

Residents invited to help shape Squamish's future

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

The fourth draft of Squamish's official community plan is now complete and a public information meeting to outline its details is scheduled for June 10. An open house will be held in council chambers at Municipal Hall, 3-9 p.m. and district staff and consultants will be in attendance.

The OCP is the document which provides policies for future development in the district.

Margaret Thornton, community planning director, said the purpose of the open house is to explain the draft and receive additional public input before an OCP bylaw is introduced to council this summer. She said while no formal presentation is planned for the open house, residents are welcome to attend and ask district staff and consultants questions about the plan.

"It's a good opportunity to talk with staff informally," said Thornton. "We'll be there mainly to listen." A public hearing on the OCP bylaw will likely be held in September. This draft includes a wide range of comments, letters and responses from the general public and council members. It also includes resolutions about eight major areas about which council sought specific input and direction from the public. Under the plan, a controversial proposed Loggers Lane to Tantalus Road connector has been deleted from the OCP and the need for further study and public consultation has been identified. Numerous other changes have also been incorporated based on public and government agency input.

"The majority of the changes have been to address legal issues and to enhance the plan," said Thornton. Those who are unable to attend the meeting and would like to submit their input should contact Thornton at 815-5000.

Cudmore charged in Cat Lake fight

By AL PRICE

Jamie Cudmore has been charged with assault causing bodily harm and further charges are being considered following a fracas at the Cat Lake forestry campsite about midnight Friday.

Const. Dan Seward said 16 Lower Mainland males were attacked and four were hospitalized.

"The attack was precipitated over accusations the campers were responsible for a minor motor vehicle accident in the campground parking lot," said Seward. "This was not the case. The campers were not responsible for the accident."

Seward said a group of suspects believed to be from the Squamish area allegedly assaulted the Lower Mainland group and damaged their campsite.

In addition to the charge against Cudmore, Seward said police are following up on other suspects and witnesses, and are appealing to the public for anyone with information to phone the detachment.

Premier Glen Clark was one of more than 50 motorcycle riders who arrived in Squamish on Sunday morning from Burnaby. Members of the B.C. Coalition of Motorcyclists held the run to raise funds for The Association of Veterans and Friends of the Mackenzie-Papineau Battalion, Canadian volunteers who fought and died in the Spanish Civil War. Clark said he joined in the ride because it is a good cause, and has promised a spot on the grounds of the Legislature to erect a monument to those who fought for democracy.

Georgetti encourages strong labor movement, slams media

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

A visit by the president of the B.C. Federation of Labour was the highlight of the newly formed Squamish and District Labour Committee's founding meeting May 20.

Ken Georgetti kicked off the evening at the Easter Seal Camp with a short speech focusing on the importance of unions in this province and how stories about the successes of union groups are not always covered well by the media.

Georgetti, who will receive the Order of British Columbia from the provincial government in June for his achievements, said he was honored to be the committee's first guest speaker and congratulated members on forming a committee.

"Without a strong, active labor movement, the quality of life doesn't improve," said Georgetti. "If we don't organize, we don't survive."

He said many systems which Canadians have grown accustomed to, including universal health care and employee benefits, were all started by the labor union movement.

He criticized the media for not reporting more about the achievements of unions and what they are all about. "I think we have to work a little harder at getting our message out. We are a significant piece of the economic puzzle in B.C."

Following Georgetti's presentation, Gordon Larkin of the Canadian Labour Congress' political action department, led the committee in adoption of a constitution, bylaws and first elections.

About 50 committee members, representing a wide range of union groups, were present to elect the executive.

Suzanne Pask of the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union was voted in as president, and Mel Drage of the Pulp Paper and Woodworkers of Canada is vice-president.

Erika O'Sullivan of the British Columbia Nurses' Union is the secretary-treasurer, and Jim Barden of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union is registrar. Paul Harrington of the Canadian Auto Workers, Donna Jones of the B.C. Government and Service Employees' Union and Judy Dyke of the United Steelworkers of America were elected as officers. Alex Miller of the Howe Sound Teachers' Association, Bill Jackson and Cecil Van Sickle of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union were elected as trustees.

Following elections, reports were given by various union representatives. Pask, who has been closely involved in organizing the committee, said she is honored to be its first president.

"It's going to be a fair bit of work, but I truly believe in the cause," she said. Pask said the organization will likely hold elections again next February during its annual general meeting. The committee will hold its next regular meeting June 17 at 7:30 p.m. in the IWA office.

Construction on the first phase of the 200-plus kilometre Sea to Sky Mountain Bike Trail will begin June 21.

"The project looks like a definite go," said Richard Kelly, vice-chair of the Sea to Sky Mountain Bike Trail Society.

"The first phase of construction focuses on the 60k section from Squamish to Whistler."

Draft guidelines designed to protect spotted owl habitat will probably never get past the draft stage. Dave Dunbar, chairman of the Canadian Spotted Owl Recovery Team, said when the Interim Management Guidelines for the Northern Spotted Owl in B.C. were leaked, timber industry representatives mounted opposition to plans to suspend timber harvest in proposed spotted owl conservation areas around Lillooet Lake.

Charity events bylaw

City gets two

Council gave first two readings to a zoning bylaw amendment regarding charity events and a public hearing on the change was scheduled for the June council meeting. The purpose of the amendment is to permit temporary charity events which are not longer than five days and conform to the zoning bylaw in the district.

Francophone

education changes

The Francophone Education Authority (FEA) is extending its jurisdiction. FEA is a B.C. school district with a mandate to provide educational services in French to students who qualify to enrol in the programme Francophone. Starting July 1, the FEA's jurisdiction will be extended to include the Howe Sound School District and the district will no longer be permitted to offer the programme. The 49 students currently enrolled in the programme Francophone will then be part of School District 93. The FEA has indicated it wants the Howe Sound School District to provide educational services for 1998/99. Removal of the Francophone students from this district is expected to reduce the school board's annual provincial funding by as much as $309,000.

Field trips approved

Trustees approved a number of field trips for Squamish students. Thirty students from Stawamus Elementary School and 10 adult supervisors are participating in a bicycle trip on the Kettle Valley Railway trail. A group of Squamish elementary school students will go rafting on the Squamish River in early June. Both Howe Sound and BSS students will be taking the West Coast Trail on Vancouver Island for week-long trips in June. Nine students from HSSS will be supervised by two adults and 15 BSS youths will be accompanied by four adult supervisors.

No council support shown for Railwoods proposal

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

A zoning amendment bylaw for a proposed housing development near trailer courts in the Mamquam Road area failed to get first two readings from council May 5.

The proposal, called the Railwoods Development, is to construct 43 townhouse units and 36 strata-titled apartment units on the site. Coun. Meg Fellowes made the motion to give first two readings to the zoning bylaw change to accommodate the development. Fellowes said this proposal seems to be the best option for the property.

Councillors Lyle Fenton and Sandra Bauer and Mayor Corinne Lonsdale voted against giving the amendment first two readings. Fenton said another trailer court would be more fitting for the site.

"I don't believe the concerns of the public have been met," he said.

Several residents living in Timbertown Estate Trailer Court and Angelo's Trailer Court and surrounding area expressed a variety of concerns about the development during a public meeting with the developer in February. These concerns include worries the development could take away from the existing neighborhood, disturb wildlife and encroach on residents' privacy.

Patrick Frewer, who addressed council on behalf of Delta-base Railwoods Development Group, said the company has purchased the site from B.C. Rail. Frewer said there is no intention to develop a trailer court.

Lonsdale said existing residents in the area are not supportive of development. She said she does not believe the proposal is in the public's best interest.

"That area has the highest density in the District of Squamish right now."

Mohammad Afsar, public works director, said there are water and sewer servicing concerns for the property due to the increased demand the development would have on these services. Afsar said the proposal would not be able to proceed without a servicing upgrade.

The development is proposed on land on the south side of Mamquam Road, between the trailer courts, and extends south to the Mamquam River dike.

The project, which would have a railway heritage theme, includes a public pedestrian trail which would follow an existing greenbelt and extends the full north-south length of the site from Mamquam Road to the dike. The plan also includes leaving a buffer of trees between neighboring trailer parks and townhouses. A child's play area is also proposed in the north-west corner of the site.

After the council meeting, Frewer said he was disappointed with the decision not to proceed with a zoning amendment, but he said the developers are not giving up on the property.

"We thought we were making good headway with the neighborhood," he said.

Frewer plans to meet with residents again to talk about the proposal and to re-apply for a zoning amendment.

"We expect we will adjust the site plan and the density."

Squamish climber rescued following tragedy

BY PATRICIA WHEELER
Whistler Question

Whistler is mourning the loss of a young resident after a climbing accident at Alaska's Mount McKinley. Daniel Raworth, 25, fell about 300 metres down a ravine around 2 p.m. May 24.

U.S. National park rangers say he was descending the West Buttress route at an elevation of almost 5,000 metres in an area called Washburn's Thumb. The ridge at that point has a sharp drop-off to the Peters Glacier, 450 metres below.

Kris Fister, of the national park service, said Raworth fell about 300 metres down that ridge. Raworth was climbing with long-time friend Jason Sinnes, 24, of Squamish. The two were not roped together at the time of the fall, and had not reached the summit. Sinnes was not injured. Raworth family friend and victims services counsellor Cathy Goddard said Sinnes, whose parents were travelling to Alaska to pick him up late last week, was obviously shaken up by the accident.

Both were experienced climbers, having scaled the granite faces around Squamish, Whistler and on Vancouver Island.

A volunteer ranger in Denali National Park, home of the 6,190-metre mountain that claimed Raworth's life, is also feared dead after falling while attempting to rescue Raworth. The missing ranger's body has not been located and his name has not yet been released, but his pack was found about six feet from Raworth's body.

Fister said inclement weather is often a problem for climbers on Mount McKinley.

Raworth's death is the first one this year on Mount McKinley, which has claimed 90 victims.

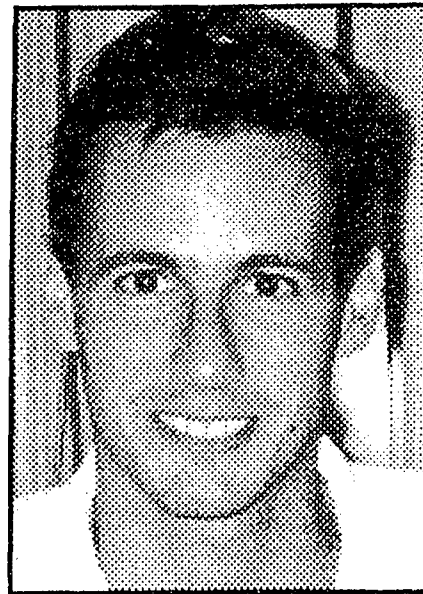

Reports indicate that at the time of Raworth's fall, winds on Mount McKinley were raging from 80 to 130 kilometres per hour, and visibility was less than seven metres. The winds and whiteouts kept volunteer rangers from reaching Raworth until about 11 p.m. Sunday. He was pronounced dead at the scene by a volunteer physician.

As of early Wednesday, poor weather conditions had also prevented rescuers from removing Raworth's body from the area.

He was slated to return to work as a firefighter with the provincial forest service next week. Wendy Stewart, provincial fire information officer with the B.C. Forest Service, said Raworth was well-liked among his colleagues and their condolences go out to his family.

"This would have been his third summer as what we call an initial attack firefighter," Stewart said.

"He would have been a member of a three-person crew and these are the firefighters who really do such a great job for us ... they respond to those first fire calls ... they are the first on the scene." Stewart said the fire crews are part of a "closely-knit family" of staff.

"He was known to our staff as a very quiet, very pleasant gentleman. He was a military veteran and had done a stint in Bosnia. He was very, very quiet and was well-liked by staff and was a valued member of our staff," she said. "We will miss him and we want his family to know how important he was to us here."

Boundaries commission not likely to change West Vancouver-Garibaldi riding

BY PAUL ANDREW
Whistler Question

During at least the last 10 years, or between 1986 and 1996, the area comprising the electoral boundaries in which Squamish and Whistler are included has increased its population by at least 42 per cent.

Other areas, such as Surrey-Newton, have grown by 100 per cent, and still others have dropped in population dramatically—hence the need for an independent review of the electoral boundaries of British Columbia.

The boundaries commission, which began its work a few weeks ago and held its first formal meeting in Victoria on April 21, has until December to submit its final recommendations. The boundaries are reassessed every two provincial elections.

"If the premier called an election tomorrow, we wouldn't be ready," said Norman Stowe, communications coordinator for the commission, one of three staff members working on the project along side retired Appeal Court Justice Josiah Wood of Vancouver, Anglican priest and lawyer Katherine Hough from Nelson, B.C. and chief electoral officer Robert Patterson. "We can't control when the premier will call an election. But if the next election is June of 1999 then the report will be ready."

"What (the commission) is doing now is going around to the communities to hear from elected officials and the public. Some of the electoral boundaries are well above the 50,000 constituency average and some are well below. In your case, you are at around 47,000, which is almost bang on," Stowe said. "And the area of West Vancouver-Garibaldi is just as big as Prince Edward Island."

On the other hand, the area comprising the Yale-Lillooet electoral boundary is 30,000 square kilometres and has 37,000 people inhabiting the area, according to the 1996 census.

Increasing or reducing the area of a riding is the only way boundaries' commissioners can even out provincial numbers in time for the next election. But Stowe says when the area includes some 200,000 square kilometres, like the Bulkley Valley-Stikine riding, that would mean increasing the area by another 20,000 square kilometres, making the area tough to cover for campaigning politicians.

"You also have to wonder if the MLA can do the job. So some of the higher ridings like Surrey-Newton, at this point, are way too high and there will be some adjustments there because of the rapid growth."

The population of B.C. has grown by at least 835,000 since 1986, bringing the total to around 3.7 million. Based on the 75 electoral boundaries, each riding should have about 49,600 constituents.

Stowe said variances of 25 per cent above or below the provincial average will most likely be adjusted by the commission. He says in a geographical area the size of B.C., which equals the size of Western Europe, constant changes in population are common.

During the next five months, the commission will visit 40 communities in B.C. to determine any new boundaries. The closest stop to Squamish will be July 22 in North Vancouver.

If you wish to become involved in the electoral boundary review, which is due in June of 1999, contact the following address: B.C. Electoral Boundaries Commission, Suite 6-1818 Cornwall Ave, Vancouver B.C., V6J 1C7 or call 660-6390.

Forestry jobs promised as part of new agreement

CONTRIBUTED TO
The Chief

Western Forest Products (WFP) Ltd. and Forest Renewal B.C. recently signed a five-year funding agreement totalling nearly $60 million for the Pacific and Skeena regions. Under the agreement, the WFP's forest tenure area in the Squamish region will see multi-year funding of $1,038,623 and annual funding of $507,664. About 125 jobs are expected to be created due to the agreement in rural coastal communities in 1998 and 1999. The agreement is part of WFP's forest stewardship program and it assures five years of funding to create new silviculture jobs, undertaking forest training projects with First Nations, continued watershed restoration, and completion of inventory and research.

Under the terms of the agreement, almost $27 million will be spent on restoring watersheds and $22 million on silviculture and forest management. Improving forest inventories and research will be covered by the remaining funding. Other forest districts which will benefit from the deal are Chilliwack, Sunshine Coast, South Island, Campbell River, Port McNeill, Mid-Coast, Queen Charlotte Islands, Kitimat and North Coast.

District evaluates possible expansion of landfill site

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

The District of Squamish is conducting a seismic survey at the municipal landfill to determine whether or not the facility's life can be extended past 1999. The municipality is considering expanding the site's boundaries.

Council members and district staff met with representatives of Piteau Associates Engineering Ltd. and Andrew Reeder, the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District's manager of utilities and community services, May 12 to form a committee of the whole meeting to discuss possibilities for the landfill.

Andrew Holmes of Piteau Associates outlined a landfill hydrogeological assessment and closure plan which the company recently submitted to the district.

The report recommends the landfill, nearly 10 hectares in size, continue operating until 2008, when the maximum capacity is expected to be reached. The report suggests increasing landfill disposal fees to at least $55 per tonne to cover the predicted operating, closure and post-closure costs.

"You should certainly maximize use of the site," said Holmes.

The study also recommends a well monitoring program which is currently under way at the landfill be continued, and expansion of the network of wells. A seismic survey is required in order to determine monitoring well sites.

Council approved a motion May 19 to authorize the survey.

Decision about whether or not to expand the boundaries would be made over the next few years, after data is analyzed and groundwater impacts are better determined.

Mohammad Afsar, public works director, said while the SLRD's solid waste management plan calls for landfills in the corridor to be closed by 1999, the cost of closure is not affordable at this time. The District of Squamish has been looking at extending the life of the site and Piteau Associates has been conducting field tests to assess leachate and to determine the feasibility of the idea.

Piteau's study found there is no significant runoff from the landfill and all leachate generated from the site, which is located on a groundwater flow divide, seeps down to the water table. Water beneath the site eventually discharges into the Squamish and Cheekye rivers. Holmes said there is only minor impact on groundwater quality near the landfill's boundaries, largely due to heavy rainfall which dilutes leachate. Small concentrations of ammonia, chloride and nitrate have been found.

"There are no significant indications of leachate impact on water quality," he said.

Piteau's report suggests the district could consider expanding the boundary to the east, if tenure could be obtained for a piece of property about 4 1/2 hectares in size. This land is currently part of a woodlot licence.

The ultimate capacity of the landfill as it currently exists is about 94,500 tonnes of waste, or about 10 more years. If the boundary expansion occurs, the capacity could be increased to about 326,000 tonnes which would service the district until about 2029.

Grant-in-aid requests on the rise

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Squamish council recently approved a total of $408,000 in grants-in-aid to various community groups in need of financial support.

Council debated which grants to authorize during budgetary meetings in April and the figures were approved May 5.

Anema, district treasurer, said more requests were being received this year due to tougher economic times and increased demand for services in the community. Not all of the requests were able to be accommodated and in many cases, groups only received a portion of what they requested.

Council was pretty challenged to deal with grants-in-aid," he said. "We are getting more requests now than we used to in terms of the number of the organizations that have requested."

Anema said the library request was the most difficult one to deal with. The Squamish Public Library Association was hoping to see a grant of $428,500, but council authorized $368,500.

"With a new facility there are new expenditures, new requirements for staffing...and yet council had to balance that off with a tax bill and with all the other requests for funding."

Other grants approved this year were $2,700 for the Alano Club, $2,000 for the Girls Guides of Canada, $5,000 for the Squamish Food Bank Society, $1,000 for the Tantalus Seniors Centre Society, $5,000 for the Squamish Volunteer Centre Society, $1,926 for the Howe Sound Secondary dry grad, $6,132 for the Squamish Days Loggers Sports Association, $1,000 for the Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Squamish, $10,000 for the Squamish Valley SPCA, $500 for the Squamish Adventure Festival, and $2,500 for the Squamish Branch 70 Senior Citizens' Association.

In 1997, the district paid out a total of $347,000 in grants-in-aid to various groups.

Wilderness lodge planned for Callaghan Valley

By GRACE CHADSEY
Whistler Question

Mad River Nordic Centre, which operates a Nordic ski centre in the Callaghan Valley just south of Whistler, is planning to build a commercial wilderness lodge to accommodate 24 people near Conflict Lake in the Callaghan, pending official approval from the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District.

The SLRD, at its April 27 meeting in Pemberton, supported a recommendation from Bob MacPherson, manager of planning and development, to give SLRD staff the go-ahead to prepare the necessary bylaws to permit the use of Crown land for the lodge.

The bylaws will be written to allow SLRD rezoning of the land in question from rural to low intensity commercial use. Once those bylaws are approved by the SLRD, a process that can take six to eight months and includes a public hearing, Mad River will be able to begin construction.

Mad River Nordic has been operating in the Callaghan Valley since 1982. In his report to the board, MacPherson said Mad River Nordic's site, just south of Whistler, "has offered a Nordic skiing experience that is not available elsewhere in the area."

Brad Sills, a principal of Mad River Nordic, said Mad River currently operates a small cabin capable of sleeping 12 overnight guests. The plan is to build an extension onto this cabin.

"We hope with this rezoning application that by this time next year we will have a bigger facility completed," Sills said. He said "24 is the minimum number of people you can have" in order to sustain a caretaker at the site.

This type of back country experience, Sills said, is something the West Coast has not had to date. A number of similar back-country facilities have operated in the Rockies since about the turn of the century.

The Mad River project will be a full-service wilderness lodge.

People will be able to participate in their chosen activity for the day, then have a bed and meal waiting for them.

The Nordic centre has already held Crown land tenures in the area allowing backcountry Nordic use for about 15 years. Although the centre did apply to the province to update its tenure under the Commercial Backcountry Recreation Policy (CRB) in February 1997, the province did not tell the SLRD about the application until February 1998, when they were prepared to make an offer to the Nordic centre. B.C. adopted the CRB in 1995.

The policy sets out principles for allowing commercial tenures on Crown lands. The SLRD must give approval for the lodge since it is the zoning jurisdiction for that land.

MacPherson, to keep the application moving along, gave the Ministry of Crown Lands permission to issue tenure subject to Mad River obtaining approval for the commercial lodge from the SLRD.

On April 1, Mad River applied to the SLRD to rezone the lands near Conflict Lake to allow for a lodge to accommodate up to 24 guests.

Most lodge users will come from winter activities, mostly Nordic skiing, but also snowmobiling and snowshoeing. Mad River also plans to use the lodge in the summer, offering semi-wilderness experiences.

The proposed site is at an elevation of 1,366 metres, with average snowfall in the area about 275 centimetres. The proposed lodge is to be 100 metres from Conflict Lake, with other facilities on the site to include a helicopter-landing pad and water sports shed. Conflict Lake is the proposed water source. As well, an on-site generator will provide power, with sewage disposal to be in a septic field draining away from Conflict Lake.

Mad River offers 81 kilometres of Nordic skiing on more than 5,000 hectares in a semi-wilderness environment. The Resort Municipality of Whistler offers the only other maintained Nordic site, at Lost Lake Park, in the Whistler area.

POLICE BLOTTER

Suspended drivers face second impaired charges

For the second weekend in a row, an RCMP CounterAttack roadcheck has resulted in the arrest of an impaired driver who was already suspended from driving while awaiting trial on outstanding drinking and driving charge. Cpl. Gary Brine said police checked a car driven by a Squamish woman at a roadcheck on Bailey St. in the downtown area at 2:20 p.m. May 23. She was found to be currently serving a three-month suspension while facing trial on a recent impaired driving charge. Brine said the woman had been drinking and was brought back to the detachment for a breathalyzer test.

"She refused to take the test and has been charged with impaired driving, refusing a breath demand and driving while prohibited," Brine said. "The car she was driving, which belonged to a friend, was impounded for the mandatory 30 days."

At a roadcheck in Whistler May 18, a Pemberton man was found driving while serving a similar suspension. He was also impaired and found to be over the legal limit. He is now facing new charges and also had his car impounded.

"We would like to remind all motorists that an extended CounterAttack campaign has begun and they can expect to come upon roadchecks — anytime and anywhere — in the Sea to Sky corridor," said Brine. "Both of these drivers were stopped at roadchecks on side roads, where drivers may not have seen such checks in the past. If the last two weekends are any indication, these areas will be getting a lot more attention."

Squamish RCMP were called to a Newport Road residence at 7:45 p.m. May 25 and found a Squamish man present. He was under a court order at the time to not be in contact with the two people who resided at the residence. The man was arrested and appeared in Squamish Provincial Court the next day, where he pled guilty and was sentenced to 21 days in jail.

Police are investigating a case of break, enter and vandalism at the works yard building in Britannia Beach. The incident occurred between May 20-26, and the vandals caused about $300 in damage.

Thieves broke into a Judd Road residence May 26 and made off with several pieces of jewelry. Entry is believed to have been gained through an unlocked door.

Some time on May 24, thieves entered an unlocked vehicle parked on Sixth Avenue downtown and stole a large number of CDs.

At 6:15 p.m. Saturday, May 23, a Squamish woman standing in the parking lot near Save-On-Foods was confronted by a young man who grabbed her purse. Although she initially resisted, the woman realized that her safety was in jeopardy and let go of her purse.

"The man had his arm raised and his fist closed," said Const. Fran Bethell. "She felt the man was going to hit her."

The suspect then jumped into a car driven by another male, and fled the parking lot. A witness to the incident followed the suspect's car for a short distance, when the woman's purse was thrown out the window of the fleeing car. The person gathered up the purse and contents from the street, and turned them over to police. Several items were missing from the purse.

Police later recovered a car they believe was driven by the culprits, behind a downtown business. They are seeking two Caucasian males believed to be in their late 20s. The main suspect had a cast on his right wrist-forearm.

Bethell said the culprits were "pretty bold" to snatch a purse in broad daylight in a busy area downtown.

Squamish RCMP were called to a head-on collision at 1:37 p.m. May 24 near the salt sheds, north of the Cheakamus Canyon.

A southbound rental car driven by a visitor from England apparently passed on a double solid line and collided with a northbound car driven by a Whistler resident. Three people suffered minor injuries, and the damage to both vehicles was estimated to be in excess of $8,000. The British driver was charged for attempting an illegal pass.

Staff at the Garibaldi Highlands Post office reported a theft of about $1,000 in stamps on May 25. Bethell said staff noticed a man hanging around the area, and upon returning from the back of the facility saw the man running. They then noticed a large quantity of books of stamps was missing.

"We want to hear about it if people are pedaling stamps in town," said Bethell. Police are looking for a Caucasian man in his 20s, and the incident is still under investigation.

First Nations and Interfor sign agreement

BY GRACE CHADSEY
Whistler Question

International Forest Products Limited (Interfor) and the Coast Mountain Development Council signed a joint agreement Thursday which will improve opportunities for forest resource management in the traditional territories of the In-SHUCK-ch and N'Quat'qua people.

An Interfor press release states that the agreement recognizes First Nations will have increased access to timber resources under existing provincial policy and through land and resource ownership from treaty.

The agreement also recognizes that Interfor will continue to be a significant presence in the territories, now and post-treaty. The agreement sets out the framework for a joint work plan to take effect Jan. 1, 1999.

Interfor's operations manager Dave Miller, said in the release, "this is a win-win situation. Together we'll be pursuing opportunities that will benefit everyone."

Some areas covered in the agreement are joint venture timber sales and FRBC cooperative programs, forest planning and training band members in forest management.

Coast Mountain Development Council (CMDC) is the economic development arm of the In-SHUCK-ch N'Quat'qua who are well-advanced in treaty negotiations.

The In-SHUCK-ch N'Quat'qua have more than 1,000 members with communities at D'Arcy and the lower Lillooet River valley.

Gerard Peters, CMDC president, said in the release, "It is indeed win-win. We already have a long-standing cooperative relationship with Interfor. The agreement simply formalizes it."

Peters said he hopes to approach other forest companies operating in the traditional territories for similar agreements. "After all, we're going to be neighbours for a good long time. We should build relationships based on this simple fact, in everybody's best interest."

Grads have many options

There will be a lot of excitement and perhaps some trepidation Friday night as about 183 Grade 12 students at Howe Sound Secondary School don caps and gowns for their graduation ceremony at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre.

There will be excitement at having completed the first 12 years of school, and trepidation at having to make major lifestyle decision either going on to post-secondary education or attempting to find a place in the workforce.

In many ways, the real world outside the protective halls of public school is not as bad as it's made out to be. But in other ways, it's worse.

In the not too distant past, high school graduation meant being able to choose from a variety of available jobs. That is no longer the case. The unemployment rate is high, and passing from Grade 12, unless you have connections through family and friends or have already established a solid work history, means only that you might find a job flipping burgers alongside some university grads.

But at the same time, grads of today have many more options than those of a few short years ago. The burgeoning world of computers never has enough talented workers. And between universities, colleges and technical schools, there are many more career paths being offered. Friday night's graduates will be going off in all kinds of new directions, and many of them will not see each other again, except perhaps at class reunions. Some will stay in Squamish while others will spread out to the distant corners of the world.

Regardless of where they end up, we encourage them to get involved in the communities in which they live. Many students in this year's grad class have already become deeply involved in the community, and have made Squamish a better place to live.

It only makes sense. Our young people are not limited when it comes to using their imagination. They have not yet had their dreams and hopes snuffed out by cynicism. They have fresh ideas, and the ability to explore their dreams. They can change the world as they know it, and reap the benefits for much longer than those of us who are considerably older.

Take the case of Paul Lalli. Not too far removed from high school, he ran for council and was elected. While awaiting his rightful position as prime minister in a new and dynamic Conservative party, he has contributed a new perspective to council. And he is giving back to the community which has treated him well through his young and promising life.

Our congratulations and best wishes to all the grads, and their families who have seen them through the past 12 years. For this weekend, all we ask is that you use the common sense and knowledge you have developed over the last 12 years to ensure a safe and happy graduation.

Hosts needed for Up With People

As you read this, a two-member advance team from Up With People will be arriving in Squamish to begin promotion efforts and look for billets for the 140 cast members. The advance team also needs host families from June 2-28, which are asked to provide a place to sleep and some meals. They will have their own transportation.

Cast members come from more than 20 different countries. As well as learning about Squamish while they are here, they will be able to share with host families some of their own culture and experiences.

Host families receive complimentary tickets to wone of two performances of The Festival on June 26 and June 27 at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre.

Up With People, which has been home to Squamish's Sarah Finnie for the better part of the past year, is an international learning program which provides youth the opportunity for personal and professional growth through the unique combination of travel, performing arts, community Service and home stays.

Two years ago, the Up With People group which visited Squamish completed a number of community service projects, including the multi-cultural mural on the Second Avenue side of Home Hardware. Up With People is a high energy group of young people who do extremely positive things wherever they go. We encourage as many people as possible to get involved by becoming host families.

For more information or to host the advance team, please call Kristie Clark at 1 800 444-5161 extension 7427.

Freedom to criticize

A situation at the Nanaimo RCMP detachment has raised some intriguing questions about freedom of speech.

Last week, two Nanaimo constables were found guilty by Judge Robert Higinbotham of assaulting a prisoner. They had earlier been cleared of any wrongdoing after an internal RCMP review done by the Nanaimo detachment.

Upon learning of the court's decision, Superintendent Bud Bechtholt criticized the judge, saying he was appalled at the decision. The next day, Judge Robert Metzger, B.C.'s chief provincial court judge, slammed Bechtholt, saying his comments were out of line. But were they?

Metzger said he has talked to the assistant deputy attorney-general, who is now looking into a variety of courses of action to discipline Bechtholt.

RCMP media liaison officer Const. Russ Grabb said the force has a policy of not criticizing other agencies, including the justice system. Metzger said he welcomes public comment on the judicial system, including criticism, but not from police officers because they are an arm of the justice system and must therefore be unbiased and impartial.

That might be fine if all police officers were robots, but they aren't. Unlike a few years ago when RCMP officers were transferred every two or three years, police can now serve for many years in the same community. They put down roots, build friendships, and develop intimate relationships in the communities in which they serve. They are also — shock and dismay — human beings.

I have no argument with the notion that police are part of the justice system. They are, in fact, its front line.

But they are only a portion of the system, which also includes Crown prosecutors and judges. I have seen cases in which police bust their butts to solve crimes, gather evidence and present it to Crown counsel, only to have the Crown decide there is not enough evidence to warrant a charge. I understand the Crown doesn't want to further clog the courts with cases that might not be successful.

But more to the point, I have sat in court covering cases in which the judge has just savaged a police officer giving testimony. Even here in Squamish, judges have been highly critical of officers in an extremely personal manner, not at all related to the testimony they are giving.

Al Price

AS I SEE IT

If judges can do that, they should certainly not set themselves up as being above criticism in return.

In the Nanaimo case, perhaps Bechtholt's biggest mistake was not vocalizing his displeasure with the judgment, but having conducted the investigation into his own officers himself. It is natural that the commanding officer would want to know the full details of the activity of his subordinates. But in such cases, the perception of police officers protecting their own cannot help but arise.

No doubt Bechtholt will be punished in some way, but I don't think that is warranted. Police must have higher standards, to be sure.

But in this case, I think the superintendent was simply vocalizing a dissatisfaction with the legal system, which we all have done from time to time. If that's a crime, we should all be in jail.

Premier supports sustainable development

Received by The Chief for publication:

Rob Kirkham, President
Chamber of Commerce
Dear Rob Kirkham,

The premier's office has asked me to reply directly to your letter of April 14, regarding the proposed Garibaldi at Squamish project.

I have been asked to note that the premier supports economic development initiatives. In the province of British Columbia which can be shown to be sustainable. It is for this reason that major projects which are proposed in the province are required to undergo an environmental assessment to ensure that all concerns are identified, and to determine whether, and to what extent, they can be prevented or mitigated. An environmental assessment of the Garibaldi at Squamish project is currently under way, pursuant to the Environmental Assessment Act, and this process places a heavy emphasis on public input. Following completion of this review, the project committee will make recommendations to the Minister of Environment, Lands and Parks and the Minister of Employment and Investment with respect to the sustainability and overall acceptability of the project.

I encourage you to take advantage of further opportunities for public involvement as this environmental assessment proceeds. The premier thanks you for bringing your views to his attention.

Steps to escape violence

Editor,

We live in a society today where one in two Canadian women experience at least one incident of male violence against them by the age of 16. A sad and startling statistic.

It isn't as simple as saying: "Well, it won't happen to me, I'm too strong for that," because though we want to, we don't get to pick whom it happens to. But you can decide that if it does ever happen to you, you will go to someone for help.

Only 14 per cent of all incidents are reported. One in five women go to no one for help, not friends nor family.

A total of 77 per cent of women experience violence by someone who is known to them. That means the other 23 per cent were just in the wrong place at the wrong time.

But that 77 per cent (which could be you) doesn't know what to do because your attacker is someone you love.

Please understand that you are obligated to protect your family.

But you are also obligated to turn in someone who is hurting you.

Trust your instincts. If something feels wrong and you are being emotionally, physically, or sexually abused, seek help.

And if your situation has become dangerous follow these steps:

Pack a bag with:

Spare keys to the car.

Money/credit card duplicates.

Labor Code changes protect legitimate contractors

Editor,

Does anyone out there wonder why Gordon Campbell and the Liberals keep harping on "sectoral bargaining" and the proposed changes to the Labor Code?

Last year, in response to Bill 44, the Liberals and their business backers focused all of their anti-union rhetoric on the issue of sectoral bargaining. In response, the provincial government set up the Construction Industry Review Panel.

The panel did not recommend sectoral bargaining changes to the code, but it does not appear that the Liberals have been able to adjust their fear-mongering campaign.

The panel did recommend that the open shop contractors confirm their contracts through democratic votes, freely negotiated with their workers, and registered at the Labor Board.

Since Bill 19, brought in by the Socred government of Bill Vander Zalm (now Liberals), the anti-union forces have reigned ruthlessly. Workers suffer the results with intimidation of job security, refusals to pay earned wages and overtime, unsafe workplaces, or no WCB or EI to fall back on because they are being paid cash under the table. Are these the kind of employers that we should be protecting?

The contractors and employers that Gordon Campbell is speaking for have been the very forces that have driven the British Columbia economy and the construction industry into the underground economy. Is it any wonder that they should be concerned that the Labor Code proposals may result in the non-union and open shop contractors having to actually adjust their bids to reflect the real "above ground" economy?

It is no wonder that Gordon

Campbell would have the public believe that sectoral bargaining is still an issue. Mr. Campbell and the Liberals are attempting to divert public attention away from the real problems that exist in the construction industry.

The proposed changes to the Labor Code will help to protect those contractors who legitimately bid projects and treat their employees with dignity.

Watch for a work site petition campaign to be launched in June.

Riders bring joy to two kids facing a lifetime of struggles

Editor,
the past week we have learned just how it is to live in a small town. The Squamish Off-road Cycling Association on a toonie mountain bike race last week. The race was to raise money to help a girl with cerebral palsy in this town get a special bike. The support from locals coming out to bike and be a part of the barbecue and raffle draw is amazing. They helped raise enough money to get this girl her bike. We'd been into the Tantalus Bike Shop and talking with Alan and Trent recently, with my son Alex, who has spina bifida and struggles on a bike with training wheels. Alan and Trent had shown us the alloy cat tandem bike attachment which hooks onto the back of a regular bike and allows a child to pedal on their own and be able to go on mountain bike trails.

tain bike trails.

Alex was quite excited, trying it in the shop. Upon our next visit to the shop, Alan told us he would like to do another toonie fund raiser in the summer to raise the money to get Alex that tandem bike attachment.

On visiting Tantalus Bike Shop after last week's toonie race, Alan and Trent told us the money raised was more than they needed for the little girl and that we could go home with the bike today.

I don't know if this small town of bikers has any idea how much joy they have brought to two kids in Squamish who will always have a lifetime of struggles, the smiles on their faces say it all.

Thanks to Alan and Trent at Tantalus Bike Shop and to SORCA and all the participants in the race.

Grad rules disappointing for students, limo owner

Editor,
"Hey mom, guess what? This year for our grad party we're taking a boat cruise from Squamish to Vancouver. Then from there we are picked up by bus to return to our after-grad party in Squamish. It would be real cool if my friends and I could come back up by limousine and arrive to the party in style."
"I don't see why not, daughter. Let me call the limousine service and reserve one for you as a graduation send off."
"Thanks, mom. You're the best."
Sometime later...
"Mom, the grad committee has informed us that we're not allowed to take any alternate transportation back to Squamish."
"Don't worry daughter, 'I'll give them a release letter, as I'm sure they are concerned about liability.'"
Sometime later...
"Daughter, this is the situation. The grad committee has informed me that a release letter is not acceptable unless you and friends are willing to forego the after-grad party."

"That's okay, mom, we'd still like to use the limousine and we'll skip the after-grad party and just come home."

Sometime later...

"Well daughter, I have some bad news. Upon talking to the grad committee again, it seems they have changed their minds. If you wish to use the limousine you and friends will be banned from all activities that night, including the boat cruise."

Mother cancelled the limousine and all monies were cheerfully refunded. The above dialogue may not be totally accurate but this story really happened. We have ended up with an upset mother and three very disappointed grad students. Whose grad is this?

Support for self-determination in Britannia much appreciated

Editor,
I'd like to extend my thanks to both the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District and Squamish municipal council for their warm welcome and the recognition that Britannia Beach must finally have its own representative council. Britannia needs your continuing support and I would hope that everyone in the corridor can be generous enough to promote incorporation for the Beach. Otherwise the socio-economic fortunes of our village will continue to resemble that big old ore-concentrator building on the highway, or what remains of our passenger wharf by the sea. This is the reality. We don't need anybody's pity, but this issue could be the one idea that should bring everyone together for once, from Lions Bay to Pemberton.

The petition to incorporate has now been passed from the Lieutenant Governor to the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Thanks again to Mayor Corinne Lonsdale and councillors Meg Fellowes and Brent Leigh for their encouragement. Let's make it happen.

Ode to the dandelion

There is no plant in the garden (or out, for that matter) that is as respected and hated as Taraxacum officinale, or the lowly dandelion. These plants have frustrated gardeners worldwide for thousands of years, appearing without fail when spring kicks into high gear.

Gardeners, armed with all means of dandelion-destroying devices, descend on these vicious beasts popping up in flower gardens, in vegetable plots, and throughout the lawn. These plants will take hold in the most inhospitable spots and gloriously throw forth its yellow bloom to defy the gardener yet again.

I remember as a child, my mother would collect all the neighborhood children and pay them a penny for every 'dandy' with a root longer than one inch pulled.

There was also a special prize for the longest taproot pulled. Our yard would swarm with children all holding sharp tools, dreaming of cashing in.

Even with all the widespread eradication, dandelions have been slowly and steadily gaining respect as both a medicinal and culinary herb. A specialty salad seed catalogue I received this year lists no less than four different varieties of dandelions that you can deliberately plant in your garden.

Dandelions have long held a distinguished place as an herbal medicine. It is still being used today to treat diabetes and liver disease. It treats eczema, and the fresh juice is said to dissolve warts. It is regarded as one of the best herbs for building up the blood and for curing anemia. It is also prescribed as a mild laxative, as a digestive aid and as an appetite stimulant.

Young, tender leaves, called greens are extremely nutritious and taste a lot like chichory, can be added to salads or sautéed like spinach. Roots are roasted as a coffee substitute and many use the plant to make dandelion wine, which has a taste suggestive of sherry and holds a reputation as an excellent tonic for the blood.

So, as I kneel on the lawn adding a taproot my mother would be proud of, to the pile, I reflect on the usefulness of this attractive, although pesky plant. Then I see my young son, Henry, face in rapture as he slowly blows on the on-average 200 seeds from the head of the dandelion and watches them dance in the wind. And watching them land, I am somehow soothed in the guarantee of another abundant crop next year.

Many thanks to the Squamish Gardeners for the excellent time had by all who attended the David Terrant container gardening workshop. Any great gardening tips or Squamish gardening tales to tell, call Merv at 898-3407.

Screening mammography program a success

The Screening Mammography Program of B.C. saw 502 residents from May 5-22, at Squamish General Hospital. This marked the first time the service was located in the corridor.

"Although we were not surprised with the high turnout, we were very surprised that 370, or about 75 per cent of the visits, were by residents who had not had a screening mammogram before," said Brian Lines, CEO of the Community Health Council. A total of 448 residents of the Squamish area attended the clinic, seven from Britannia Beach, 32 from Whistler, and 10 from Mt. Currie.

BONNIE MAKAREWICZ/WHISTLER QUESTION

Paraplegic realtor John Ryan powers his three-wheeler as far as 60 miles per night in training for his trek across Canada next year.

Whistler realtor trains for 1999 Canada trike tour

Ryan raising funds for spinal cord research

BY AMY FENDLEY
Whistler Question

Well-known Whistler real estate agent, John Ryan, is preparing for his trike bike trek across Canada.

Ryan's tour, currently boasting the unofficial title: Disabled to Enabled Cross-Canada Tour, is scheduled to begin on May 1, 1999, from St. John's, Nfld. Ryan plans to cycle to PEI, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, then on to Quebec and southern Ontario on his way across Canada.

"In my perfect world, I will be finished in 12 weeks," said Ryan, 36. "If tendinitis sets in, it might take longer."

Ryan is a paraplegic, and will use his arms to pedal his black "Freedom Ride" 21-speed trike across 7,245 kilometres (4,500 miles) of Canada's varied terrain. His goal is to raise $5 million for Canadian spinal cord research and says that if need be, he will slow down to raise money. Rick Hanson is one of Ryan's close friends and is largely in support of Ryan's tour.

"He told me to pick a number and hopefully I will surpass it," he said.

"Five million's the goal right now."

On Nov. 11, 1994, Ryan was in a car accident on Lorimer Road in Whistler, which left him paralyzed from the waist down.

"I would love to raise money for Canadians to figure out how to get people out of wheelchairs," said Ryan. "It's not so much that I want to walk again, but I've got a lot of friends who are quads, and we are one of the top five countries in the world in terms of spinal cord research."

Currently, Ryan spends his weeknights in training for his ride. He bikes 30 to 60 miles in a night and does most of his upper body work in his home gym.

"I will train here for as long as I can. It's an incredible place to train."

His fiancée, Penny McLeod assists him in maintaining a proper diet for endurance training. However, Ryan, who has been training since last fall, feels that a professional trainer may be necessary in the near future to help him counterbalance weight.

His biggest worry is a bad break somewhere like a shoulder or elbow.

"Biking with your arms is a lot different than biking with your legs. Uphill is very difficult — it's nothing but arm power. Normally, people would just stand up going uphill and put all their weight into it."

Ryan has people involved with his effort in each province, and knows that the main thrust right now is to go after major corporate sponsors.

"There's a lot to consider," says Ryan. "I am working on a business plan right now to get sponsors. The big thing is not to have smaller companies competing with the main sponsors — it is non-competitive. But until we have a business plan, it's difficult to get sponsors. As in everything, it's money that matters — a few things to figure out, then it's home free."

Ryan is in the process of seeking a motorhome sponsor and is considering how to initially get across Canada.

He also anticipates that education will play a major role in his tour, as he plans to involve the school boards of each province.

"We're going to have a laptop with us and a digital camera, so people can just download and find us," he said. "The Internet will be one of our means of getting through in terms of public awareness. It will be easy for kids to follow the tour."

Ryan has relatives in New Brunswick, and his parents as well as a number of friends live in southern Ontario, so Toronto could be a big stop. Although, he said coming home to B.C., especially the ride to Whistler from Vancouver, will be very much anticipated.

Ryan will fund his and his crew's way across Canada and pay for all administrative costs. He will be accompanied by his fiancée Penny, and friend Tom Jackson of Spearhead Tile Contracting.

"There will be others coming out for a few weeks at a time, including my dad, my future father-in-law, friends and co-workers. There will be a minimum of five people at any given time on the road."

Ryan said making his way across Canada by his own means will be a very patriotic experience.

"I'm looking forward to meeting a lot of people, and just knowing that I'm going to be doing this for Canadians."

Also daffodils to Karen LaRiviere for your leadership, friendship and support throughout our year as leaders of the 2nd Garibaldi Pathfinders, and daffodils to Judy Gordon for a wonderful job as our treasurer and camp nurse.

Daffodils to Combined Appliance, Grizzly Bar and Grill, Squamish Valley Golf and Country Club, Garibaldi Massage Therapy, and Howe Sound Screen and Thread Ltd. for helping the Rats to a successful fund-raiser. Thank you very much. The Grizzly Bushrats.

Daffodils to the following for their generous donations to the Volunteer Centre's booth at this year's trade fair: Tennant and Company for sponsoring our booth, Howe Sound Screen and Thread for donating T-shirts with our new logo on for a free daily raffle, and Purdy's Chocolates for a three-foot box of chocolates to raffle off — and the many volunteers who helped make this event such a success. Thanks.

Armloads of daffodils to the Guiders who provide such a wonderful experience for all the Sparks, Brownies, Girl Guides and Pathfinders in Squamish. Your tireless efforts help make guiding a special part of life for these girls. A sincere thank you to each and every one of you. Guiding District Commissioner, Nancy Sotham.

Bunches of daffodils to all those who purchased a raffle ticket supporting the Squamish Valley Equestrian Association. The winner of the beachcomber hot-tub was Suzzane Raby. The winner of the oil/lube gift package donated by Coventry Motors was Ralph Becker. Congratulations. Thanks for your support.

A hot-tub full of daffodils to Doug and Diana from Clear as Crystal Pool and Spa for generously donating a large portion of their booth at the Sea to Sky Trade Fair, allowing us to sell our raffle tickets there. Special thanks to Doug for selling the largest portion of those raffle tickets. SVEA.

A riding arena full of daffodils to Coventry Motors for their generous donation of an oil/lube gift package to raffle off. We very much appreciate your support. Squamish Valley Equestrian Association.

Muscats are delicious with fresh fruit desserts

Muscat captures spring like no other wine. Its heady fragrance recalls those of so many of the flowers now in bloom. That, and the luscious flavor of the big, chubby eating grapes, hanging ripe on the vine. Few wines are so easy to understand and enjoy.

For this very reason Muscats suffer from lack of respect. Vines, to wine buffs are not supposed to taste of grapes. The delicious grapey, honeyed taste is obvious, delightful and without hidden complexities.

Such snobbery fortunately translates into affordable prices for some very good dessert wines.

The Muscat is most likely the original wine grape, from which all other varieties descend.

It's one of only two wines whose name and identity have been clearly maintained down through the ages.

Today there are over 100 varieties of Muscat grown worldwide. Most are destined for eating, and only one makes really exciting wines, the Muscat a Petits Grains (Muscat with the small berries). These berries can be crunchy green, golden yellow, pink or even brown. The vines can be either really pale and dry, fresh, rich and golden or as dark and sweet as treacle.

The finest sweet Muscats are rich without being cloyingly sweet, full of the flavors of peach and grape, orange peel, apples, honey and perfumed with those magnificent springtime flowers. Drink while young and fresh, chill before serving. They keep for a week or so in the fridge once opened. Sweet Muscats from southern France are famous. Few are offered, but the best value has to be Muscat de St.-Jean-de-Minervois (about $11 for 375 ml). This lovely little golden wine comes from southern France close to the Spanish border. The last wrinkles of the Pyrenees make this a challenging land even for vines. The village of St.-Jean-de-Minervois and its surrounding vineyards cling to a high, treeless plateau. The harsh climate produces big, strong wines. A tiny amount of the production is sweet Muscat wine.

Quady Winery in California makes two delicious Muscats, Elysium Black Muscat and Essensia Orange Muscat (about $15 for 375 ml). The Black Muscat smells of roses and tastes of black raspberries, especially when served with chocolate. The Orange Muscat is lighter, perfumed with the scent of orange blossom, apricots and peaches. It's luscious with fruit desserts.

While these wines can be dessert in themselves, they are delicious when served with fresh fruit desserts. Their exuberant fruitiness is best echoed in strawberry, raspberry or peach shortcake.

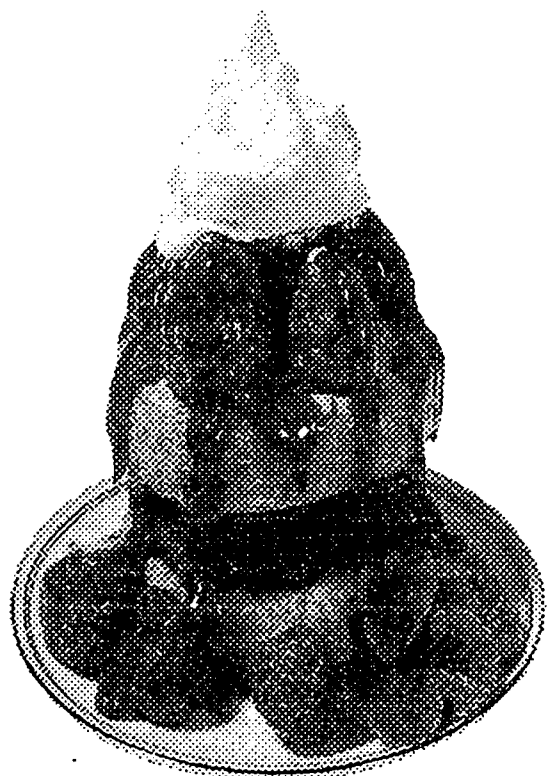

The following white cake is a great shortcake as it is neither chewy textured like an angel cake, nor does it collapse into a mush when soaked in the fruit juices.

Silver Cake

3 cups sifted cake flour
3 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
2/3 cup butter or margarine
2 cups sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup milk
5 egg whites

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Butter and flour the bottoms (not the sides) of two 9 inch round cake pans. Sift the dry ingredients together. With an electric mixer, cream the butter and add the sugar slowly, until mixture is light and fluffy. Add the vanilla. Beat the egg whites until stiff. Add the dry ingredients to the creamed mixture in 3 parts, alternately with the milk. Stir until batter is smooth after each addition. Gently fold in the beaten egg whites, taking care not to deflate them. Pour into pans and bake for about 25 minutes, until browned and springy to the touch. Cool on a rack.

To make a really impressive shortcake — slice and lightly sugar fresh, ripe strawberries or peaches, or whole raspberries. Let stand until their juices draw out and the sugar dissolves. Split each cake layer. Place one on a plate, top with fruit and juice, and a layer of whipped cream. Stack up each layer of cake, fruit and cream. Decorate the top with mounds of cream and peach slices or whole berries. Serve at once.

Skinner's culinary skills need upgrading

I went over to Skinner's place for dinner the other night, and it was truly awful.

"My mother always told me that the way to a woman's heart is through her stomach," Skinner confided.

"That may be true," I agreed while trying to chew a burnt chunk of chicken.

"But in your case you better have a stomach pump on stand-by."

Skinner, naturally, didn't think I was very funny.

"You really need cooking classes, and I think I know just the thing for you. Eclectic Kitchen offers cooking classes for the gastronomically adventurous most Tuesday and Thursday nights. Chefs Tony Minichiello and Mark Livingstone entertain as well as instruct. Just stop by the store for a schedule of upcoming classes."

For once Skinner looked as though he might take my advice.

"If you don't feel like cooking, Friday, June 5, head over to Xanthine's. Mark James Fortin and Yvonne McSkimming will croon the evening away. The following Friday, June 12 singer and songwriter Sean O'Keefe will take to the stage."

"Sound's excellent," Skinner remarked.

"Excellent sounds," I corrected.

"Speaking of excellent sounds, Thursday, June 11 is the return of Tim Brecht to the Ocean Port Hotel. He always puts on a great show."

"Don't forget the Grizzly Bar and Grill. They have Monday night karaoke and music trivia."

"Check out the wide world of sports on their seven large TVs and jumbo big screen. Wednesday's are open pool and mini-golf tournaments, plus it's a great place to unwind after a slo-pitch game."

"Don't you think there's something fundamentally wrong about watching playoff hockey in June?" Skinner asked.

"Definitely not, it should be on all year round, 24-hours a day."

"Another great place to meet after a ball game is the Shady Tree Pub. Make sure you check out their sizzling summer specials. It's where your friends are, drinking the coolest drinks in town."

"Once again, there's a lot to do in Squamish this week," Skinner observed.

"Absolutely," I agreed.

"More chicken?" he asked hopefully.

"Absolutely not," I answered truthfully.

May a bonanza for monthly bird counters

BY JIM WISNIA
Contributed to The Chief

The monthly Squamish bird count held on May 3 turned out to be a birding bonanza. It attracted 17 birders. The 76 species seen far surpassed the old record of 65. Moreover, it yielded yet another new species for the local checklist (Swainson's Hawk), bringing the total of species ever recorded in the estuary to 209.

Just like the long-billed curlew seen on the April count, the Swainson's Hawk could easily have been missed had it not flown directly over the heads of the birders along the old downtown dike. Fortunately, Max Gotz from Whistler recognized the up-tilted wings and color patterns more characteristic of Swainson's than the red-tailed hawk.

Another "good" bird seen was a western kingbird, the second one ever spotted here and the first spring record. There were also first spring records for merlin, Hammond's flycatcher, bank swallow, and pine grosbeak.

There are likely many other species that have used the estuary but have never been recorded. It is encouraging to have so many local and regional birdwatchers showing an interest in the birds of the estuary. The value of this precious habitat to birds and other life forms will be increasingly recognized as a result of this interest.

The next Squamish estuary monthly bird count will be held on Sunday, June 7, starting from McDonald's Restaurant at 7 a.m. Birders of all experience levels are welcome on this half-day event. For more information, please call Jim at 898-2000.

Leave your worries on the doorstep...

Long ago North American Native women carried baskets of reed and grasses to gather herbs and kindling and their worries. When not in use these baskets were hung beside the door so that all who entered could leave any complaints in the basket as it was considered poor manners to bring your woes to your neighbor. These burden baskets, as they were called, were guardians of privacy. They encouraged people to reach for inner strength and wisdom to find solutions to their own problems. The basket can also be used to carry wonderful, happy thoughts that create a peaceful environment for yourself. The basket can also be visualized, and if your personal burdens seem too heavy and overwhelming, use your visual thoughts to place them in the basket. Often we forget to see that we all have choice in what we want to carry with us and what we need to cast aside. We all need a basket at some time in our lives to handle our burdens, but using your basket daily to gather positive things can be a powerful tool in creating the lives we want.

ICBC statistics show crash rate declining this year

According to ICBC claims statistics, the crash rate in B.C. continues to decline.

In the first four months of 1998, there were 12,097 fewer claims compared to the same period of 1997, a modest 3.6-per cent overall drop.

Injury claims are also lower. The 16,221 injuries recorded by ICBC to the end of last month were 742 fewer than 1997's total to the end of April and 1,683 lower than in 1996.

Fatalities increased to 119 for 1998 compared to 115 for the same period of 1997 — still lower, however, than 1995 (141) and 1996 (148).

"We are pleased to see the drop in crash rates from 1997 continue into 1998," said ICBC president and CEO Thom

Thompson in a press release.

"As would all British Columbians, we would have preferred that the number of fatalities decreased in line with the other claims. However, the rash of fatalities in April is a reminder that we need to continue to increase our Road Sense to reduce crashes, save lives and keep auto insurance rates affordable."

Thompson says the fact that B.C.'s injury toll and overall number of crashes continues to fall strongly suggests that the provincial government's road safety programs are having a positive effect.

"We intend to focus our energies on maintaining this momentum throughout 1998. Ultimately, however, it's up to every B.C. motorist to keep this current trend alive."

McCarthy stresses importance of good promotion

It was an exciting week at the Chamber of Commerce. On May 19, Grace McCarthy addressed the members of the Chamber of Commerce Serving Squamish, Britannia Beach and Furry Creek. She emphasized the importance of effective promotion on the Internet.

Rob Kirkham

CHAMBER NEWS

The chamber has a web site under construction which will be completed by mid-June. Web traffic is growing by 1.3 per cent per day. The World Wide Web has achieved 50 million users in four years, which took television 13 years and radio 38 years to achieve.

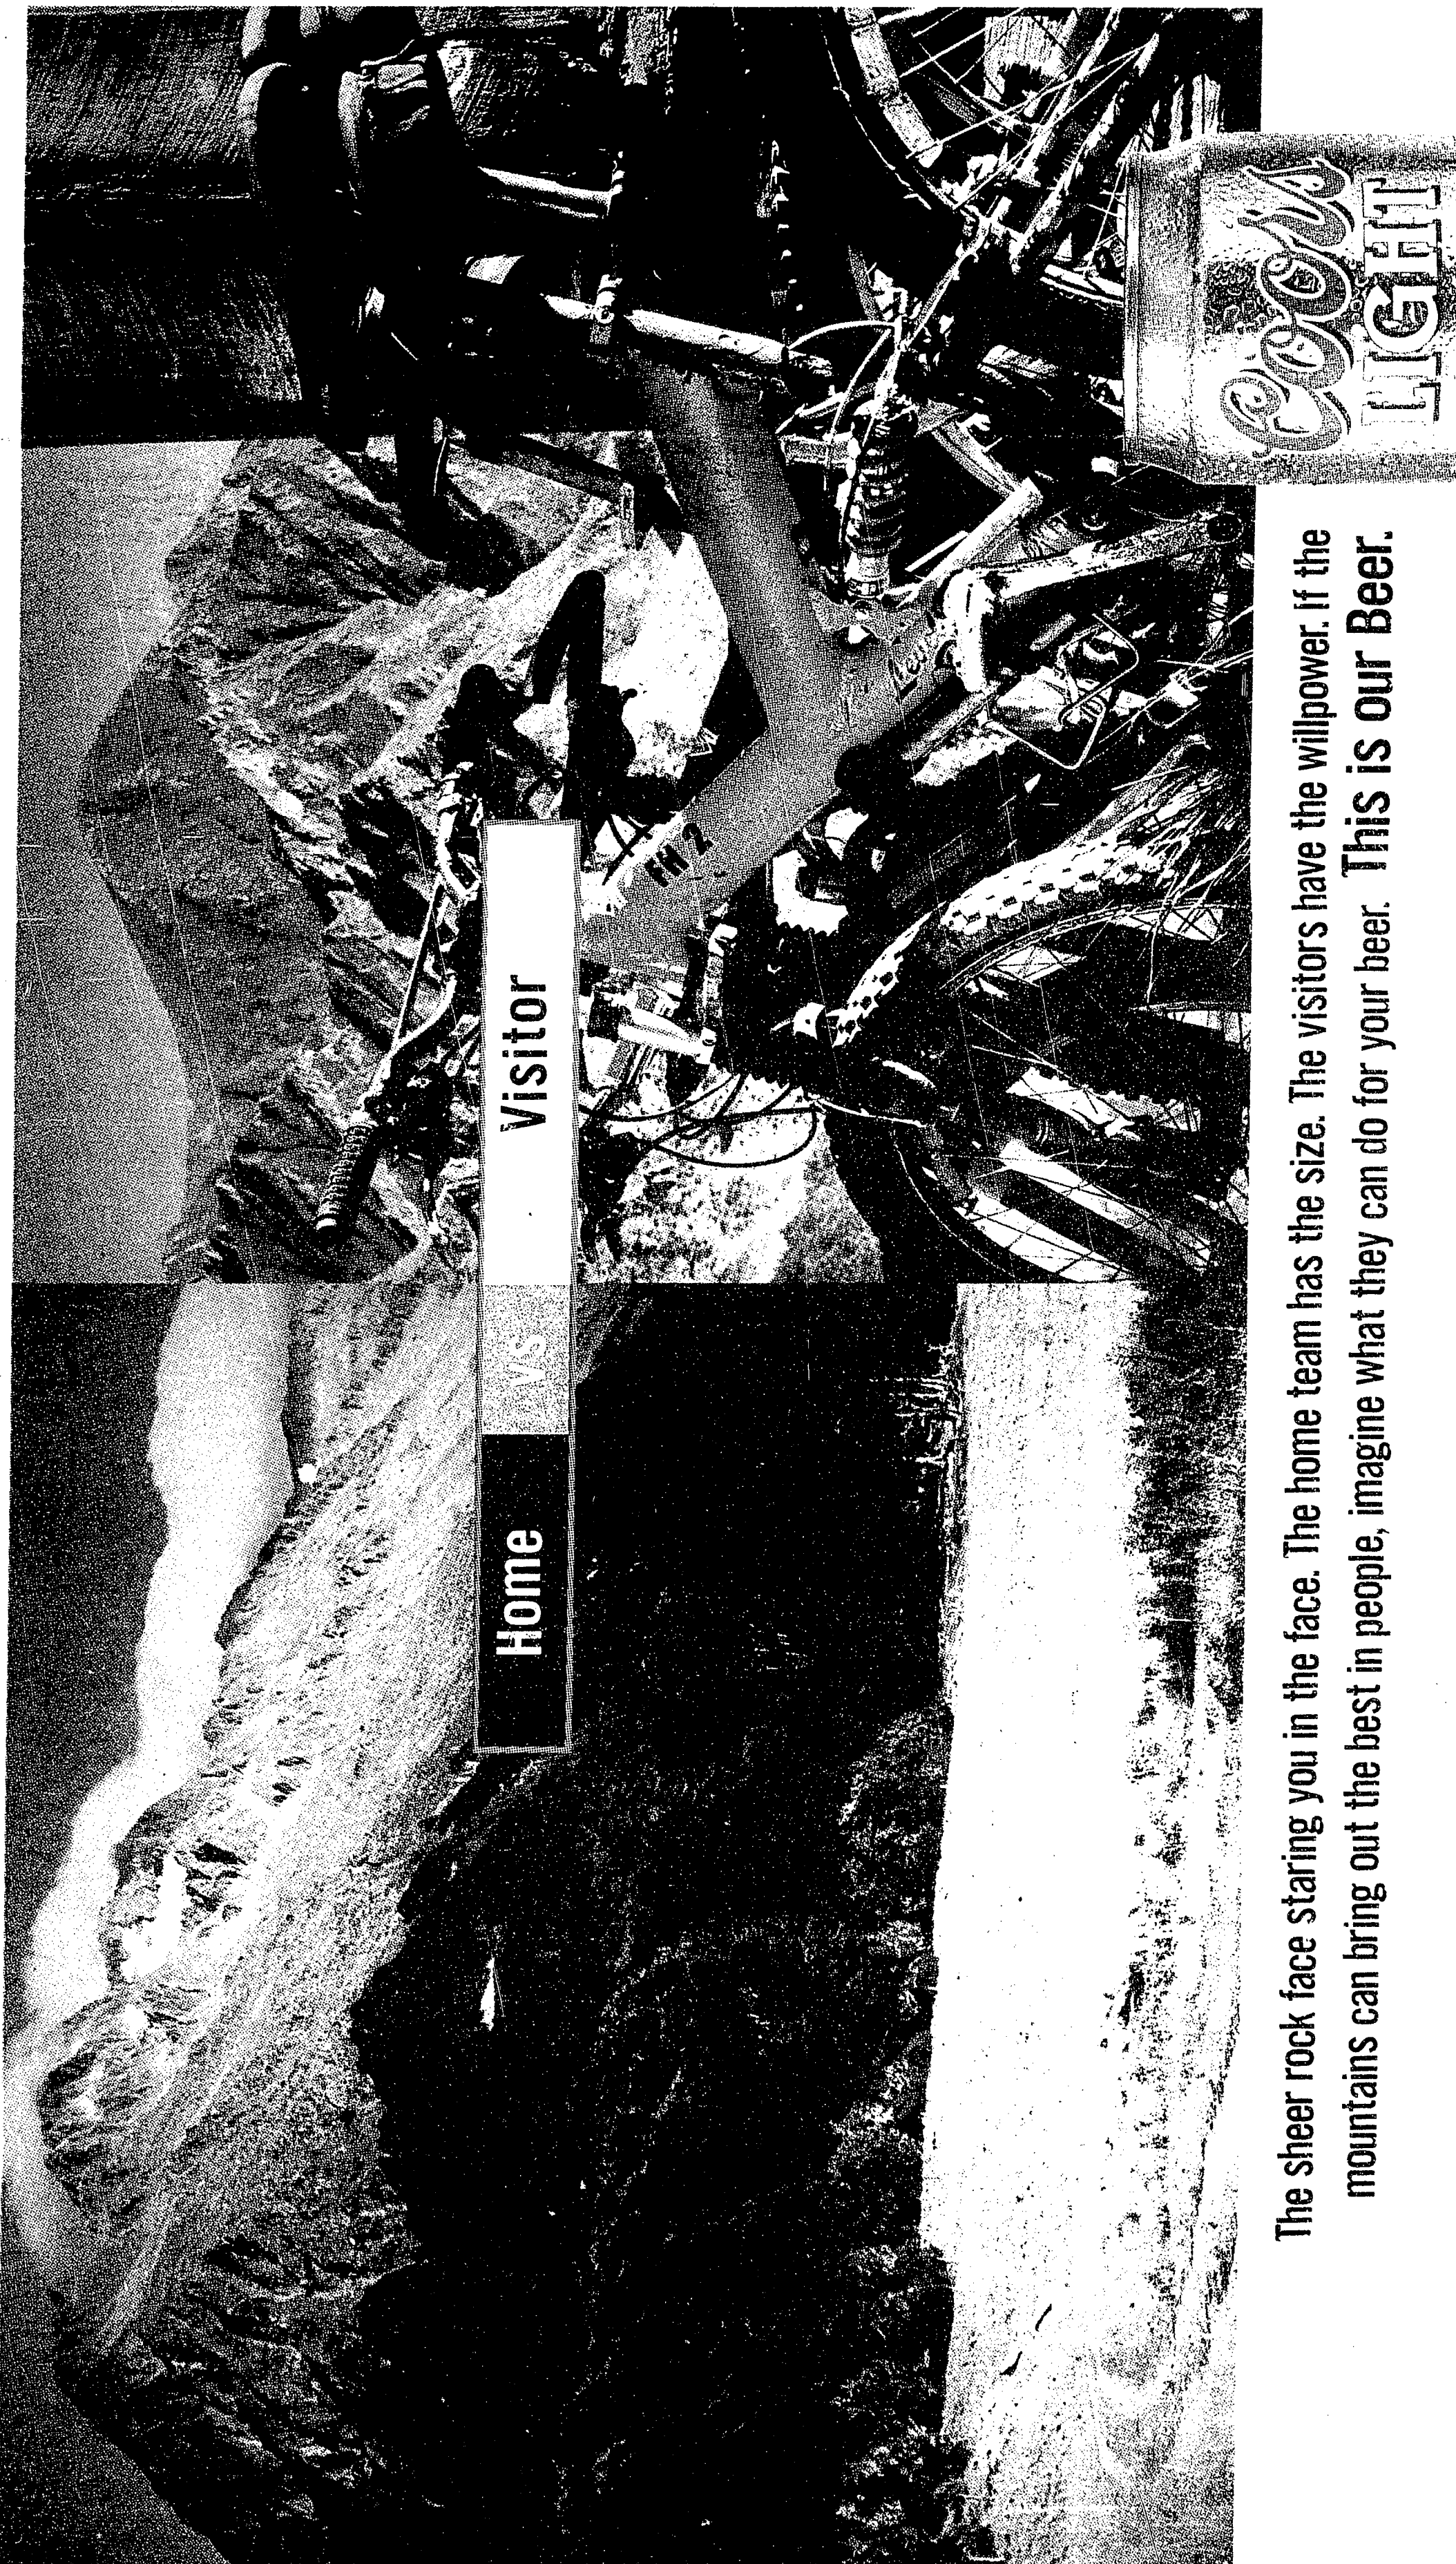

She also spoke about the Squamish-Howe Sound tourist industry and remarked: "How lucky you are. Given natural wonders, trees, growth, wild flowers, mountains, grandeur, water — spectacular, spectacular by nature."

She went on to say that "you must create value added — the experience, the ambience, the hospitality and the smiles." McCarthy is president of the B.C. CHILD (B.C. Children with Intestinal and Liver Disorders) Foundation. Every year, 100 B.C. children are being diagnosed with inflammatory bowel disorders that nobody likes to talk about. She refers to these youngsters as our "forgotten children" because this growing problem has not received the attention it deserves. The B.C. CHILD Foundation is raising funds towards an endowment in pediatric gastroenterology to help find a cure. For more information or to make a donation call (604) 736-0645.

Approximately 8,000 people attended and 130 different exhibitors participated in the 15th Annual Sea to Sky Country Trade Fair held May 22-24, making this event the largest chamber-sponsored trade show in B.C.

Many hours go into the preparation of the trade fair. The chamber is extremely appreciative of the support received from the exhibitors, businesses, local media and the community. I would like to thank everyone who helped in making this annual community event another huge success. Special thanks to the Const. Dan Seward, Dick McQuaid and the Squamish RCMP Community Patrol, who provided around the clock security; the Garden Center which provided the trees to re-create the holiday light park; Ray Saurette, Tony North and Doug Morgan (HSSS career prep student) from Squamish Fire Rescue, who provided fire extinguishers and support to the exhibitors; Miss Squamish 1997 Ambassadors and 1998 candidates for face painting; Eve Rockett for her motivational speech at the exhibitors' brunch; Squamish Emergency Program Society which provided radios; mayors Corinne Lonsdale, Cathy McCleod and Hugh O'Reilly for their auction contributions; McDonald's Restaurant, B.C. Hydro, B.C. Rail and the Squamish Public Library for providing mascots, and Canadian Springs Water for the cooler. The spirit chiefs of Duffy Lake

High in the mountains which surround Anderson Lake in the interior of British Columbia, lies a jewel-like lake. One side of this lake is dark and shadowed with steep, towering cliffs coming down to the water's edge. The other is open and sunny with meadows and flowers, and is dotted with clumps of evergreen trees.

According to the Lillooet Indians who live in that country, the lake is the home of the spirit people, and on moonlit nights they rise to the surface and sport about, singing and laughing. Chief Ne-Wah lives on the sunny side of the lake and his people have golden canoes, while the people of Chief Cul-Ne-Wah, who live on the shadowed side of the lake, have ebony canoes. This is the story of an Indian brave who visited the lake and what befell during his visit.

Many years ago the Indians used to gamble on days of feasting and rejoicing. There was one game they played a great deal. One of the braves would conceal a stick in one hand while both hands were behind his back, and his opponent would try to guess in which it was hidden. Two leading men of the band on the shores of Anderson Lake, Big Buck and Black Bear had long been rivals for power. Big Buck was a good man, friendly and generous, while Black Bear was crafty and treacherous and always trying to get the best of everyone. One feast day they started to gamble and Big Buck kept losing heavily. Fortune favored his rival and soon Big Buck had lost all his possessions: weapons, clothing and money. Naked and empty-handed, he slunk away from his jeering companions and sought the advice of a medicine man.

After long consultation, the medicine man told Big Buck to go to the shore of Duffy Lake high in the mountains and ask the spirit chiefs to help him. He was to expiate his sin by fasting and purification and must bathe in the waters of the lake each day. Each day he must ask Chief Ne-Wah to help him.

If the chief considered the prayers strong enough and the penance sufficient, perhaps he would help Big Buck.

So Big Buck climbed the steep trail from the village to Duffy Lake and there he fasted and prayed for many months. He built a small hut of branches under a clump of trees in the sunny meadow and his only food was wild berries and the seeds of the fir cones. He bathed in the lake each day, sometimes spending many hours in the chilly waters. He grew thin and weak in body but strong in soul, and his spirit strengthened as he continued his prayers and fasting. Many times he would wake from his sleep, imagining he heard voices calling him, but always there was just silence and the night.

One night he awakened from a troubled sleep with a sharp cry. There came an answering cry from the lake, and there in the bright moonlight the waters trembled and a golden canoe rose swiftly from the depths of the lake. Two men were seated in the canoe and one of them asked in a loud voice: "Whom do you seek?"

"I wish to see Chief Ne-Wah," Big Buck answered.

"Then jump out to the canoe," the voice replied.

The canoe was a long way from shore and Big Buck doubted that he could reach it, but the long fasting and purification had given him strength of spirit, and he leaped across the waters to and in the canoe. The boat sank down through the waters to the bottom of the lake where Chief Ne-Wah and his people lived.

Big Buck was welcomed and soon became a favorite with the Chief, who gave him his favorite daughter as a wife. Big Buck lived happily in the golden land for many years, but at last a great longing came over him to see his family and friends once more. He went to the Chief and asked to become a mortal again, so he could visit his family and friends in the village beside Anderson Lake.

The Chief did not want him to go and asked him to remain in the spirit world. But Big Buck longed to return to his mortal life and was no longer content in the golden country. Finally Chief Ne-Wah consented to let him go and as a parting gift, gave him a small crystal stone, shaped like an eye. He told Big Buck it was a magic stone and with it he could see through all things as if they were air. Big Buck thanked the Chief and took the magic stone. The golden canoe took him to the surface of the lake and he returned to his people.

Big Buck's many friends welcomed him with rejoicing when he returned to the village, for was he not a friend of the powerful spirit chief. Black Bear was envious and schemed for some method to discredit Big Buck among his tribespeople. He kept asking Big Buck to gamble and finally Big Buck agreed. At first, his rival was successful and Big Buck kept losing. Then, using the magic stone, Big Buck started to win and soon he had all Black Bear's possessions. Now it was Black Bear's turn to be humiliated before his friends.

Big Buck remembered how he had been treated when he was a pauper, but when Black Bear came to him for advice, he acted sympathetic and after much coaxing agreed to help him.

"You must go to the shores of Duffy Lake," Big Buck said, "and pray and fast continually until the spirit chiefs help you. When the canoe comes up through the waters and ask you what you are looking for, you must tell them that you are looking for Chief Cul-Ne-Wah. Then you will visit the spirit world and come back with honor and riches as I have."

Black Bear climbed the steep hill to Duffy Lake and there he spent many months of penance and prayer. He found the shelter that Big Buck had used and he too ate berries and the seeds of the fir cones. But Black Bear was lazy and sly and did not bathe continually. Nor did he pray as hard as Big Buck had.

Finally, one moonlit night, he too awoke from a deep sleep and cried out. His cry was answered and a golden canoe trembled through the waters of the lake. Again, a voice said: "Whom do you seek?" and Black Bear remembered what Big Buck had told him and cried in a loud voice, "I seek Chief Cul-Ne-Wah." With a sorrowful cry the two men in the canoe shook their heads and the boat sank slowly beneath the surface. Black Bear wondered what had happened, when suddenly, almost blotted out on the shadowy side of the lake, he saw an ebony canoe resting on the surface of the water.

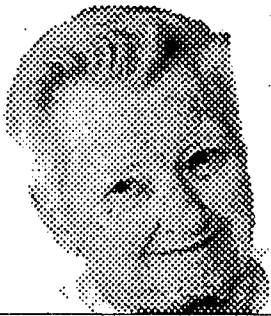

A voice from the canoe asked: "Whom do you seek?" and Black Bear replied, "I seek Chief Cul-Ne-Wah."

"Then jump out to the canoe," the voice answered.

Black Bear tried to jump, but his penance had not been enough, nor was he pure in mind, so his body sank to the bottom of the lake and he never found the golden country of the spirit chiefs.

Perhaps if you should visit Duffy Lake on a clear, moonlit night you may see the spirit chiefs rise from the depths of the lake and play about in their golden canoes.

Elementary students learn top fire safety principles

Tony Worth and Bob Fulton of Squamish Fire Rescue have been going around the elementary schools demonstrating the principles of fire safety to the students. The fire safety house is an attractive replica of a real home, small enough to give the effect of a doll's house, but large enough for children to sit down and watch a video downstairs then climb the stairs to a second storey.

The video they watched reminded them of all the safety rules connected with a house fire, and Mr. Worth explained the reasons why these had to be followed. One little boy at GHE was determined to paint "the worst case scenario." If he had to feel the bedroom door to see if it was hot, then retreat to the window, what would he do if the window was hot as well? It was patiently explained that fires burning simultaneously both inside and outside the house made a most unlikely situation.

Harmless puffs of "smoke" made the scene more realistic as students climbed out of an upper window and down a ladder to safety, where a fire-fighter was waiting to help them. Mitzi Lyne from HSSS, who did her work experience at the fire hall, was also there lending a hand with the younger pupils.

Papier Mache

Two of the classes that were busily occupied indoors at GHE while all these activities were going on were those of Ms. Manzini and Ms. Cromack. They were taking advantage of the special expertise of Ms. McCutcheon, who creates wonderful creatures out of papier mache. The Grade 7s were trying their hand at animals of all kinds, from snakes to cats and dinosaurs, all of which they would then paint. Sarah Madsen, a work experience student from HSSS, was going around the classroom helping students. She too, likes working with youngsters and is drawn towards a teaching career, although she took part of her work experience with older people at Hilltop House.

Ms. Cromack's students' goals were more practical than artistic. They were making piggy banks that they said would hold part of their allowance for years to come. They knew they would not be able to get back their money once it was deposited in this kind of bank without smashing the whole pig, so there was talk of saving up enough to go to university.

They described how they had made the body of the pig by pasting strips of paper onto a balloon and were gesturing so much in their descriptions that pots of gooey paste were sent flying.

First Nations Awards Night

The new recreation complex replacing Totem Hall is rising fast, but it is not expected to be ready for use until around July 23. First Nations Awards Night was therefore held in the Legion Hall this year, and the students did a great job of decorating for the event. Bunches of colorful balloons hung everywhere, and the walls had student artwork in the shape of murals, depicting whatever the young imaginations could create.

The wall behind the stage was covered with cut-outs of fish, in all shapes and sizes to be the background for a play performed by four students and a narrator, who explained the action to the audience and kept the story moving smoothly. She was the one who announced gleefully at the end that the moral of the play was: "Don't be greedy." (The advice came a little late, since all the audience had just eaten very well indeed). The youngsters had put the play together themselves from a legend about Raven and three sisters who went berry picking. He stayed in the canoe with the filled baskets while they went amongst the bushes looking for more berries. When he felt hungry, he ate all that they had collected and made himself very sick.

A very impressive canoe, that could seat four people, had been constructed out of stout cardboard boxes. Raven wore the traditional mask and the girls had on traditional dresses in vivid colors, so they made an attractive scene. It was enjoyed by parents, teachers, elders and some of the school board staff as well as trustees. Pre-schoolers were there to admire their seniors, also, and were having a great time.

Every student received recognition for a year's work successfully completed and there were lots of door prizes, too, so everybody was happy. Alice Guss and the rest of the education team deserve congratulations.

Cyclist passes through Squamish en route to Inuvik

Cyclist Aaron Carroll passed through Squamish Monday morning on his way to Inuvik. On his bike.

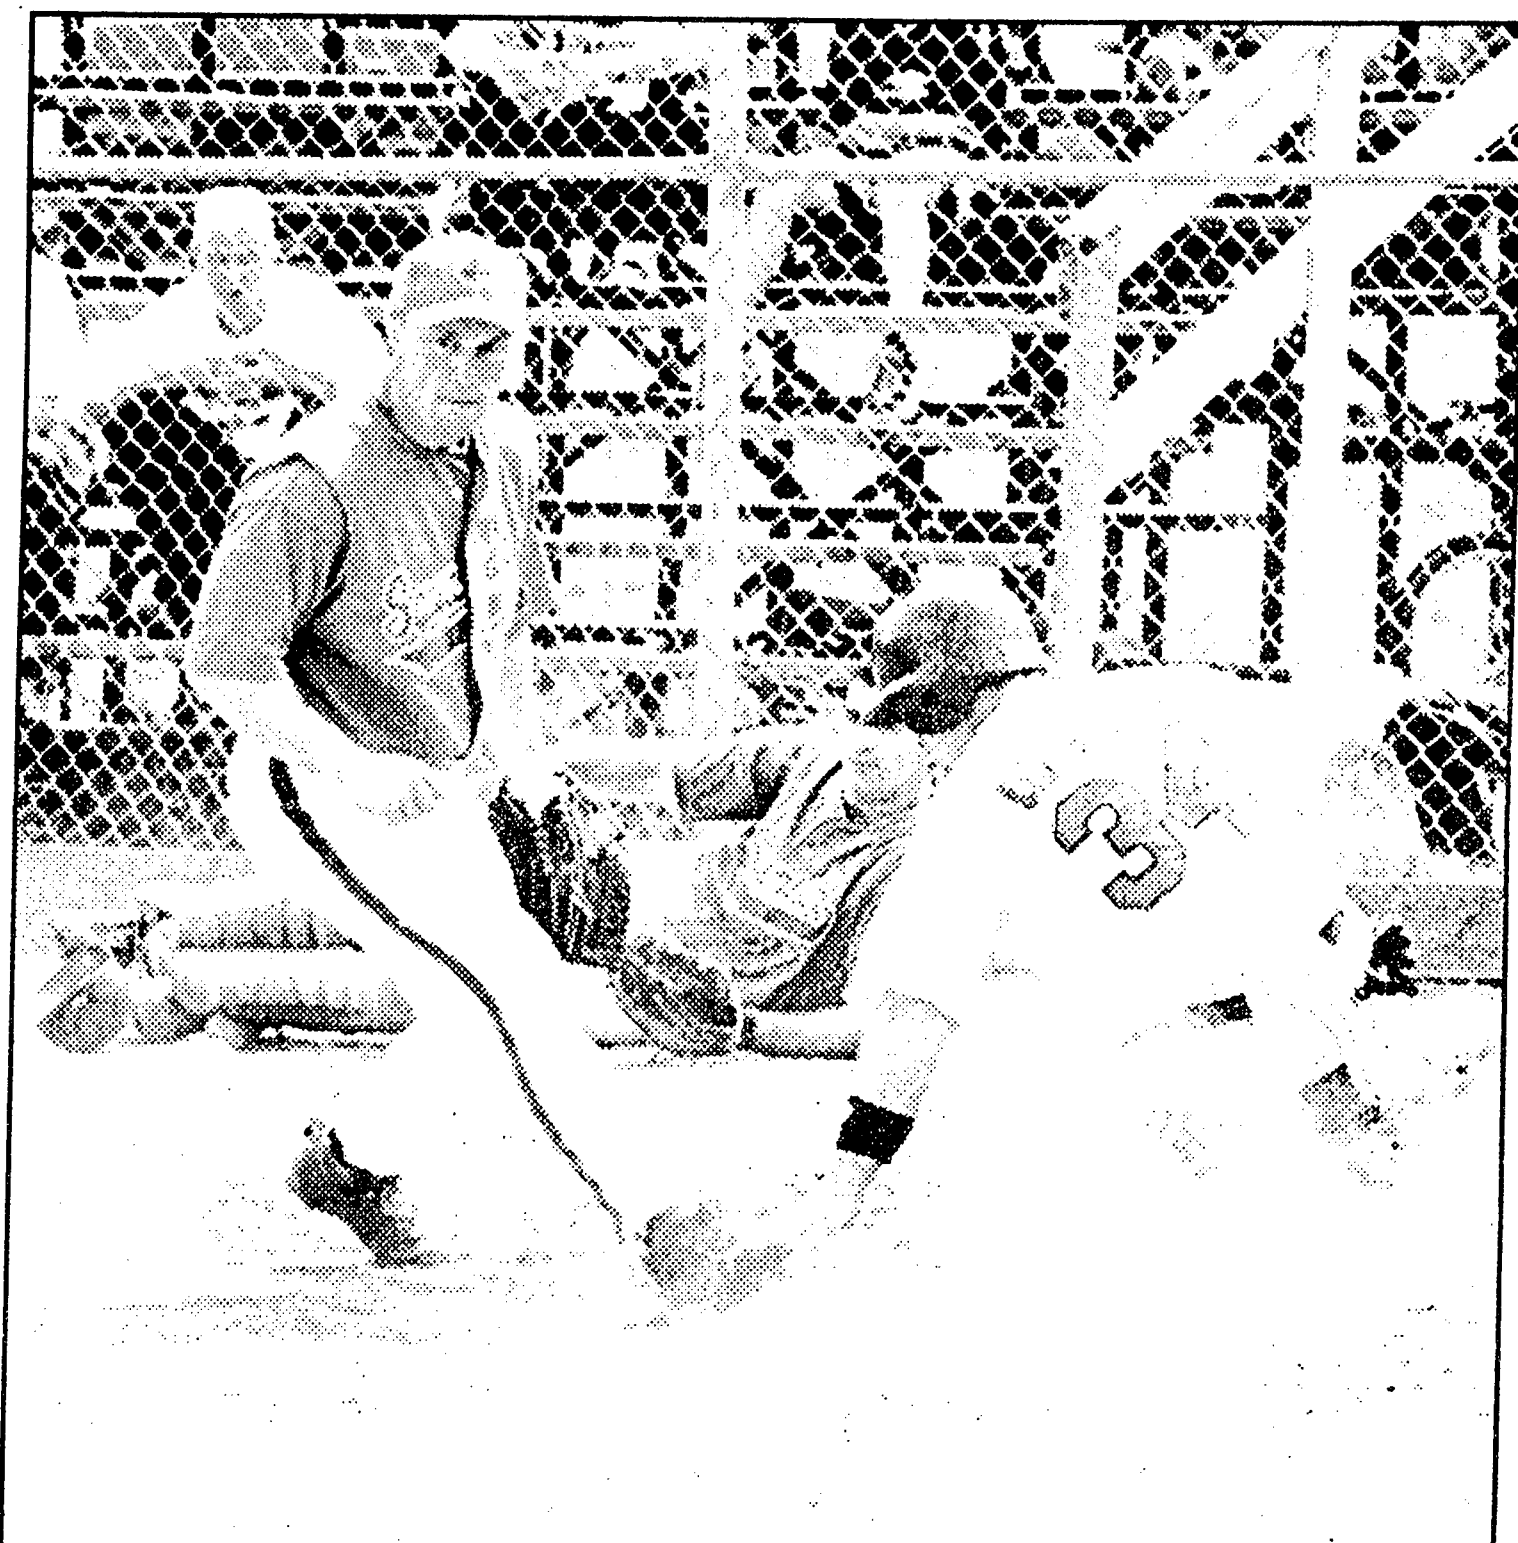

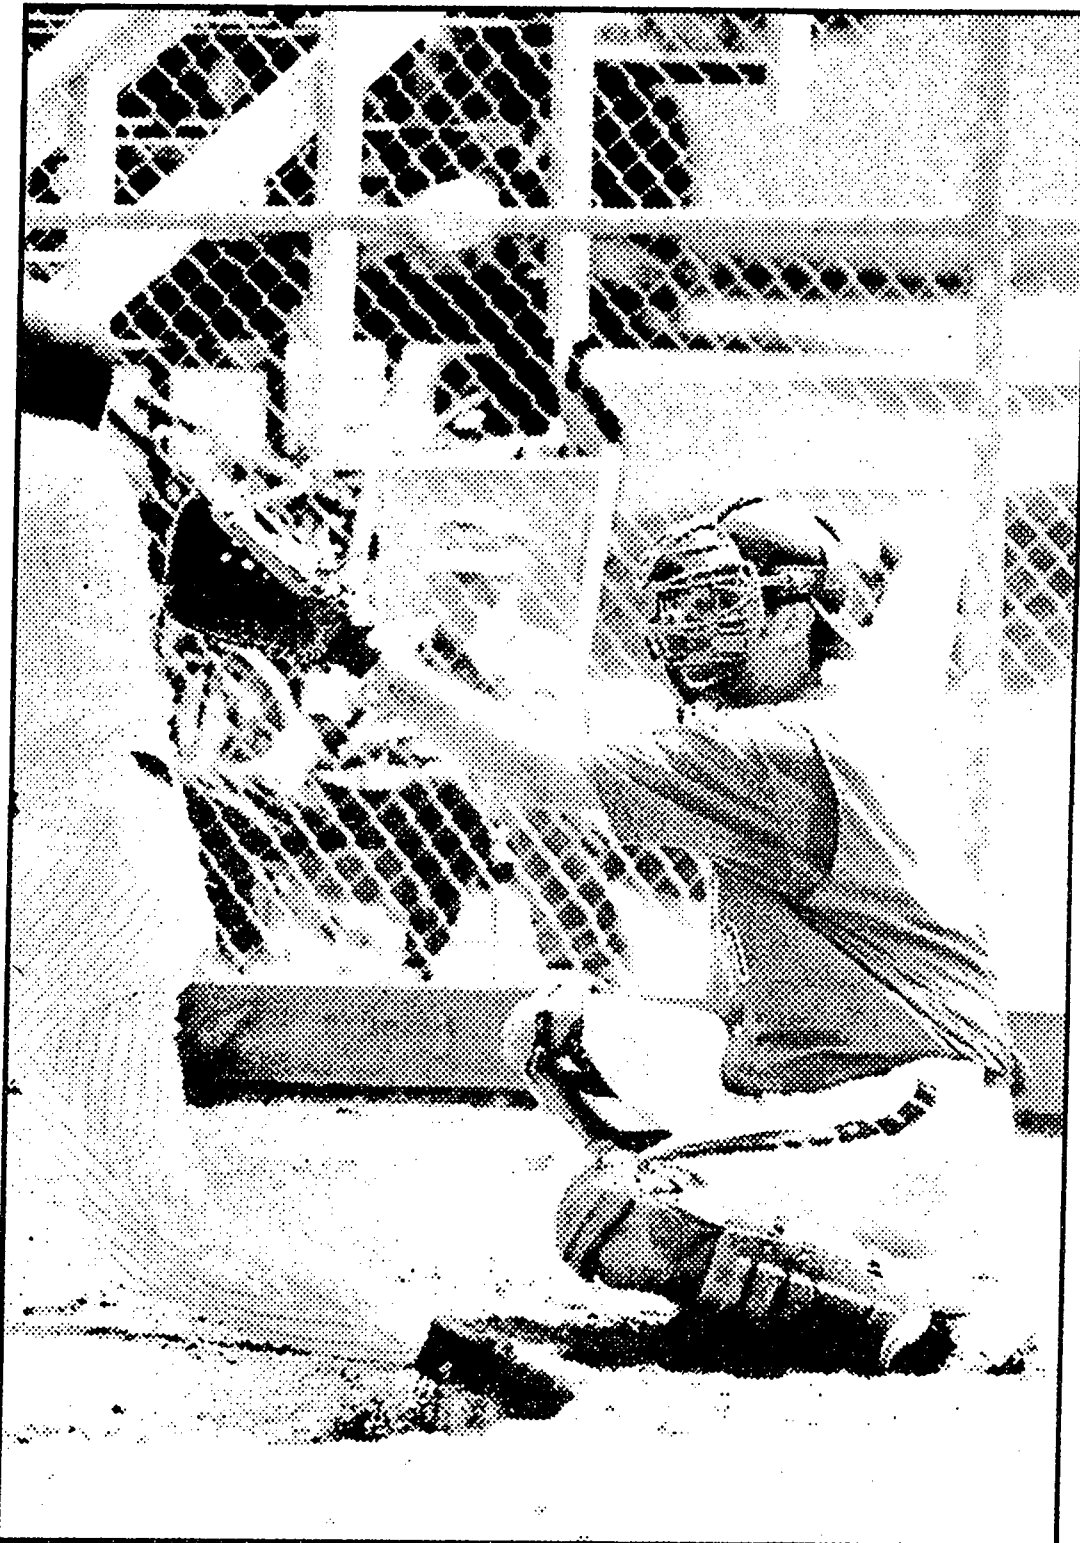

This is the second time Carroll has made the 4,000K trek and he expects the ride to take him about three months.

Carroll says he averages about 30-kilometres per-hour on a relatively flat road, but acknowledges that he will have some hills to deal with when he heads north to Lillooet and Cache Creek and up highway 97 to Chetwynd.

From there it's up Highway 28 to Fort St. John and then onto the Alaska Highway to Whitehorse.

The Klondike Highway will take Carroll to Dawson City and from there he'll backtrack to the Dempster Highway and ride its packed gravel surface to Inuvik in the Northwest Territories.

Carroll says his next biking project will to pedal-power his way across the country, and expects the 8,000K trip to take about six months to complete. Good luck Aaron!

GM take a double pop to the chin

BY KEVIN MCKINNON
The Chief

The Greg Gardner GM Fastball Club got a wake up call at Brennan Park during Sunday's double header against the Vancouver Grey Sox, a Senior A team playing one level higher than Squamish.

"We took it on the chin," said John Stuart of Sunday's games.

"We were missing several key players, and we just weren't into it."

Missing from the Greg Gardner GM roster were, among others, pitcher Jim Peers and an injured Kevin Horth.

Doug Allin pitched both games for Greg Gardner due to Peers' absence.

Things started to slide downhill for the Squamish sluggers in the first game, with the only point on the scoreboard coming from Troy Coe.

The first game ended in a 10-1 loss for Squamish, who never really seemed to pull it together for the duration of the contest.

"It was disappointing. We're a much better team than we showed Sunday," said Stuart.

Game two of the double header wasn't much of an improvement over the first, but both Allin and Travis Moyle made it to home plate, and Greg Gardner GM managed to keep the loss to a slightly more respectable 6-2.

"It was a disappointing weekend, but it might be a good thing. It might be the shot in the arm we need," said Stuart, chalking the games up to experience.

This weekend, the Greg Gardner GM Premier League team has a schedule change and will travel to Chilliwack to meet the Turbo Saturday, June 6.

Sunday, June 7 will see the Beer Essential Brewers in town to take on Greg Gardner in another double header, with games at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.

The Brewers were last year's Senior A British Columbia silver medalists and top-quality fastball will be the order of the day.

Be sure to come out and support your local team.

MANAGING YOUR MONEY

Kitchen-table planning goes high tech

Investors Group Inc. may be the country's biggest sponsor of mutual funds, but it doesn't think of itself as a fund company. It sells mutual funds, sure, but it's also prepared to sell life insurance, financial and estate planning, GICs and mortgages to its hundreds of thousands of clients. An Investors Group representative will even do your taxes. Investors want to be your one-stop shop for money advice, and want to do it for life.

However, Investors is unusual in another sense, they're more likely to cut deals at your kitchen table than at one of its hundred-odd regional offices.

That's because Investors Group is all about comfort. IG reps are interested in building relationships, some of which can last a daunting number of decades. Steady asset accumulation is the name of the game, and selling clients peace of mind, it's safe to say, is as important as riding the bull market. Most clients want to pay down the mortgage, put something away for the kids, and maybe take a trip or two after age 65.

If you guessed that Investors Group was the choice of Ma and Pa Middleclass looking to enjoy a better brand of biscuit in their golden years, you might not be far wrong. Investors Group appears to have realized this well before the turn of the 21st century, and have complemented its kitchen-table reps with some state-of-the-art software.

The Investors Group Asset Allocation Program, also known as Managing for Growth takes only nine steps to whisk the confused investor from the gloom of ignorance to the sunlit uplands of fund-buying rigour.

The truly old-fashioned can resort to paper, but the asset-allocation program provides a colourful insight into such topics as establishing one's financial goals, determining your tolerance for risk and volatility, and scoping out your time horizons for maximum returns. Surprisingly, given the IG reputation for sober advice, running through the program is almost fun.

The program is simple, perhaps, but illustrates the concepts of risk tolerance and buy-and-hold strategies without requiring the client to take a course in financial jargon. The profile that evolves portrays the client on a scale between one and five, with five being "aggressive". That's fine by IG, however. Even if you think you're Frank Mersch backing Indonesian gold plays, the soothing IG rep will use the software to lay out the numbers for you.

For the long view, the IG rep can show you whether the profile you fit will actually provide you with a decent income 30 years on. Calculating in such variables as inflation and fluctuating expenses, the profile projections give a palpable sense of whether or not you're likely to outlive your treasure. If you are, the IG rep is there to open conversation on possible solutions.

Even so, the Asset Allocation Program is not really that different from other financial-planning software I've seen, merely better designed for the non-technical mindset. Its best feature is that even an investing novice can answer the multiple-choice format of its nine queries, and get some idea of just how fast and loose one's prepared to play with the family fortunes.

More importantly, from the relationship-building perspective of the IG rep, the program allows a rep to pitch IG products that are more exactly suited to the client. A soft-sell approach, combined with the deceptively simple A.A. software, is a compelling approach that shows that IG is ready to serve another generation of ever-more savvy investors, without abandoning its core approach.

Squamish Nation youth welcome participants at Montana conference

BY ALICE HARRY
Contributed to The Chief

Chexw min wa halth tin see-yi! Halth skwile te-staas! Halth tin skwaln, chexw wa tametsote tse-tsob! Hoy chexw Chaylth Si-yam, hoy chexw Haxo-sun spa-hame, hoy chexw Chesha tamayolth. Nine people from the Squamish Nation recently attended the Northwest Indian Youth Conference in Billings, Montana. Participating from the Squamish Nation were: Chief Alana Andrew (Elder); Marge Toman, (Elder); Chaperones: Alice Harry, Elva Lewis; and Liza Baker, Roselee Billy, Dean Baker, Michael Nahance, and Siobhan Joseph.

On behalf of Montana crew, I would like to thank Chief and Council for supporting and sponsoring our trip to the Youth Conference. A lot of other nations were proud and happy we had elders come along with us. Some were really touched.

It was great to see Chesha Tamayox's other part of her beautiful land — mountains, valleys, plains, hills smothered with cottonwood, ash and sage bushes. The beautiful sunsets, big sky, the morning chill and afternoon strong winds were astounding.

One of the places we saw on our trip was Sacrifice Cliff. In 1837-38, the dreaded smallpox epidemic spread throughout the tribes of Montana like wildfire from the American Fur Trade Company. The Indians had no immunity against the disease and it claimed many lives as a result. Among the Crow Tribe, there is a story about a group of young warriors who were returning from a war party. To their shock, their tribe was infected with the disease. One of the warriors found his beloved among the dying members of his tribe.

Grieving over the loss of family and friends,

Squamish Nation members Liza Baker, left, and Roselee Billy, right, share a hug with actor Brian Frejo, who had a role in Last of the Mohicans.

the warriors felt frustrated and depressed because they could do nothing for their people. The warriors could not stand by and watch everyone they loved suffer so much. They dressed themselves in the finest clothes and each sang their death songs as they rode over the edge of what is now called Sacrifice Cliff. Twelve teenagers who were not affected by the disease witnessed this dramatic event as it unfolded. Afterwards, they gathered up the bodies of those who sacrificed their lives and buried the brave warriors in their traditional manner.

The Northwest Indian Youth Conference aims and goals were:

- To show tribal youth examples of Indian people who have empowered themselves as individuals.

- To have tribal youth make an unconditional commitment to learn and practice their tribal beliefs and values.
- Challenge the critical and analytical thought process of our youth.
- To have meaningful interaction between tribal leaders and youth and develop informal mentorships.
- To have tribal youth meet, interact, and network with each other.
- To have youth demonstrate knowledge and pride about their tribal ancestry and show respect towards members of other tribes at the same time.

I was proud of our youth. They represented our nation extremely well. It felt good to see our youth blossom, grow, share and be proud of who they were. There were about 2,000 people who attended the huge gathering. Our youth were very outgoing, showed high self-esteem, were quite vocal and most willing to participate in the workshops, ice-breakers, fashion show, karaoke, talent show, singing, dancing and drumming.

The beauty of meeting new people from different tribes and nations was enlightening and heartwarming. I've met people from Nez Perce, Lemhi, Flathead, Crow, Cheyenne, Blackfoot, Seminoles, Apache, Cherokee, Fort Peck, Pawnee plus many more.

Some facilitators from the conference were Brian Frejo — Actor (he was in Last of the Mohicans), motivational speaker and DJ. He is from Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. He spoke setting goals (small and big ones).

D.J. Vanas — Captain in the U.S. Air Force grew up in Mississippi. He wanted to be a pilot when he was seven years old. He flew his first airplane when he was 14 years old. He explained to the youth about choices.

Every day we make a choice — if we want to work hard or play hard, and he talked about sacrifices, achievements, and consequences.

Litefoot (Cherokee) — He was in Indian in the Cupboard and Squanto. He is a hip hop rap singer for the tribal people in the U.S. He had a concert on Wednesday night before the dance. He has CDs and cassettes with all of his songs.

Haida — (she is from Haida people in Alaska). She is also a hip hop rap singer. She is bubbly, bouncy and full of energy. She's great. She speaks to all the youth, even when she was in the lobby or stairs in the hotel. She has a CD out too, and her brother did a native design right on the CD. It looks awesome.

Other workshops includes topics such as drugs and alcohol, gangs, police and the courts. There were also mini pow wow workshops explaining how one person earns the right to be a traditional dancer, or grass dancer. As always, I enjoy watching the hood dancer.

HOROSCOPES

May 31-June 6

Aries - March 21/April 20
Practice what you preach this week, Aries. You're willing to voice your opinion, but can you take your own advice? Loved ones are waiting for your response. The person whom you've been seeing has a surprise for you. Make sure you tell him or her how you really feel before accepting the gift.

Taurus - April 21/May 21
You have a busy week in front of you, and the only way you're going to get everything done is by controlling your temper. Don't let the little things get to you. Stay focused on what you have to do. A close friend needs your help when it comes to romance. Do what you can, but be careful. You could get into a very sticky situation.

Gemini - May 22/June 21
You're on cloud nine when it comes to your finances early in the week, Gemini. An unexpected windfall comes at the perfect time. However, remember to save some money for the future; you'll need it sooner than you think. A close friend offers to help you with a family problem. Say yes.

Cancer - June 22/July 22
Don't let business associates get you down this week. You know that you are more than capable of handling your responsibilities. An old friend calls you out of the blue. Don't be angry because you haven't spoken in so long. Instead, catch up with him or her. You're sure to learn some interesting information.

Leo - July 23/August 23
Don't hold a loved one's mistake against him or her — no matter how serious it is. He or she had the best intentions. Your support is what's needed. That special someone is hiding something. Try to get him or her to talk to you.

Virgo - Aug 24/Sept 22
You have an important meeting early in the week, Virgo. Don't be late, because you could miss out on a wonderful opportunity to enhance your career. A loved one needs your advice about a personal problem. Be honest, and help him or her find an answer. Your efforts will be appreciated.

Libra - Sept 23/Oct 23
A financial problem puts you in the middle of a heated debate. Keep your cool, and help everyone involved come to an understanding. It's not going to be easy, but you're up to the challenge. A longtime friend reveals some shocking news to you. Don't let it throw you. Be supportive; he or she really needs you right now.
