Foy promises an injunction to stop environmental blockade

By AL PRICE
The Chief

For the second consecutive weekend, environmentalists attempting to drive up to the Elaho Valley were stopped at a blockade by loggers, their families, friends and business representatives at Mile 21 of the upper Squamish.

Western Canada Wilderness Committee director Joe Foy arrived at the blockade shortly after 10 a.m. Saturday attempting to gain access to a research camp the group set up in the Elaho two weeks earlier.

He was denied access by a group of blockaders, who demanded he sign a petition to the provincial government asking that anyone blockading working loggers be held liable for lost wages and costs, and that foreign nationals participating in illegal blockades be deported immediately. Several groups of river rafters and hikers signed the petition and were allowed through, but Foy refused.

"I'm damned if I'll let International Forest Products steal my country back from me," shouted Foy. "You are costing me my liberty today and a hell of a lot of money. My 25,000 members want to see the Stoltmann Wilderness preserved. I'll see you in court."

Foy said he would be seeking an injunction to remove the blockade.

"Here in the Lower Mainland there are eight big, intact valleys left and Interfor has been given the go ahead to log two of them, Simms Creek and the Elaho, with almost no research on the ecological and social impacts."

He said the research camp is Venting his frustration, Western Canada Wilderness Committee director Joe Foy, left, promises a date in court with logger Gary Hendrickson at an ongoing blockade a Mile 21 in the upper Squamish valley Saturday morning. WCWC bird expert Andy Miller listens to the discussion, while Squamish RCMP members keep the peace.

intended to provide a base for scientists to study animal, bird and fish numbers.

"In the Carmanah Valley there was a loggers' blockade and our camp was burned down, so we set it up twice as big. Researchers discovered several hundred new species in the forest canopies, and the Carmanah became a protected area."

He said the Wilderness Committee has a "protocol" with the Squamish Nation, and his intention Saturday was to take Andy Miller, an expert on forest-dependent birds, up to see the station to develop the first research proposal to put before the Squamish Nation. "Our organization has always stayed within the law. In my two years working in this district I have never touched one piece of logging equipment, and never hurt anything. I have never broken the law, and that's what I expect from my opponents. Conducting this public process on a logging road is a colossal waste of time, and I blame (Premier) Glen Clark. We were frozen out of the process. I believe in a healthy forest industry, but I do not believe in Interfor."

Foy asked Sgt. Dwain Wetteland if the RCMP would open the road, and was told he would need a court injunction and enforcement order.

Logger Gary Hendrickson told Foy the loggers and other blockaders had a right to protect their jobs.

"We will do whatever it takes, if we have to be here all summer," Hendrickson said. "As long as the environmentalists are outside looking in, we're winning. This is not just loggers, it's the whole town of Squamish. The loggers and their families appreciate the support of all those who have donated their time and effort," said logger Ken Bayers.

Foy later used his van to block the road south of the blockade but was ordered to remove it. Police said anyone parking on the road south of Mile 21 would have their vehicles towed without notice.

Members of People's Action for Threatened Habitat were also turned back at the blockade over the weekend, and further attempts to gain access to the Elaho by environmentalists were expected throughout the week.

Forest Practices Code streamlined to save time and money

By Brigitte Petersen
The Chief

Proposed revisions to the Forest Practices Code (FPC) announced earlier this month are expected to help forestry companies cut through government red tape while maintaining environmental standards.

Andre Germain, operations forester with the Squamish Forest District, said the changes will help streamline the code and reduce duplication of certain requirements determined by the provincial government.

"There was a fair amount of overlap in the plan," said Germain. An example of duplication was with the silviculture prescription used to identify concerns with soils and other issues before harvesting is done, and with the logging plan, the operational activities which take the prescription into consideration before work is started.

Forests Minister David Zirnhelt and Environment,

Lands and Parks Minister Cathy McGregor announced the revisions on June 9. Forestry companies must be in full compliance by June 15.

Specific proposed changes to the code include eliminating duplication and reducing paperwork for forest operators by consolidating planning requirements. This means the number of operational plans required would be reduced from six to three. Amendments to the code would eliminate the logging, five-year silviculture, and access management plans.

Planning and approval procedures are to be streamlined to achieve a two-year supply of cutting permits for each licence to allow industry to plan and harvest more efficiently while meeting legal and environmental obligations.

Revisions also mean making administrative reforms to provide licensees with better notice of changes, improved interpretation of regulations and quicker response to plans and proposals. The focus on achieved results is to be strengthened with more reliance on professional foresters.

Enforcement of the code is to be improved with government staff spending more time in the field to ensure regulations are understood and followed. A special enforcement unit will be established which is to work closely with the RCMP to investigate code contraventions.

"There will be a system set up so we can track enforcement over time," said Germain. "Penalties will depend on what their previous record was."

A performance evaluation process is to be provided for the forest industry and the administrative workload of woodlot licensees is to be reduced.

The FPC, an enforceable code of conduct for the province's forest and range lands, was passed in the B.C. legislature in 1994 following a public and stakeholder consultation process. The code came into effect June 15, 1995 and had a two-year phase-in period for full compliance.

Sand bars create boating hazards

By Brigitte Petersen The Chief

Squamish's harbor master is concerned about the lack of dredging in the Mamquam Blind Channel which could make the navigable part of the waterway unusable by vessels during low tides.

Tom Bruusgaard said a number of small boats have already been grounded on piles of soil and gravel which are building up in the water near the mouth of the Stawamus River. During low tide, the channel normally has a depth of about three metres, but lately the area collecting silt has been reduced to a depth of about one metre.

"It's very dangerous," said Bruusgaard. "It causes concerns for grounding and for liability."

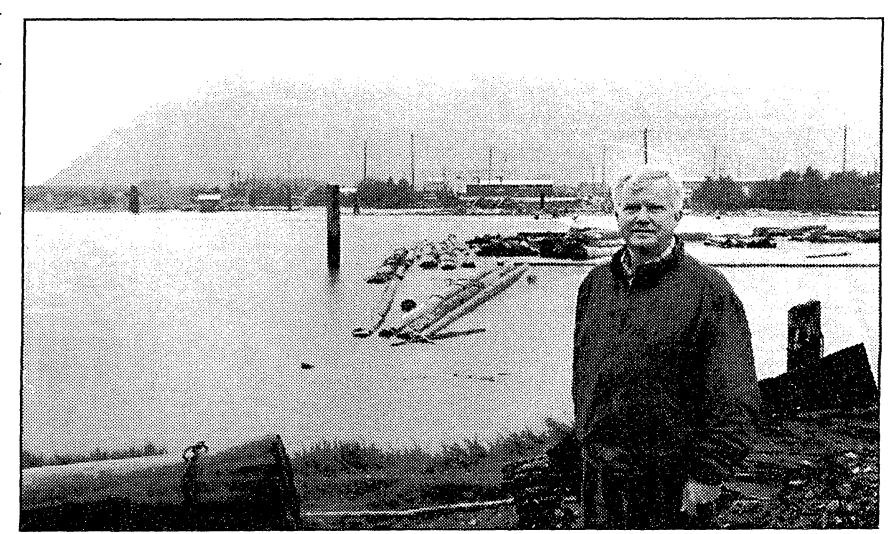

After receiving a letter of concern from Bruusgaard, Squamish council passed a motion June 17 to discuss the situation with newly-elected Member of Parliament John Reynolds. Before the June 24 meeting with Reynolds, Mayor Corinne Lonsdale met with Bruusgaard and representatives of the Squamish Harbor Authority and International Forest Products (Interfor) to discuss their concerns.

The channel serves as an access for vessels to three marinas, Interfor's dry-land sort, the Squamish Yacht Club and the public wharf.

Boats passing through the waterway currently must infringe on water leased by Interfor to go up the channel. Interfor uses part of the waterway to transport its timber from the log sort. The company does its own dredging on the section of water it leases from the government.

Bruusgaard said he's worried about the MV Britannia running aground. The vessel uses the channel five days a week and can carry up to 300 passengers.

The federal government used to remove built-up soil and gravel from the channel every few years on a regular basis, but last year dredging was canceled

Tom Bruusgaard, Squamish's harbor master, stands before the channel area which is a growing danger for vessels due to sand and gravel washing in from the Stawamus River.

due to budget cutbacks. Since that decision, responsibility for clearing the channel has not been taken on by other levels of government. Bruusgaard said it has not been properly dredged for more than three

"Everyone expected the federal government to look after it."

Bruusgaard, who estimates the cost of a thorough dredging to be about $150,000, said the main cause of the build-up of silt in the area is the gradual washing away of soil and vegetation along the banks of the Stawamus River, which then ends up creating sand bars in the channel. He said the district should be set aside funds to be put towards maintaining the river on a regular basis. The river passes through land owned by the district, B.C. Rail and the Squamish Nation before it meets with the channel.

"Something has to be done, but who is going to pay for it?"

Following the meeting between Reynolds and council members, the Reform MP said he is going to put pressure on the federal government to correct the

"I'm very concerned that someone will come into the harbor at night and get grounded. We want our share of the money for dredging."

Squamish Nation disrupted by blockades

By Brigitte Petersen The Chief

A Squamish Nation councillor said native people in the area are concerned about growing conflicts between environmental activists and pro-logging supporters in the Elaho

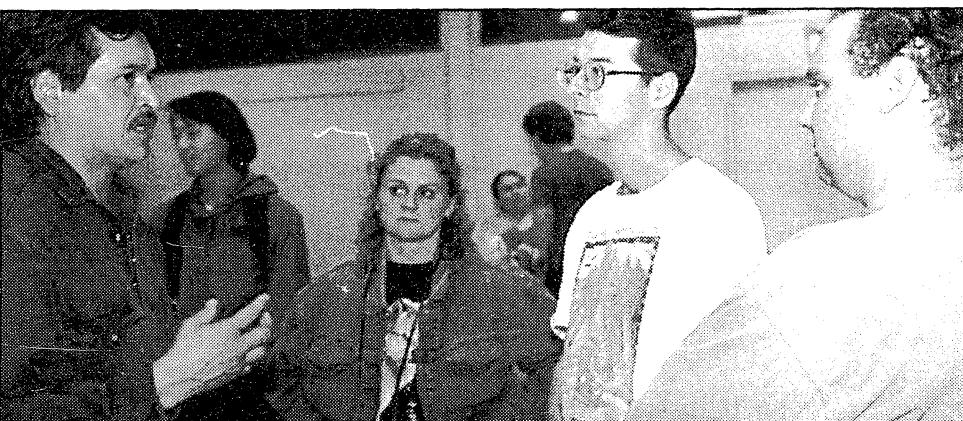

"We do not appreciate the tug of war in our community," said Randall Lewis.

Lewis, who is also an environmental representative for the Squamish Nation, said the nation's council does not condone recent blockades by either side. He also said the Squamish Nation did not invite members of People's Action for Threatened Habitat (PATH) to their traditional territory as earlier stated by the environmental group's founder Barney Kern. Lewis said the native people only recognized PATH's presence in the valley.

He said he wants to ensure Squamish Nation members are not denied access to the contentious area north of Squamish due to the conflict.

"If push comes to shove, we'll set up our own roadblocks," he said. "We're a peaceful people, but we'll defend our rights vigorously."

Lewis made the statements during an information session held by PATH Thursday at the Totem Hall. The meeting was held to allow PATH members to introduce themselves to native elders, leaders and members of the community and to answer any questions they may have had about the method to try to stop International hurt." organization.

Randy Lewis, left, explains the Squamish Nation position on blockades to PATH founder Barney Kern, second from right, and others who attended the information meeting at Totem Hall.

The session began with a slide show, lectures by Kern and PATH member James Jamieson, and continued with discussions between activists and some of those present. About 40 people attended the meeting, including Squamish Nation members, environmental activists, foresters, and District of Squamish council members.

PATH is a Vancouver-based group established in January to try to protect wildlife habitat which may be threatened by timber harvesting.

Kern talked about two roadblocks set up by PATH in Tree Farm Licence 38 (TFL) in March and May and explained why the group is using this Forest Products (Interfor) from logging in the area activists call the Stoltmann wilderness. Kern said the group is not trying to stop loggers from working, but it wants Interfor to stay out of the Stoltmann and to stop using clearcutting as a major harvesting method.

"We didn't realize we were going to stop 50 guys from going to work," said Kern. "That was a mistake."

Kern, who said he received two verbal death threats during the blockades, said the only way PATH and other groups are able to get the media's attention is by setting up blockades.

"We want to talk and educate people. We don't want anyone to get Lorraine Moody, a Squamish do with our land," said Cooper.

Nation's member, said she found PATH's blockades and two recent prologging roadblocks to be very disrup-

"Please think about what you are doing," said Moody. "We live here."

Others present expressed their gratitude to PATH members for helping to protect the area. Francine Cooper, a Squamish Nation member, has started a petition to support PATH's actions and to demand Interfor stop roadbuilding and harvesting activities in the conflict area. Cooper said native people should have more input into land use decisions in the valley.

HSSS students benefit from hands-on training

By Brigitte Petersen The Chief

Experience is the best education for many Howe Sound Secondary School (HSSS) students. Teachers and students held a special luncheon Wednesday to show their appreciation to Squamish business owners who participated in this year's career programs.

Career programs match Grade 12 and some Grade 11 students with employers to help youths gain work experience in the field of their choice.

Squamish Fire Rescue chief Pat Hampson accepted two students, Shaun Swerdfeger and Aaron Ramage, who wanted to learn more about emergency services. Hampson said the students attended fire and ambulance calls and did inspections with trained members.

"They got to do everything we were doing," said Hampson. "I was really pleased to be able to do this."

Bob Hoy, owner of IGA Plus, was the guest speaker during the luncheon and he represented more than 70 businesses and organizations which participated in the programs. Hoy talked about his experiences as an entrepreneur and gave advice to students who are considering opening their own businesses or who plan to look for employment.

"You students have the opportunities to become great entrepreneurs," said Hoy.

He had a number of tips for students to help them be successful in life, including be eager, excel at your job, observe others, develop leadership skills, learn from your failures and keep setting new goals.

"When your boss is there, work hard. When your boss isn't there, work twice as hard."

Ranbir Kler, a graduating student, worked as a shop helper at Diamond Head Motors through the program.

"It was a great experience," said Kler. "I throughout the year. She worked in Dr. James preparation program. Vanderhook's dental office and learned about business at the Community Futures Development Corporation of Howe Sound. Rutishauser said she has a dream to become a dentist and after seeing what it is really like, she still wants to drill towards her goal.

"I found the program extremely helpful," she said.

Mari Nakata, who also had two placements, worked at the provincial courthouse and at the ICBC claims centre. Nakata said after learning more about the legal system, she decided that field does not suit her personality.

"I think being an insurance adjuster might be a good thing," she said.

made lots of mistakes, but I learned a lot too." Grade 11 HSSS student Doug Thompson prepares sandwiches at Katrin Rutishauser had two placements Whistler Mountain as part of his chef's training through the school's career involved. During their first term students, mostly in Grade 12, spend half the school day working at their jobs and during the second term they work all day long for a 10-week period. Students are not paid wages but are often given honorariums or gifts by businesses who take them on.

"They earn their Grade 12 credits and lots of them end up getting jobs," said Firbank.

Margaret Pallot, HSSS principal, said the programs allow students to experience a job before they decide to take bigger steps towards pursuing it as a career.

"There's no other program that makes such an impact on students," said Pallot. "It really opens their eyes to what the working world is all about."

Coun. Dave Young of Squamish tries to estimate the circumference of the Elaho Giant.

Elaho Giant to be protected

Whistler Question

The Elaho Giant, believed to be Canada's third largest Douglas fir tree, will not become just a very large stack of two-by-fours, says Squamish Forest Service district manager Paul Kuster.

The tree, which is so old it may have first seen life around the time of the Crusades, will be protected by a buffer zone of surrounding forest to ensure that logging by Interfor in the so-called Stoltman Wilderness Area will not be in danger of becoming windfall.

"The Elaho Giant will be a protected site, surrounded by 50 hectares of trees." Kuster said, however, that the Forest Service is being cautious in allocating that large a buffer and will "determine in the future if it needs that much."

The tree, located in the Upper-Elaho Valley in Interfor's Tree Farm License #38, is 2.7 metres in diameter and stands 47.5 metres tall. It has been designated as a "resource feature," which in the forest practices code means it is deserving of special protection status, much like the spotted owl.

Although it is one of the biggest trees of its kind in B.C., there may be others like it which either haven't been discovered or have been located in the past and gone unrecorded.

"Nobody has kept very good records on where the big trees are," said Squamish Forest District operations manager Shane Berg.

The "Giant" is near an area where Interfor plans to log a 20-hectare cutblock later this summer and just a seven-minute walk from the site of a bridge the company plans to construct across a creek to access several more cutblocks.

Reynolds holds first meeting with council

By Brigitte Petersen The Chief

Squamish council members held their first official meeting with West Vancouver-Sunshine Coast member of Parliament (MP) John Reynolds during an informal discussion at municipal hall June 24.

Mayor Corinne Lonsdale said the meeting was positive and it gave herself and councillors the opportunity to raise issues of concern in the district which Reynolds may be able to help with at the federal level.

"It's a novel thing to have the MP come in and sit with council," said Lonsdale.

Among the issues discussed during the meeting include pressuring the federal government to dredge the Mamquam Blind Channel, h et employment issues, treaty negotiations, and infrastructure projects in the district.

Lonsdale said she wants to work towards getting more recognition for municipal government at the provincial and federal government levels.

"The federal government does not recognize municipal government a level of official government," she said. "And yet we're the closest to the people. We're the most responsible to the people."

During his two-day tour of the corridor, Reynolds also met with the chair of the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District and the mayors of Whistler and Pemberton.

The Reform MP said he would meet with Squamish council again in about six months.

"I want to keep a track record," he said.

Squamish site proposed for pumice processing

By Brigitte Petersen
The Chief

The owner of a Vancouver-based company is planning to establish a pumice stockpiling and processing plant in Squamish and hopes to become a major bulk supplier of the rock throughout North America.

Garth Carefoot, owner of Great Pacific Pumice Inc., said he began setting up a pumice mine on the northern slope of Mt. Meager, about 65 kilometres northwest of Pemberton, in 1990 when his company started sampling pumice from the claim site. A mine permit was granted to the company in 1995. The mine currently consists of a quarry and processing and a stockpiling area at Mt. Meager.

"It's a unique project," said Carefoot. "It's the only deposit like this in Canada."

Pumice is a volcanic rock with a foamy cellular structure and is light enough to float on water. The rock is crushed and used for potting soils, stone washing of denim, a variety of construction supplies and other product manufacturing.

Carefoot said he estimates B.C. annually imports about 26,000 cubic metres of processed pumice from the United States, Turkey, Italy and Taiwan.

The company has applied to the Ministry of Employment and Investment for a permit to stockpile and process pumice on six hectares of Crown land on Mamquam River Road in Squamish and has filed a proposed mine plan and program for the protection and reclamation of land and watercourses on the site with the chief inspector of mines. Carefoot said he's trying to obtain a 30-year renewable mineral lease on the Squamish site. He said he chose this community as a location because of the relatively mild weather.

"Freezing is our enemy. We had to have some sort of site below the Alice Lake turnoff."

The company has been temporarily stockpiling some pumice in the Squamish Industrial Park and has about 300 cubic metres remaining there. Carefoot said he looked at different potential sites in Squamish and both himself and the previous district council determined the best spot to be just south of the Mamquam River near the Squamish Rod and Gun Club.

"We were looking for vacant Crown land. The industrial park was not suitable."

Carefoot, who estimates six jobs would be created at the Squamish site, said the company would be hauling a maximum of about 250 truckloads of pumice to this area annually.

He said he went through all the right channels to get his company up and running. He staked the Squamish site as a mineral claim. When he approached the provincial government's Crown Lands, he was told he could apply for a long-term mineral lease on the Squamish site through the provincial government's Mineral Tenure Act. He said he was able to go this unusual route because he already has a mine in operation.

"(I've) never had a special deal with the government. I've fought for this every step of the way."

If zoning amendments are made by the district, Carefoot, who wants to start stockpiling in Squamish by August and processing in January, said he plans to erect a few buildings but in the meantime would store the pumice under tarps. He said there is no threat of pumice running into the nearby waterways and no chemicals are to be used in processing the rock. An environmental impact study is to be conducted at the site this week.

"I'm very sensitive to water and air quality." Carefoot said he also plans to cut down about three hectares of trees at the location, but wants to maintain buffer zones.

Gun club, residents opposed to planned rock processing plant

By Brigitte Petersen
The Chief

A growing group of residents living south of the Mamquam River are voicing their opposition to a proposal to build a pumice rock stockpiling and processing plant on provincially-owned Crown land in their neighborhood.

Rick Taylor, president of the Squamish Rod and Gun Club, said he has a number of concerns about the proposal which calls for setting up the pumice operation on Mamquam River Road, next door to the club. Taylor, who lives on the club's property, said he is worried about trees being cut down on the six-hectare (16-acre) site because they enhance wildlife habitat and the area is one of the winter homes for bald eagles in the district.

"(The plant) should be put in a more appropriate place."

Taylor said the business would also result in trucks using Loggers Lane to access the site which would inconvenience residents and recreational users.

He said there should have been public hearings and environmental impact studies. Taylor first read about the proposal in the June 10 issue of The Chief which published a legal notice announcing Vancouver-based Great Pacific Pumice Inc. has applied for a permit to stockpile and process pumice. The notice states written concerns about the project must be made to the Ministry of Employment and Investment within 30 days of its publication. Taylor said that is not enough time for people to respond.

"It's like ramming it down everyone's throats whether we want it or not. This is a classic case of bureaucrats in ministries slamming something through."

Garth Carefoot, owner of the pumice company, is attempting to obtain a 30-year renewable mineral lease on the sixhectare site for the purpose of stockpiling and processing pumice currently being mined at Mt. Meager.

Biologist Louise Dupuis, co-director of the Coho Enhancement Society for Squamish East, said she is concerned the plant may have negative effects on fish and creeks in the area, including the Brennan Channel which coho use for spawning.

"Our concerns are for the environment, but this is also a residential area," said Dupuis.

Sandra Haffey, a Raven Drive resident, has started a petition to stop the development from going ahead. Haffey said she would rather see it built in the industrial park or another less environmentally-sensitive snot

"It's a shame to see this beautiful land being destroyed for tax dollars," said Haffey.

Community planning director Margaret Thornton said staff is reviewing an application for rezoning of the site from Carefoot. The area is currently zoned resource and is designated limited use. There would have to be a public hearing to amend the official community plan.

"Anyone with concerns regarding zoning should direct them to the planning department," she said.

Al Ludwig, district manager for the Ministry of Employment and Investment's energy and minerals division in Nanaimo, said Carefoot staked a mineral claim on the site and has filed an application with the chief inspector of mines for a proposed mine plan and a program for the protection and reclamation of land and watercourses. Ludwig said copies have also been forwarded to the Ministry of Environment and the Department of Fisheries and Oceans. The company will be able to erect buildings if the provincial government approves a land use application.

"If there are sufficient letters (in opposition) we will ask the applicant to have a public meeting."

Regional health staff appointments announced

By Paul Muir Whistler Question

Sea to Sky Community Health Council CEO Brian Kines announced three new staff appointments last week.

Russell Hemingson has been appointed health services coordinator for Whistler. He is a registered psychiatric nurse, a registered nurse, and has a bachelor of science degree and a master of health services administration degree from the University of Alberta. He has worked in a range of capacities as a staff nurse in areas such as pediatric, oncology, psychiatry and community nursing, and as a nurse practitioner in Northern Alberta. Russell is currently the area manager for a regional health authority in Alberta and starts work in Whistler Aug. 4.

Bob Montgomery has been appointed director of finance and information services for facilities in the corridor. Montgomery has been the director of corporate services at White Rock's Peace Arch Hospital since 1980, and has been responsible for planning, organizing and directing all financial aspects of the organization. He has been very involved in a number of provincial and Lower Mainland committees. He is a certified general accountant and graduated from the health services management program in Ottawa. He will work part time for the CHC over the next couple of months while he winds down his work at Peace Arch Hospital.

Gloria Healy was previously appointed health services coordinator for Squamish. She has been the director of nursing at Squamish General Hospital and Hilltop House for 12 years, and previously served as director of nursing at Penticton Regional Hospital for four years.

"While I am pleased with the exceptional qualifications and experience Bob, Russell and Gloria bring to our organization, I am especially impressed with their strong interpersonal skills, ability to work well with staff, and ability to develop strong clinical care teams," said Kines.

BRIGITTE PETERSEN/THE CHIEF

Ruth Fenton planted this tree 60 years ago and now wants it to be preserved as part of the area's heritage.

Bylaw could protect Squamish heritage trees

By Brigitte Petersen The Chief

A copper beech tree which recently turned 60 years old, may soon officially become part of Squamish's heritage.

The tree, located near Lesky's crossing on Government Road, was planted by Ruth Fenton on May 24, 1937 to commemorate the coronation of King George VI. Fenton, who was then a Grade 6 student at the one-room schoolhouse which had been situated on the property, was voted May Queen that year so she was given the privilege of doing the plant-

Squamish resident Peter Gordon approached council June 3 to request a heritage tree bylaw be drawn up to preserve the copper beech and other trees of historical significance.

Gordon said he has been an admirer of the tree for years. He became concerned about the tree's future when he noticed the property on which it sits go up for sale.

"I've been aware of the history of the tree and when I saw the 'for sale' sign up I thought maybe it was time to think about a tree preservation bylaw."

Council passed a motion to direct staff to prepare a bylaw to designate the historic beech a heritage tree and that the planning department do a report on the implications of the bylaw.

Fenton said her father, George Carson, has been trying to protect the tree under heritage status for a number of years.

"It's a little bit of history of the town," said Fenton. "We don't have many heritage things in Squamish."

Fenton said the tree was about 1.5 metres (five feet) tall when she planted it and today it stands at least 15 metres (50 feet). She said the tree supposedly came from the royal gardens at Buckingham Palace.

The planning department recently drafted a tree preservation bylaw and is in the process of reviewing it with the technical planning committee.

The intent of the proposed bylaw is to identify and protect heritage trees, which may include Lombardy poplars and oak trees at Howe Sound Secondary School, a row of walnut trees located on the site of an old hop farm on Government Road and the John Askew Quick memorial forest which may be located in a Ministry of Forests wood lot licence area. The bylaw would also provide for regulation of trees for large property owners and outline the needs for the removal of dead, diseased or hazardous trees.

Undercooked meat can be deadly

By Patricia Wheeler Whistler Question

Nothing signals the coming of summer better than a barbecue on the beach. But as health officials warn, summer barbecuing can become a dangerous, even deadly, affair if food isn't prepared carefully.

Salmonella and hamburger disease are dangers associated with undercooked meat.

Summer is the optimum time for salmonella and hamburger disease, an infection of the intestinal tract which is caused by strains of E.coli bacteria that produce certain toxins. Each year, more than 400 cases of hamburger disease are reported in B.C. As symptoms of this disease often imitate those of the common flu bug, health officials estimate that thousands more milder cases go unreported each year.

Salmonella and hamburger disease can cause vomiting, cramps, diarrhea, fever and, in some cases, death. E. coli bacteria are found in most food animals, including beef, pork and poultry. Likewise, salmonella is found in raw eggs, poultry and meat.

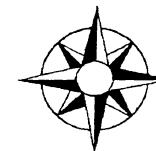

Problems arise when people eat undercooked meat and poultry. Ground meat, a popular summer barbecue item, is particularly hazardous when undercooked. The best protection against infections is handling meat safely and cooking it very well. Public health nurses with the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit recommend putting meat in the freezer or fridge as soon as possible after shopping, and using refrigerated meat within two days. Also, frozen meat should be thawed in the microwave or fridge, never at room temperature. Health nurses also say that all meat and poultry should be cooked thoroughly. The centre of a hamburger patty, for instance, should be brown, not pink and the juices should run clear. Meat should be served immediately or kept hot until served.

It is also important that when handling food, you wash your hands and cooking utensils with hot, soapy water before touching anything else.

Children are particularly at risk with hamburger disease, as about 10 per cent of all children who contract it will develop a condition known as Hemolytic Uremic Syndrome (HUS) which is one of the leading causes of acute kidney failure in children.

Health nurses warn that if you start to feel any of the symptoms of salmonella or hamburger disease after eating, you should drink plenty of clear fluids and contact a doctor. Salmonella symptoms generally appear within 12 to 36 hours after eating contaminated food, while symptoms of hamburger disease start about two days later.

Road deactivation funds could have saved a life

By Paul Muir Whistler Question

> A landslide which recently killed a forest worker might not have occurred if an old logging road above the site of the disaster had been "deactivated" in time, according to Squamish Forest Service district manager Paul Kuster.

> "We could have prevented the death of the logger and prevented that environmental disaster," he said, lamenting the fact that the service lacks the funding to identify and deactivate all roads that are potentially at risk. "We have only so much money to spend each year. It comes down to using your money wisely and trying to pick out the spots."

The slide, which occurred on May 31, 50 kilometres southeast of Pemberton, started in an old clearcut section by the road (built by Interfor in 1979) on the west side of Gowan Creek Valley.

The slide, estimated to be 1,500 metres long,

50 metres wide and about one metre in depth, ran down a slope, through old growth forest, and then pouring through a cutblock that was actively being harvested, according to reports.

An intensive search was conducted for the victim, 55-year-old Harry Lacoursiere from Sorrento, B.C., but the operation has since been canceled.

"At this stage we've called it off. We ended up negative on everything" said Pemberton RCMP detachment Staff Sgt. Bruce Waite. "It's no longer an active investigation."

Kuster assured that "it didn't have anything to do with the new logging," however, he said the Forest Service was looking at the forest practices code to determine if the old road's builder, Interfor, did, through negligence "contribute to the slide."

The RCMP, however, is no longer involved in the matter. "Mother Nature is more responsible than anything," said Waite, adding that if anybody is at fault, it is probably only in a "remote" way.

POLICE BLOTTER

Night hiking discouraged by Squamish police

Squamish RCMP are getting fed up with people who go hiking at night around Shannon forcing police and Squamish Search and Rescue to respond.

At 11:30 p.m. June 24, police and Search and Rescue were called to look for a 24-year-old Vancouver woman who went missing near Shannon Falls. Cpl. John Laseur said the woman and three friends were in the area of the falls at about 10 p.m. meditating, when the missing woman decided to go over the fence and up the trail to get a closer look at the falls.

"The three other women stayed where they were, but the other disappeared," said Laseur. "Search and Rescue and the police dog were called in. They found her about five minutes up the trail hiding under a log. She was cold and wet from the spray from the falls, but was afraid to go either forward or back, so she was stranded for about 1 1/2 hours."

Laseur said the woman did the right thing by staying where she was, but should not have been there in the first place.

"Hiking in the dark in the middle of the night with no flashlight is dumb, and is an abuse of the serviced of Search and Rescue and the police," he said.

At 8:30 a.m. June 21, a 1984 Audi driven by a Vancouver man lost control and hit the rock face on Hwy. 99 near Deeks Creek. The vehicle sustained $4,000 in damage but the driver was not injured.

A 1988 Honda operated by a 62-year-old Coquitlam woman drove off the highway and hit a road sign at Furry Creek at 3:25 p.m. June 21. There were no injuries and the vehicles had $2,000 damage. The driver was charged with an offense under the Motor Vehicle Act.

On June 25, the staff at the B.C. Museum of Mining at Britannia Beach reported vandals had caused $2,000 damage to the property. Police have no suspects.

A vehicle parked on the Mamquam River dike near Centennial Way for two hours on the evening of June 14 had its window jimmied open. The thief took a Casio altimeter watch and Swiss army knife.

A residence in the 2000 block of Maple Drive was broken into June 23, and culprits made off with a number of CDs.

A Britannia Avenue resident returned home at 1:30 a.m. June 22 to find his pickup truck Falls and the Stawamus Chief and get scared, had been stolen from his driveway. Less than an hour late, police spotted the stolen vehicle in the downtown area and checked it. Two female young offenders from Squamish have been charged with possession of stolen proper-

> Three windows at Howe Sound Secondary School were smashed by vandals overnight June 21.

A Lions Bay driver was found to be prohibited from driving when police checked a car on Hwy. 99 near Cleveland Avenue at 3:06 a.m. June 21. The car was impounded for 30 days and the driver is facing a new charge of driving while prohibited.

A Britannia Beach resident was a passenger in a car travelling north on the highway near the Stawamus Chief at 6:14 p.m. June 21 when a rock was thrown through the passenger window. The victim was showered with glass and received several small cuts. Police have no suspects in the incident.

Police are asking for public assistance in helping to locate a 3.6 metre (12-foot) aluminum boat with a red stripe on it that was last seen on the bank of the Squamish River near the windsurfing spit. The boat had been stolen from a Brackendale residence by four young males, who then rode it down the river before leaving it on the bank. Police don't know if it subsequently drifted away or if someone found s the so-called war in the woods continues, some environmentalists are making some pretty outrageous statements, which they might have to back up in court.

On Friday on Mountain FM's raucous Mountain Monitor, one of the guests was heard to call Squamish Forest District manager Paul Kuster a "liar." While there are obviously differences of opinion on how the forests should be managed, and various statistics are being used to make points for or against certain positions, that's a pretty strong statement to make on public radio.

Then on Saturday, when Joe Foy of the Western Canada Wilderness Committee was stopped at the blockade at Mile 21, in an interview captured on tape by Mountain FM news director John French, Foy intimated that Interfor has been threatening Squamish businesses with loss of trade, and threatening to have individual workers fired. When pressed for examples, he had none, saying only it was an issue he wanted to "research" further.

Foy's statement is quite outrageous. Though we don't know all the inner workings of Interfor, we do talk to quite a few business owners and employees on a regular basis. There has never been any hint of the company pressuring small businesses in Squamish with the kind of strong-arm tactics Foy suggests.

To be sure, Interfor is a big fish in the small pond of Squamish. Its payroll and purchasing of goods and services has a major impact on the community. But Squamish is also a small, close-knit community in many ways, and word gets around with amazing speed. Any dirty dealings become public knowledge quite quickly. It is doubtful so many businesses would have publicly and enthusiastically supported the blockade if they were being pressured directly by Interfor.

Forest management is an emotional issue on all sides. The loggers, their families, friends and associates feel they are in a fight for their lives, while the environmentalists believe they are on a critical mission for the future of the planet. In the middle sits Paul Kuster and his staff, knowing whatever decisions they make, someone will be unhappy.

Perhaps emotion got the better of these two environmentalists, but they should realize they can't go around casually maligning personal or corporate integrity. Unsubstantiated statements add nothing positive to the debate. They have seriously damaged their own credibility in the process.

Obey the laws of nature, or prepare to pay the price

t this time of year, wild animals are bringing their young into the world in the age old process of perpetuating their species. It is a delight to see bear cubs (from a distance) gamboling in the grass as their follow their mom on a feeding mission, or delicate, spotted fawns timidly following their mothers' footsteps, never too far from a free drink at the fountain of youth.

But for some inexplicable reason, a few people can't resist going past their limit as observers and getting involved. They find a fawn quietly tucked away somewhere by the mom while she feeds. The mother gets scared, and the fawn appears abandoned. It is not.

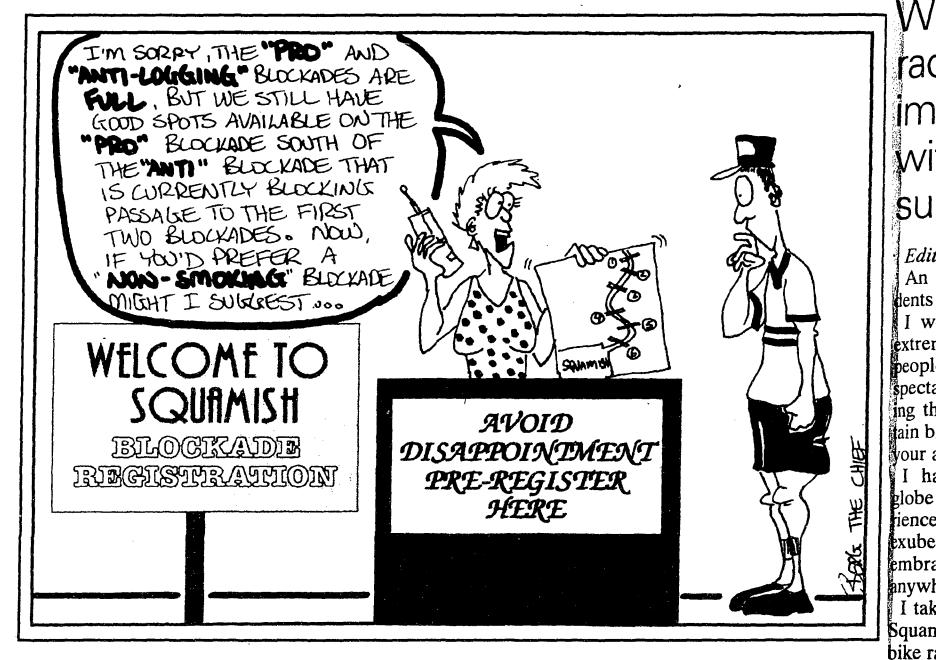

These supposed orphans are inevitably dragged to the nearest conservation officer, who justifiably becomes angry, though is seldom afforded the freedom to show it. By government decree they are not allowed to take wildlife babies to game farms or zoos. Their only alternative is to kill the animal.

Performing such tasks is extremely distasteful to all conservation officers, to say the least. Their mission is to conserve wildlife, not kill it, just because someone is totally ignorant of the laws of nature.

Leave the babies where they are. Monitor them for 24 hours, and if they really are abandoned, call the conservation office, but don't touch the animal.

Difficult as it may be to comprehend, a certain percentage of fawns and other baby animals are lost to predators, whether they are abandoned or not. It is part of the laws of nature.

If you don't heed the laws of nature, be prepared to face the consequences of the other laws, which decree that conservation officers can and will charge you with illegal possession of wildlife.

Hair today, gone tomorrow

It may have only been one day, but the sunshine Saturday was a welcome relief from what seems like weeks of rain. If nothing else, it gave us a chance to scrape the mold from between our toes and dry out the gumboots.

Even though we experienced about 90 millimeters of rain in June, almost double the average for that month, it was by no means a record. That was set in June of 1981 when we had 135.8 millimeters (5.3 inches).

Always one to save a dollar when she can, Cathie tried her best last Tuesday. While I was sitting on the couch reading, she was going through the flyers from The Chief and found a coupon offering a $1 saving on my favorite shampoo.

"How's your shampoo supply?" she asked.
"Fine," I replied. "I have a cou-

"Fine," I replied. "I have a couple of bottles."
"But I could save $1 with this coupon," she said.

"Just think about it for a minute," I answered.

Finally the light came on. After today, and the Canada Day head shaving session at 12:30 p.m. at the Pavilion, there are a few of us who shouldn't be needing much shampoo for the next while, even at $1 off.

The next night Cathie came home from work and announced that her brother wanted to take us out for dinner, an annual event to celebrate our May birthdays (we were on holidays at the time). That was fine, and the destination of the Mustache Cafe on Burrard Street, which buys its wine from the Ambleside Liquor Store where Cathie works, was also fine.

"When would you like to go?" she asked.

"Oh, anytime," I replied.

"Maybe a Saturday, so you don't have to work the next day."

"How about this Saturday?" she queried.

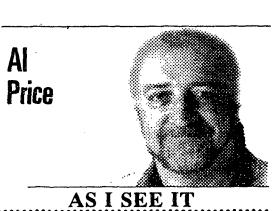

"Fine," I said, "but it will probably be a busy day for me with the blockade in the upper Squamish. What's the rush?"

"Well," she said, "...you'll still have hair."

As you might guess, I'm not getting a lot of support on the home front, particularly since the diabolical Cec Scott threw in a $50 bill to make my beard disappear as well. Thank god there have been no donations to clear cut my three remaining chest hairs, which Cathie lovingly calls The Black Forest.

Hair today, gone tomorrow.

Everyone seems to be hedging their bets when it comes to Premier Glen Clark's promise of 40,000 jobs in the next four years with his forest industry Jobs and Timber Accord. There is already some question about how his progress will be measured, and what the actual employment level is.

For instance, will the silviculture jobs such as tree planting, spacing and thinning, which are now to go only to IWA members, be counted as new jobs, or will the premier use real figures which factor in all the jobs lost by non-IWA members who have been doing this work for years and are now unemployed?

And how will he deal with the 700-odd direct jobs lost in the shutdown of the Skeena Cellulose Inc. pulp mill in Prince Rupert this weekend, never mind the 900 other direct jobs in sawmills closed in Terrace, Hazelton and Smithers? Those towns will be devastated if these industries are not revived. And if they are brought back, will those count as new jobs?

"Cautiously optimistic" is the phrase I hear most when discussion of the accord comes up. Considering there were 5,500 jobs lost in the forest industry last year, just maintaining current employment figures would be a success. If Clark can make it work, more power to him, but...

TOM organizers lauded by winner

Received by The Chief for publication: Organizers of the Test of Metal:

My name is Mike Pruner and I am the winner of this year's Test of Metal mountain bike race. I would like to thank you people for putting on the best race I have ever participated in.

I have been racing for five years, which adds up to about 100 races: everything from the Cheakamus Challenges and Canada Cups to the Grundig World Cups. None of these races come close to the TOM.

Your course design, organization, volunteers, and community support outshine these other races tenfold. Where some organizers are in it for the money, it is obvious that you people are putting in all your days of hard work for the love of the sport, and that's a breath of fresh air.

Thanks again for the great time, and I'll see you next year.

Honorable David Anderson,

Minister of Fisheries and Oceans,

May I just take this opportunity to congratulate you on your re-election and on your re-appointment to cabinet as Minister of Fisheries and Oceans.

In your capacity as Minister of Fisheries and Oceans responsible for Canadian Coast Guard, but more specifically as political Minister for B.C., I would like to bring to your attention a matter requiring your urgent attention and intervention.

A dangerous navigational situation currently exists in the Mamquam Blind Channel opposite the Stawamus River at Squamish.

Officials of Canadian Coast Guard, Public Works, Canada and Transport Canada are painfully aware of the build-up of silting in the main navigational lane of the channel. The District of Squamish, the Harbor Authority of Squamish and user groups have requested immediate dredging of the channel in an attempt to avert a potential human disaster. Their interventions have fallen on deaf ears, with your officials at Coast Guard claiming there are no funds for dredging.

While I appreciate the divestiture of port operations across Canada, Squamish currently remains under the authority of the federal government and no transition discussion or arrangements have taken place. What your government has done is place Squamish and those using the channel in an untenable situation by washing your hands of the maintenance of the channel and at the same time abandoning your responsibilities under the Navigable Waters Act.

On a purely economic note, the port operations at Squamish generate nearly $200,000 for the federal coffers yearly and, frankly, they are getting nothing back from Ottawa. In fact, Ottawa has created a disaster waiting to happen. The channel in question is used by pleasure boaters from Canada and the United States, the sightseeing-cruise vessel Britannia, and hundreds of tourists as well as commercial vessels. Should any of these run aground we could have loss of life.

Given that the last major dredging took place 10 years ago at a cost of $450,000, I don't believe that an immediate dredging by federal means is out of the question.

I met Tuesday, June 24, with Squamish municipal officials, user groups and local officials and now turn to you to seek your immediate intervention into this dangerous situation. I know in your capacity as political minister you have contingency power and means to initiate the needed remedy.

Thank you for your immediate attention.

Support appreciated

Editor,

Empire Logging families would like to express their gratitude to all the citizens and businesses of Squamish who gave us their support at the blockade in TFL #38 (upper Squamish tree farm license).

It is awesome to know you are there for us as we continue our struggle for survival in the woods. It makes us proud that we belong to a community that cares. Continued support is needed at Shop 2 at Mile 21 in the Upper Squamish. See you there.

The Empire Logging Families Squamish believe that government is once again cutting backroom deals to accommodate special interest groups. The proposal to treat the pollution here with fly ash which contains dioxins and furans from pulp mill waste and pump it all back into the mountain doesn't sound too encouraging.

I guess we weren't ready to support new technology which looked at recycling and treating the acid rock drainage by essentially reversing the natural process which creates it. To then read a quote from the SLRD planner Bob MacPherson that zoning imposed by the district will be lifted to help the development potential of Britannia is outrageous.

MacPherson should remember how much effort and money was invested in the creation of the official community plan for our area. He was, after all, actively involved in the process as the contract consultant long before being hired at SLRD. Why are our public employees so recalcitrant to the idea that they work for the people implementing and enforcing our expressed will?

It is not for a staff planner to determine policy. The tail doesn't wag the dog. Much like the kiosk fiasco at Britannia, if SLRD staff had stuck to enforcing existing zoning, a lot of grief would have been avoided.

Evidently, even a stop work order issued by the SLRD is difficult to enforce. No matter how good a political system is, it is easily undermined when certain parties are afforded special access to government while the rest of us simply vote once every four years and then ignore what is going on. Our future is often determined by what we tolerate rather than by what we plan.

Trustees forced to neglect gifted students

Received by The Chief for publication: The Honorable Paul Ramsay, Minister of Education,

Dear Sir,

Re: the budget impasse.

I am beginning to have a lot of sympathy for Daniel Defoe, the 18th century author of Robinson Crusoe, who, when he criticized the ineptitudes of the contemporary government, was put in the pillory. He stood with his head and hands locked in a crossbeam so irate memick bers of the public could give vent to their disapproval by throwing things. They pelted him with stones and rotten vegetables, eggs or objects even less sweet smelling, and he was powerless to do anything.

School trustees have been put into the same ish position without even having had the satisfaction of attacking the government first. Given inadequate budgets to work with, they have had to resort to cutting those very services they to themselves most strongly believe in — librariheians' time, programs for gifted students, crossing guards and teacher support. Naturally, the public wants to throw things. As a board chair with 42 years experience in Education, I find that it goes against all my instincts to make the kinds of decisions I am being forced into with regard to schools and the needs of our children. I should like to step aside and let the missiles find a more deserving target, but I feel that without the local school boards as a focus, the dissatisfaction of our communities might not be heard. The parents in those communities are fighting to proect the right of their children to the best edu-

to see how keen that competition is and how much stress is put on schooling the next generation there. It is all very well for "experts" to give us soothing statistics that appear to show those countries concentrate only on the cream of the crop, the most able students, who then get high marks in international examinations against our average students. It is our own gifted students that we are being forced to neglect during funding restrictions, and how keen will our cutting edge be in international competition 10 years from now? To say our government is being short-sighted is to put the situation mildly.

Sorry to belabor the literary analogy, but Defoe had a contemporary who had a lot to say about governments too. That author's name was Swift, and he looked at the world through the eyes of Gulliver on his travels. In Lilliput, Gulliver was a giant who was disgusted by the antics of six-inch tall politicians going to war with each other and ignoring the people's greater needs

In Laputa, he could only laugh at the learned dignitaries who were so absorbed in abstract theories they walked into fires and fell off cliffs. Indeed, the only place he found common-sense was amongst the horses. The horses threw him out because he looked like a Yahoo (a creature so low as to fight over money), and the Lilliputians threw him out because he put out a great fire by relieving his bladder on top of it.

I wonder if there are other trustees like me, who feel they are being treated like Defoe and would like to react in the manner of Gulliver?

Be aware, cook burgers with care

Editor,

As summer nears and barbecue season is upon us, I want to send out a word of warning to all your readers: please cook with care. Make ure your burgers are well cooked and no pink meat on, remains.

Bay I had to learn this lesson the hard way. My two-year-old daughter ate an undercooked hamburger at a summer bar-

I didn't know then what I know now, to check the inside of the burger. She was stricke en with an E. coli infection which caused Hemolytic ad Uremic Syndrome (HUS), better know as hamburger disease.

My little girl had to be hospitalized for six weeks. The E. coli bacteria had entered her bloodstream causing irreparable damage to her kidneys. She will need a kidney transplant by her early teens.

Our life has been turned upside down, all because of an undercooked hamburger. HUS need never happen. I would hate to see any other child go through what our daughter has been through.

Please, moms and dads and anyone preparing food, cook with care. Make sure ground meat is well cooked and properly handled.

Wash your hands with hot, soapy water before and after preparing ground meat (that includes beef, pork, poultry, lamb). Don't put cooked meat back on the same plate used for raw meat.

And don't use unpasteurized milk and juices, or untreated water.

A free brochure on hamburger disease and what you can do to prevent it is available by calling or writing to: The Jackie Family Fund c/o The Kidney Foundation of Canada, B.C. Branch, 201 — 1669 West 3rd Ave., Vancouver, B.C., V6J 1K1. Call toll free, 1-800-567-8112.

Be aware — cook with care. Anne Nickerson-Jackie Vancouver,

Environmental group losing credibility

Editor.

It is a shame to see what was once a credible environmental organization turn into a destructive and counter-productive group of DOcco-warriors with no concern for the workers, families and communities that could be affected by their European campaign.

It is so easy to claim that the campaign is geared towards large forest companies and forgetting or refusing to accept responsibility for the real people who's livelihoods will again be put into jeopardy. The stress these blockades will have on the children of the workers is never addressed. As money becomes scarce to workers there is an inability to fulfill commitments made to their children.

Greenpeace and other environmental groups seem to think these antics are just a game and a way of raising their profile with no rationale whatsoever.

I believe the government should speed up the injunction process, apply fines and jail terms to ensure that these people understand, when you break the law, you are going to pay a price. Everyone believes in a person's right to protest, but these people push democracy to the brink.

I would encourage both workers and government to sue for any loss of wages or other related costs that may be incurred because of the actions of these preservationist groups.

The people of British Columbia recognize the importance of a sound and efficient forest industry. They also acknowledge that we need to ensure we have funds to support our growing population and the need for schools, hospitals and a stable health care system and this is not the time for liberal MLA's to start playing childish politics.

All opposition parties should be supportive of working people and assist the provincial government with regards to any initiative that they may have to bring forward to counter this campaign.

BES teachers a hit with their private eye spoof

The little ones who are in program cadre joined their big buddies in M. Borchert's class at Mamquam to make music on June 16.

There was a lot of talent on display, and everybody was involved in the project. Aaron, Masen and Jean-Marc had worked very hard to put together a program which not only contained photographs of the performers but also supplied a commentary on their performances.

For instance, we could read that when John plays the guitar, he always closes his eyes, that Miche, Morgan, Beth, Dana and Nicola are already well known artists, and that Jenny and Courtney are very experienced pianists.

Jean-Marc and Marc were in charge of the lighting job of focusing attention on the gym as required.

The performers were all excellent. Ms. McElwain and M. Bouchert had certainly given the younger ones a chance to have a real grown-up concert of their own, and the big buddies are seen at their very best when they are setting a good example and helping their juniors.

Skit

It was the teachers who rounded off the concert at Brackendale Elementary, when Ms. Albrighton and Mr. Winterburn acted out a hilarious spoof on the private eye detective story.

Sam Spade's name had changed a bit and he was a private ear, but he was a tough guy of tradition. His feet were up on the desk of his office and he was six weeks behind in his rent because no business had come his way in a long time. He told the audience the sad story of his life. As an infant, he had been travelling on a ship that was wrecked near Zanzibar and had stayed alive only because a tin of biscuits was washed ashore beside him.

When a client, Mrs. Dizzy, walked in to hire his services on a case, they talked at crosspurposes about a briefcase and a packing case. His fees rose dramatically from $60 a week to $10,000 as he described his A-1, his super-A-1 and his super-deluxe-A-1 methods of finding a missing person. In the first, he simply waited in his office until that person happened to walk in. In the second, he waited in his office until somebody who dialed a wrong number turned out to be the very one he was looking for.

It appeared that Mrs. Dizzy was trying to trace her son, who had been lost as a baby in a shipwreck near Zanzibar. After more misunderstandings, mother and son were reunited, but the tough Sam Shovel still demanded his full fee because of all the allowances he had not received as a child.

Before the skit, the various athletics teams and their coaches had been honored. Mr. Grantham told an anecdote that reflects a lot of credit on the boys' basketball team. In the first half of one game, they had been losing by an embarrassing margin. They refused to give in, however, and redoubled their efforts in the second half – with the result that they almost evened the score. When the coach of the winning team spoke to Mr. Grantham a few weeks later, he said how much he envied him for having players with so much grit.

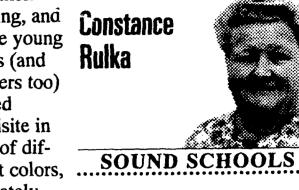

Punjabi Class of '97 A slightly different kind of graduation took place in the Sea to Sky Hotel on June 22. Members of the Sikh community came together at a dinner to honor the large group of elementary students (from Valleycliffe, Stawamus and Squamish schools) who have been studying Punjabi throughout the year, after the regular school hours.

Their teacher was Ms. Hehar, and Mr. Kent, the principal at Valleycliffe, said the students were always very much on task whenever he saw them. Mr. Avta Giri presented each of them with a certificate of the standards accomplished, and the adults urged them to keep their language and culture alive.

Unfortunately, not enough secondary school students have chosen Punjabi as a course next year to make it a viable one at the high school level (the same is true of German, Japanese and honors English), but this should change when these youngsters are older.

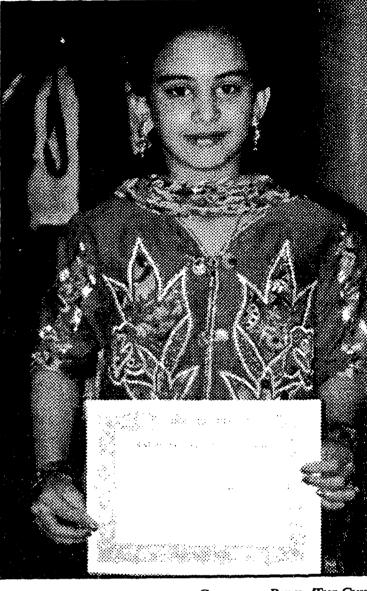

It was a very warm and friendly occasion. Some of the girls entertained the company with their dancing, and all the young ladies (and mothers too) looked exquisite in saris of different colors, intricately embroidered and covered with beadwork.

Coun. Paul Lalli deserves a lot of credit for his organization of the proceedings.

BRIEFS Kids can get lost in summer books

Kids can lose themselves in a good book at the Squamish Public Library during the Lost in a Book summer reading club. It's lots of fun and absolutely

edit for

The club is a program for children aged three- to 12wears-old which encourages them to their very best and to set their own goals. Children will have the option of filling out a contract to read a certain number of books. Upon completion of their goals they will receive an award.

"Studies have shown that good reading habits benefit children in the classroom. Summer reading clubs maintain reading levels over the summer break," said librarian Maureen Painter. After the children have joined and read a book, they will receive a magic school bus which, through reading set numbers of Books, will be covered with pictures, stickers and other decorations.

The summer reading club is sponsored by the British Columbia Library Association and the Squamish Public Library, with support from the Library Services Branch, Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing. For more information please contact the Squamish Public Library.

Make your own enchanted garden

Masked bandits kept at bay with high pressure water spray

By Mary Billy Contributed to The Chief

ate Celli of Katescapes Home Garden Boutique has found the way to do the things Boutique has found the way to do the ushe likes best all in one place. She has turned her home and garden space on Pitlochry Way in Garibaldi Highlands into a showplace for her specialized gardening centre, and is a stay-athome mom for her family of five children.

Water plays a big part in every display at Katescapes, from the large fish pond in the centre of the back yard, to the small creek gurgling beside the house and assorted self-contained water gardens in large ceramic pots with water bubbling out of rocks or water flutes. Most of these, including the small creek, have pumping systems which recycle the water. Japanese snails are used to eat the algae. However, a motion sensor had to be put in to keep racoons from feasting on snail dinner every night.

"They pull the water plants out of the water, which is where the snails are, eat the snails, then poop and leave," said Celli.

The motion sensors activate a sudden high pressure spray that works well to keep the masked bandits away.

One very convenient innovation at Katescapes are mailbox planters. They have flowers on top, but instead of holding mail, provide storage space for small garden tools which can be located in several places in the yard.

How many gardeners have just gotten to the farthest end of the yard only to realize the trowel was left at the other end? Mailbox planters keep them safe, dry and handy.

Celli says what she set out to do was to offer an alternative to what people usually have or can get locally, so she carries unique garden wares and specialty plants at prices they can afford. She provides a place for artisans to display work such as bamboo wind chimes, Mexican pottery, and wood and iron garden features, all on consignment. She research- garden which will provide a different scene inside es and looks for special features requested by customers and has catalogues with ideas and suggestions for feature items, such as the self-contained water gardens which are her specialty.

In one corner of the back yard she has made a children's secret garden, complete with a smaller than usual alder arbor with honeysuckle climbing on it as an entranceway. A low rock wall is planted with a mixture of flowers and things children can find to pick and eat such as strawberries, tomatoes, carrots or peas. There's a little three-foot square fishpond in the corner with one fish and water lillies, irises, marsh marigolds and grasses. Two little chairs have been set up for children to sit and contemplate the universe, or just enjoy their own little space surrounded by beauty.

The newest project is a lattice-fenced Japanese and out, with a feeling of solitude and privacy.

The whole back yard is surrounded by a high fence which in turn is covered with climbing vines and plants. Celli does workshops in her gardens with small groups of five. The next one is how to make an alpine trough, which starts with a cardboard box as a form, then a mixture of peat moss, cement and sand is used to create the trough which is then planted with mountain flowers. They are made to look like they've been around for a long time.

If the proof of the pudding is in the eating, then surely the proof of a gardening boutique is in the garden of its owner. Beautiful varieties of sights, smells and sounds abound at Katescapes and they can be transferred to anyone's back yard to be enjoyed.

Unassuming store contains unique treasures

By Mary Billy Contributed to The Chief

Tow many times do we drive by a place and think, "one of these days I'll have to go in and see what's there"? I finally went in to June's Originals located on the side street behind H & R Block at Victoria and Cleveland, and what a pleasant surprise.

My first reaction was that I'd entered an art studio where work of great talent, care and design was taking place. And sure enough, owner-operator June Thomsen has just completed a new series of five original hand-pulled woodcut prints, all of them representative of our area.

They include a blue heron in the estuary, Mt. Garibaldi, the Stawamus Chief trail with large trees reminiscent of some paintings by Emily Carr, a scene of the Stawamus Chief with wintering eagles and one of Shannon Falls.

Making woodblock prints is a long process. Thomsen starts with a painting of her subject, then the woodblock must be cut rendering the same painting only backwards, so that when the hand drawn prints are done, it once again will be right side to. Each requires a series of prints, as each color is cut out of the woodblock.

She starts first with the parts that stay white, then does another cut and another print to add each subsequent color. It's a long, intense process, however the end product is something worthy of becoming a family heirloom. The Howe Sound Inn has purchased a set of the whole series to display in its conference room.

Many of Thomsen's designs have been imprinted on good quality Tshirts and long sleeved cotton shirts, in a way that the designs don't crumble when washed as so many others

There are plenty of unique gift ideas in this shop, including a number of other Squamish area artists' and artisans' work.

Thomsen came here about three years ago from Windermere, B.C. and opened her store two years ago. She has been building her business ever since with her main focus her own specialty as a master woodblock printer.

June Thomsen is surrounded by her woodblock prints at her store on Victoria Street.

Rum has a colorful history

Tuly brings a wealth of Independence Days. Must be the hot weather makes people feisty. And for some countries, • food and drink were at the center of the cause.

The opening volley in the American War of Independence is popularly thought to have started in 1773 when Britain imposed a tax on tea. The Boston Tea Party was the first open act of rebellion against Britain.

While the kerfuffle over tea may have been the final straw, a heavy tax on sugar and molasses 40 years earlier kindled lasting animosity between England and the American colonies. The despised Molasses Act threatened the colonists' favorite drink. Not tea, but rum.

Early Americans, like their European contemporaries, had a built-in resistance to water. No surprise. Most so-called fresh water within range of human habitation was, if not actually poisonous, not far from it. Brewing fermented drinks had been one of the colonists' first priorities. They brewed pumpkins, maple sugar and persimmons. Beer had to wait until Pennsylvania was settled after hops and barley growing experiments failed in New England. When apple orchards came into full bearing, cider and apple brandy consumption reached gargantuan proportions. The highly potent appleiack was sometimes referred to as 'essence of lockjaw'.

Alcohol in its various forms was the great lubricant of the time, quenching the majestic thirst that resulted from too much salty preserved food, acting as a social ice-breaker in new communities, and for many centuries was a surgeon's only recourse for anaesthetic. It even became a political tradition. When George Washington ran for the legislature in 1758 he expressed concern that his agent might have been too stingy in doling out only three gallons of beer, rum, wine or cider to each voter.

Rum was more than a drink at that period. Much of the colonies' trade was based on the molasses from which rum was made. For several decades the shipowners of New England had found it profitable to sail with a cargo of rum to the slave coast of Africa and exchange it for slaves. They were then sold to sugar cane plantation owners in the West Indies. The empty ship loaded up with molasses, the syrupy liquid left after sugar cane juice was boiled to produce sugar crystals. Back in New England, the molasses was distilled into the rum that would supply the capital for the next round trip. The Molasses Act imposed a heavy tax on sugar and molasses coming anywhere other than the British sugar islands of the Caribbean. This jepardized not only the colonists' most popular tipple, but New England's entire trading cycle.

Of all the drinks that warmed the 18th century American interior, rum was the most important. Just before the War of Independence, colonists were consuming 24 pints of rum per head per year, women and children included.

with the least rummy taste. Big, rich amber rums, while less fashionable, are some of the best values in quality spirits. Look for aged imported rums, such as Appleton Estate 12 Year Old from Jamaica. Wood-aged for years to silky softness it ought to be savored as a Cognac. Appleton's Five Year Old and Bacardi Anejo from Puerto Rico are very smooth, fruity and rummy tasting. They add delightful flavors to fruit punches and desserts.

for the crust: 2 cups chocolate wafer crumbs 1/3 cup melted butter for the filling: 1 package unflavored gelatin 1/4 cup cold water 1/3 cup good amber rum 6 egg yolks

2 cups whipping cream Combine wafer crumbs and butter. Press on the bottom and up the sides of a 9-inch springform pan. In a small saucepan, soak the gelatin in the water. Heat until dissolved. Remove from heat and stir in the rum. In a large bowl, beat the egg

Kids can get lost in books this summer

CONTRIBUTED TO The Chief

Kids can lose themselves in a good book at the Squamish Public Library during the Lost in a Book summer reading club. Join the fun now at the library. Children who join the club will receive reading records, bookmarks and stickers. It's lots of fun and absolutely free.

Summer reading clubs are fun and educational. The club is a program for children aged three- to 12-years-old which encourages them to their very best and to set their own goals. Children will have the option of filling out a contract to read a certain number of books. Upon completion of their goals they will receive an

"Studies have shown that good reading habits benefit children in the classroom. Summer reading clubs maintain reading levels over the summer break," said librarian Maureen Painter.

After children have joined and read a book, they will receive a magic school bus which, through reading set numbers of books, will be covered with pictures, stickers and other decorations.

The summer reading club is sponsored by the British Columbia Library Association and the Squamish Public Library, with support from the Library Services Branch. For more information please contact the Squamish Public Library.

Parade entries needed

The 1997 Squamish Days Loggers Sports celebration is just four weeks away and although they meet each month throughout, the year to plan the festivities, the committee is really committed this month to ensuring everything goes off without a hitch. The parade will be held on Sunday, Aug. 3 and parade coordinator Joan Forry is taking applications from groups, individuals, bands, owners of logging trucks, heavy equipment and antique vehicles. Floats take time and talent to make but are always an enjoyable part of any parade, as are marching bands. Entry forms are printed in the Squamish Chief and if you wish more information, please contact oan at 898-3661.

This year everybody will remember your birthday. Put somebody special on the Supported Child Care Community Birthday Calendar. The cost per name is $4, and if you purchase three or more birthday name spaces you will receive a free calendar. Mountain FM will be using the calendar for its on-air birthday greetings effective this September. For further information feel free to contact ane Ballance at Sea to Sky Community Services at 892-5796. Ballance said they would like to have local children's artwork on the top portion of the calendar and if your child would like to enter her/his own creation on 8 x 11 paper, please submit to: Supported Child Care Program, c/o Sea to Sky Community Services, P.O. Box 949, Squamish, BC V0N 3G0.

Now that the summer holidays are here the staff at the Squamish Public Library invites children to participate in the summer fun at the library. Join the reading club Lost in a Book anytime throughout the next two months and receive booklets to record your reading, with stickers and prizes awarded. Registration for the weekly sessions of Fun and Book times at the library begins Wednesday, July 2 at noon. Sessions for sixto-12-year-olds and sessions for three- to sixyear-olds are free.

When the North Shore Drama Festival was held in May, Between Shifts Theatre's entry of Private Lives by Noel Coward won the scene development award. Director Diane Faux and cast members Kathy Daniels, Brenda Caldwell, Skai Stevenson and Mark McConchie will be participating in the provincial festival, Mainstage, in Kelowna on July 2-11 with a performance on the final day. The cast and director will be working with other clubs which also won the scene development award. Good wishes to all of you. Last year in Kamloops, Between Shifts' play, Leaving Home, won the best showcase award.

Garibaldi School of Dance students have the opportunity to learn a variety of styles.

The Garibaldi School of Dance is now accepting registrations in ballet, jazz and tap for ages five years and up and for kinderdance classes for three and four-year-olds.

Director Sandi Wadden is also planning to hold a summer dance camp Aug. 18-22. For more information contact, Sandi at 898-3073.

ABOUT TOWN

Another fun summer program the Squamish Public Library is sponsoring is bedtime story time at 7:30 p.m. each night, Tuesday through Friday, and for older children, a chapter of a book will be read each night Tuesday to Friday at 7:45 p.m.

Sea to Sky Community Services is sponsoring The Unloading Zone, a youth camp with space for 12 youths ages 13-19 years. The program will help youth deal with anger in constructive ways and assist them in making positive choices in achieving their goals. The dates are July 18-20 and the program cost is $350. A subsidy is available upon request. The deadline for applications is July 9 by calling 892-5796 or contact Sea to Sky Community Services, 38142 Second Ave., Squamish.

Youngsters five years and up wanting a summer outdoor adventure will find rafting on the lower Squamish River for a day mighty exciting. The first excursion is July 7 (and again July 28 and Aug. 8) and the 10 a.m.-2 p.m. trip is $42. On Saturday, July 12 there is a family rafting adventure ($108 per person) and it is an overnight excursion through the spectacular upper Squamish River. River Quest is in charge of both rafting trips and registrations are accepted at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre or phone 898-3604 for more information.

Having a Canada Day first birthday is Devinder Cheema and on July 2 it is Robert Casey's first birthday.

I read the following on a friend's fridge door: "One day as I sat musing, sad and lonely and without a friend, a voice came to me from out of the gloom saying, 'Cheer up, things could be worse.' So I cheered up and sure enough, things got worse." I hope that's not the kind of day you are having.

The first Sweet D Hoopwear Summer Sports Activity Camp is set to roll from July 7-11 at Howe Sound Secondary School for boys and girls ages seven to 18. The camp will be filled with fun-type outdoor and indoor sports activities and runs each day from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Registrations at $95 per > student are accepted at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre.

There was much sharing around town about how it felt when the earthquake struck last week. I couldn't share, I slept through

In celebration of the first anniversary of Stammtisch meetings in Squamish, a Stammtisch picnic-barbecue will be held at Alice Lake park on July 6 starting at 3 p.m., weather permitting. Meet at the children's play area. All German-speaking members of the community and friends and family are invited to attend. Please bring your own barbecue equipment and food and beverages.

For more information, please call Katie at 892-5360.

B.C. Rail dinner train proves to be more popular than anticipated

Just a few weeks after B.C. Rail's new service began its inaugural trips, the Pacific Starlight Dinner Train has already reached 20 per cent of its projected revenue for the season. To date, 2,500 passengers have dined on board, and the train has gone out with an average of 192 passengers each trip. Current revenue is $420,000.00 (without GST), with 6,000 passengers currently booked throughout the season.

The Pacific Starlight Dinner Train runs between North Vancouver and Porteau Cove every Wednesday through Sunday from now until Oct. 31.

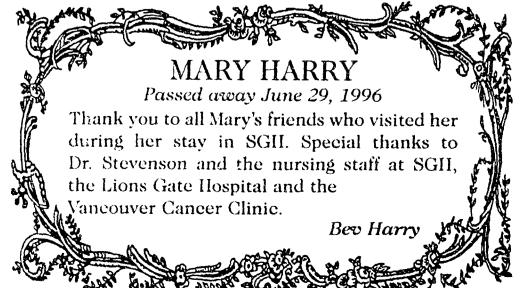

The train departs North Vancouver Station at 6:15 p.m. and returns at 9:45 p.m. Table d'hôte prices are $69 for salon service and $84 for dome service, gratuities, taxes and beverages extra.

Advance reservations are necessary and can be made by calling (604) 984-5500 or (800) 363-3733 within North America.

The master plan for the oceanside community of Furry Creek was made public recently to developers and realtors at a breakfast meeting. The opening of the oceanside lands is the most significant step forward in the development of Furry Creek. Over the last few years, Furry Creek has emerged from its verdant woodland setting to become a

Ron

Anderson

Less visible are the mountainside homes currently in various stages of construction, which represent the completion of sales of the first residential phases of Furry Creek. With the imminent completion of the $5 million highway interchange providing direct access to the waterfront lands, the realization of Furry Creek will now begin.

The oceanside property is comprised of two distinct sections of waterfront bordered by the 14th and 15th fairways, bisected by Furry Creek and edged with more than one kilometre of west-facing Howe Soune shoreline.

To the north, the marina village is planned as the vibrant community center of Furry Creek, inspired by the character of great seaside resorts. Its attractions include a charming seaside inn, a collection of shops and galleries and an assortment of multi-family residences.

To the south, the waterfront neighborhood is destined to become one of B.C.'s most exclusive oceanside communities. Here, a limited number of detached waterfront and semiwaterfront homes enjoy the ocean, all-encompassing views, and extensive beach and seawalk pathways.

Four groups supported by freight fund

By AL PRICE The Chief

Four community groups have received a total of $850 in the most recent disbursement from the Whistler Courier and Freight Squamish Community Service Fund. The cheques, the second set presented this year, bring the total donations to $14,663 since the fund was established in 1993.

The Supported Child Care Program for fundraising calendar received $200, Squamish Pirates Aquatic Club received $100 and Howe Sound Performing Arts Association was granted $200 for the Star Search finalist's costs. In addition, $350 has been set aside for Community Christmas Care.

The money in the fund is derived from shipments by Whistler Courier and Freight going into and out of the community. Each shipment adds 25 cents, plus another 25 cents for every 1,000 lb. of freight the company carries into or out of Squamish.

A committee of the Squamish and Howe Sound Chamber of Commerce oversees distribution of the funds.

Applications are received from community groups, and allocation is determined by the committee, which includes Rose Tatlow, Ted Craddock and Ken Perry of the chamber, and Bob Hazelton representing Whistler Courier and Freight.

Community groups wishing to apply for funding should submit a written requests to the chamber at Box 1009, Squamish, B.C. VON

An old helicopter body set ablaze with jet fuel looks like the real thing.

Volunteer fireman Gary Morris received a cut near his eye during the realistic exercise.

Photos and story by David Donaldson

Practise makes man perfect

here hasn't been a flaming aircraft crash at the Squamish municipal airport that Steve Virgint can remember, but our firemen plan to be prepared if such an accident happens. "There has been an airplane crash at the airport, but it didn't burn," said the Squamish Fire Rescue training officer. "We try to practise in all aspects and that's something we cover once a year."

Fire Rescue ran a surprise practice drill at the airport June 16, simulating a helicopter crash. An old helicopter body, which had been brought up from Vancouver International Airport some years ago, was ignited with about 100 gallons of jet B fuel, and men posing as crash victims were placed around the wreckage. Emergency services were called in on code three.

"It was pretty much a surprise. None of the firemen really knew until they actually found the patients and there wasn't much wrong with them," said Virgint. "It had as much realism as we could get."

The exercise was done as a surprise to see how well the firemen would handle this type of situation and how they could handle the foam fire extinguisher which has to be used because there is no close water supply at the airport.

Virgint said the men did well and the exercise was successful in showing the few minor glitches in the procedure, which can now be worked out.

"It showed a few glitches in pulling foam out because it takes a little longer to set up the foam than it does with water."

Squamish Fire Rescue members throught the drill was the real deal until they gave first aid to the uninjured patients.

Firefighters douse the blaze with foam because there are no water hydrants at the airport.

Barbecue a great success

Tantalus Seniors Centre News

About 40 seniors turned out for a barbecue dinner at the centre on June 21. In spite of the wet weather we had a great time and are looking forward to the next one to be held during the Squamish Days weekend at the end of July.

A big thank you to Ron Marier, whose music really made the evening special, and to Rosewood Florists, Howe Sound Inn, Fruit of the Vine, Xocolatl, Home Hardware, Stylezone, downtown Pear Tree and Whistle Stop for their door prize donations. A special thanks to Ralph's Rentals for the use of the grill which made the cooking so much easier. I would like to also say thanks to Julie and her committee for organizing such a great evening.

Last year during Squamish Days, the centre had three days of activities. In addition to a barbecue, there was a luncheon with home-made perogies, and the mini-museum. The committee is planning to take a step back in time with costumes and decor again this year.

Next week I should have a schedule of events for you. Mima is looking for articles to display in the mini-museum. Anything you have that might be of interest to people and you could loan to the centre for display, please phone Mima at 898-3280.

The sketch and paint club concluded its sessions for the summer with a delicious dessert party at Quinn's. A couple of painting outings are planned during the summer including one at Porteau Cove. I will probably have dates for you next week.

The senior men's golfers hosted the seniors from University last week and once again came out winners. They all had a delicious lunch.

Tomorrow, July 2, the men travel to Surrey. Don't forget the men's senior championship tournament on July 5.

Glad to hear Rose Tatlow is home from hospital.

Branch #70 News There are no meetings now until September but Elaine is still carrying on with bus trips.

In July and August there will be trips to the Theatre Under the Stars. The shows are Bye Bye Birdie and Fiddler on the Roof. Aug. 20 is our trip to the PNE. September is a trip to Harrison Lake to view the sand sculptures. Anyone interested in any three- to six-day tours in B.C. can contact Mandate Tours in Vancouver through Elaine at 898-5468.

Walking Club News

It certainly wasn't picnic weather for the last official walk until September, but the rain did hold off long enough to barbecue our hot dogs and other goodies. Angela gave out Tshirts to the top walkers of the year, and runners up. Margaret Staats and Ted Arsenault won first place, second went to Leslie Keith, and third went to Inger Olson and Els Vandereerdon.

Everyone was in favor of continuing our walks during summer with Ted and Leslie leading the pack. This Thursday, July 3, we meet in the parking lot at the Stawamus Chief lookout for a walk to Shannon Falls at 10 a.m. For those not doing the strenuous walk, meet at Shannon Falls and bring a picnic lunch if weather is nice.

Raising Your Vibrations With Music

Music soothes the savage beast, it is said. Of course this depends on the music of your choice. Loud raucous music actually shatters the aura and can result in disturbed behavior. As we age and become more mellow, loud music can be unbearable. Your level of vibration will determine the type of music you are attracted to at the time, and these levels can vary throughout the day. Playing your favorites around the house can make you feel good; and playing relaxing meditative is great when small children seem hyperactive or fretful. Sometimes I have felt tired and had to drag myself to choir practice in the evening. Once I am there and begin singing great music, I'm on a natural high. Turn off the television and create harmony in your home with music.

Dear Diane,

I have chosen an unconventional career path. I want to be happy, but I also want to be stable financially with this. Will it work out for me? Signed, Lost yet found

Dear Lost,

Welcome to the club. Your are not alone. You can be sure when you follow the tune of a different drummer, the dance will be different also. If you have a roof over your head and a meal on the table then you are taken care of by the universe. Work on your prosperity consciousness, this is your key to financial stability, no matter what you choose to do. :"Creating Affluence" by Deepak Chopra and "Creating Money," by Sanaya Roman and Dwayne Packer are excellent books.

Dear Diane,

I am very happy with my job, life etc., but I don't feel settled. What do you see?

Signed, What!!!

Dear What,

You have been going through some major changes and still are. These changes are very much on an inter basis associated with personal philosophies and beliefs. There are also some family or close associates that will be demanding your attention and energy in the near future. Work on yourself, learn to say no and don't give it all away.

Dear Diane,

I am wondering if the choices I've made are the right ones and if I am on the right track now. Are there more significant changes in the near future?

Signed, Searching

Dear Searching,

Of course you are on track. When the fog clears you will clearly see the path. Know that you are just where you are meant to be and have faith in yourself. Incidentally, you aren't through your Saturn return until your birthday in '98, so the confusion isn't over yet. Until you are more settled, keep your relationships light.

The Chief

The organizers of this year's Thunder in the Streets autoslalom in downtown Squamish must know someone important to have arranged for the best weather of the month to shine on their event.

"The weather was fantastic. There was only a few drops of rain on Sunday, so racers didn't have to change into their wet tires," said Jenny Anderson of the Squamish/Whistler Car Club, which hosted the event.

She said the excellent course conditions made for much faster times than last year. Also, some competitors new to Thunder in the Streets included road racers who gave slalom a try and posted some impressive results.

Local club racers dominated their fields. Dan Brunner posted the fastest time of the day Saturday running his Formula 440 race car in B Modified for a time of 46.527 seconds. Leagh Schoenberger, event moderator, was second in B Mod with his '59 Dunebuggy, sporting a new race engine but a problematic clutch.

Paul Bunbury placed first in C Mod, racing his CRX to a 49.275-second finish. Andy Chalk drove his '90 Mustang to first place in E Super Stock with Arnie Anderson finishing second in the same class in a '92 Mustang.

In A Stock, Stuart Rulka came first in his Morgan Plus 8 and Kerry Brown was second in his Porsche 944. Dan Starcher placed first in D Super Stock with his Fiat X19.

In E Street Prepared, Cam Rittich was third in his '68 Barracuda while his brother Pat was fifth in the same car. Tim Brooksbank was fourth in the same class in his Trans Am.

During the two days, Cleveland Avenue was turned into an open pit area with many classic racing machines on display for spectators to check out. The Thunder in the Streets organizers are very grateful to the downtown merchants for cooperating with the event and offering prizes.

Volunteer support was exceptional, including both locals and members of the Race Event Volunteers of Vancouver (REVV). In the only unfortunate incident of the weekend a REVV volunteer collapsed Sunday and was taken to hospital. This was not a result of being struck by a vehicle or lack of safety precautions by the organizers.

Cactus Cup sidelined indefinitely

By RAHOUL GHOSE Whistler Question

Whistler's annual Cactus Cup mountain bike event has been officially cancelled, a Specialized race director confirmed this week.

Normally a summer fixture on Blackcomb Mountain in mid-July, the five-stage race first hit the resort in 1994 sporting some of Specialized's top riders.

Following the 1995 event Blackcomb signed a three-year contract with Specialized to host races through 1998.

However, earlier this year Blackcomb dropped the race citing cost as the primary rea-

"The race takes an incredible amount of resources and planning to put on and we didn't realize a lot of (revenue)," Blackcomb race director Linda Clare said in an interview earlier this year. "It's a change in our focus. We want to do things that are less labor intensive and offer a better return...we're looking at expanding our programs to broader audiences."

Clare added Blackcomb was negotiating with Specialized to have the last two years in the three-year contract dissolved.

Specialized race director Sandy Wolf said talks with neighboring Whistler Mountain to stage this year's races there failed to produce

Canada Cup racers gearing up for Whistler

By RAHOUL GHOSE Whistler Question

Some of Canada's top mountain bike racers will hit Whistler Mountain next month for the first local Canada Cup event in two years.

National team members Eric Tourville, Melanie McQuaid and Trish Sinclair have already confirmed their participation in the July 18-20 race weekend as has current junior expert Canada Cup points leader Ryder Hesjedal.

Hosted by Vancouver Island-based promoters Professional Competition, the fifth leg on the Canada Cup circuit will include cross country, downhill and dual slalom events. The event, which recently acquired Specialized as a sponsor, will also continue the Whistler tradition of a Fatboy criterium through the village.

Riders swap their knobby tires for slicks during the circuit race which drops the trailing riders after each lap. Any riders lapped by the lead racer are also eliminated.

Events coordinator Claire Bonin said Pro Competition approached Specialized about sponsorship after the annual Cactus Cup race in Whistler was officially cancelled.

Racing kicks off on Friday, July 18 with dual slalom qualifiers on a new Whistler course which features several jumps.

On the Saturday morning downhill competitors, including Whistler's own Daamiann Skelton and Chris Colbeck, will pre-ride a new downhill course which starts at Olympic Station and includes technical single track sections, fast descents and challenging corner The course has been designed to avoi Whistler's mountain access road. Downhi competition begins at 1 p.m.

The criterium will take over the Village' cobbled walkways at 4:30 p.m. with three rac groups starting at different times. Junior, vet eran and masters riders will compete in th first wave, followed by a women's pro an expert start. Pro and expert men will race last Competition on the Saturday wraps up wit the dual slalom finals starting at 7:30 p.m Skelton, the reigning national dual slalor champion, is currently a contender for the overall Canada Cup downhill points title.

Sunday the schedule shifts to cross countr with youth and beginner racers hitting the course at 9 a.m. and the pros racing at 1 p.m.

The new Whistler course features a balance Paul, fro of climbing and descending sections as well as flats for competitors to pass.

Riders from Squamish competing in the race include Team Tantalus's Warren Scott, Jeff Fedyk, Scott Ross, Lorraine Ross and Al Ross E - if he has time. Club Corsa and Dave Heisler will likely race as well.

The July event will also feature a bike expone of No for spectators attending the weekend races and The Sea a kids' race for children under 10 on the wally exte Saturday. Regular races will be open to riders of the 10 and up with the citizen category hosting Once col non-licensed competitors and first-time racers rience that any results.

Wolf added that as Specialized's subsidiary in Canada currently has litigations pending against Blackcomb for the broken contract, future Whistler-based events were doubtful.

"At this time we just don't know for sure." Wolf said.

Wolf would not comment on the lawsuit.

Whistler was the only Canadian venue on the Cactus Cup circuit.

While Whistler Mountain will be hosting two other major mountain biking events this summer, Blackcomb's schedule only includes one event — the Dual Eliminator Downhill July 5 and 6. Local riders Jeff Fedyk, Scott Ross and lorraine Ross will compete in the exciting head-to-head race.

Whistler will host the resort's first Canada Cup mountain bike race in two years July 18 to 20 (see related story) and the Whistler International Classic, Aug. 15 to 17, a race which will combine provincial championships in cross country, dual slalom and downhill with the American Mountain Bike Challenge circuit which draws riders from the NORBA B-seed.

The Classic is also internationally sanctioned allowing riders to gain points for Union Cycliste International ranking, one of the criteria used to determine who is named to the national team.

ces and The Sea to Sky Trail is a multi-use, community-based trail development project that will evenon the ually extend south from D'Arcy through Whistler to Squamish, linking more than 150 kilomeriders res of the Sea to Sky corridor's most dramatic terrain.

nosting Once complete, the trail promises to become a recreational treasure of B.C., offering an experacers frience that taps into the natural beauty and existing amenities of the corridor while providing a volun-challenge for all levels of riding ability.

iterest. On July 12-13, R.E.M. Event Management Inc. will host the second annual Sea to Sky linator Mountain Bike Trail Ride to raise awareness and funding for this project.

The ride will begin Saturday morning in D'Arcy at Anderson Lake, proceeding 85 kilometres south to Whistler utilizing a combination of existing trails, deactivated forestry roads, newly developed trail and some paved road, arriving at the Myrtle Philip Community Centre for a barbecue, evening entertainment and an overnight stay. On Sunday, participants will ride 55 kilometres through the Cheakamus Canyon to a finish line celebration in Squamish.

Registration forms will be available at supporting bicycle stores throughout the Sea to Sky corridor, Vancouver and the Lower Mainland or on the Internet at http://mindlink.net/rem/remanada main.htm.

Proceeds raised from the pledge per kilometre ridden will go directly to the Sea to Sky Trail Society to continue their campaign for right of way access, trail development, sign posting and

Transmission Line Right-of-Way Land

Squamish, British Columbia

B.C.Hydro invites offers to purchase 5.99 acres of electrical transmission line right-of-way land located along side Highway 99, between Mamquam Road and Diamond Head Road, in Squamish, B.C.

The property is fully utilized for electrical transmission lines and has limited development potential. However, the land may also be incorporated in any adjacent development to provide significant exposure and access from Highway 99.

Asking Price: $550,000.

An information package may be picked up at B.C.Hydro, Shared Support Services Division, 333 Dunsmuir Street, 8th Floor, Vancouver, B.C. V6B 5R3.

For further information, contact Mr. Bob Penney at (604) 623-3957 or by fax at (604) 623-3988.

The deadline for submitting offers is 3:00 p.m., Friday, 18 July 1997.

B.C.Hydro reserves the right to negotiate with one or more prospective purchasers and to decline any or all offers at its sole discretion. This is not a tendering or bidding process.

HOROSCOPES

June 29-July 5

Aries - March 21/April 20

Taurus – April 21/May 21

The beginning of the new month brings some peace to your life. You are more patient and better able to control your temper this week. Things go smoothly at work. Your personal life thrives. You meet someone who intrigues you, and you decide to make the first move.

lot to say this week. You have some good ideas for work and talk to upper management about them. The higher-ups are very interested in what you have to say. Your love life moves into high gear at the end of the week. Gemini – May 22/June 21 The early part of the week is extremely busy for you.

While you're usually the quiet type, Taurus, you've got a

However, instead of getting aggravated, you are invigorated. The fast pace is just what you need to get your blood flowing. A family member turns to you in a time of need.

Don't let him or her down. Your opinions and advice will be listened to.

Cancer – June 22/July 22 You have to travel for work early in the week, but you have a lot of running around to do for a family function that you are helping to plan. Don't get angry or upset. Your life will be quiet again soon. Gemini plays an important role.

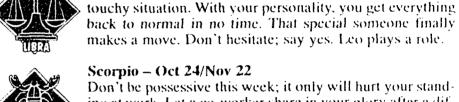

Leo – July 23/August 23

Celebrate your independence. You are no longer tied down by obligations. You feel confident at work, and you're now in charge of your personal life. You can do what you want without anyone telling you differently. Virgo – Aug 24/Sept 22

Your quick thinking solves a problem at work and gets you recognized by the higher-ups. So, stop being so critical of mixed in with compliments from loved ones. Don't get discouraged. Everyone really has your best interest at heart. Libra – Sept 23/Oct 23 A conflict between co-workers puts you in the middle of a Scorpio - Oct 24/Nov 22 Don't be possessive this week; it only will hurt your standing at work. Let a co-worker share in your glory after a difficult project is completed. It may not be what you want, but it will put you in good standing with a superior. A loved one shares a secret with you. Keep it to yourself.

Sagittarius - Nov 23/Dec 21

Be blunt when it comes to a problem at work early in the week. Beating around the bush only will make the situation worse. A family gathering puts you on edge. Try to relax; you're not the only one who's uptight. Capricorn plays an important role.

Capricorn - Dec 22/Jan 20

Don't let your desire to get ahead drive you to make a hasty decision at work. Slow and steady wins the race. When it comes to your love life, you move into the fast lane. That intriguing stranger you keep running into asks you out. Now's your chance to see what he or she is like.

Aquarius – Jan 21/Feb 18

You're certainly full of surprises this week. When your superiors at work think all is lost with a big account, your idea saves the day. They're grateful and will remember your efforts. As for family, you shock everyone with a heartwarming evening later in the week. They're impressed.

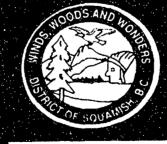

Pisces – Feb 19/March 20

You're full of ambition this week. Everything goes well at work and at home, making you realize how much you really can have if you just go after it. Your newfound drive lets you ask out that person you've had your eye on.

Working to secure a community forest

By Ken Perry, Chairperson

The Chamber of Commerce has joined the District of Squamish Forestry Committee which is a forum for discussing local issues of concern to the local forest industry. Another function consists of serving as a steering committee to establish a District Community Resource board.

This board's objectives would include working towards a community forest and exploring FRBC funding opportunities.

A community forest is a concept which has been established as a reality in the Lake Cowichan District. Squamish would benefit from a similar program in the areas of forestry education, community recreation utilization, innovative harvesting systems and local employment.

I participated in the FRBC Sub-Regional Advisory Process in Gibsons on May 1 which included participation from all areas including industry, workers, communities, First Nations, government and environmental organizations. FRBC was established to help renew the forest sector in BC and is funded by increased stumpage fees and royalties paid by industry to harvest timber on Crown land. These funds are invested and organized under five activity areas: Land & Resources, Environment, Workforce, Communities and Value-Added.

The sub-regional meetings provided valuable local knowledge and advice to Regional Offices regarding regional priorities, effectiveness in responding to local issues, identifying potential new areas for investment and communicating activities with local communities and organizations.

The FRBC funded a Value Added Wood Forum in conjunction with a hugely successful 14th Annual Sea to Sky Country Trade Show held May 23 - 25. Exhibitors' comments indicated almost total agreement that this was a very positive new dimension to the trade show.

Value-added manufacturing provides an alternative avenue for employment within the forest sector at a time when the Squamish Forest District continues to face increased reductions to the AAC.

We will provide further future updates as to the overall success of the forum and regular participation at the trade fair.

this continues to be an extremely effective way in which to market the area's numerous attractions and services to tour groups.

Also with respect to marketing, the Chamber sponsored three students from the Tourism Directed Studies program at BCIT to develop a strategic marketing plan for the benefit of our tourism members. The tourism Committee has taken this information and is working towards developing a cooperative marketing plan for 1998.

The 1997 Pitch-In-Week Campaign, coordinated by the Chamber boasted the largest number of participants ever. An estimated 5,000 residents took advantage of the week to clean up the community.

The 14th Annual Sea to Sky Country Trade Fair was another huge success. Additional features, such as the Value Added Wood Forum and the Orca Bay Sports Spirit booth were well received by all who attended. An application is already in the process to host another Wood Forum next year.

Community service helps local groups achieve goals

he Whistler Courier and Freight Squamish Community Service Fund has allocated another $850 to three community groups and has set aside money for a fourth.

The cheques, the second presentation in 1997, bring the total the company has donated to $14,663 in four years since it was established in Squamish in 1993.

The cheques presented on June 24 went to:

$200 Supported Child Care Program for fundraising calendar program;

$100 Squamish Pirates Aquatic Club;

$200 Howe Sound Performing Arts Association for Star Search finalist costs.

An additional $350 was set aside for Squamish Community Christmas Care, to bring the total to $500.

The money in the Whistler Courier and Freight Community Service fund is derived from shipments going into or out of Squamish - 25 cents is added to the fund for each shipment, plus another 25 cents for every thousand pounds of freight the company carries into or out of Squamish.

A Chamber committee oversees the distribution of the fund. Applications are received from community groups requesting funding. The allocation of the funds are determined by the Committee. Rose Tatlow, Ted Craddock and Ken Perry represent the Chamber on the Committee and Bob Hazelton represents Whistler Courier and Freight.

To apply to the Whistler Courier and Freight Community Service Fund, mail or drop off a written application to the Chamber office.
