quamish RCMP are not releasing official informan on the cause of a traffic fatality which took the e of a Squamish man, hospitalized a woman from ackendale and injured two others.

he second of the two May 17 head-on collisions, hich happened only 600 metres from the first accint on Hwy. 99 near Porteau Cove, resulted in the ath of 20-year Victor Scheepe while 38-year-old enda Niedjalski, was rushed to Lions Gate spital in critical condition. Niedjalski, who was er transferred to Vancouver General Hospital, was ll in hospital as of Monday. Hospital staff would t release information on her condition.

Two Squamish men were injured in the first collion when their BMW was struck by a vehicle driven Scheepe and hit the rock face. Scheepe reportedly en hopped into a red 1990 Mazda belonging to a man who stopped to assist and continued to drive or the was soon involved in another head-on lision with a blue 1990 Ford Ranger pickup.

Opl. Joe Schofield said police are still investigating rts of the incident and would not comment on the use of the tragedy.

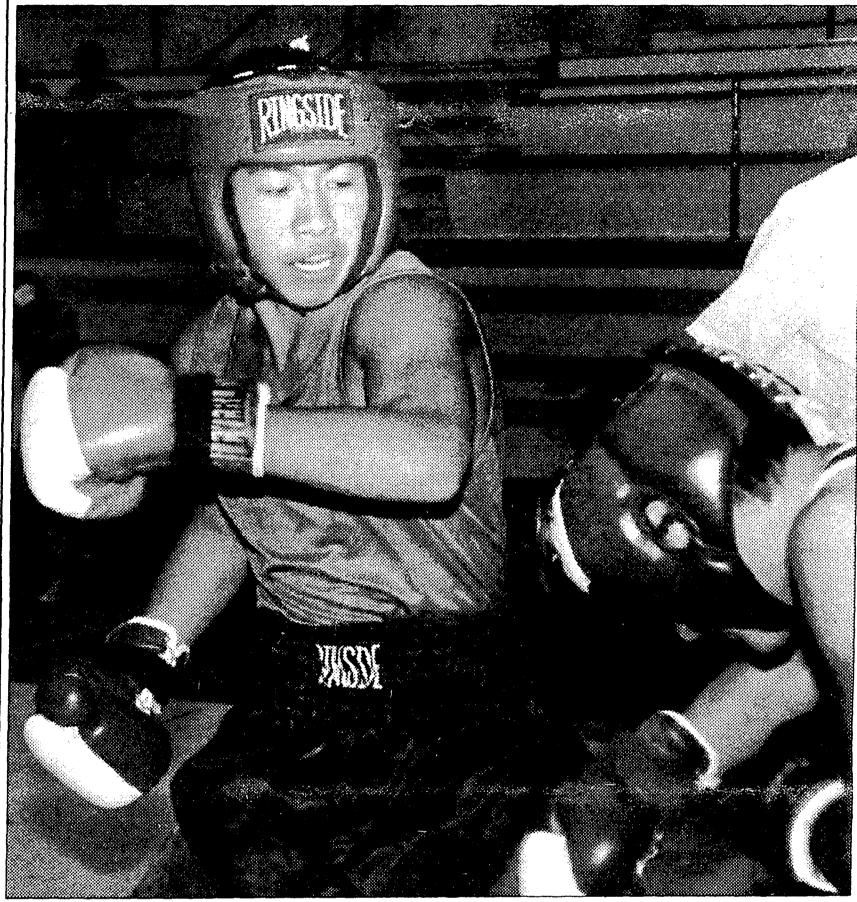

We're waiting for the coroner's report to come ck," said Schofield.

Dave Stewart, coroner in charge of the investigan, said it will likely be at least three months until a froner's report on Scheepe's death is released.

"There's no indication of drugs or alcohol being d at this stage," said Stewart.

lack Purdie, previous pastor of Squamish Baptist hurch, knew Scheepe since he was six years old. urdie said Scheepe had attended church on a regubasis for a number of years.

He was a very balanced, very gracious young an," said Purdie.

Council rescinds support of estuary management plan indorsement of the Squamish Estuary Management an (SEMP) during the May 20 regular meeting. In a 4-3 vote, three council members, councillors on Barr, Paul Lalli and Mayor Corinne Lonsdale pposed the motion to revoke council's support for EMP. Jean Wilkinson, president of the Squamish stuary Conservation Society (SECS), presented a etition to council with about 1,500 signatures from cople supporting no further development in the stuary. Wilkinson, one of three people who spoke council about the issue that night, asked council pembers to change their minds about supporting the

'We seek to prevent any further development of he estuary," said Wilkinson.

Coun. Meg Fellowes put a motion on the floor for puncil to withdraw its support for SEMP and to hake its new position known to the provincial govrnment and the Squamish Estuary Coordinating committee. Fellowes said she thinks council needs review the current plan and consider making hanges to it.

"I think this is a high risk strategy, but I also elieve the rewards are vast," said Fellowes.

SEMP, originally drafted in 1982, is a proposed amework for sustainable development in the estuary which is meant to preserve and restore a major portion of it while allowing for development where appropriate.

Coun. Dave Young said he used to think the plan was the best way to go, but said lately he has received mixed messages from B.C. Rail about its plans for development in the estuary.

"I have to wonder what's going on behind the scenes," said Young.

Coun. Lyle Fenton supported the motion to rescind and said there are a lot of issues raised through the plan which need to be addressed. Fenton said the current plan lacks a progressive land use strategy and does not give enough consideration to past damages caused by industry in the estuary.

"I believe we can go back later and endorse a somewhat changed plan," said Fenton. "There's literally millions of dollars being spent on watershed restoration in the Squamish River watershed, much to improve fish habitat. Without the key link of the estuary to see that part of the fish life cycle, it seems like an investment that is not being protected."

Barr said he would not support the motion to revoke the previous motion because industrial stakeholders located in the estuary pay a large amount of taxes to the district and a wide variety of government officials have told him the proposed plan is a good one.

Lalli said he would have supported a referendum on the issue if that motion had been brought forward. He agreed with Barr that the current SEMP is acceptable.

Coun. Sandra Bauer said the existing plan is a mistake for the environment and for Squamish resi-

Lonsdale said endorsement of SEMP was a major issue during the 1993 municipal election and the population has not changed that much since then. She said she believes there is still a lot of support for the plan in the community. She said once SEMP is signed off, a management committee would be formed which would include local representatives from various interest groups.

"Wouldn't we be far better off to get on with it and have local input?" said Lonsdale following the meeting. "We would be better represented this way."

Following the meeting, Wilkinson said she was pleased with council's decision and with the feedback from the community. As of Friday, the petition had 1,600 signatures and Wilkinson said the number keeps growing. But she said the society's fight to save the estuary is not finished and she will continue to lobby all three levels of government to stop the plan from going ahead as it is.

"It's a long way from being over," said Wilkinson. The last action council took on SEMP was during the January 7 council meeting when a motion was passed to not allow any development or disposition of Crown lands within the area until Squamish Nation land claims are settled.

No surprises, many promises made by candidates

THE CHIEF

By Brigitte Petersen The Chief

There was no clear winner, or loser, of last Wednesday's all-candidates meeting. About 100 people living in the West Vancouver-Sunshine Coast riding, mostly from Squamish, gathered in the community theatre at Howe Sound Secondary School to meet those running for the position of member of Parliament in the June 2 federal election.

Five of the six candidates, Conservative Dave Thomas, Reform John Reynolds, Liberal Phil Boname, NDP Clark Banks and Green Party runner Lisa Barrett, sat under the hot lights and debated a variety of issues during the two-hour public forum. David Grayson of the Natural Law Party did not attend the meeting. Following their opening remarks, each candidate had 30 seconds to respond to each question from the audience.

John French, news director of Mountain FM and moderator during the meeting, said the turnout was smaller than he was expecting but he was impressed with the questions people asked the candidates.

"This was one of the smoothest allcandidates meetings I've ever moderated," said French. " And questions from the audience were really insightful."

People in the audience wanted to know how candidates stood on issues as local as further industrial development in the Squamish estuary and as far from home as their opinions about the ongoing Indonesian invasion of East Timor. Discussion moved quickly from jobs to the deficit and from international trade to abortion.

All candidates said they would not support more development in the estuary. But when asked about supporting improvements to Hwy. 99, the five varied in their opinions. Boname said the Liberal Party has an infrastructure program which would pay for upgrading the highway and Conservative constituency offices in the larger communities. Thomas, endangered species who criticized the riding's most recent MP Reformer Herb Grubel for being unavailable to his constituents, promised he would be very active and accessible to Squamish residents.

"Where was Mr. Grubel in the past few years?" said Thomas. "This is one of the most beautiful ridings in the country and I guarantee I will be accessible."

Barrett, who calls Bowen Island her home, said she wants Squamish to have a strong voice.

When it came to forestry and endangered species, the candidates varied greatly in their opinions. Barrett said she doesn't believe endangered animals have enough protection but she feels most forest workers in the area now log responsibly. Reynolds said the threatened northern spotted owl can live in second-growth forest as well as it can survive amongst oldgrowth trees.

"We can harvest trees here like we can harvest lettuce," said Reynolds.

Banks, the comedian on the panel, said he thinks selective logging can be done responsibly and both species and workers' jobs should be protected.

"I feel like an endangered species being a working Canadian," said Banks.

Council moves to re-water channel

"I feel like an

Squamish council took a major step last week towards bringing water back into the Mamquam Blind Channel and turning the area into a municipal

A motion was unanimously passed to apply for funding under the so-called Mifflin Plan to the federal Department of Fisheries and Oceans (DFO) to assist with examining the possibility of re-watering the channel. The total estimated cost of the project would be about $100,000.

Mayor Corinne Lonsdale said funding through the plan may be available for projects which enhance salmon habitat, provide for partnerships within the community, create employment opportunities and have strong local planning support.

"Council has determined re-watering of the Mamquam Blind Channel is a priority," said Lonsdale. "It will be costly and difficult, but not impossible."

Lonsdale said the district is trying to get full funding for the project from the federal government. The district's function would be to manage the undertaking. She said district staff will likely find out the government's decision in a couple of months. But she said it could take years to see the project completed.

Besides enhancing salmon habitat, the plan would also provide public access to the waterfront with the creation of a municipal park.

"We now have a cesspool west of Loggers Lane," said Lonsdale. "This would bring it back to the way it was before it was lost to development."

The district's draft proposal identifies the need for the Squamish Nation's approval of the idea to rewater the channel.

DFO has highlighted a number of criteria in order for the district to be eligible for funding. An environmental assessment and inventory of the channel is to be undertaken to provide information and to result in a detailed report. The estimated cost of this would be about $15,000.

Secondly, an engineering assessment of existing blockages, culverts and the means of providing for waterflow into the channel is to be done. This investigation would include the installation of culverts and drilling and pumping of a well to provide water-

This step would cost about $5,000 and would result in an engineer's report including recommendations, an implementation strategy and a cost estimate.

An environmental assessment would then be done on the impacts of the introduction of waterflow on the existing salmon habitat and a way to mitigate and enhance habitat would be detailed. Including payment for an engineer, this part would cost about $8,000.

The implementation strategy following the previous steps would cost about $50,000 and the cost to design a municipal park would be about $20,000, including a landscape architect's fee.

Works in the channel area will require referral and approval from the Squamish Estuary Environmental Assessment Committee (SEEAC) which is made up of representatives from B.C. Environment, DFO, Environment Canada and the District of Squamish.

SGH needs financial help to improve services

Fund-raising campaign to pay for new equipment, programs

By Brigitte Petersen The Chief

The Squamish General Hospital (SGH) is trying to raise more than $1 million to replace aging pieces of equipment and to pay for new programs needed in the corridor.

On June 8, the Squamish Health Care Foundation will officially kick off the largest capital fund-raising campaign it has held since the hospital opened in 1952. Events begin at noon at the Best Western Sea to Sky Hotel with a garage sale, a flea market, barbeque and live entertainment. People are encouraged to drop off items for the garage sale between 9-11 a.m. in the hotel's parking lot.

Dr. LaVerne Kindree said the 86-bed hospital is in need of money mainly due to the provincial government's reduction in grants for capital funding to allow hospitals across the province to purchase new equipment.

"We're looking forward to good support from the community for their hospital," said Kindree.

SGH is a primary care facility serving the Howe Sound corridor of the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District (SLRD). As the only hospital in the corridor, it serves residents of Squamish, Whistler, Pemberton and residents and travelers in the SLRD.

Services currently provided by SGH and Hilltop House, an intermediate care facility, include general medicine and surgery, dental surgery, obstetrics, diagnostic, laboratory, radiology, ultrasonography, extended and intermediate care, psychogeriatric services, convalescent care, paediatrics, geriatrics, physical medicine and speech and language pathology.

Kindree said the foundation's first objective is to fund start-up costs for new programs including chemotherapy, mammography, additional surgical services and a palliative care unit for a total of about $365,000.

"It's not a pleasant trip for people with cancer who have to go to Vancouver for treatment," said Kindree. "Statistics show the incidents of breast cancer in this area are quite high."

Secondly, the foundation hopes to replace aging equipment such as cardiac monitors, a coagulation analyzer, diagnostic ultrasound, a digital flourography unit and laser printer, a radiographic unit upgrade and a sterilizer for surgical equipment.

Kindree said the radiographic unit needs a new generator and a good sterilizer is one of the most important items in a hospital. He said the current sterilizer, used to re-sterilize surgical instruments, is the same one since the hospital first opened.

The total amount the foundation is aiming for is $1,090,000. The hospital is funded through annual grants from the Ministry of Health and to a smaller extent through insurance payments, fees from Workers' Compensation Board claimants, fees from the provincial medical services plan and fees from self-paying patients.

The Squamish Health Care Foundation is a registered charity and donations to it qualify as tax credits.

The plan consists of an economic and forest dustry-based assessment, a business opporhities analysis, a value-added business study, inkages analysis of economy sectors, and an tion plan to put the findings to work.

Lonsdale said one important part of the plan is to help keep an inventory of what type of wood fibres are available in the corridor.

"We don't know what's out there," she said. "We haven't got a good inventory, so this is going to do that for us."

She said the consultant will be talking to major forest licensees in the area and valueadded business owners to determine if there are opportunities for partnering.

"Value-added businesses today have a hard time securing fibre," she said. "And maybe there are opportunities with the existing licensees to enhance that supply."

Lonsdale said the linkages analysis of economy sectors is another interesting part of the strategy.

"This is going to show how the forestry industry links itself down to the various sectors in the community," she said. "The community itself will have a far better understanding of how dependent they are on the forest industry."

The entire strategy, from the point of forest sector assessment to an action plan, is to take place in 99 days. Following that, a marketing strategy will be developed to try to attract value-added businesses to set up shop in the corridor.

"It's not just meant to be a plan to gather data, the next stage is to actually get out and market it," said Lonsdale.

As part of the strategy, the district coordinated a wood forum at the Sea to Sky Country Trade Fair May 23-25. The forum featured 15 of the 124 booths at the trade fair at no cost to value-added wood manufacturers and allowed them to exhibit their products to the public.

BRIGITH PETERSEN, THE CHIEF Public health nurse Nathalie Ferlatte helps Tanya Sinnes and her threemonth-old daughter Asia learn more about nutrition during a parent and infant drop-in at the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit.

Public health nurses often work behind the scenes

By Brigitte Petersen The Chief

Public health nurses provide a variety of services in the community, many of which are not always clearly visible.

Nurses at the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit were among those across the province who celebrated National Nursing Week last week, highlighting the many levels of service they provide in communities throughout B.C.

"There's a lot of variety," says public health nurse Nathalie Ferlatte. "There are lots of opportunities to initiate new programs."

Ferlatte said the health unit's profile is improving in Squamish and an increasing number of residents are calling nurses there to get health information and guidance. The unit, part of the Coast-Garibaldi Community Health Service Society, has five part-time nurses who take turns doing various duties, including outreach work in the community, talking with people who walk in, and running information programs. She says their main focus is to empower people with tools to maintain good health through education and awareness.

"People see us as a real resource," she says.

And if nurses at the health unit can't help, they will refer people to the proper place.

The health unit has a parent and infant drop-in program every Tuesday from emotional difficulties after the birth of a 10:30-11:30 a.m. when moms, dads and babies aged one and younger, get togethcr with other parents, infants and a public health nurse to talk about child development, nutrition, sleeping habits and other parental concerns.

The unit also offers a breastfeeding clinic for new mothers on Fridays. Three health clinics for child immunizations and other health issues also take place on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays and are available through appointment bookings. The health unit also runs an athome maternity care program called Best Beginnings designed for healthy mothers and newborn babies who are discharged from hospital within 48 hours of birth.

All programs offered through the health unit are free of charge.

Ferlatte says the unit forms many partnerships with other health-related agencies in the area to provide services and deliver programs.

A post-partum depression line has been set up for new mothers experiencing baby.

Ferlatte says nurses at the health unit are constantly working on new projects, including trying to set up a healthy sexuality clinic for youths.

"Youths would really like to see this service," she says. "We want to teach people skills to stay healthy."

Public health nurse Sue King says the unit is very family-centred but it also does work with individual adults such as giving Hepatitis B immunizations and following up on communicable diseases.

"We do a bit of everything to keep the public safe," says King.

School tax rate lowest in five years

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN The Chief

The school tax rate for residential property owners in the Howe Sound school district has been steadily declining since 1992. But property assessment values have been rising, so few will see decreases in the amount of school taxes they have to pay for 1997.

of finance and administration with the school board, said the provincial government has determined this year's tax rate for the district to be $3.29 for every $1,000 of assessed residential property value. In 1992, that rate was $5.05 per $1,000.

"People will see lower tax rates but if the value of their property went up, they may John Hetherington, director have to pay more tax dollars," said Hetherington.

Hetherington said the property assessments in most other parts of the province have dropped.

The provincial government uses a calculation to determine what the tax rate for each school district will be. For 1997, the government established the projected total amount of property taxes to be collected from across the province to be $960 million. B.C. Assessment provides the total number of residential dwellings, 1.2 million for 1997, translating to a total assessment value of $270 bil-

In the Howe Sound school district, 13,340 dwellings have been listed totaling an assessed value of about $3.5 billion.

A new program to help people with disabilies create small business opportunities has een introduced by the Community Futures evelopment Corporation of Howe Sound in artnership with the federal government's Economic Western of linistry Diversification.

The Disabled Entrepreneur Investment rogram will make $200,000 available to lend p entrepreneurs with disabilities in the Sea to ky corridor. The loans are up to a maximum f $75,000 and can be used for small business d tart-up or expansion.

"The research the federal government has done says that disabled folks tend to think they don't have the qualifications to become a small business person and we believe othervise, as does the government," says Howe

Sound Community Futures general manager Jeff Dawson. "I'm not sure there is anything that would prevent them from getting into small business now, but this program certainly makes it a whole lot easier."

Applicants interested in the program will develop their business plans with the assistance of trained Community Futures staff.

"Every loan that comes out of our office basically comes with an unlimited amount of training," Dawson says. "They clearly have to come to the table with a set of skills that would make their business plan viable.

"Every person, whether they have disabilities or not, has difficulties and weak points and we're happy to work with all of our clients in the areas where they need extra help."

Dawson expects the program to be successful. He says after "word leaked out" about six people have already approached the office about the program in the past month.

Courtice to get severance pay of almost $100,000

By Brigitte Petersen The Chief

The superintendent of schools for Howe Sound School District 48 will receive $93,000 in severance pay when he leaves his position this summer.

Constance Rulka, chairperson of Howe Sound School District 48's board of trustees, said Doug Courtice's severance pay is within the normal allowable range for the superintendent's position. She said the contract between the board and Courtice stipulates a one-year annual salary for termination without cause.

The severance payment has been applied to the current 1996/97 school year's operating Courtice's last day on the job is July 31.

Rulka said the board has been meeting with consultants to try to determine who will hired as the new superintendent. She said an official announcement will likely be made in August or September.

"We're hoping to get things done fairly quickly," said Rulka. "We would like to get on with it and look towards the future."

Trade Fair sees record attendance

The 14th annual Sea to Sky Country Trade Fair May 23-25 was another huge success. Record attendance was recorded on Friday and Saturday and an estimated 8,000 people attended over the three days.

This year's theme was T.V. Sitcoms and Friday night attendees were invited to judge the best costumes and best exhibits. Sunsational Vacations transformed their booth into Gilligan's Island to win first in Best Costumes, while Health Food Heaven was second and the Squamish General Hospital fund-raising booths were third.

Sunsational Vacations also took first in Best Exhibitor. Sabre Rentals was second, Dutchies Trading post was third and honorable mentions went to Coastal Cedar Creations, Born Natural and Indigo Wood Products.

The judges were entered to win a two-night stay in Whistler's Blackcomb Lodge, which was won by Joanne Zander.

Sea to Sky Stables offered wagon rides for a donation to the Squamish Food Bank and $250 was raised.

The Miss Squamish Youth Ambassador dunk tank raised more than $700 towards the Miss Squamish travel fund (that translates into 933 dunks).

This year a Value Added Wood Forum funded by Forest Renewal B.C. was held in conjunction with the trade show. Many people took advantage of the information and educational sessions that were offered.

Squamish adults in need of help with overoming alcohol and drug addictions can now et aid in their own homes.

acqollyne Keath is the coordinator of a new home detoxification program run by the Sea Sky Community Health Council's Home apport Services. Keath said the program fers safety, security and privacy to people athdrawing from alcohol and other subances. She said awareness is the first step to covery.

'There's a big problem with people in denial this community," said Keath. "The huamish area has a high incident rate of drug d alcohol addiction."

Keath, who started her position on April 1, ovides screening, assessment and education people addicted to many forms of drugs. he said prescribed medications such as tivan, Valium, Tylenol and Codeine can cause dependency if a person has been taking it for a long time.

The program became available to Squamish and other communities following the closure of Pender Detox in Vancouver. Provincial government funding was split between several communities to develop home-based detoxification programs that suit the needs of each town.

Keath works out of the Squamish Mental Health Clinic on Second Avenue and is employed by the Sea to Sky Community Health Council.

Bill McNeney, chairman of Squamish's Committee for Responsible Community, said the group had been helping to get a full-time detox counselor in the area since January.

"This is a big step," said McNeney. "We appear to have had some influence in pointing out the need and getting something done."

McNeney said people requiring detoxification services had to go to Vancouver for treatment before Keath filled the position.

Recreation must be promoted and supported quamish is in for a busy summer. Aside from the usual influx of campers and outdoor enthusiasts from the Lower Mainland who will be travelling up the Sea to Sky Highway to enjoy the unique recreation opportunities in our community and throughout the corridor, the month of June will be packed with outdoor sports events which promise to bring thousands of participants and spectators.

The Sea to Sky Summer Sports Festival is a brand-new, 10-day event which will feature competitions and demonstrations in just about every outdoor sport one can participate in. Under the festival banner are two returning events, the Squamish Test of Metal mountain bike race and the Sea to Summit Backcountry Challenge.

Both events are entering their second year and were very popular the first time around. The Test of Metal was recently named the best point-to-point race in B.C. by the Vancouver Sun and the Sea to Summit, which has competitors paddle, bike, hike and raft their way from Deep Cove, through Squamish to Whistler, has been likened to a mini Eco-Challenge.

It would be hard to say just how much the Eco-Challenge, a large-scale backcountry adventure race that ran through the corridor last summer, inspired these events, but it certainly proved outdoor events could be successfully held here.

When the festival shifts its focus to Whistler near the end of its run, things will still be cooking here in Squamish with the Mamquam River Whitewater Festival June 21-22. This event will go a long way in promoting Squamish as having some of the best beginner and advanced white water kayaking anywhere.

It all proves what recreationalists have been saying for years: Sea to Sky Country is the Canadian capital of outdoor recreation. And Squamish has the very best of it.

How do we know this? People tell us. From letters to The Chief and from talking to people who come from all over the province, Canada and the U.S. to experience what we have here.

They always say the same thing: "Squamish has the best...I've ever seen." Insert rock climbing, mountain biking, windsurfing, white water kayaking and rafting, sailing, scuba diving, fishing or almost any other sport you can think of.

In his letter in the May 13 issue of The Chief, Jim Harvey hit the nail on the head. The economic benefits of these sports is probably underestimated and we have to take the opportunity to promote these activities and reap the benefits.

It is absurd that one of the best rock climbing destinations in North America could face restricted access. The Squamish Windsurfing Society faces similar problems due to continued vandalism at a site they are unable to develop.

Among windsurfers, Squamish is seen as the next best spot after the Columbia River Gorge, widely recognized as one of the world's top windsurfing areas. But the continued degradation of the site here has many just coming for the wind and not wanting to stick around for anything else.

Surely there are people who don't want to see so many visitors crowding our small town. Are there any of us who have not briefly wished someone would just close that highway as we try to work our way home through the choking weekend traffic?

But these people aren't going to go away. Squamish is a destination more than ever now, no longer just a gas stop on the way to Whistler.

Council has supported every one of the recreation events proposed in Squamish because it recognizes the economic and promotional benefits. The rest of the community has to be supportive as well. We have to become more accommodating to our visitors because, like it or not, they will keep coming and the best we can do is profit by it.

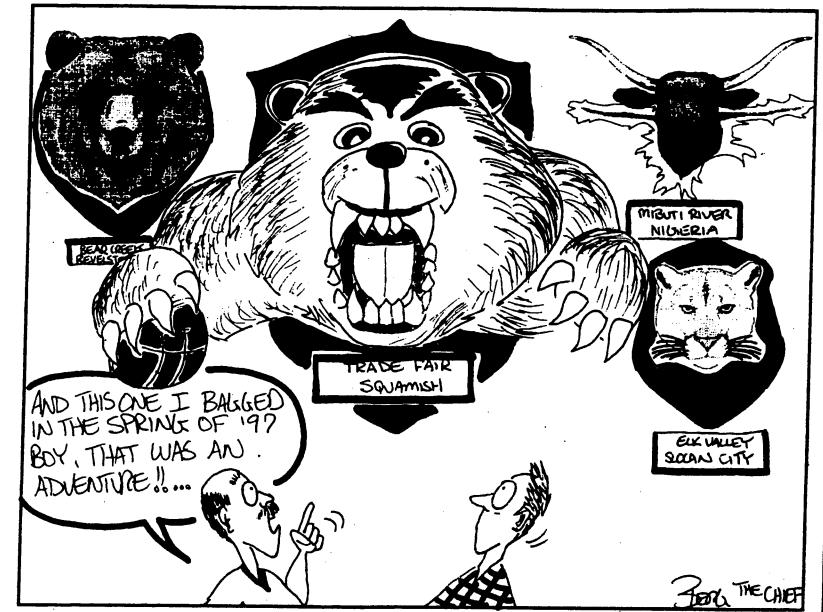

Vote for your favorite

While the media has billed this federal election as the most boring in years and our riding doesn't seem to be an exception, that does not mean it is an excuse not to vote.

Read our coverage of the all-candidates meeting in this issue to help you decide which candidate you favor.

The winner will be representing us in Ottawa for the next four years, so if you don't vote you can't gripe if you are not happy with the result.

The polls are open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday, June 2 at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre.

Squamish is lucky to have enthusiastic youth organizations

BY CONSTANCE RULKA
Contributed to The Chief

here is a lot of similarity between a brilliant umbrella, with its many segments of vibrant life, and the Child and Youth Committee (CYC) we have here in Squamish.

Like a parachute, this group has both sheltered and given wings to many other groups — all working, like itself, to help young people in a variety of ways.

We are lucky to have a number of these organizations in Squamish catering to the needs of the whole spectrum of youth whether they are still in school or out in the adult world, making their way in the workforce or through college. Such groups as Youth in Action and the Youth Advisory Committee are filled with enthusiasm and doing a wonderful job. Our municipal council made youth its main focus over the last year and youth coordinator, Richard Trann, with the able assistance of Pat Wilbur, has worked with the young people to get things up and running. Above all, their voices are being heard.

Adults are coming to realize that they cannot help the young to solve their problems by giving them what adults think they ought to want. They have to listen to what young people themselves say are their needs and goals. One of their most important requirements is a youth resource centre in the downtown core. A hope is to have it located, when funds become available, in a renovated Brightbill House. That would be a place to which they could turn for support and advocacy. There, they would be able to hold youth forums, have meetings, enjoy recreational activities, get counselling in various areas, and have access to other resources, both locally and elsewhere in the Lower Mainland.

Members of the mayor's

Healthy Communities

Committee (a Ministry of Healt with initiative that was picked up by the CYC and handed onto the municipality) are quite excited about the progress being made ize by the young people. They were delighted to see the first issue of On the Edge, the newsletter of the Youth in Action group.

Funds, or lack of them, led to the number of copies being limited to 100, but the momentum is there.

So much is going on. The CYC feels it has set off many projects.

feels it has set off many projects that other groups have picked up and run with successfully.

It might be beneficial now if they could all become re-connected, consolidated with the core for resources and information. It is the old analogy of a bundle of six sticks being more than 20 times stronger than the individual stick.

All those working for our children and young people need to inter-connect, so that together, they can achieve so much more.

Community needs more volunteers

Editor,

I want to shout. I want to cry. I want to shock our community into a 1990s consciousness. I want you, the core and heartbeat of a community to wake up!

Who am I, and others of my kind to make such direct remarks? I can assure you, there are very few of us, but perhaps after reading this letter, you too may become one of my kind.

I am a volunteer. I give help in the form of time to charitable organizations. For those of you who really, truly wonder what charitable organizations Squamish could possibly have, the list is endless. There are churches, schools, hospitals and a myriad of causes such as Big Brothers Big Sisters. I give my time uncomplainingly and, rain or shine, I am out there in our community.

I am a believer. I believe that if you give, then something better will come from my contribution. Whether it be one more happy child or one less hungry person, a situation will improve because of this gift.

I and my kind are everywhere. We are at children's events, schools, churches and hospitals. We are out in our community fund raising, recruiting and canvassing. We are on the streets, at hot do sales and selling raffle tickets.

Where there is not enough of my kind is right here in Squamish.

Because of the lack of volunteers, worthy and much needed organizations such as Big Brothers Big Sisters face closure. If this trend continues, the our community of Squamish is in jeopardy of breakdown. Remember, it takes a whole village to raise a child.

I and my kind are selfless — we reach out ever day to help others in all walks of life. Please don't erect fences and adapt attitudes to keep out my kind.

Do not turn the other way and pretend that our community of Squamish is not needful of a few hours of your time each month.

My kind helps. My kind cares. My kind builds a community which will have a future. Get involved and become a caring, responsible citizen of our community. Now!

Enough of cynicism in politics

Letters

Last Wednesday evening I attended the pubmeeting of the candidates for our riding in e upcoming federal election. I have to admit, went to the meeting with a fairly skeptical titude. I, like so many others I have talked to the past months, have developed a fair egree of cynicism about the way we do poliics in Canada. The system seems badly in leed of a new vision. We, as a people, seem adly in need, and hungry for, a new vision. and while we grope in the dark for that vision, ve turn to posturing, a search for power and a heeting of our self-interests, and, as in my ase, cynicism.

While my experience Wednesday evening vas much like what it had anticipated, I am eartened by the opportunity it provided me to e-examine my skeptical attitude. At the ebate I witnessed old style politics, I witessed a remarkably refreshing honesty in the NDP candidate and I listened carefully to the breen Party platform. As the evening progressed, I became aware of my own desire to move beyond cynicism to the creation of something positive; a vision that includes within it a re-examination of the very assumptions which govern our country, our international affairs and our own lives.

I am aware that many people would agree with me up to this point. We need change. I am also aware that some will choose to seek out the realization of that vision differently than I am doing. But this we must all understand; cynicism disempowers. It kills motivation. It keeps us passive and unable to think and act creatively. It keeps us going around in the same circles without end.

Enough of cynicism, skepticism, criticism, passivity. On Thursday morning I called the national office of the Green Party in London, Ontario. I intend to become a member.

And in the next election, I intend to be very vocal.

eopardy of ole village to

I awoke the other morning to a vague famil-)ns ar sound, the yap, yap, yap of a robust male worker named Enzo, who is employed at the Chevron next door. His friendly voice permeted the air over the outdoor loudspeaker as he istry of Healt olitely instructed a customer on the use of the picked up by gas pump. I got out of bed, tripped over some ed onto the bedding plants I seeded, and stumbled out to uite excited by balcony. I was greeted by the familiar odor being made gas fumes and the rival scent of delicious le. They were ome-made goodies wafting through the back : first issue o loor of the Silver Spoon Deli. I watched for a ewsletter of ew minutes as the traffic streamed into the gas 1 group. umps and off to Whistler flowed a steady iem, led to the eing limited

I watched for a few minutes, admiring the newly blossomed colors in my little flower garden below, which was once a bed of broken on. The CY nany projects class, garbage and weeds. I am about to start ave picked up morning off as usual, laundering my todllers bed sheets and p.j.s and then I hear voices. I step back onto my balcony and watch as a man leads his dog to a small area beside my cute little new garden. Is this their morning exercise route? Mornings like this are too routine to be screaming off my balcony. Besides, need a coffee badly and I'd wake the neighbor's baby. Just then the fire truck screeches to the stop sign and begins to sound its siren. Chelsey's on the balcony without p.j. bottoms and I am trying to scoot her in out of the cold.

She's determined to wave at Tony, the fireman and see the firetruck.

We are fortunate to live close to the parks and school playground and even with the foreboding clouds, I think we will pack a picnic lunch later and an extra carrot for the horses down the road. I'm one of the few who actually live right in the middle of the hustle and bustle. My neighborhood may not be Ronnie's Pick of the Week, but I still consider myself fortunate. On our walks we have appreciated the joy of a neighbor's garden, however small, flowers straggling over fences and the scent of fresh blossoms drifting in the spring air. We have an abundance of nature within walking distance and the convenience and friendliness of the businesses nearby who know my daughter by name and take the time out of their busy bustle to chat with us.

We've taken the time to smell the roses and to also plant a few. A dear friend of mine once quoted me from an anonymous writer: "To smell the roses is not enough — they must be tended also."

Fortunate we are to have a conscientious community who are not only aware of the many graces and benefits surrounding us, but also who work to maintain and provide many volunteer hours to continue to contribute and improve it.

Top of the morning to all of you. That includes Enzo.

Mayoral mathematics don't ring true

Editor,

I don't know if it's me, but the mathematics of our mayor don't ring true for the front page article in the May 14 issue of The Chief.

According to our chief on council the claim for extra taxes is being based, if the bylaw is passed that is, on an assessed property value rate of $4.35 per $1,000 of 1996 assessed amounts (residential) and the extra tax collected would amount to approximately $65 for residential taxpayers.

If she could explain the numbers on her abacus how she could arrive at the

The property in which I currently live is assessed at $63,000.

According to the article the numbers determined would then read 63 x $4.35 making the tax collection on just this one property a grand total of $261. Just a Freudian slip?

Come on, Corinne get it right. Of course $65 looks a lot better than $261.

> The Squamish Food Bank Society would like the community to know how generous it has been. Since March, we have received more than $2,000 in cash donations from individuals, businesses and community groups. This, along with donations of food by individuals and the local supermarkets has allowed us to distribute about 120 bags of groceries to more than 150 individuals in each of the last three months.

> More than a third of these were children in each month.

> We ran out of food in March and had to turn two people away. We were able to help everyone who came in April with a few bags left over and had to unfortunately turn a few people away again in May after having distributed all the food donated and the food purchased with the last of our cash donations.

> The grant-in-aid of $5,000 from council has since arrived and will hopefully mean that we won't have to turn anyone away again who needs food. It also will mean that we will have some financial stability and the capacity to engage in more intensive food and fundraising efforts in the future, as well as being able to work with our partner community groups to find more creative and longer lasting solutions to the problems and underlying cause of poverty in our community.

We will continue to need the community's generous support of food and money, but we also have a critical need for volunteers to help out on a monthly basis and as board mem-

We have an urgent need for a treasurer and individuals who would be interested in sharing the role of distribution day coordinator on a rotating monthly basis. The latter involves taking responsibility for ensuring the overall organization and coordination that is required to make sure food gets distributed on the second Wednesday of a particular month, and being in charge and present during that distribution day. Training and support is provided. Our hope is to have enough people with experience doing this, so that any one person will only have to do it twice a year.

As a final note, we are hoping to organize a second harvest of fresh produce that will give gardeners a chance to share any extra garden bounty they have this summer. Anyone who wants to help organize this can call Pam at 898-1608.

The next distribution day will be Wednesday, June 11 at the Elk's Hall. We will be bagging and sorting food from 9 a.m.noon and distributing food starting at noon. We are asking people to bring carry bags or plastic bags with them as we will only have paper bags available.

If you can help or have any questions, please call Pam Gliatis at 898-1608.

The wonders of working with wildwood

By Brigitte Petersen
The Chief

he west coast rains provide the perfect environment for the kind of wildwood cedar Warren Brubacher uses to make practical art.

Brubacher started working with wood as a log cabin builder near New Glasgow, Nova Scotia where he constructed his first log home in 1973. People liked his work and he kept on building one or two cabins every year while living on his own homestead with his family.

When Brubacher moved to Squamish in 1990, he found log home building to be less of a novelty and not as much in demand since many people living out west had already mastered the technique. He then decided to create special features and furnishings for homes instead of building entire structures.

"I'm a log home builder turned artist," he says. "I've found a niche for myself here."

Brubacher, owner of Coastal Cedar Creations, uses naturally bent red and yellow cedar with bizarre shapes to make one-of-a-kind gazebos, beds, tables, plant holders, staircases and other items.

He says he finds most of the wood in area forests and from logging companies discarding pieces they can't use. He says he does selective thinning of degenerated trees in the forest to get his wood, improving the growth of healthier trees competing for light.

"I look for the most unusual pieces," he says. Brubacher likes to have a wide range of pieces of air-dried wildwood in stock at his workshop near

BRIGITTE PETERSEN/THE CHIEF

Warren Brubacher sits on a bench he built from naturally bent red cedar and pine with Ruth Fenton. The bench was commissioned by the Carson family in memory of Albert Carson (Ruth's brother) and is located in the estuary.

Swift Creek so when people ask him to design and build something a little different, he has a lot to choose from.

"This is a big year for benches."

He works on commission and although his works do not come cheap, every piece is guaranteed to be unique and to grab people's attention. An average gazebo made by Brubacher costs about $8,800.

"It's high-end stuff," he says. "And it's part of heritage. It can be passed down to generations."

Brubacher says his reputation is growing and there's more demand for his work, so he's been able to involve his son Jason in the business and pass along his skills. Besides providing to the local market, he's exported finished pieces to Japan and the United States.

And he hasn't completely retired his experience as a log home builder. He teaches a course 12 hours every week at Royal Oak College in Burnaby, sharing his knowledge of wilderness log home building. One of the biggest projects Brubacher and his students worked on was a tree cabin located in Paradise Valley along the Cheakamus River, which they finished last July. He says he is currently looking for new projects he and his class can undertake and he invites proposals.

Some of Brubacher's work is on display at the Garden Center on Mamquam Road, where he also has examples for viewing contained in a portfolio. Brubacher also participated in a value added wood forum during the Sea to Sky Country Trade Fair May 23-25.

For more information about Brubacher's work, contact him at 892-4380.

Help now available for those post-partum blues

Heather Lauder

By MARY BILLY
Contributed to The Chief

In 1990, Heather Lauder found herself alone all day with brand new twin baby girls and her first-born, a daughter of 18 months. Her husband was working two, sometimes three jobs to make ends meet. Their plan, Heather says, "was to have two children close together and it would be all over. Then guess what? Twins."

That changed everything. With no relatives in B.C., no close friends to call on and almost everyone she knew away at work all day, about a week after coming home and suffering severe sleep deprivation, she started to lie around all day, not even bothering to dress or feed herself, too tired to do anything. All the while Lauder thought she had to do it all, not knowing how to ask for help from anyone, not even her husband. She wondered what was wrong.

Post-partum depression has many faces. Lauder says this lethargic, over-tired phase lasted about five months. Then one day she thought she better stop complaining and completely reverted to thinking she could do anything and became what she later learned is called a "hyper-vigilante mom". She began doing everything from being an overly clean housekeeper to putting on special dinners, going to the gym, going back to work part-time, entertaining on weekends. She even took in other children for daycare, and began "talking incessantly, mostly about myself, what I had to do, hadn't been able to get done, or needed yet to do."

Around the time of the twins' first birthday she found herself in her kitchen screaming for help. Knowing she was in trouble, she looked up the number of the closest mental health clinic and called. They put her in touch with Parents in Crisis in the west end of Vancouver.

"It saved my life," she says. "I wasn't alone. I was being validated in my feelings."

Although help was only a phone call away, there had never been any information from anyone, not her doctor, the hospital or baby clinics about the possibility of post-partum depression.

"If there had been, I wouldn't have spent a whole year thinking it was all my fault, that I was the only one and that there was nowhere to go without being blamed and considered a failure as a mother, a woman, a wife.

"Now, all that's different. Now you are given a kit when you leave the hospital." In it there's a check list of symptoms for different types of anxiety. There is another list for the symptoms for depression. Most mothers experience some forms of post-partum adjustment with varying effects. However, now there is someone willing to help.

The Squamish public health staff has developed a post-partum depression support line, with a group of trained volunteers who have learned how best to support other moms who need someone to talk to. The number in Squamish is 892-3570 and the number for Whistler, Pemberton and D'Arcy is toll free at: 1-888-329-3570. The phone connects an answering machine message. New moms are asked to leave a number at which they can be reached. The messages will be picked up at least three times a week by program coordinator Val

John. She will call the woman back and check to see if this service is what's needed or if other care might be required.

She wants to be sure users of the service are clear about what the best support is, and that the peer support service is only a part of that.

Volunteers have been drawn from those who answered the ad recently in The Chief and The Question requesting compassionate people who had experienced post partum depression in the past.

"They bring the universal message: you're not alone; you're not to blame; and you will get well. You need have no fear of saying you have weird thoughts, have thought of suicide or even of harming your baby, said public health nurse, Shelagh Murray.

"Post partum is a particularly vulnerable time for all moms, with adolescent mums at a higher risk than most. Val John will be the first contact, then she will match the mother with the volunteer who hopefully will live close to where the mom lives in the same community, so she can provide emotional support. This is not a counselling service, just a non-judgmental ear for these women."

It is the connection that will put some caring, well trained volunteers in touch with moms in need of a sympathetic ear.

A dozen daffodils to Wes and Kerri of Tim Hortons. Thank you both for your generous support and flexible scheduling around my course work. Your help is greatly appreciated.

A slo-pitch field full of daffodils to the Black Tusk Realty Blasters. Our first victory at a tough tournament was nice but the camaraderie and family atmosphere that surrounds this team is what makes it so great to be involved with. Signed, Coach.

Bouquets of daffodils for those responsible for the bench in memory of Albert James Carson. Such a lovely location to stop, rest and enjoy the beautiful view. Thank you.

A schoolbus full of daffodils to the Easter Seal Camp. For the children, the best part of a field trip was the ride on the school bus. Happy Times Preschool.

A lawnful of daffodils to the two neighbors in Britannia Beach who so generously took the time from their families to cut their neighbor's lawn before it got any more overgrown and also historic buildings full of big, big sharp darts to the imbecile who can't even spell right with defaced private property on the weekend. Your spelling mirrors your mentality.

Many letters full of darts to the writer from Britannia Beach who always has something negative to say about the community. Maybe if you were to write about all the good things that have taken place the negative would be a drop in the bucket. Try it. It works. Clearcuts full of daffodils to the back breaking tree planters who have already planted trees in the brown clear cut welcoming all who travel north down the hill. A third generation Canadian.

Thanks to all my friends and family for making my 75th birthday such a memorable occasion. Ed Wirachowsky

Daffodils to Hidden Treasures for the summer market so I am able to get rid of my treasure without standing in the rain with a yard sale.

to fellow workers at Interfor and Elaho Logging for helping during my recent accident. A special thank you to Ken & Marco for the smooth ride down; the nursing staff at Squamish Hospital for their compassion to Wendy; ambulance attendants and to Dr. Morum. Thank you for all the phone calls of support from friends, neighbors and family.

"Hug a Logger" Dennis, Wendy, Stephanie & Danny

Senior men's golf group in for a busy season

he senior men's golf group has a busy season ahead, with interclub events coming up with Gleneagles, Surrey, University and Sunshine Coast. In spite of the unsettled weather, 41 were out last week. If you are interested they gather every Wednesday for an 8:30 a.m. tee off.

Branch #70 News

As usual we had a great assortment of food at last week's pot luck lunch. So nice to taste someone else's cooking. The meeting at 1 p.m. brought out a few more members and I was pleased to see several remembered our donation for the local food bank. President Bob Armstrong gave a report on his attendance at the annual seniors convention held in Smithers.

I had to leave before Elaine gave her report on the bus trips but understand she has added a couple more to her list. One is to Harrison Hot Springs in September when we will hopefully see the sand sculptures.

The next trip coming up is on June 14. This is a boat ride to view the Vancouver harbor and then on to Stanley Park for a carriage ride. An overnight trip to Victoria on June 24 will take in the Butchart Gardens and possibly the Butterfly Gardens returning home via Nanaimo. There is a lot of planning on Elaine's part to make these trips possible so it is important to get your name in so she can work out the prices. Please give her a call at 898-5463 to put your name down, get more detailed information and prices of the various trips.

Tantalus Seniors Centre News

Coming up on Wednesday, June 4, is our annual general meeting. It is important that everyone try and attend. We need your support. If you have any issues you would like to bring up, this is the time to do it. If you have something you would like to express an opinion on but do not like to speak, please feel free to write it down and hand it to a member of the executive.

We still need hostesses even if it is just for once a month or to be on call if one of the regulars is sick or needs a day to attend something special. The centre is open Monday to Friday. Closed weekends and holidays.

Monday — crafts; Tuesdays — crib; Wednesdays (10 a.m. - noon) sketch and paint club; Wednesdays (1 - 4 p.m.) Line dancing; Thursdays — open for cards, games etc.; Fridays — bridge.

Tomorrow night is sing-along at Hilltop House. The residents welcome your company. Time is 7:30 p.m.

Walking Club News

I sure hated to miss last week's walk at the outdoor school but it was raining and I had a head cold. The few that did go enjoyed coffee and cookies after at the school. Thanks Mindy.

This Thursday May 29, we meet at the golf course parking lot to pool rides for Ted's Diamond Head trail walk.

Shoppers Drug Mart Pharmacists Ray Lalli and Caroline Pope gave a very informative and interesting talk at last week's diabetes meeting. It was just disappointing that we didn't have a better turnout.

Thirty-five or 40 relatives and friends enjoyed a barbecue at our home last week to help Ed celebrate his 75th birthday. We all had some good laughs looking over all the comical cards.

Get well wishes go out to to Al

Kindergarten students learn about dental hygiene

Tooth Fairy, S.O.S.!

"What happens if your tooth is loose, and you swallow it without knowing about it?" The heart-felt cry came from a kindergarten student and, of course, the concern was not about having some foreign object wandering around in the digestive tract, but about the reactions of the Tooth Fairy. Mary Finlay, who was in the kindergarten classes at Garibaldi Highlands doing her job as dental hygienist, was comfortably matter-offact about it. She has known several cases where a note left under a child's pillow has proved quite satisfactory evidence of a lost tooth.

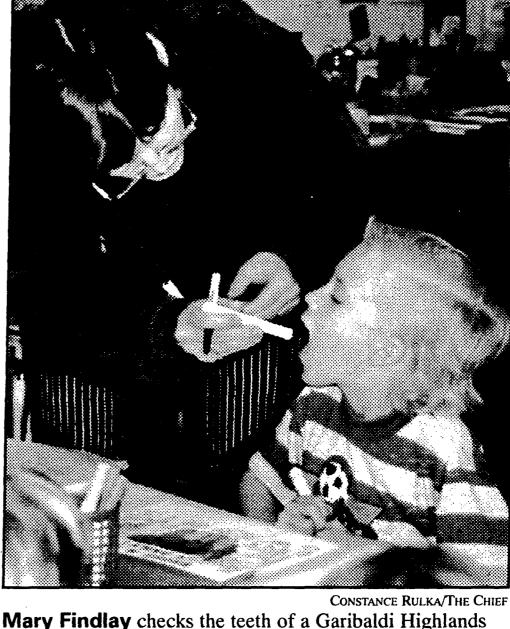

The children had been listening to a talk about the insides of their mouths and why it is so important to care for them. They were surprised to learn that the tongue is the toughest muscle in the human body, but they were more fascinated by the idea of its being covered in taste-buds.

They all had stories to tell about their own experiences with teeth, or about Dad's experience at the dentist. Ms. Luck's class actually have a Tooth Book, in which each page has a big outline of a tooth and some student's written record of how it came to be lost. To widen the subject, the teacher commented that one of her family had gone that very day to get some teeth out – but at the vet, not at the dentist. She asked them to guess who it was and I was not flattered that some of them thought it might have been I!

However, the whole examination had taken place in an atmosphere of fun and interest – no fear anywhere in the picture.

Poetry

Ms. Manzellini's class has been using something like that as the title of the poems they have written – I Have No Fears. These poems deal with contrasts – the way some people see things - such as spiders, sharks, an alien, a teacher, as fearsome and dangerous, whereas the young poet sees them from quite a different point of view.

Elementary kindergarten student.

These Grade 6-7 students have been studying many different forms of verse and now they are putting their own creations onto the computer and printing them out. We talked about the way students in the past used to memorize lots of verse and discussed what the benefits of that were.

The House Gobbaleen

Benefits are not, indeed, always what we expect them to be. Ms. McCutcheon's Grade 1-2 class were in the Library at Garibaldi Highlands reading a book by Lloyd Alexander. With lively illustrations, the story gives the age-old warning that we should always be very careful just what we wish for because our wish might perhaps be granted. That is what happened to the hero and his cat; who were only too glad to get back to the life they had been grumbling about – after they escaped from their wishcome-true.

The students were writing out their descriptions of incidents in the book that appealed to them, but they were willing to give up a few minutes of recess to go back to their classroom and show me their papier maché creations.

Ms. McCutcheon herself is a gifted artist in this medium (A delightful hen, wearing spectacles, presides over the Library counter and is an example of the almost-human animals she crafts) – and her students certainly seem to have caught the spirit of her work. There are some cute bears, and several fearsome snakes, including a cobra; but there is also an excellent reproduction of an iguana, a large octopus, a manta, a penguin and some bats. These are real likenesses of the anima 4 KON they represent, creatures will 5 5 KIN character, not just lifele 6 (1) CHE shapes.

Track and Field

Students of charact include the group from Garibaldi Highlands chose to take part in the Provincia Games in Vancouver on Ma 24. It takes a lot of practic 10 and stamina to compete 15 that level.

At the everyday level, sport days are with us again, an for some, the weather has been wonderfully coopera tive. Mamquam had idea conditions for their day – bri liant sunshine and a cod 20 breeze.

Younger students proudles paraded all the ribbons the had won. Older ones di some last minute polishing u of their techniques in hig jump and broad-jump, and al of them were wearing the col ors of their teams in t-shirts (1) CBU socks, shorts, and especially 4 4 KOM on their faces.

Serious races were inter 5 5 KING spersed with the funnier varie (6) (11) CHE would over-balance, and land (3) (7) BCT grass, and wheelbarrow races where the barrow would col lapse, or else go off at angle and collide with another pair of competitors.

The most spectacular dis play was being put on by the smallest students, with their multi-colored parachute.

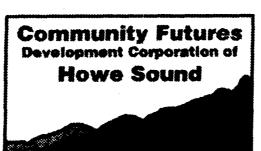

Holding it by the edges 23 6 they would pull it out into a flat wheel with rainbow spokes, then toss it up until it looked like a giant mushroom, under which they would all run, before scrambling out and starting all over 33

Pilsner a good partner for potatoes and seafood

To wonder the micro brew beer revolution revolved around ales. They have character in bucketfuls compared to the low malt flavors, low hops and slightly sweet corn or grain taste of the bland nationally brewed lagers. And there seems to be endless varieties. In tasting a full spectrum of ales, I've come to love their fruity complexity, creamy body and fragrant hoppiness. But there's times I crave a clean, crisply dry lager. Fortunately we're starting to see the quality revolution swing back to lagers.

The difference is all a matter of yeast and temperature. Ale yeast works quickly at warm temperatures, rising to the top of the vessel and creating a foamy head. It's an inefficient yeast, leaving behind certain sugars and flavor compounds that give the finished brew its fruity taste and at times a buttery sweetness. Ale spends at most a week in fermentation.

Lager yeast sinks to the bottom of the fermentation vessel and does its work slowly and at cold temperatures. It nibbles away at the sugars, leaving the beer drier, cleaner and rounder, with less obvious fruity characteristics. Often there's a faintly sulfury or "grassy" fragrance reminiscent of new-mown hay. Fermentation takes as long as two weeks. But it's far from finished. In German, a "Lager" means a bed, a camp or a storehouse. To lager is to store, or lay down. Lagers are matured for another three to six weeks, and three months is not unknown.

While there are almost as many types of lagers as there are ales, it's the golden Pilsner style I think of for pure summer refreshment. Unfortunately the name Pilsner has been cheapened by blandly diluted imitations of the real thing.

A classic Bohemian Pilsner has a soft malt character, accented more toward the balancing dryness and fragrance of the hop. A good Pilsner is the best partner for fish or deepfried seafood. The following recipe makes a wonderfully light batter that's divine for hefty B.C. prawns.

Deep-Fried Prawns

For the batter:

- 1/2 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 1/2 Tbsp. cornstarch
- 1 1/2 tsp. baking powder dash of salt, pepper, paprika or Cajun

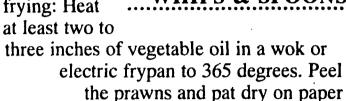

1/2 cup milk

1 lb. large prawns

Sift the dry ingredients together. Stir in the milk until a thick batter forms. This is enough batter Price for up to one pound of large prawns.

The deep frying: Heat at least two to gently lower into the heated oil. Fry for several minutes until golden brown. Turn if necessary to brown them all over. If using a wok, cook only four or five prawns at a time. Remove cooked prawns to a paper towel covered plate and keep in a warm oven until all are cooked. Serve at once with oven-fried potatoes.

towels. Dip into the batter and

Oven-fried Potatoes 2 to 3 large potatoes, either baking type or new potatoes

2 Tbsp. vegetable oil

Cut the unpeeled potatoes lengthwise into eight pieces — about the size of chunky French fries. Pour the oil into a 9 inch by 13 inch baking dish. Add the potatoes and stir about until covered with oil. Season with salt and pepper. Add some slivered cloves of garlic for a different touch. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake for about 45 minutes, until potatoes are tender and browned. Serve with Pilsner Pilsner Urquell is the original Pilsner named after the town of Pilsen in today's Czech Republic. This beer was not the first lager, but it was the first to be clear and golden colored. Pilsner Urquell has a good malt character balanced by a bitter nip of hops, and has a dry finish.

Heineken and Grolsch are well-known Dutch Pilsner-style beers. Both are mild tasting, crisp and easy drinking. Heineken has a faintly grassy aroma, and Grolsch has a softer smell of new-mown hay.

Closer to home, Whistler Avalanche is a fresh, clean tasting Pilsner more in the lighter style of the best American Pilsners. Lighter flavored without tasting watery, Avalanche has a well-rounded malty body with hoppy undertones. The crisply clean finish has a refreshing light hop bitterness. With this sort of quality, I can hardly wait for other microbreweries to start offering more European style lagers.

If you must burn wood, start cutting now and it will reduce harmful air pollution later.

Drying wood for at least five months helps it burn cleaner, putting fewer chemicals, organic gases, dust and soot particles into the air. These contaminants can cause headaches, dizziness, and breathing difficulties for people with respiratory problems such as asthma, chronic bronchitis and emphysema.

Here are tips to reduce the polluting effects of wood burning:

Choose the right stove. Be sure your wood stove is up-todate and maintained. Use only appliances approved by the Canadian Standards Associa-

U.S. or the Protection Environmental Agency.

Use the right size pieces. Wood should be split to a maximum thickness of 10 - 15 cm., depending on stove size. The size increases the surface area exposed to flame, resulting in higher burn efficiency.

Burn the right stuff. Never burn wet or green wood, painted wood, railroad ties, or particle board. Treated woods have preservatives that release toxic chemicals.

Stack it right. Wood should dry for at least five months, covered loosely to allow air circulation to remove moisture. Dry wood ignites faster and burns 25 per cent more efficiently.

A voluntary health agency with nearly 130,000 supporters province-wide, the B.C. Lung Association funds medical research, conducts educational programs and coordinates patient support activities. It is one of the few charities working to improve both indoor and outdoor air quality.

The Trade Fair is over, now what?

he Sea to Sky Country Trade Fair held this past weekend at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre was a wonderful opportunity for businesses in Sea to Sky Country to show off their services, products, and potential. The contacts businesses can make at such events cannot be overstated. However, there are as many missed opportunities at a trade fair as there are opportunities to excel. The companies losing out at this year's event will be the ones who plead guilty to any of the following faux pas:

If you remained in your own booth the entire weekend, waiting for others to come to you and you never bothered to introduce yourself to the other booths. This is something you simply cannot afford to do. You only have so much control on how many people stroll by your booth, but you have complete control on how many booths you made an effort to see. Here's hoping you maximized the opportunity.

If you had inquiries you were unable to deal with at the trade fair itself, and if by the time you are reading this article you still have not followed up on them...STOP READING RIGHT NOW, PICK UP THE TELEPHONE, DO THE HOKEY POKEY, TURN YOUR-SELF AROUND AND FOLLOW UP ON THESE VALUABLE LEADS. That weekend you spent at the trade fair, the one where you missed your family, the golfing gang, or both is all for naught if you do not follow up on your weekend's efforts. Make the weekend you gave up count...you started the job well, now is the time to finish it. Properly. If you ever wanted to tell your potential customers to take a long walk on a short pier, do not follow up on your trade fair leads. The effect is essentially the same.

Ditto if you haven't yet written the thank you notes to the suppliers, staff, volunteers, and countless others who contributed in ways big and small to your weekend's work. These people matter — communicate that to them. Now. Very few people will do this, and that fact alone will make those that do stand out so much more. Many of the folks in booths over the weekend gave freely of their time to help you out in your booth. Whether they are neighbors, employees, uncles, aunts, whoever...thank them.

To all the people who introduced themselves to us at our Community Futures booth, we look forward to working with you as you work towards pursuing your small business dreams. It was nice to see so much passion and enthusiasm and it augers well for our community as a whole.

I'd like to close by thanking and congratulating the many people involved in this year's event on another successful Sea to Sky Country Trade Fair, with special thanks going to the many faces associated with the Squamish and Howe Sound Chamber of Commerce. Well done!

Asano is Golden Gloves' Golden Girl

By Claire Macdonald Special to The Chief

Despite a last-minute change in location from Vancouver to Squamish, a lack of sponsorship and disappointing attendance, this weekend's annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament at the Howe Sound Secondary School gym offered quality bouts, according to organizer Wayne Jackson.

Jackson, who also coaches the Squamish Rock Boxing Club, found out that the rent at the PNE Gardens, where the tournament had been originally scheduled, had been significantly raised without notice only a week and a half prior to the event. "Because of the change of location several teams decided not to come from out of province, including the States and Alberta," he said.

Local fighters fared well over the two-day tournament. Tsukasa Asano, who lives in Squamish and trains at Vancouver's Astoria club, was honored with the Golden Girl trophy - a special award for the best girl in the tournament.

Steve Featherston, who competed in the 139 lb. junior C category, lost both his bouts, but Jackson noted that he was matched against two of the province's most experienced and medalled fighters.

In his first bout Featherstone was defeated 3-0 by Jamie Allison of the Port Kells club. Allison is a four-time B.C. champion, Silver Gloves champion and has competed at the national level. In his second bout Featherstone had a close fight against Kelowna's Billy Agar, who is a five-time B.C. champion, bronze medalist at the Canadian championships and the 1996 Western Canadian champion.

"Each judge's individual scorecards were very close, more so in the second fight." said Jackson. "Steve was calm and cool and really gave the Kelowna boxer a good fight. He's (Featherston) been competing only for six months and his opponent has been fighting for six years. Steve has moved up significantly, very quickly."

Steve Featherston lands a blow on opponent Jamie Allison during Sunday afternoon's 139 lb. junior C match bout.

Fifteen-year-old Curtis Rascher put up a good fight in a match bout against Manx's Travis Creegan Saturday, win-

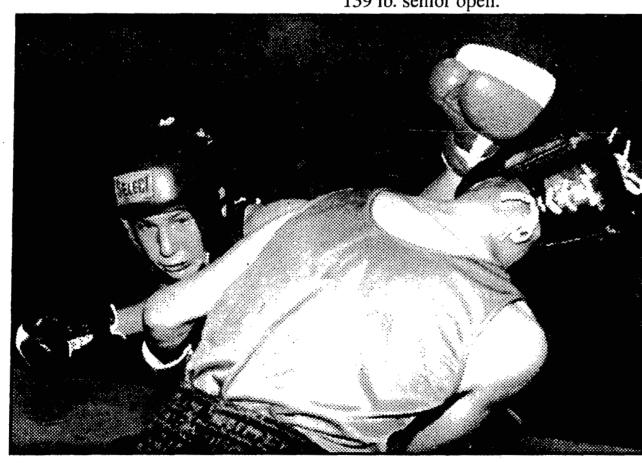

"The other guy came out swinging and tired himself out, letting Curt work him in the last two rounds," said John Larsen, also a member of the Squamish Rock Boxing Club.

In both of his match bouts, Shusei Kushida, competing in the 139 lb. junior C novice division, fought extremely well, beating both opponents Ryan Critchley of Campbell River and Manx's Jimmy Walker 3-0.

The Golden Boy award went to Troy Nelson of the Victoria Athletics. Other winners were: Cherie Eneinas (Ringside), Girls' 139 lb. intermediate/senior open; Tsukasa Asano (Astoria), Girls' 106 lb. senior open; Amir Shareef (Victoria Athletics), 125 lb. intermediate open; Jon Agar (Kelowna) 132 lb. intermediate open and Troy Nelson (Victoria Athletics) 139 lb. senior open.

Great ball the order of the day at Arneson Memorialuture

By Claire Macdonald Special to The Chief

Dean Arneson would be proud of the calibre of ball played at the tournament named in his memory at Brennan Park last weekend.

"The Howe Sound Braves ended up playing the Forest Hills Mohawk Oil (who made it to the finals) in the early rounds," said Bombers' coach and tournament organizer Jim Watson. "They put on an excellent performance and it was 10-7 for the Braves. It really was superb ball for 11 and 12 year-olds."

Although none of the three participating Howe Sound teams made it to the finals of this year's tournament, Watson said all teams played extremely well.

The semi-finals saw the Forest Hills Mohawk Oil against the Forest Hills Grouse Mountain and Mt. Seymour Athletics against the Mt. Seymour Pirates.

The Athletics and Oil advanced to the final, with the Athletics taking the title, 8-3.

This was the first memorial tournament named for Arneson who was killed in a freak car accident in Whistler in 1990 at the age of 22.

Born in the Queen Charlottes and raised in Furry Creek, Dean was an all-round athlete, said his mother Marilyn.

loved "He sports...baseball, basketball, soccer. But he did best at baseball."

After graduating in 1986, Dean was selected to play on Canada's junior national baseball

"That was one of the highlights," said Marilyn. "Then he joined the NBI (National Baseball Institute) in Vancouver, which is equivalent to the college teams in the States."

Dean played with the NBI for three years, during which time he met and played against some of baseball's greatest players.

"He did get a chance to travel on the NBI team," said Marilyn. "He went to Taiwan in a world tournament.

"He played against the likes of John Olerud (when he was on a college team), and he got to play against the Blue Jays for three years in a row. That was the thrill of a lifetime."

Marilyn stressed that Dean's success as an athlete was rooted in the support of local coaches. "It was the support of his coaches that got him where he went," she said. "He had great coaches."

Dean is survived by Marilyn, his father Daniel and his sister Lauri.

nted! A dozen volunteers to steer the Howe Sound Minor all Association through the 1998 season, or there may be ague next year.

t's the word from Howe Sound Minor Ball Association man LaRoy Watt. "If we don't have any help by next year, e not going to have girls' softball," says Watt. "We need t a dozen people to step forward and be part of the direcip. We need umpires, a registrar, a president, vice-presicall for volunteers comes hot on the heels of the resignaof president Mike Puchmayr earlier this month. In a letter e executive of the Howe Sound Minor Ball Association May 12, Puchmayr tendered his resignation effective preparation for the 1997 softball season, a decision was to eliminate standings in the mites, squirts and peewee ions," writes Puchmayr. "The focus of seasonal play would dividual and team development with an emphasis on good smanship. The opportunity to get serious, show off those y honed skills and play to win would continue to exist for playdowns, year end and any other tournaments a team choose to enter."

hmayr's decision to alter the format of girls' softball was vell received by other members of the executive. "Mike's a really great job for the past couple of years," says Watt. this year he arbitrarily changed the rules that have existed he past 15 or 20 years. This created a problem with the hes." However, Watt points out that the problem stems from the lack of volunteers. "There are three people running an organization that needed a dozen. Consequently Mike ended up doing a whole lot more than he should have."

At a special executive meeting two of the three softball directors voted back the standings, prompting Puchmayr's resigna-

"I thought I had the support (albeit soft) of my executive," writes Puchmayr.

"That support has subsequently been withdrawn and several persons have actively worked to obstruct the implementation of this change.

"With my leadership thus undermined, and my personal philosophy so obviously contrary to popular opinion, I feel I have no option but to submit my resignation as president of minor softball, effective immediately."

Anyone interested in volunteering their time to see the continuation of girls' softball in Squamish should contact Watt at 898-9644.

HOROSCOPES

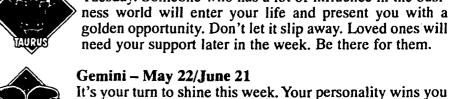

May 25-31

Aries - March 21/April 20

Now is the time to make your move at work. Telling the right people about your ideas puts you in the spotlight. Don't be nervous. Your family is behind you for support. A close friend is there for you when you have a problem. Taurus - April 21/May 21

Be bullish when it comes to meeting new people on Tuesday. Someone who has a lot of influence in the busifavor at work, and you make a lasting impression on a superior. As for romance, your personal life sparkles too. An old friend comes back into your life. Cancer - June 22/July 22

Work gets hectic this week, but don't worry. While you may be overwhelmed at times, you can handle the pressure. Just try to remain calm. A loved one turns to you in a time of need. Be yourself, and he or she will get all of the support that he or she needs.

Leo – July 23/August 23 You feel more like a lamb than a lion this week, but don't get discouraged. This feeling of insecurity will pass by Friday, and you'll be back to your old self again. Look to a close friend for an encouraging word. Don't be too shy to strike up a conversation with a co-worker.

Virgo – Aug 24/Sept 22 All of your hard work pays off, and the higher-ups finally notice you. Enjoy it, but don't become overconfident. You'll still have to work hard to stand out among your coworkers in the future. That special someone finally makes

Libra – Sept 23/Oct 23

You're in the money this week. You finally finish a project at work, which wins you compliments from co-workers. Your love life blossoms as a friend of a friend asks you out. This is the opportunity to let your personality shine.

Scorpio – Oct 24/Nov 22 Things start to get to you at work this week. It seems as if everyone is against you and everything you do is wrong. Take some time off to collect your thoughts. A little relaxation is just what you need to rejuvenate yourself. Sagittarius - Nov 23/Dec 21

> Be careful making important decisions late in the week. Think things through thoroughly, and don't make any hasty decisions. Ask for advice from loved ones if it makes you feel better. A stranger introduces himself. Take it slowly. Capricorn - Dec 22/Jan 20 You get the green light to move ahead on an important project at work this week. Act professional and don't become a control freak — you can have a lasting impact. A loved one takes up most of your free time taking care of

you. As for romance, your new attitude pays off when it comes to the opposite sex. Your phone will be ringing.

Aquarius - Jan 21/Feb 18 Everything goes well at work, and your manager even comments on your progress. Superiors have their eye on a personal problem. Don't get upset; just be supportive.

Pisces - Feb 19/March 20 You feel like a fish out of water early in the week. While you go through the same daily routine as always, things will seem different, and you'll feel out of place. Don't get worried. The feeling will pass by the end of the week. Just
