Blue guilty of murder

After 36 years, Howey murder case is closed

By IAN JACQUES
Reporter

After more than 36 years, justice has finally been found for the family and friends of 17-year-old Judy Howey.

Squamish resident George Iron Blue, 51, was found guilty of first-degree murder by a Supreme Court jury late Friday night in Vancouver.

Blue was accused of killing Howey in May of 1964 during a horrendous assault after meeting up with her on a trail behind Mamquam Elementary School after she returned home.

Blue was 15 at the time.

The jury began its deliberations around 2 p.m. Thursday afternoon after hearing close to three hours of instructions from Justice Deborah Stanove.

The maximum sentence Blue could receive is life in prison with parole eligibility after five to seven years of his sentence, Crown prosecutor Ian Flanz said earlier in the trial.

Community reaction to the verdict has been one of a sense of relief from many people.

Bent Mortensen, a co-worker of Judy's father Clarence Howey, found the body after a 10-hour search by more than 100 volunteers on May 29, 1964. Mortensen testified at the trial and said he was moved by the final verdict. "It's tough to say, but I feel it's a fair sentence," Mortensen said Saturday morning, referring to the maximum sentence Blue is getting.

"It brings some closure. We needed that and that's good," Mayor Corinne Lonsdale said the ruling will hopefully help lift a burden from many people's lives. "I think the community is relieved, especially those people who have lived here all these years," Lonsdale said. "There were people here who couldn't figure out why, who did it and why hasn't the person been caught. I think it gives us all some sense of closure, especially the family and close friends in particular."

Sgt. Gary Brine of the Squamish RCMP detachment said local officers are "satisfied that this case has been brought to a successful conclusion."

"It has been something that has been within our community for a long time," Brine said. "It (the verdict) may allow for some closure within the community." Officers said co-operation from the community helped solve this crime.

During the three-week trial the court heard witness testimony from former classmates of Judy, RCMP officers who identified clothes removed from Judy's body at autopsy and boxes of old notes and case files from officers that have since died or retired.

The key piece of evidence that the prosecution built its case around was a videotaped conversation that Blue had with an undercover police officer in 1998.

In the tape, Blue told the officer that he had met Judy on the trail behind the school the afternoon she went missing. Blue told the officer the two had a fight and that he hit her at least once on the head with a log, before possibly ripping her blouse or dress.

The tape had poor audio quality and broke up coming back at one point with Blue saying the fight was a "sexual thing."

Afterwards, he told the officer that he panicked and dragged Judy's body off the trail into an area overgrown with bushes. An autopsy report entered into evidence said that Judy, whose body was found under some boards and logs on one of the foot paths south of the main trail, suffered severe injuries to her head and jaw, possibly delivered at the time of her death. Her body also showed signs of several deep bruises and bite marks.

The report also stated that Judy's blouse had been ripped in two, pulled over her arms and that her jumper and bra had been ripped.

Her underpants had also been removed and placed in her lunch box.

The complete details of the RCMP undercover operation and how they went about getting Blue's statement, as well as anything that could identify the police officer were banned from publication by Stanove at the start of the trial.

After delivering its verdict, the jury of six men and six women was instructed by Stanove to go back behind closed doors and decide on sentencing recommendations.

A ruling on those findings is expected later this week.

Trails steering committee has vision

By IAN JACQUES
Reporter

How often have you thought — hey, it would be nice to go for a walk or an easy bike ride on a park-like trail.

Experience the fresh air, the natural beauty and surroundings that Squamish offers on safe, well-maintained trails.

These visions are starting to become a reality through the dedication of the Squamish Trails Steering Committee.

The committee is working toward wide, multi-use, well-maintained trails that connect Brackendale, Garibaldi Highlands, Garibaldi Estates, North Yards, Valleycliffe, Squamish town centre and the Squamish estuary.

"These trails can be for family outings, school activities, commuting and social enjoyment by all ages," said committee chair Todd Pope.

"A Squamish trail infrastructure that is well-designed and well-maintained for convenient multi-use is highly valued by present and potential residents."

Members of the Squamish Trails Steering Committee represent a range of Squamish trail user and stewardship groups and all Squamish trail user and stewardship groups are sent minutes of each monthly meeting.

Anyone can attend the monthly meetings and new members are welcomed.

"Interests and priorities of individual trail user groups are respected," Pope said. "Yet the goals of the Squamish Trails Steering Committee prioritize multi-use and increasing the enjoyment of our natural surroundings by more and more people."

"The Squamish Trails Steering Committee is dedicated to promoting the use, enhancement, development and maintenance of the trail infrastructure within the District of Squamish for the entire community," according to its mission statement. How is the committee trying to accomplish this mission?

With huge amounts of volunteer work, donated supplies and services from local businesses and funding from various sources such as Forest Renewal BC, the Rotary Club of Squamish and the District of Squamish, Pope said.

The official opening of the new Discovery Trail, which is the section of the trail network that runs roughly parallel to Hwy. 99, connecting the Centennial Way overpass and the Mamquam River bridge to Cleveland Avenue in downtown Squamish, should be announced soon.

For more information on trails or the committee contact Pope by e-mail: tcpope@mtn.net.

Keep your children safe on Halloween

By IAN JACQUES
Reporter

The streets will be alive tonight with Halloween spirits and emergency crews in town will be out in full force to make sure trick or treaters have a safe time.

With the increased awareness of child safety the past few weeks with child abduction fears in the Lower Mainland, parents are being extra careful this year.

Sgt. Gary Brine of the Squamish RCMP said while parents should recognize these concerns, they in no way should be afraid to let their children be out this Halloween.

"We will have some additional officers out tonight, patrolling the neighbourhoods, making sure the trick or treaters are out having fun in a safe environment," Brine said. "In past years we have had some minor problems, but we're hoping that people will not see Halloween as an excuse to go out and cause trouble.

"We're hoping for a fun, but quiet evening."

Brine said the Squamish detachment, like other RCMP detachments in the Lower Mainland, are helping in any way possible with the Heather Thomas murder investigation. Thomas was abducted from Cloverdale almost three weeks ago and her body was found last weekend in Maple Ridge.

"We are certainly being more vigilant ourselves and were encouraging parents and young people to be cautious, but I don't want people to be worried that this is not a safe area," Brine said. "I encourage parents to talk with their children about safety and what to do if they encounter trouble. In my opinion, Squamish is a safe community, but one just never knows."

Squamish Fire Rescue is also reminding residents to be cautious about Halloween fireworks.

According to the Office of the Fire Commissioner, every year there are people in B.C. who are seriously injured by fireworks.

If a few tips are followed, injury can be avoided and people can use them safely.

• Only adults should discharge fireworks.

• A safe area should be chosen for discharging fireworks. This should include a bare area of ground, away from buildings, overhead obstructions, trees, vehicles, dry grass and other flammable objects.

• Never point or throw fireworks at people, pets, cars or buildings.

• Never hold fireworks in your hand when lighting them.

• A bucket, large box or wheelbarrow filled with earth or sand makes a good firing base to secure fireworks before lighting.

• A lighting stick should be used to light fireworks, rather than a match or lighter.

• A large bucket of water, sand or a garden hose should be ready at the firing site.

• Avoid decorating with candles or torch lights.

• Ensure that combustible Halloween decorations such as crepe paper, cornstalks and dried flowers are kept away from sources of heat.

• Purchase Halloween costumes that are flame resistant. Avoid costumes with long trailing pieces that may easily ignite. When constructing costume for children, always keep fire safety in mind.

• Put reflective tape on the front and back of costumes to make children more visible to cars.

• Makeup is better than masks, which can block vision.

al accident
Highway 99 claimed its birth life this year early today morning.

Just after 10 a.m., Squamish RCMP received a report of a vehicle off the road approximately five km north of Culliton Creek, (at the Big Orange Bridge).
Police and emergency services responded to the scene and found a vehicle on its side at the bottom of an embankment.

Sgt. Joe Schofield said
his initial investigation indicates like the vehicle was trapped on Hwy. 99
when it failed to negotiate a sharp hand curve in the road.
The vehicle crossed over the centre line and went over the embankment.

The driver, who was the occupant of the vehicle,
was not at the scene.

The name or age of the driver has not been released as an attempt to locate the victim's next of kin. Police are still investigating.

otiations begin

BC Rail and its unions met
Wednesday in North
Vancouver to begin work on a new collective agreement, which is set to expire in eight months after the current contract was signed.

BC Rail had asked to delay negotiations until a decision is reached on a raid of a union by the Canadian Autoworkers, saying they didn't know who they were negotiating with.

Their request was denied
Wednesday by the Labour Relations Board, which said the negotiating process must begin within 30 days.

The LRB also dismissed
a motion by the Council of Trade Unions to force BC Rail (CTU) commitment to the company refused to begin bargaining.

They said from now on,
"the clock is ticking," Alan
Lambert, the BCR Group
Director of communications, said Oct. 20.

The current three-year contract expires Dec. 31, 2001. It was only approved in February, following months of negotiations and an eight-day lockout over the holiday season.

BCAL promises to crack down

NICOLE MOORE
Whistler Question Reporter

Staff of the B.C. Assets and Land Corporation have unveiled their plans to regulate the "wild west" state of backcountry land use in the Sea to Sky corridor and this time they have a means to enforce their decisions.

Charles Littledale, the regional manager of the BCAL, said there are probably 100 unlicensed businesses operating in Whistler and outlying areas and only four to six that have tenure, and that
"a management framework is needed to reduce environmental impact among the users."

He said local users, groups, industry, and local government have all agreed that a land use management plan needs to be implemented to clearly define land stewardship issues in the area.

The BCAL announced a 14-month transition plan for land management within the
Squamish Forest District
Wednesday at a news conference in Whistler.

Under authority from the Land Act, the BCAL will require all commercial recreation businesses operating in the corridor to have permits or licences to operate as of Nov.
31, 2001. The BCAL have granted existing operations a grace period ending Dec. 29

of this year to get their applications in and businesses that fail to apply will be shut down.

Existing businesses (in operation before Sept. 1) will be allowed to operate while their applications are being processed, but proposed new businesses that had not applied before Sept. 1 will have to wait till Nov. 1, 2001
for consideration.

The BCAL has introduced initiatives to enforce the policy (as they had few enforcement resources in the past)
which is unique in the area and in the province.

They will be opening an outreach office November in the Whistler Forestry Office in Function Junction and have hired a compliance officer whose job will be to enforce their rulings.

The compliance officer will work with ministry of forests'
staff and conservation officers.

Elisabeth Eldridge has been hired to staff the office and she will be working with industry, the Resort
Municipality of Whistler and other government agencies to develop a management plan.
Operators who do not comply with the BCAL rulings will be served a cease and desist order initially, and if they still do not cooperate they may face fines, seizure of equipment, and incarceration.

Residents charged with fisheries violations

BY TIM SHOULTS
AND IAN JACQUES
Chief Staff

Four Squamish residents have been hit with a total of $1,065 in fines after being caught with a number of fisheries violations earlier this month on the Cheakamus and Mamquam Rivers.

Karen Anne Delaronde has been fined $115 for angling with licence contrary to the BC Wildlife Act and $150 for fishing with prohibited gear (barbed hook) on the Cheakamus contrary to the

B.C. Sport Fisheries

Regulations under the Fisheries Act of Canada while Jefferey David Vanderra was fined $150 for fishing with prohibited gear and $150 for catch and retain salmon in excess of daily quota to B.C.
Sport Fishing Regulations.

Both of these fines were laid on Oct. 14.

Officers from the Department of Fisheries and Oceans (DFO) seized gear from the suspects and charged them.

A total ban on fishing of coho salmon has been in effect for the past four years, and DFO officials are doing checks of salmon caches and looking for violators.

On Oct. 27, John Trevor
Brownfield and James Randal
MacLeod were each given a $250 fine for fishing for salmon during a closed period

on the Mamquam River contrary to B.C. Sport Fishing Regulations.

DFO officials are also looking for the owners of some poaching nets seized on the Cheakamus last week. A DFO dog from Victoria was brought in to seek out the owners by scent, but was unsuccessful.

Dart (short for D'artagnan) was a hit, though, in local elementary schools as DFO officials did some public relations work with their tracking dog last week.

Dart, currently the only tracking dog for DFO in Western Canada, will soon be joined by a new recruit based out of Williams Lake.

Dart is a fully-trained German Shepherd police dog, specially trained to protect against theft of salmon,
abalone and other fish.

"He's in great demand," said
local Fishery Officer Murray
Gilchrist.

Squamish candidate on ballot

BY DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

Squamish's only home-grown candidate in the upcoming federal election is an expert on the impact of money.

That's why the Canadian Action Party's Marc Bombois doesn't expect to win, but does intend to make an impact.

Apart from being the CAP's candidate for West Vancouver-Sunshine Coast, Bombois is one of four vice-presidents, chairs the party's communications and publications committee and sits on the policy committee.

This is his first attempt at earning a seat in the House of Commons, and the first time a CAP candidate has run in West Vancouver-Sunshine Coast.

The 45-year-old former personal financial analyst and honours graduate of the Canadian Securities Course is now the creator and leader of the Money Matrix Seminar, and also sits on the board of the Squamish Food Bank.

Bombois said he left his position as an analyst for the same reason he joined the CAP last year: he learned the truth about money and the banking system.

The main thrust of the CAP is monetary reform and the protection of Canada's sovereignty through restrictions on globalization and abrogation of free trade agreements.

The party was founded by former Liberal deputy prime minister Paul Hellyer in 1997, who still leads the party. In fact, people wishing to run for the party are personally interviewed by Hellyer.

They expect to field about 100 candidates in this election, Bombois said. In the 1997 election, the 10-week-old party managed to field 58 candidates and earn 0.2 per cent of the vote, including 4,329 votes in B.C.

"Most people will be running their personal campaigns, because we're a collection of candidates," Bombois said. "It's almost a collection of independents."

"Because it takes money to win an election and because of my limited funds, I don't think my chances are very good."

However, Bombois intends

DARREN GALLAGHER/THE CHIEF

Squamish's Marc Bombois doesn't expect to win the West Vancouver-Sunshine Coast riding in the upcoming election to express his party's policies.

"Most of us in the party are financial experts. We are therefore competent to serve the public properly," said Bombois.

Most politicians do not understand how the financial industry works and are therefore easily manipulated, he said.

With luck, the CAP will impact on the fiscal policies of the next government and slow the erosion of control over international corporations operating in Canada, Bombois said.

MP says it's "time for a change"

The incumbent for West Vancouver-Sunshine Coast riding, John Reynolds is currently the Canadian Alliance's chief party whip, moved up from justice critic by party leader Stockwell Day in September.

"It's time for a change," Reynolds said of why he's running in the upcoming federal election. "I think we have a real opportunity to win this election."

He was originally elected in 1972 to the House of Commons as Progressive Conservative member for the Burnaby-Richmond-Delta riding, and re-elected in 1974.

He returned to the private sector until 1983, when he was elected to B.C.'s legislature for the West Vancouver-Howe Sound riding. He was re-elected in 1986, appointed speaker of the Legislative Assembly shortly afterwards, then appointed Minister of Environment in late 1989.

After a defeat in 1991's provincial election, Reynolds moved to Scottsdale, Ariz. and became president of a venture capital company until 1996, when he returned to B.C.

Running for the Reform Party, Reynolds was returned to the House of Commons in 1997 as MP for West Vancouver-Sunshine Coast, and was immediately made part of the shadow cabinet.

Reynolds said he returned to politics because of the Liberal's high taxes and business donations, among other policies.

"You know better how to spend your money than the government." The Reform-

Alliance party has already had an impact, Reynolds said, noting the mini-budget promising tax cuts released just before the election call.

"They tend to make a lot of promises at election time and never follow through," he added, referring to the Liberal's unfulfilled promise to scrap the GST.

Ian McKay is the Liberal candidate for the riding, having won the nomination Friday.

Kate Manvell, of West Vancouver, will be the Progressive Conservative candidate.

She has been active in the PC party for a number of years and said she is running, in part, to help ensure the party's survival.

Voters will head to the polls Nov. 27.

Road building continues to be contentious

BY DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

Interfor representatives are refusing to answer questions about why road-building on the west side of the upper Elaho Valley, stopped because the company is in discussions with the Squamish Nation, began in the first place.

The Ministry of Forests and the International Forest Products Ltd. approval to build the logging access roads, across the river from the site of numerous protests against harvesting of old growth forests.

However, this spring Interfor deferred construction when they began discussing a memorandum of understanding with the Squamish Nation. "There are a couple areas that are contentious them," Keith Rush, Interfor's south coast general manager, said Wednesday.

When asked why the road work was started while the MOU was still in discussion, Rush replied: "Good question. Next." The roadwork was first noted by ecotourism operators EcoMountain Tours early this month. The Squamish Nation did not return messages by press time.

Elaho protesters took their act to the trees of Vancouver's posh Shaunessey neighbourhood Friday as they targeted the home of Interfor chairman Bill Sauder for the third time.

Two tree-sitters set up shop around 4 a.m. in a greenspace across from the Sauder home. The protest also include 29 stumps representing a pristine valley Interfor will log in the next few years.

Doug Firston, a member of Forest Action Network (FAN), said they hoped their voices would be better heard in the city than the forests. The Sauders weren't at home when the protest started, Crombie said, and Interfor security was monitoring the situation. As the protest took place on civic property, the company asked the City of Vancouver to consult their legal department for options — which could include an injunction — or at least issue a strong condemnation.

A typo led to an environmental protester being arrested for failure to appear, The Chief has learned.

Jason Pyper, who faces charges for a road blockade Aug. 28, was arrested Oct. 23 near another blockade after he missed a court date Oct. 17. When the appearance order was written, the date was typed in as Oct. 27. The top sheet was corrected with whiteout, but Pyper's carbon copy was not. Pyper was released until his rescheduled appearance in Squamish provincial court today. A 19-year-old Lower Mainland male arrested in relation to the Oct. 23 blockade, in which a tripod was set up at about Mile 36 in the Squamish Valley, will appear in court Nov. 28.

Interfor's security patrols videotaped most of the action, though the dozen people involved were all masked.

The tripod was erected about a half-mile from the location of a camp of people protesting the logging of the upper Elaho. After the protesters covered the windows with tarps the security personnel hung out the window of their truck to film. Police arrived on-scene about 2:20 a.m., but waited until dawn to take action. RCMP are reviewing the video and will probably take about two weeks to decide if charges can be laid against anyone else. Including the bucket truck and seven officers on overtime, police estimated the operation cost about $6,000.

The tripod occupant, referred to as Tripod Todd, could also face prosecution for illegally cutting trees on Crown land, a violation of the Forest Practices Code. Maximum penalties include a $1-million fine, three years in prison or both.

Court of appeal slashes Elaho sentences

Two Elaho protesters had their jail time radically reduced by the B.C. Court of Appeal Oct. 20, in one case because of threatening actions of local loggers.

Kevin Kunzler and Jody Simm were among 14 protesters on trial for breaching an injunction against interfering with International Forest Products' (Interfor) harvesting in the upper Elaho Valley the fall of 1999.

They and two others decided to plead guilty to the lesser offence of civil contempt.

On May 26 B.C. Supreme Court Justice Glen Parrett sentenced Samuel Kelly to 14 days in jail, Simm 28, Andrea Neal 42 and Kunzler 56.

At the time, Kunzler's sentence was a B.C. record for civil disobedience.

He was arrested the same day the protesters' camp was destroyed in an attack by loggers that sent three people to hospital and prompted assault charges against five Squamish men.

B.C. Court of Appeals justices William Esson, Mary Newbury and Catherine Ryan unanimously agreed to cut Kunzler's sentence to 10 days, and Simm's to one day.

The judges said the actions of the loggers, which included throwing rocks at Kunzler, cutting down his possessions and burning them and threatening to fall another tree against the one he was in, could be considered a mitigating factor in his case.

Simm's sentence was reduced because his actions were limited to riding in a vehicle for the purpose of videotaping the protests, and did not actively participate.

The judges said this appeal should not affect the cases of other protesters.

However, two other Elaho protesters convicted of civil contempt Sept. 14 had sentencing delayed for the outcome of this appeal.

Richard McCallion and Dennis Porter were found guilty the same day six other Elaho protesters were convicted of criminal contempt.

Five of the six, including Betty Krawczyk and Barney Kern, who received a record one-year jail term, have decided to appeal their sentences. Kern and Krawczyk have appeals in the works but are not seeking release, as their release terms would

Police Blotter

Construction tools stolen

By IAN JACQUES
Reporter

Squamish RCMP are still investigating a pair of break-ins where thieves made off with thousands of dollars worth of construction tools.

Sometime over night on Thursday, Oct. 19, two large freight containers of a Midnight Way business in the Squamish Business Park were broken into.

Metal bars and locks were cut off by the suspects and more than $11,000 worth of heavy duty construction tools were stolen.

In a separate incident on Monday, Oct. 23, the gates of a Squamish business located on Galbraith Avenue were broken through. The shed door and lock were pried open and several items of machinery and tools were stolen. Police have no suspects in either incident and are requesting assistance from the public.

Anyone who may have seen any suspicious activity during the two break-ins are asked to call Squamish RCMP at 898-9611.

Police are still looking for the owners of a vehicle that crashed into a power pole around Hospital Hill last Friday.

Just after 9 p.m. on Oct. 20, a car struck a power pole causing a power outage for a large area on View Place Drive.

When emergency crews arrived on scene, the vehicle was abandoned.

"The complainant stated seeing a group of youths jump in another vehicle after the accident," said Const. Camille Habel.

"The vehicle was towed and the owner has not been in contact with us yet."

A 41-year-old Squamish man is facing charges of mischief and theft after an incident on Willow Crescent last week.

Just after 1 a.m. on Monday, Oct. 23, RCMP were called to a the Willow Crescent home responding to a break-in in progress.

"The two residents were hiding in an upstairs bedroom and the suspect was found near a broken window outside with bloody fingers," Habel said.

The man was arrested and is awaiting a court appearance.

A group of kids got a lesson in bear safety last week.

On Thursday, Oct. 19 a bear cub was found lodging in a tree on Tantalus Road just before 6 p.m.

It appears that after eating a few apples, the bear went on its way after the conservation office was called, but a group of kids were reported standing at the bottom of the tree bothering the bear, Habel said.

"We just want to remind the public that the mothers are never far from their cubs and are very protective," Habel said.

"Stay away from bears at all times."

Police are investigating an act of mischief on Government Road on Sunday, Oct. 22.

Just after 8 a.m. a resident woke up to find her car and garage covered in barbecue sauce.

"The cook is still unknown," Habel said.

RCMP are working with management at Interfor after one of their trucks was found stolen early Tuesday, Oct. 24.

The truck was found abandoned at Raven Woods with its lights on, but on one was around.

The gate to the chlorine shed was broken and it looked like it had been driven through, Habel said.

Two fire hydrants were also bowled over.

Sometime between Thursday, Oct. 19 and 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 24 the compound at the rear of Centennial Fields was broken into.

Windshields and windows of several tractors and mowers were broken.

Police have no suspects.

Just after 11 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 25 a Stonegate home was broken into.

A neighbour reported to police that he heard noise next door. When he looked outside he saw a white van backing out of the driveway.

The neighbour checked next door and saw that all the appliances had been stolen and called police.

The vehicle was stopped by police in West Vancouver and four males are now under investigation.

Travel, learning opportunities abound for local youth

By DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

Squamish youth can avail themselves of two distinct travel opportunities now being offered, but they must move quickly.

The first is the Rotary Youth Exchange Program, co-ordinated by the local Rotary Club. The other is Canada World Youth (CWY), through which Squamish Brandon is visiting Vietnam.

An Rotary exchange hasn't been run in Squamish since Lowe Sound Secondary 2000 graduate Julia Smith spent her grade 11 year in South Africa.

The idea is to give students a chance to experience life in other parts of the country," said Rotarian James Martin. It's mostly a cultural exchange. The expectation is for them to assimilate and experience as much of the host culture as possible."

When himself an exchange student 20 years ago, Martin is assisting in co-ordinating the selection of the outbound Squamish student, and arranging host families and activities for the incoming student.

The student stays with four different families over the year, who are either Rotarians or approved by the Rotary Club, but stay in the same region and attend the same school.

The exchange is conducted with 17 countries, from Argentina to Thailand. Students are asked their preference for a destination, though there are no guarantees.

"We're looking for someone who's going to be a good ambassador for Canada and Squamish."

— James Martin

"They need to be able to adapt to ... a new culture, new customs," Martin said.

Applications must be in by Nov. 7. They are available at the HSSS counselling office. For more information speak to counsellor Brian L'Hirondelle or call Martin at 898-1874.

Applicants should be in Grade 11 or 12, in the upper third of their class academically, good communicators and interested in learning new things.

Students must also pay an exchange fee of $3,800, which covers airfare, insurance, an identifying blazer, orientation weekend and visa.

Living expenses are covered by the host Rotary Club, which also supplies pocket money roughly equal to $100 a month.

CWY is a service-exchange program, primarily funded through the Canadian International Development Agency

Running since 1978, CWY pairs groups of students from Canada and another country for four or seven months, the time split between the two countries.

"The ultimate goal is to develop better citizens, people who have an understanding of the world," said administrative officer Kathy Flood.

Unlike the Rotary Exchange, participants are given volunteer work placements and participate in group activities.

"It's not a travel program," said Flood.

As it is a CIDA-sponsored program, the target countries are all in developing regions: southeast Asia, Latin America, Africa, central and eastern Europe.

Though CWY accepts applications at any time, to qualify for the next exchange, which begins this summer, applications must be in by Nov. 17.

CWY applicants must be 17-20 years old, a Canadian citizen or landed immigrant and medically fit.

The student must pay a $250 participation fee and $300 medical fee. For their first challenge, students must fund-raise $1,500 from their community as well.

For more information about the program, call the B.C./Yukon Regional Office at 1-800-889-6069 or visit the Transportation up for discussion

Open houses are being held next week to gain the public's input in the Multi-modal Corridor Transportation Study.

The target for spring, 2001 completion, the study is a strategic assessment of transportation needs (considering bus, auto, marine and air services) in the corridor to the year 2025.

The study will not include specific recommendations, but will provide governments, transportation agencies and relevant stakeholders a solid base of information on which to build their own transportation plans.

Meetings are slated for tomorrow (Wednesday) at the Squamish Public Library from 4 to 8 p.m., the Pemberton Community Centre on Thursday and the Lions Bay Village Hall on Friday.

Test of Metal nets local legacies

By IAN JACQUES
Reporter

The most successful ever Squamish Test of Metal mountain bike race festival this year has resulted in a great gift for Squamish.

Test of Metal Inc., a not-for-profit organization, generated excess funds at the 2000 event and is now putting $8,100 back into Squamish in the form of scholarships and donations to community organizations.

This donation is also in addition to the $26,000 in cash and prizes that was awarded to racers and volunteers at the Canada Day weekend festival.

"With the community pitching in so greatly for the Test of Metal, the Test of Metal is now able to give back to the community," said Cliff Miller, Test of Metal race director.

The $8,100 will be distributed as follows:

- $1,000 to four $250 Registered Education Saving Plans will be awarded at random to youths aged 7-19 who participate in the Test of Metal train maintenance days next year. All youth coming out will be entered into a draw and four names will be selected at the end of the year.
- $1,500 as a donation to the Squamish Emergency Program (SEP), which provides first aid services at the Test of Metal.

- $500 as a donation to the Adopt-a-Bike program in conjunction with the Squamish RCMP, Corsa Cycles and Tantalus Bike Shop, to fix used bikes and give them to kids who cannot afford to buy a bike.

- $300 as a donation to Cadets for providing volunteers for parking services at the Test of Metal.

- $200 as a donation to Scouts for providing volunteers for bike check and site clean-up at the Test of Metal.

- $600 as donations to the Bob McIntosh Memorial Triathlon, the Brooks Muddy Buddy race and the new Cheeky Fan trail construction.

- $400 - Donation to the Norco Trials team for their demonstration at the 2000 Squamish Days Loggers Sports event.

- $100 - Donation to the IGA Balding for Dollars fund-raiser for cancer research.

- $1,000 for trail maintenance for Squamish mountain bike trails.

- $1,000 for a building to house Test of Metal and Bob McIntosh Memorial Triathlon infrastructure.

- $1,500 for a vehicle for transporting people and equipment for trail work days and on race day.

Break the code of silence now

May 29, 1964 has been called the year that Squamish lost its innocence — the day that 12-year-old Judy Howey was brutally murdered while walking from Mamquam Elementary School to her home barely a kilometre away.

"A general sense of trust and small-town kinship was immediately replaced with suspicion and fear at a level which had never been collectively reached before," we wrote in this newspaper in 1998, looking back after RCMP announced they had finally made an arrest in Howey's murder after 34 years.

The news provoked a groundswell of feeling in Squamish. The nearly-forgotten stories of suspicion and unease came back to the forefront as the community remembered the feelings — first of terror, then of frustration — that came from knowing that a killer was in their midst, unpunished and apparently unrepentant.

But it was more than memories of Judy Howey that provoked such a response. At the time of Byron Blue's arrest, Squamish was still reeling from the murder of lawyer Bob McIntosh barely three months before — another brutal, senseless killing which gripped the community with fear and suspicion, even with charges laid and a man behind bars in the case.

Blue's arrest after 34 years led people to believe that perhaps the truth would also come out in the McIntosh case — sooner than people thought.

Months later, that hope faded as the only person to be charged in connection with the McIntosh murder was released and the charges stayed. Two years later — nearly three years after McIntosh was beaten to death — police are no closer to a solution.

But late Friday, Squamish saw some closure to the 36-year-old wound in the community caused by Judy Howey's death as Byron Blue was found guilty of first degree murder.

Not everyone lived to see the day — the three-week trial that ended last week has been full of testimony from witnesses who passed away years ago, never knowing if justice would speak.

Those who lived, especially Judy's family, were unfortunate in another way. They found themselves forced to relive that dark day in May 1964 — and to discover new chilling details of Judy's fate — with every news article and TV segment. As the verdict was read, that chapter came to a close — and those who remember 1964 may finally be able to breathe a sigh of relief and find closure.

But even as they do, a pall hangs over them — over all of us. For today, the murderer or murderers of Bob McIntosh are walking free, while a community still lives in fear and suspicion, knowing what happened and who was involved but powerless to act on it. Will it take 34 years to bring Bob McIntosh's killers to justice? It might. We don't yet know what it will take to break the code of silence that enshrouds the truth. It may take time, distance or yet another criminal act to force somebody to finally tell the truth as to what happened on Dec. 31, 1997.

We can only pray that it won't take another 30 years.

Squamish has "fields of dreams"

My neighbours probably weren't too happy with me on Thursday night.

I was glued to my television set watching game five of the "Subway" World Series between the New York Yankees and the New York Mets.

Anyone who knows me or has been into my office and taken a look at my desk, knows that I'm a Yankee fanatic and when Bernie Williams made the final out on Thursday, I leaped off the couch in wild celebration.

Hence the reference to my neighbours who probably were wondering what all the cheering and screaming was about.

The television numbers might not show it, but for me this will be one of the most memorable World Series that I can remember.

I just came back from a two-week vacation in late September to Boston, Philadelphia, New York, Washington and Baltimore.

The trip was mixed with tourist attractions and a number of baseball games, including games at Yankee Stadium and Shea Stadium, the two principal ball parks in this year's series.

When I was in New York, it was still almost a week before the playoffs were slated to start and already the city was a buzz with the mouth-watering prospects of a Yankees/Mets championship series.

New York is an amazing city with two of the greatest ball parks in the majors - two fields of dreams if you will.

The energy and the memories that have filled both stadiums is awe inspiring and although in no way can you compare those two stadiums to our "fields of dreams" here in Squamish, but we've had our share of great memories as well.

Last year around this time, Squamish was treated to a remarkable sports story as the Howe Sound Secondary School senior boys' soccer team won a provincial championship at Centennial Fields.

The boys came in on a high, but nothing was really expected of them. They won a couple of their opening round games and made it into the playoff round, but that's where most people thought they would stop.

We'll they won an overtime thriller against Langley and a

Ian Jacques

PAST DEADLINE

shoot-out over Seycove to capture the title and it was pandemonium at Centennial Fields.

I think we can all say that we're proud of our fields and the memories and traditions that have been set there.

Whether it's on the soccer pitch or the ball diamond, lots of unique moments have taken place.

Hopefully in the next few weeks the brand new all-weather field will be ready so young and old alike can start making a few more memories.

The new slo-pitch diamond is also not far away either.

Squamish should be proud of their fields of dreams and thanks should go out to all those who made those dreams possible.

It's not a World Series title, but for Squamish it's a great thing to be a part of.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Tourist offers words of advice

Editor,

My family and I are currently visiting Squamish from our home in Adelaide, South Australia.

We have been delighted by the sights of the area and the friendly reception from individuals within the local business community.

Squamish has been a very pleasant experience.

It has also been of interest to learn of the town's history, how it has developed, its industrial base and of plans for the future.

It is on this point that I would like to comment.

I was impressed with the new housing/apartments downtown and with ideas being circulated to redevelop the downtown area of Squamish along the estuary and south end.

Although I do not have the details, the thought of returning here in the future to see what is now a quite unsightly area in an industrial context perhaps transformed into housing, marina and higher-tech light industrial, would be a "plus."

With this in mind and having read a little of the debate between CHIPS, GBA and council in your paper, I am surprised that plans to establish such an industrial plant are even being entertained!

As a tourist, I can imagine nothing worse than entering your downtown area only to view a chipping plant at the end of the main street!

Having visited Whistler and seen first hand the planning that has gone into that town's architecture and development, I think that Squamish could do worse than to act on a plan to upgrade the area in question and move industry to more appropriate zoned areas already available.

If you are serious about your caption "Sea to Sky" why not start in your town centre?

Brew Pub owner deserves apology: employee

Editor,
I am writing this letter in response to Robert Ryan's letter ("Reader disgusted by attacks on council," Oct. 10). I am also writing this letter on behalf of many of the 50 employees of the Howe Sound Inn & Brewing Co.

I would like to address some comments to Mr. Ryan regarding his comments directed at my employer. I too, was "disgusted" by your attacks on Steve Shard, and I think you owe him "a very sincere apology."

Your letter was "childish" and "has no place" in a community newspaper.

Mr. Ryan, you are "entitled to your opinion," but Steve Shard has every right to defend his business and stand up for his livelihood.

He too has a family to provide for and protect.

It is ironic that you referred to him as a "five year old," as Steve and Dave are now going into their fifth year of operation.

In the five years they have been in business they have seen negative growth in the downtown area, empty lots on all sides, and a council that has only made their daunting task that much more difficult. Frustrations build.

As for commending council on how they "handled a difficult situation," isn't that their job? Is council not there to hear concerns from the people they represent, and to act on them accordingly? I realize that being a local politician can be difficult, but it is important to have a thick skin and not take public debate personally.

If addressing council at an open meeting is not "proper and acceptable," what is?

I agree with you on one point, Mr. Ryan.

It is time "for all residents of Squamish to be heard." I think Steve would agree with you too.

In closing, I would just like to state that my father is currently working in the forest industry, and has so for 33 years.

Reader offers more information

Editor,
I would like to add a little more information to the article "Help sweet help at home."

The words "Home support workers may sit down for a cup of tea with their clients," is a misleading statement that I don't feel clearly reflects my job or the job my co-workers do.

The statement gives the impression that we don't work hard. With cutbacks in health care my co-workers and I have been working with less hours per client.

The clients' needs haven't declined, but the funding has. With most of the clients my co-workers and I multi-task and try to be inventive with how the clients time is used.

For example, a client may have no support from family and be totally dependent on home support for all their needs: shopping, cooking, and personal care.

For these people their needs are so high that one, maybe two hours a day doesn't always cut it.

So we get inventive, a trip out to the garbage bin turns into an outing for the client, completing two tasks.

Sometimes a client has mental health issues so their needs go beyond cleaning, cooking and personal care.

They need support, understanding, and the option to get out if they need to, a walk in a park can do wonders.

Population growth doesn't always mean economic growth

Editor,
As a long-term resident of Squamish I have been concerned that our town would become a bedroom community of Vancouver.

People would move here due to the town's beauty and lower costs and would give a false sense of growth to the town's economy.

People want this ideal place to live, but work elsewhere and buy their supplies on the way home.

Unless they have children in the community that involve them, they seem out of touch with the day to day workings of Squamish.

I get offended when new residents tell us to "drop the logging town mentality." Citizens with this "mentality" helped build the first school, pick rocks at the golf course, and poured cement at the hospital.

People move here and mold Squamish into something they left elsewhere.

I love this town for what it is! For the beauty and familiarity with community members, for the safety a small town brings to my children.

What about the downtown core already established? Let's put our tax-based dollars to good work fixing up the existing core.

We have a main street that has never reached its full potential.

Will all these new proposed shops draw more businesses away from downtown and create more vacancies.

The chip facility is an opportunity for a harbor town. How many areas connect land, rail and sea?

If not at this location, maybe at Interfor as suggested?

That site is behind Kentucky Fried Chicken, visual from the highway and directly across from our existing downtown core.

The location chosen is in an established Industrial park, where industry should be.

A citizen wrote she may leave Squamish because it's a stagnant town is amazing.

The countless number of volunteers and new business owners may find that offensive.

Hours have been spent developing trails in the estuary, rock climbing area, all-weather fields, slow pitch fields, community theatre, and many more.

How much growth do you want?

Most people move to Squamish to get away from commercialism, overcrowded schools and thousands of people. Some have suggested that Mayor Corinne Lonsdale step down or be "vacuumed out" because her husband is in industry.

You can't ask members of council to step down because of what their spouse does or because their decision doesn't agree with your own personal agenda.

Mayor Lonsdale won by a large majority and her platform, as well as other council members was well known and in the public process that is why we vote for an individual.

*Ian Sutherland

opment permit.*

I am not impressed at how representatives of CHIPS have conducted themselves. The first public meeting to discuss their concerns was held in a bar, where upon they heckled the mayor and GBA spokesperson, to a point that it was useless to have an adult discussion.

Our council should not have to put up with threats, name calling, and the show of disrespect.

I was disgusted by Steve Shard's display with props and theatrics in the Council Chambers, as a business owner, he should have had more control than one comparable to a child's tantrum.

I find it very offensive as a shop owner that Mr. Shard feels he brought class to this town with his Brew Pub.

I feel Squamish already had class before, as his business adds to Squamish, so does the rest of ours.

Dawn Lecky, a member of CHIPS, has by means of retaliation at the chip facility threatened the forest industry.

She is quoted as saying, "I hope they don't go down the road of making this a forestry issue...if they want more people in the trees, keep this up."

How dare she threaten the livelihoods of forestry workers and their families that have to endure enough work interruption and danger to push her own personal cause?

I am pro industry, pro tourism, and pro new development.

I do not think one can survive without the other.

As Greg Richmond said, "we should be able to get along and co-exist."

I say, "Yes," to industry, "Yes," to the Chip Reload Facility.

Support what Squamish was built on and what it needs to survive.

Remember the backbone of this community depends on good paying industrial jobs.

CHIPS has declared itself a watchdog group.

Be careful the next project that doesn't fit their plans could be yours.

Some major points have been missed

Editor,
In response to the letters published in The Chief recently about the chip handling facility, there are a couple of major points that have been missed.

The first point is whether or not having a chip handling facility in the downtown peninsula is the best use of the peninsula? The answer to that is no.

Is the public in support of heavy industry in the location of the proposed chip handling facility? The answer to that is no because the public already requested the change from heavy industry to light industry in the OCP when the OCP came up for review a few years ago.

Does the majority of the public want to have the chip handling facility in Squamish?

The answer to that is yes.

Solution: Squamish council, GBA and BC Rail Properties should work together to have the chip handling facility at site B on the east side of Howe Sound.

Big Brothers, Sisters office closes its doors

Editor,
Big Brothers and Sisters of Squamish wish to announce that at the present time we are unable to support the administrative structure of our agency and have made a decision to close our doors.

In an effort to continue providing the Squamish community with mentoring programs for children and youth, we have invited Big Brothers of Greater Vancouver to assist with the delivery of this service. With their help, Squamish families will see no interruption of the service they have come to rely on, and that is so beneficial for our children. We are grateful for all the support we have received from this community in the past, and wish to assure everyone that in the future, all support, both volunteer and financial received for Big

Brothers and Sisters programs from the Squamish area will remain in Squamish. We look forward to serving families in the Squamish community for many years to come.

Halvorsen's comments seen as insult to some local residents

Editor,
Bob Halvorsen's letter: "Thinking about the future," makes it clear where CHIPS and their supporters are really coming from. He says things like..."Squamish is a backward little town that wants to live in the past"... and "Will Squamish remain in the past, waiting for forestry to slowly die?"

This is truly an insult to many hardworking people in this community and their families. The last time I checked, the forest industry was the major job creator of our community and this province. Maybe Mr. Halvorsen and those who have complained about the Chip Reload Facility missed the headline in the Oct. 10 edition of The Chief, "Forestry worth $137M: study."

Forestry is our past, our present and our future, very clearly. I say three cheers for GBA Logging Ltd., for their proposal to build a chip reload facility. The facility is going to revitalize a piece of land in our industrial core and in doing so it will create new jobs and help secure many, many more in the local industry. The Chip Reload Facility is ideally suited to be on the site in question.

The land in question and virtually all of the land surrounding is zoned industrial. It's been industrial for decades and it's going to stay that way.

To be sure, we must work to diversify our local economy and this is happening. Tourism has a bright future and so does forestry. Just look at Granville Island, there you have heavy industry, a cement plant no less, alongside the public market, shops and theatres.

They can co-exist and we can build a bigger, better community because of it.

A hair wizard for more than 30 years, Orest Semeniuk is taking his talents to the Far East.

Semeniuk, owner of the Pair Tree near Highlands Mall for 20 years, has been asked to go to Taiwan next month to teach hair styling at two prominent schools in Taipei and Kaohsiung. He leaves Nov. 17 and will be back in Squamish Nov. 27.

"I'm quite honoured to be asked," Semeniuk said. "It's not every day that you are asked to go to a different country to show off your skills."

Besides his commitments to his business, Semeniuk teaches hair styling at Vancouver Community College, so he is no stranger to the classroom environment. "A part-owner at one of the schools saw me at VCC and invited me to go and teach at the schools," he said. "I just jumped at the chance."

During his stay in Taiwan Semeniuk plans to teach all aspects of men's and women's hair styling, razor cutting, blow drying, perming techniques, color techniques and bleaching hair. "I've never really done anything like this before — going to another country to teach," he said. "It's quite exciting and who knows, I might even bring back a few techniques that they use and try them out here."

Chip reload facility will create jobs & economic opportunities in Squamish

GBA Logging's wood chip reload facility will help create jobs and secure the economic future of the Squamish Valley. Our forestry heritage is a mainstay of our local economy, providing pay cheques and economic spin-offs throughout the community. The chip reload facility is a vital component of the Squamish Valley's very diverse forest industry, the most diverse in the province.

Our wood chip reload facility will create 5 full-time jobs onsite and up to another 7 jobs offsite per shift. Another 18 indirect jobs will be created as a result of the spin-offs generated by this facility.

As noted in the recent study by DE Park Associates, "Economic Impact of the Forest Industry on the Economy of the Squamish Region", the forest industry provides over 2,600 jobs and adds $137 million annually to our region. The chip reload facility will be an important addition to our economic base.

GBA Logging Ltd., like other forest-related businesses in the Squamish region pays substantial taxes to all levels of governments. The forest industry directly pays 23% of the total property taxes in the municipality. As noted in the DE Park study, "if the impact of the payments by forestry employees of taxes on their residences were included, the total would be much higher."

Squamish forestry companies like GBA Logging Ltd. also pay considerable amounts of taxes to the federal and provincial governments ($67 million to Victoria alone). These revenues help support our health and education systems and the other programs we value as British Columbians and Canadians.

These economic benefits created by forestry companies like ours help support a thriving community. We are proud of the support our proposed facility has generated in our community and hundreds and hundreds of people who have signed our petition to help make it a reality.

If you have any questions ...

GBA Logging Ltd. would be pleased to answer any questions you have about the proposed facility. Great care has been taken in the design of this new facility to address local concerns. We invite you to view our plans and the architect's model of the site.

Our critics have spread a great deal of misinformation about what's being proposed, so it's important that you hear the facts. We have built our reputation in this community by being good corporate citizens and your support is important to us.

From Squamish to Sackville and back

By DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

Squamish representatives went to New Brunswick to learn how to incorporate a university into a small community; Sackville representatives came to British Columbia to learn how to build a civic centre.

Of course, there were a few more issues involved in the exchange in September between Sackville, N.B. and Squamish, but those were large issues.

The exchange was part of the Federation of Canadian Municipalities' four-day Community Leaders Partnership Program.

The FCM and partner sponsors paid the airfare, and the communities covered the cost of hosting the delegations.

In Squamish, community donations covered all but $125 of the estimated $5,700 cost; the $125 went for the frame on a picture presented to Sackville.

Squamish's delegation of councillors Rick King and Paul Lalli, Squamish Nation Coun. Donna Billy, Chamber of Commerce President Shabbir Dhalla, Jeff Dawson, manager of Community Futures Development Corporation and local entrepreneur Natalie Wall arrived in Sackville Sept. 13, while the Sackville delegates arrived in Squamish Sept. 27.

"We first thought we would like to find another community with a university. Then Squamish contacted us," said Virgil Hammock, a Sackville councillor and professor at Mount Allison University.

Apart from the proposed private university, the towns

Among other activities the Sackville delegation visited Tree Farm Licence 38, and whose trees — like the mountains — are a little bigger than what they're used to.

are both located along a highway near a major tourist and shopping draw, an interest in developing various types of tourism and a historic but declining resource industry.

"Your community is quite larger than ours, but I feel our problems are quite similar," said Hammock.

Personally, Hammock said he is fascinated by the idea of creating a private liberal arts university. Mount Allison is a liberal arts university with an enrollment of 2,200; the Maritimes have a history of small, numerous universities, unlike the West's solitary giants.

"It's mind-boggling at best,"

Hammock said of bringing a new institution to life.

"The university I teach at has been around since 1839."

Sackville's experience with a university and the influx of youth are something they can offer Squamish.

"The university makes Sackville a very attractive place to live, and I think the university will have the same effect on Squamish," Hammock said, noting facilities like a library, pool, ice rink and 1,500-seat hall are available to the public.

That the community is looking to have its own civic centre makes for interest in Squamish's Brennan Park

Recreation Centre.

The corridor's burgeoning eco-tourism industry and ability to attract film and TV production are also of interest.

"We have industry that has disappeared over the years, and need to replace industry with something else," said Hammock.

"What I basically want to find out is how you're trying to build your tourism industry."

Despite the small population, Sackville is actually the largest municipality in New Brunswick by land area and wants to use its undeveloped areas as a tourism draw.

"We have a large waterfowl park dead centre in our community," Hammock said as the biggest example.

The delegation also spent time simply discussing the problems of municipal government and various approaches to them, or as Hammock described it: "Dog catching on up."

"Some of the things that you have that we don't have are very fascinating to us, like your relationship with the Squamish Nation," he said. "We're interested in making more formal ties with Squamish ... possibly a twinning of communities."

Streamkeepers encouraging stream adoption

After a successful BC Rivers Day in Squamish, the Squamish streamkeepers are moving along full steam ahead in their new Adopt-A-Stream program.

A few weeks ago, the first Adopt-A-Stream gathering took place in Squamish. Sixteen people came out to the Squamish Library to look over maps and discuss how to get actively involved in becoming a Streamkeeper and adopting their local streams.

A few dates were set to tackle a stream cleanup and to undertake spawner surveys of some of the Squamish streams.

"Adopting a stream can be as simple as taking a walk and observing any changes or reporting any concerns," said

Wendy Mitchell, Adopt-A-Stream Coordinator. "Or, it can be as involved as stream cleanups and habitat enhancement projects. All ages can get involved and get their feet wet while having fun."

A key date to mark on the calendar is Dec. 5 — the date for the next Adopt-A-Stream meeting.

Meet at 7 p.m. at the Squamish Library Community room.

For more information call Mitchell at 815-0109.

Lyme disease confirmed

Lyme Disease can be carried by ticks and has definitely been isolated from ticks in Squamish.

Recently published information indicates that there have been 18 confirmed cases in dogs, six in horses as well as 57 confirmed cases in people in BC.

About two per cent of ticks in B.C. are thought to carry the disease.

The disease is transmitted from the tick to its host after the tick attaches and bites.

It is likely that a tick must be attached for 16-24 hours for the disease to be transmitted from the tick to the host. Thus quick removal of a tick is an important first step in prevention of Lyme Disease.

Check your pet's entire coat thoroughly on a daily basis, particularly after being out in cool moist long grass, leaf litter or overhanging foliage particularly along animal trails.

Fall, winter and early spring are the worst times of year for ticks, but we do see them year-round in Squamish.

Any tick you find should be removed with thin-lipped tweezers or special tick removers by grasping the tick as close to the skin as possible and applying gentle upward pressure.

PET TALK

Do not apply heat or anything else that is noxious as that may only hasten the transmission of the disease from the tick to your pet. Disinfect the bite wound with rubbing alcohol.

Wear a glove to protect yourself.

You can keep the tick alive to be tested for Lyme disease by placing it in a small non-airtight bottle or baggy with a moist cotton ball or some blades of grass.

There are sprays and collars that can be used to help prevent ticks from attaching and biting. There is also a vaccine to help protect your pet from Lyme disease.

You should talk to your veterinarian to determine the best measures to protect your pet from Lyme disease.

Trustees look at pay increase

A proposal to increase trustee stipends by $2,000 per year and a $15,000 jump in the trustees' budget came out of an in camera meeting.

No motions were put on the table; the school board was announcing its intention to put the motions forward and is interested in public input.

If the increase is approved, the chair's pay would go to $15,000 from $13,000, the vice-chair to $13,000 from $11,000, and trustees to $11,000 from $9,000. Total trustee remuneration would be $83,000, up from $69,000, a portion of which is non-taxable. The trustees' budget would also be increased, to $75,000 from $60,000. The budget is utilized for conferences, membership in the B.C. School Trustees Association and B.C. Public School Employers Association and other expenses incurred as a result of the board's duties.

Vice-chair Andree Janyk made the announcement, saying the increases would help the board reach its goal of being more educated and encourage future trustees.

Howe Sound trustees sit 25th of 60 school districts in the province in terms of remuneration.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Important Notice for Commercial Recreation businesses operating without a permit on Crown Land in the Sea to Sky Corridor

Changes are here

Commercial recreation is a growth industry in the Sea to Sky corridor, as it is in many rural areas of British Columbia.

This industry operates year-round, with activities ranging from guided Nordic skiing to summer heli-hiking. It makes a significant contribution to economic diversification and rural development — employing hundreds of people in the Sea to Sky region and injecting millions of dollars annually into the local economy.

Almost all commercial recreation businesses in Sea to Sky operate on Crown land. The provincial government regulates commercial activities through the Land Act to protect the land base from overuse and to provide business certainty. Without this kind of regulation, environmental deterioration is certain and conflicts develop between overlapping business operations.

The commercial recreation industry in Sea to Sky has grown so quickly that most commercial recreation operators in this region do not yet have their Crown land permit.

The BC Assets and Land Corporation (BCAL) is introducing a transition plan to support the commercial recreation industry to grow in a way that protects the environment and ensures public access while providing businesses with the certainty of a land-use permit.

When this transition is complete, unlicensed commercial recreation activity will become a thing of the past.

Transition plan

BCAL is the provincial agency responsible for managing Crown land in British Columbia. BCAL has introduced a transition plan that requires all commercial recreation operations in the Sea to Sky area to hold a permit to use land for business. This transition plan will be implemented over the next 14 months.

The starting point for the transition plan is today. Under the transition plan, all commercial recreation businesses without permits are required to apply to BCAL for a Crown land permit by December 29, 2000.

When the transition period ends in November 2001, all commercial recreation businesses on Crown land in the Sea to Sky corridor will have a provincial permit.

BCAL is now hiring a full-time Compliance Officer to help make this happen.

Before being granted a permit, each operator must demonstrate how it will minimize the impact on the environment, and avoid conflicts with other users and the public.

Here's how this transition will affect various kinds of backcountry tourism operators:

- The businesses that already hold a permit. They will not see any change in their operations.

- Existing businesses that have already applied for a Crown land permit.

These applications are being evaluated, with a small number already decided and the applicants notified.

Existing operations — those already using Crown land — will be allowed to continue business operations while their applications are being considered (unless there are immediate, urgent problems). They will be charged rent from December 29, 2000 if they are approved after that date.

- Existing businesses that have not yet applied for a Crown land permit.

As part of the transition plan, these businesses will have a grace period that ends December 29, 2000 to submit their application to BCAL (unless their operation is creating serious environmental problems or other major conflicts). They will be charged rent from December 29, 2000 if they are approved after that date. They will be permitted to operate on Crown land while their applications are reviewed.

- Businesses that are not yet operating, but have already applied (by September 1, 2000) for a Crown land permit.

These applications are already being processed. The BCAL target date for decisions is Spring 2001 for summer season operations, and next fall (2001) for winter season operations.

Although BCAL has, in the past, tolerated new commercial recreation businesses starting up without first getting a permit, this is no longer allowed. New businesses will now have to wait until they have a permit before they can actually begin operations on Crown land.

- Proposed businesses that have not yet applied for a Crown land permit. Now that the transition plan is in place, no new businesses will be permitted to start up on Crown land without permits.

Proposed new businesses — businesses that were not operating on Crown land before September 1, 2000 and had not applied for a permit before September 1, 2000 — will have to wait until the end of the transition period in November 2001 before their application is reviewed by BCAL.

Benefits of Crown land permits

All of BCAL's decisions about individual applications will conform to existing land use plans. Any permits that are issued may require the operators to change the way they operate if new land use information emerges from future studies.

A Crown land permit provides businesses with security — the operator's right to operate on Crown land is protected, and their investment and initiative are enhanced by this security.

For many businesses, this security attracts additional investment for equipment, maintenance and marketing.

The community benefits because one of the principles of regulating commercial recreation is that public access to Crown land must be protected. In order to be approved, proposed operations must demonstrate that they can share Crown land without displacing the public.

Public input invited

Part of the application process requires each operation to advertise its proposal in the local media. The public is provided with one month to raise their concerns before any decisions are made. This process has already started during the past few months with some of the early applicants.

Details about commercial recreation applications in the Sea to Sky corridor will be posted on the BCAL Web site. The target for posting this information on the web is within one month. Public announcements will be made when the information is posted to the Web site.

Application packages for commercial recreation permits are available for pickup at BCAL's Surrey office, or for mailout by calling the Surrey location:

Almost a no-show for Elaho slideshow

By DARREN GALLAGHER
Reporter

A slideshow on the need to preserve B.C.'s old growth forests held in Squamish Wednesday turned out to be an exercise in convincing the converted.

Friends of the Elaho (FOE) and Forest Action Network (FAN) hosted the slideshow and discussion, held at The Rainforest Grill 'n Go.

Most of the approximately 20 people who attended were members of one of the two groups, though a few locals were also included.

However, nobody from the forestry industry, or at least no one who would identify themselves as such, was present.

The slideshow focused on the disappearance of old growth forests, especially temperate rainforests like those of B.C.'s coasts, globalization and native claims to unced territory.

According to the presenters, only 20 per cent of the world's old growth forests still exist. The temperate rainforest was always rare, he said, making up only 0.6 per cent of all forests, and half of that has been logged. Of what remains, more than a quarter is in B.C.

"The Elaho is often considered the southernmost part of the Great Bear Rainforest," said Jonah Fertig. "It's a small little patch of green in among all that yellow," he added, referring to a colour-coded map showing old growth and harvested forest.

Much of B.C.'s vaunted protected areas are ice and rock, not the life-rich valleys needed, Amanda Swinimer said. Though B.C.'s parks cover about 14 per cent of the province — two per cent more than the United Nations' recommended minimum — only 6.1 per cent of temperate rainforests are safe.

The presenters attacked current logging methods as unsustainable, saying B.C.'s heavily mechanized industry has cost jobs.

According to Statistics Canada, for every 1,000 cubic metres of timber the industry employed 0.8 people in 1986, versus 2.3 in 1950, though harvests almost quadrupled to 79.8 million cubic metres.

"They don't want people to know you can have a sustainable forest industry that doesn't destroy eco-systems and provides jobs," Fertig said. "The forest industry wants it to be a conflict between loggers and environmentalists.

"The courts, the RCMP and Interfor are working together to destroy the forests of B.C.," he added in reference to court injunctions against interfering with logging enforced by the RCMP.

Native land claims were a major issue, with the presenters noting 97 per cent of B.C. was never sold, won by war or covered by treaty.

"The land we're standing on today is Squamish Nation land," said Fertig.

Audience members questioned what would happen if land claims were resolved and First Nations given control. The presenters, pointing out most of them aren't native, said they were unable to answer. "It's very easy to be protective of land you don't own," an audience member commented.

Resident Don McAllister noted no loggers or forestry company representatives attended, reducing the evening to "just preaching to the choir." He said the environmental groups need to be more co-ordinated and focused if they want to beat the forest industry.

Upcoming Flood Drill for the Cheakamus River Valley

In anticipation of the traditional flood season for the Cheakamus Valley, BC hydro will be initiating a flood drill during the second week of November. Residents living on the flood plain of the Cheakamus River should expect a phone call from their "Area Captain" with a flood-drill message some time in the coming week.

The exercise will begin with a phone call from BC Hydro's Cheakamus Facility manager to the RCMP. A "Yellow Alert", as outlined in the new Cheakamus River Valley Flood Communications Plan, will be declared and the RCMP will notify local response agencies and Area Captains. Area Captains will call residents on their respective fan-out lists, completing the notification process.

The flood drill is an exercise only. Should an actual flood situation occur, the same process will be initiated but the message delivered will clearly indicate a real situation.

For more information about the flood drill or the Flood Communications Plan in general, call BC Hydro at 1-800-663-1377.

For up-to-date information on water levels during the flood season, please call the water level information line at (604) 892-6520.

Sports Briefs

Ringette under way

The ringette season is just under way for Howe Sound teams as the last tiering and game was last Saturday at the Brennan Park Recreation Centre.

The Tween squad will be a small team this year with only nine players.

On the up side, according to assistant coach Steve Virgint, who shares coaching duties with Janice Kirkman, the girls have a lot of experience and will be in great shape by tournament time.

The roster this year has the following players: Alison Oberge, Kelly Virgint, Josie Jechti, Leanne Peck, Alisha Janbury, Amanda Eckersley, Amanda Belmos, Casandra and Stephanie Marotte.

The team has pulled off two wins and two losses so far in the tiering rounds and looking forward to a great season.

Eagles win again

The Squamish Atom Rep Eagles continued to dazzle in tiering play with a 4-0 win over the Burnaby Winter Club on Saturday.

The Squamish side was anchored by the rock solid goaltending of Steven Luca, who once again made several key stops.

The scoring was led by team captain Keegan Wherty who notched a hat trick and a single by Jeffrey Atison.

The defensive pairings of Donn Smith and Jae VanHierden and Kyle James and Gordon Booth put up a wall that Burnaby could not penetrate.

The Eagles are now 3-1-1 in tiering play.

Ball coach needed

Howe Sound Secondary School is seeking coaches for the junior and senior girls basketball teams for the 2001 campaign.

Previous coaching experience is required as well as a desire to work with youth in a challenging yet fun environment.

For more information or to apply, contact Cindy Finneyworth at HSSS at 2-5261.

Howe Sound looks for repeat

By IAN JACQUES
 Reporter

After capturing the first championship in the school's history last season, the Howe Sound Secondary School boys' soccer team isn't sitting on their laurels this year.

Off to a respectable 2-2-0-1 record, good for seven points and sixth place among nine teams in the senior boys' soccer standings, Howe Sound is getting geared up for another run in the playoffs.

Coaches Pepsi Takhar and Tom Johnstone have a keen group this year with a number of returning players from the championship squad and are hoping for big things once the playoffs start in a few weeks.

"This year is more of a building year, but we are competing. There hasn't been a game that we haven't been in," said Takhar. "We lost about four or five players from last year's team and we've tried about 20 different players to pick a core group to get us ready for the playoffs. It's been hard, but the guys have been putting in a good effort."

Factor in work commitments for both coaches, a hectic travel schedule with only a couple of home games and a possible move up to AAA on the horizon — the squad has overcome a lot of adversity for such a young team.

"It looks like we might be pushed to AAA for the playoffs, but it's all still up in the air," Takhar said. "If we are, this year, it's going to make it more tougher and challenging. I think if we are in AAA, especially next year, we'll compete with the bigger schools."

"When you look at things coming back as champs you're in the driver's seat, now we may be a passenger," said Johnstone, responding to the possible move to AAA. "It's unfortunate, but it's something the school has to get worked out. We just have to worry about what happens on the field."

Squamish soccer: the weekend wrap-up

By IAN JACQUES
 Reporter

Two playoff rematches highlighted play in week eight action in the G&T Pool and Spa Men's Soccer League Sunday at Centennial Fields.

Cliffside Pub picked up a 3-2 win over Ellis Moving and Storage to move to within one point of third place.

Ellis opened the scoring with a goal from Richard Collins and held that lead until mid-way through the second half.

Cliffside got on the board with a penalty shot goal from Darryl Simmons and took the lead on a second penalty kick from Simmons minutes later.

Cliffside upped their advantage to two goals with a tally from Jay Aseltine, but Ellis responded with a late goal from Collins and were pushing for the equalizer as time expired.

In the second playoff rematch of the day, Squamish FC Khalsa picked up a 3-1 win over Longhorn Pub.

Kyle Vasseur opened the scoring for Longhorn about five minutes in, but Adrian Oreamuno tied the game up about 15 minutes later.

Peter Wortman put Khalsa up at the half with a beautiful header and Oreamuno scored mid-way through the second half to seal the win for Khalsa.

Amsterdam FC moved into a third place tie with their Whistler counterparts with a 12-0 blasting of the Brew Pub.

Christian Oreamuno led the way with four goals, while Harvey Lim and Merik each scored three and Tim Shire scored a pair.

In the exhibition game, the Carney's Recycleman Over 35 squad put in their most impressive performance to date with a thrilling 3-3 tie with Orange Crush.

Carney's led 2-1 at half-time on a pair of goals from Cliff Roberts, but fell behind 3-2 late in the second half.

Harvey Cheema scored the equalizer with under five minutes to play.

The Gunners and Hustlers are the last two undefeated teams as Squamish Youth Soccer rolled on Saturday at a soggy Centennial Fields.

The Gunners picked up a 3-1 win over the Blue Lightning in Division 9 boys action while the Bullets knocked off the Green Army 2-1.

In Division 5 boys action, the Hustlers shaded the Titans 2-0 while Slim Shadys knocked off Orange Crush 5-0.

In Division 7 boys, Spitfires beat the Red Canadians 4-1 while the Blue Flames shutout the Yellow Jackets 3-0.

In Senior boys action, the Blazers edged the Huskies 2-1.

The Red Devils beat the Rascals 4-1 in Intermediate girls while the Rays and White Lightning battled to a 1-1 tie.

Scary Gary's Gals beat the Blue Crew 2-0 in Senior girls play while the Pickled Flotsoms tied 2-2 with the Silver Stars.

In Junior girls play, the Silver Wings beat the Green Gryffindors by default and the Blue Bombers knocked off Purple Punishers 4-0.

In travel team action, the U13 boys Scorpions spanked the Douglas Park Snipers 7-0.

Emmit Falconer led the way with three goals, while Geoff Smith scored a pair.

Singles went to Kyle Blackett and Parm Bisla while Sam Dunkley got the shut-out between the pipes.

The U12 boys took their top game to Burnaby Heights, winning 5-1.

In an electrifying first 20 minutes Squamish scored four times, two by Vincent Colica, Hunter Groves and Keegan Moore.

In the second half, Squamish continued to poor it on getting their final goal from Chris Johnstone.

The U18 girls Scorpions blasted the North Shore Thunderbirds 8-1 at home on Sunday.

Heather Ray led the way for Squamish with four goals while Jennine Wilson scored a pair.

Singles went to Jenna Galley and Ashley Hogg.

Families invited to the Monster Mash

This is an exciting night for boys and girls as they don their favourite costume and go out into the night for trick or treating. Then it's on to the Brennan Park Recreation Centre for the Halloween Monster Mash Family Masquerade Dance from 7 to 9 p.m. There is free admission, costume judging, colouring contest, Monster Dance competition, shadow wall, hallow hall game area, cake walk and great music by DJ/MC Susan Knight of Mtn. FM. The concession will be hosted by the Squamish Air Cadets.

There is fun to be had this afternoon at the West Coast Railway Heritage Park as the Hobgoblin Express is running from 4 to 6 p.m. Check out the other activities and also visit the Brightbill House and see if there are any ghosts or goblins about. Admission by donation. Many seniors (over 600, to be exact) took advantage of attending the Seniors' Health Fair at the Brennan Park Recreation Centre on Oct. 25 to receive their flu shots and gather information from the various tables set-up. For any senior who missed getting their shot, there will be a clinic held tomorrow, Wed. (Nov. 1) from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Coast Garibaldi Health Unit located behind IGA-Plus. Those who wish to receive a flu vaccine and not a senior can do so for $10 or by getting in touch with their doctor.

Remembrance Day is soon approaching and this coming weekend are Poppy Days when members of the Royal Canadian Legion Diamond Head Branch will be at the Chieftain Mall, Squamish

Station Mall and the downtown core offering poppies and gratefully accepting donations. The Ladies Auxiliary is hoping to be in the Extra Foods area with poppies on Friday and Saturday (Nov. 3,4) as well. A portion of the proceeds of all poppy donations will go to Hilltop House for lifting equipment and to veterans and families in need. Many business outlets will also have poppies available.

The Sunday Remembrance Day service will be held in St. John's Anglican Church on Sunday (Nov. 5) at 10 a.m. Rev. John Stephens is the Legion padre. The Nov. 11 service will be held in the Brennan Park Recreation Centre.

Residents are invited to attend the Squamish Senior Citizens Bazaar at the Cedman Lounge, 38209 Third Avenue this Saturday (Nov. 4) from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will be a variety of crafts (including gifts for Christmas), white elephant table, home-baking, raffle and coffee/tea and sandwiches will be available.

All birders are invited to participate in the monthly Squamish Estuary bird count this Sunday (Nov. 5). Please meet at the Howe Sound Inn and Brew Pub at 8 a.m. If you wish more information, call Jim Wisnia, at 898-2000.

The dedicated members of the Community Christmas Care committee have been meeting regularly in anticipation of a busy but most worthwhile project. For those requesting help (hampers), application forms are now available at all churches and the Social Services office.

The CCC is headed this year by Rev. John Stephens of the Squamish Ministerial Association.

The Squamish RCMP Victim Services Unit is dedicated to assisting victims and witnesses of crime. Without well-trained volunteers this service would not be possible. Are you interested in becoming a volunteer? Do you work well with people, are you a good listener and compassionate and understanding? Perhaps you will consider enquiring about becoming a volunteer. Training is provided and you must commit to a one year period. Application forms are available at the RCMP Detachment or for more information, call 898-1572.

The Rotary Club 200 winners for Oct. are: Jim McKenzie ($100); Grace

Maureen Gilmour

[Resloping old logging roads prevents erosion]

Watershed restoration results:

2909 km of old logging roads removed

Vancouver to Calgary — three times over. That's a distance equal to the amount of old, environmentally damaging logging roads Forest Renewal BC investments removed and replanted last year.

And we'll do it again this year.

Road deactivation is key to restoring and protecting fish habitat and water quality in forest watersheds. Our five-year target is to restore 20 per cent of high-priority watersheds damaged by past forest harvesting activities.

And thanks to the work of our partners, we're on track.

Our many partners on the Coast and Vancouver Island include:

- CANADIAN FOREST PRODUCTS
- FRASER TSA ASSOCIATION (Cattermole Timber, District of Mission, Tamih Logging, J.S. Jones)

A TIME TO APPRECIATE

"Time to say goodbye..."

This beautiful aria sung by Andrea Boccelli and Sarah Brightman keeps going through my heart as our church prepares to say goodbye to Pastor John and Marg Crozier, who are leaving us after 10 faithful years of service to our Church and our community. Our Church has been hard at work preparing an evening of thanks and appreciation for them before they leave. Pastor John and Marg have worked so hard among us and we love them so much. It's sad that people, especially Pastors, are usually only told how much they are appreciated when they leave us. But happily, our Church has been having a "Pastoral Appreciation" celebration every October for the past five years, and the only difference with this one is that we are also saying goodbye.

While we are thanking our own Pastor and his family for all their years of faithful service, we want to say thanks to all the pastors who work in our community. These special people who live to serve others, and are so instrumental in helping families and individuals from all walks of life, minister to families; teach parents how to give their children a nourishing upbringing; counsel the hurting - those with troubled marriages, hurt backgrounds, who have suffered abuse, and those struggling with drug and alcohol dependency. They work long hours and are on call 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. I could write a book, but space doesn't permit much more here.

Have you thanked your Pastor today? We encourage you, if you belong to a Church, to tell your Pastor how much you appreciate him. Don't wait until he leaves. After all the blessings he's given you, he needs your blessing too. And Pastor John & Marg, WE LOVE YOU!

MULTI-MODAL
Corridor Transportation Study

Reid-Crowther & Partners Ltd., consultant to the Ministry of Transportation and Highways, is assessing transportation needs to the year 2025 in the Horseshoe Bay-to-Highway 97 corridor. This assessment involves a number of steps, including:

- Data Gathering to establish the current transportation picture;
- Forecasting future corridor population and travel demand;
- Developing possible scenarios for long-term mass transportation needs;
- Gaining the end users' perspective (this is where you fit in); and
- Refining the transportation scenarios, examining 2010 Olympic Bid projections and incorporating public feedback into the study findings, due in spring, 2001.

OPEN HOUSE NOTICE

Drop in between 4 and 8 p.m. at one of these locations

- Whistler: Monday, October 30th
Myrtle Philip Community Centre, 6195 Lorimer Road
- Squamish: Wednesday, November 1
Squamish Public Library, 37907 2nd Avenue, Squamish
- Pemberton: Thursday, November 2
Pemberton Community Centre, 7567 Pemberton Meadows Road
- Lions Bay: Friday, November 3
Lions Bay Village Hall, 400 Centre Road

It is important to note that:

1. As a "multi-modal" study, rail, bus, auto, marine and air transportation capabilities are examined.
2. Once complete, this study will offer transportation agencies and relevant corridor stakeholders a solid base of information for their own planning purposes.
3. The scenarios being developed in the study are not options for near-future projects. They are strategic examples of how long-term transportation might be approached within the corridor.

Open house visitors will be invited to contribute their views to the study by completing feedback forms on the above dates.
