BY TIM SHOULTS
The Chief

The man accused of murdering Judith Howey nearly 35 years ago can now be named. Provincial Court judge in North Vancouver ruled Thursday that Squamish resident Byron Blue will be tried in adult court rather than youth court for first-degree murder in the murder of Howey on May 29, 1964. She was 12 years old at the time. Blue was arrested in connection with the murder on March 11 of last year. His name was not released until now because he was 15 years old at the time of the crime and his name was banned from publication under the Young Offenders Act until last week's ruling. Crown prosecutor Joanne Carrier said Blue would be appearing at his next court appearance on Feb. 17 for the purpose of setting a trial date. She added there is still a publication ban on any details of the case in accordance with the Young Offenders Act.

Economic action needed now, say residents at strategy open house

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

The message was heard loud and clear last week — Squamish needs to develop an economic development plan to build a brighter future and residents want action now. There was standing room only for many who attended a public meeting at the Squamish Public Library Jan. 3 to hear highlights of the community's new economic development and to give their input. Steve Nicol of Crane Management Consultants, who gave a formal presentation on the strategy, said residents should not expect instant job creation from the plan and should see it more as a guide to lead the municipality's economic development office to better plan for the future. He urged people to make a long-term commitment to the strategy. "There are no miracle cures in terms of what can be done with economic development," said Nicol. One of the plan's biggest recommendations is to move the town's economic development office out of Municipal Hall and into a more independent location. Nicol, one of three consultants who worked on the strategy, said the EDO's current budget is insufficient and the district needs to either scale back on activities or increase funding for the position. He said the EDO should not function as part of municipal government and should be more accessible to the business community. Nicol said funding could come from other government agencies or from the private sector. The 1999 budget for the EDO and other municipal functions has not been finalized. "I don't think any more money has to come from the municipality," he said. While EDO Mitchell Edgar was present at the meeting, he did not give formal statements to the public. The strategy stresses a need for Squamish to further diversify its economy and build stability. "There is a lot of concern locally about the lack of diversification," said Nicol. The strategy also attempts to increase opportunities for sustainable development and employment for residents. It is also designed to help Squamish develop its sense of community and improve its quality of life. One of the document's major conclusions is that some of Squamish's mature industries, mainly forestry, are losing their competitive edge. Nicol said Squamish has many unique characteristics and is better positioned than many B.C. communities to build a strong local economy, but more vision and initiative is needed to attract new development. He said the entire community needs to get involved to implement recommendations outlined in the plan. Residents gave their own presentations after hearing Nicol. Several people showed their support for the strategy and expressed a need to move ahead with an action plan. Others voiced their opposition or took the opportunity to talk about what they think Squamish needs to improve its economy. The topics ranged from plans for a university in Squamish, forestry and the value-added wood sector, the environment, technology, jobs and other issues. David Lassmann, who ran for council in last fall's byelection, said he agrees the economic development office should be outside of Municipal Hall, but he said it is "naïve" to think the EDO will then be free of political interference. Lassmann said the strategy should include suggestions on how to attract money for businesses and development. "People want jobs and to me that means attracting capital," he said. Resident and businessman Wilf Dowad said Squamish needs both short-term and long-term solutions to help boost its economy. Dowad said he has faith in the future of the wood industry, but the district needs to improve development opportunities in the Squamish Industrial Park and downtown. He said the tourism industry also needs to be built up by providing more hospitality to visitors. "One of the biggest problems is people don't feel welcome here," said Dowad. Mayor Corinne Lonsdale urged residents to let council know what they think about the strategy. "Without the support of the business community, it won't go anywhere," she said. Council members and municipal staff are scheduled to discuss where the strategy should go from here during a committee of the whole meeting today at around 1 p.m. The meeting, which takes place at Municipal Hall, is open to the public. EDO to go? In a related development, Edgar and district administrator Grant McRadu both refused comment on reports that the district had asked for Mitchell Edgar's resignation as EDO on Friday.

'Stoltmann National Park' letters yanked from council's agenda

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Letters from people around the world showing support for or opposition to a proposed 500,000-hectare national park near Whistler will no longer be on Squamish council's agendas during regular meetings.

Council unanimously passed a motion Feb. 2 to have all letters regarding the Stoltmann Wilderness National Park dropped off in individual councillors' mailboxes and not included in council meeting agendas which are accessible to the public.

The Vancouver-based Western Canada Wilderness Committee is currently campaigning for public support for the proposed park.

The site is located in Tree Farm Licence 38, an active logging area.

Members of the public will still be able to see copies of the letters at the front desk at Municipal Hall.

Council members have received numerous letters from across Canada, the United States and other countries during the past couple of months urging them to support the plan for a national park. There have also been a few opposing the plan.

Mayor Corinne Lonsdale said letters about this subject and a proposed community forest near Whistler do not need to be included in agendas because council has already voted on these issues.

"This council has supported the protected areas strategy," said Lonsdale.

The mayor was referring to a provincial government strategy for the Lower Mainland which resulted in about 13 per cent of land being set aside for parks, including several sites in the Squamish area. Council unanimously passed a motion Jan. 5 to oppose WCWC's plan to create a national park. Council also passed a motion Jan. 12 to support Whistler Municipality's proposal to create a community forest as the plan does not result in loss for Squamish forestry companies.

Committee urges sign-off on estuary plan

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

The latest draft of the Squamish Estuary Management Plan is not perfect, but it needs to be finalized and implemented soon, says the chairperson of the committee that drafted the plan.

Members of the Squamish Estuary Coordinating Committee met with council members and district staff Feb. 2 to discuss details of the draft plan and asked for council's support in principle. The coordinating committee is made up of provincial and federal government representatives and other stakeholders.

Chairperson Bruce Cox said the committee has been working on amendments to the draft plan, which was first introduced in 1982, and it is ready to be finalized and put into action by April.

"We feel as a committee that we're at the threshold right now," he said. "We feel there is a window of opportunity to move ahead with the plan."

Cox said B.C. Rail and the provincial government have been negotiating with the Squamish Nation for a land swap in the estuary and are getting close to reaching an agreement.

The latest draft includes a habitat loss compensation agreement to ensure a balance is maintained between the environment and the economy.

The previous draft, completed in 1992, was met with a lot of controversy over an area just west of downtown known as site A which was slated for industrial and commercial development. In the latest draft, site A is set aside for conservation.

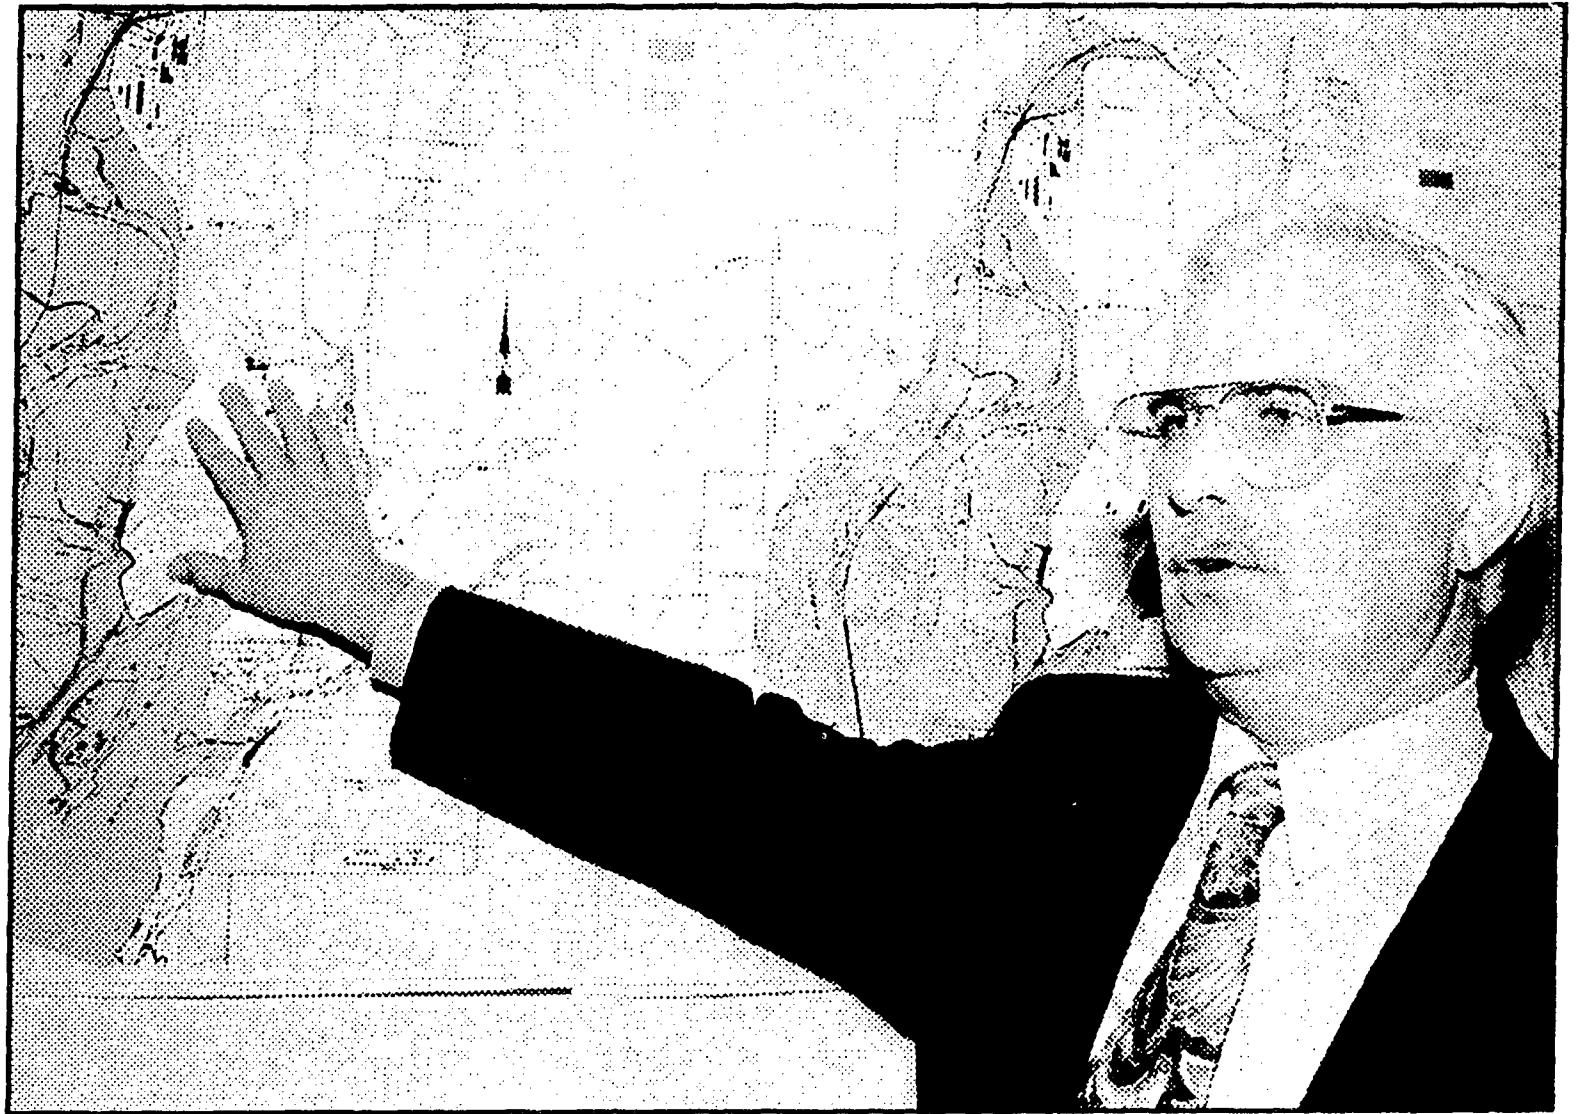

The plan includes a proposed removal of a dry land sort operation which would eliminate industrial activity in the conservation area.

"It is our view that the Squamish Estuary Management Plan is an excellent plan," said Cox. "It protects a vital and significant portion of the estuary and it accommodates future economic activity."

Cox asked council members to let the committee know if there are any "show stoppers" which could delay the plan further and asked for input.

Coun. Paul Lalli said while he is hoping for the plan to be finalized, he is concerned that the District of Squamish has not been involved in negotiations about potential land swaps.

But Coun. Lyle Fenton said council previously agreed not to get involved with these negotiations. Fenton said there are no major show stoppers, but the plan still needs fine-tuning.

BRIGITTE PETERSEN/THE CHIEF

Squamish Estuary Coordinating Committee chair Bruce Cox urged council to implement the latest draft of the Squamish Estuary Management Plan.

Mayor Corinne Lonsdale said plan details still need to be worked out before it is signed off and public input is needed. A public information meeting will likely be held in March.

Council will consider three motions concerning the plan and log handling in the estuary on Feb. 16.

Members of the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society have voiced concerns about previous drafts and they are not satisfied with the latest draft. Society members are concerned about a proposed 60-metre wide transportation corridor for future road and rail infrastructure which could wipe out some wildlife habitat.

The Soo Coalition for Sustainable Forests has also expressed concern that the plan does not accommodate the forest industry.

The plan recommends 579 hectares of the estuary be protected as part of a 591-hectare wildlife management area, while 350 hectares be designated for development and eight more hectares undergo further planning and analysis.

Heliport plan grounded in closed-door vote

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Helicopter companies waiting for the District of Squamish to approve a location for a community heliport will likely have to wait until after next fall's municipal election before any action takes flight.

Council voted Feb. 2 to rescind a motion passed last spring to set aside land for a community heliport at the Squamish Municipal Airport. The vote, taken during a closed-door session before council's regular meeting, passed 4-3, with Mayor Corinne Lonsdale and councillors Paul Lalli and Ted Craddock opposed.

The proposed heliport would accommodate Black Tusk Helicopter Inc. and other helicopter and heli-logging companies which are looking for landing pads and a place to set up hangars for their aircraft.

Lonsdale announced the in-camera motion during council's regular meeting last week. She said the issue was dealt with behind closed doors because there were "potential legal consequences" surrounding last year's decision to set aside land for a heliport at the airport. In-camera meetings, which are closed to the public, are held to allow council and municipal staff to deal with issues involving legal, land and labor matters.

"It was potentially a situation that could have placed the district in a position of liability," said Lonsdale after the meeting.

The mayor would not comment further on the subject.

Council passed a motion with a 3-2 vote last April to designate a site at the airport for a heliport. Council had been considering a community heliport on a woodlot between Hwy. 99 and Landfill Road, but this plan came to a halt after council found out the site is used by wintering bald eagles.

Council also approved a motion last April to identify and evaluate other sites for a heliport. Sites which were supposed to be considered include Cat Lake, Watt's Point and the Squamish Industrial Park. In 1997, council changed land use at the airport from industrial to limited, which restricted any further development.

Lonsdale, who supports a heliport at the airport, said the district has taken no significant action to find an appropriate site for a heliport. "It's an issue that we have to address," she said. "What are these operators going to do?"

The heliport and larger airport issue will likely "go on the back burner" until after the next election, said Lonsdale. "I'm not confident this council will address it."

Airport development was the main election issue in 1996 and it may become a subject of debate this fall.

Coun. Meg Fellowes, who supported a heliport at the airport last spring, voted in favor of rescinding that decision. Fellowes said she wants to see an independent, comprehensive evaluation of alternate sites for a heliport. She said she would only support a referendum on airport development after the public is provided with detailed information about the issue.

"How do we win the trust of neighborhoods when we look at development?" she said.

Airport development will "inevitably" become an election issue this fall, said Fellowes.

Coun. Paul Lalli said he has always supported a heliport at the airport and is disappointed with council's motion. "It's a very political decision and it's one I disagree with," he said.

Lalli said he wants a referendum on airport development to be held and he wants to see a long-term planning strategy for the site.

"I think it's going to become an election issue in November."

Jennell Saindon, Black Tusk Helicopter's operations manager, said she was not surprised by council's motion. Saindon said while the company uses a hangar at the airport, it does not provide enough space.

"The hangar is the main issue," she said.

Saindon said she wants council to take action to improve the situation for helicopter companies, but in the meantime it's business as usual at the airport. "Nothing has changed. We still fly in and out and still carry out our business."

Natural gas prices should be reduced, says council

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Council members are continuing their efforts to reduce natural gas prices for Squamish residents.

After receiving a letter from resident Heidi French addressed to B.C.'s

Deputy Premier Dan Miller protesting the high cost of natural gas in this area, council passed a motion to support the letter. French requested the provincial government review natural gas prices in Squamish. Gas subscribers in this area pay similar gas rates as customers serviced by the Vancouver Island gas pipeline.

Council also voted to reiterate its position to the province and the B.C. Utilities Commission that the cost of natural gas in Squamish should be the same as fees charged in the Lower Mainland. Squamish councils have been voicing this concern to the province since 1993.

Coun. Meg Fellowes said other nearby communities which must also pay higher prices should start petitions and send their collective message to the provincial government. Fellowes said the drive to reduce gas prices should become more of a "grassroots" effort.

SLRD sign bylaw gets third reading

BY GRACE CHADSEY
Whistler Question

Squamish-Lillooet Regional District Briefs from Jan. 26

Some do, some don't. That's the verdict on whether signs along Hwy. 99 comply with the SLRD's proposed sign bylaw. The Squamish-Lillooet Regional District gave third reading to the draft bylaw at its regular meeting in Pemberton Jan. 26.

Director Corinne Lonsdale (District of Squamish) told the meeting, "There has to be a way that we can do these things and allow the businesses to advertise. I can't support the bylaw in its present form."

Director Dave Lawson (Electoral Area B) said while he supports having a sign bylaw, he does not support this one because of concerns about fairness.

According to an inventory of significant existing signs along Hwy. 99 prepared by SLRD staff, many signs south of Squamish are not in compliance with the proposed bylaw, while many signs south of Whistler and northeast of the Village of Pemberton are.

The bylaw would affect signage within 400 metres of Hwy. 99. Signs the bylaw would prohibit include: billboards (off-site signage); signs larger than eight square metres or taller than five metres; revolving signs, banners, pennants, flags, balloons; signs on roofs, canopies or balconies; flashing, animated or moving signs; temporary free-standing, vehicle mounted, changeable copy and video signs.

Bob MacPherson, SLRD manager of planning and development, told the meeting an enforcement policy would have to be established to deal with existing signage.

He said such a policy may include a period allowing owners to remove or obtain variance permits for existing signs.

"It's an awkward position to find ourselves in because we are reacting."

Director Hugh O'Reilly (Resort Municipality of Whistler) told the meeting: "We have to begin our enforcement somewhere. If we don't control the future, it'll control us."

The SLRD's proposed sign bylaw has generated comments from several organizations.

Howard Kelly, president of the Chamber of Commerce serving Squamish, Britannia Beach and Furry Creek, attended the Squamish-Lillooet Regional District's meeting as a delegate.

He expressed concern about how the draft bylaw may affect the chamber's three information signs along Hwy. 99. According to the proposed bylaw prepared by SLRD staff, those signs would not be in compliance.

Kelly said although the chamber agrees a bylaw controlling signage along the highway should be in place, the organization is concerned about how it may affect the chamber's signs as they are "one of our best fund-raisers."

The signs, which received the necessary approvals before being erected, carry advertising for businesses.

"There needs to be some way for businesses to offer what they have and also for people that are travelling" to see what is available. "I just think you should consider the customer."

The regional district has also received letters from BCR Properties, United Properties, Tanac Land Development Corp. and Pattison Outdoor expressing concern over the proposed bylaw.

The SLRD's financial systems are set for year 2000 (Y2K) compatibility.

In his 1998 annual activity report to the SLRD board, administrator Rick Beauchamp said the regional district began replacing obsolete hardware and upgrading software for year 2000 compliance early last year.

As well, the SLRD converted much of the old financial data to a form that could be used by the software.

Bob MacPherson, SLRD manager of planning and development, said last week just minor work has to be completed to ensure all the regional district's systems are Y2K compliant.

"We are way ahead of the game in the municipal world" in terms of Y2K compliance, MacPherson said. "We've gone through our office and all of our systems, and one by one made sure everything is going to work."

He said the SLRD owes much of its preparedness for Y2K compliance to its software supplier, which has worked with the regional district in making the compliance happen.

It was a busy year for the SLRD. In his report, administrator Rick Beauchamp listed projects completed or initiated by the regional district last year.

Those projects included creating value, vision and mission statements for the SLRD; establishing a work plan for initiating the regional growth strategy; participating in In-SHUCK-ch N'Quat'qua treaty negotiations; Year 2000 compliance for SLRD computers; introducing an SLRD information base on the Internet; establishing key goals and objectives for the organization and a customer service program; implementing a mapping program; continuing to negotiate with the Ministry of Transportation and Highways regarding the terms of reference for the Hwy. 99 transportation study; reviewing the regional district's building inspection service; and working towards establishing a sign bylaw.

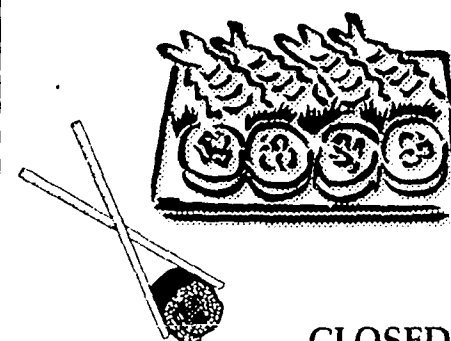

Beauchamp's report also listed projects completed or initiated for specific areas of the SLRD.

The Squamish-Lillooet Regional District is opposed to a current B.C. Rail application for Pesticide Use Permit.

At its Jan. 26 regular board meeting, the SLRD supported resolutions sending letters to the Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks and to the municipalities within the proposed spray area.

Those municipalities include Lions Bay, West Vancouver and North Vancouver.

University talks continue

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Discussions between members of a university planning group and District of Squamish officials are ongoing and a site for Canada's first private non-profit university will be selected in the Squamish area within the next couple of months.

University planners held their second meeting with the district on Jan. 22 and a third meeting was held Friday to continue working out details for the proposal and agreements involving the municipality.

During a recent telephone interview, Dr. David Strangway said his university planning team and municipal officials are still working on developing a written memorandum of understanding before a location is chosen. The university's latest opening date is scheduled for September 2002.

Strangway, former president of the University of British Columbia, said the planned institution would be unique for a number of reasons.

He said it would offer students flexibility through short yet intensive semesters and the opportunity to accelerate their post-secondary education. The school would have an international flavor and classes would be offered in several different languages.

"We think it will enable us to attract people from across Canada and the outside," he said. "We're looking at an internationally-mixed student body and faculty."

Strangway, president of the Ottawa-based Canada Foundation for Innovation, said while the university would be "academically elite", the goal is to not exclude anyone due to financial reasons. Tuition would be about $25,000, but students would be able to apply for scholarships.

One of the major focuses of the university plan is to prepare students to be connected to the global village.

"The thought is students who graduate will have a good understanding of the world around them," said Strangway.

Steve Crombie, a member of the university team, said a formal agreement with the district will likely be reached by the end of February.

"Everything seems to be on track," he said.

Crombie said while the current plan is to try to secure about 100 acres for the site, this amount may change slightly depending on property values.

The university, which would offer a broad range of liberal arts and science programs,

Dr. David Strangway:
"We're looking at an internationally-mixed student body and faculty" includes plans for a 400-seat theatre and 48,000 square feet of recreational space and facilities.

The university would accommodate between 800 and 1,200 in-residence students.

University planners are also hoping to recruit a high-level academic advisory board and a community advisory committee.

Once all approvals are in place, three key appointments will be made — a university academic leader, a project development manager and a communications manager.

The district is planning to hire a university project manager once a formal agreement is reached.

Winning Ways
by Michael Chang

They said I was too small, didn't have the strength and wouldn't cut it on the pro tennis circuit. I'll admit, it's been tough, really tough. When I won my first Grand Slam title, it would've been easy to become conceited and get caught up in the money, fame and glamour of winning. But having a relationship with Jesus has made all the difference. I realize that God, through Jesus Christ, gives me the strength to do what I do. When I keep my focus on him, I always have the joy he alone can give—both on and off the court.

Youth program seeks more youth

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

Several Squamish youth are expanding their options by participating in a provincially-funded program designed to give them work experience while preparing for post-secondary education, and there is room for more to get involved.

Brian Whieldon and Janet Vanderhor are working on various projects based out of Squamish's Youth Resource Centre on Loggers Lane while they earn educational credits. Whieldon, 19, is organizing a fundraiser to help gather money to renovate the old RCMP station on Carson Place which is slated to be converted into a longer-term resource centre for youth. He is planning to fix up a donated vehicle and raffle it off to raise funds.

Whieldon, who has worked part-time at the youth centre since mid-January, also helped out with the Skyreaching Mosaic Project in Stan Clarke Park and aided with roof repairs for the planned youth centre. He said he plans to use tuition credits earned through the program to study autobody repair at the B.C. Institute of Technology.

Whieldon hopes his combination of experience will help him find a job. "Before I started with the Mosaic Project, I had no connections with the community," he said. "It's not what you know, it's who you know."

Youth outreach worker Mark Kelly said the vehicle raffle will likely be held in June. "Summertime is a good time to raffle off a sweet ride," he said.

Vanderhor, 18, is busy working at the resource centre helping with various administrative functions. She designed the Squamish Partnership of Youth's brochure, works on the youth newsletter On the Edge, does some accounting work and helps organize various youth events. Vanderhor plans to help promote the vehicle raffle. She is also working on a project to match youth up with seniors to do various activities together which would help improve communications between the different generations.

Vanderhor has been volunteering at the youth centre since it opened last January. She continued to work there through Howe Sound Secondary School's career preparation program and is now working through the Youth

Community Action program. Vanderhor said she plans to study marketing management at BCIT. She said she enjoys learning "a little bit of everything."

Whieldon and Vanderhor are two out of 13 youth participating in the Youth Community Action program by working with non-profit organizations in Squamish. More than 1,500 youth have been placed with organizations across the province, including about 12 in Whistler and Pemberton.

Youth community action coordinator Alexandra De Vries said she is looking for youth to work at the West Coast Railway Heritage Park this spring. She said other non-profit and publicly-funded organizations may still apply to get involved with the program. Organizations do not pay youth. Instead they offer youth a chance to learn new skills.

Youth between the ages of 15 and 24 are eligible to participate. For each hour of work, they earn $8 in tuition credits up to a maximum of 300 hours. This can help students reduce the need for student loans.

The program, a pilot project, is run through YWCA of Vancouver. It is funded by the Ministry of Advanced Education, Training and Technology.

For more information about the program, call Alexandra De Vries at (604) 988-3766.

Police Blotter

Dog helps catch thief

The Pharmasave in downtown Squamish was the victim of two break and enters in four days recently.

On Jan. 28 the business was broken into and 20 cartons of Players' cigarettes worth $1,000 were taken when the shop's alarm system failed to function. The cigarettes were in a locked room in the back of the store. RCMP have no suspects at this time. The second incident occurred Feb. 2 at 2:58 a.m. This time the alarm did function. Charges are pending against a Squamish male for break and enter and theft. The man had stolen pharmaceuticals and placed them in a white pillow case. An RCMP search dog was called in to assist in locating the suspect, who will appear in Squamish court next month.

On Sunday night at about 7:50 p.m. an attempted robbery was made at a local restaurant in the downtown area of Squamish. A lone female suspect produced a knife and demanded money from the cash register but left the store without getting any.

Police are looking for a suspect described as a non-white female approximately 30 years old, about 5'3" tall and 120 lbs. of slim build wearing a black jacket with attached hood and black pants.

Mountain Building Centres in the industrial park was broken into on Feb. 2 shortly after 11 p.m. when a side door was smashed with a rock. Videotape from security cameras shows one male entering the business and grabbing a display box full of knives. RCMP attended the scene with a search dog and which located the display box with its contents still inside. Squamish RCMP are sending the surveillance tape to their lab for enhancement and are still investigating.

An RCMP officer on routine patrol came across a motor vehicle accident at Diamond Head Road and Garibaldi Way on Wednesday at 2:41 a.m. A vehicle parked at a stop sign was rear-ended and when the member attended the scene the male driving the offending vehicle appeared to be impaired.

At the detachment the male blew .260 and .240 on the breath analysis machine and was charged with impaired driving.

Mamquam body identified

BY KEVIN MCKINNON
The Chief

Investigators have identified the human remains recovered in Squamish on Jan. 26 as Joseph Richards, a 35-year-old Surrey man who went missing from Surrey on Jan. 16.

He was last seen walking in the area of the Cedar Hills Plaza at 96th Avenue and 128th Street at about 4 p.m. on that date. Richards' vehicle, a 1996 Suzuki Swift hatchback, was found abandoned in the parking lot of the Revy store on King George Highway near Scott Road.

Richards' body was located in the Mamquam River near the Government Road bridge on Jan. 26 by a passer-by walking his dog. The remains were recovered from the river with the assistance of Squamish Search and Rescue and an RCMP dive team from Vancouver.

Police identified Richards by using dental records and have stated they suspect foul play. They are not releasing the cause of death at this time and members of the Surrey detachment's Serious Crime Section are continuing the investigation.

No agreement yet for Interfor workers

BY BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

International Forest Products Ltd. is still investigating different options to revive its inactive Squamish sawmill, including plans for a co-operative operation.

Fred Lowenberger of Interfor said the company has been meeting with the sawmill's employee committee to talk about options. Interfor had planned to call about 26 laid off sawmill workers back to work for about one month during a second whole-log chipping project at the company's Squamish site, but Lowenberger said time may have run out for this option.

The company recently received an offer from Canadian Forest Products Ltd. to do a chipping job at the site.

"We're still talking to Canfor and we're still hopeful they will be interested in what's going on there, but it's taking longer than we thought," Lowenberger said.

Interfor is still keeping the door open to entering into a longer-term joint endeavor with Canfor at the mill site. This would involve log merchandising, whole-log chipping, unloading rail cars carrying wood chips from B.C.'s interior, barge loading of chips and a wood chipping storage facility.

Lowenberger said the company is also considering a co-operative effort which may not include chipping, but he would not discuss details. "The options we put to [employees] are going to need some review," he said. "It's still a work in progress."

Twenty-six employees were called back to work in October in an attempt to set up a temporary wood chipping operation, but workers were laid off again in mid-

November due to a low demand for wood chips on the coast. About 185 workers were put in limbo last July when Interfor announced a temporary closure due to weak market conditions. Interfor is still examining setting up a manufactured housing plant on the site.

Harry Bains, third vice-president of IWA Canada's local 2171, said getting 26 employees back to work is not good enough. "We need a long-term solution."

While most of the 185 employees remain without work, Bains said some have found other forestry jobs.

BC ECONOMIC INITIATIVES

WHISTLER/BLACKCOMB MOUNTAIN

MORE SNOW COMING TO WHISTLER

Whistler Blackcomb mountain is working with the Government of British Columbia to continue to make Whistler the leading mountain resort in North America.

Electricity committed under the Power For Jobs program over the next 10 years will allow an expansion of their current snowmaking ability. This will help extend the normal ski season here in Whistler/Blackcomb and provide dependable early-season snow conditions for skiing, boarding and recreation.

As a result, annual skier visits are expected to increase by a total of 300,000.

JOB'S THAT HELP LIFT WHISTLER.

As a result of this program 140 direct full-time equivalent jobs will be created in ski hill operations and maintenance, administration, as well as service functions.

This project will help stimulate local tourism and jobs here in Whistler.

The initiative is part of Power for Jobs which sets aside a portion of the power generated from the Columbia River for use at flexible rates to help new and expanding businesses create jobs.

BCR sign proposal stalled

By BRIGITTE PETERSEN
The Chief

A BCR Properties' proposal to install a new downtown entrance sign to promote Squamish businesses will have to wait until the District of Squamish hires a sign consultant before it is considered. Jim Cox, president of BCR Properties, made a presentation to council Feb. 2 asking for permission to place a billboard along Hwy. 99 to advertise BCR-owned Squamish Station Shopping Centre, the Chamber of Commerce and other businesses. Cox said BCR Properties would pay the majority of the sign's cost which is estimated to be about $30,000.

"We think it can be done tastefully," said Cox.

Coun. Paul Lalli said he would like to see more businesses advertised on the sign and another sign should be placed at the north end of the district along the highway to attract motorists heading south from Whistler.

Coun. Meg Fellowes said she would not support a billboard sign at this time, but council needs to find a way to allow businesses to advertise with signs.

Coun. Ted Craddock said it is a "fine-looking sign" based on a drawing supplied to council.

"This is what we should have had instead of the one we have now."

Mayor Corinne Lonsdale said the sign proposal should be referred to a sign consultant. Council has not yet hired a consultant, but Lonsdale said hiring one to help with a sign bylaw rewrite and a signage design manual review is planned.

Council approved a motion earlier that day to direct municipal staff to draw up a draft request for proposals to hire a consultant.

All signs in the district are regulated by a sign bylaw and must conform to development permit guidelines in the official community plan when placed along the highway or downtown. Signs along Hwy. 99 are also regulated by the Ministry of Transportation and Highways.

The district adopted its sign bylaw in 1983 and it has been amended five times since then to allow for certain kinds of signs.

New Chamber president "on board"

I'm pleased to be "on board" as the new president for the Chamber of Commerce serving Squamish, Britannia Beach and Curry Creek.

The Sea to Sky Corridor is going through an exciting transition from being heavily resource-industry dependent to an area whose future direction and potential are unlimited.

While there will be growing pains along the way, we have the opportunity for proactive change, and at the same time the opportunity to maintain the balance with the pristine natural surroundings that drew many of us here in the first place.

However, turnaround is not something that will happen overnight and certainly not without the ongoing, cooperative participation of all residents, businesses and officials. I'm looking forward to being an active participant in this process.

As we make this transition, we must position our community to make the shift from being a community that consumes wealth to a community that creates wealth, as when logging was in its heyday.

While challenging, it's not impossible. We already have unlimited tourism potential, space and infrastructure for industry development as well as the major drawing card — large tracts of underdeveloped waterfront.

However, in order to achieve this, we must stop scattering our energies and look towards focusing our attention on a common, shared vision for our future.

The challenge then becomes making the vision a reality and turning thought into action. We must also move away from relying on government funding to achieve goals, but rather look towards private funding and partnerships with major stakeholders already based in Squamish.

I hope to see a more unified approach to opportunity, such as the success we celebrated on obtaining the university. The securing of this international school is a positive step towards realigning our image.

Economic success from the university will be gained on many fronts: construction, start-up, staffing as well as positioning Squamish as a diversified, international destination.

Another goal I hope to work towards is to encourage tourists to contribute to the economy by spending money in local shops, restaurants and hotels, rather than visiting, enjoying our community and then departing.

Tourists need a reason to stop and stay in Squamish for a day or more. Only by capitalizing on our assets can we expect to realize returns.

Many people look to the Chamber of Commerce to be a major contributor to achieving these goals. The Chamber is only part of the network, and we are only as strong as our membership.

We strongly encourage our members to come forward with ideas to achieve economic success and to get involved with the many committees spearheaded by the Chamber.

Much to my disappointment and the board's, I have accepted the resignation of Chamber manager Jeanine

Howard Kelly

CHAMBER NEWS

Aylsworth.

During her tenure, Jeanine worked tirelessly to implement change, serve community and member needs, as well as preparing a balanced 1999 budget and setting direction for the coming year. As president, I was looking forward to working with her during my term.

Jeanine's fresh approach, genuine enthusiasm and friendly, pleasant manner will be missed. The board wishes her the best.

In closing, I would like to thank the Chamber board and staff for their support of the Chamber mandate, and I look forward to working with them to achieve our future goals.

I encourage everyone, both businesses and residents, to become actively involved in our community to help contribute to our success.

Strategy must survive EDO confusion

The timing couldn't be more interesting. Now all we need to know is what exactly happened at Municipal Hall on Friday.

The details are still hazy at this point, but it appears that economic development officer Mitchell Edgar's job may be in question only days after the public got its first long look at a new economic development strategy for the district — which happens to include a much different role for the EDO outside of Municipal Hall.

The whole situation is worrisome for the future strategy. As the report by Crane Management Consultants points out, one key to success is positive relations between the EDO and the district administration and planners. Any conflicts between municipal staff and the EDO must be resolved before a vision for economic development can be carried forward.

And carry forward it must. If Edgar leaves and his departure leads to the abandonment of the strategy, the district's reputation as a bad place to do business will sink even lower than before. Worse still, public interest, so evident at last week's open house on the strategy, will be crushed again. More than one speaker Wednesday complained that so many district plans and strategies had come to nothing in the past that it was hard to believe this one would work.

It's up to council, the district and the EDO to prove them wrong. Here's hoping they do.

Open house turned into town meeting

Speaking of the economic development strategy: we're not sure anyone warned Steve Nicol what to expect from the crowd at last week's open house.

Nicol, the mild-mannered management consultant who put the strategy report together, was probably prepared for a quiet discussion with a few members of the public and a cross-section of the business community, many of whom had been involved in the focus groups planning the strategy — in other words, an in-house affair.

Instead he got a sometimes-raucous town meeting with person after person stepping forward to talk — not about the economic development strategy, but about District council and administration's bureaucratic stalling on current development projects, the merits of the university project and the state of the forest industry, among other topics.

In fact, whenever the topic turned to the strategy itself, there was little dissent — except from certain (perhaps predictable) quarters.

Perhaps EDO Mitchell Edgar, Mayor Lonsdale and councillors should have been up at the front rather than on the sidelines to field more of the heat from this crowd — especially since so many of the issues raised had little to do with Nicol or the strategy he created and much to do with the district. But that said, a crowd of over 100 people, crammed into a room with 60 seats and capacity for maybe 80 people, is a good sign: it's indicative of the community interest in the economic development process. But it's also an indicator of the frustration people in this town feel with the current level of bureaucracy.

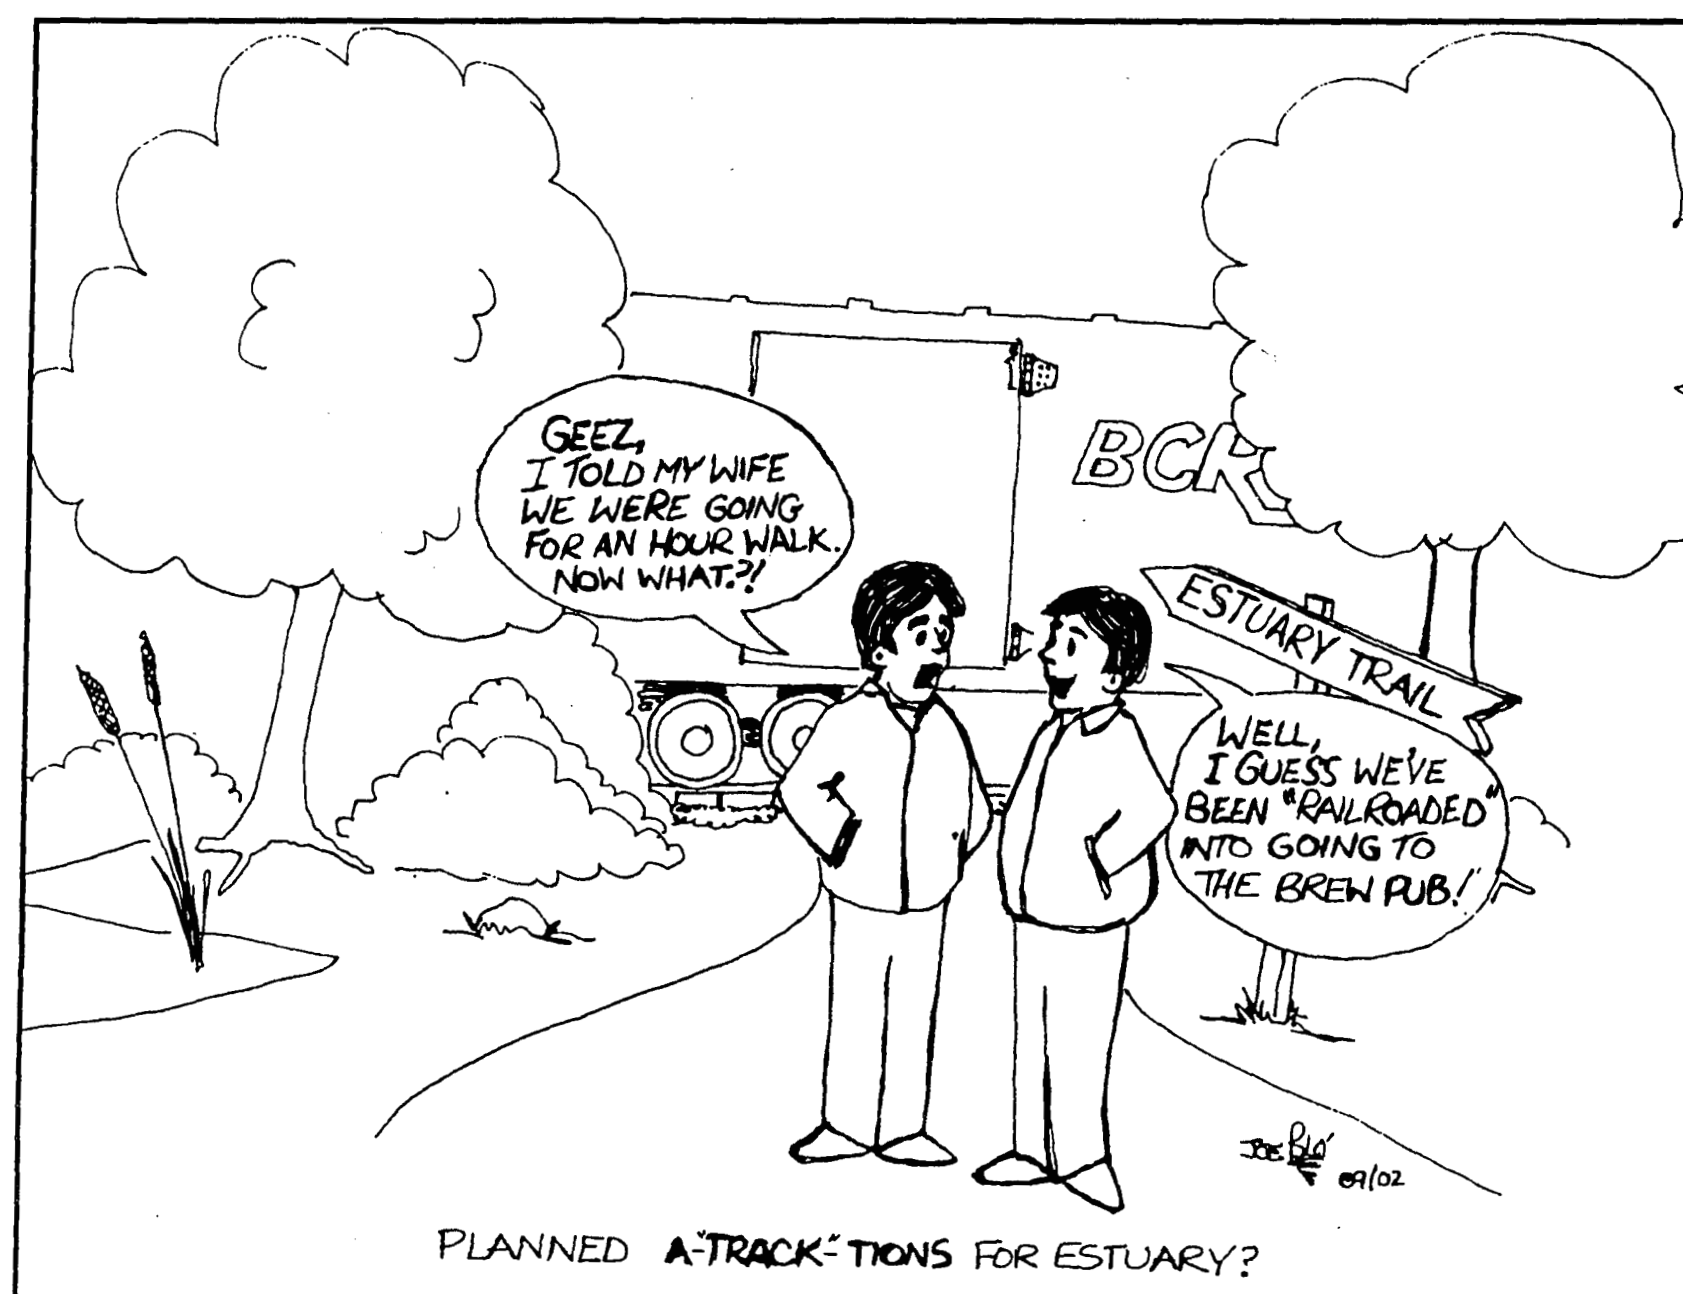

We hope that the people to whom it's directed were listening, both to the crowd and to the strategy, which calls for the creation of a positive business climate as one of the main elements needed for economic development in Squamish.

Over to you, councillors...

Step right up...

The stories on the first nine pages of this week's Chief could be a preview of this fall's election campaign. Economic development, the Squamish Estuary Management Plan, the airport, the signage, it's all there.

All that's missing are the candidates. Right now, with incumbent Corinne Lonsdale the only publicly-declared contender, it's hard to have a debate on the issues while they're happening. We think it's time those who are thinking about their own run at the mayor's chair or council this fall think about coming forward to start debate now on the issues while they're in the public eye.

Editor's Note: Due to the large number of letters received this week on the economic development strategy and other topics, Tim Shoults' column "The View From Here" will return next week.

LETTERS: Pro and con on the economic development strategy

Only 'self-serving bunk'

Editor,
Two points about the new economic development report:

It is a lot of self-serving bunk. Where is the vision? There is little reference to helping the people of Squamish out of this economic slump — only on how our economic development officer can raise his profile.

Which leads to the second point. Why hire an economic development officer at all if the municipality is going to contract out what could be the single most important document for the decade regarding our economy? Somebody is not minding their house.

Kathleen Brennan
Squamish

Push council to support strategy

"We have a tremendous opportunity as a community..."
— Anne Languedoc

are there to willingly serve the community but they can not work in a vacuum.

As council begins the municipal budgeting process on Feb. 9, they need to allocate reasonably sufficient finances (as mentioned in the report) towards the formation of the new economic development office. We need to run the district like a business and therefore apply business-like departmental structures. By this I mean that the marketing/sales/business development functions of the community need to be set apart from the operational functions of the municipality. This structure will make it easier for the EDO to seek financial support from the private sector and other levels of government. In addition, the EDO will be directly accountable to the business community via chamber of commerce without becoming just another political entity.

Creating an independent economic development office is a new concept. It has been done successfully in communities throughout the province over the last 15 years. Those communities which have aggressively implemented business development strategies such as those presented in the report have benefited greatly. Isn't it time for Squamish to do the same?

Anne Languedoc
Garibaldi Highlands

Don't allow strategy to be delayed

Editor,
For the last number of months, I, as well as many other concerned citizens of Squamish have been involved in the detailed and lengthy process of the now released economic development strategy.

The plan in my opinion is very well written and articulates the goals, spirit and values of the participants and community.

I strongly urge all Squamish residents to pick up a copy of the plan, read it, and fax a letter of support, if applicable, to the district (892-1083).

The notion that one economic development officer in one year, without a formal adopted plan and without assistance, could fix what ails this community is a pipe dream, a pipe dream held only by those who know little about what it takes to turn around a failing business or industry — or, in our case, a failing economy.

One of Mitchell Edgar (the EDO's) first stated priorities was to bring together a plan — a plan developed with the input of Squamish citizens and with the guidance of top professionals in the field of economic development strategies.

This work is now complete with a great deal of cost and time to the district.

Our council must now adopt the document and put it into place.

Be careful with alternative schools

Editor,

I read the article about alternative schools in the Feb. 2 edition of The Chief and it concerns and disturbs me. I would like to challenge parents to be extremely cautious when placing your child into the care of any alternative teaching method.

The European culture has many wonderful traditions which I personally appreciate, but it also has a history worth remembering and retelling. I have listened with a sad heart to stories of the elderly who were forced to give their precious children to be educated in a system of "power and control." The basic belief of the system was also "give me a child until he or she is five and we will have him for life." It was called communism.

They were forced to hand over their children, we give up our children willingly. My challenge to parents is we are responsible and privileged to teach our children independence, responsibility and respect.

To think independently means to learn discernment and wisdom and to accept responsibility for choices and actions. Respect comes from modeling a life of integrity in the place where it matters the most at home.

I have discovered that the most confident, secure children are the ones with parents who provide an orderly and structured home and parents who are committed to loving each other. A novel idea on how to give our children a hope for the future.

When choosing a caregiver check out the integrity of the "independent" caregiver and keep in mind that every person has the right in Canada to have child pornography in their home.

Eagle Reserve Society thanks council for cancelling airport heliport decision

Editor,

On behalf of the Society, I wish to express our sincere thanks to the members of council who voted against further development of the airport.

They have once again lived up to their platform.

The eagles of Brackendale are an important part of our ecosystem and an asset to our tourist industry and must be protected.

I am sure the people of Brackendale will also appreciate this vote.

'Hola' from Squamish artist in Mexico

(Editor's note: Carolina Simmie is a Squamish artist study and pursuing her art in Mexico.)

Hola Amigos...

I'm living in a desert climate, which has many temperature changes through the day. Early morning when I rise it could be cold, so I light my small metal wood stove to ward off the chill. At about 10 a.m., I can move out to my deck, situated high above San Miguel, where the sun has warmed the brick floor. By noon it's very hot! Sometimes a breeze comes up. I have a round table and umbrella I put up for some shade while I work at writing or painting. My casita is surrounded by trees to provide a feeling of privacy and greenery. If I venture down the cobblestone streets to El Centro, I wear a dress for coolness and a hat to protect me from too much sun.

At about 6 p.m., as afternoon moves to evening, the sun disappears fast below the horizon. Sunsets are fabulous glowing red-orange circles of colours, gone within 15 minutes. With this comes cool evenings, sweater, pants, hat, plus a vest to keep me warm. At night the sky is clear navy blue, full of bright stars. Another perfect desert day in Colonial Palmita la Danza #6.

I've been in San Miguel three months. It's high up in the foothills of the Sierra Madres in the interior of Mexico, four hours northwest via bus from Mexico City. In my quest for an artist's retreat I searched and asked other adventurous souls where I might find a special place and found San Miguel with its lovely Mexican people. I have come to be awed by their ability to accept and love me with just a smile.

The colonial style of cobblestone streets, sometimes steep, sometimes narrow and small, makes walking a delight. I always find a new way to the Jardin. Buildings grow in that slow Mexican style. I've witnessed a pile of sand on the side of a calle go slowly bucket-by-bucket up plank ramps to disappear behind a door, gone like an army of ants takes food to an anthill.

My own casita can be described as a penthouse. Enclosed behind a brick wall are five other adventure seekers, each in their own casita, plus the landlord — an American Buddhist married to a Mexican seniorita, two children and a mother-in-law — all live in comfort and quiet way above the city.

My casita, a small dwelling, is resting on a huge brick deck with an outdoor bano where I enjoy afternoon showers in the privacy and warmth of the sun. A small walk-through kitchen, like a camp with bare necessities, is attached to a larger room in which I have a bed, closet, desk and wood stove.

On market day I gather a backpack, some pesos and set out. All foods are bought at separate stalls. I mostly eat fruits and vegetables plus some cheese and dairy products. Fresh foods need to be soaked 20 minutes to sterilize before eating. I allow time for this. All drinking water is bought in bottles. Tap water is used for showers and dishes where I add bleach to sterilize against bacteria. Getting used to buying and preparing food takes a good chunk of the day. The idea of a supermarket takes away from personal contact and I learn more about the locals. Living in a community with Spanish as the language and Mexican customs and traditions continues to stimulate me. I see another way in the world not just the Canadian way. I also see what a happy and gentle people the Mexicans are and that delights me. I continue to enjoy my stay here and look forward to my return to Canada in the spring.

Hasta Luego,

Carolina Simmie
San Miguel, Mexico

It's that time of year again where outrageous footwear and good causes come together.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Squamish is hosting its 19th annual Bowl for Millions on March 26, 27 and 28 at Garibaldi Lanes in Squamish.

Bowlers have the chance to win small prizes as well as fantastic grand prizes to be announced later, according to Corinne Swanson of BBBS. The event is the main fundraiser for the group, with all money raised remaining here to benefit the kids of Squamish.

They're now accepting applications for teams of five or more people to collect pledges (a minimum of $25 per bowler is required) and participate in the fun. Teams are also encouraged to challenge each other and to come to the event in costume.

To sign up a team or to donate a prize or sponsor a lane, contact Wendy Brown at 892-9215.

Healthwatch heart profiles available

Shoppers Drug Mart is holding a Heart Health Clinic Day in Squamish Thursday in support of National Heart Health Day.

Pharmacists will provide people with a free Healthwatch Heart Plan, a Heart Profile and information sheets on cholesterol and blood pressure.

Anyone currently taking medication for high blood pressure or high cholesterol can speak to a pharmacist at the Shoppers Drug Mart in the Chieftain Centre Mall.

Nominations open for Order of B.C.

Nominations for the province's highest recognition of excellence and achievement are now being accepted.

The Order of British Columbia is presented each year by the lieutenant-governor to outstanding British Columbians who have excelled in any field of endeavor, including community leadership, the arts, labor, business, volunteer service, research and education.

Recipients are selected by an independent advisory council headed by Chief Justice Allan McEachern. The deadline for receiving nominations is March 10, and recipient names will be made public in May, with an official dinner and ceremony in Victoria in June.

Nomination forms are available at B.C. Government Agents' offices or on the internet at www.protocol.gov.bc.ca.

Zukermania hits Squamish

By TIM SHOULTS
The Chief

It's been a long time between trips to Squamish for George Zukerman.

No, the world-renowned bassoon soloist hasn't brought his "Evening of Zukermania" to town before. But he has been through the Sea to Sky corridor — about 25 years ago, according to Joanna Schwarz of the Howe Sound Performing Arts Association, which is bringing him to the Eagle Eye Community Theatre this Friday night at 8 p.m.

Back then he was in charge of the "Overtures" classical music series brought here by the Squamish Valley Music Society, the forerunner to the HSPAA, "so some people will remember him," Schwarz said.

But this evening will be different — in fact, any evening with Zukerman is bound to be a little different. It's not just anyone who can take the bassoon — a "symphonic piece of plumbing," as he refers to it — from the back ranks of the orchestra to the honored position of soloist.

That's what Zukerman has done for the last four decades, unearthing an extensive repertoire of bassoon works from the 18th and 19th century and encouraging modern composers to write works for the instrument.

His quest to bring glory to the bassoon has taken him to countries in five continents, where he's earned a reputation for off-the-wall and witty concert presentations.

In addition to 33 European tours and regular trips to Australia, South Africa and the former Soviet Union, he has given bassoon recitals in exotic locales from Tuktoyaktuk in the Northwest Territories to Zomba, Malawi and Kabul, Afghanistan — where he says the audience was "300 plus two camels."

His programme for Friday's concert with pianist Leslie Janos features "A Musical Banquet" including a baroque appetizer, a main course of Mozart, a Soufflé by Robert Schumann and a special dessert — a piece written especially for Zukerman by UBC music professor emeritus Elliot Weisgarber on the occasion of Zukerman's first Japanese tour.

"It's not just a classical concert with a strange instrument," Schwarz promises. "It's an entertaining evening."

The evening gets entertaining even before Zukerman takes the stage at 8 p.m. The doors will open at 7 p.m. and a group of nearly 20 young local performers will entertain the crowd for an hour before the show and during the intermission in the theatre lobby with vocal and instrumental music and dance.

"That way people can grab their seats, return to the lobby and enjoy some entertainment before the show," Schwarz said.

The pre-show has been arranged by HSPAA director Michael Plowman.

Minch Minchin gets high honor from Legion

By KEVIN MCKINNON
The Chief

L.C. (Minch) Minchin is well known in the Squamish area for his work with the Squamish branch of the Royal Canadian Legion. One of the activities Minchin says he enjoys most, speaking to school kids about Remembrance day, has earned him the Meritorious Service Medal, the highest level of award a Legion member can receive.

"I was really taken aback," said Minchin, "because they were already good enough to make me a life member."

Minchin served with the British Army during the Second World War and was among the forces who landed at Normandy on D-Day and said he has seen many traumatic things both on the battlefield and off.

Minchin attends the Remembrance Day ceremonies at Squamish schools and speaks to the students about the war, and of the sacrifices made by those who fought.

The president of the Squamish Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion, June Gardner, and other members of the branch felt that Minchin should be recognized for his work.

"Because of his efforts we have such a great attitude at Remembrance Day events from school children," said Gardner. She noted that many other Legions have problems caused by lack of interest at Remembrance Day ceremonies. In Squamish the Legion recently moved their ceremonies to a bigger location because of high turnouts.

Only one other Meritorious Service Medal has been awarded to a member of the Squamish Legion. Gardner pointed out that the application must be approved by the Legion, Pacific Command and Dominion Command. "It's going to be a big deal," said Gardner. "The (Legion)

Pacific Command president and the mayor will be there.

Minchin will be awarded the Meritorious Service Medal on Saturday, Feb. 13 at a ceremony at the Squamish Legion.

Among the criteria for eligibility for the medal there is mention of, "unusual personal sacrifice of time."

Minchin openly shares his opinion of armed conflict with all who ask.

"What a stupid way to settle disputes war is," he said.

Get in the 'red' with annual heart/stroke campaign

By TIM SHOULTS
The Chief

Sunday may be Valentine's Day, but Sonya Miller and Karen Vanzella want people to dress red on Friday to help save lives.

Friday is the third annual Dress Red Day for the Heart and Stroke Foundation of B.C. and Yukon, and it's rapidly becoming the foundation's biggest fundraiser during Heart Month.

Employees in organizations and businesses across the province can buy an artistically-designed button for $5 and wear red at work on Friday to support the Heart and Stroke Foundation. Here in Squamish, buttons are available from several participating businesses including

The Chief, local banks and credit unions, the schools, grocery stores and other businesses.

"It's getting to be a major event," said Vanzella, local coordinator of the Dress Red event and co-chair of the local Heart Month activities with Miller.

The Dress Red event is beginning to eclipse the traditional door-to-door canvass for funds because of concerns with fraudulent fundraisers and home invasions in the Lower Mainland, Vanzella noted.

But in Squamish the door-to-door is still going strong from Feb. 14 to 28, with a steady stable of over 50 volunteers canvassing in all neighborhoods except Brackendale. Brackendale Elementary School students will be collecting pledges that neighborhood for the "Jump Rope For Heart" on Feb. 25, also to raise funds for the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

The local organization is looking for volunteers interested in helping to organize next year's campaign. For more information call Karen Vanzella at 898-5682 or Sonya Miller at 898-5730.

Look back in time

News from years gone by in Squamish, compiled by Kevin McKinnon from the archives of the Squamish Times at the Squamish Public Library and The Chief

Five years ago this week

The two-week longshoremen's strike reached an impasse over 25 cents an hour Sunday. Federal mediator Bill Lewis met with striking dock workers and representatives of the maritime employers in Vancouver after federal Human Resources Minister Lloyd Axworthy demanded an immediate end to the strike. No new talks were planned as of Monday morning.

Ten years ago this week

When the Squamish winds decide to howl in their full fury and the mercury in the thermometer takes an uncharacteristic dip, even the weather station at the Squamish Airport is not spared. The wind damage was caused when the station's main door was blown away, followed by many files and charts. Frozen printer ink kept mechanical printers from printing out basic information.

Twenty years ago this week

Squamish council agreed that public access along our river banks and water front should be protected and maintained as much as possible. In consideration of two lease renewal applications to the B.C. Land Service by Whonnock Lumber and local resident Dave McGee, Aldermen Nick Candy and Bill Street presented a report recommending use of the land for commercial purposes.

Chocolate: for pleasure, health or psychology

Chocolate promises pleasure. And romance if you hold to the age-old belief that chocolate is an aphrodisiac. More likely, it's a matter of one sensual pleasure that can't help but lead to another.

There are other reasons to love chocolate. Not only is it full of substances that make you happy, but those who indulge in chocolate live longer. While the reason is still unknown, speculation points to antioxidants as the health benefit. In a recent medical study, men who ate a moderate amount of sweets, up to three chocolate bars a month, had a considerably lower risk of death than non-candy eaters. Those who ate three or more candy bars a week had a lesser, but still decreased risk.

Chocolate contains the same antioxidant chemicals present in wine. So pour a glass of red, crack open the chocolate truffles, be happy and live forever — with a little romance along the way. Can it get any better than this? You bet. If you're searching for a compatible partner for that blissfully long life, dig out a box of chocolates. Check out their choice, it reveals their inner selves. Here's the skinny according to psychotherapist Murray Langham, author of Chocolate Therapy: Dare to Discover Your Inner Centre. Watch out for those who choose circular shapes. They're likable and friendly but can be superficial. Oval shapes like to stretch their limits and are creative. Squares are honest and truthful, while rectangles are calm, good listeners. Lovers of milk chocolate tend to live in the past. Those who prefer dark are forward-looking. White chocolate lovers find it hard to make decisions.

Hold on, there's more. Apparently filling preference gives the greatest number of clues. According to the author, "Centers link into our own subconscious mind, the inner part that guides our emotions, moods, inner thoughts and self-esteem." What kind of brownies did he indulge in, I wonder. Anyway, almond lovers are quick-witted and keen to help others. Brazil nuts fans are diplomatic, cultured and stylish. Soft-caramel lovers get things done, while hard-caramel eaters are firm in their dealings with others. Coconut types are passionate dreamers, coffee choosers like everything done at once. Orange fanciers are excellent in emergencies.

Good health, happiness and a bit of fun. We ought to be thankful for chocolate. Perhaps make St. Valentine its patron saint, and his day dedicated to love and chocolate. If nothing else, it's a day to indulge in chocolate in some form.

Here's a rich and simple dessert anyone can make. Chocolate transforms homey bread pudding to luxuriant treat. It's even a deliciously decadent breakfast.

Chocolate Bread Pudding
6 cups cubed French bread
2 cups half and half cream or whipping cream
6 ounces (about 160 grams) semi-sweet chocolate, chopped

1/3 cup dark raisins
2 large eggs
1/3 cup sugar

Spread the bread cubes out to dry overnight. Heat the cream, stir in the chocolate and raisins. Remove from heat and let stand until chocolate melts. Stir to blend. Beat the eggs and sugar in a large bowl. Beat in the cooled chocolate mixture. Stir in the bread cubes. Let stand for 30 minutes, until bread is well saturated.

Students start early on university

Maybe Grade 3 or 4 is not too young to have an eye on post-secondary education and its rising costs. Those piggy-banks could be just what is needed.

Whistler Secondary, a community school, will most likely be taking advantage of the program called UBC Connect. It runs during the last week in June each year and is intended to give Grade 10s and 11s the opportunity to experience life on the campus for a week. These high school students live in residence, meet some professors from various faculties, and generally get the feel of what life at the university is like. This is a good time to have such information, since it may affect those big decisions that will soon have to be made.

Howe Sound Secondary is participating in a similar program, but at the Grade 12 level. It is called the Student Shadowing Program, and gives the senior high school student a valuable chance to taste the daily routine of a UBC undergraduate.

The student, on registering for it, is paired up with a UBC student in the faculty of his/her choice, and then spends half a day going to classes with activities. This particular program takes place in February and March.

CONSTANCE RULKA/FOR THE CHIEF
Mamquam Elementary School principal Mike Edwards serves students more than learning last week.

These are not the only ways for high school students to get acquainted though. Every Friday, except for statutory holidays, they can take part in a guided tour of the campus given by a UBC student. Tours last from 9:30 to 11 a.m.

A student recruiter is also available to talk about the visitor's educational plans, and maybe arrange attendance at a class.

Teacher Appreciation

At the end of a quad, the leadership class at HSSS does give the teachers some recognition for their efforts, and the teachers deserve it for their many contributions to the school and the community, as well as for their main task of serving up a buffet of assorted knowledge every day.

One Friday a month, for example, the staff at HSSS dress casually for work and pay for that privilege by making donations to some local good cause. In January, the recipient was the Squamish Estuary Conservation Society. Last Wednesday, recognition took the form of a bumper breakfast served in the home economics room at 8 a.m. The students were doing a marvelous job, making toast and golden waffles, scrambling eggs and frying plump sausages, and the teachers were restoring their energies after marking all those exams and writing all those reports.

Coming Back
by Carrianna LeMay Doan

With millions watching the 500-metre speed skating event of the 1994 Winter Olympic Games, I fell and crashed into a barrier. I was devastated. I found myself asking, "Why did this happen to me?" Searching for answers, I met someone who explained Jesus to me: who he was, how he could answer my questions. I invited Jesus to be the Lord of my life. Now there's a peace in my life. On or off the ice, he's part of everything I do. I took that attitude with me to the Nagano Winter Olympics. I knew, no matter how I did, Jesus would be there for me. When I won the gold medal, I was thrilled. But for me, true significance comes from my relationship with Jesus.

The Grad experience

Ben Thompson

YOUTHSCAPES

Grade 12 is easily compared to the twilight zone, or the X-Files which never seem to be solved until 30 years after they happen. High school life is over as you know it at the end of Grade 11, everything changes that summer.

Grade 12 is the limbo period between realities, real life, and high school life. In Grade 12 you are still trying to do the high school things like being on school teams, planning dances, or keeping up your social appearances. Then on top of that you are trying to immerse yourself with the real world, and come up with some kind of career path or idea of what endeavors you plan. Even the term we are referred to is different. It is no longer students or kids nor is it adult or even person it is "grad". I am a "grad", my friends are "grads". Being in Grade 12 is truly an out-of-body experience. We are trying to prepare ourselves for this "world of chaos" while still trying to be kids and meet the expectations of others.

Over this past month all of my friends, including myself have been trying to make plans for after graduation. The majority of them all care about success. Not knowing what success meant for me, I remembered this poem which is kept on our refrigerator which I believe to be a checklist on your path to success.

So this is for all the grads, and anyone else who may have false pretenses about success, and their life. This is the recipe for happiness for yourself, your friends and your family.

Success

To laugh often and love much;

To win the respect of intelligent persons and the affection of children;

To earn the approval of honest critics and endure the betrayal of a false friend;

To appreciate beauty;

To find the best in others;

To give of one's self without the slightest thought of return;

To have accomplished a task, whether it is a healthy child, a rescued soul, a garden patch or a redeemed social condition;

To have played and laughed with enthusiasm and sung in exultation;

To know that even one life has breathed easier because you have fulfilled it;

This is to have succeeded.

Cheers to the Grads of '99 all over the world and keep up the good work.

Park to be a multi-purpose facility

Last month in my column, I talked about our dreams for the Heritage Park in 1999. There are some exciting things on the horizon, and 1999 will be the year that we make some major steps towards the next critical development step for the project. But this month let's step even beyond that and look into the vision for the Heritage Park as a multi-purpose community facility.

The West Coast Railway Heritage Park started off in its initial concept as a railway museum, and indeed that's what many still see it as. The design, however, calls for something much broader — that of a multi-purpose attraction facility designed around a rail heritage theme. Our goal is not just a narrow niche market of railway heritage enthusiasts, but rather a broad attraction with cultural tourism and family appeal. Indeed, our growth to date and guest visits indicate that this design is successful — less than 10 per cent of our 21,000 guests last year were traditional railway enthusiasts. The Heritage Park's design for uses includes the following markets:

- A major cultural tourism/heritage/entertainment attraction for British Columbia;
- A great site for holding community events;
- First class education and research facilities related to railway heritage;
- A great filming location with a small community based on the railway.

It is this design that, over time, will make the project self-sustainable as well as a major contributor to the Squamish economy. We've got lots of building to do yet, but the plan is on track. Success will see us create another 300 person-years of employment and attract approximately $12 million in new investment over the next ten years. Results will be the direct employment of some

TIM SHOULTS/THE CHIEF

John Stathers of The Investment Centre: an independent financial advisor can offer whatever services a client needs and act with flexibility and freedom.

The freedom of independence

By Tim Shoults

RRSP season sends investors scurrying to the banks to start or top up their investments in time for the tax season.

But there's another way to go. Independent financial advisors can offer freedom and flexibility with the same kind of growth potential and security available to the largest financial institutions, according to John Stathers, one of three full-time advisors at The Investment Centre on Second Avenue in Squamish.

Independent financial advisors are unique in that they aren't required to offer a particular company's funds, but can help clients select from up to 2,000 different investment products, compared to "families" of about 20 funds offered by most banks or mutual fund companies. But like banks, the majority of the investments made by an independent financial advisor are guaranteed against loss by the Canadian Deposit Insurance Corporation.

That lets them pick the top performers in several different categories and allows maximum returns. "It's tremendous value to the customer," Stathers explains.

That's especially important in Canada, which is unique in offering a tax-sheltered retirement investment plan like the RRSP. "It is a phenomenal opportunity that people need to be able to take full advantage of," says Stathers.

Another area an independent financial advisor can help with is in assisting clients to get better control over their company pensions.

"Many Canadians don't realize that under certain circumstances most company pensions are transferable," Stathers explains.

That's useful for people nearing retirement who want more control over their investments and retirement income, as well as for people caught in corporate downsizing who are unsure what to do with accrued pensions. An independent financial advisor can help people move company pensions to another investment vehicle and manage lump-sum severance packages for tax-efficient use.

Stathers recommends that people start exploring their options at least 10 years before retirement.

An advisor helps by finding out what your target retirement income is and helps you determine the best path to get there.

"It comes back to what the client needs and wants," says Stathers.

"I'm the conduit."

Thoughts on RRSP investing

Information provided by Scotiabank

1. Think (& plan) long-term:

As we saw in 1998, the stock market can be volatile in the short term. In fact, over the last 50 years Canadian stock markets have produced negative returns approximately one year out of every five. However, over that same time period they have averaged returns of about 10 per cent annually. In the future it is not unreasonable to expect the same upheavals and transitions as we've seen in the past. Financial security comes from setting your goals, evaluating your risks and letting time work in your favor. And that's where RRSPs come into play as their long term nature differentiates them from other investments.

2. Maximize tax sheltered returns:

By making the most of RRSP's you can earn tax sheltered investment returns until you withdraw the money. And when you do it's often taxed at lower rates. RRSP contributions also lower your taxable income today freeing up more money to invest. Most of us have accumulated unused RRSP contribution room which can be carried forward indefinitely starting with 1991. Put the power of compounding to work for you by catching up on your contributions right away. If you do not have the money available to do so most financial institutions offer RRSP loans at rates as low as prime.

3. Make regular contributions:

By investing on a regular basis (i.e. monthly, weekly, etc.) you again put the power of compound interest to work for you if you invest in interest-bearing products like GICs. If your portfolio consists of mutual funds (or other equity investments) you take advantage of dollar cost averaging. This means you buy more when the prices are lower and less when they are higher. The advantage this has over saving up for a lump sum purchase is the average buying price can be lower over the long term.

4. Diversification:

Don't put all your eggs in one basket as you could be left with no eggs at all should a sector, market or country take a power dive. Diversification provides you with a tried and true way of reducing the risk to your portfolio. Effective diversification comes from:

- spreading your investments among the three major asset classes of cash, income and growth,
- alternating the maturity dates of your GIC's and bonds (a good policy is for one-fifth of them to come due every year),
- having different objectives for your equity funds (i.e. don't have three different emerging market funds).

5. Invest in the world:

Canada accounts for only three per cent of the world's equity markets. By using your maximum 20 per cent foreign content for RRSPs you have the opportunity to invest in some of the world's best performing economies. You can also take advantage of certain unique GICs and mutual funds whose returns reflect foreign markets but that do not count towards your 20 per cent limit.

Does your portfolio have a healthy heart?

Information provided by The Investment Centre

Canadians are taking increasing control of their financial futures, especially when it comes to retirement planning. Gone are the days when employees could rely entirely on corporations or government to provide for their retirement income. And with today's longer life expectancies, it becomes even more critical to plan for the future, simply because there's going to be so much of it!

In the 1920s, when Canada established a retirement age of 65, life expectancy was only 61. Not many people were expected to survive and collect pensions. Now however, life expectancy is 78, which means the average Canadian will depend on benefits and investment income for over 10 years.

These new realities point to the importance of having a healthy heart at the centre of your portfolio, something that will grow with you, providing for the long years ahead. Many investors are now favoring a well-managed mutual fund, one that focuses on Canadian equities. That's because equities (or stocks) have consistently outperformed the other two asset classes — bonds and money market investments — over the last 50 years. And, by choosing a well-managed fund, whether all-equity or part-equity — as in an asset allocation fund, investors can spread their risk over a number of securities that are continually monitored by a professional mutual fund investment manager.

In the past, many investors were content to hold "low-risk" investments such as GICs and Canada Savings bonds. The returns, however, were not always enough to keep pace with inflation and pay the taxes. As a result, investors weren't gaining very much at all, which meant the heart of their portfolio wasn't as healthy as it could be.

Today, investors are looking to both equity and asset allocation mutual funds, to put them in a more favorable position. These funds have the potential to outpace inflation and still have enough left over to achieve long-term goals. There are a number of different Canadian equity mutual funds from which to choose: large, mid, and small capital funds, disciplined funds that mirror stock market indices to name a few. Regardless of which type you favor, the most telling indicator of a fund's ultimate success is its 'marriage.' A good fund will have a strong mutual fund company paired up with a top mutual fund manager.

This combination is critical because a large fund company has the ability to conduct and gather research from around the globe, putting valuable information into the hands of its managers. And that's when solid investment returns can be made over the long term — because a talented manager digs deep, analyzing the data for clues that other managers may miss. They go well beyond the data to make informed decisions for the investors who hold units in the fund. In the end, as we begin to take increasing charge of our own destinies, it behooves us to consider the benefits of a well-managed Canadian equity mutual fund. Along with a solid asset allocation fund, it can provide a key component to the healthy heart we all need in our portfolios to carry us into the long and rewarding years ahead.

What fees are charged on an RRSP?

You should be aware that there may be fees associated with your RRSP. Fees may be charged to your RRSP when you make a withdrawal, when you close your RRSP, or transfer the funds to a different RRSP issuer. These fees range from as low as $25 to as high as $100.

As well, trustee RRSPs have an annual administration fee, and may have transaction fees. These are not tax deductible.

Mutual fund RRSPs charge management expenses, and you may also pay a front-end or back-end (deferred sales charge) load fee.

Before you decide to invest in any RRSP, find out what the annual costs are, and the fees for winding up the plan.

Because you're too busy living today to worry about managing your investments for tomorrow.

BRIEFS

Bantam Reps win playoff opener

Squamish's Bantam Rep team has ended its regular season with a big 8-5 win over first-place Grandview.

The game started off with a great poke check by goalie Parker Wright foiling a two man breakaway by Grandview. Things only got better from there with Brad Cameron controlling much of the play, notching a goal and assisting on three. Linemate Derek Green found the holes for two goals and an assist.

Ryan Cook opened up the ice nicely to allow Travis Buckley a goal. Defenceman Matt Lindsay scored twice while Harinder Virk pounded one in from the high slot.

Centre Chris Adams was a must-have against a hard hitting team like Grandview. Running with a short bench, the team was thankful to have call-ups Scott Sellers and Kyle Peek who scored a goal as well.

The team carried their winning streak into the first game of the playoffs on Saturday by beating West Vancouver 6-3 at the Brennan Park arena. Cameron led the way scoring two goals and making three assists while Green found the net twice and assisted twice.

Andrew Gillis shoveled one in off a rebound in front of the net and assisted on another.

Pressure man Mitchell McHale drove one in and well-earned assists went to Mike Turner and Ryan Cook.

Squamish boxer bound for Canada Winter Games

Steve Featherston will fly to Corner Brook, Nfld. on Feb. 27 to compete in the Canada Winter Games.

Featherston was selected to B.C.'s boxing team by defeating the silver medalist of Canada at this year's Provincial Championships.

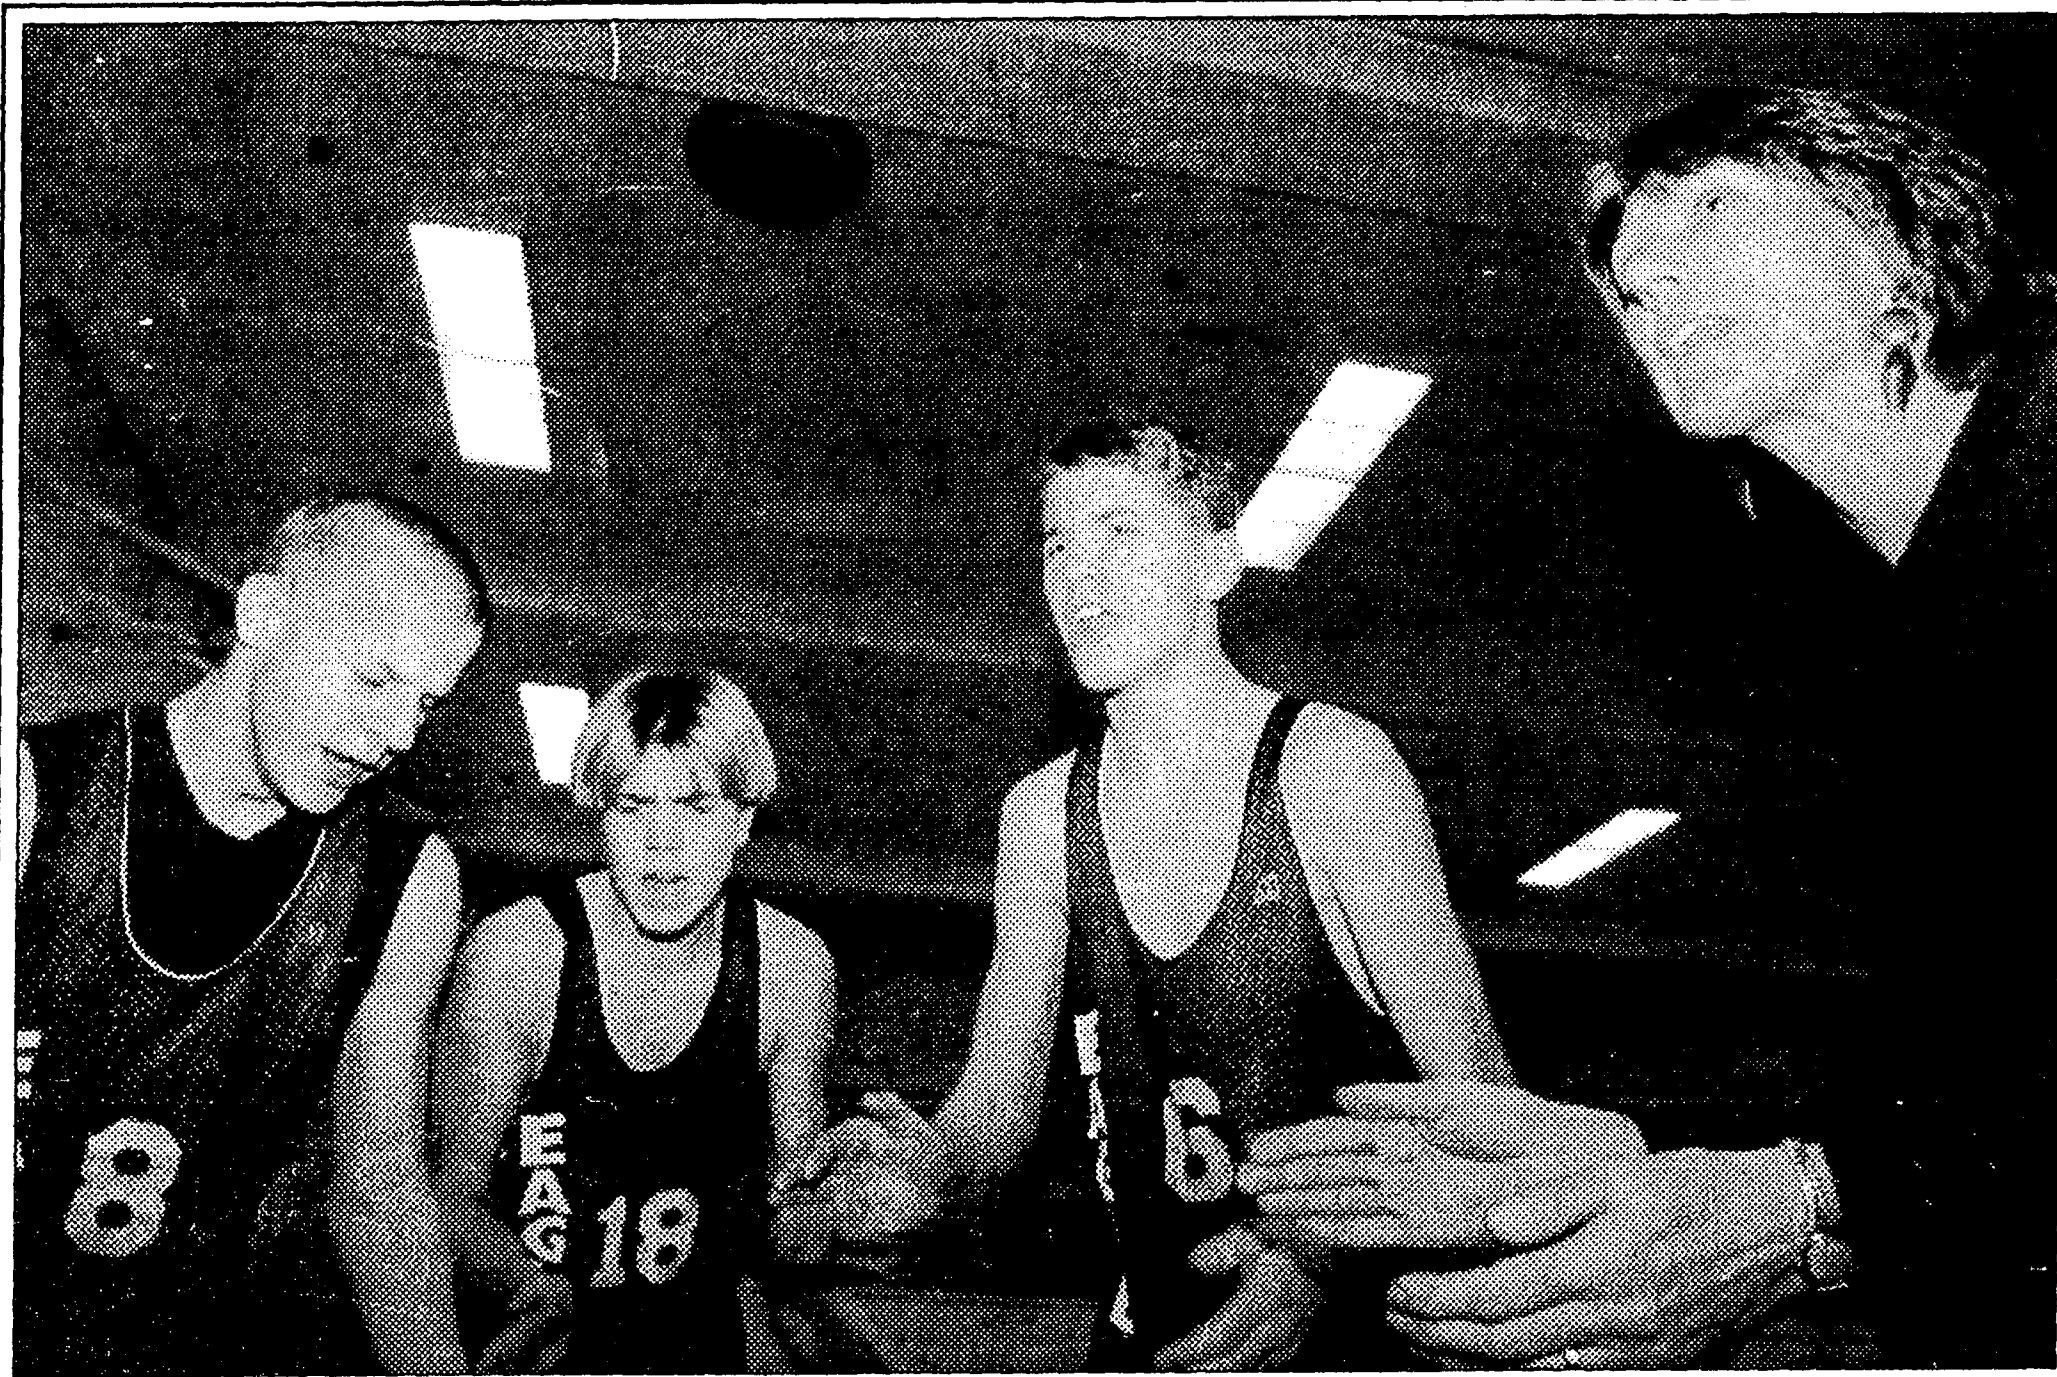

Featherston has accomplished a great deal in boxing and has only been active in the sport for two years.

He was the Western Canadian Golden Gloves champion in 1998.

Thunder takes on Belgians in minor hockey fundraiser

BY KEVIN MCKINNON
The Chief

A hockey game of a different kind will be played in the Brennan Park Arena on Monday, Feb. 15, when a team of Belgian university hockey players take on the Howe Sound Men's League's Pair Tree Thunder.

The Belgian contingent will be made up mainly of students from the University of Leuven's team, the Hasselt Haskeys. The Haskeys are a semi-pro team who play in the BD1, the Belgian first division. The squad will be filled out with several Canadian players who will be meeting the team in Squamish.

One of the Haskeys' top players is Canadian Jason Nadeau who is studying at the University of Leuven. This is Nadeau's first year as a semi-pro. He was a player/coach for the Leuven Jayhawks University team for the last two years as well.

"We were going to do it last year," said Nadeau.

"We started with about 15 players and that got whittled down to eight and then less."

The squad is being made up from three different Belgian teams.

"The guys we have coming are really good guys and they're all decent players," said Nadeau.

Nadeau leads the Haskeys in scoring with 27 goals and 24 assists in 15 games and is one of the top five scorers in the league.

The Haskeys' coach and first-line centre is Gert Peeters, a veteran of the Belgian national team. Peeters is the top scoring Belgian player in the league with 21 goals and 25 assists in 15 games and is one of the fastest players in the league.

Other players on the Haskeys' squad include:

•Swede Magnus Eklund, who played against Markus Naslund and Peter Forsberg in his PeeWee days;

•Professional motorcycle racer Jo Huyskens will take the right wing for the Haskeys and is well known in the league for his speed on the ice;

•Francois Raymond who plays for the Leige Bulldogs, the top team in the Belgian first division, will join the squad. The Bulldogs had an unbroken 14-game winning streak before Christmas;

•Jean-Marie Renard, a second line winger who plays for the Leige Bulldogs as well;

•Nico Kemp, a second-year university player on the team's third-line centre who works in Leuven having completed his studies.

The Belgian university squad will be augmented by a number of Canadians, among them:

•Sean Corrsadden who played for the Ridge Meadows Junior Flames four years ago;

•Keith Allan from Williams Lake. Allan is also a roller-hockey player who made it to nationals;

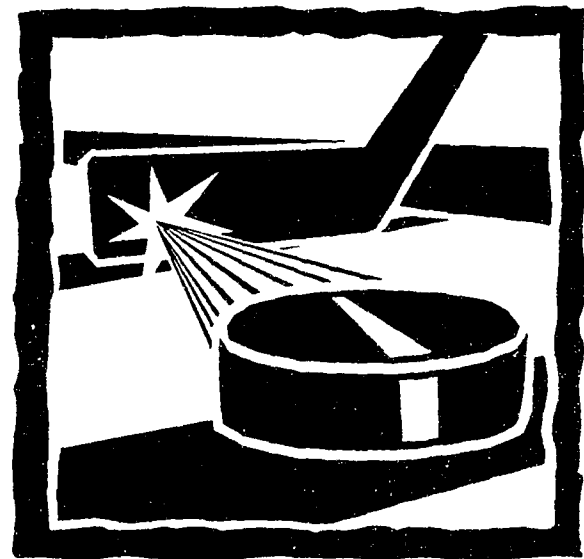

•Shane Ryan is also a top level roller-hockey player who took game to the national level;

•Ryan played hockey for Coquitlam Juvenile team two years ago.

The University of Leuven's Hasselt Haskeys will take on Pair Tree Thunder at the Brennan Park Leisure Centre arena on Monday, Feb. 15 at 7 p.m.

Entry to the event, being held in support of Squamish Minor Hockey, will be by donation.

"It's going to be fun," said Nadeau.

Squamish skaters return from Canadians, Murphy Slovenia-bound

BY KEVIN MCKINNON
The Chief

The Squamish Skating Club's Ryan Shollert, Keegan Murphy and coach Eileen Murphy returned from the Canadian National Figure Skating Championships in Ottawa last weekend.

Shollert, who attended the Canadians last year and finished 15th in the Junior Men's division, advanced to an 11th place final this year. Keegan Murphy finished eighth overall in the Novice Men's division.

"I wish I would have done a little better," said 21-year-old Shollert. "In the short program I made a few mistakes."

Errors in the short program are often difficult for a skater to recover from. Although Shollert placed 15th in the short, he placed ninth in the long program, which pulled him up to his overall 11th-place standing.

Shollert did feel there were advantages to being a return competitor to the Canadians.

"I wasn't as nervous and had lots more confidence," he said.

Shollert spent time training in Barrie, Ont. last summer and had an opportunity to see his competition on ice.

"From training back east last summer I got to know the guys, so when I got to the Canadians I wasn't intimidated," said Shollert.

Shollert is now looking to the future, specifically next season.

"My goal is to go Senior. It's going to be a big step. My main goal is I want that Senior bronze medal next year," said Shollert.

"I believe I can do it."

Thirteen-year-old Keegan Murphy's performance at his first trip to the Canadians was spectacular, finishing in an eighth place overall finish and an invitation to compete in Slovenia for the Tri Trophy.

"It was great, better than I thought it would be," said Murphy. "I skated the best I could. I had fun. It was a great experience."

Being named to the National Development Team and the invitation to Slovenia came as a shock to Murphy.

"That was one big surprise, I wasn't expecting it," he said.

Murphy will also represent British Columbia as a member of the Team B.C. squad at the Canada Winter Games in Corner Brook, Nfld. at the end of this month.

Both skaters would like to thank their coaches at the Squamish Skating Club for its support.

CHILDREN & ART

We believe that art is an integral part of life. Through art exploration and experimentation children are encouraged to find creative solutions. Children are given tools necessary

HOROSCOPES

FEBRUARY 7-13

Aries - March 21/April 20

Several loved ones are being secretive about a family matter. Don't get angry or push them to tell you what's going on. Try to be patient. You'll learn the facts soon enough. The person whom you've been seeing wants to take a break. While this upsets you, you know that it is the best thing to do. Aquarius plays a key role.

Taurus - April 21/May 21

Don't be stubborn when it comes to a business meeting late in the week. Listen to what others have to say. Some of them make very valid points. Try to work out a compromise. A close friend is having romantic problems. Offer your advice, because you've been in his or her place in the past.

Gemini - May 22/June 21

A business associate reveals his or her true feelings for you. No matter how you feel, don't get involved with him or her. It only will create problems at work. A loved one asks for your opinion about a family matter. Be honest - even if he or she won't want to hear what you have to say.

Cancer - June 22/July 22

You have a falling out with that special someone early in the week, Cancer. While you have every right to be angry and upset, don't make any drastic decisions. The two of you can work this out if you just listen to each other. An acquaintance asks to borrow money. Don't do it!

Leo - July 23/August 23

Don't let a compliment from a co-worker go to your head. You certainly deserve the praise, but that doesn't mean that you don't have to work hard anymore. You must keep giving 100 percent. A loved one has good news. Help him or her to celebrate. Libra plays an important role.

Virgo - Aug 24/Sept 22

Be honest when a good friend asks for your opinion about his or her new relationship. While he or she might not want to hear what you have to say, it still needs to be said. You meet an interesting person while running errands. Make plans to see him or her again. This could be the one!

Libra - Sept 23/Oct 23

Don't let a minor setback get you down, Libra. You still can reach your goal; you just have to come up with another approach. If you relax and clear your head, you'll think of the perfect plan. A loved one is concerned about you. Don't ignore his or her questions. Talk freely, and tell him or her how you really are.

Scorpio - Oct 24/Nov 22

You have a lot to do this week, Scorpio. Stay focused on the tasks at hand, and don't let others distract you. If you work diligently, you can get everything done and have time to enjoy yourself at the end of the week. A friend of a friend asks a favor of you. Do what you can.

Sagittarius - Nov 23/Dec 21

Don't take your personal problems to work with you. Your superiors are expecting a lot from you this week. Don't disappoint them. A loved one lets you in on a family secret. Keep it to yourself. It's not your place to tell anyone. Leo plays an important role on Thursday.

Capricorn - Dec 22/Jan 20

Stand your ground when it comes to a disagreement with an acquaintance. You know that you are right. Don't back down just to end the situation. Others will support you. A close friend wants to set you up on a blind date. Don't do it. While he or she means well, the date has too much potential to be disastrous.

Aquarius - Jan 21/Febr 18

Don't get in over your head when trying to help a co-worker this week, Aquarius. While you want to assist this person, you have a lot of your own work to do. Don't make yourself look incompetent to make him or her look good. That special someone has a surprise for you. Enjoy it!

Pisces - Feb 19/March 20

When you see something that you want this week, Pisces, go after it. No one else is going to help you get it, so take some action. A loved one needs to talk to you about a personal problem. Listen to him or her, and try to be supportive.
