada, finished sixth in 1:00.67 while Kvetoslav Safarik, with Team B.C., took 12th.

On the men's side B.C. racers Scott Hume of Squamish and Thornhill took the top Canadian spots finishing sixth and eighth respectively. Austrian Marcel Lorenzin topped the men's field in 57.25 followed by Poland's Kaczmarek and Austria's Bogensperger.

On the first day of Kinder 1 action Saturday Canadians earned two silver medals in slalom courtesy of Ontario's Jonathan Gillham and Invermere's Christina Lustenberger, who is competing for B.C.

Lustenberger finished .36 behind the winner, Slovakia's Veronika Zuzulova, while Slovenia's Spela Volaj finished third.

In all 10 Canadian skiers placed in the top 15. Whistler's Stephanie McDougall was 11th.

On the men's side Ontario's Gillham finished almost three seconds behind the winner, Italy's Kurt Pittschiler. Russia's Alexander Khorochilov was third while Cranbrook's Ryan Lenz finished fourth. Nine Canadians finished in the top 15 with Whistler's Aaron Gropper taking 10th and Team Canada's Manuel Paradis 15th.

B.C. was first in the overall Provincial Cup standings with 118 points and one silver and one bronze medal. Thornhill won the Dave Murray Trophy for best performance by a Canadian in the Kinder 2 men division and Lustenberger won the Nancy Greene Trophy for best Canadian performance in the Kinder 2 women category.

Dan Shollert, keeper for the Squamish FC over 40 team, makes a big save in Sunday's exhibition game against North Shore Shoppers Drug Mart. Both teams play in Soccer Fest.

'97 Soccerfest to be biggest yet

The ninth annual Trueline Trophies-Squamish FC Soccerfest tournament will be the biggest ever with 60 teams from the Lower Mainland and Fraser Valley coming to Squamish April 26-27 to play a year's worth of soccer in two days.

"It's the largest soccer tournament in western Canada and maybe even North America," says organizer Tom Johnstone.

Local clubs play in almost every division. Squamish FC will be the team to beat in men's open after winning four years out of the last six, but Squamish Sikh Society will also be a strong contender in that division. Local 170, Emerald FC and Mt. Currie round out the Sea to Sky area teams in the men's open.

Ellis Moving Eagles represent Squamish in men's over 30 but Bulldog Cafe, last year's winner, will be the team to beat. Squamish FC has a team in men's over 40 but they'll have their work cut for them against Germania, last year's winner, featuring some talented Squamish players. In the women's open Squamish Mickey D's and another Squamish FC team will play in a tough division and Bounty Hunters will be the team to beat in women's over 30. The kickoff is Saturday, April 26 at 8:30 a.m.

Cross training made more accessible with new dual pass

BY DAVID DONALDSON
The Chief

A new cooperative effort between the Squamish Athletic Club and the Brennan Park Leisure Centre Aquatic Centre will give the public new cross-training abilities at a low price.

A new three-month dual pass entitles passholders to use the facilities at both operations during June, July and August. The pass will be sold during May at the leisure centre for $200 plus GST to anyone 16 years and older.

"This is the first time private enterprise has joined forces with municipal-run operations to make them more accessible to the public," said Jim Lorman, general manager of the Squamish Athletic Club. The club's main goal is physical fitness with programs in weight training, nutrition, aerobics and circuit training, so swimming can fit neatly into the customized fitness programs.

"I'm really excited about it. It's a good opportunity to try both facilities," said the aquatic centre's programs director Janet Gugins. She said working at the aquatic centre and working out at the athletic club, she noticed many people doing one or the other but not both. "If you are serious about training you really need to do both."

For those who already have a full pass at either operation, a 50 per cent discount is available on the dual pass. Both centres offer drop-in daycare.

The program is running on a trial basis, and if successful could be back in a more permanent form next year, or possibly run in conjunction with other groups.

Senior soccer players to get their licks in Howe Sound Youth Soccer's senior boys and girls players will have the chance to "get their licks in at their coaches and some of the parents who have been shouting at them from the sidelines," in a couple of fun games Sunday.

The Has-beens vs. the Wanabeens is the annual match between senior youth players and their coaches and parents. This will be the first year senior girls players also have a crack at their mentors, says organizer Gary Collins.

"It's for kids in their last year of the youth league," he says. "It gives them the opportunity to play against players in leagues above and lets them know there's soccer after youth soccer."

After last year's match two youth players who still could have been playing on senior boys team this year proved they were ready to move up to the men's soccer league and have been productive members of their teams.

Collins hopes to see plenty of parents and fans out to watch this fun contest which is becoming a great Squamish soccer tradition. "So far it's 3 and 0 for the Has-beens but the Wanabeens are pressing hard."

Both games take place this Sunday at Centennial Field at 1:30 p.m.

Mae Palm attacks ultramarathons

Squamish runner racks up the miles in preparation for the Boston Marathon

By DAVID DONALDSON
The Chief

There's no slowing down for Marathon Mae Palm. With the Las Vegas Marathon just over a month behind her and the Boston Marathon next week, the Squamish runner has been increasing her mileage so, mentally, Boston will seem like a cake walk.

"I figure if I do all these longer distances I'm way ahead of the game mentally because I've only got to go and run half," she said.

On March 23, Palm and fellow Squamish runner Tom O'Brennan went to Burnaby to participate in the 15th annual Sri Chimnoy 50 Mile Ultramarathon, a run almost twice the distance of a regular marathon. Palm once again finished first in her category, 50+ women, with a time of 8:55:58. O'Brennan was seventh in open men at 9:42:38.

"I was really happy," Palm said of her time, a 40-minute improvement over last year. "It was probably easier this year because I had done more (miles). Last year when I went into it I went from 20 miles and just went and did 50, so obviously this year I was hoping to do a little better."

She says she considers the ultramarathon somewhat of a social event; she talks to people as they run, stops for brief rests and has some munchies. Some people, such as Malibu, Calif. runner Bruce Hoff, take it a little more seriously.

"He set a new record and he was in quite a hurry to catch his plane back so he just took off once he finished. I guess he was in a hurry all the time," said Palm. Hoff's first place, record-breaking finish was in 6:20:36.

But the Sri Chimnoy is not as competitive as it is supportive. "It's such a different kind of run. You know you're doing a long distance and each and every one of you are stepping in each other's footprints so to speak, so you're there for each other."

Even Hoff, upon lapping Palm the second time, told her she was doing well and encouraged her, while a cheering crowd helped an ill O'Brennan make it to the finish.

"I was really proud to see him come in because he wasn't feeling well," Palm said. "It takes a lot when you're not feeling well."

If the 50-miler wasn't enough, the following week Palm travelled across the border to Bellingham for the Chuckanut Mountain Ultra 50K, which she completed in 6:26.

"I was really pleased because that was fairly tough as well. You're running along the rim of a mountain so you really have to have your wits about you and make sure you don't go off the edge."

Palm has still maintained her regular training in between these mega-milers, and is also helping train some people for the Vancouver Sun Run.

On the horizon is the Vancouver Marathon May 4 and a marathon in Olympia, Wash. May 18 and possibly another ultra in Kelowna.

Whistler riders dominate BoarderCross

Local snowboarders take top honors in Blackcomb competition

By RAHOUL GHOSE
Whistler Question

Whistler riders made full use of their home-course advantage during the Kokanee North American BoarderCross Championships on Blackcomb's Gandy Dancer Saturday capturing 11 of a possible 12 podiums in pro and amateur competition.

National team rider Darren Chalmers led the local assault topping the 24-rider men's pro field and inching out Vernon's Drew Neilson and Whistler's Mark Friesen at the finish.

Whistler's Alison Clark claimed the women's pro title knocking off national team rider Kelly Kaye and Whistler's Vanessa Stark for the win.

In amateur competition Whistler's Eric Soucy and Melanie Smith topped their respective fields. On the men's side Soucy shared the podium with Whistler's Tim Hope and P. Shaw Reed. In women's competition Whistler's Tera Meade and Emi Yoshida took second and third respectively.

In all 154 riders contested the BoarderCross championships, a field which was reduced to 48 amateur men, 24 amateur women, 24 pro women and 24 pro men following timed qualification runs Friday.

Saturday's main event was the third and final stop on the Kokanee Kross Snowboard Series with the first two events being staged at Vancouver's Seymour and Kelowna's Big White earlier this year.

The races feature six riders simultaneously racing down a course consisting of bumps, jumps, banked turns and other wild features.

This year's Blackcomb course moved from Choker to Gandy to provide a steeper pitch for riders.

Event manager Pat McGuire said Gandy course offered great visibility for riders though conditions were initially icy and hard-packed.

This year's event also left some riders with lots of bumps and bruises with competitors being airlifted out with minor serious injuries.

Downhill bikers hit 100+ kph on Whistler slopes

By RAHOUL GHOSE
Whistler Question

What do you get when you combine perfect snow conditions, the steep incline of Whistler Mountain's Saddle Run, mountain bikes and an irrepressible need for speed?

The knobby-tired set found out Friday during the inaugural Norco Challenge which pitted seven Norco mountain bike riders against terrain normally reserved for skiers and boarders.

Rob Stables, Paul Fournier, Dale Douglas, Jussi Jaakola, Mike Edwards, Kevin Schaler and 16-year-old Dustin Adams, one of the fastest downhillers in the province, all pointed their wheels down the Saddle for the 20-plus second ride down to the second fallaway above the Peak Chair.

"Conditions were excellent...they couldn't have been any better thanks to the grooming department," said Fournier, one of only two riders to hit 119 km-hr.

"It's the absolutely the biggest thrill. When you get off the bike you are pumped...you are so high it's like a dream come true."

The seven riders each put two runs in with speeds ranging from 100 km-hr up to 119.

Dale Douglas was the second rider to hit the 119-mark while Adams, the youngest participant, reached 115 km-hr.

"I'm sure that's the fastest I've gone on a bike," Fournier said. "It gets so noisy that it gets silent and it's over in matter seconds so you really don't have time to think about what you are doing or when you are doing it," he said.

"You just have to let all your on-hill training, ski training come together for you and just relax, flow with it."

Fournier said there were some wipeouts during the morning session but not during actual runs.

Friday morning spectators for the event included Norco rider Daamiann Skelton, who is recovering from two broken wrists incurred during an on-hill snow riding accident in the Whistler snowboard park last week.

"She came out to show some support and she's coping quite well with the accident," Fournier said, adding Skelton was sporting blue and purple casts.

Next year Fournier said he would like to open up the downhill snow event to other riders. But that will depend on whether organizers can close down the Saddle Run course for a longer period of time.

Friday's event was staged before the Peak Chair was opened to the public due to concerns that skiers might stray onto the mountain bike course, he said.

Squamish Skaters win medals precisely

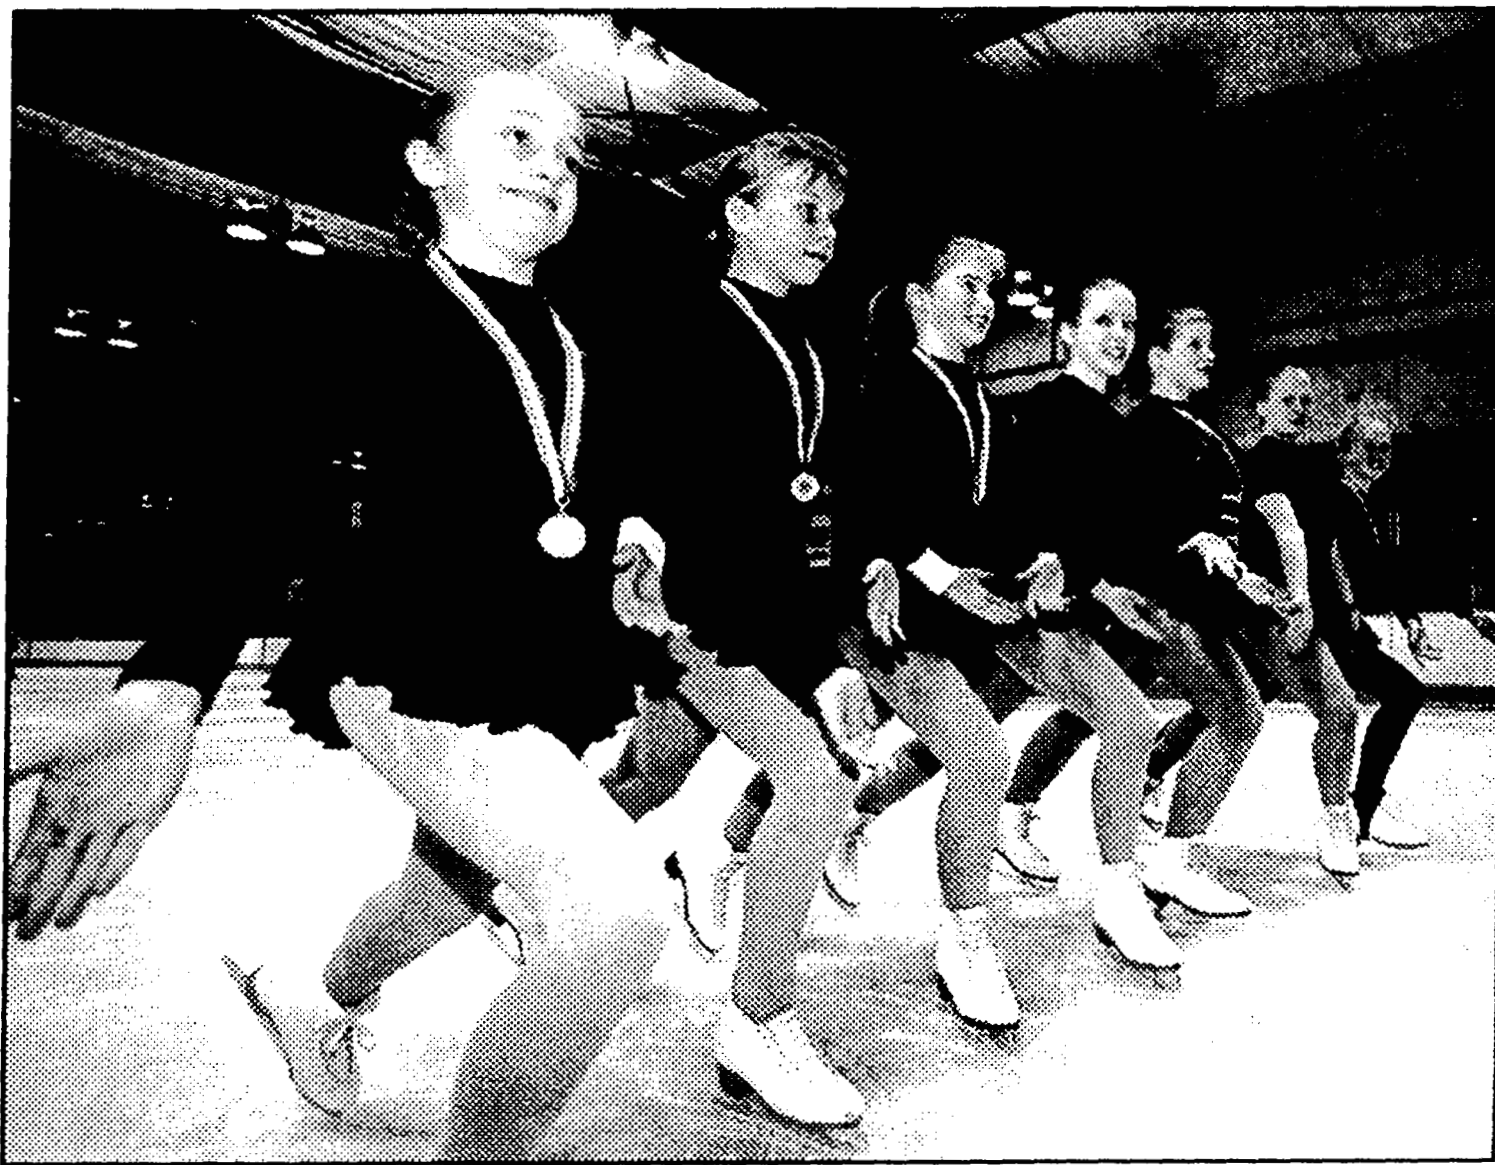

The Squamish Skating Club precision team, Precise Ice, had an extremely successful season in its first competitive year.

Coached by Sonia Charrington, the girls won a bronze medal at the B.C. Section Championships in Duncan in late January and a second bronze at the Penticton Ogopogo competition in February.

Team members are Lorena Turner, Katie Rattray, Maggie Sims, Katrina-Marie Lowe, Jessica Lock, Kelley Humphrey, Stephanie Braun, Aryn Lewis, Nicola Lang, Michelle Christie, Lindsay Braun, Nicole Maten and Cari Ionsen.

Squamish skaters brought home five medals from an artistic competition in West Vancouver over the Easter weekend.

Katrina-Marie Lowe and Christie Cunneyworth won the gold, silver medals went to Aryn Lewis and Cari Ionsen, and Lindsay Braun earned a bronze. Strong performances were given by Jessica Lock, Stephanie Braun and Maggie Sims.

HOROSCOPES

APRIL 13-19

ARIES - MARCH 21/APRIL 20

A co-worker tries to help you with a problem, but creates confusion instead. Don't get frustrated; it won't help the situation. Just work together to resolve the problem. Love is in the air at the end of the week. A friend of a friend reveals his or her true feelings for you. Scorpio plays an important role.

TAURUS - APRIL 21/MAY 21

Your tendency to keep quiet pays off in the beginning of the week. A close friend needs to talk and reveals personal information. Your confidence will be appreciated. When it comes to romance, you'll have to make a decision. Think about where you stand in that special relationship and where you want to end up.

GEMINI - MAY 22/JUNE 21

Be patient at work this week. While your boss may seem too conservative for you, he or she really has your best interest at heart. You need to look out for yourself when it comes to your personal life. It will feel like everyone is against you. Be cautious when making decisions.

CANCER - JUNE 22/JULY 22

Don't be the first to volunteer for a new project at work. Wait to see everything that's involved, because it may be more than you've bargained for. However, you should take a chance when it comes to romance this week. Don't wait for that intriguing person to ask you out. Make the first move.

LEO - JULY 23/AUGUST 23

Your sympathetic side will be called on early in the week. A loved one needs you to listen and give moral support. Be honest, but caring. Give in to your desires, and show yourself in luxury this weekend. It's going to be a hectic week at work, so you deserve to pamper yourself.

VIRGO - AUG 24/SEPT 22

While you usually like to be alone, working as a team at work this week will make things so much easier. You'll share a lot of good ideas and actually make some close friends. Loved ones will rely on you to take care of a family matter. Aquarius is involved.

LIBRA - SEPT 23/OCT 23

Seek harmony in the workplace this week. Don't become involved in an office disagreement. Family matters become hectic this week. Loved ones will look to you for advice and support. Take a deep breath. You'll be able to help everyone out and still have time for yourself.

SCORPIO - OCT 24/NOV 22

Follow your instincts in the business world this week. It's your nature to tell the truth, so stick to it. Don't be tempted to embellish; it will backfire. Love takes center stage as the week draws to a close. An old friend will resurface and want to begin a relationship. Follow your heart.

SAGITTARIUS - NOV 23/DEC 21

Be frank when a close friend asks for your opinion. While the truth may not be what he or she wants to hear, it's what he or she needs to hear. Your romantic life slows down this week, but don't get discouraged. This break will give you time to relax and focus on yourself for a change.

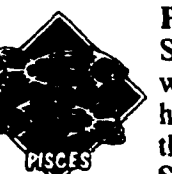

CAPRICORN - DEC 22/JAN 20

Now's your chance to shine at work. You'll be given the opportunity to lead a new project; your intelligence and efficiency will shine through. Don't be shy when it comes to meeting new people this week. Your sweet, sensitive side will endear you to someone with a lot of connections.

AQUARIUS - JAN 21/FEB 18

Let your practical side lead you in your decision making as the week begins. While it may seem like a good idea to make an impulsive purchase at first, don't do it. Finances will be tight by the week's end. A relationship will move into high gear when you realize how much you have in common with that special someone.

PISCES - FEB 19/MARCH 20

Slow down this week, because it will feel as if your entire world is closing in on you. A few days off of work will help you relax, and time with loved ones will show you that you're still in control of your life. Virgo and Sagittarius play important roles.
