Sawmill gets OK for second shift

By TIM SHOULTS
Editor

International Forests Products (Interfor) announced yesterday that it will add a second shift at the Squamish sawmill in three weeks.

Mill general manager Jim Belsheim said another 40 to 50 workers will be called back starting Oct. 18 for a second sawmill shift, bringing the total number of workers back to 120.

The mill laid off 185 employees when it closed in July of last year.

It reopened July 20 with 45 employees and added a planer shift last month to bring the workforce up to 70.

The first shift's work re-starting the mill and meeting production and efficiency targets allowed Interfor to bring back the second shift, Belsheim said.

"We're very pleased," he said. "The first shift did an excellent job of getting up to production targets very quickly."

The mill will need to keep production levels and efficiency high and costs down as it starts the second shift, he added.

"We've got big challenges ahead of us to make the two shifts successful but we're quite optimistic."

"We've got big challenges ahead of us to make the two shifts successful."

—Jim Belsheim

The second shift is expected to have steady work and is not considered a temporary callback.

Belsheim said Interfor will start calling back employees on the waiting lists this week to offer work. They will know in the next week to two weeks how many employees will not be called back.

"A number of people will have moved on, so we can't take 120 and compare it to the old figure [185]," Belsheim said.

Belsheim would not comment on the effects of protests in the Upper Elaho Valley on the future operations of the sawmill.

Elaho attack on video?

By DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

A tape of the alleged assault on protesters by loggers in the Elaho Valley Wednesday has supposedly been destroyed, but conservationists aren't giving up hope.

The incident was videotaped by Interfor employee Dave Haffey, said James Jamison, a member of the Western Canada Wilderness Committee (WCWC). Jamison said Haffey had previously videotaped protesters violating the injunction not to interfere with Interfor's road building.

The RCMP executed a search warrant on Interfor's Squamish office Thursday, but were told by operations manager Dave Miller the tape had been destroyed.

Supreme Court Justice Glen Parrett, the judge in the injunction application Interfor was making simultaneous to the incident occurring, had ordered the tape be preserved.

Interfor's lawyer, William McNaughton of Ladner Downs, told the judge Friday Haffey had been approached by five individuals he did not recognize and threatened him into handing over the tape.

McNaughton said the tape was then thrown into the Lava Creek gorge.

WCWC campaign director Joy Foy said Friday he will instruct his volunteers to look for the tape.

Punjabi school opens its doors to the public

By TIM SHOULTS
Editor

Squamish's newest school building opened its doors last Monday to a Punjabi welcome.

The new Punjabi school, located on the grounds of the Sikh temple on Fifth Avenue, started classes Sept. 13 with 41 students — the biggest class yet in four years.

About 50 people attended official opening ceremonies at the temple that evening, including Coun. Paul Lalli and West Vancouver-Garibaldi MLA Ted Nebbeling.

"We are all immigrants and I always find it's the Indo-Canadian community that makes such a commitment to its culture and heritage," Nebbeling said.

Punjabi-language classes started in Squamish in 1996 in Valleycliffe Elementary School. Students from ages 5 to 16 attend the classes two days a week on top of their regular schooling to learn how to read and write Punjabi and also learn more about the culture. For the last two years, a committee of nine people from the Squamish Sikh Society have been working on getting their own building to hold classes in. The Society purchased a trailer earlier this year which was officially opened in April during the 300th anniversary celebration of the birth of the Khalsa.

The school helps the Indo-Canadian community keep its culture and language alive in an English-speaking world, said Shamsher Kang, spokesperson for the committee. "As soon as the children start going to English school they start to lose their language."

The school is open to all students, both inside and outside the Indo-Canadian community, he added.

Now that the building is in place, the committee also is looking at offering free adult Punjabi classes that would be open to the whole community. "We'll teach the language to anybody regardless of race, creed or language," Kang said.

For more information on the school call Dya Grewal at 892-1022 or Shamsher Kang at 892-9165.

Kahlon, Afsar go for council

By TIM SHOULTS
Editor

Squamish businessman Raj Kahlon and recently-retired District of Squamish official Mohammad Afsar are the ninth and tenth people to announce a bid to run for council this fall.

Kahlon, the owner/operator of Raj True Value Hardware, declared his candidacy after a meeting with supporters and organizers Wednesday night.

"Squamish needs some business sense," said Kahlon in an interview Thursday. "Each level of government should be run like a business; they have to be accountable to the taxpayer."

Kahlon, a 13-year resident of Squamish, said he will campaign for responsible development that creates jobs and is environmentally friendly and for support for small business.

"I feel I have the trust of the community and honesty," he said.

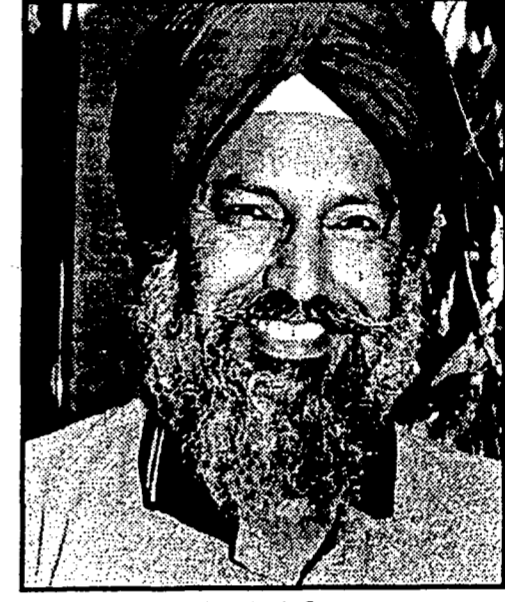

Kahlon decided to run partly out of disappointment with the current council. "It's divided the town," he said.

"I will represent the whole town and deal with the issues in a responsible way."

Kahlon has assembled a team of supporters to organize his campaign, led by campaign manager Lucille Burritt.

On Thursday Afsar, who retired as the District of Squamish's special projects director earlier this month, declared his candidacy.

Afsar said his 32 years' experience as a municipal official in Ontario, Saskatchewan and for the last three years in Squamish

Raj Kahlon

would be helpful on council.

Afsar said the district requires a "strong and cohesive" council as well as a "user-friendly" municipal hall with fewer and clearer regulations.

"That environment is currently lacking," Afsar said. "I think it's pretty obvious we need more cohesiveness on council. At present I don't think that exists."

Afsar said he has been considering a run for council for some time and seeking political office has long been a career goal.

Nominations for District of Squamish council position and for mayor officially open Oct. 5 at 9 a.m. and close Oct. 15 at 4 p.m. The election takes place Nov. 20.

Another 17 scholarships for Howe Sound students

The government scholarships awarded to 17 Howe Sound School District graduates this year is above the provincial average, but in keeping with local history. Superintendent of schools

Mike Fitzpatrick made the comment Wednesday during the school board's first meeting of the new school year.

Chairman Judy Bourhis, in her opening remarks, congratulated the 17 students on their $1,000 scholarships.

The scholarship recipients from Howe Sound Secondary are Prabhjit Bhaika, Jodi Booth, Dana Carmichael, Carina Gee, Raveen Kaila, Margot Liechti, Shaun Marlatt, Mon Jef Peeters and Adrian Tough.

Three $1,000 district scholarships are also awarded, one for each secondary school. Squamish's winner was Emma Carrico.

Charges held up
Charges are pending against a male suspect after he held up Little Caesar's pizza on Friday night.

According to police they received a 911 call from the pizza store in Squamish Station reporting a robbery around 10 p.m.

A man dressed in black wearing a nylon over his head and carrying a red stick entered the store and demanded all the money. The employee complied and the man left the store on foot. Police later located the suspect in possession of the money.

Fees for election candidates

The elected body in the Sea to Sky corridor will charge a nomination fee for this year's member's elections.

Howe Sound School District is the latest to decide against charging a nominal fee to run for public office. Trustees decided not to implement the fee, up to $100, at their board meeting Wednesday.

The District of Squamish, the District Municipality of Okanagan and the Village of Kelowna have also decided against charging a nomination fee.

Women's Centre AGM tomorrow

The Howe Sound Women's Centre Society holds its annual general meeting tomorrow (Sept. 22) at the Squamish Public Library.

The AGM starts at 5 p.m. with a potluck dinner (bring your favorite dish to share) followed by the business meeting from 6 to 7 p.m.

After the business meeting a panel of women from the WomenLed project will discuss the WomenLED project, which is collecting input and ideas on improving the financial health of women.

King back the night

The Women's Centre is encouraging local women to participate in the annual Take Back the Night march this Saturday (Sept. 18) starting at 7 p.m. at the Vancouver Art Gallery in downtown Vancouver.

The march is a worldwide demonstration held since the 1970s to protest against violent attacks against women. While there is no local version of the march this year, the Howe Sound Women's Centre is taking the names of those who want to attend and cannot arrange transportation to Vancouver for the evening. Squamish General Hospital's new general surgeon will be arriving soon.

Brian Kines, chief executive officer of the Sea to Sky Community Health Council, reported to the council's Sept. 16 regular meeting in Pemberton that Dr. Robert Patterson has accepted the position. Most recently, Patterson practiced in Leamington, Ont.

Kines said that Patterson "has a deep interest in computers and their application to the medical field: in 1997 he completed his Fellowship in Informatics in Utah." Patterson has also been published extensively.

Patterson will begin full-time practice on October 4 and will provide on-call services in conjunction with Dr. Allan Lam.

Loggers attack Elaho camp

BY DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

Protest groups and conservationists are demanding an investigation of International Forest Products (Interfor) after a group assault on the protest camp in the Elaho.

The same day Interfor was back in court asking for an expansion of the injunction keeping the public out of a one kilometre circle around their worksite, between 60 and 100 loggers descended on the protest camp, according to protesters.

Members of People's Action for Threatened Habitat (PATH) and Forest Action Network (FAN), along with the coordinator of a Western Canada Wilderness Committee (WCWC) research camp who was storing his van at the site, say loggers first destroyed all the cameras, then assaulted the people and burned the camp.

PATH said the camp would be re-established as soon as possible.

"I haven't seen this kind of logger, logging company beating people up in 15 years of conservation activism," WCWC campaign coordinator Joy Foy said Friday.

Three people were admitted to Squamish General Hospital after the protesters gave statements to the police.

Foy submitted an affidavit including the testimony of James Jamison, the WCWC's research camp co-ordinator injured in the alleged assault, to Justice Glen Parrett Thursday during Interfor's application to expand the current injunction zone.

"We were trying to prevent what happened," Interfor

"There is a great deal of frustration out there and it boiled over."
—Dave Miller

operations manager Dave Miller said Thursday of the injunction application.

"It would make it harder for people to come and sabotage us."

Miller said the incident was precipitated by a radio call there was another treesitter. Protesters have intermittently blocked loggers from working since early August.

"There is a great deal of frustration out there and it boiled over," Miller said. "We knew the camp was being used as a training ground for saboteurs and the camp was dismantled."

Miller said there couldn't have been more than 60 or 70 loggers involved in the incident, not the 100-plus the victims are claiming.

Miller said he, an Interfor foreman and an Elaho Logging Ltd. foreman were in the area at the time of the incident, using their pickup to block the tree-sitter from leaving before police arrived.

"To imply this was loggers who were suddenly unhappy with campers is wrong," Prescott said.

"This is a bunch of terrorists who sabotaged us, who blocked access to our worksite, and frustration finally spilled."

Jamison said he was dragged out of his van and thrown in a ditch when the camp was attacked, his radio and camera equipment were stolen from it and his van was damaged.

On Friday Interfor was granted its expanded injunction zone. The public is now excluded at all times from the E1000 logging road starting one kilometre south of the Lava Creek Bridge. The injunction applies to the road and 200 metres on either side, up to point where the road is completed.

The 500-metre, 24 hours a day, seven days a week exclusion zone around the worksite is also still in effect.

WCWC members are not subject to either injunction, as long as they carry an identity card registered with Interfor.

Parrett also barred Interfor employees and contractors from the injunction zone, except for lawful purposes.

Council to vote on fields referendum bylaw today

BY DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

The all-weather fields referendum survived a special council meeting Sept. 10 when two of its opponents voted to refer it to today's meeting.

With Mayor Corinne Lonsdale absent and Coun. Dave Young in the hospital, council was down its minimum quorum of four at the meeting, convened solely to deal with the referendum.

As motions fail on tied votes, councillors Sandra Bauer and Meg Fellowes, who have previously voted against the referendum, could have killed it by voting against Coun. Paul Lalli's motion to refer, but instead they voted it be dealt with today.

"I did not and do not support going for the fields this way," said Bauer. "I feel it's queue-jumping. And what are we not going to dare ask for if this goes through?"

She added, "I'm not going to be part of seeing it die because we got 'lucky' — a horrible thing to say — that two members of council weren't here."

The referendum, if passed, will ask voters if they are in favor of borrowing no more than $966,000 to pay for a slo-pitch field and two multi-purpose fields. The loan will be paid back through a three-year assessment. The owner of the average house, worth about $175,000, would be charged $31.92 a year.

Coun. Lyle Fenton wanted to see the cost of maintenance, estimated by district staff at $70,000 a year, included in the question.

"Seventy thousand in 1999 dollars, and with inflation it's going to add up to a lot over the years," Fenton said.

Manager of Administrative Services Trudy Coates said only information included in the borrowing bylaw could be part of the question. This also excludes the per-house impact, she said.

District Treasurer Kim Anema added if the maintenance cost is included in the bylaw it could be interpreted as being a set amount and would not allow for inflation.

Field user's group president Bob Smith told council North Vancouver spends $3,000-5,000 to maintain its rockdust fields, similar to those the group is proposing.

Terry Fox Run a family affair

BY IAN JACQUES
Reporter

When they held the first Terry Fox Run some 19 years ago many people predicted that it would only last a couple of years.

Now Fred Fox and the rest of his family are carrying the dream to new heights and the Terry Fox Run is now an international institution. Fred, Terry's older brother has been the B.C./Yukon provincial director for the Terry Fox Foundation since 1994.

Fred dedicates himself to keeping his brother Terry's dream alive along with other brother Darrell, sister Judy and parents Betty and Rolly. "Communities like Squamish are the run's life-line," Fred said while in Squamish helping to promote this year's run.

"It astounds me that the dream continues after all these years."

Fred is responsible for overseeing all of the Terry Fox events which take place in B.C. and the Yukon including communities, schools and special events.

Part of his duties as provincial director also include speaking for various groups, schools, Rotary meetings, ESL classes and others.

"Speaking at the schools is my greatest love," Fred said. "I often hear from educators or parents that Terry is such a great role model for the kids. Most if not all of them know Terry's story, but a lot of the kids don't."

Fred said they are often asked about goals for the run every year and when answering, they always think back to what Terry stood for.

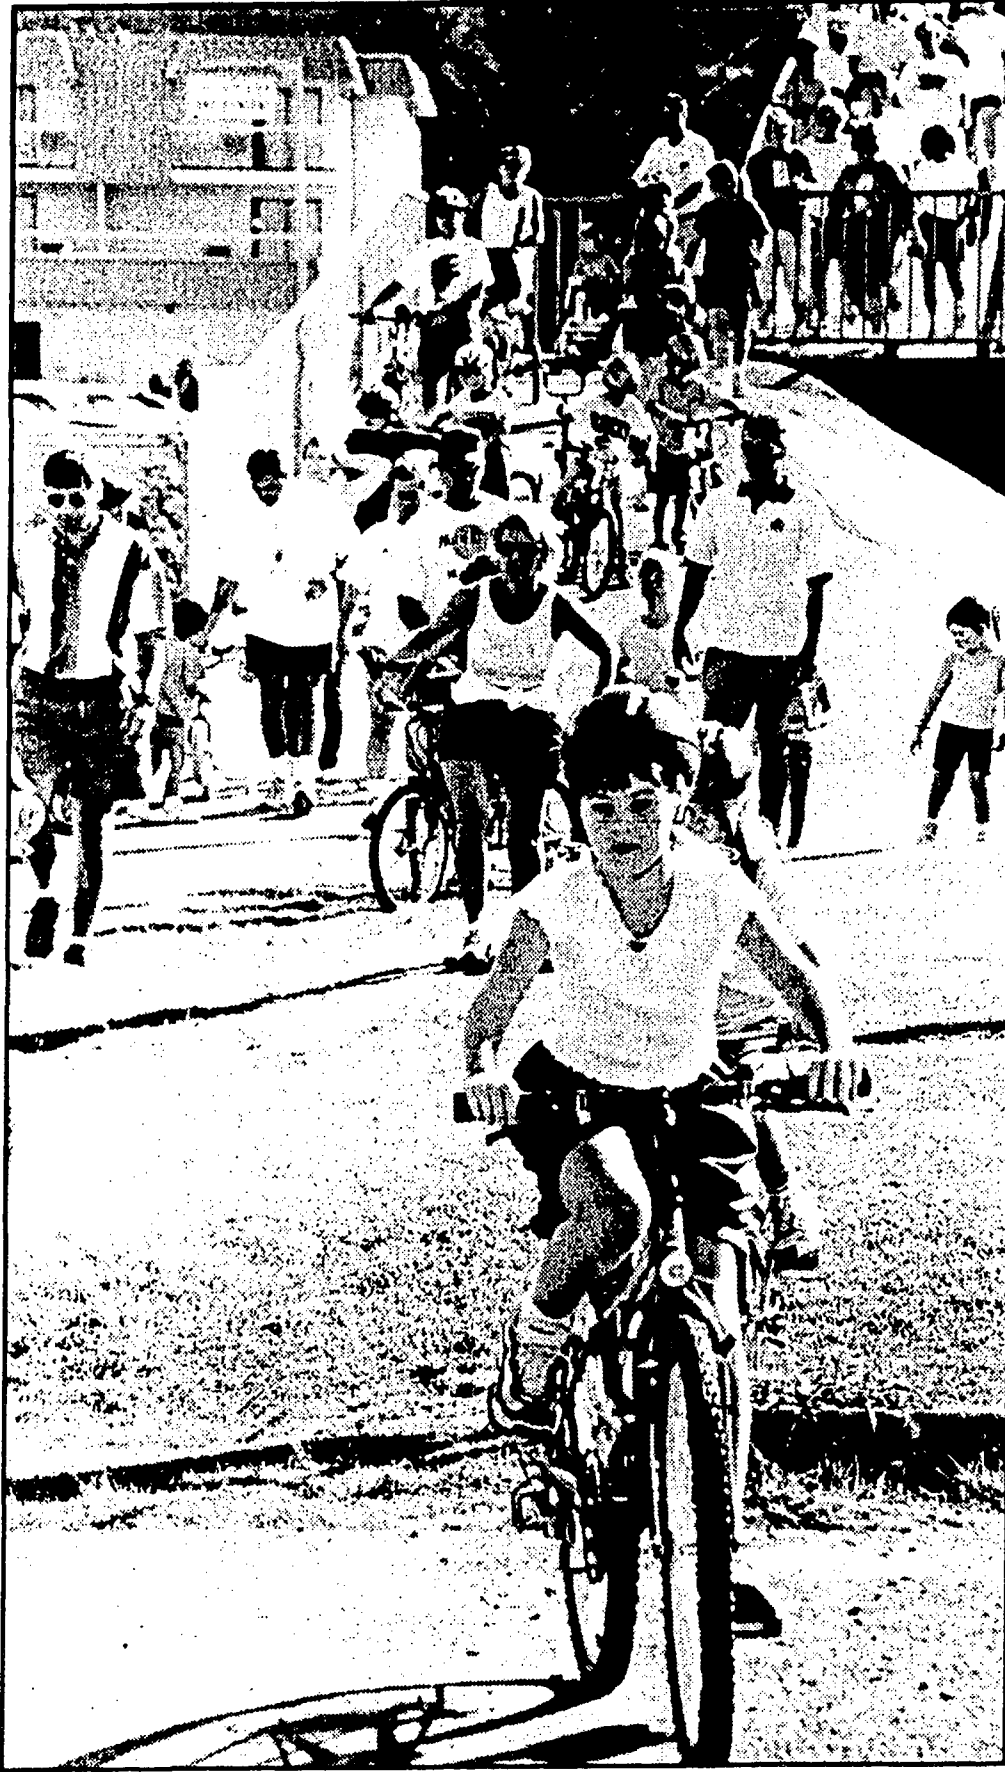

"Terry's goal was to always do better the next time out," Fred said. "That has been our philosophy right from the start."

"If everyone involved goes out with that idea, then the run will always be just a little better."

And like communities across the province, Squamish's was a little better this year, with 178 participants raising $6,570 — exceeding the success of last year's event.

"I was overwhelmed by the turnout," said organizer Mark Roberts. "It really was great to see whole families out to help support cancer research."

Completed pledge forms or additional donations from those who weren't able to participate in the run can be made at any local bank.

Residents want bus to Brennan back

BY DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

Council is considering its options in the face of complaints over the loss of direct bus service to Brennan Park.

Doug Morrison made a presentation to council Sept. 7, reiterating the concerns he expressed in an Aug. 30 letter to council.

"At a time when we are trying to encourage use of public transit, it is absolutely counter-productive to eliminate service to this essential public place," he said.

The new route schedules, implemented Aug. 23, have riders going both north and south dropped off between Government Road and Centennial Way. They must then walk over the new pedestrian overpass to access Brennan Park.

The overpass is not yet complete as another ramp and safety measures have been added to the project.

The routes were designed to include an open overpass, transit planner Don Boyd said.

He said the route could be changed to have some or all of the buses sweep by Brennan Park, or have them do on-demand pickups.

"It would be based on demand, and we understand there isn't much ridership and hasn't been," Boyd said.

He suggested as a temporary measure one to three trips on the Highlands route could be diverted each day.

"You have to understand the Rider's Guide has already been printed and to make a change so quickly can cause problems for regular riders," he added. "If the [recreation] centre was anywhere else it would be easier to serve."

A report from district Treasurer Kim Anema stated in 1997 two to three passengers a day were going to the Leisure Centre. In 1999, it was estimated at two to three passengers a week.

Anema added recreation program and bus schedules do not mesh well, and pointed out the transit service ceasing at 7 p.m. on weekdays makes it less attractive as primary method of travel.

Boyd will present a list of options for council to consider in the next few weeks.

Garage sale benefits SPY

By TIM SHOULTS
Editor

One of Squamish's biggest garages is holding Squamish's biggest garage sale — and Squamish's youth and the Food Bank will benefit.

The Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company on Cleveland Avenue will host a garage sale in its underground parking garage Saturday, Oct. 2 with 10 per cent of the money from each item sold — up to 50 per cent — going to the Squamish Partnership for Youth (SPY).

Stephen Shard of the Howe Sound Inn said he got the idea after hearing youth on Mountain FM earlier this month and realizing he had 20 years of lost-and-found items accumulating in his hotel that could be sold to help raise funds for the group.

"There are some bizarre items, from jewelry to underwear," Shard said.

"I don't think anyone's going to buy the underwear." Members of SPY will help organize the sale items in the parking garage, and all the proceeds from each lost-and-found item sold will go to the group, which promotes youth issues and organizes activities for local youth.

The Inn will also sell some of its furniture and kitchen items at the sale with 25 per cent of the proceeds going to SPY.

"This is just the sort of thing that SPY needs, because they're totally self-funded," said youth outreach worker Tamara Finkleman, who facilitates SPY.

The Chamber of Commerce, which stores equipment and decorations at the Howe Sound Inn, will also be donating some items to SPY for the sale and selling some of its own excess fixtures at the sale.

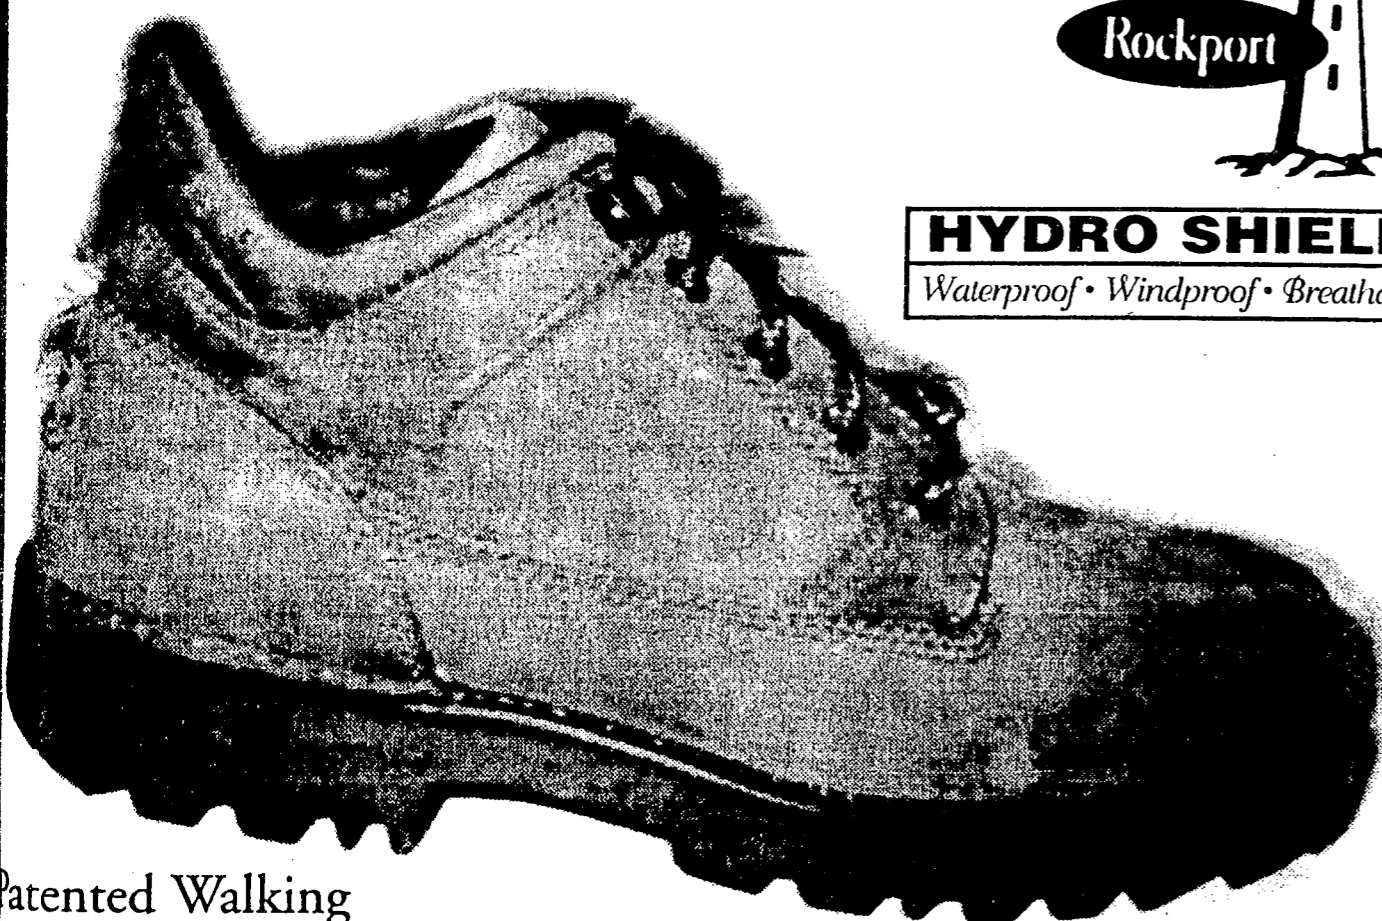

There will also be a drop-box for people to donate items to the Squamish Food Bank, and SPY is also going to donate 10 per cent of all it makes from the sale to the Food Bank.

"My goal is to raise at least $1,000 for SPY and I think we can do even better," Shard said.

Shard is also inviting the community to come down and donate items to the sale for SPY as well.

The sale will start at 10 a.m. on Oct. 2 and early birds will pay double.

Expansion could start next month

Briefs from the School District 48 trustees meeting Sept. 15:

Brackendale Secondary School's site preparation will be complete within the month, soon after which tenders on the expansion project will close.

Howe Sound School District Secretary-Treasurer Nancy Edwards said construction could begin in October at the earliest. Depending on the contract, completion will take between 14 and 18 months.

Garibaldi Highlands Elementary is 95 per cent complete, but the cement hallway floors aren't quite dry enough to lay linoleum.

The work was stalled when the natural gas pipelines didn't come through as quickly as anticipated, Edwards said.

The cement must be down to three per cent moisture and without the heating and ventilation systems that couldn't be achieved.

She added, however, all the classrooms are tiled and it is only the new hallways which lack finished flooring.

Marijuana found on crashed plane

Squamish RCMP confirmed Tuesday that a large amount of marijuana was found in the cockpit of a Cessna 172 that slammed down on Government Road at 7. Cpl. Jamie Zettler said the matter is still under investigation and once further details are available, they will be released to the public. Zettler added that the investigation into the crash also continues with Transport Canada regarding the investigation into the cause of the accident.

Caucasian male, roughly 25 to 30 years of age. He is approximately 5'9" tall with a slim build, fair complexion with short reddish-blond hair. He was wearing a black hooded kangaroo style sweatshirt, dark pants and shoes and had a black/grey western style bandanna across his face. Anyone with information is urged to call Crimestoppers at 892-TIPS (8477) or Squamish RCMP at 898-9611.

Quick thinking from a 13-year-old boy helped the police in locating a possible stolen vehicle last week.

Police said the boy spotted a suspicious-looking vehicle parked near Paradise Valley Road just after 11:30 p.m. on Sept. 11.

"The boy saw that the car was unlocked and grabbed the keys out of the ignition," Seward said. "He then came into the detachment with the keys and told us about the car."

Sometime between 7:45 and 8:30 p.m. on Sept. 12 suspects broke into a Second Avenue home. Police said suspects gained entry through a side window and took a Sony discman, 60 CDs, a stereo system and a VCR.

Seward said they carried the items out in a black Anaheim Mighty Ducks duffel bag.

He said all of the property was engraved with serial numbers, so that will make it easier for police to locate the items. Neighbors reported seeing a suspicious purple vehicle in the area just before the break-in occurred.

Police are looking for three men who broke into a Winnipeg Street business in the early morning hours of Sept. 11. Police said witnesses report seeing three men in the business just before 6 a.m. They were last seen fleeing the store in a black Honda Civic heading westbound on Winnipeg Street.

One male was described as heavy set, a second male was wearing a denim shirt. No description was given of the third suspect. The suspects made off with approximately 24 men's sweaters. They entered by smashing the front door.

School board trustees all to run again

BY DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

The entire board of trustees for Howe Sound School District is running for office again.

Five out of six of the trustees will be running for their sixth term, including Squamish trustees Constance Rulka, who will attempt to earn a fourth term, and Amy Shoup, vice-chair of the board.

Judy Bourhis, Area C representative and board chairman, made the announcement at the beginning of Wednesday's meeting, the first of the 1999/2000 school year. She said, with trustees nodding, that as a group this board has accomplished a great deal, including the successful decentralization of the district.

Bourhis said they had worked together well and she hoped to see them all back after the November elections.

Bourhis also said a new trustee who will represent Whistler.

This will mean two trustees will represent Squamish, Whistler, and one each Pemberton and electoral area D.

Overpass work OK'd

BY DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

Council approved an additional $30,000 in safety measures for the Centennial Way pedestrian overpass Sept. 7, bringing the total cost of the project to over $481,000.

On Aug. 3, Doug Morrison expressed concerns over the proximity of the ramps to the 99 exits and the possibility skateboarders and bikers may use the ramps without dismounting.

Bob Dolphin, manager of operations, said work would be undertaken as quickly as possible.

The southwest ramp will be lengthened to provide a safe drop-off location for people driven from residential areas north of the overpass and to ensure pedestrians exit the overpass onto Centennial Drive well away from high-way traffic. Off-set barriers will be installed on the ramps to force cyclists to dismount and skateboarders and in-line skates to slow down.

Handrails will be extended onto the exits of the ramps. The southern ramps will also have no-post barriers installed to separate pedestrian and vehicular traffic.

In addition, 2.4-metre-high chain-link fencing will be installed to prevent people from jumping to the future northeast ramp's support platform.

The federal and provincial governments each contributed $144,000. The district's share, including the new safety measures, is $193,316.

The safety measures and the north-west ramp added to the project in April will be paid for out of the 1998 surplus.

1998 surplus disappears

BY DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

Councillors voted Sept. 10 to use the remainder of its 1998 surplus to refill the district's nearly empty contingency funds.

Their committee of the whole meeting councillors discussed what to do with the surplus, which through various projects has gone from $2,556 to $120,806. Of that, $87,000 is tagged for projects expected to be approved soon, leaving $33,806.

The issue was brought to the committee of the whole on a motion at last week's council meeting by Coun. Paul Lalli. He suggested the remaining surplus could be put into a reserve account.

Coun. Meg Fellowes said various things could be done with the surplus, but she had some concerns over the state of the district's contingency funds.

The $33,600 council contingency, meant for projects council wishes to support, is empty. The $110,000 general contingency, meant for unexpected but required costs, has only $3,630 left.

"There will not be opportunity to cover significant emergencies from the contingency fund," district Treasurer Kim Anema said. "The balance of the contingency is almost nil."

Fellowes said she understood the RCMP stabilization fund, held for when the RCMP detachment reaches full strength, could be reallocated. Anema said prior to a year or year and a half ago Squamish had its full complement. The detachment is currently four officers short.

Low blows in the Elaho

Who got hurt more by Wednesday's assault on the protest camp in the Elaho Valley — the protesters who were attacked and beaten or the loggers who rushed the camp?

While members of People's Action for Threatened Habitat and the Western Canada Wilderness Committee may be sporting bruises, they've won a huge victory — and the loggers have lost.

Whether it was 60 loggers trashing the camp as Interfor claims or 100 as protesters say, the herd mentality evidently took over, and weeks of frustration and resentment boiled over into an act of fury — and stupidity.

We thought that Interfor's swift and harsh treatment of four loggers who took matters into their own hands last month as this conflict started would nip that behavior in the bud.

But tensions and frustration spilled over into violence again, much worse this time. And while we'd like to say we understand and sympathize, we don't. We don't condone illegal activities by anybody, even if they are a response to illegal tactics. Two wrongs don't make a right — in fact, the loggers' wrong has legitimized the protesters' battle in a way they never could have hoped for.

The loggers have made martyrs of them and done more for their cause than any amount of tree-sitting and getting arrested could have accomplished — including national media attention that paints this community as a red-neck backwater of fear and ignorance.

Interfor and the RCMP have to make sure justice is served against those who organized and carried out this childish act of retaliation. Not only is it the right thing to do, it's the only way for the loggers to save face in this war of the woods.

Circus of scandal comes full-circle

Well, it's official. We've come full-circle in our decade-long three-ring Circus of Scandal otherwise known as B.C. politics.

Nine years ago, Bill Vander Zalm was drummed out of office in a cloud of scandal that seemed so awful nobody could top it.

Nine years later, two more premiers have walked the plank under circumstances that make Vander Zalm's indiscretions over Fantasy Gardens seem like parking offences — and he's back, intending to take over the moribund leadership of the Reform Party of B.C., get back into the legislature in his home riding of Delta South and ride the wave of anti-NDP, anti-Liberal sentiment into...well, official opposition.

Even Vander Zalm, the eternal optimist, is arguing he should run just to keep the Liberals from sweeping all 79 seats in the legislature when the NDP premier, whoever it is, is finally forced to call an election.

But having the least foul scandal of the decade doesn't mean Vander Zalm is the leader B.C. should turn to end this sorry 10 years in politics — a decade that has made this province the joke of the nation.

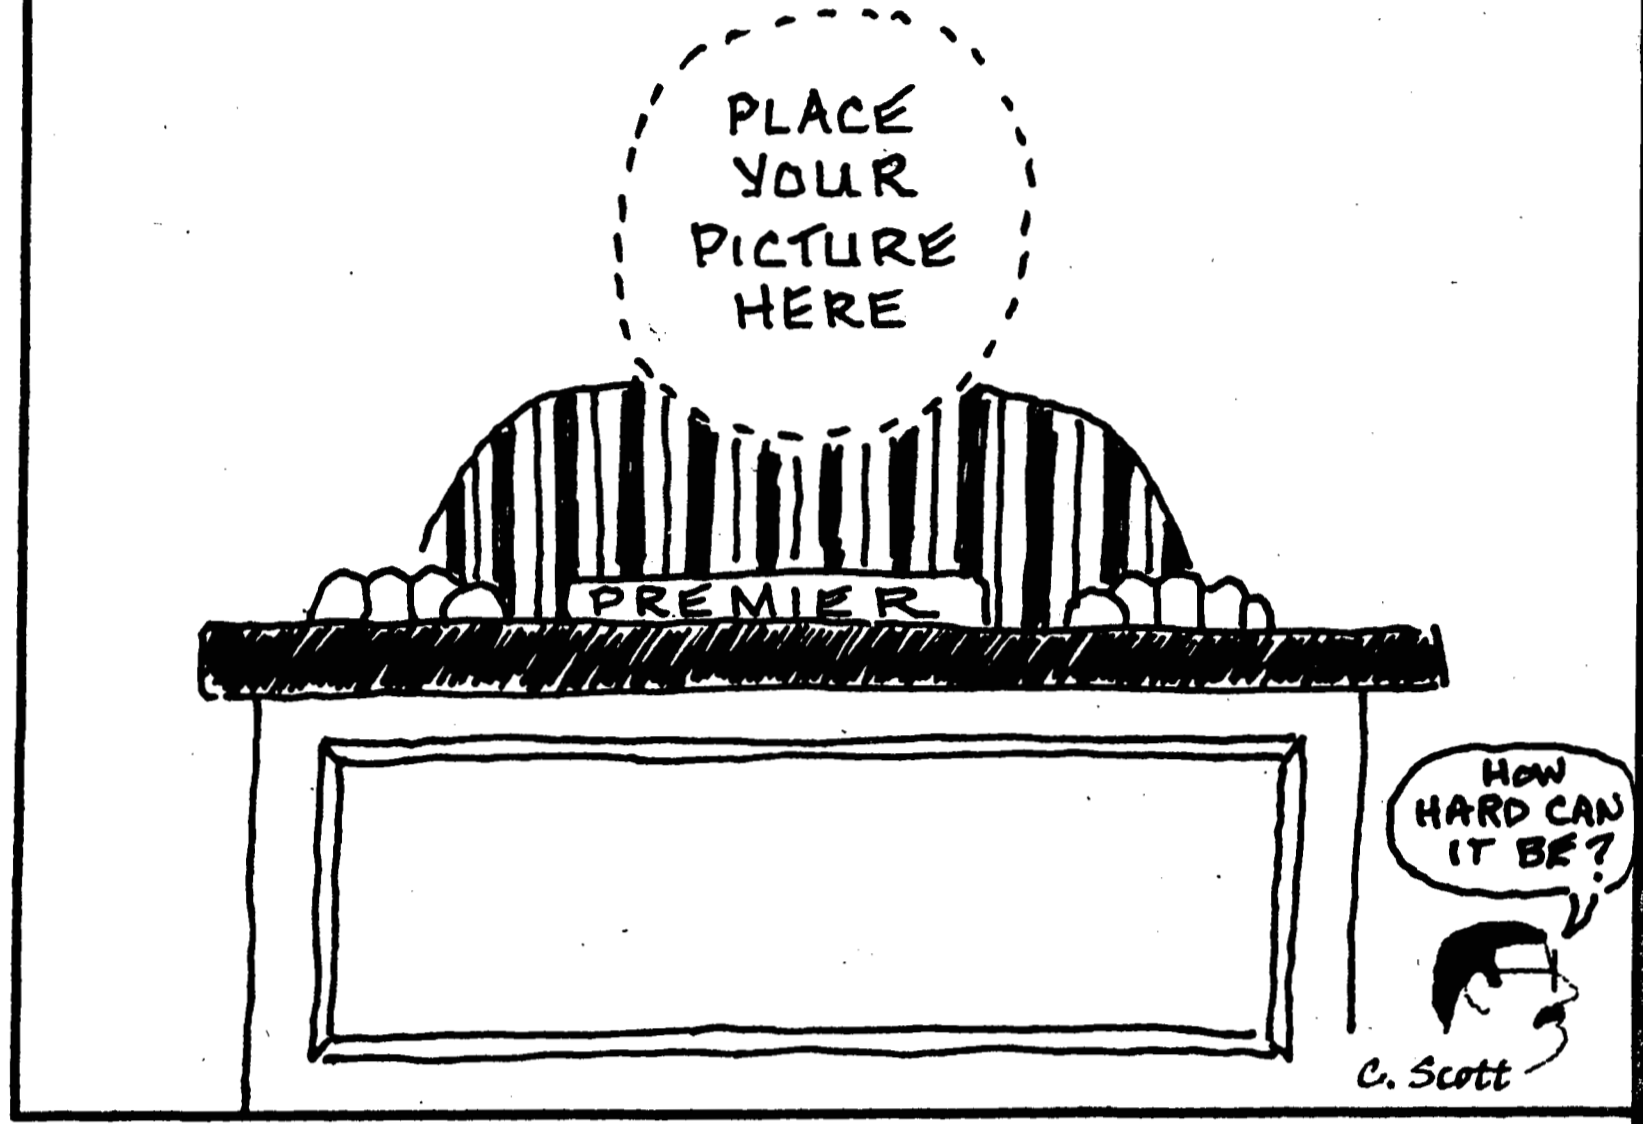

And Vander Zalm's attempt to set the B.C. Reform Party up as the best chance to avoid a Liberal sweep of the legislature in the next provincial election is so ironic it stings. Wasn't it the third parties' showing in the polls that allowed Glen Clark and the NDP to sneak by with 39 per cent of the popular vote to the Liberals' 42 and win a majority government in 1996?

Now, with Clark out of the picture, up pops Vander Zalm yet again to stick his nose into B.C. politics — for worse, not for better. He doesn't seem to realize that B.C. voters have learned their lesson: if you want the government out, make sure you don't split the vote.

That's why Gordon Campbell's Liberals are cruising along at 60 per cent in the polls despite the fact that they're — well, Gordon Campbell's Liberals: the electorate is willing to see past his complete and utter lack of charisma as long as he isn't Glen Clark.

Vander Zalm was emblematic of politics at the start of this decade, not the end of it. If Reform B.C.'s poor showing in recent polls isn't enough to convince him of that, maybe a nice sound thrashing in the Delta South byelection will do the trick.

WHO WILL LEAD AND WHO WILL FOLLOW?

Gretzky vs. Shoultz?

When I first saw the full-page ads with those hockey gloves with "99" on them tapping at a keyboard in our competition, the National Post (admittedly, Conrad Black hasn't heard of us yet, but I'm working on it), I have to admit I was a little worried.

Wayne Gretzky as a columnist? The greatest hockey player of all time (I'm from Edmonton, so I have to say it) is putting down the hockey stick and picking up the pen?

Well, there goes the neighborhood. The column, once a haven of reasoned discourse, thought-provoking commentary and (occasionally) sparkling wit, is now a celebrity platform.

It used to be those writing a column for a newspaper had to have earned the right, slugging it out in the trenches as a reporter for years.

Then the idea of specialty columns came along, where people with expertise in their fields but no newspaper background would be given space to broaden the focus of editorial pages.

Then they gave Don Cherry a column to try and translate his "Coach's Corner" fits of rage into written English. That was the first sign of the apocalypse.

Let's just say that while Grapes is highly entertaining as he is frustrating when he's on TV in full fashion-defying glory beating up on Ron McLean, it doesn't translate to the printed page very well.

There's a reason why sports-writers have licence to write more colorfully than reporters in other sections — quoting hockey players and coaches is murder. There's only so many ways you can dress up such jewels as "We gave 110 per cent tonight."

Without that filter, what you have is 750 words of cliché and weak narrative with one selling point — Gretzky's name on top of it.

I don't mean to dump on Gretzky or hockey players in general as a bunch of uneducated louts — Montreal Canadiens goalie Ken Dryden took time to finish law school in the 1970s in between stymieing the Soviets in the '72 series and winning Stanley Cups, and his book The Game is one of the great Canadian books of all time.

But Gretzky isn't Ken Dryden. His formal schooling ended in 1978 — 21 years ago — at the age of 17. And sad to say, it shows in his first shift as a writer.

Tim Shoultz

That said, Gretzky was and is my hockey hero. That's made watching him the last few years even harder as he carried on, obviously past his prime but desperately hoping for one more shot at the Cup.

That's what has me worried about his column; he runs that same risk now. There's still an expectation of greatness hanging over him — and if he fails, that's what will be remembered for: knowing when to quit.

Then again, when he entered the NHL in 1979, everybody said he was too small, too slight to make it in the big league. He proved them wrong then.

I may have my doubts about skills and about the wisdom of making columnists out of hockey players, but I'm still hesitant to bet against the Great One.

Let's hope the second shift is stronger.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Does school board care about bears?

Editor,

Right now the bears around Squamish are getting ready to hibernate. This means they're looking around for food. Lately one has been spotted around the Valleycliffe Plateau area on the trails that many of us Howe Sound students use to walk to and from school.

Fearfully, I have to walk through two of these trails by myself before meeting up with three or four friends. Then we all walk through a third trail on which we have spotted fresh bear droppings almost every day.

Last year parents from the Plateau area tried to convince the School Board to give the students from this area bus service. It was turned down because the School Board feels it is safe enough for us to use the trails to get to school.

It disturbs me that last week on a P.E. class hike to the Bluffs, two teachers who are employed by the same school board would not take a group of 60 students through those same trails, for fear of our safety. We were forced to walk the longer route through residential streets.

If we don't use those trails to get to school, it would take some of us at least an hour each way.

So basically, I'm feeling that our School District only cares about their students during school hours. Or do they really care about us at all?

I don't know, but are they waiting until a student is hurt before they will provide us with our own school bus?

A soldier writes home

Editor's note: Squamish native Ryan Mason is currently serving abroad with the Canadian Forces on disaster relief in Turkey, which recently suffered a major earthquake. The following dispatch sent to The Chief by Mason from Serdivan, Turkey (mail.)

My name is Gunner Ryan Mason. As a member of the 2nd Regiment, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery for the past year, this is my first overseas operation.

In the past two weeks, I have been helping out by providing defence and security patrols in which we hand out much-needed fresh water to the Turkish population. We have also been setting up tents to provide shelter for the local population, who have either lost their homes or are too afraid to move back into their houses for fear of aftershocks or another earthquake.

Outside the gates of the soccer field we are calling home, the damage ranges from toppled houses, crushed cars to unidentified rubble. Being from Canada and not seeing sights like this before has been quite shocking for me.

As a member of the Canadian Forces Disaster Assistance Response Team (DART), I am part of a 200-member force that is ready to deploy anywhere in the world on short notice to provide humanitarian assistance as a result of a natural emergency or disaster.

The DART is currently located in Serdivan, Turkey, about 135 kilometres east of Istanbul. Serdivan, with a population of 44,000 people, suffered extensive damage as a result of the Aug. 17 earthquake.

The DART consists of a Medical Platoon that operates a Medical Aid Station, an Engineering Troop that runs two water purification units, a Defence and Security and a tactical headquarters.

Prior to returning to Canada, the DART will coordinate a hand-over of responsibilities and tasks to local and regional authorities.

The DART was established in 1996 and was first deployed in November 1998, assisting in the international humanitarian aid efforts in hurricane-ravaged Honduras. Canada's military has played an active role in providing humanitarian aid in such places as Rwanda, Haiti, Bosnia, Italy and Honduras.

Look beyond gender

Editor,
I am writing in response to a letter in the Sept. 4 issue of The Chief by Mary Billy. The comments made greatly dised me. Ms. Billy asks, "What messages are we giving to boys and girls when there is no obvious ethnicity other than even more middle-aged white guys getting to run everything?" I ask what kind of example are we setting by making stereotypical comments like this one?

The fact that we currently have no female or visibly different people in the position of principal does not mean that we do not have some of the most qualified administrators available. I also stress the word currently. Until this year, Margery had been a very successful principal at Howe Sound Secondary for five years. The present vice-principal of Howe Sound Secondary, Beverly Oakley, is also a more than competent female.

As for the "middle aged white guys," Peter Hotston has made numerous contributions to both the school district and individual students, myself included, in his many years in various positions at different schools in the district.

Well, I ask how do we know that qualified people of different ethnicity even applied for the job. Perhaps the most qualified people that applied for these positions happened to be middle-aged Caucasian males. I thought that we were at a point in which we looked beyond color and gender and treated people as people. This is the example I would like to see. So I suggest that before we make rash judgments about people in power positions like this, we ask are they qualified to be in these positions? I believe this is a better question than, "Where are the people of color?"

Sean Fogarty
Howe Sound Secondary student

Tattersfield speaks on cleanup

Editor,
I am writing as a result of the volume of information in the media as well as questions and comments received from students which, elected or not, we have the duty to represent.

Initially I was opposed to the project because of technical concerns as well as health and safety issues that could affect nearby communities. Then I have attended public meetings, presented questions to local government and have read volumes of information and draft permits as they become available.

I am encouraged by the public review process in that many concerns I heard or brought forward are addressed by the regulators. Concerned citizens have a need and a duty to be informed. Most of the relevant documents are available in the Squamish Public Library. I am happy to hear your concerns and will do my utmost to get your questions answered.

Seven reasons to be worried about Britannia

Editor,

The more I find out about the "industrial waste and heavy metal contaminated soil and sludge landfill" (i.e. toxic waste dump) above Britannia Beach the more concerned I get. Consider the following:

1. Before issuing permits the Ministry of Environment received over 150 submissions and acknowledged that only three or four were in favor of it, but with 97 per cent public opposition they are still going ahead.

2. Each workday 632 tonnes of toxic waste will be trucked up Hwy. 99. With all the people I care about travelling on this dangerous highway that fact alone scares the heck out of me.

3. The waste dumped at the site will never become inert, literally not in a million years! After centuries of erosion, avalanches, rockslides, earthquakes and other natural phenomenon who knows where the contaminants will end up?

When future generations have to deal with the problem again it will be exponentially larger than what we face now!

4. The plan expects to "divert the majority of the acid rock drainage to the (treatment) site" which is 7 km and 3,000 vertical feet away from the dumpsite. Even if they can catch "the majority" that far away, where will the rest of the leaking contaminants be going for the next 10,000 years?

5. The treatment plant will be financed by an ongoing fund that is supposed to be set aside for future use. Imagine what the Boy Scouts would think of this idea? (The president of CBE has been charged by RCMP for stealing $44,000 from their Christmas Tree fund).

6. CBE is supposed to complete several studies before they start dumping but CBE hires the "independent" consultants, pays them and works with them to get the final results. Think about the tobacco companies producing "independent" studies for decades which "proved" to governments that smoking was not a health risk.

7. The Sea to Sky corridor is a crown jewel of B.C. tourism; how can we condemn this wonderful area to the eternal threat of a huge environmental disaster? The people that love this area will be stuck dealing with it long after the politicians, bureaucrats, consultants and other dubious characters advocating this proposal have disappeared.

The insanity of this project makes me think of our experience with tobacco companies for the past 50 years, then my thoughts turn to other things like Thalidomide, Saccharin, Chernobyl and Valdez Alaska. Britannia needs to be cleaned up but the toxic waste landfill plan makes no sense and forces us all to face excessive risks.

It seems the only chance to halt this plan now is with a massive public outcry. It is critical that every one of us make the effort to voice our opinion right now! Please contact the Minister of the Environment at 1-800-663-7867, or feel free to call me at 898-1874 to find out how you can help.

By Darren Gallagher

Sarang Toosi: "Maybe we have to solve their problem. Maybe we should do some negotiating. It's better than simply pushing them away."

Barry Galley: "I think the biggest thing is frustration for the guys working there. They've got an injunction but nothing's being done."

Dave Sweeney: "It's unfair that it had to come to this, but as long as they stay within the forest practices they should have use of the land."

Tom: "I'd say just leave the trees. Find another job."

WomenLed clarified

Editor,

The Chief's interest in the Squamish WomenLed (Leadership, Literacy and Economic Development) project is most welcome; however, in response to your article of Sept. 7, some clarification is required.

Firstly, women have traditionally remained at home to care for the children, with no monetary value assigned to these responsibilities. As a result, women have been unable to identify in the same way as men, the ways this impacts on their self-esteem and self-confidence as it applies to the work they do, unless predetermined by an employer.

In the event of separation and divorce, women generally take on sole responsibility of the children including all their financial needs. These new responsibilities create new barriers to self-reliance.

In many cases, the welfare of the family becomes her sole responsibility. If she has not been trained in a trade or profession, she is forced to more carefully scrutinize her options for self-sufficiency. Her options are limited, especially when there are young children depending on her.

With 50 per cent of marriages ending in divorce, and 90 per cent of single parents being women, the importance of earning "enough" becomes crucial. Single women are supporting their children below the poverty level. This includes those earning minimum wage or just above. Daycare expenses and the "unrecognized" costs of working, keep them trapped at the poverty level.

Women's wages and benefits are usually not the same as men's. Until recently,

"Women's wages and benefits are usually not the same as men's."

women earned on average only 60 per cent of what men with comparable education and skills earned. The gap has narrowed now to 70 per cent, not because women's salaries have risen, but because in the cost-cutting, union-busting 80s and 90s, men's salaries have dropped.

The stories being shared by the women participating in the WomenLed Project are being accumulated, with the intent of documenting issues at the grassroots level; and thereby creating instruments that will provide local women with a collective voice in decisions being made that affect them.

With this in mind, the Howe Sound Women's Centre is pursuing new ideas to support women in the community of Squamish and seeking women who would like to be part of this focus group to get involved at monthly meetings and several public forums planned throughout the year (some subsidies are available for childcare/transit).

If they cannot attend, we welcome suggestions, to the attention of Pat Wilbur: by phone: (892-5748); fax (892-5749); mail: Box 2052, Squamish, V0N 3G0; or drop them off by letter at the Howe Sound Women's Centre - 38138 Second Avenue weekdays between 12 - 4 p.m.

This project has evolved through an accumulation of interests from different departmental levels of government. The Federal Ministry of Status of Women Canada; Provincial Ministry of Advanced Education, Training and Technology and Human Resources Development Canada - National Literacy Secretariat: Adult Literacy Cost-shared Partnership Program; and the Provincial Ministry of Women's Equality.

However without the coordinating committee: Monica Harvey, Jessica Chudy, (both summer students earning post-high school education credits) and Alfreda Eldon, Pam Gliatis and Pat Wilbur as volunteers, it would not have seen the light of day. Getting all these components on board took an enormous amount of time and effort, along with the full partnership of Capilano College and the Howe Sound Women's Centre.

This is an exciting adventure for the women in our community and will finally provide the hard data needed to begin to provide ways to better meet their needs.

Pat Wilbur
Volunteer Co-Coordinator, Howe Sound Women's Centre

P.S. The statement towards the end of your article that states: "The lack of women in high-paying "traditional" trades such as logging and in the pulp industry is also something Billy would like to see change." I believe what is meant is that these trades are "traditional" to men, but "non-traditional" to women, and that through the use of improved technology should now be more accessible to women. As well, the quote pulled out for note was attributed to me in error.

Thank You

The Rhodes' family would like to express our sincere thanks to: Dr. Doyle, the staff of the Squamish General Hospital and the Home Care Nurses for the wonderful care given to our loved one; to George and Mildred McKenzie for their excellent service and support; and our friends and neighbours for the many gifts, cards and expressions of sympathy we have received. They have all helped to ease the pain during this difficult time.

Author gets e-published

BY DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

David Gebhart writes his stories using traditional pen and paper, and publishes using unconventional high technology.

Squamish native Gebhart is the author of The Big Game, a young adult novel about growing up and adapting to a new home, set in the Kitsilano area of Vancouver.

But when Gebhart's novel is released Sept. 25, don't look for it in the stores. Gebhart is publishing his book on the Internet, having signed a contract with ebooksnet.

"I just kind of stumbled into it," Gebhart said of becoming a virtual author. "The book is all-Canadian content. I made submissions to every publishing agent in Canada and got a rejection letter every time."

He submitted his manuscript to two US publishers, and both made him offers. One he rejected because it was too low, but accepted ebooks' offer and became their only Canadian author.

"ebooksnet is an infant electronic publishing house — we've only been up and running for a bit over two months now," ebooks owner Connie Foster said.

It pays a royalty of 40 per cent to their authors, while conventional publishing pays only 10 per cent as a rule, she said. "One of the many healthy changes that e-publishing will bring about will be the leveling of the playing field for everyone involved.

"In this day of paper shortages and instant entertainment, I think there will be a tremendous niche in our society for electronic, downloadable books," said Foster.

However, she added, "nothing will ever replace holding a beloved book."

The Big Game revolves around Jason Phillips, a boy in his last year of high school. When Jason's family loses their Chilliwack farm and move to Vancouver, he finds himself unable to handle the fast-paced city environment and having trouble fitting into his new school and basketball team. He must also deal with his father being unable to find a job and a teammate with an abusive parent.

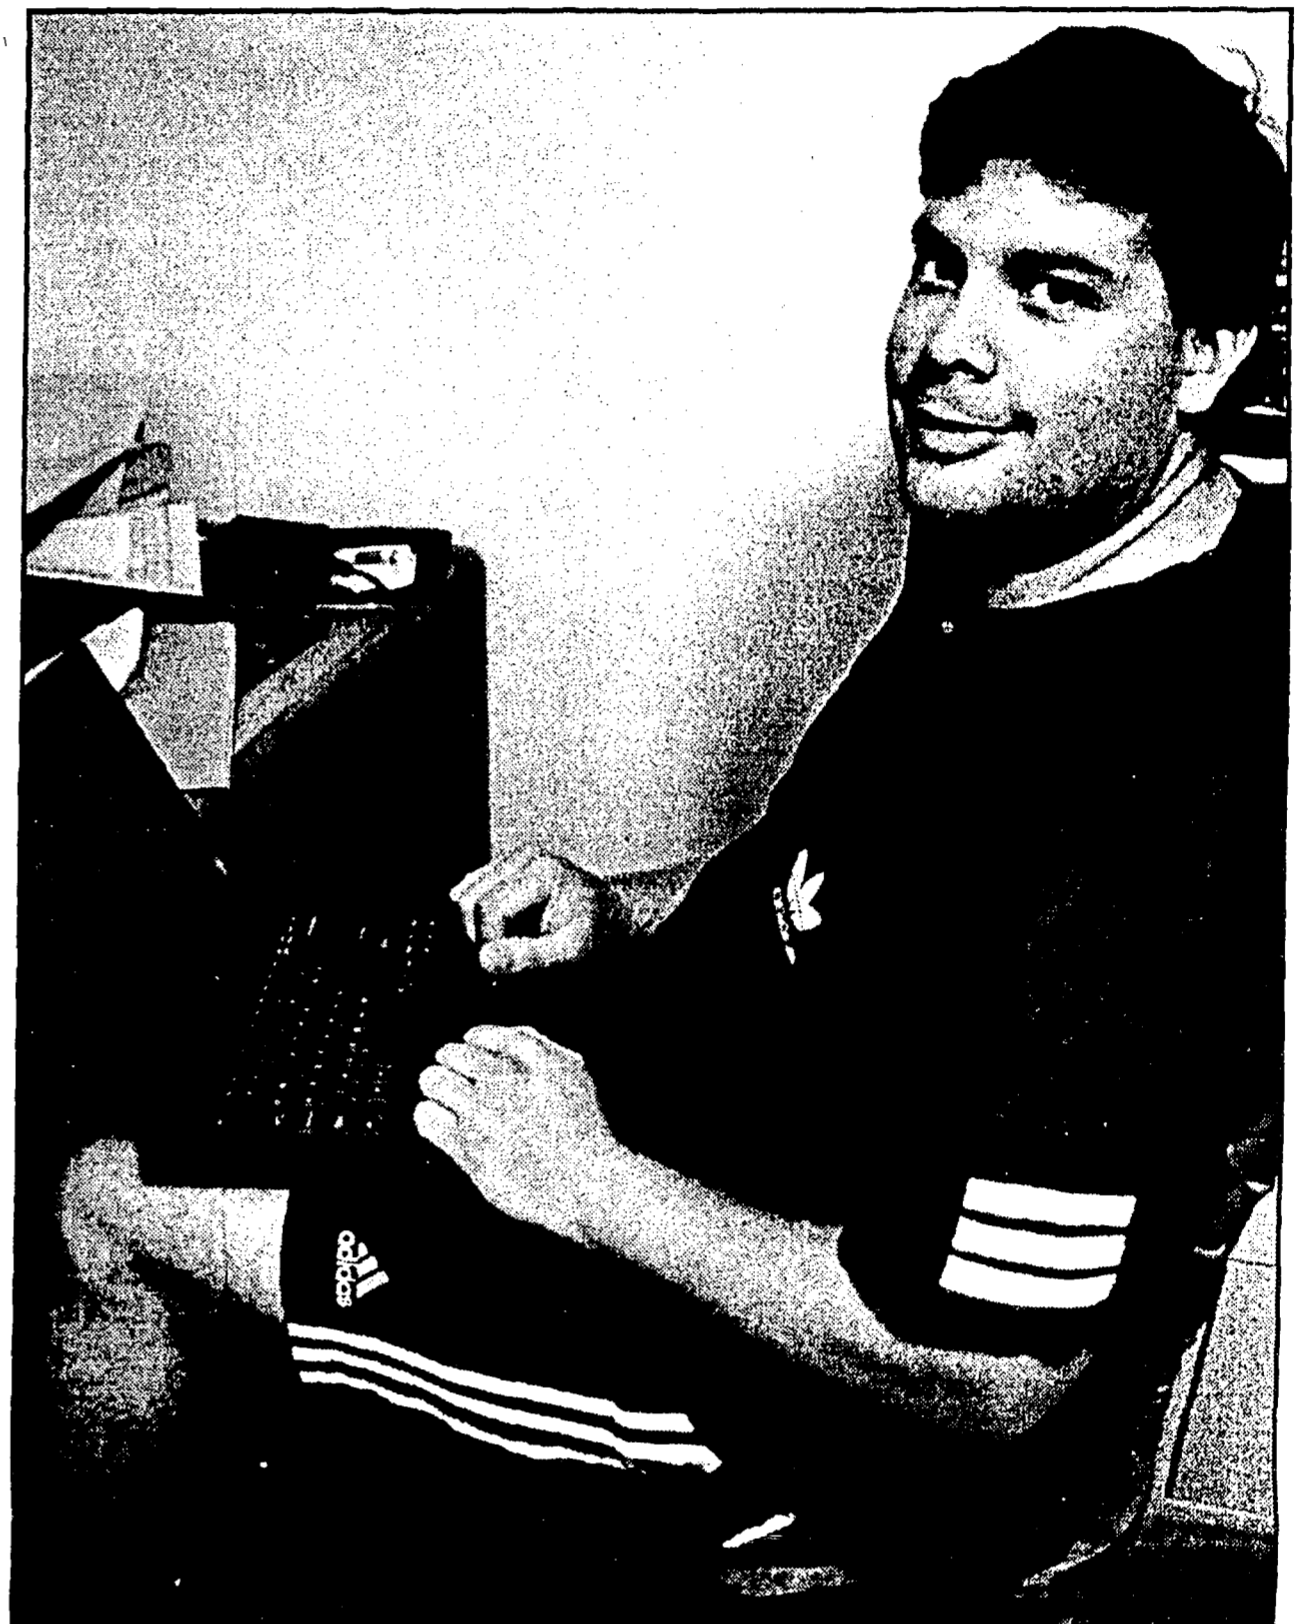

Gebhart has worked in the Kitsilano area the novel is set in, and played basketball in high school.

Gebhart began writing seriously three years ago, starting The Big Game at the same time. He had broken an ankle playing basketball, and had to find something to do in the six months he was forced to take off.

Employed at the Woodfibre pulp mill, Gebhart writes on his laptop in his spare time, at lunch and on the ferry. His first drafts, however, are written in longhand.

The soon-to-be father of two is currently working on a three-book series and a full-length novel.

The Big Game can be found at www.ebooksnet.net.

Literacy activities expand in Squamish

CONTRIBUTED TO The Chief

International Literacy Day came and went without much of a splash in Squamish earlier this month (Sept. 8), but that doesn't mean literacy activities are not underway. A number of community partners have joined to undertake some exciting new literacy projects to add to the ongoing initiatives.

Capilano College, in partnership with Literacy BC, has had a regional literacy coordinator working in Squamish since September 1997. The regional literacy coordinator's role is mainly to support and promote literacy activities, promote programs and initiatives, and raise public awareness about literacy issues.

In January 1998, the position was taken over by Michelle Lebeau. This year, Capilano College, Literacy BC, and a new local partner, the Squamish Public Library, have received funding to continue the position for another year. Michelle is currently on maternity leave and will return as regional literacy coordinator in January 2000.

Although officially a community partner in the Regional Literacy Project only this year, the Squamish Public Library has been an active co-sponsor and supporter of Regional Literacy Coordination and other related literacy activities since early 1998.

In further support of literacy development in the community, the library has partnered with Sea to Sky Community Services Society and Capilano College to do a needs assessment research project on family literacy in Squamish and Whistler.

Family literacy is a term used to describe programs to improve reading and writing that involves people of all ages. The project objective is to study family literacy models in use in other communities, and adapt these or develop new models appropriate for use in both Squamish and Whistler.

A small pilot project based on the research findings will be run in the spring in at least one of the two communities, if community support warrants it.

Another literacy project in Squamish sees the partnering of the Howe Sound Women's Centre (HSWC) with Capilano College. The HSWC, as reported in the Sept. 7 issue of The Chief, is working with any interested women in the community to develop a strategy for economic security for women in the Squamish area.

This is happening with financial support provided by the Status of Women and the Ministry of Women's Equality. The objective of the literacy component of this project is to determine how best to involve women with low literacy skills in the overall economic development strategy process.

A literacy facilitator is being hired who will be responsible for helping to support women with low literacy skills involved in the process, finding or developing resource materials on economic development at the literacy level, and ensuring that all project documentation is accessible to those with low literacy skills.

Funding for each of these literacy initiatives has come through the Federal-Provincial Adult Literacy Cost-Shared Program, a partnership of Human Resources Development Canada (National Literacy Secretariat) and the Provincial Ministry of Advanced Education Training and Technology. This infusion of funding as well as increasing local support is very positive for literacy in our community.

To learn more about these and other literacy programs, to provide input, or to somehow get involved, please leave a message at Capilano College (892-5322).

Look back in time

News from years gone by in Squamish, compiled by Darren Gallagher from the archives of the Squamish Times at the Squamish Public Library and The Chief

Five years ago this week

Three Squamish natives died after their car was struck head-on by a south-bound truck that crossed the centre line about 15 kilometres north of Brackendale.

Jason Steven Wulff, 20, and Devon Hedin, 21, died instantly. Dale Jerry Ethier, 22, died later in Squamish General Hospital. The driver and passenger of the truck suffered minor injuries.

Ten years ago this week

Over 20 Squamish residents took part in a quilting bee, producing a banner to protest low-level bomber flight tests over Innu territory in Labrador.

They later set up a booth outside Overwaitea with a balloon tethered 100 metres in the air to show the altitude for the test flights, which the government planned on expanding into B.C.

Twenty years ago this week

Ninety-odd young people earned several standing ovations for the hour and a half Up With People musical show held at the Civic Centre.

A review said "The show exploded into an irresistible glow of color, variety, charm, rhythm, a momentum that never faltered and sound that could not fail to carry even to the outer reaches of the vast hall."

Community

Tom Stinson of Maple Ridge drove home from the Mountain Building Centres Charity Golf Tournament Sept. 13 in a new Geo Tracker from Greg Gardner GM after nailing a hole-in-one on the 153-yard 11th hole. Stinson was also a local hero, donating an extra $4000 for the Squamish Healthcare Foundation Society.

Local heroes and good news

When John Ryan hand-cycled through Squamish on Sept. 10, over 300 people lined the streets and cheered our local hero on with great pride. John, a paraplegic from a 1994 car accident, hand-cycled across Canada to raise awareness and funding for every important cause — spinal cord research.

The Chamber of Commerce would like to congratulate and welcome home John for the tremendous effort and courage it took to complete his remarkable marathon.

John is a great hero, ranking right up there with Terry Fox and Rick Hansen. But do you have to cycle, run or wheelchair across Canada to become a hero? Of course not. There are little heroes right here in our community.

But, because they don't often get recognition, they continue to do their thing without anybody thinking twice.

These heroes are people who have dedicated their time, effort and commitment for worthwhile causes or, in their own special way, made a difference to our community. We thank (and need) people like John Ryan to inspire us to follow our dreams and to dream big. Just don't forget the little heroes that are our daily life. They are important too!

Squamish has been in the news! On Sept. 2, Squamish's Hidden Treasures was listed as the number five spot for "Places to go antiquing" in the Province newspaper, "Picks for 10 great places to go or do things in the Lower Mainland." The resident in

Howard Kelly

CHAMBER NEWS
...the Lower Mainland likes to take the trip up the Sea to Sky Highway to "browse through the treasures."

On July 20, the Travel section of the Vancouver Sun featured our local Kevin McKinnon (K&M Photo) with a full page story and photos on Squamish's ecotourism and outdoor adventures.

The article was picked up by newspapers in Ottawa, Toronto, Kingston, Halifax, Prince George and there may be more. Congratulations!

"Geo-bears" hit Mamquam

What could be more exciting than to take along your lit-log-book and set out to travel the world (or, at least, across Canada), finding out about all kinds of people and places?

That is what the Geo-bears longing to Grade 7 students at Mamquam are going to be doing over the coming months. There are two Grade classes: Ms. McElwain's French Immersion and Ms. Stamer's class. Luckily, they work well together on this project, because Ms. Stamer teaches English composition to both classes; and Ms. McElwain's students will be very useful in translating messages sent back by bears who reach areas where French is the main language. Each bear and his log-book will be given to some friendly relative who is going away from Squamish (even if only as far as Vancouver). This person will pass the bear on to someone else, so that he could go off in any direction and end up anywhere. With the log-book, that will record travels, he will also have a small supply of postcards. Students hope that Bear's human friends will send one these back, from each corner, to tell them where he is and where he will go next. Each bear's journeys will be traced on a large map.

Grade 8s
These bears are pretty sure to go off into the unknown; but, being made of wood and nylon and plastic, they probably do not have the same kinds of feelings as their owners. It is not just the children going into kindergarten who feel the stress of entering a new world. It is a big step for those going to Grade 8 in the secondary schools. Even though they visited the buildings in the spring, there are still new people to deal with — a different teacher for each subject, students from other elementary schools, lots of older and bigger students in higher grades. It is by no means an easy switch!

Electives

The Grade 8 students whom I watched at work this week, though, seemed to be not only confident in their new surroundings but actually to be having a good time:

Mr. Stator's metalwork students in HSSS are building an airplane-mobile. They will construct a small airplane and attach it to a metal bar. To balance the weight of the plane, a cube of metal will be attached to the other end of the bar, whose centre will rest on a pyramid-like base. The plane can then "fly" in circles round this pivot. The whole class was very much on task. Girls, as well as boys, were trying out saws and hammers with a competent air; but a few had been sent to make working-drawings — to prove that they really can cope with pencil and ruler and produce accurate measurements.

Mr. Scott's wood-working class was making sure of basics, too. The students were taking a test on all the safety-rules connected with a bradsaw. Their first project will be to make a pair of wooden tongs, for serving salads or other foods. Each student will design his/her own motif to be etched into the handles.

Pit Stop

Other, regular features of the school are starting up once more. The Pit Stop, the students' store at HSSS, is still being run by the Accounting class, who draw up the business plans and handle all the finances. Ms. Campbell says that they have already donated $100 from their profits to John Ryan's cause.

ESL

Ms. Ford's group of English as a Second Language students has grown in size and in the range of linguistic skills of its members. It is now divided into three groups: Advanced, Intermediate and Basic.

Constance Rulka

SOUND SCHOOLS

There are two senior students acting as peer tutors, to help with one-on-one practice, for which they will receive credit. Some of the group's mother tongues are: Chinese, Japanese, Taiwanese, Farsi, Hindi, Spanish and Punjabi.

French Immersion

Since Ms. Amenta says that there are 14 students anxious to take it, French Immersion is available in Grade 12 at this time. The reason why some students switch to regular French at this point is that they are concerned about their averages and want to be sure of getting the highest mark possible in each subject.

Women's Centre AGM tomorrow

An open invitation is extended to all women in the community to attend the Howe Sound Women's Centre's annual general meeting and forum tomorrow evening, Sept. 22 in the Squamish Public Library.

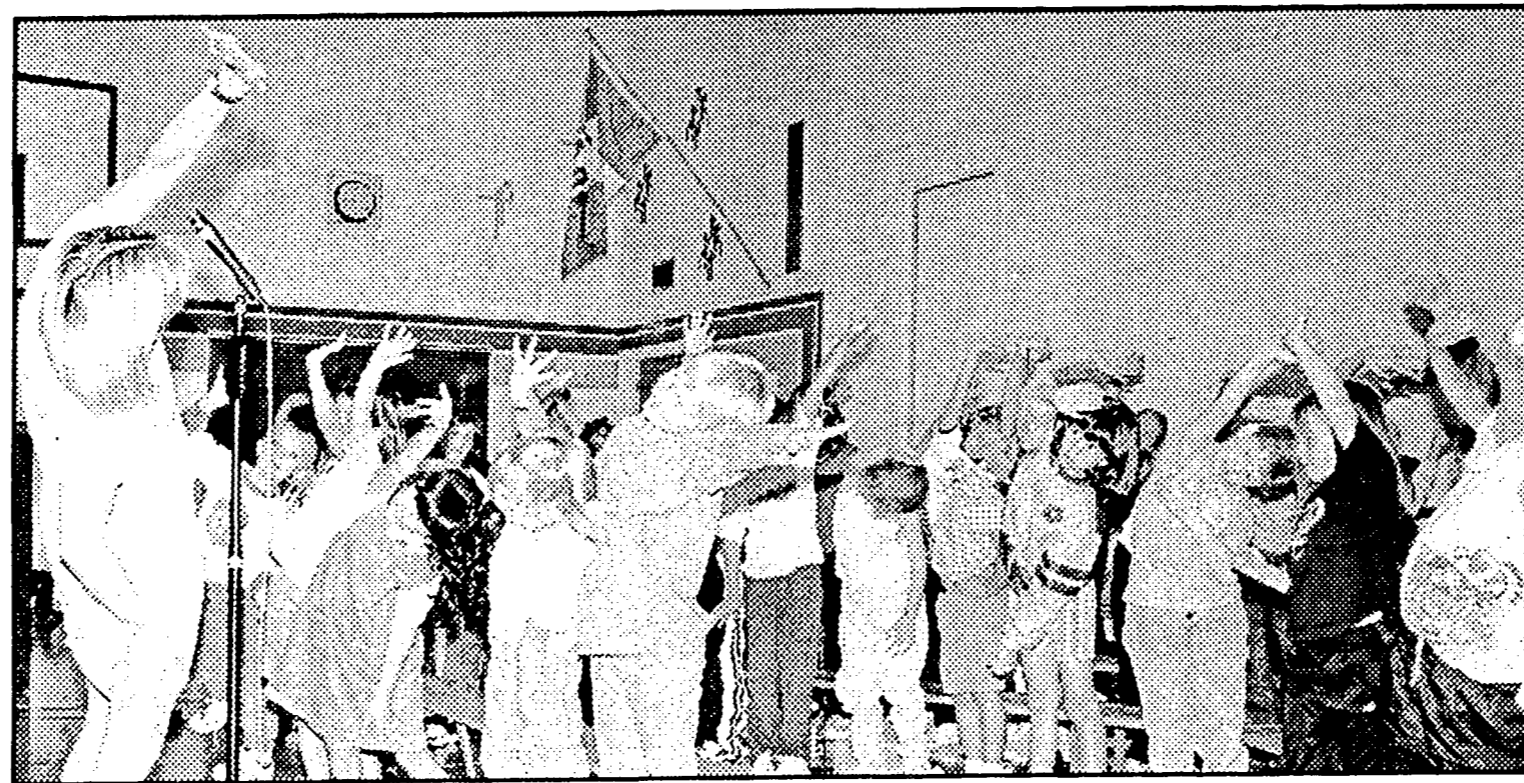

The first order of the night is a potluck dinner from 5 to 6 p.m., and you are asked to take along a dish to share. Following the business meeting from 6 to 7 p.m. there will be a number of women participating in a panel focusing on the WomenLed Project (Leadership, Literacy and Economic Development).

Pat Wilbur will facilitate and forum members include: Mary Billy, Carolyn Grass, Shealagh King, Mojdeh Rameshni, Lyra Rowe, and Charnjit Sandhu. You are urged to share your ideas, hopes, dreams and things or events that have inspired you. For more information, call the Women's Centre at 892-5748 weekdays, noon to 4 p.m.

Eldercollege is for anyone 55 years and counting, and an open house at Capilano College Squamish Campus will be held tomorrow (Sept. 22) at 1:30 p.m. This is an opportunity to meet the course facilitators for Great Books, Beginning Computers, French Conversation and Women in George Bernard Shaw's plays. Courses begin the first week in Oct. and remember, there are no exams, no stress and lots to smile about. The cost for each course is $25 and payable at the campus. Coffee and refreshments will be served during the open house.

Yesterday (Sept. 20) Tamara Rubino celebrated her first birthday.

The Howe Sound School District will hold a garage sale at the School Board office at 37866 Second Avenue from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 25).

TIM SHOULTS/THE CHIEF

Anne Thomsen and the new Moving Chords children's choir stretch it out prior to their first rehearsal of the season Thursday at Mamquam Elementary School.

There will be computers, books, record albums, VCRs, audio video equipment, furniture and more. There will be a concession stand on site. All proceeds from the garage sale will go towards District programs and the Howe Sound Secondary School's music department and athletics.

With the wonderful weather we've been enjoying it's hard to think about Christmas but there is a group of dedicated volunteers who are. The first meeting for Community Christmas Care will be held on Wednesday (Sept. 29) at 1 p.m. at the Squamish Pentecostal Assembly Church on Buckley Avenue.

The fourth annual Maple Leaf Singers concert will be held in the Brennan Park Leisure Centre on Sunday, Oct. 3 at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are available from Raj Kahlon at True Value Hardware or phone him at 892-5011. The Squamish Lions Club sponsors this talented choir and although tickets are free donations are welcome.

The grand opening of the new Alex Munro Firehall was held on Sept. 4 and was attended by many family members of Mr. Munro. Lynette Halvorson at 898-3158 or Julie Desjardine at 892-5998 would like to hear from old-timers who might have any pre-1950s photos of the fire department such as fire trucks or other equipment. The ladies would like to have them placed on the walls of the new firehall.

Tomorrow (Sept. 22) the Squamish Public Library will hold a get together for library volunteers from 10 a.m. to noon. Anyone interested in volunteering at the library is welcome to attend this coffee morning to find out about upcoming opportunities.

Books for Babies takes place each Saturday morning from 10 to 10:45 a.m. and this program at the Squamish Library is for infants up to 18-months-old and their caregivers. Time for Tots is a program for infants 18-months to three-years with their caregivers and it runs each Saturday from 11:15 a.m. to noon.

Everyone is probably aware of the upcoming Tour for a Friend bike tour in support of the Canadian Cancer Society. RCMP detachments in the province are taking part and locally, RCMP Const. Angie Bergunder and Whistler Const. Trish McCormack are part of the 20-member team that will start at Whistler next

ABOUT TOWN

Monday (Sept. 27) and end in Vancouver on Oct. 2. You can support this great cause by picking up a pledge book at Windermere Sea to Sky Real Estate and collect pledges from your friends or co-workers. T-shirts and caps are also available there.

The Tour will be in Squamish at noon on Sept. 27 at the Squamish Station mall and a good crowd to greet the tour would buoy the members' spirits (and hopefully they will receive donations too). Judy McQuinn is the fund-raising coordinator for the Squamish unit of the Canadian Cancer Society and she would appreciate hearing from anyone who can assist with the fund-raising.

The Squamish Aquatic Centre is closed for annual maintenance shutdown until Sept. 26. During the shutdown registrations for programs are accepted at the pool office. If the pool office is closed due to maintenance, registrations will be accepted at the main office. Call 898-3604 for more information.

Scene & Noted

A fabulous film festival

Antonio Banderas may not have been at the fourth annual Sea to Sky Film Festival Thursday and Friday in Squamish — but his mother-in-law was.

Yes, Squamish's local film festival attracted some top-notch films from across the world, including 13 Canadian and World Premiere films and one film, Mulligans, starring Tippi Hedren, mother of Melanie Griffith and mother-in-law to earththrob Antonio Banderas.

Over 150 people came out each night to view this growing festival — and to get the inside scoop on Hope Island, the TV series shooting in Britannia Beach. Festival director Laurie Pavonellis told the Friday night crowd, "I also saw a two-minute clip of the series featuring local faces, and the show has been picked up for nine more episodes, extending shooting from the end of this month well into November. It was good news to highlight a great festival."

The film fest continues — sort of — this Saturday with a screening of overflow films in the Tribaldi Room at the Howe Sound Inn starting at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free.

See you at the flicks next year.

The winners:
 Best Documentary - The Wrath of the Dragon, Michael Neitzel
 Best Drama - Lasting Impressions, Thor Andersen
 Best Comedy - Mulligans, Les Hood Swarthout
 Best Experimental - Instructions from the Dead, Nick Snipper
 People's Choice - The Wrath of the Dragon

Paul Duchaine bites into a limited-edition fourth anniversary Film Fest cookie.

Filmmaker Andrew Gravkin (The Way of the Sword) couldn't make the fest, but parents Joseph and Joan did.

Festival coordinator Holly Jacquard and director Adriane Polo were all smiles as the Film Fest marked another successful year.

Here come da judge — all five of them: Brent Leigh, Peter Wellnhofer, Patricia Heintzman, Sandra Wahl and Paul Lalli.

It was the ladies from the United Church who hosted at the big birthday tea last week. Climbing to the top

By IAN JACQUES
Reporter

Squamish's Alex Krygsveld is striving for new heights and is reaching for the top of the mountain.

At age 11 Krygsveld has attained lofty status as a rock climber.

He started climbing with an indoor team called the Edge in North Vancouver this year and recently was named to the National Junior Team (part of the Alpine Club of Canada) to compete at a world championship event next month in San Francisco.

He was selected to the team after winning five local events in the Lower Mainland and winning the Western Canadian Regional Championships.

"It's been a goal this year to make the team and I worked real hard to achieve that," Krygsveld said, who along with his mother Sue and father Corey make up this rock climbing family. "I love climbing and I've been climbing outdoors since I was five. It's just really cool."

Krygsveld is the only kid from Squamish on the national team and for that matter, the only local on the indoor team in North Van.

"It's a chance for him to improve his skills and climb all year long," Sue said. "We've always been rock climbing as a family and Alex learned from us. He's come a long way and for him to achieve what he has in only one year with the team is pretty amazing."

Three times a week for three hours each day, Alex heads down Hwy. 99 to practice with his Edge team.

Combined with competitions, school, his other hobbies and volunteering for the local SPCA, it's a big commitment by Alex and his family.

"We would love to be able to stay in Squamish, but without an indoor facility we really have no other choice," Sue said. "Hopefully soon there will be an indoor climbing wall in town and then he can stay here and train."

As for the world competition next month, Alex said he's been training hard for the last two weeks and will keep on training right up until competition day on Oct. 16.

"I want to go and compete and try to come in first," Alex said. "I've come in first in every competition that I've been in so far, but I really don't know what the competition is going to be like."

"It's going to be tough, but I'm confident that I can do well."

The world competition will feature competitors from around the globe including the US, Australia and Europe.

The competition will be broken down into two formats — boulder and on-sight.

Boulder format is where a number of different routes have been mapped out on the rock face and each climbing point is worth a different number of points. The competitor with the most points wins the competition.

Squamish's Alex Krygsveld is heading to a world championship rock climbing event in San Francisco next month.

On-sight format is slightly different in that each competitor is held in isolation and you have to climb without any knowledge of the wall or what your fellow competitors have done.

One of the added advantages that Alex has is that almost half of the Edge team is on the national squad as well as the coach.

"That's a big advantage," Sue said. "They climb together and train together all year, so they feel really comfortable with each other."

"We're looking forward to the event. Alex is very good and he's climbing some really hard stuff that others his age probably wouldn't even think trying."

Like most ventures of this magnitude, competitors are responsible for some of their travel costs.

If anyone is interested in helping sponsor Alex or help with their fund raising they can call the Krygsvelds at 898-9821.

Longhorn undefeated after two weeks of men's soccer

By IAN JACQUES
Reporter

Hot weather and even hotter games was the story as every team took the pitch for week two of the G&T Pool and Spa Men's Soccer League Sunday at Centennial Fields.

The league was able to fill an eighth team of over-35 players and this squad will take on one of the other seven teams each week in an exhibition game.

This means that every team will be in action and no one gets a bye.

In games played Sunday, Longhorn Pub improved to 2-0 with an impressive 3-1 win over Squamish FC Khalsa.

Nino Cerella, Peter Andrew and Jeff Black picked up the goals for Longhorn while Andre Jensen picked up the lone marker for Khalsa.

"Khalsa has been undefeated for quite a while, so it's a big upset for us," Cerella said after the game. "It's a great win for our team and it puts us into first place in the league."

Ellis Moving and Storage moved to one point back of Longhorn in the standings with a convincing 5-1 win over Mt. Currie.

Ellis led 3-0 at half-time and could have scored two or three more goals as they hit the crossbar on a number of occasions and just missed capitalizing on a number of other shots.

"We we're able to use all the players on the bench and that's good early in the season," said Ellis coach Dave Armstrong. "We played well up front and in the mid-field. Getting two goals early really helped to calm the guys down."

"It's a good start to the season."

John Beatty, Bob Versluis, Fabrice Roche, Didier Touthain and Dan Ellis scored for Ellis while Alphonse Wallace scored the lone goal for Mt. Currie.

Orange Crush evened their record at 1-1 with a 3-0 shutout over Cliffside Pub.

Senan Joseph, Lance Joseph and Kevin Schellenberg scored for the winners.

In the exhibition game, Amsterdam FC picked up a spirited 5-1 win over the over-35 team.

Week three games get going on Sunday at 10:30 a.m. with another full slate of games.

Khalsa locks horns with Cliffside Pub, Ellis tangles with Amsterdam FC, Orange Crush will take on the over-35 squad and Mt. Currie takes on Longhorn Pub.

Ellis Moving and Storage battled to a 5-1 win over Mt. Currie Sunday at Centennial Fields.

Hwy 99 Tips Three elephants

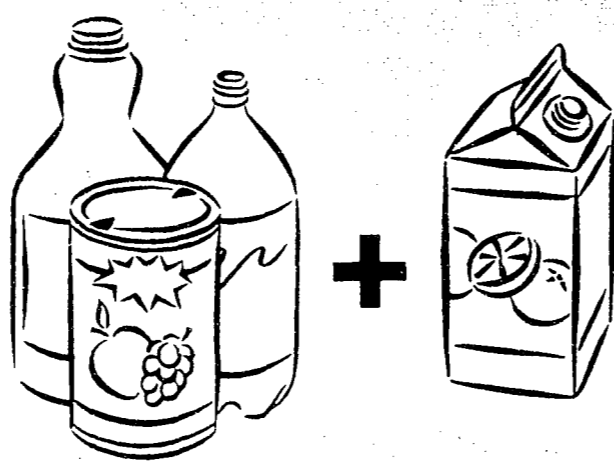

Try to keep at least three seconds between you and the car ahead. How far is that? As the car in front passes a marker beside the road (sign, tree, whatever) start counting: one elephant, two elephants, three elephants. If you get to the marker before you've counted the third elephant, you're too close. You may have been taught two elephants but, frankly, three elephants are better. A German study determined that if drivers had one more second warning, 80 % of collisions could be avoided. Buy yourself that second every chance you get.

Starting October 1st you can get a deposit back on even more beverage containers.

These beverage containers join the deposit system, which includes all ready to drink beverage containers: aluminum and metal cans, glass and plastic bottles, jugs and bag-in-a-box.

Return It™ is BC's beverage container return system. It makes it simple for anyone to return beverage containers to a Return It™ Centre for their deposit refund. It also ensures that used beverage containers end up recycled, rather than in landfills. What's more, Return It™ provides a great fundraising opportunity for schools, community groups and kids' sports teams. In short, it's change for the better.

DEPOSIT LEVELS REMAIN UNCHANGED

20¢ for containers bigger than 1 litre.

SAVE 'EM

Save your BC bought ready-to-drink beverage containers from soft drinks to grape juice. Now even drink boxes, drink pouches and gable top cartons of all sizes are included. Containers for milk and milk substitutes of all types and sizes are still excluded by legislation.

SORT 'EM

Sort at home by the deposit you paid: 5¢ or 20¢. The more sorting you do at home, the faster your visit to the Return It™ Centre will be. Alcoholic beverage containers will be accepted at Return It™ Centres, however deposit refund levels may vary. Alcoholic beverage containers are not accepted at grocery stores.

CASH 'EM IN

Once your used beverage containers are sorted, cash 'em in at any Return It™ Centre. So for a change, and a change for the better, be sure to Return It™.

Locals shine at all-star tournament

By IAN JACQUES
Reporter

The Squamish/South Hill All-stars came up second best at the 18th annual Metro Empire Association All-star baseball tournament last weekend. All-star teams from throughout the Lower Mainland took part in the event. According to John Stuart, one of five players from Squamish to play in the tournament, it was the first time since 1992 that Squamish didn't put in a full team.

Besides Stuart, Doug Allin, Richard Tetzlaff, Travis Moyle and Calem Gardner — all from Greg Gardner GM Fastpitch club — played on the all-star team. In game one Squamish/South Hill blasted the Connaught All-stars 14-0 and followed that up with a 4-3 win over the Premier League All-stars.

They beat the Stevenson All-stars 6-3 to move into the playoffs where they beat Connaught 8-0, but then lost to the Premier League All-stars 4-3 in the final. The Squamish players excelled all weekend with Allin batting .400 and picking up two wins on the mound, Tetzlaff hit .466, Moyle contributed with a monster home run and Stuart picked up MVP honors batting .533 with ten RBIs.

Cheakamus rolls Saturday

By IAN JACQUES
Reporter

With over 1,200 racers, this year's Cheakamus Challenge promises to be one of epic proportions. The 17th annual point-to-point cross-country bike race set for Squamish and Whistler goes this Saturday. The race begins bright and early at 9 a.m. starting at Cheekye near Brackendale and finishes 65 twisted kilometres later at the base of Whistler Mountain. "Originally dubbed 'see colors and puke' because of its psychedelic indulgences and cruel climbs, the Cheakamus has carved a place in off-road history as a celebration of pain," said Grant Lamont, race director. "The Cheakamus Challenge Fall Classic is the longest running and most colorful mountain bike race in Canada." Race headquarters for the day is the Tantalus Bike shop and racers can pick up their race packages, information or enter the race starting on Friday. For more information call Tantalus at 898-2588.

BCRAIL

BC Rail is in the process of preparing a Pest Management Plan (PMP) and is seeking public input regarding the concepts and details. A PMP describes in detail how the proponent will manage pest populations. Once approved, a PMP will replace the need for permits. The subject matter to be addressed by BC Rail is integrated vegetation management on the railway using mechanical, manual and chemical methods and the control of wood decay using wood preservation chemicals.

Interested persons may obtain a copy of the draft PMP when it is available. Where sufficient interest has been expressed by organizations or groups located along the BC Rail system, information meetings will be scheduled during the Fall of 1999 to allow BC Rail to further explain the concepts and to receive input.

Should you have an interest in presenting a position, obtaining a copy of the draft PMP (when available) or attending an information meeting, please advise either John Brodie or John Clarke at:

Men's puck action set to fly

BY IAN JACQUES
Reporter

Those cold winter nights that are almost upon us will heat up just a bit as another season of the Howe Sound Men's Hockey League is on the horizon.

League play gets going Oct. 1 with six teams returning this year for a full slate of heavy puck action.

The six teams are McDonald's, Flyers, Sports Traders, Red Wings, Build-All Avalanche and Panagopoulos Rangers.

Teams have already hit the ice in preparation of the year and according to league coordinator Brian Jahnke, it looks to be another solid year of men's hockey in Squamish.

"It's pretty competitive and I think the league is going to have a lot of parity this year," Jahnke said, who helps coordinate league activities along with Steve Hadden and Steve Twilley.

Jahnke said each team will play roughly a 35-game schedule with playoffs to follow.

The league is still looking for players, referees and time keepers for the upcoming season.

For more information about these jobs or any other league activities call Jahnke at 898-1881, Hadden at 898-4247 or Twilley at 898-4175.

The Squamish Off-road Cycling Association (SORCA) held their final Toonie Race of the year on Friday night. Approximately 65 participants took part with Chad Miles winning crossing the finish line first.

Bringing books and beer together

Books and Beer. Mmmm. Was there ever a more appealing name for an event? I don't think so.

The Squamish Public Library is bringing together two of my favorite things for a special fundraiser at the Eagle Eye Community Theatre on Thursday, Oct. 7 starting at 7 p.m. Arthur Black of CBC's national radio show Basic Black will be hosting — and giving a reading from his new book — while fine products from the Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company will be available to sample. You even get to take home your own tasting glass!

Tickets are available at $20 each and all proceeds will go to raise money for the library — but you've got a chance to win a pair from Behind Bars. Just be the first person into the office Thursday morning with a quotation from a book borrowed from the Squamish Public Library that sings the praises of beer and we'll not only give you the tickets, we'll print your name and the passage you chose in next week's Behind Bars (if it's clean enough; remember, this is a family newspaper...).

Let the book-hunting begin.

Week three of the NFL is already upon us, and the Grizzly Bar and Grrril is, as ever, your place to catch the action, with nine large TVs plus the big screen for a football-filled Sunday with drink and food specials for the Monday Night version.

Hockey's also up and running, so come to the Grizz to catch all the action.

Live music is also still going strong at the Grizz, with the Weathermen making a return appearance this Friday and Saturday.

There's still time to get in on the Shady Tree Pub's NFL football pool — first 50 entrants get a free 1999 pro football guide to help you make the winning picks. Then come down and see the games, with four available at once on the Shady's new digital system.

After the glitz and glamour of the Sea to Sky Film

Tim Shoultz

.....BEHIND BARS.....

Festival's post-gala party Friday and a hectic performance by Elastic Livestock Saturday, the Brew Pub at the Howe Sound Inn and Brewing Company is taking a week off live music — but Paintin' in the Brew Pub is still on for Tuesday nights with Karen from Paintin' Place.

Start your mug now and hang it in the pub when you're done to get a permanent discount on Howe Sound ales.

IAN JACQUES/THE CHIEF
Jason Nett of Bluesberries strums along at the Grizz on Friday night.

HOROSCOPES

BY GEORGIA NICHOLS

GEORGIA NICOLS

Sept 19 - 24 1999

All Signs: It's a bummer how much we are bombarded by the negative. Our media focuses on disaster, tragedy and dishonesty. Our entertainment is full of human woe and violence. Our society considers it intellectually superior to be critical - artistically, theatrically, architecturally and in literature. Yikes. It's more important than ever to remember that the purpose of life is to be happy. (Anybody got a better idea?) Everyone knows that unhappy sucks. Take your choice. Before we debate about how that is achieved - a clear decision has to be made to seek happiness. Not how to do it, but just to do it. According to the planets, this is the perfect week to remind yourself that your intention to be happy is a valid goal. (I kid you not.)

Aries (March 21 - April 19)
Open yourself to new situations, new people and fresh ideas. Much of what comes to you now is unusual and unorthodox. People you ordinarily consider weird, pop into your life and throw a new slant on your ideas. You meet new faces, or you could be introduced to a new organization or group. Don't be afraid to rattle your own preconceived values which you unconsciously protect. Maybe they need the light of a new day. Discussions with others about philosophy and metaphysics are exciting. This new stuff coming down the tube could turn into a thrilling new romance. With someone completely different.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20)
Exciting possibilities exist at work. Make new contacts, new breakthroughs, a fresh impression, introduce new ideas, hire new people, or start a new project or job. The public reputation you have with your peers is undergoing a change now - your label is different in some way. You have the ability to unearth new financial information, possibly to do with other people's possessions. Gifts may be given to you. Go ahead and ask for a loan. Since this is a time when you are embarking on a completely new cycle - demand the best for yourself. You have been giving up things for too long now; it's time to start being on the receiving end of life.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20)
Your thoughts are flying at lightening speed. Ideas race through your mind (give them away, you can never use them all). Sudden opportunities to travel arise. People from afar drop into your life. A deeper truth about an offspring can occur to you now. Lovers may experience a revelation about something. When you talk to others (especially partners), so much subtext is involved, it's as if you had X-ray vision. Keep in mind that this is a time when you are slowly testing the waters as you choose (or are forced) to give things up. Because of this shift - new data can be helpful. You're in excellent form now. You don't have to demand the advantage - you have it.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22)
An entirely new spin may present itself on matters related to real estate, family, family businesses, the health of family members, and shared possessions or resources. Someone may give you something for your home or family. Or vice versa, you may pass on something to someone else. Discussions or practical effort on your part may transform something or make a significant impact in some way. If you are able to see things in a new way, or in a different combination, you can make some money. This quality of freshness and openness must be there to truly capitalize on the current opportunities. They will not be old and familiar; they will be new and different.

Leo (July 23 - Aug. 22)
Money continues to keep flowing - out and in, out and in - (notice that out comes first?). Midst all this cash flow, you are entertaining, socializing, seeing people, flirting, being creative and spinning your charms with your public. As this takes place on the surface, down in the basement, a myriad of different things are breaking up your regular pace. Change is afoot. Not everyone else is aware of it unless you are talking about it. The bottom line is that you are beginning to move in an entirely new direction in how you relate to your partner, as well as how you deal with your clients or customers. You can pull this off because your positive optimism is expanding your personal relationships in practically every part of your life.

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22)
Your imagination may be a gold mine to you now. The ideas that drift into your mind could be terrific at work if you have the courage to trust your own intuition. Younger Virgos (and to a lesser degree all Virgos) tend to footnote themselves. "Studies indicateΣ" "According to research.." "On TV the other dayΣ" "I read that Σ" It's as if you think no one will listen to you if you put forth an idea that is simply your own. As you get older, you begin to see that the big powerful "they" out there ain't so smart. It's just us. And what we don't know could fill a library. This week your mind is capable of mystical magic. If you work with paint, oil, gas, chemicals, glamour, film, the movies, fashion, photography, the arts or design - then trust your wacky ideas. They could be genius.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)
You have been retired somewhat lately, and this is good. Now, however it's time to come out of the box. Friends and groups are particularly receptive to you, in fact, everyone is downright cozy. Even though your career is on an upward spiral, you might have to downsize right now. Keep it lean and clean. Reduce your debt. Pay your taxes. By Feb. next year, you will begin to feel flush again. In the meantime, you are simply regrouping to reposition yourself for the major strides that the next four to five years offer you, before you reach a culmination point in your life. Romance promises sweet moments this week.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21)
The 90s have been a decade where you have been trying to figure out what you really wanted to do - what you could excel at and enjoy. This year you began to get some real breaks and offers so that you could show others what your potential truly is. This week, your best focus is on partnerships and dealing with the public. Be careful about spontaneous spending and impulse buying. (And you will be tempted.) Flow with the group dynamic wherever possible. At home, veiled secrets may be revealed. Be sympathetic with discussions that take place. Don't be afraid of commitment.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21)
You want to be able to move freely and discuss whatever you choose. Restrictions put you off now. (Not that you ever liked them anyhow.) You feel very sympathetic to friends this week. You will support them and defend them if need be, because you understand their needs. Because it is so easy to be irritable or restless now, you need to throw yourself into some sort of physical activity. (Yes, sex counts, but only if it's sweaty.) Discussions with others are personal and rip through your mask now. And you welcome it. You sense that others can be a catalyst to your own deeper understanding of who you are. (Heavy stuff.)

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19)
Be prepared to be caught off guard (is such a thing possible?) because bosses, superiors, VIPs, parents and people in positions of authority can really surprise you this week. At best, they could fulfill your dreams of earning more money, or earning money in a way that you would like to. Or perhaps they give you something. Maybe you won't get the keys to the Jag, but it could be a comforting little goody. Financial surprises of all types could surface now and if they don't hit your pocketbook they could impact something you own. It can be favourable or not. (But I think favourable.)

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)
Your energy is particularly powerful working through groups now. You have the ability to surprise, to instruct and to communicate in such a way as to expand the minds of others. All discussions about philosophy, religion and metaphysics can impact groups or friends on a deep level. It's as if you suddenly have the ability to resonate at a frequency that others can understand. Communication, especially to groups and friends is not always this easy. Seize this opportunity to communicate anything important that you want to say. Continue to work towards solidifying your home base. By your birthday next year, your family or domestic scene enjoys greater opportunities to become enriched.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20)
Your mind is powerfully attuned right now whether you know it or not. Trust any ideas you have about sex, your subconscious, your darker side, or matters related to financial matters between you and someone else. Furthermore, you can convince others in high places to see your POV if you wish. Others look upon you now as someone who is doing something unusual or different. You are bold and freedom seeking. And your imagination and ability to make your fantasies a reality is uncanny. Continue your dance. You are empowered this week.

Know your contractor, says building inspector

By Darren Gallagher
Reporter

When it comes to finding a good contractor, word of mouth is the way to go, says Barry Neilsen.

Neilsen, a building inspector employed by the District of Squamish, says the best way to ensure you get quality workmanship is to hire a contractor you know or who has worked for somebody you know. A homeowner should also ask for references and prior work, as well as obtaining a warranty on the work.

Going to the Better Business Bureau to see if there are any complaints lodged against a company and checking with Municipal Hall to see if the company is a registered builder and authorized to carry out that type of work is also a good idea.

Building inspectors don't recommend contractors, Neilsen says. Their job is to ensure the work adheres to the minimum building code requirements. Anything beyond that is up to the owner.

"Everything comes back to the person having the work being done," he says. "They're responsible for seeing they're requirements are being met."

Most owners depend on inspection agencies, but agencies don't deal with the quality of workmanship as long as it is structurally sound, Neilsen says.

Direct supervision of the work is a good idea, but don't go the cheap route.

"Lots of homeowners get in trouble because they want to be the general contractor to save themselves money," Neilsen says. They end up with more problems and bigger bills because they don't have a qualified overseer.

Looking for an overseer is much like looking for a contractor. While they can be found in the phone book under building specialists and property managers, word of mouth is still the best idea, and research is essential.

Another option is hiring an architect to follow the project beyond the design stage to completion, though this tends to be expensive.

Overseers are usually paid based on a percentage of the project's cost.

If a homeowner finds their contractor isn't living up to the terms of the contract, they can sue for breach of contract, Neilsen says. A complaint for potential future customers can be registered at the Better Business Bureau.

The homeowner should have reasonable grounds for dismissing their contractor, Neilsen warns, as the contractor can also sue for breach of contract.

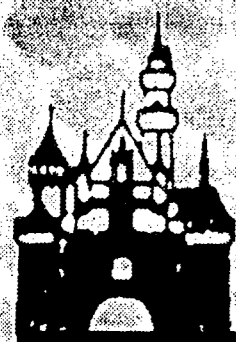

However, the bottom line is, Neilsen says, "If you don't want somebody, get rid of them."

"If you don't want somebody, get rid of them."

Apply now for building permits

By Colm Heaney
Reporter

With the seemingly on-going construction in Whistler, it may appear that any one with a hammer, some nails and a couple of two by fours can start adding that brand new addition to their home. In fact, there are a series of municipal and provincial regulations which must be met in order to for a project to be approved.

If you're planning on building something on your property, it is important to make sure all the proper arrangements have been made.

To help insure the project goes smoothly, all applications and permits must be looked after.

Before the project starts, the plans must be looked over by a plan checker to make sure the plans meet the standards set out by the Building Corporation of British Columbia and to make sure they are within the parameters of the bylaws set out by the Resort Municipality of Whistler, said Karen Glenn, a building clerk with the RMOW. After the plans have been approved, the RMOW then uses a formula to determine the building fees of the project.

Once the permit has been issued and the construction

Construction is always booming in Whistler. The best time to apply for a building permit, say municipal staff, is during the has begun the project is subject to a series of on-site inspections to ensure that building code requirements are being met.

In terms of the time between an application being received and its approval, Glen said the fall is probably one of the better times to apply, because there is not as much activity.

In the spring time when most preparations for construction of major projects like homes are being done it takes on average five to six weeks for an application to be approved. An application received in the fall takes two to three weeks.

Where does your energy go

by Patricia Wheeler
 Wondering how much energy it takes to dry a load of laundry or to run the silverware through the dishwasher? BC Hydro can tell you. The utility has helpful tips and information on reducing energy and making your home power Smart.

- Consider installing a thermostat — it will remember to turn down the heat even if you don't.
- If you're using portable heaters in more than two rooms, it's probably more economical to use the central heating system.
- Make sure the thermostat isn't set too high — a 1,500-watt heater on the highest setting costs over $2 a day to run.
- Avoid heating unused rooms.
- Close doors to unused rooms and close warm air supply registers.
- If you have zone heating, lower the temperature in the unused part of the house.
- Recommended home temperature settings:
 Relaxing or watching TV 21° C Working around the

- house 20° C
 Sleeping 18° C
 Away from home 16° C
- Reduce heat loss through windows. Glass allows heat to pass through your windows, allowing up to 1/3 of the heat in your home to escape. If you have single-glazed windows, put on storm windows or plastic sheeting.
- Eliminate drafts around doors and windows. Check to make sure caulking and weather-stripping are still good quality. If not, repair or replace the seal. Weather-stripping and caulking can reduce heat loss by up to 6%.
- Insulate your home.
- Water
 - Fix leaky faucets. Leaks can result in wasting up to 13,000 litres of water a year.
 - Run your dishwasher and washing machine with full loads.
 - Insulate hot water pipes and heating ducts that run through unheated areas of your home. Insulate your hot water tank, too.
- Lighting
 - Turn off unnecessary lights. Lighting accounts for up to 14 per cent of the

From earthtones to rich colors – anything goes in Whistler

By Graham Kendrick
Reporter

With the lazy days of summer in the rearview mirror and the crisp days of autumn upon us, it's a good time to get the house fixed up and looking good. With that in mind, Whistler's two main paint and supply stores, Mountain Paint and Home Hardware, have seen certain trends emerging in both interior and exterior design for this year.

"We're seeing a lot of people going for deep, rich colours," said Laura Kinney, co-owner of Mountain Paint. "The deep reds, browns, greens, etc. People are going for really rich, vibrant colours."

But Home Hardware manager Lance Eymundson is seeing a lot of his customers play it a little safer.

"We're noticing a lot of earthtones, a lot of medium shades of colour," he says.

But both say faux finish is a local favourite.

"Faux finishing is always popular," said Eymundson. "People are always doing them."

Kinney agrees with him.

"People want to get texture on the walls using glazing, ragging, smooshing, tickling, all sorts of different methods," she said.

Kinney also said the millennium is having an impact on decorating trends.

"With the millennium coming, people are either going to the deep, colours or back to stark white. They either want to do something bold to ring in the new millennium, or just go back to sterile white."

As for the outside of your home, Kinney and Eymundson both say not much has changed, although one trend starting to emerge is lighter colour for the exterior.

"With so many wood houses in Whistler, the trend is light, semi-transparent colours. There's a milky-clear colour which is becoming big," said Kinney.

Eymundson said he encourages people to experiment to see what suits their home and their tastes best.

"Go to your paint or hardware store and discuss it with the paint expert. They can show you the latest tricks and trends," he said. "The beautiful thing with painting is that if it doesn't work out, you can always put another coat over it."

Both Mountain Paint and Home Hardware offer customers access to books and magazines that can provide additional information and decorating hints.

The ideal kitchen: the perfect stage

by Kathleen Brennan
For chef Tony Minichiello, eating is not simply the act of filling one's stomach. It is "open theatre" and therefore he needs a proper stage.

Minichiello had to renovate his own kitchen in what he describes as a post-war home in Whistler because it was small and inefficient, reflecting an era where the housewife was cloistered away from the rest of the house while she prepared the food. "It screwed up the way we ate," he says.

The first thing Minichiello did was to remove the wall between the kitchen and dining room and install an island.

He recommends installing a butcher block top on the island which creates plenty of room for chopping vegetables or rolling out pastry. Granite is a popular surface but is very expensive and Minichiello says he prefers wood.

The wood creates a nice sound when chopping and is easy to clean. It also kills bacteria, unlike plastic chopping boards which actually allows bacteria to breed unless cleaned properly.

Minichiello has designed his kitchen in the classic triangle motif of sink, island and fridge. The stove is barely an arm's length away from the island, allowing easy access to all kinds of cooking and baking and a quick toss onto the butcher block to cool.

The renovation job took about six months to complete. "It was one of the nicest moments of my life," he says.

Like many Canadian kitchens, the Minichiello kitchen had too many cupboards and not enough counter space and Minichiello's goal was to rectify the situation.

A second wall was knocked back to build another key component of Minichiello's kitchen — his pantry. All the shelves were placed on rollers for easy access to pots and pans in one section and food in the other pantry.

Minichiello says things must be easy to reach or they simply will not be used if they are shoved into the back of the cupboard and his credo is to leave his most important appliances on top of the counter all the time.

For Minichiello those items left on the counter all the time are his food processor, his mixmaster, his coffee pot and his toaster.

Minichiello's kitchen is bright and fresh in colors of blue and white but most importantly, it is functional and he has made few concessions to fashion — the main one being a rack suspended above the island holding copper pots and tools such as his whisk. He cheerfully admits he got the copper pots with "Zellers points".

"The kitchen shouldn't look too Martha Stewart," he says.

He is adamant that electric stoves are far superior to gas stoves unless a person is willing to buy a commercial-calibre gas stove. Most household gas stoves do not have enough BTUs which means they simply do not get hot enough.

Many of the new stoves are designed without a back panel which allows for more room on the back elements and people have easy access to the switches.

Whistler has no shortage of remarkable homes with detailed interiors.

He also recommends that people do not buy the stoves with a stainless steel finish because they have a very "high maintenance finish."

The fridge also was carefully chosen and does not include a freezer which, in the end, means a lot more room for food that must be refrigerated. Minichiello says most people have freezers anyways so he just does not see the necessity of incorporating a freezer in with a refrigerator.

Good, sharp knives are essential and one of Minichiello's favourite is a cleaver he bought in Chinatown for about $50. To help keep knives sharp, they should be placed in a knife block or stuck to magnets. Throwing them in a drawer makes them lose their edge much quicker, he says. And a dull knife is a "bad chore."

As for pots and pans,

Minichiello likes both stainless steel or aluminum but cautions that aluminum is porous and is not good for acidic foods such as tomato-based spaghetti sauce which will bore tiny holes into the aluminum.

The aluminum then contaminates the sauce and actually affects the taste and colour of the meal, he says.

"A white wine sauce will look and taste slightly metallic."

Time to put the garden to bed

by Kathleen Brennan

The crisp nights, the return of the Stellar Jays, the sight of fresh snow on Mt. Garibaldi. Does this mean the end of gardening for another year?

Not quite yet, says Squamish Gardeners president Jill Gould. The lawns and gardens still have to be "put to bed" and prepared properly for next year.

Gould says the first thing to do is start pulling-out the annuals as they die off after the first frost and consider saving the seeds.

She recommends that gardeners on the West Coast cut down the dead seed heads which will help reduce rotting from all the rain and the number of bugs which would use the piles of dead brush for shelter from the elements.

Now is the time to chop or shred the old plant matter and add to the compost heap.

The garden beds need some attention now. Do not put fertilizers on the gardens but now is the time to lime the soil or spread aged manure, compost or wood ashes which add badly-needed potassium to Squamish's highly-acidic soil. "You need to balance it out," she says.

Gould also suggests that people label their perennials now while the plants are still identifiable and as a recycling tip, says that mini-blind slats make great garden labels.

Plants should as geraniums can be overwintered but should be dug out of the garden anytime now and placed in pots and stored in sheltered places such as a greenhouse or a garage.

Gould says, however, that some longtime Squamish gardeners such as Peggy Barnfield have just placed leaves over the geraniums and the plants survived the winter.

Herbs such as oregano, rosemary or lemon balm can also be kept over the winter using the same technique, she says.

And tender plants like the hardy fuschia should be covered with leaves.

Even though the rains will soon arrive, any conifers under eaves or any kind of overhang must continue to be watered because they are heavy water users, Gould says.

There is still plenty of spade work to do in the garden and Gould says now is the time to divide perennials such as phlox, peonies, asters or shasta daisies. It is also time to plant your daffodil, crocus or tulip bulbs for next spring. And some bulbs and tubers like the dahlias or gladiolias must be dug out and placed in a dry spot for the winters because they would simply rot if left in the ground.

Lawns also need a little extra attention at this time of year, she says.

"In the fall, lawns should be mowed higher as long as it's growing vigorously."

September is the month to reseed any bare patches and the lawns should also be limed. Gould also reminds gardeners to rake the leaves off and use them as mulch for the garden beds, especially the vegetable garden.

Gould says dig up everything in the vegetable garden now and next put down a layer of nutrients composed of lawn clippings, manure, leaves and compost.

She says she used to walk around town raking all her neighbours' leaves for her garden when she Deanna White's English country garden earned the distinction of being the bloomin' best garden in the Resort Municipality of Whistler's second annual gardening contest held earlier this year. White is shown here with son Devin, in the garden, which topped the list of 27 entries in this year's competition.

Gardening tips for the fall

by Colm Heaney

Contrary to what one may think, there's more to be done than rake once the leaves change colors. The shovel, pitch fork and rototiller can all play a role in maintaining your garden in the autumn. It is also an excellent time to transplant trees, shrubs, bulbs, and perennials.

The following is list of all gardening tips which should give your garden a head start once spring blooms.

Rake leaves onto compost pile or shred and use for mulch.

Fall is garden clean up time. Trim back spent perennials. Chop up debris and compost. Pile loose mulch, such as pine needles, straw or leaves, on tender plants that require protection.

- Harvest cold-sensitive vegetables before frost. Dig beets radishes, and carrots when the ground cracks at plant stem.

- Evaluate your lawn. Some parts of the country can apply broadleaf weed killers if necessary. Fall is the time for one last mow in most area. Set mower blade to highest setting. Fescue lawns can be reseeded now; summer grasses can be seeded over with rye in mild winter regions. Drain gas and oil from all power equipment to prevent starting problems in the spring.

- Remove broken, diseased or damaged branches from trees and shrubs.

- Plant new trees in the fall. Give the transplants an extra watering before winter sets in.

- Enjoy fall annuals: mums; asters; pansies in warmer regions. Cut back mums after they bloom.

- Plant daffodils and other spring flowering bulbs when soil is cool.

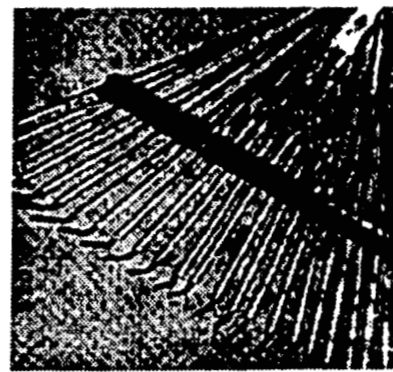

- Direct sow wilderness seeds that require cool temperatures

- If a live (not cut) Christmas tree is in your plans, dig its hole before the ground freezes and mulch well.

- Continue to feed the birds with seed and suet. They will help rid your trees of pest larvae, eggs and insects.

Keep it safe

By Ian Jacques
Reporter

Whether it's the hot summer months of the dead of winter, crime never stops.

"Improving home security is essential at any time of the year," said Const. Dan Seward, community policing coordinator for the Squamish RCMP. "Criminals rely on easy entry to people's homes and if you don't take precautions you will end up being a victim of crime."

Seward said there are a number of simple things that you can do to ensure that your home and property is safe.

Make sure door locks adequately, making sure all doors and windows and shut and locked even if only leaving home for a short while. This also includes garage and shed doors.

"Burglars don't like to be seen," Seward said. "If you make your home look and sound occupied even when you are away, it's least likely that your home will be a target."

The Block Watch program in Squamish is also helpful in providing safety information.

Block Watch is a free program offered by the RCMP to help prevent crime in the community.

The program is a neighbor-helping-neighbor program. They watch out for each other's homes and report suspicious activities to the police and to each other to help reduce residential crime.

Block Watch also offers tips on home security, information on how to mark property, protective window stickers and crime prevention strategies. Some other home security tips include:

- Make sure the strike plate (mounted on door frame) is reinforced with a 2-inch or 3-inch screw.
- Secondary locks on all windows rather than just simple latches provide added security.
- Make sure you know where all the keys to your home and office are and never leave any keys outside, under a welcome mat or in a mail box.

For more tips on home safety tips or the Block Watch program in Squamish, call Squamish RCMP at 898-9611 and in Whistler call 932-3044.

It's a good idea while doing your fall fixup to make sure your gas heating system is running safely. Repairs can be expensive and leaks can be dangerous.

Bathroom fixup: tips and tricks

Drip, drip, drip...not only does that leaky faucet keep you up all night, it's a waste of water.

According to Environment Canada, nearly 65 per cent of all indoor water use occurs in the bathroom.

By following the three rules of water conservation — reducing, repairing and retrofitting — a typical household can reduce water consumption by 35 per cent or more with no effect on your lifestyle.

Simply repairing or upgrading faucet fixtures can make a significant difference in the amount of water your household consumes.

Water conservation tips for the bathroom:

- Install aerators on faucets and flow restrictors on shower heads
- Install a water-conserving washerless faucet

• Don't let water run continuously while you brush your teeth or shave

• Check your toilet for leaks. Put a few drops of food coloring in your toilet tank.

If, without flushing, the color begins to appear in the bowl, you know you have a leak that needs to be repaired

• Replace your toilet with a water-conserving model (six liters or 1.6 gallons or less per flush)

• Teach children to turn faucets off tightly after use

Using water more efficiently or reducing where appropriate reduces pollution and health risks, lowers water costs, and extend the useful life of our existing supply and waste treatment facilities.

Conservation not only saves water, it save energy, money and helps to improve the environment.

What is a pressure-balancing shower faucet?

A pressure balancing shower faucet senses incoming hot or cold water pressure and compensates for fluctuations to keep shower temperatures constant and comfortable. Water temperature remains within 1 degree Celsius despite demands from other water sources in the house such as toilets, dishwashers, clothes washers or other faucets.

What are the tricks to replacing a faucet?

Spray WD-40 on the faucet nut a day before you turn off the water valve and unscrew the pipes underneath the sink.

The lubricant will moisturize the nut and eliminate corrosion, making the nut easier to turn off.

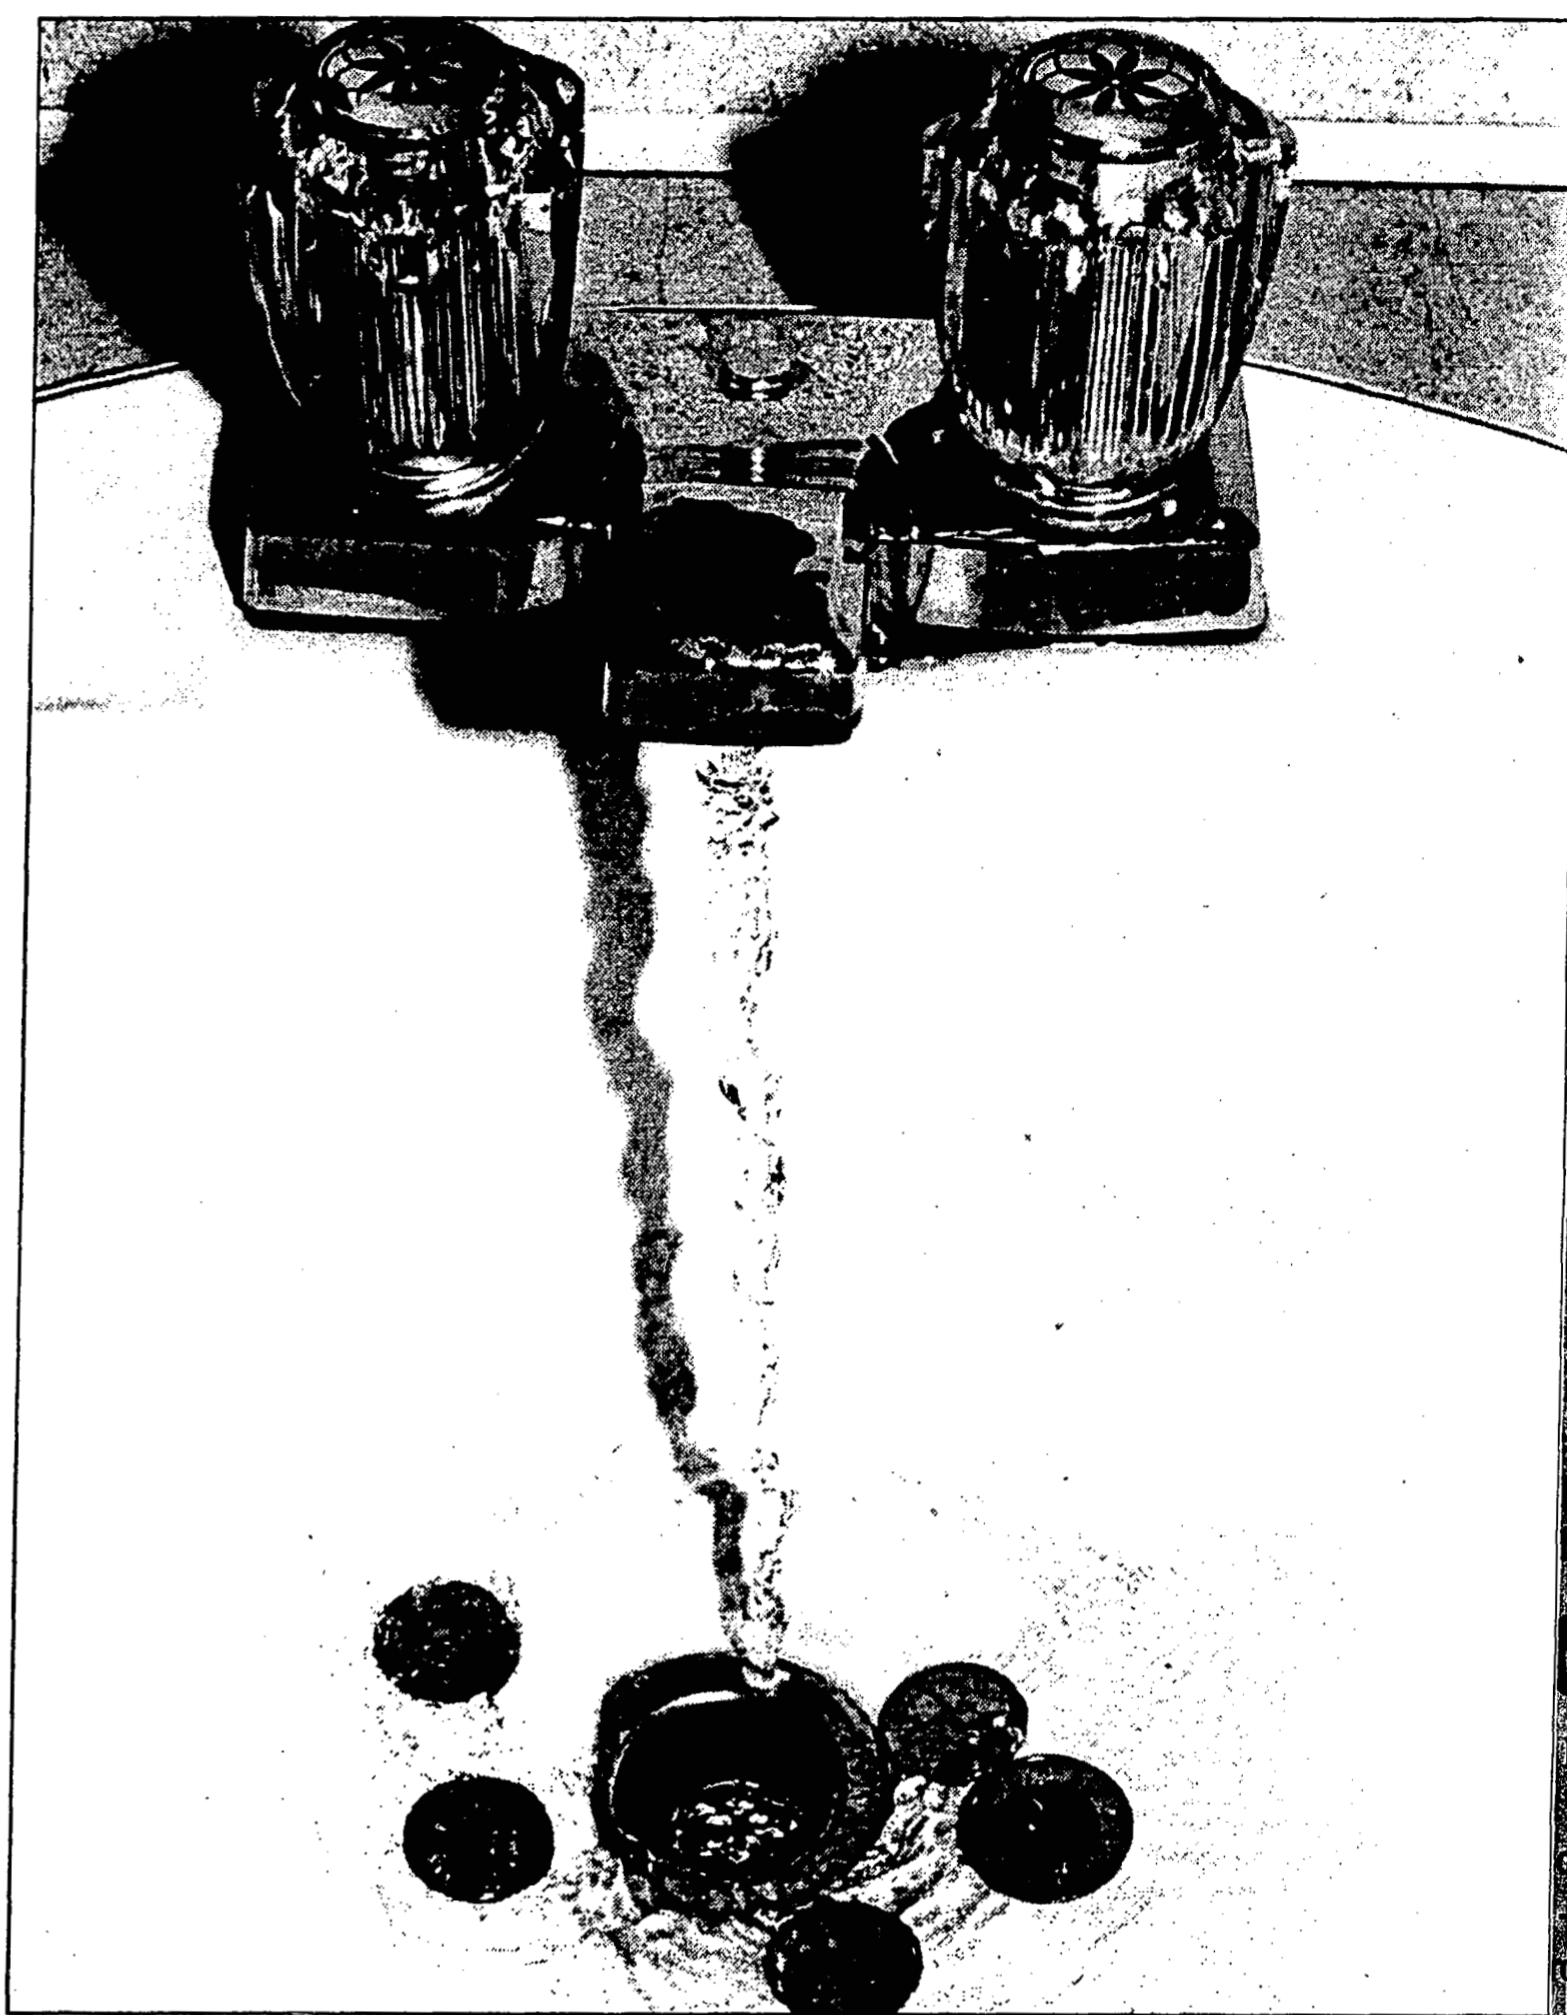

Instead of using a standard wrench, a 12-inch basin wrench is ideal for reaching straight up behind the sink in tight spaces.

Before you turn the water back on, remove the faucet aerator and let the water run for a minute before replacing it.

You not only flush out any built-up sediment but also extend the life of the aerator.

What tools should I have on hand for simple plumbing repairs?

- Medium-sized adjustable flat-jawed wrench
- Various-sized screwdrivers
- Adjustable pliers
- Basin wrench
- Plumber's putty
- Pipe joint compound/teflon tape

A leaky faucet isn't only annoying; it can mean your money's going down the drain.

Whistler's in Bloom

by Colm Heaney
reporter

Look out Carleton Place, Ont. Watch our back Labrador City and Carbonear, Nfld. Sleep with one eye open Stratford, E.I.

Actually, the afore-mentioned communities really have nothing to be concerned about. They, along with Fergus and Incardine, Ont., are in the same category as the Resort Municipality of Whistler in the Communities in the 1999 Bloom competition. Communities in Bloom is an international competition which features municipalities from Canada, England, Scotland and Ireland and gives them the chance to show off their hard work and have it recognized on a larger scale.

Although the competition is just that, a competition, one of the judges in Whistler's category said the goal of communities in Bloom is not to pit towns and municipalities against one another.

"The competition is not the important thing to Communities in Bloom," said Charmaine Sawchyn, horticulturist with the City of Regina and one of the judges in the 5001-10,000 National Edition category. Sawchyn was in Whistler earlier this summer with other judges who toured the resort. "It's to provide communities a chance to showcase their beautification projects and to highlight environmental awareness and community involvement."

Sawchyn and Roger Belley, parks foreman with the City of St. Albert, Alta., spent the three weeks travelling to the various municipalities in the competition. Each municipality is judged on eight categories; tidiness effort, urban forestry, landscaping, floral arrangements, turf areas, environmental effort, heritage conservation and community involvement. Municipal, private, corporate and institutional areas were all evaluated. After visiting each community, Sawchyn and Belley will fill out an evaluation form. Winners are expected to be announced by the end of September/

For Bob Kusch, manager of program services and community liaison with Whistler Parks and Recreation, Communities in Bloom offers Whistler the chance to reinforce its reputation as one of Canada's most beautiful communities.

"We consider ourselves to be an environmentally conscious community...we can't afford to become complacent," he said. He added Whistler had made a good impression on the judges.

"We know they're impressed."

Child-proofing your home

If you have small children in the house, it's a good idea to look out for things that could be harmful to them:

Remove potentially dangerous articles from the floors.

Check if household plants within children's reach are poisonous. Call the poison control centre at (604) 682-2344 local 2126.

- Make sure medicine cabinets and cleaning solutions and toiletries are either out of children's reach or locked.

Rolling into fall: car fix-up time

October is Car Safety Month — and it's only appropriate, since fall is the right time to make sure your vehicle will take you and your family safely through the winter.

Here is a quick list of things to check before that first nasty blast of winter:

Cooling System: If it hasn't been done in a while, flush out your cooling system with a good chemical cleaner and put in fresh anti-freeze. Remember to use the anti-freeze in its proper proportions. Pure anti-freeze, most often made of ethylene glycol, does not cool or protect as well as the proper mixture of water and anti-freeze as suggested on the anti-freeze container.

While you're at it, don't forget to check containers, the pressure caps and thermostat.

Belts and hoses: They say "if it ain't broke, don't fix it," but when it comes to your car's belts and hoses, some things should be fixed before they're broken — or at least checked on regularly.

The fan belt runs the alternator, which provides electrical power and keeps your car's battery charged. Without it, your car will run for only as long as the battery lasts — usually 10 to 30 minutes.

Some cars run several belts for systems including power steering, the water pump and air conditioning, while others have a single, long belt that does everything. Check your owner's manual to see where your belts are.

When you inspect your belts, look for cracks in the rubber, frayed edges, missing cogs — anything to suggest it's getting brittle or worn. Replacing a belt when you're changing the oil is easy — doing it at night by the side of the road isn't. Hoses are equally important, as they carry coolant throughout the engine. Inspect them every time you have the hood up, running your fingers along the hose to feel for cracking and squeezing them to make sure they remain firm (a mushy spot is likely to give out at an inconvenient moment).

It's also a good idea to check the clamps that hold the hoses in place every so often to make sure they haven't worked loose due to road vibration.

Battery and Electrical System: If your battery is more than a few years old, have it checked. Cold weather is hard on batteries. Be sure connections are clean and tight. Corroded or loose connections can give symptoms of a weak or dead battery.

Engine: Is it time for a tune-up? Faulty wiring, worn spark plugs, a sticking choke or emission control devices that need attention can all lead to hard starting. A diagnostic checkup of the engine can be a good winter pre-investment.

Oil and Filter: Dirty oil can also give you trouble in the winter. Now's the time to change it — and the oil filter, too! And don't forget to check the other filters on your car, including the fuel, air and transmission filters. (The transmission filter should be changed with the transmission fluid when it is changed during regular preventative maintenance.)

Tires: For every 5 degrees Celsius drop in temperature, your tire pressure decreases by one pound. Tires which are under-inflated by only eight pounds can reduce gas mileage by five per cent and cut tire life by 25 per cent or more. Check your tire pressure regularly.

Regular maintenance is important to keep your car running — and some extra checks for fall are a good idea.

Learning the tricks of the trade

By Graham Kendrick
Reporter

The fall/winter leisure guide for Whistler and Pemberton has been released, and the municipalities have several courses available to help get ready for the fall.

One of the more relevant courses is a one-day, one hour information session on winterizing your lawn and garden. Experts will be on hand to answer questions about trees, shrubs, perennials and other outdoor subjects. The session is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 6, from 7 to 8 p.m. in Whistler. It costs $7.

If you're interested in learning the tricks of the woodcarving trade, Scott McIver will be teaching the basics, beginning at the end of September.

The woodworking class introduces students to wood technology, finishing methods, and safe operation of machinery. Classes take Thursday evenings from 7-9 p.m. from Sept. 30- Dec. 2, and Jan. 6- March 30. There are 10 classes in each session, with the cost being $140.

The woodcarving class lets you choose your own project, with choices being furniture decoration, sign carving, creative sculptures, or native masks and totems. The course includes carving methods and use of tools.

The woodcarving courses take place on Tuesday nights from Sept. 28- Nov. 30, and Jan. 25- March 28. Like the woodworking course, classes are from 7-10 p.m., with each session having 10 classes and costing $140.

And just in time for Christmas, there is a wreath making class on Tuesday, Nov. 30 from 6-9:30 p.m. Darlyne Christensen leads students through the steps of creating a holiday wreath. All supplies are provided, except for scissors. The class costs $35.

As for Pemberton, they too have a woodworking class. Instructor Boyd Hargitt will give a lot of individual instruction throughout the program, with students encouraged to come up with their own ideas for projects.

The first session goes from Sept. 29- Nov. 24, with the second going from Jan. 26- March 29 (except March 22). Classes are Wednesday evenings from 7-9:30 p.m. at Pemberton Secondary School. The cost of the program is $115.

For more information about these and other programs, pick up a copy of the Whistler/Pemberton leisure guide, available at municipal hall and the Meadow Park Sports Centre.

Some remodeling tips from the BBB

The Better Business Bureau offers these suggestions in dealing with home remodeling contractors:

When you are thinking of having any home improvement work done it is advisable to obtain at least three estimates from contractors who have permanent addresses in your area. These estimates should be in writing. Beware of quick estimates and high pressure tactics. A legitimate contractor needs time to prepare a detailed estimate and won't pressure you into an immediate decision. Put down no more than 10 to 15 per cent of the total cost as a deposit when the contract is signed.
