Man lost in Pemberton landslide

By DAVID DONALDSON
The Chief

One man is missing following a massive landslide near Pemberton Saturday.

The slide started on the In-schuck-ch Forest Service Road, an old logging road 50 kilometres south southeast of Pemberton, at 9:20 a.m. from near the snow line at 1,128 metres elevation and ran down the slope into Gowan Creek, a tributary of the Alouette River. The total length of the slide is approximately 500 metres, its average width is about 50 metres and the average depth along the slide is about one metre.

"It went down through old growth forest and then near the very bottom of the slope it cut through a block that was being actively harvested...and unfortunately this one fellow was right in the line of fire when the thing came roaring through the woods," said Squamish geological engineer Frank Baumann, who was on the scene to check the stability of the slide.

Missing is Harvey Lacoursiere, a 55-year-old faller from Sorrento, B.C., an employee of Lincham Logging of Chilliwack, which was contracted to harvest the site by International Forest Products.

"Right away all of his co-workers just went roaring over there and literally took their lives in their hands to search for him," Baumann said. "They made an incredibly heroic effort."

Baumann and the other engineers walked through massive amounts of mud and debris where they saw foot prints left by the men in their vain search attempt. "I deal with these things all the time and I wouldn't have gone in there."

The ground search had to be called off due to undetermined instability in the area of the slide. A helicopter search unsuccessfully followed the ground search.

Search and Rescue personnel and several dogs with their handlers were on standby in the immediate area, but the search was stood down until Sunday due to fog, heavy precipitation and snow melt.

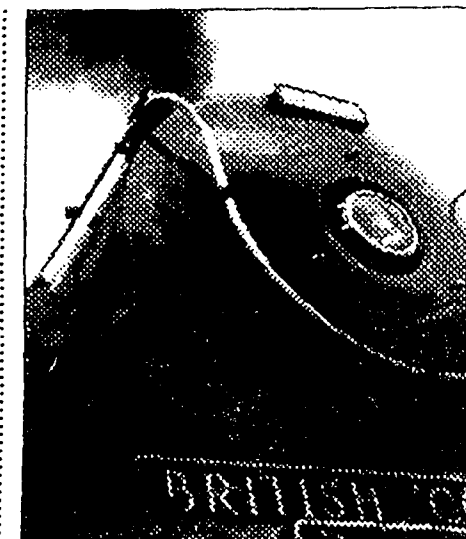

On Sunday geological engineers walked the entire slide path and provided an evaluation to all parties involved in the rescue efforts. Search and Rescue dogs and handlers from Whistler were dispatched to the scene along with metal detectors but were unable to recover Lacoursiere.

A further search was planned for Monday pending weather conditions and the stability of the slide.

Library closes to cut costs

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

The Squamish Public Library will be closed for two weeks during June to help cut down on costs and members of Friends of the Library are not pleased.

Marjorie Buchanan, facilitator of the voluntary library support group, said a petition is being circulated around the community to gather public support to let District of Squamish staff know many people do not appreciate the temporary closure.

The Squamish Public Library Association's board of directors announced last week the library will be closed June 8-22.

"We are saying, don't do this again, don't close our doors," said Buchanan. "This is a bad precedent. It's bad for (library) staff morale and it's bad for the community."

Buchanan said the petition has about 1,000 signatures so far and she expects there to be many more before Friends of the Library presents the petition to Squamish council in July. The petition can be found at various stores and restaurants. She said the group has accepted this year's closure but does not want it to become an annual measure to save money.

"We're not trying to antagonize council or the library board," she said. "But a lot of people in the community feel they should not close the doors."

Linda Hagen, a member of Friends of the Library, said the library is a necessity for many people.

"There's nowhere else you can go that brings pleasure to everyone for free," said Hagen. "I've only talked to one person who didn't want to sign the petition."

Muff Hackett, chairperson of the library board, said the closure was a difficult decision to make, but there was no other alternative. Hackett said when the board presented its request to the district for a $349,000 grant-in-aid for the library's 1997 operating budget, Squamish council asked the board to cut $40,000 from the amount.

Hackett said the board found a number of areas in which to save costs including reducing maintenance and janitorial expenses, reducing the cost of moving materials by using the help available, delaying and reducing a long-planned staffing increase and increasing book overdue fines to 25 cents per day. She said the decision to close the library for two weeks saves money by not having to hire replacement staff for employees who will be taking their holidays during the closure.

Hackett said the library will have extended loan periods and ensure book drops are cleared regularly during the two weeks. Members who took items out which are due back during the closure can return them when the library re-opens.

"We've made it as painless as we possibly can," said Hackett. "It was an unfortunate decision to have to make."

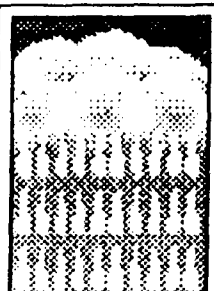

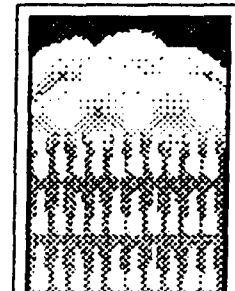

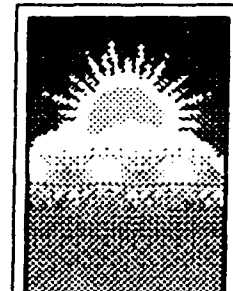

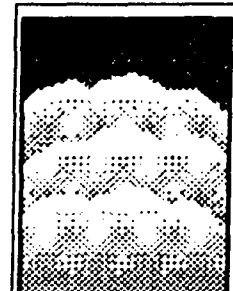

Hackett said the library will be closed again for one week in September during the move into the new building.

Ron Barr, currently acting mayor in Corinne Lonsdale's absence, said the move to close the library was made by the library board.

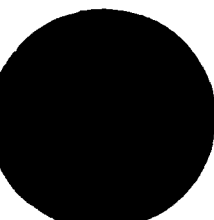

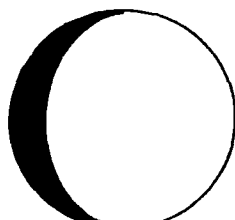

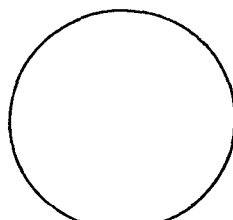

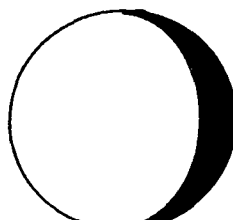

"Council had nothing to do with closing the library," said Barr. "The petition should go to the library board."

Relief for Smoke Bluffs users

Council approved a recommendation to allocate $1,350 to fund two portable toilets for visitors at the Smoke Bluffs climbing location. The suggestion for the toilets came from a task force committee set up to work on conflicts between climbers and residents in the area. Residents have complained about climbers and others using the site not having proper toilet facilities. Locations for the toilets are to be determined by the Parks and Recreation director. The committee is looking at installing more permanent toilet facilities at a later date.

Squamish council has established a sign committee to look at a number of signage issues which have recently arisen in the district. Following some debate council struck the committee during the May 20 regular meeting and directed staff to locate alternative sites for highway signs. Council also decided to honor a previous agreement with the Howe Sound Inn to allow the brewing company's sign to stay along Hwy. 99 for a one-year period.

On the council agenda this week

On the agenda for the June 3 council meeting to be held at 3 p.m. at Municipal Hall, 37955 Second Ave.:

• Council will consider a recommendation to appoint district of Squamish representatives to the project committee which will be established by the provincial government's Environmental Assessment Office for the review of a proposal for a ski resort at Brohm Ridge.

• Council will hear a delegation asking the district to form a flood control committee and to take steps to ensure Squamish's safety in the event of flooding.

• Council will discuss a recommendation to pay about $5,000 for a consultant to examine the transportation network in the district as part of the official community plan (OCP) update.

• Margaret Pallot, the principal of Howe Sound Secondary School, will appear in front of council requesting a contest be held to name the community theatre at the school.

• Council will consider adopting a bylaw to permit encroachment on district sidewalks for the purpose of operating sidewalk cafes.

Sandwich board signs get council's approval

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Squamish business owners can officially put their sandwich board signs out on district sidewalks following a decision made by council during the May 20 regular meeting.

Squamish council approved a motion to instruct district staff to bring forward a bylaw amendment to permit sandwich board signs as soon as possible and to not enforce part of the current sign bylaw which prohibits the signs.

Sandra Wahl, co-chair of the Squamish Merchants' Association, said council's decision will likely improve business for a lot of area merchants who benefit from having the signs in front of their locations.

"It think it's a positive step," said Wahl. "The town definitely looks open for business with the signs."

District of Squamish staff were considering plans to enforce its bylaw banning sandwich board signs on municipal property including streets, boulevards and sidewalks. The bylaw has been in place for a number of years but had not been enforced. Council members had expressed concerns about the district being liable for people injuring themselves by tripping over the signs. But Wahl said businesses' insurance policies are able to cover liability costs for accidents which could result from sandwich board signs.

"The real issue is liability," said Wahl. "Merchants are required to have their own liability insurance and they should make sure that they do."

Acting mayor Ron Barr said an amendment to the sign bylaw to allow sandwich board signs will likely be on the council agenda some time this month.

Bryan Gordon is on the road to recovery

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Relieved. That's the word Squamish resident Cheryl Gordon uses to describe how she felt when doctors told her that her four-year-old son Bryan is in remission. Bryan has been fighting Burkitt's Lymphoma, a rare form of cancer, since last September.

When you ask Bryan how he feels today, he says "fine" and continues playing.

Gordon says she was told about one month ago Bryan is successfully beating the disease and no more cancer cells were present. But although the road to recovery is now easier, there are still many obstacles for Bryan to overcome.

"His heart is enlarged and he still has high blood pressure" says Gordon. "Now he has to see a cardiologist."

Burkitt's Lymphoma is a malignant tumor which affects the lymphocytes, part of the body's immune system. It affects an average of three to four people in B.C. annually and is rare in adults.

Bryan had been undergoing chemotherapy at the B.C. Children's Hospital in Vancouver since his diagnosis. Although the radiation treatment has stopped, Bryan still has to take several types of medication daily. He still goes to his doctor in Squamish for weekly check-ups and will make monthly visits to the children's hospital.

One of the major changes for Bryan, who now weighs about 22 kilograms, is that he is now able to eat orally again. He had been receiving his food and medication through a tube going directly into his stomach. His hair is also beginning to grow back.

"It'll be nice if he has (hair) for school," says Gordon.

She says if Bryan continues to get better, he will likely be off the medication in about six months.

"We're just trying to see if he can maintain his weight," she says. "Next month we'll see if he can have the tubes going into his stomach taken out."

Gordon says doctors have told her Bryan's next critical time will likely be when he enters puberty when he may be more susceptible to contracting cancer again.

"He has a higher chance of getting another kind of cancer than most people," she says.

Gordon says she would like to see the remaining money in the Bryan Gordon Fund go to the Squamish General Hospital and the cancer unit at the children's hospital.

"I really think Squamish and the children's hospital have been great," she says.

Squamish Coun. Dave Young had opened a bank account for Bryan at the Bank of Montreal in Squamish. Donations were made to the fund to help pay for Bryan's medical travel costs, special food, other health-related expenses and to help the Gordon family get back on their feet. The Canadian Cancer Society's emergency aid program continues to pay for Bryan's medication costs.

Young said the fund has raised more than $11,000 in total donations from the community and has about $7,500 remaining. He said he will discuss with the Gordon family where the remainder of the fund's money should go.

"I'm ecstatic with the response from the community," said Young. "The community was more than willing to pitch in and help."

Community partners to build bridges

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

A proposed plan to build three bridges to connect recreational trails in Squamish may soon become a reality.

Jim Harvey, project coordinator of a community project called Bridges for Squamish, is hoping to get funding from Forest Renewal B.C. (FRBC) to build bridges over the Little Stawamus River, Loggers Creek and at Brohm Lake. Harvey said he is waiting to hear back from FRBC to see if the project will get the funding.

"Everyone's ready to go," said Harvey. "But we still need to do an environmental impact study."

Three volunteer groups, the Squamish Trails Society, the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society and the Little Stawamus Streamkeepers Group, along with the Squamish Nation and the District of Squamish selected three trails bisecting unique ecological areas which would benefit from wooden pedestrian bridges across them. Harvey said each bridge will be a key to linking certain trails with others. The Little Stawamus River Bridge would connect with the Valleycliffe loop trail, the Loggers Creek Bridge would link the Brennan Park and Smoke Bluffs trails, and Brohm Lake Bridge would join the interpretative forest there, located north of Squamish.

"We're hoping to rehabilitate salmon runs in the Little Stawamus," said Harvey.

He said the bridge at Brohm Lake would greatly improve access to interpretative trails in that area. The Empire Logging Division of International Forest Products has indicated its interest in donating materials and equipment for this bridge.

Harvey said environmental impact studies will likely be done sometime this summer or fall, depending on FRBC's approval.

He said he hopes crews can start construction of the bridges by November. The Little Stawamus would be built by members of the Squamish Nation's enviro-youth group while the other two would be constructed by displaced forest workers.

"Squamish is a town that has been totally affected by forest industry changes," he said. "A town like Squamish should be taking more advantage of its outdoor recreation possibilities."

Harvey said the project's main goals are to lessen the impact of job loss in the forest industry by creating short-term employment for forest workers and to teach them new skills, to bring together a broad cross-section of the community to develop a network of nature trails and to facilitate a community awareness of the potential for eco-tourism in the district.

Harvey said following the first phase of assessment, planning and design, the focus will be on the actual building of the bridges. He expects the entire project to take about eight months to complete. Trail work, including on-going maintenance, is expected to be done on a volunteer basis by community groups responsible for each bridge and trail network.

Squamish council gave its support in principle to the proposal during the May 20 regular meeting and council members voted to indicate to FRBC the district's wishes of being the proponent of the project. The district is asking for $222,420 from FRBC to implement the project.

"This project links up a variety of trails that wouldn't otherwise have the connection," said Bob Kusch, Parks and Recreation director. "It's a positive move for the community."

The plan has been designed in consultation with local representatives of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans, the Squamish Forest District, B.C. Environment and has been endorsed by the Soo Coalition for Sustainable Forests and the Squamish Nation.

CONSENSUS
VS.
CONFRONTATION

Here we go again.
The Ruckus Society is training eco-extremists in preparation for boycotts and blockades this summer in the Lower Mainland. But last year, local communities, environmental groups, workers and industries reached a consensus on land use in the area. And signed an agreement.

Of course, the Ruckus Society isn't interested in reaching a consensus. They're part of the old school of eco-extremists who still believe anything goes to get their own way. Nor do they rely on the support of the majority for their actions. Their support comes from celebrity activists like Ted Turner and Jane Fonda. But Ted and Jane don't live here. They don't work here. And they don't depend on the area for their livelihood. We believe reasonable British Columbians are tired of the tactics of intimidation and the use of illegal activities that endanger lives and disrupt communities. Now more than ever, we need to build bridges, not barricades.

Backyard burning could be limited

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Stricter regulations for backyard burning are part of a more comprehensive fire prevention bylaw which Squamish council will soon consider for adoption. Council gave first three readings to the spruced-up bylaw during the May 20 regular meeting.

The new bylaw, meant to provide better regulations for the control and prevention of fires, limits backyard burning of garden refuse one week in April and one week in October. Residents would be required to obtain $5 permits for burning. The exact dates for each year would be determined by Pat Hampson, chief of Squamish Fire Rescue.

Under the current bylaw, residents are able to do backyard burning during specific times from April 15-October 15.

"We're trying to encourage people to compost their garden refuse," said Hampson. "The whole thrust of this bylaw is to clean up the area."

The bylaw defines garden refuse as grass, clippings, leaves, and tree and shrub prunings. Hampson said if residents do not comply with the new regulations, if they are approved, Squamish Fire Rescue will likely attend backyard burns, extinguish the fire and homeowners could be charged with the cost incurred by the fire department. The bylaw also states anyone in contravention of an included provision could be fined as much as $2,000.

Other sections of the bylaw include changed regulations for fireworks, hydrants and standpipes, solid fuel burning appliances and access routes.

Hampson said Squamish Fire Rescue has been fine-tuning the proposed bylaw for several months. Council rejected a proposed fire prevention bylaw in March.

"We hope this one will pass," he said. "We've had a lot of complaints over the years from people with breathing problems."

Hampson said he has considered the fact that more people may illegally dump their garden refuse rather than compost it or take it to the landfill site.

He said it would not be that great of a concern for the environment because, unlike regular household garbage, garden refuse is biodegradable.

"We may get more dumping, but I guess those people would have dumped their refuse anyway," he said.

RCMP cells need safety improvements

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Squamish RCMP's staff sergeant said the local detachment's jail cells are in dire need of upgrading. Rex Henry asked Squamish council during the May 20 regular meeting to consider getting upgraded cells for the proposed new public safety building.

Henry said safety hazards of the outdated cells were brought to his attention in February when someone being held in jail attempted suicide by hanging using a piece of clothing tied to the bars. Henry said the current cells in Squamish, with sliding doors of reinforced bars and steel bunks, are no longer used in many parts of the province. He said the detachment's cells do not meet the new higher standards which are designed to prevent suicide.

"This incident has given us cause to take a closer look at the safety of our six cells," said Henry.

He said the cost of upgrading would be high but the liability costs for the district would be even higher if a suicide or serious injury were to happen.

"I don't like the idea of putting prisoners into the cells, but we'll take every precaution to make sure guards check on them regularly," said Henry.

Whooping cough cases confirmed in corridor

BY SHAWN HALL
Whistler Question

Sometimes that childhood cough isn't just a cold.

One case of whooping cough was confirmed in Squamish recently. Several unconfirmed cases have been reported throughout the corridor, including Whistler.

Area public health officer Dr. Paul Martiquet said there isn't too much to worry about, but that parents should get their children immunized and should visit a doctor if any symptoms are evident.

"This is a life-threatening disease that we have the means to immunize against," he said. The disease can be fatal, particularly to young children, but is easily treated with antibiotics.

Martiquet estimated eight per cent of parents don't believe in immunization, which is no longer mandatory before entering school.

The confirmed case was tested May 1. It took 12 days for the swab to come back from the Vancouver laboratory. Because of that lag and a delay of one to two weeks after infection before symptoms show, it's important potential cases be checked out. The disease is contagious before symptoms are apparent.

Pemberton/D'Arcy public health nurse Sue Clarkson said even a case that isn't clinically confirmed can be whooping cough, or something like it.

Symptoms include repeated violent cough with a whooping sound, sometimes followed by vomiting, and cold-like symptoms, Clarkson said.

"You can have whooping cough for a long time if you're not treated," she said. "Parents should make sure their kids are fully immunized. A lot of families forget about the kindergarten boosters.

A Myrtle Philip school teacher who wished to remain anonymous said about seven children from her class and him/her self now have symptoms. One child had it for two weeks before being tested and pulled from the classroom. The teacher said she figured it was allergies.

"In the meantime I had five or six kids in my class violently ill with the cough. I was put in jeopardy. I'm 50-years-old and my lungs are full of fluid (from complications).

"Full-blown whooping cough was let to go by. I can't believe it."

The teacher said health officials should take this more seriously, requiring immunization and making the disease higher-profile.

"Are we going to wait until the have polio before we immunize kids before they go to school?"

Parents shouldn't send kids with symptoms to school, but should take them to a doctor to ensure their condition isn't contagious, she added.

"Young mothers should be told to immunize their children," she said. "It's a very, very serious health issue. Immunization of children is a health issue. All it takes is one child to spread the disease."

Myrtle Philip Principal Rick Price said they're watching for potential cases at the school.

"As far as I know there isn't really a problem," he said. "We've been keeping a close eye on it and have been in contact with public health."

Six youngsters were diagnosed with whooping cough in Squamish between December and March. Another was diagnosed September last year.

Cheakamus coho habitat improved

Cheakamus Task Team project also helps residential access

BY DAVID DONALDSON
The Chief

The Cheakamus Task Team has undertaken two projects in the Upper Squamish valley that will improve critical wintering habitat for coho salmon and improve an access road for local residents.

About 600 cubic metres of gravel is being removed from Dave's Pond, a groundwater-fed pond adjacent to the Cheakamus River, as part of an enhancement project initiated by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans (DFO). Removing the gravel will provide more wintering habitat for young coho salmon, which spend a year in the fresh water before making their way to the ocean.

"The coho like ponds with old trees in them like Dave's Pond because it provides a sanctuary from bird predators and high-velocity winter floods," says DFO biologist Matt Foy.

The gravel removed from the pond will then be used to raise the road downstream of Elkin's Lane, near the Bailey bridge, about a metre to improve access to local residences during small floods.

"In the past, the river would overflow its bank every three years or so and cause a pool to form on the road," says Robert Bland, consulting engineer to the task team. "Raising the road should alleviate that problem."

The Cheakamus Task Team includes residents of the upper, middle and lower Cheakamus River areas, and representatives from the Squamish Nation, District of Squamish, Squamish-Lillooet Regional District, the Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks, DFO and B.C. Hydro.

It was formed in 1992 to explore projects which would maximize the operating flexibility of Daisy Lake Dam and reduce the effects of downstream flooding on the Cheakamus River. B.C. Hydro provided the funding — $500,000 allocated for projects over a five-year period. The cost of the gravel removal project is estimated at $10,000.

Harry Brownlow, B.C. Hydro regional environmental coordinator and task team member, says the team is "continually looking at projects. There's still some money left in the budget."

In the past year the team has worked on projects including the reinforcement of the Cheakamus River suspension bridge near Culliton Creek, the investigation of Cheakamus River bank erosion near the Squamish Valley Road bridge, and the installation of a temperature sensor at the Black Tusk microwave site.

Shelf-supporting campaign at mid-point

The Squamish Public Library Board's shelf-supporting fund-raising campaign to furnish the new library recently passed the $60,000 mark. The board is hoping to raise about $125,000 by the end of the summer to purchase shelves and other furnishings for the new facility.

School board works on crosswalk safety

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

A special crosswalk committee set up by the board of trustees for Howe Sound School District 48 is trying to improve safety at school crossings throughout the district.

The committee, comprised of trustees, school board staff members and representatives from various interest groups, has held three meetings since March to find ways to make crossings safer for children. The committee's next meeting is scheduled for June 10.

Constance Rulka, chairperson of the board, said although safety issues have not yet been completely resolved, some concrete decisions have been made. Rulka said the school board is assembling a crosswalk safety education package with the help of the Squamish RCMP.

"We've all decided the main thing needed is education about traffic and safety," said Rulka. "We're going to put together a useful kit for the schools."

Rulka said the package will include information for parents about speeding, proper ways to drop off and pick up their children and parking lot safety. The kit is to be completed and ready to use by September.

The committee identified Squamish Elementary, Stawamus

Elementary and Signal Hill Elementary as the schools with the greatest need for adult crosswalk guards. The committee is also looking into making changes at Brackendale Elementary crossing and working with the provincial government to have the Mamquam pedestrian overpass caged. The board carried a motion during the May 14 regular meeting to use guards at the three most dangerous crossings and to consider them for Brackendale and Mamquam Elementary schools for the 1997/98 school year.

The committee also looked at other options including training students as guards, installing fencing at the Stawamus Elementary crosswalk on Guildford Drive to divert student traffic, moving the crosswalk at Brackendale Elementary and sharing the costs of crossing guards with the District of Squamish.

Doug Hackett, chairperson of the Stawamus Elementary Parent Advisory Committee, said he thinks the safety information package will be useful.

"One of the biggest problems is speeders," said Hackett. "And it's often the very parents whose children are at risk who are doing the speeding."

Hackett said he expects the process of improving crosswalks to be a long one but he's glad the school board is taking action.

"I'm comfortable that the situation has been addressed at the schools where it needs to be," he said.

Gas leak causes no major problems

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

A construction crew putting in a new sewage line punctured a natural gas line at the Mamquam bridge on Government Road Wednesday. No injuries were reported.

Peter Martin, manager of Squamish Gas, said the line was hit at around 10 a.m. and it took gas crews, including some from B.C. Gas in West Vancouver, about eight hours to correct the problem. Martin said a bypass gas line was installed to provide service to gas customers living north of the bridge while the damaged pipe was fixed. He said there was no loss of service and no one was injured because the gas leak occurred outdoors.

"Our primary concern was the safety of the workers and the public," said Martin. "It was time-consuming, but the whole operation went smoothly."

Martin said this incident was another reminder to dial before you dig.

"We ask people to contact Squamish Gas before they dig," he said.

Kathy Auringer, office manager of Coast Valley Contracting, the company installing the new line, said the crew had been told by Squamish Gas where to dig and when they dug the line was hit.

"We followed procedure," said Auringer. "Squamish Gas had laid out the line."

POLICE BLOTTER

Driver leads police in downtown chase

The driver of a stolen Whistler Parks and Recreation Department van led Squamish RCMP on a chase on May 25 at around 3 a.m. Police spotted the vehicle travelling southbound on Hwy. 99. Cpl. John Laseur said police attempted a routine check of the vehicle when the driver suddenly took off causing a police pursuit. Laseur said the driver turned onto Cleveland Avenue and continued driving the wrong side of the street. After going through all four-way stops on Cleveland, the driver of the stolen vehicle turned down an alley behind the Howe Sound Inn. "Police had checked off during this occurrence as the likelihood of a serious motor vehicle accident was present in the downtown core," said Laseur. He had a male suspect then abandoned the vehicle, ran from it and was able to escape police officers. A police dog was later brought in to search for the individual but was unsuccessful. Laseur said the vehicle had been stolen from Whistler that evening and the ignition was broken. Police are investigating the incident.

Squamish RCMP responded to a report on May 26 of an injured skier in Garibaldi Park. The skier, a Vancouver man, had sustained on-life threatening injuries to his knee and was unable to complete his trip. Squamish Search and Rescue crews found the skier in an area known as the gargoyles. The man was transported by helicopter to the Squamish Municipal Airport where he was then taken to Squamish General Hospital for treatment.

Squamish RCMP responded to a report of a break, enter and theft on May 23 near Lake Cowichy Water. A shed used by the Ministry of Environment and B.C. Hydro had been entered and vandalized. A solar panel had been removed from the roof and environmental equipment was found destroyed. Police are investigating the incident.

The RCMP responded to a report of break, enter and theft on May 26 at the building housing the Squamish Valley Rod and Gun Club. Suspects damaged the door to gain entry to the building and stole a television and VCR.

No one was injured in a single-vehicle accident on May 24 on Hwy. 99 at the Alice Lake Provincial Park turn off. A vehicle pulling a trailer jack-knifed while heading northbound on the highway at around 1:30 a.m. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at about $3,000.

The Squamish RCMP have received several reports of thefts from garages and sheds on private property. Police suggest people keep as few valuables stored in these buildings as possible and to keep them locked at all times.

At 7 a.m. May 29 the police were notified of two smoldering vehicles which had been burned overnight just off the emergency access road near Buckley Ave. Investigation revealed a 1996 Ford pick-up belonging to Sabre Holdings in Whistler and a Mazda MX3 Precidia belonging to Greg Gardner GM had been stolen overnight. A total of four stolen vehicles have been found burned in this area in the last two weeks.

A 31-year-old Vancouver man is facing sexual assault and unlawful confinement charges after holding a Vancouver woman in her 30s against her will. RCMP Cpl. John Laseur said the woman was brought to Squamish in a car on May 18 and was forcefully held by the man. She managed to escape when they stopped at a gas station, and contacted police at around 7:30 a.m. RCMP members apprehended the man on Garibaldi Way. The investigation was turned over to the Vancouver Police Department's serious crime unit.

COHS WEEK

CANADIAN OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH AND SAFETY WEEK

BC Rail, Squamish OH&S Committee and Corporate Safety would like all employees and their families to recognize June 02- June 08 as Canadian Occupational Health and Safety (COHS) Week. This is the first year that the United States, Mexico and Canada will simultaneously observe NAOSH Week, in a united attempt to heighten public awareness concerning the importance of workplace safety and health in North America.

COHS Week is an annual event sponsored by the Canadian Society of Safety Engineering (CSSE), in association with the Workers' Compensation Board, Human Resources Development Canada and the Ministry of Labour.

COHS Week is intended to increase awareness of the importance of occupational health and safety, and ultimately, to help reduce injuries and illness in the workplace and off the job.

This year, the theme is "Managing Safety". This theme was chosen because the national committee recognizes that effective proactive safety management is essential for successful health and safety programs in the workplace.

In British Columbia, two workers are permanently disabled every hour.

The OH&S Committee will be sponsoring events throughout the week, and encourages all employees and their immediate families to participate and promote safety in their work area and off the job.

The OH&S Committee would like to thank the following Companies and people for their support and donations in making our COHS Week a great success:

EDITORIAL

Give of your time as well as your wallet

As the Gordon family breathes a sigh of relief with Bryan's cancer now in remission, the people of Squamish who donated to the Bryan Gordon Fund can pause to enjoy a brief pat on the back.

But only a brief one. Always generous when it comes to local charities, the community raised about $11,000 for the fund, the remainder of which Cheryl Gordon would like to see go to the Squamish General Hospital or the cancer unit at Vancouver Children's Hospital.

However we need to get back to work because there is still much more we can do for other needy causes here. SGH kicks off its Hospital Fund Raiser Sunday with a giant garage sale at the Sea to Sky Hotel. By the end of the year the hospital is hoping to raise $1 million for much needed new equipment and services — something that will without a doubt benefit the entire Howe Sound area.

The Squamish Public Library is still campaigning for funds as well, in an effort to raise $125,000 to furnish the new building with shelves and by June 1 has raised $60,000 — almost half. The library is an important part of our community and deserves our support. Any aid to the library is an aid to learning and a blow to illiteracy.

The Squamish Food Bank Society recently reported on the generous cash and food donations it has received from the community but evidently more help could have been used as people had to be turned away in March and May after food had run out.

The area where Squamish really needs to take up the slack is volunteerism.

The food bank has issued an urgent plea for board members and distributors to help with their regular monthly management. Big Brothers Big Sisters of Squamish, an organization that everyone can agree is vital to the happiness and well-being of many children here, faces closure because of lack of volunteers, and sports organizations such as minor softball and the boxing club also face an uncertain future without more volunteer help.

There are many people in Squamish who divide their time between different organizations, but how long can they keep it up on their own? Sure it's hard for many to find the time to give, but it will be much harder on the community as a whole if these organizations disappear.

We have proven we can give of our wallets, so now we must try to give of our time. As with money, any amount is helpful.

It's time to make impaired drivers responsible

Editor,

Recently I had the honor of tabling the Substance Abuser Rehabilitation Act, a private member's bill, in the B.C. Legislature. Passing this bill into law will prohibit convicted impaired drivers from getting behind the wheel until they have undergone mandatory assessment, and if necessary, counselling for substance abuse problems.

Impaired drivers maim and kill innocent victims on our roads every year. We can build bigger jails and levy more fines, but this problem is begging for a better, longer-term solution.

Successful substance abuse counselling of impaired drivers, mandated by law, would not only prevent future accidents from occurring, but lead to healthier families as well. According to some estimates, as many as 85 per cent of first offenders have a significant problem with the use of alcohol.

The B.C. Automobile Association supports this legislation. In a survey of its membership, 87 per cent of respondents supported mandatory assessment and counselling of impaired drivers.

According to BCAA, fully 57 per cent of those charged with impaired driving have had a similar charge within the last five years. Police estimate that repeat offenders may operate their vehicles on hundreds of occasions before they are apprehended.

The financial costs of the status quo are staggering. In 1995, alcohol related crash and injury claims cost B.C. motorists more than $200 million.

My plan would impose no cost on government. Convicted offenders would be required to pay for assessment and counselling.

It's time to act and make impaired drivers responsible for their substance abuse problems. Six years ago, the B.C. Royal Commission on Health Care recommended that impaired driver assessment referral and treatment be included as a plan to reduce the proportion and severity of alcohol-related accidents. We can't wait any longer.

In communities around British Columbia there are crosses and markers siting the places where innocent victims lost their lives to impaired drivers. My B.C. Liberal colleagues and I are calling

Golf is surprisingly fun

As I stepped on to the green at our local golf club, I felt as though I had been whisked into a world of collared shirts and spiked shoes, and out of the busy hub-bub of Squamish. I was overwhelmed by the amounts of people who were busily polishing clubs, shining shoes, and lathering on sunscreen.

A year and half ago, I couldn't imagine myself on a golf course. Now, here I was getting ready to tee off. I noticed that none of the players were wearing goofy pants and there were people playing that looked about my age. Not what I had expected. Hmmm.

Over the past couple of years, golf has rapidly grown into a widespread sport. Golf has swept the world by surprise. Many people have enjoyed this sport for years, but just recently more and more people are taking a shot at this pastime.

Golf legends like Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Greg

Norman and Gene Sazzarizan, have paved a road for many golfers to come. Presently, ace golfers Tiger Woods, Karrie Webb, and Justin Lenard, are all taking turns in the bright spotlight of the media.

From the Skins Game to The Masters, one golf match title can win a professional golfer as much as $1 million.

Golf is a relaxing sport. It takes patience, stamina, and a wee bit of luck. The atmosphere surrounding the game of golf is a tad stereotypical, but the attitude towards golf makes the game what it is. It is really nice to play a sport where the only four letter words are hole, putt and fore.

Locally, we have seven courses in the Sea to Sky corridor to play on. Big Sky, Furry Creek, Nicklaus North, Chateau Whistler, Whistler Golf and Country Club, Pemberton, and our very own Squamish Valley, all have excellent views and breath taking scenery. Difficulty of the courses varies and so does the price.

Sarah Webb

After a couple of rounds, I fell in love with the sport. Golf is way more exciting than it looks, and you get a great workout. As an amateur, and I mean amateur, I needed a bit of instruction and know-how about the game. I suggest taking a lesson or get an expert friend to show you the ropes.

Golf can be really competitive but a lot of fun. I found myself in awe as I watched men and women expertly swing their way through the course.

So make a day of it and head out to one of our local courses. You'd be surprised how much fun the game of golf can be.

More thought asked for in district questionnaire

Received by The Chief for publication:
To Mayor Corinne Lonsdale, Councillors and employees of the District of Squamish:

First off, my thanks to those responsible for the District Dispatch. There is a lot of good information in this newsletter.

Regarding Peoples Platform I would like to point out to the mayor that when the Squamish Nation voiced its opinion against expanding of the municipal airport its concerns fell on deaf ears. The council of the time, including the present mayor, completely ignored the concerns. I would like to ask the mayor, what makes her think the people of Squamish can now have a say as to whether or not the Indians should be allowed a destination-type casino on their native lands? I think this is a poorly-worded question put to the people of Squamish. What is meant by "would I support a destination-type casino on Squamish Nation land"? Does this ask would I support a casino by attending it and pending my money there, or does it mean I am for or against a casino on native land?

Why should the Indians even concern themselves with what the rest of Squamish wants regarding a casino on native lands when the rest of Squamish (with the exception of Brackendale) did not seem to care about their concerns over expanded use of the airport?

A gambling-type casino will not look to Squamish for its income, but to the Vancouver and Whistler markets. How ironic.

Your second question also leaves a lot to be desired as to clarity. It appears the mayor and council is concerned that secondary suites are costing the town more money in services than they are being paid for as a result of the number of persons in a dwelling using more services.

If such is the case then the only fair way to apply service charges is to count heads inside a dwelling, and not whether or not there is a secondary suite. I pay the same amount in garbage fees, although I live alone, as a residence where there may be eight or more persons in a family and thereby producing eight times as much garbage, and one could say using eight times the amount of water and sewer or other town services.

I think the council must go back and do more work on this problem before taking such a survey and word the question(s) in such a way that people will know exactly what they are voting for or against.

I realize any questionnaire has its limitations, but I would ask that more thought be put into the questions and a greater reply than a yes or no sought out.

Softball should be about the kids

Editor,

I was dismayed to find that quotes from my letter of resignation (Future of girls softball uncertain, The Chief, May 27) taken out of context resulted in some crucial points being missed. The decision to eliminate standings was not made on a whim, but was a proposed solution to an identifiable problem and was based on solid research.

The problem? The prevalence of bickering, battering and occasional shouting amongst coaches and parents, usually directed at each other, but not infrequently targeting the umps and sometimes the kids.

The research? The NCCP Coaching Theory manual states for participants 11 - 15 years of age "use league standings and playoffs only in the late stages of this phase" (i.e. bantam).
Corroborating evidence can be found in every one of my library of coaching manuals.
Anyone wishing further information is welcome to contact me.

The proof? The no league' standings system has implemented eight years ago in what is currently an extremely successful North ancouver organization, for similar reasons. I should also point out that the Minor Baseball division does not keep standings as a result of an arbitrary decision Mr. Watt, (chair, Howe Sound Minor Ball) tells me he made some years ago - also in response to bad attitudes on the part of adults.

I am saddened that so many vocal coaches choose to dismiss modern theory and codes of conduct as "all that crap" (a direct quote from someone charged with teaching our children fair play), and remain steadfast in their refusal to accept change, even on a trial basis. Perhaps it is a case of "it's not that they cannot see the solution, it's that they cannot see a problem."
Some coaches have told me that they are out there to win. The challenge is to question why the kids are there. After all, they are what it's all about, right?

I have truly enjoyed my years of involvement with minor softball, and sincerely regret my departure under these circumstances. I strongly urge parents who care about this and other issues to get out and get involved. The kids deserve your support.

We also ask that you keep your letters as short and concise as possible.

Superintendents overpaid

Editor,

Music and gifted programs have been axed and unfairly eliminated from our Squamish schools. Dedicated teachers and aids are losing jobs not to mention being bumped around from school to school. School supplies are in demand. PAC groups are working harder than ever to raise money and make up for the deficit shortfall. With this information in my subconscious, I pick up the paper and read "Courtice to get severance pay of almost $100,000." And what the heck does "termination without cause mean?" Are we taxpayers allowed to view any of the details relating to the termination of this person? I do a reality check and quickly calculate the average annual earning of most middle-income folks. I think about the responsibilities related to a supervisory position, hmm...yes, a lot like the stress that most of us deal with in our careers and everyday lives. The conclusion that comes swiftly to mind is: The position of superintendent is grossly overpaid! As long as we all sit here and accept the range of "normal," superintendent's salaries will forever inch skyward and the programs within the schools will continually be squeezed to the point of extinction. When is enough enough?

Cuts to librarian services sad

Editor,

I think it is very sad and beyond shortsighted that teacher-librarian services in School District #48 have been cut once again.

Literacy and communication skills have never been more important to our citizens of tomorrow. Why are school libraries and young readers being sacrificed when this is undeniably true?

As an author-illustrator I know that making books is a labor of love. I also know that libraries are more than just books on shelves. My biggest influence years ago was a librarian who took a personal interest in my reading habits and artistic abilities.

A library without a librarian is a door without a key, a stocked pantry with no cook, a home without a parent.

Ross did not issue any information on the Cheekye Fan terrain hazard

Editor,

In the May 20 issue of The Chief, a letter by Mr. Hubmann was published. Mr. Hubmann implied that Coun. Fellowes was as bad as me in issuing false and misleading information about the Cheekye Fan terrain hazard. Not true!

I have not issued any information about this hazard as I do not feel qualified to do so. The terrain hazard reports were prepared several years apart by scientists and engineers well experienced in this field.

Top industry talent attracted to Squamish Squamish

CONTRIBUTED TO
The Chief

The producers of the feature-length movie Squamish Squamish have signed a picture deal with Michael Balfry to be director of photography.

Balfry studied Film at Concordia University in Montreal where he was awarded the Kodak award for his outstanding work. He has shot music videos, documentaries such as the World Downhill Mountain Bike Race Championship for TSN and TV specials such as Parlons D'Affaires for CF TV.

Balfry has worked all over the world including an eight month stint as director of photography with United Film & Video in Hong Kong. He has worked with noted international directors Nicholas Copus (UK), Susie Au (Hong Kong) and Michael Pollard (Canada). His recent credits include three feature-length films: Absinthe, What's Your Verdict? and Dead of Night.

Squamish Squamish has also attracted award-winning editor Mark Lemmon, a former Squamish resident. He has won the prestigious AMPA award for editing the television series North of 60.

Lemmon is a graduate of Queen's University in Ontario and has since edited television shows including The Adventures of the Black Stallion, Max Glick, The Billy Jacobs Story, and was the assistant editor on Free Willy III, Andre, Big Bully and Needful Things. He has picture edited the feature-length films Kitchen Party and The Suburbanators.

Squamish Squamish has also caught the eye and ear of the community's very own composer Michael Plowman, who will be underscoring the movie. Since moving to Squamish just one year ago, Plowman has been turning down many offers from producers all over the world who would like to use his talent. He likes the idea of working on Squamish Squamish because "it is a local indigenous production and I like the script and the people associated with it."

Plowman has an extensive background in classical music and was the composer-in-residence at the Hillberry & Bonsteille Theatre in Detroit and the composer/orchestrator for the Windsor Symphony Orchestra. In the past year he has signed to do Guardians for Goodsense, a TV series for the Family Channel, Vampires, a Disney CD ROM, the Alice in Wonderland TV series and Moe Gets the Girl, a feature film for Goldstar Pictures.

The producers of Squamish Squamish are also negotiating with a few other professionals who will be willing to work with local trainees who want to learn the skills necessary for crewing on a film set.

"We are always welcoming newcomers," says producer Adriane Polo, who encourages anyone interested in helping to sign up at the Howe Sound Inn, where a display booth will be set up for the next two weeks.

The producers have been trying to obtain financing locally and Polo says the community has offered its support there, as well as with locations, services, cast and crew.

"The community answered with open arms the enthusiasm to this proposal," she says.

The producers felt it was necessary to involve the community financially as well. "We wanted to make sure the citizens of the Sea to Sky corridor were not excluded from this part of the filmmaking process. We wanted to ensure they were given the opportunity to buy into the film, to own the film."

Forty units of shares are for sale at $1,000 each. Polo says purchasing the units can be considered a business loss for 1997 but investors can potentially see returns of 15 per cent interest and a one per cent share of the net profits the movie has the potential of making.

There are only a few units left and with production starting in two weeks, anyone interested should call Sea to Sky Entertainment at 898-5930 or 892-5200.

Weaver practises craft native to Madagascar

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Not all sun hats are created equal. A Squamish woman uses a unique material, called raffia, to give a different look and feel to woven hats, baskets and anything else she can think of.

Micheline Bell uses strips of fibre from the leaves of palm trees native to Madagascar, called Raphia ruffia, to make her creations.

"It's a form of weaving," says Bell, who has been practising the craft for about two years. "It's very pliable and not rigid like usual straw hats."

Bell, who also weaves yarn using looms, says she had a hard time finding a supplier of raffia but she now buys it from Vancouver-based wholesaler.

Besides the hanks of raffia, Bell only needs a curved needle, some pins and a hat block to use as a mould to make the hats. She says she has learned how to make a hat without a mould, but recommends newcomers to the craft to use one to make it easier.

To end up with the finished product, it usually takes Bell about eight hours braiding the raffia, sewing it together, steaming and pressing it.

"They're very original hats," she says. "Very sturdy and practical."

She says its a very portable type of craft people can do while travelling or when at home.

"This is the perfect time of year for a hat like this," says Bell. "It's wonderful for gardening."

Bell teaches craft classes using raffia at June's Originals on Cleveland Avenue. For more information call June's Originals or Bell at 898-4493.

BRIGITTE PETERSEN/THE CHIEF

Micheline Bell loves working with the pliable textures of raffia to create useful items.

Darts & Daffodils

People who help preserve the estuary deserve thanks

A bouquet of daffodils and meadows of wildflowers to the many people who have supported efforts to preserve the remaining natural areas of the estuary. And thank you, council for listening. Hopefully, the provincial and federal governments also have ears.

A dumpster filled with daffodils to everyone who pitched in and cleaned up the estuary. A lot of work, but well worth it!

Six hundred and four acres of daffodils to Peter and Jen. Evans Lake will never see your equal. You will be missed and remembered by all for many years to come.

A huge soccer field full of daffodils to everyone who donated prizes to the Women's Thirty-something friendship tournament, April 6. The tournament was a great success and we appreciate the overwhelming generosity and support from the community. The Second Winds.

A cop car full of daffodils to off-duty Const. Doug for coming to the rescue of me and my three kids when I locked my car with the keys inside at Murrin Lake. He is an officer and a gentleman.

Darts to the two ladies in the blue van who stole my rhododendron out of the red jeep in the parking lot of a licensed premises Friday afternoon. We saw your faces. You should be ashamed of yourselves.

A restaurant full of darts to those people in our community who are perceived to be role models, but who get drunk in public places. Are you really practicing what you preach? A restaurant full of darts to the owners who treated the intoxicated female patron with abominable discourtesy and complete lack of respect. Your rudeness and loss of self-control makes you both qualify for the school of manners and dignity.

A band full of daffodils to the Howe Sound Senior Bands under the most capable of directors, Shannon Grantham, for the superb performances at the Trade Fair. You and your bands are a credit to the school and our community. From your #1 fan.

A shower of daffodils upon the ladies in the Upper Squamish valley for my wonderful welcome in February. I'm a lucky girl to be growing up with such great neighbors. A sharp pointed dart at my mom for taking so long to acknowledge such kindness. Thanks from Samantha, the best dressed baby in Squamish.

A huge bouquet of daffodils to the great gang at Garibaldi Tire. You folks really go the extra mile. Rotating the tires and fixing that nasty rattle in the exhaust system was a bonus, since you only charged for the tire repair. P.S.: Hope you boys enjoy the donuts!

A field full of daffodils to all the people of Squamish who helped us set down roots in the past nine years and made us welcome. Many thanks to Carl and co. at NVOS for all your help over the years. Best of luck to the ladies of Second Wind in the coming season. We will miss all the friends we have accumulated, but will return occasionally to haunt you. Evans Lake has been interesting to say the least, but it is time to move on. Peter and Jennifer.

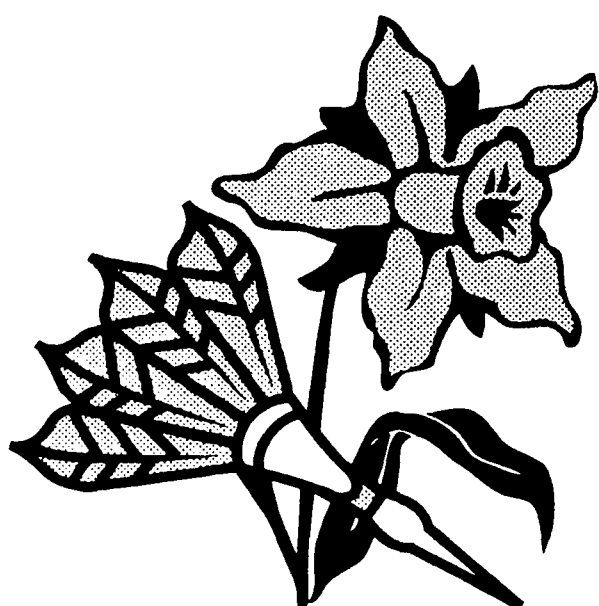

A cowboy hat full of daffodils to Sea to Sky Stables for making our anniversary great. Hope Long.

A basket full of daffodils and thanks to the town of Squamish for the warm and friendly reception at my first Trade Fair. Special thanks to all who made the Trade Fair possible. Simply romantic. Brenda McNeill.

Darts to the waitress who wrongly accused a customer of trying to cause her an accident. If you had done that to someone at our table you would have been the one asked to leave.

A raft full of daffodils to the Sunwolf Outdoor centre for our overnight campout and rafting trip. From the First Squamish Girl Guides.

A T.V. full of darts to the woman who sold my T.V. for $50 instead of the $200 I was asking. I received $50, what did you sell it for?

A bread basket full of daffodils to Heather Ross who has provided us with more than a year of excellent service at the Sunflower Bakery Cafe. We'll all miss you, and so will our customers. All your hard work was very much appreciated! Good luck in your new home!

All the spring daffodils in Squamish to the two great paramedics, the crew from the fire department and the nurses at SGH for their quick response and for the comforting and caring for a very frightened little girl after an awful bicycle accident. Thanks from the Wiebe family.

Serotonin tipped darts to the third generation Canadian who criticized the writer from Britannia in last week's edition. The extra chemical boost to the former's brain power is needed to help that person realize that it was Britannia's management that was being criticized not the community. As a third generation Canadian you should at least try to question authority especially when that authority is censoring what you read and hear. That's probably why your grandparents brought you here in the first place. I'd like to know what your contribution to the community has been so far.

A huge baseball park full of daffodils to the following who helped make the May long weekend tourney a great one. K (Hun) Smillie and the whole Hammer team, Judy, Jennifer, Garth, Bill, Lois and kids. Jason, Claudette and minor ball. Jimmy and all the umps. Dave, Carmelle, Mike from G.T.V. Gary, Gord, Jane, Todd, Great Lady with Tina Turner dog, and all the other beer garden volunteers. Gerd for your penmanship. G.O.G. for being you. Darlene and Calvin for your relentless work and finally to H. Courtney and Braeden thanks for all your support. Sorry if I've missed someone. Mike.

Huge bunches of spring daffodils to all the people who helped make the Squamish Arts Council booth at the trade fair happen. The artists, Vange Brossard, Elmer Poole, Garry Hughes, Yolanda Destradi, June Thomsen, Elodie Ellingsen for their incredible art pieces; the volunteer committee headed by Gwyer Webber and all the members who made sure there was someone willing and able to spread the good news about the resurgence of the arts council in Squamish. And a huge huge beige van full of daffodils to arts council administrator, Joel Pettit for his unstinting efforts to get the newsletter and brochures done (with the help of Ron Enns and Janice Scott of Garibaldi Alpine) and all the time he spent at the fair talking it up. Thanks to you all. It was a good effort from a group with only three weeks to make it all happen.

On Friday, May 16, my daughters and I were in the parking lot at IGA Plus in Squamish. My youngest daughter, Stefanie, had an "oopsie," and cut her finger on the broken tail-light of a parked truck. With Stephanie bleeding and wailing as if the end of the world was upon us, we set out to complete our task of acquiring dinner supplies. As soon as we got into the store, Linda, who works in the Baskin Robbins section, came out to rescue Stefanie washed her wounds, bandaged her and gave her strawberry ice cream and a hug. Wow! This lady deserves lots of daffodils, and big thanks.

The key to good bread pudding is in the sauce

When the English language borrowed (and in the process corrupted) the Gaelic word for whisky, it neglected to pick up "sgriob". This is the Gaelic word for the itchiness that overcomes the upper lip just before taking a sip of whisky. The Scots may be a people of few words, but they are they precise.

Just what is whisky, so important it was named "water of life" by the Gaels? After all, here's the confusing spelling of whiskey and whisky, not to mention Scotch, American, Irish, Canadian, bourbon and rye — whiskies.

Whisky is a spirit distilled from a fermented mash of grains such as barley, rye or corn.

The final result is affected by many factors, including the water, type of grain, how the grain is treated and processed, and the aging.

The Irish were the first people to distill whisky. Early on, Irish monks took the distiller's art to Scotland. Irish whiskey (spelled with an 'e') and Scotch whisky (or simply Scotch) evolved into two different tasting spirits. Irish distillers don't dry the malted barley over peat fires.

The Scots do, leaving a smoky, peaty flavor, sometimes very pronounced in their whiskies.

In the early 18th century, Irish and Scottish immigrants became the first serious whisky-drinkers in the New World. Canada adopted the Scottish spelling of whisky, while Americans took the Irish "whiskey".

The first style of whiskey made in America was rye whiskey. Since it's difficult to make whiskey completely from rye, barley and corn are blended into the mash. Rye whiskey must be at least 51 per cent rye, and must be aged in new, charred oak barrels.

Bourbon is a classic American whiskey, first made in 1789, the year George Washington became president. It must be at least 51 per cent corn, the remainder rye and barley, then aged for a minimum of two years in white oak barrels, charred on the inside. (These barrels are used only once. Distilleries in Scotland buy them for aging Scotch.)

Corn gives bourbon its sweet character. The barrel aging leaves a distinctive taste of toast, vanilla and caramel. "Sour mash" bourbon is fuller and smoother. It's made by adding a previously fermented batch of mash instead of fresh yeast to start fermentation.

Canadian whisky is usually called rye, although most are a rye blend. Only a few are 100 per cent rye, such as Alberta Distiller's Alberta Springs. Corn is the pre-dominant grain in the mix, blended with rye, barley and wheat.

Canadian whiskies use rye that has been malted, resulting in a smoother, fuller flavor with some of the spicy, bitter-sweet taste of the grain.

After distillation, Canadian whisky is aged at least three years in barrels, then blended. The result is a light-bodied spirit with no dominant flavor of a single grain. Canadian whisky is cleaner, lighter and crisper tasting than pure rye or bourbon whiskeys.

It's not whisky that makes my lip twitch, but bread pudding. Add a whisky sauce and you'll need a word like sgriob. Scotch is too smoky for this sauce. Rye or Irish will do, and bourbon is delicious.

Bread Pudding with Whisky Sauce

For the pudding:

3/4 cup dark raisins

2 Tbsp. whisky

1 pound French bread, cut into one-inch cubes

3 cups milk

1 cup half and half cream

3 eggs, beaten

2 cups sugar

3 Tbsp. melted butter

2 Tbsp. vanilla

1/2 tsp. cinnamon

for the sauce:

1/2 cup unsalted butter

1/2 cup brown sugar

1/2 cup sugar

1 egg

1/4 cup whisky

Soak the raisins in the whisky. Heat oven to 325 degrees. Butter a 13x9 inch glass baking dish. Place the bread in a large bowl. Pour milk and cream over top. Let soak 10 minutes. Whisk the eggs with the sugar, butter, vanilla and cinnamon. Pour over the soaked bread and stir. Add raisins. Mix gently and spread in baking dish. Bake about one hour, until set and top is browned. Cool on a rack.

For the sauce, melt the butter and sugar in a heavy saucepan. Stir until sugar dissolves. Whisk the egg in a bowl. Whisk in some of the hot butter mixture. Pour the egg mixture into the saucepan and whisk, over medium heat, until thick and smooth. Do not boil. Beat in the whisky and remove from heat. Spoon warm bread pudding into a bowl. Spoon sauce over top. Garnish with whipped cream if desired.

Everyone can play at rec festival

An invitation is extended to all members of the family to come out and play at the Recreation Festival this Saturday, June 7. It promises to be a fun-packed day of live demonstrations, prizes, exhibits, food and refreshments. The pancake breakfast will be served up from 9 - 11 a.m. and in the food line there will also be a hot stuff chili cook-off. The location is the Brennan Park Leisure Centre and kids are invited to visit the Magic Kingdom. Admission is free and registration coupons and free aquatic samples are yours for the asking. Mountain FM's BJ Doyle will be on location for the festival from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

It's billed as a parking lot party and it's all in support of the Squamish General Hospital fund raiser and will be held at the Best Western Sea to Sky Hotel on Sunday, June 8 starting at noon. The Squamish Health Care Foundation hopes to raise approximately $1 million in the next six months and this event will certainly help the cause. Proceeds for the Trade Fair totalled $966.01 and a big thank you is extended to everyone for their support. The flea market will feature home-based businesses and arts and crafts displays, as well as a giant garage sale. Your donations are welcomed and you are asked to have them in the Sea to Sky Hotel ballroom between 9 - 11 a.m. Sunday. Anyone with any questions is asked to call Irene at the hotel at 898-4874.

Although the parking lot party for SGH runs from noon to 4 p.m., the official opening ceremonies will be at 2 p.m. Bring along your appetite as some great food will be served at the barbecue and while eating, listen to some live entertainment. Big Brothers Big Sisters of Squamish will be holding a car wash.

Wonderful trip to heritage museum

Branch #70 News

What a wonderful day we had on our bus trip last week. We toured the Burnaby Village Heritage Museum. There were actually 34 buildings for us to see. One, a farm house, was still under restoration. A couple of groups of school children were having a guided tour learning about the printing business and the importance of a blacksmith shop in the early 1900s. The only historic building on its original site is the Bateman home which was built in 1922.

The film industry was busy assembling props for a movie starring Henry Winkler. We were just a couple of days too early.

The best part of the museum was the carousel, the same one we rode on way back when, from Playland. Who said 71 was too old to ride a horse? I went on twice. A great place to take the family and not too far away. The Sun Yat Sen Gardens was an interesting place especially when you had no idea something like that was situated in downtown Vancouver.

On our way home, Elaine had the driver take us off the Upper Levels Highway to stop at the Cypress Park lookout where we stretched our legs, viewed the scenery and enjoyed a juice, courtesy of Super Valu.

Thanks for another great day Elaine.

The next trip is just 11 days away, June 14. This is a boat ride to view Vancouver harbor and then on to Stanley Park for a carriage ride.

An overnight trip to Victoria is planned for June 24, taking in the Butchart Gardens and possibly the Butterfly Gardens. The trip will be via Nanaimo.

July 9, it is The Phantom of the Opera; July 16, it is Fiddler on the Roof and Bye Bye Birdie at the Theatre Under the Stars; August 20 is seniors day at the PNE; and in September a trip is planned for Harrison Hot Springs to view the sand sculptures.

A three-day trip to the wine festival in the Okanagan is planned for Oct. 3 - 5. For any queries on these trips for prices or particulars Elaine Ramsay has requested that any one calls between June 3 and 10 be made Marion at 898-5119 or Charles at 898-93.

Tomorrow night, Wednesday, at 7:30 p.m. you can visit the residents at Hilltop House and join in their sing-along.

The residents from The Cedars and The Manor were once again entertained in the Cedman Lounge by Svea Mountenay and her piano students. The students were five to 14 years of age.

The seniors really appreciated the children and their parents coming to play for them. Refreshments were served.

Tantalus Seniors Centre News

Tomorrow, Wednesday, June 4, is our annual general meeting. This is your chance to voice your opinions on activities at the centre. Suggestions for programs are always welcome. I know some people find it hard to get up and speak, but you can always put your suggestions in writing. We need your support. The meeting starts at 1:30 p.m. Cake and coffee will be served after the meeting. The centre is open Monday to Friday 1-4 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays.

Monday — crafts; Tuesday — crib; Wednesday 10 a.m. to noon — sketch and paint club; Wednesday 1-4 p.m. — line dancing; Thursday — open for cards and games of your choice; Friday — bridge.

Walking Club News.

Six die-hards (all women) kept Ted company on a wet walk last week. This Thursday June 5, they meet at the fisherman's entrance on Government Road just past the red barn at 10 a.m. for a windsurf dike walk.

Last week the Thursday afternoon fun dart club enjoyed a birthday luncheon at the Sea to Sky Hotel in honor of Bertha Johnson.

What a wonderful dinner Branch #277 of the Royal Canadian Legion put on for their auxiliary members last week. Elegantly decorated tables, waiters and waitresses dressed in black pants, white shirts and black bow ties made us feel we were dining in a luxurious hotel. The meal was superb, topped off with delicious dessert by Betty Adamson. The door prize went to Irene Hurford. We really appreciated all the special attention. Thanks.

Congratulations to Florence Carrol who received her 45-year pin at the auxiliary meeting prior to our dinner.

Get well wishes to seniors convalescing at home, Phyllis Graham and Wanda Hildebrand.

Condolences to the family of Frank Downing who passed away last week.

This young cougar was caught near Brohm Lake last year and released after hikers saw him and his mother hunting deer near the trail areas.

Public reminded about cougar safety

CONTRIBUTED TO
The Chief

With the advent of warmer weather, the Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks is reminding the public about cougar safety tips to reduce the number of cougar and human conflicts when hiking, camping or participating in outdoor recreational activities.

There are approximately 4,000 cougars in British Columbia with the highest concentrations in the Kootenays, Southern Interior, Vancouver Island and Cariboo regions. Cougars are also known to frequent The Sea to Sky corridor and several have been trapped in the Squamish area for relocation by conservation officers. One cougar was sighted several times in the Valleycliffe area last month.

Cougars are most active from dusk until dawn, when they hunt for food. They primarily prey on deer. They also feed on elk, raccoons, rabbits, beavers, grouse, occasional livestock and household pets.

These shy and elusive animals rarely attack humans. In the past 50 years, six people in B.C. have died from cougar attacks and approximately 27 people have been attacked.

Cougars and other wildlife such as bears and coyotes are killed each year to protect the public. In many cases these deaths can be prevented by not attracting wildlife and by knowing what to do if a cougar is encountered. If a cougar is behaving aggressively:

- Do not run or turn your back on a cougar. Where possible maintain direct eye contact.
- Give the cougar room to escape, always keeping your eye on it.
- Pick up small children.
- Raise your arms to make yourself look bigger.

• Act aggressively by throwing sticks and rocks into the cougar's face. If attacked fight back.

Problem cougars are initially identified by calls from the public. Conservation officers will only respond to public reports if it is determined that a cougar is threatening livestock or human safety.

Cougars may be relocated. Relocation will depend on the threat to public safety, the nature of the complaint and the age and health of the animal.

HAROLD GOLDEN June 8, 1996

Somebody said that it couldn't be done, but he with a chuckle replied that "maybe it couldn't," but he would be one who wouldn't say so till he'd tried. So he buckled right in with the trace of a grin on his face. If he worried he hid it. He started to sing as he tackled the thing that couldn't be done, and he did it. Somebody scoffed: "Oh, you'll never do that; at least no one ever has done it"; but he took off his coat and he took off his hat, and the first thing we knew he'd begun it. With a lift of his chin and a bit of a grin, without any doubting or quiddit, he started to sing as he tackled the thing that couldn't be done, and he did it.

Education

Youth theatre group inspires students

The Performing Arts

The excellent acting skills that we saw in the HSSS production of Harvey and the original skits that enlivened BSS first annual Arts Fest certainly have strong roots in the elementary schools.

There, in such classes as Ms. Manzini's Grade 6 - 7 at Garibaldi Highlands, the students begin drama with Improvs — acting out themes or storylines given to them on the spot. Last Friday, they were miming out the actions of a day at the beach, then those suitable to dinner at a very classy restaurant. Light relief was provided by a life-guard and a maître d' who thought he should also be the bouncer.

Trips to actual theatres reinforce the interest. Several groups of young students from Squamish went down to the Centennial Theatre in North Vancouver recently to see a performance of The Wind in the Willow.

Vancouver Youth Theatre

The visits of the various cultural groups, with their professional performances, also fire the students' ambitions and show them goals that they can reach.

When the VYT visited Garibaldi Highlands Elementary, their director explained to the audience that the program they were about to present Kids' Writes '97, involved elementary school students as both actors and writers. Stories and poems written by youngsters from all over the Lower Mainland had been submitted for consideration.

Out of over 300 entries, 14 were chosen to make up the show. These were then dramatized in a simple theatre-story style.

The first play performed by the young troupe was The Three Smokey Men and dealt with the trauma of having to move house — leaving friends and familiar places behind, to go to a new location.

The Unhappy Queen was a play about a haughty queen, wearing a diamond tiara and gold lamé top with her jeans and T-shirt, who made her own peanut butter and jelly sandwiches in the palace kitchen.

After the rousing saga of One Eyed Sam, the Pirate, who found a genie in a bottle and used its power to make himself a king and the conqueror of Scarface, the pirate captain, came the work of Jenna Galley. She is the GHE student whose poem was chosen to be a part of the VYT repertoire. It is called A Bad Day and the actors performed it as a choral recitation, with dance movements around the stage — very impressive.

Percussion Works

Mamquam's visitors were quite different, but just as effective. It was interesting to watch the students' reactions as they took their places in the gym. Bob and Nick, the musicians, had started beating the drums. The older students unconsciously marched in time to the music but the youngest ones moved their whole bodies rhythmically and happily, as if the music had taken control.

There were many percussion instruments on display at the front of the gym, ranging from military drums to triangles, from tom-toms to maracas. Nick told the students how the rhythm of drums is common to all countries in the world and he gave a demonstration of the Sabara. The drum-head is made of goat-skin and the music is played chiefly at weddings in the West African country of Senegal. Oddly enough, it is also used to accompany wrestling matches there.

SOUND SCHOOLS

Nick explained how ragtime, a precursor of jazz, began in the 1920s. Radio was just in its infancy then, and the sounds it broadcast were not sharp.

That made the xylophone a very popular instrument, because of its keen, clear tone and there was a period of "xylophonia" — some of whose catchy tunes he then played.

From simple kitchen tools, the students then turned to a piece of high-tech equipment that proved fascinating. The octopad is a computer that can trap voices then minimize or maximize, slow down or speed up, the sounds and mix them to produce a tune. Most of the youngsters volunteered to be the voices in the experiment. Three of them were chosen, and Mr. McKay cooperated to provide the adult voice. The audience roared with laughter as the four sounds were mixed and matched by the machine and incorporated with other effects to produce some very modern music.

Skin

The drama students at HSSS have dealt with a more serious subject in the play Skin — a series of vignettes that show the dangers of racism and the stupidity of being prejudiced against strangers, just because they talk, dress or act differently.

First Nations Awards Night

The hospitality was as usual, tremendous. Not only was there a buffet, but every adult was given an attractive red T-shirt, silk-screen-printed with a design by Ray Natrall and Paul and Aaron Nelson Moody. There were lots of door prizes, too: picture frames, hanging baskets and potted plants. A great deal of work had gone into decorating the teen drop-in center, cooking all that food, preparing the certificates and gifts and organizing the whole ceremony. The education committee of the Sko'mish Nation deserves congratulations and a big thank-you.

JUST FOR TODAY...

Just for today, do not worry.
Just for today, do not anger
Honor your parents, teachers and elders.
Earn your living honestly,
Show gratitude to everything.
Dr. Mikai Usui, founder of the Usui method of reiki.

Learning to live one day at a time and making it a fulfilling and meaningful experience is something we would all like to achieve. So many focus on the tomorrows and miss out on the todays and the actual beauty of reality.

When you find yourself wondering and even obsessing on the next step, bring yourself back with some deep breathing exercises. This is not a dress rehearsal, this is life. Don't miss it, take it and mould your life as you wish it to be.

If I have accomplished one thing each day that brings me satisfaction, then I know that this is a good day.
Dear Diane:
I have been seeing an old flame I've been thinking of rekindling. We were abandoned by our spouses about a year ago and share common interests. His ex calls him every day on the phone, which upsets him during and after. What gives?

Signed, In Love Again.

Dear In Love Again:

He is still very emotionally attached to his past. It's going to take a while for him to take part in a functional relationship. Don't get too serious yet. Give it some time. One year is sometimes a drop in the bucket.

Anyway, it's plain to see you are readier than he is, because she is still pushing his buttons. Put a time limit on the waiting period, though, for your own peace of mind.

Dear Diane:

I need to support myself and younger children after being a housewife and mother all my adult life. My problem is I don't know what to focus on. Which area would I be successful in financially? Should I relocate or stay put? I also have a new mate to consider.

Signed, In Transition.

Dear In Transition:

Read the above paragraph and take some deep breaths and relax. I do not feel a relocation is in the cards for you at this time. Over a period of 18 to 24 months there will be major changes in your life. Fear and an overdose of practicality have shaken your faith in the mysterious ways of the universe. It's just that things don't seem to

Dear Diane:

Do you see my daughter and I moving in the near future? And what do you see for me in matters of the heart?

Signed, Perplexed.

Dear Perplexed:

Although the first half of this year is seemingly uneventful, things are going to change. A move is definitely a viable option, provided you're not expecting to run away from your issues. Learning about relationships, especially with yourself, has been the big one. But something big is on its way. August is a good month for romance.

Royal Hudson returns

The Royal Hudson resumed its seasonal steams from North Vancouver to Squamish Saturday.

The Hudson 2860 and 3176 engines are vintage trains designated "Royal" by King George VI when he toured Canada aboard a Hudson 2850 with Queen Elizabeth in 1939.

The Royal Hudson tours run Wednesdays through Sundays and holidays until September 21, with midday layovers in Squamish.

Passengers disembark at the end of Loggers Lane and have time to explore Squamish.

Each year thousands of children from across Canada and parts of the U.S. take part in a camping adventure they will never forget. As guests of the Tim Hortons Children's Foundation, deserving children from varied communities share in the fun and excitement of a 10-day session at one of the foundation's four summer camps. Two Squamish children will attend the Tim Hortons Camp at Parry Sound, Ontario this summer courtesy of Tim Hortons and the funds raised during Camp Day which was held on May 28, where special guests were invited to join in Camp Day festivities. On the 28th all proceeds from the sale of coffee was donated towards the fund.

At the Sea to Sky Country Trade Fair, Sea to Sky Stables offered wagon rides with all proceeds going towards the Squamish Food Bank and $250 was raised. Black Tusk Realty also utilized the opportunity at the trade fair to generate $344 towards the Squamish General Hospital Fundraising Campaign. The money was raised through the sale of raffle tickets for a bike.

The Squamish Golf and Country Club hosted a golf fund-raiser this past weekend with the Squamish Library Fund as the benefactor. Prizes for closest to the pin included: a golf trip for two to Nevada which was donated by Uniglobe Castaways Travel, a suite at Brew Creek with a round of golf at Squamish Valley, golf for four at Furry Creek Golf and Country Club, and golf for four with two power carts at Squamish Valley. If you were lucky enough to advance to the final round there was a chance to win a Chevy Blazer provided by Greg Gardner GM if you sunk a hole in one. Coordinators from Squamish Valley Golf and Country Club were Pauline McNeney and Dave Wood.

On May 27, Furry Creek Golf and Country Club was the site of the First Annual Tourism & Hospitality Charity Invitational Golf Tournament.

One of the prizes for closest to the pin was two tickets to New York City donated by American Airlines. This was won by Alistar MacLennan, chairman of the board for Helijet Airlines. When presented with the tickets, he turned them back to be auctioned off, which he then bid on and purchased for $1,700.

For dinner, chefs from some of Vancouver's best restaurants: Seasons in the Park, O'Doul's, Hyatt and The Fish House prepared a delectable assortment of entrees and desserts. The guests enjoyed bar service donated by Molson's, The

Salter right on target

Kes in Salter was a convincing winner at last Sunday's action pistol match hosted by the Squamish Valley Rod and Gun Club.

Dave Loop of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans won the law enforcement officer's category, and conservation officer Steve Jacobson won top revolver.

The next pistol match is scheduled for Sunday, June 22 at 9:30 a.m. Anyone requiring further information should contact Dave Madill, pistol director, at 892-5735.

Ladies' fastball tourney pushed back

A ladies fastball tournament slated for June 14 & 15 has been pushed back to a tentative date of July 12 and 13.

"There're just too many tournaments in Vancouver in June," said ladies' ball representative Yvonne Fletcher. "So it's a no-go for June. But we're going to push for the July 12 date."

The Howe Sound Ladies Fastball League, which currently consists of four teams and also includes the bantam and midjet teams, is always looking for new players, said Fletcher. Regular games are scheduled each weekday night at 6:45 p.m. through June.

Anyone interested in finding out more about the ladies fastball league should contact Fletcher at 898-9880.

Squamish crew sails to first place

A crew of six Squamish sailors raced to first place in their division and second overall in the Swiftsure Classic sailboat race near Victoria May 24-25.

Walter Clarke, Scott Patterson, Scott McLarty, John Gugins, Cliff Wood and Dan Plaisons crewed former Squamish resident Al Byers' 52-foot (15-metre) sloop Windshadow X in the 162-kilometre Cape Flattery race, a big yachting event especially popular with U.S. sailors.

"The boat revelled in the strong winds," reported Clarke. The crew raced hard all night with little sleep to finish at 6:22 a.m., hours ahead of their nearest rival.

Most of the same crew will sail Clarke's new 30-foot (9-metre) Shenanigans in the "Round Bowen Island race June 7, along with other vessels from the Squamish Yacht

Locals preview Test of Metal course

Competitors in the Squamish Test of Metal mountain bike race on June 14 have been pre-riding the course for weeks now.

With less than two weeks to race day, competitors in this 65-kilometre point-to-point race are out there familiarizing themselves with the trails as much as possible. Here three local riders give their read on sections of the course.

Section 1: The start to Ring Creek by Jack Fowler

Leaving the Civic Centre in a rush of bikes is exciting and the adrenaline rush will soon be used up.

No sooner has the heart rate settled in than the one-hour climb (at my fitness level) starts to take its toll.

Up Skyline Drive to The Boulevard and on towards the top of Thunderbird Ridge, the excitement is soon replaced with loud, heavy breathing and burning thighs. Finally, the turnoff into the single track gives a few minutes of downhill relief before continuing the climb.

Just after the gully, with a blurring downhill followed by a screaming heart rate uphill, we make a turn to a fast, loose downhill that clears the legs of the blood build-up and cools us off.

The entry into Jack's Trail (not named after me) is refreshing, not because it's easy, but because of the smells and coolness of the forest.

It's about a half-hour climb to Alice Lake, where we keep climbing up the forestry road to Deadend Loop and come to the bottom of the dreaded Rock and Roll — a steep, loose and lung-burning ascent carrying the bike for about 12 minutes (I hate it).

Now the fun starts! Rob's and Cliff's Corners, fast, technical and down (gravity sucks) 'til we meet the trail back to the Highlands area. We get to go real fast and settle down a bit.

This brings us to the last part of the first loop and faster, technical downhill singletrack through a clearcut and into the woods above Perth.

One last grunt through a gully and some fast single-track to a cruise through the Highlands via the Boulevard, Highlands Way South, to the Ring Creek Falls Footbridge off Garibaldi Park Rd. and the first part of the race is behind us.

Section 2: The Ring Creek Rip by Jude Bannister

Once you have made it to the Ring Creek Bridge you will feel a momentary coolness in the air as you ride over its rushing waters.

Try and enjoy the rolling doubletrack for five to 10 minutes until a real short climb to the powerlines.

Now starts a very fast descent along a dirt road that has one 20-metre section with rocks the size of melons, so be very careful and stay to the track on the left or you could easily break your fruit. Soon after is a very steep short descent over big, nasty sharp rocks to the Powerhouse Bridge deck.

Next is a long, fast and wide gravel road. Start drinking lots of water. At the end of this road, ladies and gentlemen, is where your mettle is really tested. This is the start of the "Nine Mile Hill" up an active logging road.

The best way I have found to prepare for this is to cut it down to three sections. At first it looks just like a small hill that's going to crest just ahead around the corner and through the trees.

But then it's just another and another that seems like forever. Just before the five mile marker, when you think nothing could be tougher, you come up against Bonk Hill.

If you're in anything but the granny gear and this point, you might actually win a prize. The second section is a little longer, but much quicker up and down to the Nine Mile Bridge. After you cross there is one last tough climb up Lava Flow Hill and then it's down the Rip.

The Rip is everything the name implies, fast, exhilarating, wild and crazy. Because you've just finished a wicked climb you feel like you can take a break, but don't fool yourself.

For the next 15 to 30 minutes, depending on your skill, you will have to keep your brain bucket up the whole time without ever lowering it, because at 20 to 40 clicks down a long, curving single-track, with trees just inches from your face, you have to pay attention.

Now comes the Powerhouse Plunge. It's a steep and very gnarly winding singletrack and I'll bet that if you have never done it before, you'll probably do an endo.

Be prepared that by the end of it your forearms will be aching from doing vertical handstands on your brakes, while your ass is off behind the seat.

When you reach the bottom and open sky, you're now back on the original course

BRIAN GOLDSTONE/THE CHIEF

Scott Ratray takes the Plunge while conditioning himself for this year's Test of Metal mountain bike race.

and you have to descend to the Powerhouse Bridge again, and then to the right, this time for a roll on the Far Side.

Section 3: The Powerhouse Plunge to the Finish by Warren Scott

After a body-thrashing descent down to Powerhouse Plunge you come out under the powerlines. Have a little rest before you tackle the sketchy, loose rocky drop to the Kiewit Bridge.

At this point you're trying to find the strength (and avoid muscle cramps) to face the last ascent to the Far Side.

During the tight, grueling switchbacks that snake their way to the top your legs are screaming for the rollercoaster dips that await.

The trail drops into tight technical singletrack, complete with a monster log ramp, to test your motor skills. It then levels off with some more demanding singletrack which makes you wonder, why?

You break through to the gas pipeline, then have a nice road cruise up to the plateau. The pavement feels good and you pedal a little bit more to the Smoke Bluffs and the end of the climbing. You drop down a fast doubletrack descent over some slick rock. Watch for the water bars, out to the climbers parking lot.

Now the only thing that separates you from happiness is about two kilometres of Loggers Lane to the finish at Logger Sports Grounds.

Thunder in the Streets returns to downtown core

By CLAIRE MACDONALD
Special to The Chief

Over the Canada Day long weekend the streets of Squamish will once again be transformed into an auto slalom track, as the Squamish-Whistler Car Club hosts the fifth annual Thunder in the Streets.

"It's not really an auto race," says event organizer Leigh Schoenberger. "It's a slalom which emphasizes driving ability rather than horsepower and speed. Driver skill is the most important thing."

The course, which starts at Victoria and Cleveland, includes a series of four different corners or obstacles. Schoenberger notes that the Bunbury Chicane, an extremely narrow stretch on Cleveland Ave., is the most difficult stretch, and that in which drivers are most likely to knock down the cones marking the slalom course.

"Each cone comes with a two second penalty off the time," says Schoenberger. "The object is to get through as fast and safely as possible. Safety and smoothness are very important."

Spectators can expect to see vehicles ranging from bone stock vehicles to full race cars. About 55 cars are expected for the event, which will bring in racers from Seattle, Victoria, Kelowna and perhaps Calgary.

"This is one of the only slalom events in North America run on downtown streets," notes Schoenberger. "This is more of a showcase of our top drivers than a race. There's no trophies, no money — just a good time for all."

Because of the nature of the event, special crowd control measures will be in place to ensure spectators' safety. This year about 30 race event volunteers from the Vancouver Indy will spend the weekend in Squamish to make sure that safety is paramount, says Schoenberger.

Spectators vying for the best viewing spot are recommended to make their way to Stan Clark Park. The event kicks off at 2 p.m. on Saturday, June 28 after the Royal Hudson backs away and will restart Sunday at 9 a.m. Each car will race a minimum of three times each day.

At noon on Sunday, there will be a two-hour break during which spectators can visit with the divers and check out their cars in a pedestrian mall on Cleveland Ave. at Winnipeg.

Anyone interested in volunteering for Thunder in the Streets either for crowd control or to help setting up or tearing down the course, should call Schoenberger at 892-9877.

"This is more of a showcase of our top drivers than a race."

SWCC driver shows well at Mission Raceway Park

By CLAIRE MACDONALD
Special to The Chief

Twenty-four hours before race time Paul Bunbury didn't know if his 1986 Honda CRX was going to be fit to race in last weekend's road race at Mission Raceway Park.

Not only did he make it to the race, but the Squamish-Whistler Car Club's vice-president was victorious on the first day of the double points weekend.

"It was a bit of a test," Bunbury told The Chief. "We won the race on Saturday, and I was leading the race until the second last lap on Sunday, when I got a flat tire. You just shake your head, but there's nothing you can do."

Bunbury admitted that Sunday's race was something of a letdown, but noted that the weekend also had its high points.

"It was disappointing, but we had set a couple of new lap records," he said. "The race on Saturday was even a little bit more intense and a little more exciting for the spectators."

Competing in a field of 17 in the GT4 class, Bunbury attributed much of his success to the vehicle itself and team member Scott Rattray. "It's not just my driving, but the maintenance and development that Scott has put into getting the car to where it is. The combination is at the top of the heap."

Bunbury plans to race in Thunder in the Streets in Squamish June 28 and 29, although he said he's not overly optimistic about the results. "There's more and more preparation needed to get the car ready [for that type of race], and that event is inherently more dangerous," he said.

"My car is much better suited for road racing than auto slalom and some changes should be made. I'll most likely be there, but I won't be holding my breath about the results."

Bunbury had the fastest speed in last year's Thunder in the Streets event.

By the end of June, members will be able to vote for a number of trails society representatives for the next four years ago.

Members of the society are invited to a preview of the trails which stretches from the intersection of Finch Drive, at the intersection of the general meeting on Thursday, June 5.

But if the proposed trails society needs to become a reality, the trails society needs neighborhood involvement. Director Bob Brant.

"The message we want to convey is that we'd like to encourage trails from each neighborhood and become a reality," says Brant. "Neighbors will happen if people get involved." The Squamish Trails Society is a non-profit society formed to implement trails enhancement projects that plan envisioned trails with spokes from Brennan Park to each neighborhood on trail connecting the district. STEP was a amendment to the Community Plan (O 994).

Input needed to complete trail network

Trail society AGM this Thursday

By CLAIRE MACDONALD
Special to The Chief

By the end of June Squamish residents will be able to enjoy the first of a number of trails initiated by the Squamish Trails Society more than four years ago.

Members of the public will be treated to a preview of the trail, which stretches from Brennan Park to Finch Drive, at the third annual general meeting of the society Thursday, June 5.

But if the proposed system of trails is to become a reality, the Squamish Trails Society needs to see some neighborhood involvement, says director Bob Brant.

"The message we want to get out is that we'd like to encourage individuals from each neighborhood to take ownership and become involved," says Brant. "Neighborhood loops will happen if people get involved." The Squamish Trails Society is a federally and provincially registered non-profit society which was formed to implement the Squamish Trails Enhancement Plan (STEP). That plan envisioned a system of trails with spokes radiating from Brennan Park to each neighborhood, a loop in each neighborhood and ribbon trail connecting all the trails in the district. STEP was adopted as an amendment to the Official Community Plan (OCP) in January 1994.

"The trail along the waterfront, then to Brennan Park, was the only trail included in the original OCP," said Brant. "One of the goals of the trail society is to establish trails that are accessible by a wide cross-section of people," he said.

The initiatives of the Squamish Trails Society have been well received by District of Squamish staff, said Brant, and their involvement has been instrumental in ensuring the future of the trails is preserved despite proposed developments.

"A lot of the land is private or Crown," he said.

"Anything [developments] coming up can be identified by the District and red flagged to see if they can work in the trails."

Brant noted that Amon Developments, which owns two significant parcels in Valleycliffe, is one company which had embraced the notion of enhanced trails projects. "They are incorporating trails into their projects and are working with SORCA (Squamish Off Road Cycling Association)," he said. "They are pro-active with the community."

Brant says heavy equipment work on the new trail should be completed by early June thanks to the donations of time and materials by a number of local businesses. Members of the public are invited to show up at 9 a.m. on Saturday, June 21 with shovels, rakes, wheelbarrows and saws to put the finishing touches on the trail during a work bee.

The new trail is the northern half of a link that will extend to the climbers' parking lot on Loggers Lane and will ultimately connect to the downtown core and Valleycliffe. Details of all proposed trails can be found in the STEP.

The society's AGM, which will take place at the Howe Sound Inn & Brew Pub banquet room at 7 p.m. on June 5, will also feature presentations by B.C. Parks district manager Drew Carmichael and Squamish district planner Margaret Thornton.

"The agenda will cover off a review of the accomplishments of the past year and a preview of what we're expecting in the upcoming year," said Brant. Thornton will specifically discuss OCP revisions regarding trail systems, while Carmichael will make a presentation with regard to new parks and trails, including the Stawamus Chief.

Anyone interested in forming a "loop group" to plan and promote trails in their neighborhood should contact either Brant at 898-4698 or Jim Wisnia at 898-2000.

Bob Brant stands at the head of the recently completed trail stretching from Brennan Park to Finch Drive.

4XFun rally in Devine this weekend

The seventh annual Birken 4XFun rally will see 50 drivers from all over Howe Sound, the North Shore and Vancouver Island put their off-road vehicles to the ultimate test in Devine, north of Pemberton June 7-8.

The event begins with the Saturday morning rally in which the driver and navigator negotiate a course following clues to the finish in Devine. This is followed in the afternoon by the truck pull, a timed event where each vehicle will tow a loaded dump truck 60 metres.

The day is topped with the hill climb, 90 metres up a very deceiving hill of loose gravel, where traditionally less than half of the vehicles make it to the top.

Sunday is the all-terrain event, an obstacle course using water holes, mud pits and various other levels of terrain. It's a timed event that relies more on driver skill than horsepower.

Each event counts for points and the driver with the most is the overall winner.

BONNY MAKAREWICZ/WHISTLER QUESTION

Arnie Anderson raced to first place in the ESS event at last weekend's slalom meet hosted by the Squamish-Whistler Car Club in the parking lot at Base II at Blackcomb.

Scorpions tryouts start soon

The Sea to Sky Youth Soccer League, more commonly known as the Scorpions, will be holding a series of open evaluation tryouts starting with registration at the Brackendale Senior Secondary school field June 12.

General manager Richard Dawson stresses that girls are not prevented from trying out on a boys' team if no girls' team opportunity exists.

Subsequent practice dates have been set for Saturday, June 14, time TBA; Tuesday, June 17, 6-8 p.m.; Thursday, June 19, 6-8 p.m.; Saturday, June 21, time TBA. and Sunday, June 22, time TBA, ending with final team selections.

Dawson says coaching and support staff have been confirmed for boys under 12 (11 years of age, born 1986 or later), boys under 13 (12 years of age, born 1985 or later), boys under 14 (13 years of age, born 1984 or later).

It's a different story, however, for boys 15 to 16 (1982-1983) and girls 14 to 18 (1980-1984).

"Unfortunately," says Dawson, "we do not have sufficient confirmed players, coaches and support staff. Unless such support is forthcoming by the June 12 registration deadline, the opportunity will be lost."

Anyone interested in coaching must hold or register for a Level 1 coaching certificate, and all players and support staff will be given a referee's course as part of the training program.

Dawson points out it takes a serious effort of time and commitment to play or coach at this level. Play dates are Saturdays, with the B.C. Zone and Cup elimination matches scheduled for Sundays.

The Scorpions, who are sponsored by Wendy's, are hoping to distribute information sheets at all local schools to ensure that all children have an equal opportunity to participate.

In the future Dawson he says he would like to see one central Squamish soccer body, with all the affiliated teams covered by that umbrella organization. "We have a lot of strong individuals who have a lot of definitive opinions on how soccer should work," he says. He believes that unifying all the soccer bodies that currently exist in Squamish will strengthen the game at all levels.

Anyone interested in helping out either as a coach or support staff, can reach Dawson at 815-0095 or Bob Mahnger at 892-9506.

IT WON'T KILL YOU TO SLOW DOWN.

On your next trip to Whistler this summer remember that speeding on Highway 99 won't necessarily get you there faster. In fact, speeding may not get you there at all. Crashes caused by speeding injure or kill thousands of people each year in B.C. That's why over the next few months, police will increase speeding enforcement on Highway 99. So please slow down.

HOROSCOPES

Aries - March 21/April 20
This week you have very little energy, you have no desire to take the lead. Don't get frustrated; just wait it out. You'll be back to your old self soon. A close friend is there to lift your spirits. Sagittarius plays an important role.

Taurus - April 21/May 21
Your strong, silent nature pays off this week. A superior at work feels that he or she can confide in you. This confidence brings you into the "inner circle" and definitely will have positive results. However, don't get too wrapped up in work; your family needs you this week.

Gemini - May 22/June 21
Change is not in the cards for you this week. Your tasks at work seem monotonous, and this makes you restless. Don't start looking for a new job just yet. Your superiors know how capable you are and are planning to put you on a new project. You bump into a friend you haven't seen in a long time; sparks will fly.

Cancer - June 22/July 22
You won't be crabby at all this week. Everything goes your way at work. Co-workers come to you for advice, and superiors commend your efforts. Family members, all want to see you this week. You certainly can make the time to get together with all of them.

Leo - July 23/August 23
You're in control this week. Your insight solves a major problem at work, and your efforts are rewarded with a bonus. Your love life is on the upswing. Someone you've had your eye on finally makes a move. Don't be afraid to say yes. Scorpio and Pisces are involved.

Virgo - Aug 24/Sept 22
Your perfectionism gets in the way at work early in the week. Your efforts delay a project. Don't get too worried, while superiors are somewhat disappointed, there won't be any serious damage to your career. A loved one needs a shoulder to cry on. Be supportive.

Libra - Sept 23/Oct 23
Everyone from co-workers to family members is trying your patience. Remain calm; getting upset only will make matters worse. You meet an interesting person near the end of the week. Be cautious, but try to get to know him or her.

Scorpio - Oct 24/Nov 22
Don't try to be someone you're not at work this week. You know your limitations; stick to them. You'll get more rewards by doing your job well than by doing someone else's tasks poorly. Your family is there for you. Don't keep your feelings bottled up.

Sagittarius - Nov 23/Dec 21
It seems that you're always sticking your foot in your mouth this week; just explain what you really mean. Work won't present any problems. Loved ones will have you on the verge of tears. Don't get disheartened; they're only trying to help you make good decisions.

Capricorn - Dec 22/Jan 20
While many people will be vying for your attention at work this week. Keep your mind on the task at hand, and you will succeed. A friend of a friend asks you out. Go out on a date. Aquarius plays an important role.

Aquarius - Jan 21/Feb 18
You feel that you're in over your head at work early in the week. While it's disconcerting, you still must give 100 percent of yourself to your job. A little determination will go a long way. A loved one comes to you for advice.

Pisces - Feb 19/March 20
You help out a co-worker who seems to be floundering in his or her job responsibilities. Higher-ups also will notice your efforts and keep you in mind when a promotion is available.
